1 One does not attain perfection merely by following the rules of vaidhi bhakti. Neither does one attain perfection by disobeying the rules of vaidhi bhakti. The way to attain perfection is given in the following words of Srimad Bhagavatam (7.1.30): 2 Many, many persons have attained liberation simply by thinking of Krsna with great attention and giving up sinful activities. This great attention may be due to lusty desires, inimical feelings, fear, affection or devotional service. I shall now explain how one receives Krsna's mercy simply by concentrating one's mind upon Him." 3 This verse means, As some persons concentrate their minds on the Supreme Personality of Godhead and thus attained liberation by following the rules of vaidhi bhakti, so many other persons also attained liberation by violating the rules of vaidhi bhakti and following lust and other vices in their stead." Among lust and other vices are the sin of hatred and fear. They gave up (hitva) that sin. Because it is mixed with hatred, fear is also considered a sin. 4 Some consider lust a sin. However, the following should be considered: When it is directed to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, lust is transcendental and removes sin, whether one thinks of the Lord as one's husband or one's paramour. If this kind of lust is transcendental, then does it remove hatred and other sins because that is its nature, because the lusty person drinks nectar from the lips of the supremely pure Personality of Godhead and therefore this "lust" is not actually lust at all but something far beyond what is known in this world as lust, or merely because the scriptures affirm that it destroys sins? It is not like that. Sri Sukadeva Gosvami rebukes King Pariksit in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.29.13); 5 "This point was explained to you previously. Since even Sisupala, who hated Krsna, achieved perfection, then what to speak of the Lord's dear devotees."* 6 In these words lust and other like emotions are criticised and lust is praised. Because lust for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not different from love for Him, there is nothing wrong with it. Here lust is one kind of love. 7 In Srimad Bhagavatam (10.31.19) the gopis declare: "O dearly beloved! Your lotus feet are so soft that we place them gently on our breasts, fearing that Your feet will be hurt. Our life rests only in You. Our minds, therefore, are filled with anxiety that Your tender feet might be wounded by pebbles as You roam about on the forest path."* 8 Unconcerned for their own happiness, the gopis wish that Krsna will be happy. Kubja, however is mostly concern about her own happiness. She is not like the gopis, and therefore her attitude is the be criticised. She is described in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.48.7): "Simply by smelling the fragrance of Krsna's lotus feet, Kubja cleansed away the burning lust Cupid had aroused in her breasts, chest and eyes. With her two arms she embraced between her breasts her lover, Sri Krsna, the personification of bliss, and thus she gave up her long-standing distress." 9 She also declares (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.48.9): "O beloved, please stay here with me for a few day more and enjoy. I cannot bear to give up Your association, O lotus-eyed one." In this way she expresses her love. 10 It is also said (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.48.8): "Having thus gotten the hard-to-get Supreme Lord by the simple act of offering Him body ointment, unfortunate Kubja submitted to that Lord of freedom the following request." 11 It is also said (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.48.11): "Lord Visnu, the Supreme Lord of all lords, is ordinarily difficult to approach. One who has properly worshipped Him and then chooses the benediction of mundane sense gratification is certainly of poor intelligence, for he is satisfied with an insignificant result." 12 In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.48.8 (quoted in text 10) the word "kaivalya-nathah" means "the Lord who is served by pure devotees". Kubja is described here as "unfortunate" because her body was deformed bent in three places. The word "aho (Oh!) is uttered in surprise. Her offering of body ointment to the Lord was an activity of devotional service. Because of this service she was prompted to ask (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.48.9): "O beloved, please stay here with me for a few days more and enjoy. I cannot bear to give up Your association, O lotus-eyed one." In these words she begs that she may become fortunate. 13 In Srimad Bhagavatam (10.80.25) it is said: "What piety has this unwashed, impoverished (brahmana) performed? Everyone looks down on him as most fallen, and yet the spiritual master of the three worlds, the abode of goddess Sri, is serving him reverentially. Leaving her, the goddess of fortune, sitting on her bed, the Lord has embraced this (brahmana) as if he were His older brother." The residents of the palace spoke these words about Sridama Vipra. 14 Here someone may object: Why is lusty Kubja praised? This objection is answered in Srimad Bhagavatam 10.18.11 (quoted in text 11). There it is said, "One who chooses the benediction of mundane sense-gratification is certainly of poor intelligence." The meaning here is that a girl who desires the Supreme Personality of Godhead is supremely intelligent. Her desire to enjoy with the Supreme Lord removes hatred and a host of sin. 15 This is so because the pastimes of the Lord are by nature all-perfect. This is confirmed by the following words of Sri Vedanta-sutra (2.1.33); "The pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are transcendental, although they seem to be like those of an ordinary human being in the material world." 16 As He enjoys amorous pastimes like these with the gopis and Kubja, so the Lord also enjoys with Sri, Bhu, Lila and other goddesses in Sri Vaikunthaloka and other places. The Lord is eternally perfect and independent. He can enjoy any pastimes that He wishes to enjoy. Therefore these pastimes should be understood as existing because the Lord wishes to enjoy them. These pastimes are naturally very charming and sweet like nectar. It is not possible to fully understand the nature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. His amorous pastimes exist because He wishes to enjoy them. To that extent they may be understood. 17 The goddesses who are the Lord's beloveds are manifested from His internal potency. Therefore their forms are all pure and spiritual. These goddesses are very exalted and important. They are not ordinary or unimportant by any means. Their pastimes of drinking the nectar of the Lord's lips is not improper. This has already been explained. These pastimes exist because the Supreme Lord wishes to enjoy them. 18 One should not make the mistake of thinking these goddesses to be ordinary persons. They are the internal potencies of the Lord, and it is by the Lord's wish that they have attained His association. 19 The scriptures declare that amorous pastimes with the Supreme Personality of Godhead are not sins. Rather, hearing of these pastimes removes sin. Certainly there is no fault in amorous pastimes where the Supreme Lord assumes the role of the husband. On the contrary, such pastimes are glorified in the scriptures. In Srimad Bhagavatam (10.90.27) it is said: 20 "And how is it even possible to describe the great austerities that must have been performed by the women who were able to serve Him, the spiritual master of the universe, in pure, ecstatic love? Thinking Him to be their own husband, rendered such intimate services as massaging His feet." 21 Many exalted sages have become the Lord's beloveds and enjoyed these pastimes with Him. This is described in many places in the scriptures. For example, Sri Madhvacarya quotes the following words of the Kurma Purana: 22 "By performing great austerities, Agnideva's sons became women and attained Lord Vasudeva, the unborn and all-powerful creator of the universes, as their husband. 23 In the Narayana-vyuha-stava these exalted devotees are offered respects in these words: "I offer my respectful obeisances to they who always meditate on Lord Hari as their husband, son, friend, brother, father or mother." 24 To enjoy amorous pastimes with the Supreme Personality of Godhead as a paramour is also no sinful. In Srimad Bhagavatam (10.29.32) the gopis tell Lord Krsna: "Our dear Krsna, as an expert in religion You have advised us that the proper religious duty for women is to dutifully serve their husbands, children and other relatives. We agree that this principle is valid, but actually this service should be rendered to You. After all, O Lord, You are the dearmost friend of all embodied souls. You are their most intimate relative and indeed their very Self." 25 Srila Sukadeva Gosvami also explains (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.33.35): "He who lives as the overseeing witness within the gopis and their husbands, and indeed within all embodied living beings, assumes forms in this world to enjoy transcendental pastimes." 26 Lord Krsna Himself declares (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.32.22): "O gopis, I am not able to repay My debt for your spotless service, even within a lifetime of Brahma. Your connection with Me is beyond reproach. You have worshipped Me, cutting off all domestic ties, which are difficult to break. Therefore please let your own glorious deeds be your compensation." 27 This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. Many other great devotees also attained this kind of relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Another example of this is given in these words of the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda: 28 "When they saw Lord Ramacandra, the handsome Supreme Personality of Godhead, all the great sages in the Dandaka forest desired to enjoy with Him. 29 "Becoming women, they took birth in Gokula and enjoyed amorous pastimes with Lord Krsna. Then they became liberated from the ocean of repeated birth and death." 30 Then men also may attain the forms of women and associate with the Lord in this way. The Lord appears before them not as the material god of love (Kamadeva), but as a spiritual god of love. This is explained in the following words of Srimad Bhagavatam (10.32.2): "Then Lord Krsna, a smile on His lotus face, appeared before the gopis. Wearing a garland and a yellow garment, He directly appeared as one who can bewilder the mind of Cupid, who himself bewilders the minds of ordinary people." Thus, because He is worshipped by the material god of love, Lord Krsna is the spiritual god of love (Kamadeva). 31 Sri Uddhava and many other great devotees have glorified the Lord's beloveds. Sri Uddhava declares (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.47.580): "Among all persons on earth, these cowherd women alone have actually perfected their embodied lives, for they have achieved the perfection of unalloyed love for lord Govinda. Their pure love is hankered after by those who fear material existence, by great sages, and by ourselves as well. For one who has tasted the narrations of the infinite Lord, what is the use of taking birth as a high class brahmana, or even as Lord Brahma himself?" 32 What more need be said? In the Vamana Purana it is said that even the Vedas Personified attained this nature. Desiring to become eternally perfect gopis, the Vedas personified took birth among the gopis. The glory of the gopis is described by the Vedas Personified in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.87.23): 33 "By practicing the mystic yoga system and controlling their breath, the great sages conquered the mind and senses. Thus engaging in mystic yoga, they saw the Supersoul within their hearts and ultimately entered into the impersonal Brahman. However, even the enemies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead attain that position simply by thinking of the Supreme Lord. The damsels of Vraja, the gopis, simply wanted to embrace Krsna and hold His arms, which are like serpents. Being attracted by the beauty of Krsna, they ultimately acquired a taste for the nectar of the Lord's lotus feet. We can also taste the nectar of Krsna's lotus feet by following in the footsteps of the gopis."* 34 The meaning of this verse is very clear. This verse means, "Seeing with the eyes of scripture, with a great effort the sages worship the Absolute Truth, who is known as Brahman. However, without worshipping the Lord, only by thinking of Him, the enemies of the Lord also attain the Brahman. 35 "The beautiful-eyebrowed gopis, their hearts attached to the serpentlike arms of You, who are Nanda's son, attained the sweetness of love for the nectar of Your lotus feet. 36 "We Personified Vedas will become like these gopis and we will also attain the nectar of Your lotus feet." That is the meaning. The inflections of the words are altered to show this meaning. 37 Here the words "the nectar of Your lotus feet" are spoken with great respect. The words 'even the enemies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead attain that position simply by thinking of the Supreme Lord" show that by following the path of thinking of the Lord one quickly attains the goal. The words "We can also taste the nectar of Krsna's lotus feet by following in the footsteps of the gopis" show the method practiced by a person following the path of raganuga bhakti. If this were not the best method to attain the best goal, then the Personified Vedas, who are fully aware of all methods and all goals, would not have adopted it. 38 In this verse two pairs of paths of remembering the Lord are described. In the first pair the path of the Personified Vedas is superior. In the second their path is inferior. The word "api" (also) applies to both these pairs of paths. Thus this word is not employed only once here. The word "striyah" here refers to the eternal gopis. In the Vamana Purana it is said that the Personified Vedas see the gopis in the eternal abode of Lord Krsna. Note: The two pairs of paths of remembering the Lord are: 1. the paths of Personified Vedas and the enemies of the Lord, and 2. the paths of Personified Vedas and the gopis. The Personified Vedas are superior to the enemies of the Lord but inferior to the gopis. 39 All of this is nicely explained in these words of Srimad Bhagavatam (7.1.29): "Many, many persons have attained liberation simply by thinking of Krsna with great attention and giving up sinful activities. This great attention may be due to lusty desires, inimical feelings, fear, affection or devotional service. I shall now explain how one receives Krsna's mercy simply by concentrating one's mind upon Him." In this way one becomes free of the sins of fear and hatred.

1 Srimad Bhagavatam 7.1.29 (which was quoted in anuccheda 320, text 2) is further explained by the following words (Srimad Bhagavatam 7.1.30), where some examples are given: 2 "The gopis by their lusty desires, Kamsa by his fear, Sisupala and other kings by envy, the Yadus by their familial relationship with Krsna, you Pandavas by your great affection for Krsna, and we, the general devotees, by our devotional service, have obtained the mercy of Krsna."* 3 Here references is made to the previous lives of the gopis and the other devotees. With the word "vayam" (we) Sri Narada refers to his previous birth. 4 Sri Narada explains (Srimad Bhagavatam 1.6.28): "Having been awarded a transcendental body befitting an associate of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, I quit the body made of five material elements, and thus all acquired fruitive results of work (karma) stopped."* In this way in his previous birth he attained the perfect form of a personal associate of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In this way the word "vayam" (we) is explained. 5 Thus vaidhi bhakti has been described. Raganuga bhakti is described in these words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.20.36); "Material piety and sin, which arise from the good and evil of this world, cannot exist within My unalloyed devotees, who, being free from material hankering, maintain steady spiritual consciousness in all circumstances. Indeed, such devotees have achieved Me, the Supreme Lord, who am beyond anything that can be conceived by material intelligence." 6 The Lord also explains (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.19.35): "To constantly see good and bad is itself a bad quality. The best quality is to transcend material good and evil." 7 In this way it is seen that ragatmika bhakti is not dependent on the rules and regulations of vaidhi bhakti. In Srimad Bhagavatam 7.1.29 the past tense is used to describe the attainment of the result. However, in the following verse the gopis are described in the present tense. By hearing of the Supreme Lord's transcendental qualities, the gopis become rapt in meditation on Him. They are described in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.90.26): 8 "Glorified variously by countless songs, He is the Lord who forcibly attracts the minds of any women who simply hear about Him. What to speak, then, of those women who see Him directly?" 9 Sisupala, who had been a liberated associate of the Lord in Vaikuntha, appeared to have been killed when he arrived as an unwelcome guest and tried to cause a calamity. Then his true position as a devotee of the Lord was revealed. In Srimad Bhagavatam 7.1.31 (quoted in text 2) the words "sambandhad yo vrsnayo yuyam", mean "you Vrsnis have a relationship of affection with the Supreme Personality of Godhead". Therefore Srimad Bhagavatam (7.1.26) affirms: "Therefore by enmity or by devotional service, by fear, by affection, or by lusty desire, by all of these or any one of them, if a conditioned soul somehow or other concentrates his mind upon the Lord, the result is the same, for the Lord because of His blissful position, is never affected by enmity or friendship."* 10 In Srimad Bhagavatam (7.1.30) it is said: "Many, many persons have attained liberation simply by thinking of Krsna with great attention and giving up sinful activities. This great attention may be due to lusty desires, inimical feelings, fear, affection or devotional service. I shall now explain how one receives Krsna's mercy simply by concentrating one's mind upon Him."* These quotes both affirm the same conclusion. 11 This same conclusion is also confirmed in a verse that follows in the same passage. There it is said (Srimad Bhagavatam 7.1.32): "Somehow or other one must consider the form of Krsna, very seriously. Then, by one of the five different processes mentioned above, one can return home, back to Godhead. Atheists like King Vena, however, being unable to think of Krsna's form in any of these five ways, cannot attain salvation. Therefore, one must somehow think of Krsna, whether in a friendly way, or inimically."* 12 In Srimad Bhagavatam 7.1.31 (quoted in text 2) the words sambandha (relationship) and sneha (affection) are both related to raganuga bhakti. In their previous lives the Vrsnis and Pandavas, like the gopis, were aspiring devotees engaged in vaidhi bhakti. From sambandha (a relationship with the Lord) comes sneha (affection for the Lord), and from that comes ruci (attraction to the Lord). In this way it is shown that vaidhi bhakti eventually leads to raganuga bhakti.

1 Here someone may object: If simply by hating the Supreme Lord one attains perfection, then why did King Vena fall into hell? Fearing that someone would raise this objection, Srimad Bhagavatam (7.1.32) explains: "Somehow or other one must consider the form of Krsna very seriously. Then, by one of the five different processes mentioned above, one can return home, back to Godhead. Atheists like King Vena, however, being unable to think of Krsna's form in any of these five ways, cannot attain salvation."* 2 The words, "katamo 'pi na vena syat pancanam purusam prati" mean "Vena did not have one of the five relationships with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, relationships that begin with enmity." This means that Vena did not have a relationship of blaspheming and hating the Supreme Personality of Godhead. 3 Vena's sins bore fruit because he did not engage in intense meditation on the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Even though he was a demon, he did not hatefully and violently attack the Supreme Personality of Godhead, an attack that would have brought him liberation. That is the meaning. 4 In Srimad Bhagavatam (11.2.34) it is said: "Even ignorant living entities can very easily come to know the Supreme Lord if they adopt those means prescribed by the Supreme Lord Himself. The process recommended by the Lord is to be known as bhagavata-dharma, or devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead." In this way even very great sins perish. This is so even if one is ignorant.

1 Therefore, in Srimad Bhagavatam (7.1.32) it is said: "Therefore, one must somehow think of Krsna, whether in a friendly way, or inimically."* 2 The conclusion here is that one should somehow fix his mind on the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The conclusion here is not that one should engage in vaidhi bhakti. Here the word "kenapi" means "somehow or other". By engaging in vaidhi bhakti one finally attains the Lord after a long time and a great struggle. However, by engaging in raganuga bhakti, by thinking of the Lord as one's enemy or in other ways, one quickly and easily attains the Lord. A fallen sinner who hates the glorious Supreme Personality of Godhead is actually virtuous. Who, then, is truly fallen and degraded? The answer is that a person who is indifferent to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, a person who does not love the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is truly fallen and degraded. This verse was spoken by Sri Narada to Sri Yudhisthira.

1 If the path of thinking of the Lord somehow or other is this powerful, then how powerful must be the path of raganuga bhakti, where one thinks of the Lord with love? This is affirmed by the following words of Srimad Bhagavatam (11.5.48): 2 "Inimical kings like Sisupala, Paundraka and Salva were always thinking about Lord Krsna. Even while they were lying down, sitting or engaging in other activities, they enviously meditated upon the bodily movements of the Lord, His sporting pastimes, His loving glances upon His devotees, and other attractive features displayed by the Lord. Being thus always absorbed in Krsna, they achieved spiritual liberation in the Lord's own abode. What then can be said of the benedictions offered to those who constantly fix their minds on Lord Krsna in a favourable, loving mood?" 3 Here the word "akrti-dhiyah" means that their thoughts were placed in the Lord's forms. 4 In the Garuda Purana it is said: "Even foolish sinners like Sisupala and Duryodhana who personally insulted the Supreme Personality of Godhead attained liberation. Simply by remembering the Lord, they became purified of all their sins. How, then, can there be any doubt that the great devotees, who sincerely love the Lord, also become purified and attain liberation?" 5 In Srimad Bhagavatam (7.1.27) it is said: "By devotional service one cannot achieve such intense absorption in thought of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as one can through enmity to Him."* However, one should not interpret these words to mean that hating the Supreme Personality of Godhead is better than all other relationships with the Lord. 6 In Srimad Bhagavatam (3.16.31) the Lord assured the two Vaikuntha inhabitants, Jaya and Vijaya: "By practicing the mystic yoga system in anger, you will be cleansed of the sin of disobeying the brahmanas and within a very short time return to Me."* 7 These words were spoken by the Lord of Vaikuntha to Jaya and Vijaya. To become free of their offense they must practice mystic yoga. Because they are by nature eternally perfect associates of the Lord, this entire incident was arranged so that the Lord would have the opportunity to enjoy pastimes of fighting with them. For this reason some consider that these activities of the Lord should be considered activities of devotional service. That is not true. Words like "bhakti" (devotional) and "seva (service) are used when one has a favourable relation with the Lord. They cannot be used when one is an enemy of the Lord. 8 In the Padma Purana, Utttara-khanda, it is said: "The yogis are able to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead because they are devoted to Him, not because they hate Him. Anger and envy will not help one see Lord Krsna. 9 Here someone may object: The enemies of the Lord are also devotees. This is seen in the following statement of Sri Uddhava (Srimad-Bhagavatam 3.2.24): "I consider the demons, who are inimical toward the Lord to be more than the devotees because while fighting with the Lord, absorbed in thoughts of enmity, they are able to see the Lord carried on the shoulder of Garuda, the son of Tarksya (Kasyapa) and carrying the wheel weapon in His hand."* 10 To this objection the following reply is given: Please do not think in this way. This verse is an example of the rhetorical device called utpreksa, where one imagines one thing to be like another that is in truth very different. This verse does not prove that the demons are devotees of the Lord. In this example utpreka, Uddhava, overcome with longing and grief, sees only the good fortune attained by the demons, their good fortune in directly seeing the Lord. He says, "Alas, we cannot see the face of the Lord. At the moment of death we will not be able to see, even in meditation, the moonlike face of the Lord. Therefore the demons are better devotees than us, for at the moment of their deaths they had the opportunity to see the moonlike face of the Lord."

The conclusion is that this verse does not in any way prove that hating the Lord is the same as devotional service. This verse was spoken by Sri Narada to Sri Vasudeva.

1 In this way raganuga bhakti is attained. Raganuga bhakti is primarily directed to Lord Krsna. In Srimad Bhagavatam 7.1.41 it is said: "My dear King Yudhisthira, the gopis by their lust desires, Kamsa by his fear, Sisupala and other kings by envy, the Yadus by their familial relationship with Krsna, you Pandavas by your great affection for Krsna, and we, the genera devotees, by our devotional service, have obtained the mercy of Krsna."* Here is it seen that Lord Krsna is the object of raganuga bhakti. Also, only the demons who direct their hatred to Lord Krsna attain the perfection of merging into His effulgence. The demons who hate the Lord's other full and partial forms do not attain that perfection. 2 For this reason Srimad Bhagavatam (7.1.32) declares: "Therefore one must somehow think of Lord Krsna, whether in a friendly way or inimically."* 3 By engaging in raganuga bhakti one very quickly fixes his mind on the Lord. That is why raganuga bhakti, and not vaidhi bhakti, is discussed in the eleventh canto of Srimad Bhagavatam. Sometimes raganuga bhakti is directed to the four-armed form of the Lord, but pure raganuga bhakti is seen primarily in Sri Gokula, where raganuga bhakti is most prominent, and where the Supreme Personality of Godhead, in His original form as Lord Krsna, enjoys pastimes as the son, master, friend, or beloved of His devotees. 4 These different relationships with the Lord are described in Bhagavad-gita (4.11), where Lord Krsna affirms: "As all surrender unto Me, I reward them accordingly. Everyone follows My path in all respects, O son of Prtha."* 5 These different relationships are also seen in these words of Srimad Bhagavatam (10.43.17): "The various groups of people in the arena regarded Krsna in different ways when He entered it with His elder brother. The wrestlers saw Krsna as a lightning bolt, the men of Mathura as the best of males, the women as Cupid in person, the cowherd men as their relative, the impious rulers as a chastiser, His parents as their child, the King of the Bhojas as death, the unintelligent as the Supreme Lord's universal form, the yogis as the Absolute Truth and the Vrsnis as their supreme worshipable Deity." 6 That the Lord accepts different relationships to fulfil the desires of His devotees is seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.2): "My dear Lord, neither I nor anyone else can estimate the potency of this transcendental body of Yours, which has shown such to me and which appears just to fulfil the desires of Your pure devotees." 7 To please His devotees the Lord pretends to desire their services of giving Him food and drink, bathing Him, fanning Him, and affectionately serving Him in many ways. These activities of devotional service are described by the Lord Krsna Himself in these words (Bhagavad-gita 9.26): 8 "If one offers Me with love and devotion a leaf, a flower, fruit or water, I will accept it."* 9 In these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.15.17) Srila Sukadeva Gosvami praises the devotees' eager service: 10 "Some of the cowherd boys, who were all great souls, would then massage His lotus feet, and others, qualified by being free of all sin, would expertly fan the Supreme Lord." 11 That the Supreme Personality of Godhead thus fulfils the desires of His devotees does not negate His supreme power over everything. That supreme power is manifested in other situations. In truth it is glorious and praiseworthy that He is happy to fulfil His devotees' wishes. This is seen in His pastime of being bound by the queen of Vraja and delivering the yamala-arjuna trees. 12 Even though He has all power, the Lord voluntarily agrees to be under the control of the queen of Vraja. In the following words (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.9.19) Srila Sukadeva Gosvami praises that quality of the Lord: "O Maharaja Pariksit, this entire universe, with its great, exalted demigods like Lord Siva, Lord Brahma and Lord Indra, is under the control of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Yet the Supreme Lord has one transcendental attribute: He comes under the control of His devotees. This was now exhibited by Krsna in this pastimes." 13 Even today many devotees follow the path of raganuga bhakti and thus worship Lord Krsna, the son of Vraja's king. In Sri Visnu Purana, when the gopas were very surprised to see Him lift Govardhana Hill, the Supreme Personality of Godhead gave them this reply: 14 "If your truly love Me, then please think of Me as your kinsman." 15 In an alternate reading of this text the Lord says, "O My kinsmen, then please honour Me like a kinsman." 16 The Lord also said to them (Sri Visnu Purana 5.13.12): "I am not a demigod. I am not a gandharva. I an neither a yaksa nor a danava. I am your kinsman. Please don't think of Me in any other way." 17 In Srimad Bhagavatam (10.3.45) Lord Krsna tells Maharaja Vasudeva: "Both of you, husband and wife, constantly think of Me as your son, but always know that I am the Supreme Personality of Godhead. By thus thinking of Me constantly with love and affection, you will achieve the highest perfection: returning home, back to Godhead."* Because knowledge of the Lord's supreme power and opulence is prominent in the hearts of Maharaja Vasudeva and many other devotees, the Lord here gives permission to think of Him in two ways: as the all-powerful Supreme Lord and as one's kinsman. 18 Although Yasoda, the queen of Vraja, saw the Lord's great power and opulence by gazing into His mouth, this is not said to be her true good fortune. Influenced by the Lord's yogamaya potency, she always thought of Lord Krsna as her son. In this way the Lord was merciful to her in many ways. In this way she was very fortunate. Vasudeva and Devaki were not as fortunate as Nanda and Yasoda. The good fortune of Nanda and Yasoda is that they think of Krsna as their son. In this way they enjoy His childhood pastimes. Maharaja Pariksit praises Nanda and Yasoda in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.8.46-47): 19 "O learned brahmana, mother Yasoda's breast milk was sucked by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. What past auspicious activities did she and Nanda Maharaja perform to achieve such perfection in ecstatic love?* "Although Krsna was so pleased with Vasudeva and Devaki that He descended as their son, they could not enjoy Krsna's magnanimous childhood pastimes, which are so great that simply chanting about them vanquishes the contamination of the material world. Nanda Maharaja and Yasoda, however, enjoyed these pastimes in full, and therefore their position is always better than that of Vasudeva and Devaki."* 20 Srila Sukadeva Gosvami, the king of sages, also praised the love of Nanda and Yasoda for Lord Krsna. He said (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.9.19): "O Maharaja Pariksit, this entire universe, with its great, exalted demigods like Lord Siva, Lord Brahma and Lord Indra, is under the control of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Yet the Supreme Lord has one transcendental attribute: He comes under the control of His devotees. This was now exhibited by Krsna in this pastime."* 21 Sri Narada told Sri Vasudeva and Devaki (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.5.47): "My dear Vasudeva, you and your good wife Devaki have manifested great transcendental love for Krsna, accepting Him as your son. Indeed, you are always seeing the Lord, embracing Him, speaking with Him, resting with Him, sitting together with Him, and taking your meals with Him. By such affectionate and intimate association with the Lord, undoubtedly both of you have completely purified your hearts. In other words, you are already perfect." 22 Srila Sridhara Svami comments: "Loving Lord Krsna as their son, they attained the perfection of the great treasure of devotional service." 23 Sri Narada also told Vasudeva and Devaki (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.5.49): "Do not think of Krsna as an ordinary child, because He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, inexhaustible and the Soul of all beings. The Lord has concealed His inconceivable opulences and is thus outwardly appearing to be an ordinary human being." 24 These words do not contradict what was previously said of Nanda and yasoda. Srila Sridhara Svami comments in these words: "Someone may object: If by loving a son one becomes liberated, then every parent would automatically attain liberation. This verse is spoken to answer this objection." 25 Thus to think of Lord Krsna as one's son is a great opulence and a great good fortune. That is the meaning. The word "akrthah" here is an example of arsa usage, where what is ordinarily a grammatical flaw is considered correct because it is used by a great sage. The letter "a" in "akrthah" should be omitted because the word "ma" is used here. In the Sabda-kosa it is said, "abhave na hy ano na". Because of these two prohibitions the words "kuru" should be used here in place of "akrthah". 26 Whether they are aware of the truth or not aware, the devotees who follow the path of pure raganuga bhakti, worshipping the Lord without awe and veneration are in a glorious position. In Srimad Bhagavatam (11.11.33) Lord Krsna affirms: "My devotees may or may not know exactly what I am, who I am, and how I exist, but if they worship Me with unalloyed love, then I consider them to be the best of devotees." 27 Because it is the most pure, raganuga bhakti in Sri Gokula is the best kind of devotional service. This is said. Pure raganuga bhakti is not possible in any other place. By understanding the glories of raganuga bhakti, and by understanding the truth of the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, the supremely exalted nature of devotional service to Lord Krsna is proved. Thus also it is proved that Lord Krsna, who enjoys transcendental pastimes in Gokula is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead. 28 Devotional service to Lord Krsna is described in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 1.2.5): 29 "O sages, I have been justly questioned by you. Your questions are worthy because they relate to Lord Krsna and so are of relevance to the world's welfare. Only questions of this sort are capable of completely satisfying the self."* 30 In Srimad Bhagavatam an inquiry was made to determine what brings genuine satisfaction to the heart. In this way questions were asked about Lord Krsna and the following answer was given (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.2.6): 31 "The supreme occupation (dharma) for all humanity is that by which men can attain to loving devotional service unto the transcendental Lord. Such devotional service must be unmotivated and uninterrupted to completely satisfy the self."* In this way the spiritual path that begins with making a great effort to offer the Lord the results of one's work and culminates in faith in devotional service is described. In this way devotional service is manifested. Hearing descriptions of the various incarnations of the Lord eventually brings one to the stage where one's thoughts are fixed in Lord Krsna, the original Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in the following words (Srimad Bhagavatam 2.8.3): 32 "Narrations concerning the Lord who possesses wonderful potencies, are certainly auspicious for living beings in all planets. O greatly fortunate Sukadeva Gosvami, please continue narrating Srimad Bhagavatam, so that I can place my mind upon the Supreme Soul, Lord Krsna, and, being completely freed from material qualities, thus relinquish this body."* 33 In this verse the word "hareh" means "of the various incarnations of the Lord". "Akhilatmani krsne" means "to Lord Krsna, who is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, in whom all incarnations are present, and who is also the friend of Arjuna." This verse was spoken by Maharaja Pariksit.

1 At the end of His conversation (in the eleventh canto of Srimad Bhagavatam), Lord Krsna in the previous chapter (chapter 28) described the results obtained by jnana, yoga, and bhakti. Nevertheless, Sri Uddhava, because he was a pure devotee, refused to accept even the slightest port of jnana and yoga. Uddhava said (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.1-2): 2 "My dear Lord Acyuta, I fear that the method of yoga described by You is very difficult for one who cannot control his mind. Therefore please explain to me in simple terms how someone can more easily execute it." 3 "O lotus-eyed- Lord, generally those yogis who try to steady the mind experience frustration because of their inability to perfect the state of trance. Thus they weary in their attempt to bring the mind under control."* 4 Here Uddhava explains that the goal of jnana and yoga is attained only with great difficulty. However, the goal of faithful devotional service is attained very easily. Therefore one should engage in devotional service. That is the meaning here. 5 Here Uddhava says, "The great souls reject jnana and yoga. Instead they engage in devotional service to You, O Krsna. They do not have a high regard for the results obtained by practicing jnana and yoga." Sri Uddhava continues his explanation in the next four verses (Srimad Bhagavatam11.29.3-6, which are discussed here in anucchedas 126-129). In the first of these verses (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.3) he says: 6 "Therefore, O lotus-eyed Lord of the universe, swanlike men happily take shelter of Your lotus feet, the source of all transcendental ecstasy. But those who take pride in their accomplishments in yoga and karma fail to take shelter of You and are defeated by Your illusory energy." 7 (In the previous verse, Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.2) it is said that some become weary (visidanti) by practicing jnana and yoga. This verse (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.3) then declares: "Now (atha) therefore (atah) the swanlike men (hamsah) who are expert at distinguishing what is valuable and what has no value, happily (sukham) serve (srayeran) Your lotus feet (padambujam eva nu), which are flooded with all transcendental bliss." The unstated meaning of this verse is that they do this in order to directly see the Lord's lotus feet. 8 The verse continues, "However, they (ami) who are proud (maninah) and devoted to yoga and karma (yoga-karmabhih) are defeated (vihatah). They do not (na) engage in devotional service because they are proud (maninah)." The best spiritual path is the one that brings one to the Lord's mercy, which He liberally bestows on even the most fallen souls. The great effort that must be expended to pursue jnana and yoga are not the best path.

1 A pure devotee does not attain the small result obtained by jnana and yoga. He attains a different, a very great result. Sri Uddhva explains (Srimad-Bhagavatam 11.29.4): 2 "My dear infallible Lord, it is not very astonishing that You intimately approach Your servants who have taken exclusive shelter of You. After all, during Your appearance as Lord Ramacandra, even while great demigods like Brahma were vying to place the effulgent tips of their helmets upon the cushion where Your lotus feet rested, You displayed special affection for monkeys such as Hanuman because they had taken exclusive shelter of You." 3 Here the words "asesa-bandho dasesv ananya-saranesu" mean "O friend who are unlimitedly kind to everyone, even the demons, and who give them various gifts, beginning with liberation". The verse continues "What is surprising about that (tavaitat kim citram)? You give Yourself (atma-satvam) to Your pure devotees (dasesu) who are averse to jnana, yoga, and karma (ananya-saranesu). This means that You become subordinate to them, submissive to them." That is the meaning here. 4 Lord Krsna Himself affirms (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.14.20): "My dear Uddhava, neither through astanga-yoga (the mystic yoga-system to control the senses), nor through impersonal monism or an analytical study of the Absolute Truth, nor through study of the Vedas, nor through practice of austerities, nor through charity, nor through acceptance of sannyasa can one satisfy Me as much as one can by developing unalloyed devotional service unto Me."* 5 In this verse it is seen that noble birth, noble qualities, and other like considerations are not relevant to participation in the Lord's confidential internal pastimes. Here the word "saha" (with) indicates friendship. "Mrgaih" means "with the animals that wander in Vrndavana forest", "svayam" means "like that", and "isvaranam" means "of the demigods headed bu Siva and Brahma". Here Uddhava says, "O Lord, the results obtained by practicing jnana, yoga, and karma cannot be very valuable, for You give them even to the demons. However, You are willing to become the friend, messenger, and charioteer for the Pandavas and Your other devotees. In this way You become submissive to Your devotees. You are under their control." In this way devotional service to Lord Krsna is described as the best of spiritual paths.

1 In the next verse (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.5) Uddhava describes the result obtained by engaging in devotional service: "Who, then, could dare reject You, the very Soul, the most dear object of worship, and the Supreme Lord of all, You who give all possible perfections to the devotees to take shelter of You? Who could be so ungrateful, knowing the benefits You bestow? Who would reject You and accept something for the sake of material enjoyment, which simply leads to forgetfulness of You? And what lack is there for us who are engaged in the service of the dust of Your lotus feet?" 2 This verse says, "Who, knowing how handsome and glorious You are, and knowing the benefits You bestow, could abandon You?" Lord Kapiladeva describes the Lord's handsomeness in a passage beginning with these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 3.28.13): "The Supreme Personality of Godhead has a cheerful, lotuslike countenance, with ruddy eyes like the interior of a lotus and a swarthy body like the petals of a blue lotus."* 3 The attractiveness of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also described in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 3.28.34): "By following this course, the yogi gradually develops pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari. In the course of his progress in devotional service, the hairs on his body stand erect through excessive joy, and he is constantly bathed in a stream of tears occasioned by intense love. Gradually, even the mind, which he used as a means to attract the Lord, as one attracts a fish to a hook, withdraws from material activity." 4 Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.5 (quoted in text 1) then asks, "O Supreme Lord, what learned and qualified person would reject You?" No such person would. That is the meaning. Any person who would reject the Supreme Lord is ungrateful. 5 O Lord, what are You like? The verse explains, "You are dear (dayitam) to all (akhila). You are millions of times more dear than life itself. You are the supreme controller (isvaram)." The word "nu" is used here in the sense of "conclusion". The verse then asks, "Who, in order to attain material wealth (aisvaryaya), or in order to attain liberation, which enables one to forget (vismrtaye) the world of repeated birth and death, would follow the paths of dharma or jnana and worship the demigods?" The answer is: No one. The words "kim va" imply, "We will attain all these benefits simply by engaging in devotional service". The word "va" here implies disrespect. 6 That all goals may be attained by devotional service is confirmed by the Supreme Personality of Godhead in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.20.32): "Everything that can be achieved by fruitive activities, penance, knowledge, detachment, mystic yoga, charity, religious duties and all other means of perfecting life is easily achieved by My devotee through loving service unto Me. If somehow or other My devotee desires promotion to heaven, liberation, or residence in My abode, he easily achieves such benedictions."

1 Here the Supreme Personality of Godhead may raise the following objection: Why is it that the devotees renounce so many attainments, but they do not renounce Me? Did I do something to convince them to act in this way? Sri Uddhava gives the following reply (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.6): 2 "O my Lord! Transcendental poets and experts in spiritual science could not fully express their indebtedness to You, even if they were endowed with the prolonged lifetime of Brahma, for You appear in two features: externally as the acarya and internally as the Supersoul, to deliver the embodied living being by directing him how to come to You."* 3 The first part of this verse means, "O Lord (isa), even they who know everything (kavayah), who live as long as Lord Brahma, and who worship You during that entire time." The verse then continues, "These blissful saintly devotees remember (smarantah) how You helped them. Thus they consider that they are indebted (apacaitim) to You. They do not see (upayanti) any way to repay their debt, and therefore they never leave You." 4 What the Lord did to help them is then described in these words; "You appear in two features: externally as the acarya and internally as the Supersoul, to deliver the embodied living being by directing him how to come to You."*

1 Then, in the next four verses, the Supreme Personality of Godhead proceeded to explain the nature of pure devotional service unto Him. He said (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.8-11): "Yes, I shall describe to you the principles of devotion to Me, by executing which a mortal human being will conquer unconquerable death. "Always remembering Me, one should perform all his duties for Me without becoming impetuous. With mind and intelligence offered to Me, one should fix his mind in attraction to My devotional service. "One should take shelter of holy places where My saintly devotees reside, and one should be guided by the exemplary activities of My devotees, who appear among the demigods, demons and human beings. "Either alone or in public gatherings, with singing, dancing, and other exhibitions of royal opulence, one should arrange to celebrate those holy days, ceremonies, and festivals set aside specially for My worship." In these verses the Supreme Personality of Godhead mercifully describes the activities of devotional service. 2 Most people are engaged in a frantic competition to exploit the resources of material nature. The wise, however, are not like that. They are introspective. They worship the Supersoul present in the heart. Seeing the condition of the people in general, the Supreme Personality of Godhead endeavours to turn the people away from their material competition and place their attention on Him, the Supersoul in their hearts. In the following words He describes His Supersoul form (Bhagavad-gita 10.42): 3 "With a single fragment of Myself I pervade and support this entire universe."* In this verse and in the following one, the Lord teaches the worship of His partial expansion as the Supersoul. He says (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.12): 4 "With a pure heart one should see Me, the Supreme Soul within all beings and also within oneself, to be both unblemished by anything material and also present everywhere, both externally and internally, just like the omnipresent sky."* 5 Srila Sridhara Svami comments: "In these three verses (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.12-14), the Lord describes internal devotional service. He says, 'One should see Me, the Supreme Soul within all beings and also within oneself'." 6 What is the nature of the Supreme Lord? He explains in this verse, "I am within and without and I am perfect and complete". How is that? He again explains, "I am unblemished by anything material". How is that? Again He explains, "Because I am all-powerful, I am not touched by ether or the other material elements". That is the meaning. The words "mam eva ikseta" do not only mean that one should see the Supersoul. They also mean that one should see the form of Lord Sri Krsna. This is so because Srila Sridhara Svami has explained in his commentary, "In these verses the Lord describes internal devotional service." Anucchedas 331 and 332 1-2 The Supreme Personality of Godhead then continues (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.13-14): "O brilliant Uddhava, one who thus views all living entities with the idea that I am present within each of them, and who by taking shelter of this divine knowledge offers due respect to everyone, is considered actually wise. Such a man sees equally the brahmana and the outcaste, the thief and the charitable promoter of brahmanical culture, the sun and the tiny sparks of fire, the gentle and the cruel." 3 Here "kevalam jnanam" means "seeing the Supersoul". In this verse the Lord declares, "One who thus views all living entities with the idea that I am present, in My form of Sri Krsna, within each of them, is considered actually wise. Seeing Me, he sees equally the brahmana and everyone else." 4 The Supreme Lord then explains (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.15): "For him who constantly meditates upon My presence within all persons, the bad tendencies of rivalry, envy, and abusiveness, along with false ego, are very quickly destroyed." In this way by serving the Lord in devotional service one becomes free from rivalry and other faults. 5 Then the Supreme Lord explains (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.16): "Disregarding the ridicule of one's companions, one should give up the bodily conception and its accompanying embarrassment. One should offer obeisances before all, even the gods, outcastes, cows and asses, falling flat upon the ground like a rod." In this way one should offer respectful obeisances to everyone. 6 Then the Supreme Lord explains (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.17): "Until one has fully developed the ability to see Me within all living beings, one must continue to worship me by this process with the activities of his speech, mind and body." Thus one should continue this method of worship until one sees the Supreme Lord everywhere. 7 Then the Supreme Lord explains (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.18): "By such transcendental knowledge of the all-pervading Personality of Godhead, one is able to see the Absolute Truth everywhere. Freed thus from all doubts, one gives up fruitive activities." 8 It is also said (Srimad Bhagavatam 4.30.20): "Always engaging in the activities of devotional service, devotees feel ever-increasingly fresh and new in all their activities. The all-knower, the Supersoul within the heart of the devotee, makes everything increasingly fresh. This is known as the Brahman position by the advocates of the Absolute Truth. In such a liberated stage (brahma-bhuta), one is never bewildered. Nor does one lament or become unnecessarily jubilant. This is due to the brahma-bhuta situation." 9 Thus in this verse spoken by the Supreme Lord to the Pracetas, and in Srila Sridhara Svami's commentary on this verse as well, it is confirmed that devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead is always new and fresh. Thus the result of devotional service is described. 10 In the Gopala-tapani Upanisad (2.34) it is asked: "Why is Lord Krsna the best form of the Supreme Lord?" In this way it is affirmed that the humanlike spiritual form of Lord Krsna is the best form of the Supreme Lord and therefore the worship of Him is the highest kind of worship. 11 This is confirmed by Lord Krsna Himself in the following words (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.19): "Indeed I consider this process: using one's mind, words, and bodily functions for realising Me within all living beings, to be the best possible method of spiritual enlightenment." 12 Here the word "sarva-kalpanam" means "of all spiritual processes", "sadhricinah" means "most appropriate", and "mad-bhavah" means "meditation on Sri Krsna". 13 Thus it is better to worship Lord Krsna than to worship the Supersoul. This is confirmed by Lord Krsna Himself in the final words of Sri Bhagavad-gita (18.61-66): 14 "The Supreme Lord is situated in everyone's heart, O Arjuna, and is directing the wanderings of all living entities, who are seated on a machine made of the material energy.* 15 "O scion of Bharata, surrender unto Him utterly. By His grace you will attain transcendental peace and the supreme and eternal abode.* 16 "Thus I have explained to you knowledge still more confidential. Deliberate on this full, and then do what you wish to do.* 17 "Because you are My very dear friend, I am speaking to you My supreme instruction, the most confidential knowledge of all. Hear this from Me, for it is for your benefit.* 18 "Always think of Me, become My devotee, worship Me and offer your homage unto Me. Thus you will come to Me without fail. I promise you this because you are My very dear friend.* 19 "Abandon all varieties of religion and just surrender unto Me. I shall deliver you from all sinful reactions. Do not fear."* 20 In the previous chapters of Bhagavad-gita were presented first confidential knowledge, then more confidential knowledge, which is the knowledge of the Supersoul, and then the most confidential knowledge, which is the knowledge of fixing the mind on Lord Krsna, taking shelter of Him alone, surrendering to Him along, and worshipping Him. Lord Krsna begins His description of the most confidential knowledge with these words (Sri Bhagavad-gita 9.1-2): 21 My dear Arjuna, because you are never envious of Me, I shall impart to you this most confidential knowledge and realisation, knowing which you shall be relieved of the miseries of material existence.* 22 "This knowledge is the king of education, the most secret of all secrets. It is the purest knowledge, and because it gives direct perception of the self by realisation, it is the perfection of religion. It is everlasting, and it is joyfully performed."* In the verses that follow this, Lord Krsna praises they who have faith in Him and criticises they who have no faith in worshipping Him in His original form as Lord Krsna. He says (Bhagavad gita 9.11-13): 23 "Fools deride Me when I descend in the human form. They do not know My transcendental nature as the Supreme Lord of all that be.* 24 "Those who are thus bewildered are attracted by demonic and atheistic views. In that deluded condition, their hopes for liberation, their fruitive activities, and their culture of knowledge are all defeated.* 25 "O son of Prtha, those who are not deluded, the great souls, are under the protection of the divine nature. They are fully engaged in devotional service because they know Me as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, original and inexhaustible."* 26 Bhagavad-gita 9.11 means, "Fools deride Me when I descend in the human form". In this way it is proved that to worship Lord Krsna is in every way better than to worship the all-pervading Supersoul, and the worship of Lord Krsna is the most confidential knowledge described in the Bhagavad-gita.

1 How important and exalted, then, must be the activities of devotional service. Lord Krsna Himself explains (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.21): "O Uddhava, greatest of saints, in a dangerous situation an ordinary person cries, becomes fearful and laments, although such useless emotions do not change the situation. But activities offered to Me without personal motivation, even if they are externally useless, amount to the actual process of religion." 2 Here the word "mayi" means "offered to Me", "yo yo dharmah" means "whatever activities are prescribed by the Vedas", "nisphalaya kalpyate" means "if they brings no result". These activities are offered without any desire to attain a result. That is the meaning. If they are offered in that way, however, these activities are not useless. The words "bring no result" here mean that they do not bring karmic results that will become an impediment to devotional service. That is the meaning. 3 If this is so for these activities, then how much more so must it be for direct devotional service to Lord Krsna, which is so rare? Here an example is given with the word "bhayadeh". Here the Lord says, "The fear and other emotions that Kamsa and other demons felt for Me were not in vain." This is so because these emotions brought liberation. That is the meaning.

1 Pure devotees of Lord Krsna, who are like Sri Uddhava, find that Lord Krsna is both the goal and the means to attain the goal. Lord Krsna explains (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.29.33): 2 "Through analytic knowledge, ritualistic work, mystic yoga, mundane business and political rule, people seek to advance in religiosity, economic development, sense gratification and liberation. But because you are My devotee, whatever men can accomplish in these multifarious ways you will very easily find within Me." 3 Here Lord Krsna says, "All of the four goals of human life, goals that begin with material piety, You will very easily find within Me". Here the word "jnane" means "liberation", "karmani" means "pious deeds and sense gratification", "yoge" means "the various kinds of mystic perfections", "vartayam" means "mundane business", and "danda-dharane" means "in political rule". In this way the four goals of human life are understood. This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Please instruct me, who am surrendered unto You, how may I have undeviating attachment to Your lotus feet." 2 Srila Sridhara Svami comments: "Here Sri Uddhava says, 'Although You have already helped me in many ways, still I make this request.' Then Uddhava says 'O Lord, please instruct me'. The word 'anapayini' here means even after liberation'." This verse was spoken by Sri Uddhava.

1 In another passage Sri Uddhava asks the following question (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.14.31): "My dear lotus-eyed Krsna, by what process should one who desires liberation meditate upon You, of what specific nature should his meditation be, and upon which form should he meditate? Kindly explain to me this topic of meditation." 2 Srila Sridhara Svami comments: "Here Sri Uddhava asks, 'How should one who desires liberation meditate on You. Please tell this to me'. Uddhava continues, 'I am Your servant, and I wish to understand this. I need not engage in yoga meditation.' Sri Uddhava himself answered this question in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.6.460): "Simply by decorating ourselves with the garlands, fragrant oils,, clothes and ornaments that You have already enjoyed, and by eating the remnants of Your meals, we, Your servants, will indeed conquer Your illusory energy."

1 Auspiciousness greater than that manifested in Lord Krsna was never manifested in any one of the many incarnations of the Lord. In Srimad Bhagavatam (3.2.23) it is said: 2 "Alas, how shall I take shelter of one more merciful that He who granted the position of mother to a she-demon (Putana) although she was unfaithful and she prepared deadly poison to be sucked from her breast?"* 3 The words "dhatrya ya ucita gatih" mean "the position of a mother". This verse was spoken by Sri Uddhava.

1 Thus is revealed the great glory of devotional service to Lord Krsna, who enjoys transcendental pastimes in Sri Gokula. That glory is also revealed in the following statement of Srimad Bhagavatam (10.6.35): "Putana was always hankering for the blood of human children, and with that desire she came to kill Krsna, but because she offered her breast to the Lord, she attained the greatest achievement. What then is to be said of those who had natural devotion and affection for Krsna as mothers and who offered Him their breasts to suck or offered something very dear, as a mother offers something to a child?"* 2 The glory of devotional service is also revealed in the following passage of Srimad Bhagavatam (10.7.1), which has already been quoted in Sri Krsna-sandarbha: "King Pariksit said: My lord, Sukadeva Gosvami, all the various activities exhibited by the incarnations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are certainly pleasing to the ear and to the mind. Simply by one's hearing of these activities, the dirty things in one's mind immediately vanish. Generally we are reluctant to hear about the activities of the Lord, but Krsna's childhood activities are so attractive that they are automatically pleasing to the mind and ear. Thus one's attachment for hearing about material things, which is the root cause of material existence, vanishes, and one gradually develops devotional service to the Supreme Lord, attachment for Him, and friendship with devotees who give us the contribution of Krsna consciousness. If you think it fit, kindly speak about those activities of the Lord."* The Lord's best pastimes are those in Gokula such as His pastime of the rasa dance with the gopis. This is also confirmed by the following words (Srimad Bhagavatam 10.33.39): 3 "Anyone who faithfully hears or describes the Lord's playful affairs with the young gopis of Vrndavana will attain the Lord's pure devotional service. Thus he will quickly become sober and conquer lust, the disease of the heart."* 4 Here the word "ca" means "others also" and "atha" means "or". Thus the words "srnuyad atha varnayet" means "hears or describes". Thus one meditates on the Lord's pastimes or perceives them in other ways. "Param" means "nothing is better than this", "hrd-rogam" means "one is quickly cured of lust and other vices in the heart". In this way it is proved that the worship of Lord Krsna as He enjoys pastimes with His most beloved Sri Radha is the highest form of worship. However, these pastimes are very confidential. One should not think these pastimes are like the pastimes of human beings with material senses and material relations of father, sons, servants and the like. Such an idea contradicts the true situation. Such an idea will become an impediment to one's spiritual progress. In one sense, some parts of these pastimes are especially confidential. In another sense, all of these pastimes are very confidential. In this way it should be understood. This verse was spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami.

1 In this way the path of devotional service has been revealed. This confidential knowledge should be revealed to a person who has attained the mercy of his spiritual master or the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, a person who has attained the goal of his spiritual endeavours. This confidential knowledge should not be revealed to others. This is explained in the following words of Srimad Bhagavatam (8.17.20): 2 "O Lady, even if someone inquires, you should not disclose this fact to anyone. That which is very confidential is successful if kept secret."* 3 Here the word "sampadyate" means "gives the result". This verse was spoken by Lord Visnu to Aditi.

1 In this way the path of sadhana bhakti has been revealed. The path to perfection is revealed in these words of Srimad Bhagavatam (1.2.16): "O twice-born sages, by serving those devotees who are completely freed from all vice, great service is done. By such service, one gains affinity for hearing the messages of Vasudeva."* 2 The path to perfection is also revealed in these words of Sri Narada Muni (Srimad Bhagavatam 1.5.23-26): "O Muni, in the last millennium I was born as the son of a certain maidservant engaged in the service of brahmanas who were following the principles of Vedanta. When they were living together during the four months of the rainy season, I was engaged in their personal service.* "Although they were impartial by nature, those followers of the Vedanta blessed me with their causeless mercy. As far as I was concerned, I was self-controlled and had no attachment for sports, even though I was a boy. In addition, I was not naughty, and I did not speak more than required.* "Once only, by their permission, I took the remnants of their food, and by so doing all my sins were at once eradicated. Thus being engaged, I became purified in heart, and at that time the very nature of the transcendentalist became attractive to me.* "O Vyasadeva, in that association and by the mercy of those great

Vedantists, I could hear them describe the attractive activities of Lord Krsna. And thus listening attentively, my taste for hearing of the Supreme Personality of Godhead increased at every step."* 3 The path to perfection is also revealed in these words of Lord Kapiladeva (Srimad Bhagavatam 3.25.25): "In the association of pure devotees, discussion of the pastimes and activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very pleasing and satisfying to the ear and the heart. By cultivating such knowledge one gradually becomes advanced on the path of liberation, and thereafter he is freed, and his attraction becomes fixed. Then real devotion and devotional service begin."* 4 Devotional service performed with a desire to attain liberation is described in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 3.25.26): "Thus consciousness engaged in devotional service in the association of devotees, a person gains distaste for sense gratification, both in this world and in the next, by constantly thinking about the activities of the Lord. This process of Krsna consciousness is the easiest process of mystic power. When one is actually situated on that path of devotional service, he is able to control the mind."* 5 Pure devotional service is described in these words (Srimad Bhagavatam 3.25.34): "A pure devotee, who is attached to the activities of devotional service and who always engages in the service of My lotus feet, never desires to become one with Me. Such a devotee, who is unflinchingly engaged, always glorifies My pastimes and activities."* In this way the sequence of activities by which one gradually makes advancement in devotional service is to be understood. 6 The activities of pure devotional service are also described in this instructions spoken by Sri Prahlada to the demons' sons (Srimad Bhagavatam 7.7.30-31): "One must accept the bona fide spiritual master and render service unto him with great devotion and faith. Whatever one has in one's possession should be offered to the spiritual master, and in the association of saintly persons and devotees one should worship, the Lord, hear the glories of the Lord with faith, glorify the transcendental qualities and activities of the Lord, always meditate on the Lord's lotus feet and worship the Deity of the Lord strictly according to the injunctions of the sastra and guru.* 7 In some circumstances it may be possible to pass over the various stages in the path of devotional service and quickly attain perfection. The following example is given (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.2.42-43): 8 "Devotion, direct experience of the Supreme Lord, and detachment from other things, these three occur simultaneously for one who has taken shelter of the Supreme Lord, in the same way that pleasure, nourishment and relief from hunger come simultaneously and increasingly, with each bite, for a person engaged in eating.* 9 "My dear King, the devotee who worships the lotus feet of the infallible Personality of Godhead with constant endeavour thus achieves unflinching devotion, detachment and experienced knowledge of the Personality of Godhead. In this way the successful devotee of the Lord achieves supreme spiritual peace." 10 Srila Sridhara Svami comments: "Here the word "prapadyamanasya" means "of a person who worships Lord Hari', "bhaktih" means "devotional service characterised by love of God", "paresanubhavah" means "the direct manifestation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the abode of spiritual love", "viraktih" means "filled with spiritual happiness by seeing the Lord, one becomes detached from his home and other material attractions", "ity esa trika eka-kalah" refers to the time of engaging in devotional service", "yathasnatah" means "of one engaged in eating", "tustih" means "happiness", and "pustih syuh" means "filling the stomach". This means that with every bite one's hunger becomes diminished. This happens with every mouthful of rice. By once worshipping the Lord the three things that begin with love for the Lord are manifested simultaneously. When one worships the Lord constantly "bhajato nuvrttya" one gains great love for the Lord. As by eating many mouthfuls of food one attains great satisfaction, so by worshipping the Lord constantly by the Lord's mercy one also attains great satisfaction and the supreme success in life. This is described in Srimad Bhagavatam 11.2.43." 11 Here the word "santim" means "the final success", "saksat" means "which has neither inside nor outside". This is so because by always worshipping the Lord one attains the final goal of life. In the previous verse (Srimad Bhagavatam 11.2.42) an example of devotional service, satisfaction, and other things was given. In that example devotional service and pleasure were compared because they both have happiness as a common element, nourishment and direct perception of the Lord were compared because they both have satisfaction of the self as a common element, and relief from hunger was compared to detachment because they both have peacefulness as a common element. As by eating food one becomes free from hunger, so by worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead one becomes detached from material things. This example is given here because it shows disinterest in other things. This verse was spoken by Sri Kavi to Maharaja Nimi. In this way devotional service, which is known as abhidheya, has been explained. One should learn more about devotional service by studying the scriptures and hearing the explanations of the great devotees. Epilogue Sri Sri Radha-Krsna, at whose lotus feet stay the spiritual master, the scriptures, faith, attraction, following, and perfection, whose lotus feet are my everything, whose eyes are flooded with tears of mercy, and who are the shelter of they who have no other shelter, are my only shelter.

srila Gopala Bhatta Gosvami, the great philosopher from the southern provinces who greatly pleased srila Rupa Gosvami and srila Sanatana Gosvami, left many valuable notes that defeat various philosophical misconceptions. Systematically arranging these notes, and considering their content, Jiva Gosvami writes this book.

Now the Priti-sandarbha will be written. The Supreme Truth, as He is revealed in the scriptures, was described in the first four sandarbhas. The worship of the Supreme Truth was described in the next, the fifth sandarbha. Those topics already explained, the true need of mankind will be now described. The need of mankind is to end suffering and attain happiness. When the Supreme Personality of Godhead is pleased, then one attains happiness and ends all sufferings. In the previous sandarbhas many passages from scripture were quoted to describe the nature of the Supreme Truth. There it was proved that the Supreme Truth is perfect with eternal, limitless, transcendental bliss. In Taittiriya Upanisad (2.8.1) it is said that the Prajapatis enjoy happiness thousands of times greater than the happiness of human beings, and the great souls who know the Supreme enjoy happiness hundreds of times greater still. In Taittiriya Upanisad (2.4.1) it is said that happiness is limitless and very extraordinary. In Taittiriya Upanisad (2.7.1) it is said that the Supreme is the source of all bliss experienced by the living entities. In the same way the Supreme is also the source of the sun's light and all other light also. When he is ignorant of the Supreme Lord, the individual soul finds himself defeated by maya (material illusion). In that condition, his awareness of his original form is taken away from him and he is covered by an external form created by maya. In this way he is imprisoned in the world of birth and death and shackled by a host of material sufferings. This was already explained in the Paranmatma- sandarbha. Therefore when one has direct knowledge of the Supreme Truth, one attains the greatest bliss. Attaining that bliss is the true goal of life. When ignorance is dispelled, one understands his true spiritual nature. Then sufferings end. The first (understanding one's true spiritual nature) of these is attained when the Supreme Truth is directly manifest before one. The second (the end of sufferings) of these is attained when one attains his spiritual form, which never dies. Then one is situated in eternity. The first of these is the highest goal of life. It is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.2.9- 12):

tac chraddadhana munayo jnana-vairagya-yuktaya pasyanty atmani catmanam bhaktya sruta-grhitaya

"All occupational engagements are certainly meant for ultimate liberation. They should never be performed for material gain. Furthermore, according to sages, one who is engaged in the ultimate occupational service should never use material gain to cultivate sense gratification. "Life's desires should never be directed toward sense gratification. One should desire only a healthy life, or self-preservation, since a human being is meant for inquiry about the Absolute Truth. Nothing else should be the goal of one's works. "Learned transcendentalists who know the Absolute Truth call the nonodual substance Brahman, Paramatma, or Bhagavan. "The seriously inquisitive student or sage, well equipped with knowledge and detachment, realizes that Absolute Truth by rendering devotional service in terms of what he has heard from the Vedanta-sruti."

The stage where all sufferings end is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.2.21):

bhidyate hrdaya-granthih. . .

"Thus the knot in the heart is pierced, and all misgivings are cut to pieces. The chain of fruitive actions is terminated when one sees the self as the master."

This is also described in these words of sri Visnu Purana (6.5.59):

nirastatisayahlada- sukha-bhavaika-laksana bhesajam bhagavat-praptir ekantatyantiki mata "Attaining the Supreme Lord is the medicine to cure the suffering soul. That medicine fills the taker with transcendental bliss."

In the Taittiriya Upnaisad (2.4.1) it is said:

anandam brahmano vidvan na bibheti kutascana

"A soul who knows the bliss that comes from the Supreme Brahman never fears."

The word "mukti" (liberation) is defined as: The state that comes after the shakcles of birth and death are cut". srila Suta Gosvami describes liberation in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (12.4.34):

yadaivam etena viveka-hetina maya-mayahankaranatma-bandhanam chittvacyutatmanubhavo 'vatisthate tam ahur atyantikam anga samplavam

"Cutting the bonds of false ego with the sword of knowledge, the soul sees the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead. My dear friend, then the soul's bondage in matter is completely destroyed."

This verse means, "When the soul sees the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead, that state is called liberation."

The same explanation is given in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (2.10.6):

muktir hitvanyatha-rupam svarupena vyavasthitih

"Liberation is the permanent situation of the form of the living entity after he gives up the changeable gross and subtle material bodies."

These words mean that even though the soul may still reside in the world of birth and death, he may still directly see his original spiritual form. These words also mean that the soul's misidentification with the external material body (anyatha- rupam) is then destroyed. In this verse the primary meaning of the word "svarupa" is "the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead". However, because the individual spirit souls are fragmental parts of the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the same way rays of sunlight are fragmental parts of the sun planet, the word "svarupa" may also refer to the individual soul.

yada rahitam atmanam bhutendriya-gunasayaih svarupena mayopetam pasyan svarajyam rcchati

"When you are free from the conception of gross and subtle bodies, and when your senses are free from all influences of the modes of material nature, you will realize your pure form in My association. At that time you will be situated in pure consciousness."

In this verse the word "upetam": means "it is attained without any trouble". The happiness of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is most important. The happiness of the individual souls is secondary. The individual souls' relationship with the Supreme is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.55):

"Therefore it is his own self that is most dear to every embodied living being, and it is simply for the satisfaction of this self that the whole material creation of moving and nonmoving entities exists. "You should knowe Krsna as the original soul of all atmas (living entities). For the benefit of the whole universe He has, out of His causeless mercy, appeared as an ordinary human being."

The idea that the individual souls are not in any way different from the Supreme has already been refuted in the Paramatma-sandarbha. The Taittiriya Upanisad (2.7.1) gives this conclusive opinion:

raso vai sah. rasam hy evayam labdhvanandi bhavati.

"When one understands the Personality of God, the reservoir of pleasure, Krsna, he actually becomes transcendentally blissful."

The individual souls are the fragmental parts and the Supreme is whole, within which the parts are contained. That is their relationship. This relationship is manifested in two ways. In the first manifestation one becomes free from the illusions presented by maya and attains the impersonal Brahman. In this way one attains knowledge of the power of impersonal Brahman manifested in the material world. Then one gradually passes beyond the coverings of the material world. Then one very intently worships the impersonal Brahman. In the second manifestation of liberation one attains the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One attains Him because, even though He is not openly present everywhere in the material world, by His inconceivable potency the Supreme Personality of Godhead is openly present everywhere in the spiritual world of Vaikuntha, and then one also attains Him because one is able to stay near His lotus feet. One may attain liberation at the moment of death, and one may also be liberated even during the time one lives in the material world. At the time of death one may become free from having to take another material body and one may directly see the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Also, even as one lives in the material world, one may know that he is not the external material body created by maya and one may also see the Supreme Personality of Godhead directly. That liberation is the highest goal of life is explained in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (4.22.35), where Sanatkumara tells KIng Prthu:

krtanta-bhaya-samyutah

"Out of the four principles - namely religion, economic development, sense gratification, and liberation - liberation has to be taken very seriously. The other three are subject to destruction by the stringent law of nature - death."

In the Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (2.4.3) it is also said:

yenaham namrtah syam kim aham tena kuryam

"What shall I do to become free of death?"

Attaining the liberation where one directly sees the Supreme Truth is the highest goal of life. This is explained again and again. The Supreme Truth has two features. In one feature He is seen indistinctly, and in the other feature He is seen distinctly. In His feature as the impersonal Brahman He is seen indistinctly, and in His feature as Paramatma (the Supersoul) and Bhagavan (the Supreme Personality of Godhead) He is seen distinctly. Thus His feature as Bhagavan and Paramatma is superior to His feature of impersonal Brahman. This I have already explained in Bhagavat-sandarbha (anuccheda 80) in my explanation of this verse of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.5.4):

"You have fully delineated the subject of impersonal Brahman as well as the knowledge derived therefrom. Why should you be despondent in spite of all this, thinking that you are undone, my dear prabbu?"

With further explanations I will now again show how that is true. Direct perception of Bhagavan, who appears as Paramatma and in many other forms also, is the highest kind of liberation. In that highest liberation the most exalted spiritual activities are known by names like "bhakti" (devotional service) and "priti" (spiritual love). Spiritual love is considered the highest of all spiritual sentiments. Priti completely ends all sufferings. Without priti the highest stage of spiritual life is not attained. Priti is not dependent on anything else. To the extent one has priti, one is fortunate. Priti is present as one is making progress toward liberation and it is also present when one has attained liberation. That is the correct understanding. The form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is full of transcendental bliss. transcendental bliss is the abode of priti. Therefore priti is most important in experiencing transcendental bliss. Therefore, the spirit souls should always try to attain priti. Priti is the greatest need, the highest goal of the spirit souls. Some examples of the exalted nature of priti will now be given. In srimad-Bhagavatam (11.20.33) the Supreme Personality of Godhead explains:

sarvam mad-bhakti-yogena mad-bhakto labhate 'njasa svargapavargam mad-dhama kathancid yadi vanchati

"If he desires them, by serving Me with devotion My devotee easily attains Svargaloka, liberation, or My own abode."

In srimad-Bhagavatam (5.5.6) Lord Rsabhadeva explains:

pritir na yavan mayi vasudeve na mucyate deha-yogena tavat

"Therefore, until one has love for Lord Vasudeva, who is none other than Myself, he is certainly not delivered from having to accept a material body again and again."

In srimad-Bhagavatam (11.14.21) the Supreme Personality of Godhead explains:

bhaktyaham ekaya grahyah sraddhayatma priyah satam

"Being very dear to the devotees and sadhus, I am attained through unflinching faith and devotional service."

In the Mathara-sruti it is said:

bhaktir evainam nayati. bhaktir evainam darsayati. bhakti- vasah puruso bhaktir eva bhuyasi.

AAAAAAAIn this sandarbha will be shown, one after another, many proofs that love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the highest goal of life. The scriptures declare that liberation is the true goal of life. for example, in srimad-Bhagavatam (12.13.12) it is said:

sarva-vedanta. . .kaivalyaika-prayojanam

AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAA
AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAA This verse means: "srimad-Bhagavatam explains that liberation is the true goal of life." Ignorance of the Supreme Truth, the Supreme Lord, is the root of all problems that beset the individual soul. This is explained in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (11.2.37):

bhayam dvitiyabhinivesatah syad isad apetasya. . . A "When the living entity is attracted by the material energy, which is separate from Krsna, he is overpowered by fear."

The word "kaivalya" used in the previously quoted verse of srimad-Bhagavatam (12.13.12) thus means "the purity that comes from knowing the Supreme Personality of Godhead". Or, the world "kaivalya" may also mean, the highest state of liberation, which is manifested in the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself". This second meaning is seen in these words of Skanda Purana:

brahmesanadibhir devair yat praptum naiva sakyate sa yat-svabhavam kaivalyam sa bhavan kevalo hare

A "O Lord Hari, Your exalted position is far above the material world. Even Brahma, siva, and all the demigods cannot attain Your exalted position of the highest liberation."

Sometimes the world "kaivalya" means, "the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whi is situated in the highest state of liberation. In srimad-Bhagavatam (11.9.1), in the teachings of Dattatreya, the word is used in that way:

AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAsandoho nirupadhikah

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is greater than all other beings, both high and low. His form is not material. He is filled with spiritual bliss. He is situated in the highest stage of liberation."

Thus the word "kaivalya" may mean either directly seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead" or the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is situated in the highest state of liberation". Both meanings are employed in the scriptures. The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami. A

In srimad-Bhagavatam (6.16.63) it is said:

Aetavan eva manujair yoga-naipunya-buddhibhih svarthah sarvatmana jneyo yat paratmaika-darsanam

"Persons who try to reach the ultimate goal of life must expertly observe the Supreme Absolute Person and the living entity, who are one in quality in their relationship as part and whole. This is the ultimate understanding of life. There is no better truth than this." A In his commentary on this verse srila sridhara Svami explains:

"The gist of this verse is: `There is no higher goal of life than this.' This verse says: `They whose intelligence is expert at yoga see that they are one in quality with the Supreme."

These words may also mean: "They fix their gaze on the supremely liberated Personality of Godhead." This verse was spoken by Lord Sankarsana to King Citraketu.

Liberation attained at the moment of death is of two kinds: immediate and gradual. The first kind of liberation, Immediate liberation, is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (2.2.15-21):

sthiram sukham casanam. . .visrjet param gatah

"O king, whenever the yogi desires to leave this planet of human beings, he should not be perplexed about the proper time or place, but should comfortably sit without being disturbed and, regulating the life air, should control the senses by the mind. 168Thereafter, the yogi should merge his mind, by his unalloyed intelligence, into the living entity, and then merge the living entity into the Superself. And by doing this the fully satisfied living entity becomes situated in the supreme stage of satisfaction, so that he ceases from all other activities. "In that transcendental state of labdhopasanti, there is no supremacy of devastating time, which controls even the celestial demigods who are empowered to rule over mundane cratures. 9And what tio speak of the demigods themselves?) Nor is there the mode of material goodness, nor passion, nor ignorance, nor even the false ego, nor the material Causal Ocean, nor the material nature. "The transcendentalists desire to avoid everything godless, for they know that supreme situation in which everything is related with the Supreme Lord Visnu. Therefore a pure devotee who is in absolute harmony with the Lord does not create perplexities, but worships the lotus feet of the Lord at every moment, taking them into his heart. "By the strength of scientific knowledge, one should be well situated in absolute realization and thus be able to extinguish all material desires. One should then give up the material body by blocking the air hole (through which stool is evacuated) with the heel of one's foot and by lifting the life air from one place to another in the six primary places. "The meditative devotee should slowly push up the life air from the navel to the heart, from there to the chest and from there to the root of the palate. He should search out the proper places with intelligence. "Thereafter the bhakti-yogi should push the life air up between the eyebrows, and then, blocking the seven outlets of the life air, he should maintain his aim for going home, back to Godhead. If he is completely free from all desires for material enjoyment, he should then reach the cerebral hole and give up his material connections, having gone to the Supreme."

"However, O king, if a yogi maintains a desire for improved material enjoyments, like transference to the topmost planet, Brahmaloka, or the achievement of the eightfold perfections, travel in outer space with the Vaihayasas, or a situation in one of the millions of planets, then he has to take away with him the materially molded mind and senses. "The transcendentalists are concerned with the spiritual body. As such, by the strength of their devotional service, austerities, mystic power, and transcendental knowledge, their movements are unrestricted, within and beyond the material worlds. The fruitive workers, or the gross materialists, can never move in such an unrestricted manner. "O king, when such a mystic passes over the Milky Way by the illuminating Susumna to reach the highest planet, Brahmaloka, he goes first to Vaisvanara, the planet of the deity of fire, wherein he becomes completely cleansed of all contaminations, and thereafter he goes still higher, to the circle of sisumara, to relate with Lord Hari, the Personality of Godhead. "This Sisumara is the pivot for the turning of the complete universe, and it is called the navel of Visnu (Garbhodakasayi Visnu). The yogi alone goes beyond this circle of sisumara and attains the planet (Maharloka) where purified saints like Bhrgu enjoy a duration of life of 4,300,000,000 solar years. This planet is worshipable even for the saints who are transcendentally situated. "At the time of the final devastation of the complete universe (the end of the duration of Brahma's life), a flame of fire emanates from the mouth of Ananta (from the bottom of the universe). The yogi sees all the planets of the universe burning to ashes, and thus he leaves for Satyaloka by airplanes used by the great purified souls. The duration of life in Satyaloka is calculated to be 15,480,000,000,000 years. "In that planet of Satyaloka there is neithger bereavement, nor old age, nor death. There is no pain of any kind, and therefore there are no anxieties, save that sometimes, due to consciousness, there is a feeling of compassion for those unaware of the process of devotional service, who are subjected to unsurpassable miseries in the material world. "After reaching Satyaloka, the devotee is specifically able to be incorporated fearlessly by the subtle body in an identity similar to that of the gross body, and one after another he gradually attains stages of existence from earthly to watery, fiery, glowing, and airy, until he reaches the ethereal stage. "The devotee thus surpasses the subtle objects of different senses like aroma by smelling, the palate by tasting, vision by seeing forms, touch by contacting, the vibrations of the ear by ethereal identification, and the sense organs by material activities. "The devotee, thus surpassing the gross and subtle forms of coverings, enters the plane of egoism. And in that ststus he merges the material modes of nature (ignorance and passion) in this point of neutralization and thus reaches egoism in goodness. After this, all egoism is merged in the mahat-tattva, and he comes to the point of pure self- realization. "Only the purified soul can attain the perfection of associating with the Supreme Personality of Godhead in complete bliss and satisfaction in his constitutional state. Whoever is able to renovate such devotional perfection is never again attracted by this material world, and he never returns."

It is also seen that one may be liberated even while living in this material world. How, by directly seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead, one may liberated while still living in the material world is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (1.3.33):

yatreme sad-asad-rupe pratisiddhe sva-samvida avidyayatmani krte iti tad brahma-darsanam

"Whenever a person experiences, by self-realization, that both the gross and subtle bodies have nothing to do with the self, at that time he sees himself as well as the Lord."

This verse says: "A person learns, by self- realization, the truth about the gross and subtle material bodies." What kind of truth does the soul learn? The soul learns that "both the gross and subtle bodies have nothing to do with the self". At that time the soul directly sees the Supreme. Then the soul understands his own true nature. The soul understands liberation. But that does not mean that the soul ceases to exist. When he understands that the idea that he is identical with the gross and subtle material bodies is an illusion, and when he then directly sees the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the soul attains liberation, even though he may remain alive in the material world. That is the meaning of this verse. This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

"When the mind is thus completely freed from all material contamination and detached from material objectives, it is just like the flame of a lamp. At that time the mind is actually dovetailed with that of the Supreme Lord and is experienced as one with Him because it is freed from the interactive flow of the material qualities. "Thus situated in the highest transcendental stage, the mind ceases from all material reaction and becomes situated in its own glory, transcendental to all material conceptions of happiness and distress. At that time the yogi realizes the truth of his relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He discovers that pleasure and pain as well as their interactions, which he attributed to his own self, are actually due to the false ego, which is a product of ignorance. "Because he has achieved his real identity, the perfectlyrealized soul has no conception of how the material body is moving or acting, just as an intoxicated person cannot understand whether or not he has clothing on his body. "The body of such a liberated yogi, along with the senses, is taken charge of by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and it functions until its destined activities are finished. The liberated devotee, being awake to his constitutional position and thus situated in samadhi, the highest perfectional stage of yoga, does not accept the by-products of the material body as his own. Thus he considers his bodily activities to be like the activities of a body in a dream."

In these verses it is said, "When the mind is freed from material contamination, one sees the Supersoul. That is liberation." Then it is said, "The mind is situated in its own glory. Then the yogi realizes the truth of his relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead." Then it is said, "Then the soul understands his own form and the form of the Supreme Brahman." Then it is said, "Then the liberated devotee is awake to his constitutional position." Simply by beginning these spiritual activities, the soul begins to understand what is liberation. This is described in the following words of Isopanisad

tatra ko mohah kah soka ekatvam anupasyatah

"One who always sees all living entities as spiritual sparks, in quality one with the Lord, becomes a true knower of things. What, then, can be illusion or anxiety for him?"

At the end one sees the Supreme Personality of Godhead directly. This is called liberation. It is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.3.34):

yady esoparata devi maya vaisaradi matih sampanna eveti vidur mahimni sve mahiyate

"If the illusory energy subsides, and the living entity becoems fully enriched with knowledge by the grace of the Lord, then he becomes at once enlightened with self-realization and thus becomes situated in his own glory."

This verse says, "When, even while living in this material world, an individual spirit soul is situated in the state of liberation, the expert Supreme Personality of Godhead gives to him glorious intelligence, intelligence filled with knowledge given by His spiritual potency (maya), intelligence in the mode of pure goodness. That intelligence enables the soul to become detached from the material world. Then, all obstacles surmounted, the soul attains transcendental bliss. The sages know this is liberation. Attaining this good fortune, the soul is situated in the glory of his own original spiritual form. Then he is worshiped. Then he is gloriously manifest." This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

In the previous sandarbhas, the Tattva, Bhagavat, and Paramatma sandarbhas, many passages from the Sruti-sastra and other scriptures were quoted to prove that the individual spirit souls are all parts and parcels of the Supreme Truth. As particles of sunlight emanate from the sun planet, the the individual spirit souls are particles of spirit emanating from the Supreme Spirit. Because He is all-pervading, the Supreme Spirit is also present within each indiovidual spirit soul. That the Supreme has not material form does not refute that the idea that the Supreme is also localized, staying in only one place. Because the individual souls have emanated form Him, the Supreme is their shelter. When this knowledge of the Supreme is absent, the particles of light that are the individual spirit soul are covered by the dark shadow of material illusion (maya). When they try to understand the Supreme and take shelter of Him, the individual souls are situated in the light. This has been explained in the previous sandarbhas. Because they are manifest from the Supreme Lord Himself and because they are meant to help the Lord in His pastimes, the individual souls are the Lord's potency. The individual spirit souls are atomic in size, for that is the scriptures' description of them. Like spots of sandalwood anointing the Lord's body, the individual souls are manifested from the Lord's potencies. Because the Lord's potencies are inconceivable, there is no contradiction in any of this. This is also confirmed by these words of Vedanta-sutra (2.1.27):

srutes tu sabda-mulatvat

"There is contradiction, for that is the explanation of the scriptures."

It is also confirmed by these words of Visnu Purana (1.22.53):

eka-desa-sthitasyagner jyotsna vitarini yatha parasya brahmanah saktis tathedam akhilam jagat

"Just as the illumination of fire, which is situated in one place, is spread all over, the energies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Parabrahman, are spread all over this universe."

In this way it is seen that the individual souls and 5the Supreme Lord are simultaneously one and different. In Chandogya Upanisads (6.8.7) statement "tat tvam asi" (You are that) it is seen that because they are His parts and parecels, the individual spirit souls are not different from the Supreme Lord. In the sruti-sastra it is said that the Supreme is not divided into parts. This statement may be interpreted in two ways. The primary interpretation is that the Supreme is liberated and full of bliss. The secondary interpretation is that the Supreme is blissful and has spiritual potencies, and when He manifests parts and parcels, His parts and parcels are never material in nature. In Bhagavad-gita it is said that the Supreme has all potencies and everything that exists is part and parcel of Him. The individual spirit souls are His parts and parcels eternally, eternally like rays of light emanating from the sun that is the Supreme Lord. In this way it is proved that the Supreme Lord is always the supreme controller, the supreme enjoyer, and supreme in all other ways. The Supreme Lord's potency has the power to do anything. Manifesting His maya potency, the Lord creates the various transformations of the material nature. By the touch of the maya potency the world of birth and death is manifest. With the help of the Lord's internal potency the soul is able to see himself, the impersonal Brahman, and the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan). That one needs the help of the Lord's internal potency to see the Lord is hinted by this rhetorical question spoken in Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (2.4.14):

yatra tasya sarvam atmaivabhut. . . tat kena kam pasyet

"If everything is the Supreme, then how will one be able to see Him? Whom will one see?"

Without the help of the Lord's internal potency no one has the power to see the Supreme. That one's needs teh Lord's help in order to see Him is also confriemd by these words of Katha Upanisad (1.2.23):

"The Lord is obtained only by one whom He Himself chooses. To such a person He manifests His own form."

In this way, by the touch of the Supreme Lord's internal potency, the illusory potency (maya) disappears, and the cycle of birth and death is stopped. Persons who do not think liberation is a situated of happiness do not attain the true goal of life. In the absence of liberation all that they have is worthless. No one desires, "I will become happiness itself".

Rather, everyone desires, "I will experience happiness." Therefore for a person who does not try to become happy by attaining liberation, the meaning of the scriptures is lost. A person who does not feel unhappy to be deprived of the bliss of liberation is not able to attain the true goal of life. Narada Muni explained this goal of life to King Pracinabarhi in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (4.25.4):

duhkha-hanih sukhavaptih sreyas tan neha cesyate

"The chief aim of life is to get rid of all miseries and enjoy happiness, but these tow things cannot be realized by fruitive activity."

This is also seen in the following words of Taittiriya Upanisad (2.7.1):

rasam hy evayam labdhvanandi bhavati.

"When one understands the Personality of God, the reservoir of pleasure, Krsna, he actually becomes transcendentally blissful."

It is also seen in these words of Chandogya Upanisad (7.25.2):

atma-ratih atma-kridah

"The liberated souls enjoy the Supreme Lord's company. They enjoy pastimes with the Lord."

It is also seen in these words of Visnu-dharma Purana:

bhinne drtau yatha vayur naivanyah saha vayuna ksina-punyagha-bandhas tu tathatma brahmana saha

"As the air within a blacksmith's bellows is not different from the air outside, so a soul whose bonds of piety and sin are cut is not different from the Supreme.

tatah samasta-kalyana- samasta-sukha-sampadam ahladam anyam akalankam apnoti sasvatam

"Such a soul attains pure eternal bliss, bliss far beyond all the happiness and prosperity of the material world.

brahma-svarupasya tatha hy atmano nityadaiva sah vyutthana-kale rajendra aste hi atirohitah

"O king of kings, when he attains liberation the soul attains eternal spiritual bliss.

adarsasya malabhavad vaimalyam kasate yatha jnanagni-dagdha-heyasya sa hlado hy atmanas tatha

"He becomes pure, like the perfect reflection in a perfectly clean mirror. His sins burned away by the fire of spiritual knowledge, he attains spiritual bliss.

tatha heya-guna-dhvamsad avabodhadayo gunah prakasante na janyante nitya evatmano hi te

"His sins destroyed, his spiritual virtues, beginning with spiritual knowledge, are manifest. Those spiritual qualities were not born at that moment. They had always existed within him.

jnanam vairagyam aisvaryam dharmas ca manujesvara atmano brahma-bhutasya nityam eva catustayam

"O great king, knowledge, renunciation, opulence, and piety, these four glories always reside in a liberated soul.

etad advaitam akhyatam esa eva tavoditah ayam visnur idam brahma tathaitat satyam uttamam

"It is said he is not different from the Lord. He is Visnu. He is the impersonal Brahman. That is the truth."

In this passage the example of the air within and without the bellows is given to show how the individual spirit soul is the part and the Supreme Lord is the whole. Although he is by nature the Supreme Lord's part and parcel, the individual soul can still tuen his face away from the Lord. When he turns his face away from the Lord, the individual soul, now in the grip of the Lord's illusory potency, maya, no longer understands his true, his original nature. However, when he turns his face again towards the Lord, by the Lord's mercy the soul attains liberation. This is described in these words of Taittiriya Upanisad (2.4.1):

"One who knows the bliss of the Supreme eventually attains liberation."

This is also described in these words of Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (2.4.1):

na tasmat prana utkramanti. atraiva samavaliyante. brahmaiva san brahmapyeti.

"He does not truly die. He goes to the spiritual world. He attains a spiritual form and then he meets the Supreme."

Here it is clearly said that one attains a spiritual nature and then one meets the Supreme. In this passage the first use of the word "brahma" refers to the soul's nature, which is like that of the Supreme. The second use of the word brahma" refers to the Supreme Himself. In this way the phrase "brahmaiava sann" means "attaining a spiritual nature like that of the Supreme". This is so because the soul's nature is spiritual, like that of the Supreme. The soul and the Supreme do not have different natures, one spiritual and the other something else. This is also described in these words of Mundaka Upanisad (3.2.9):

"One who knows the Supreme attains a spiritual nature like that of the Supreme."

In some places in the scriptures it is said that the individual soul's spiritual nature like that of the Supreme. For example, in the Mundaka Upanisad (3.1.3) it is said:

niranjanah paramam samyama upaiti

"A soul untouched by matter becomes like the Supreme."

In Bhagavad-gita (14.2) the Supreme Lord declares:

idam jnanam samasritya mama sadharmyam agatah

"By becoming fixed in this knowledge one can attain to the transcendental nature, which is like My own nature."

The individual soul and the Supreme are both clearly described in these words of Katha Upanisad (2.1.15):

yathodakam suddhe suddham asiktam tadrg eva bhavati evam muner vijanata atma bhavati gautama

"As clear water poured into clear water becomes like the water into which it is poured, so the individual soul who attains liberation becomes like the Supreme."

In this example the soul does not become identical with the Supreme. Also, the soul's nature is not different from the Supreme's nature. In ther Skanda Purana it is said:

udakam tudakam siktam misram eva yatha bhavet tad vai tad eva bhavati yato buddhih pravartate

"When water is poured into water, the two waters become mixed together.

evam evam hi jivo 'pi tad-atmyam paramatmana prapto 'pi nasau bhavati svatantryadi-visesanat

"However, the individual soul never becomes mixed together with the Supreme in that way, for the Supreme always remains a distinct person with distinct qualities, like His supreme independence."

In some places it is said that the individual spirit soul is like a reflection of the Supreme. In Vedanta-sutra (3.2.19-20) it is said:

ambuvad agrahanat tu na tathatvam

"The individual soul is not like a reflection of the Supreme, like the sun reflected in the water."

vrddhi-hrasa-bhaktvam antar-bhavad ubhaya-samanjasyad evam darsanac ca

"Even though He stays in the conditioned soul's heart, the Supreme does not find His fortunes rise and fall with the rise and fall of the conditioned soul. This is so because both examples show it and because it is seen to be so."

That the individual spirit soul is different from the Supreme is also confirmed by these words of Chandogya Upanisad (8.12.2):

evam esa samprasado 'smac charirat samutthaya param jyoti-rupam sampadya svena rupenabhinispadyate

"Attaining liberation, the soul leaves the material body. Then the soul attains its own effulgent spiritual form. Manifesting that form, the soul meets the Supreme Person."

In the Visnu Purana (6.7.94) it is said:

vibheda-janake 'jnane nasam

"When the false idea of difference is destroyed, then one attains liberation."

The difference here is the different species of life, such as the demigods and others. Who will say that the indiviedual souls do not continue to remain different from the Supreme Lord? No one can say it. In this way the passage of Visnu Purana is explained. iN his commentary on srimad-Bhagavatam, srila sridhara Svami also says that after they attained liberation, the cowherd people of Vraja saw the spiritual world of Vaikuntha. In this way the statement of srimad-Bhagavatam 1.3.34 (previously quoted in this book) should be understood. This is the proper understanding of what liberation means. This proper understanding is also confirmed by Jada Bharata's explanations to King Rahugana, epxlanations recoreded in the Visnu Purana. In the following four verses Jada Bharata explains that directly seeing the Supreme is the highest goal of life, and the materialistic goals attained by ordinary yajnas are not the highest goal of life: He says (Visnu Purana

rg-yajuh-sama-nispadyam yajna-karma matam tava paramartha-bhutam tatrapi sruyatam gadato mama

"If you think the yajnas described in the Rg, Yajur, and Sama Vedas are the highest goal of life, then please hear my words.

yat tu nispadyate karyam mrda karana-bhutaya tat-karananugamanaj jayate nrpa mrn-mayam

"Duties in relation to things made of clay bring as their results other things made of clay.

evam vinasibhir dravyaih samid-ajya-kusadibhih nispadyate kriya ya tu sa bhavitri vinasini

"Thus the rituals employing perishable things, like firewood, ghee, and kusa straw, bring only perishable results.

anasi paramarthas ca prajnair abhyupagamyate tat tu nasi na sandeho nasi-dravyopapaditam

"The wise agree that the true goal of life is eternal and imperishable. Perishable things bring only perishable results. Of this there is no doubt."

This example does not refer to the processes of worship followed by the devotees of the Lord, for this description does not refer to their method of worship. The method of worship described in these verses is within the realm of the modes of material nature. The devotees' worship, however, is beyond the modes of nature. The Supreme Personality of Godhead personally affirms that the devotees' method of worship is beyond the modes of material nature. He says (srimad-Bhagavatam 11.25.24):

"Knowledge of impersonal Brahman is in the mode of goodness. The great bewildering variety of conflicting philosophies is in the mode of passion. The knowledge that knows only what is made of the material elements is in the mode of ignorance. However, devotion to Me is beyond the touch of the modes of material nature."

When, by the action of the Lord's internal potency, the Lord's mercy is present, then the process of devotional service is manifest. Because devotional service is limitless in nature, it brings a result that is also limitless. This is confirmed by the Vedic scriptures. When they do not take shelter of the Supreme Lord, the individual spirit souls imagine that their external material bodies are their true selves. Devotional service is not given when violence, sin, or mental speculation are still present. That is why devotional service is not described in the jnana-khanda (philosophical speculation) portion of the Vedic scriptures. Only ordinary yajnas and other ordinary activities are described there. Affirming that yajnas and other like activities bring only perishable resaults and therefore cannot be the true goal of life, Jada Bharata explains that only a person who has no material desires can perform the spiritual activities that lead to the true goal of life. Only such a person attains true liberation. Jada Bharata says (Visnu Purana 2.14.25):

"If you think ordinary material activities are the true goal of life, then you must also think that spiritual activities, activities that bring final liberation, are not the true goal of life."

One should not think the spiritual activities of devotional service are like yajnas or ordinary material activities. The perfect liberated souls never turn away from the pastimes of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore the truth is the explanation already guven here. Here someone may protest: "Is it not so that meditation one's own original spiritual identity is the true goal of life? After all, in the state of liberation the pure soul is eternally manifest. It is only because the he does know his own nature that the soul is now covered over by matter. That is the only reason the material world of repeated birth and death even exists." To this protest Jada Bharata gives the following answer (Visnu Purana 2.14.26):

"O king, if you say that meditation on one's own original spiritual identity is the highest goal of life, that cannot be, for the highest goal of life is not something that can exclude the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In the Sruti-sastra it is said that when the Supreme is understood, then everything else is understood also. Liberation should be known in that way. Because He is the Supersoul present everywhere, the Supreme is naturally filled with all knowledge. He is the great fire of all knowledge. From Him come the flames and sparks that are different branches of knowledge. Each individual spirit soul is fragmental part of His jiva-sakti potency. Therefore the liberation of that individual part and parcel cannot be considered separately from its relationship with the Supreme Whole. Here someone may again protest: Is it not true that the individual soul is the same as the Supreme Personality of Godhead? Therefroe the individual soul is himself the all-pervading Supersoul. The indivisdual soul's identity as the Supreme is never destroyed. Therefore he has all knowledge. Therefore trhe individual soul's becoming one with the Supreme is the highest goal of life." to this protest the following answer is given in Visnu Purana (2.14.27):

paramatmatmanor yogah paramartha itisyate mithyaitad anyad dravyam hi naiti tad-dravyatam gatah

"If someone says, `the individual soul's becoming the Supreme is the true goal of life', then that person indeed speaks a lie. The individual soul can never become the Supreme."

This verse means: "When they describe the goal of life in that way, they speak lies." Here the word "hi" means "It is concluded in this way", "yatah" means "because", and "anyad dravyam na tad- dravyatam gatah" means, "the individual soul never becomes the Supreme Personality of Godhead". Therefore this verse means, "The merging of the very weak individual spirit soul into the all-powerful Supreme Personality of Godhead is not the true goal of life." Or, the word "yogah" may also be interpreted to mean "oneness"and the remainder of the verse interepreted as it was before. If someone argues that the verse should be interepreted in that way, with "yoga" meaning "oneness", then this idea is refuted in the following words of Visnu Purana (2.14.28):

tasmat sreyamsy asesani nrpaitena na samsayah paramarthas tu bhupala sanksepac chayatam mama

"In this way one attains the true goals of life. Of this there is no doubt. O king, now I will briefly describe the true goal of life."

Here the word "sreyamsi" means "the way to attain the true goal of life". The true goal of life is then described in the following three verses (Visnu Purana (2.14.29-31):

eko vyapi samah suddho nirgunah prakrteh parah janma-vrddhy-adi-rahita atma sarva-gato 'vyayah

"The one supreme soul is all-pervading, equipoised, pure, free from the material modes, beyond the touch of matter, free from the material cycle that begins with birth and growth, eternal, and present everywhere.

para-jnana-mayo 'sadbhir nama-jaty-adibhir vibhuh na yogavan na yukto 'bhun naiva parthiva yoksyati

"He is situated in transcendental knowledge. Never has He been touched by false material names, material birth, or anything else material. O king, He will never be touched by them.

tasyatma-para-dehesu sato 'py ekamayam hi yat vijnanam paramartho 'sau dvaitino 'tathya-darsinah

"Only materialists, fools who have no power to see the truth, think the Supreme Personality of Godhead has an external material body, a body like the bodies of the conditioned souls."

In the first of these verses the use of the word ekah" (one) shows that the soul described here is not the individual spirit souls, for the individual souls are many, not one. As a fire is present over a large area by the means of its sparks, so the Supreme Personality of Godhead is present everywhere by the means of His potencies. That is why He is described here by the word "vyapi (all-pervading). The all-pervasiveness of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not like that of the individual spirit soul, who is all-pervasive only within his external material body. The individual spirit souls residing in the material world are different from their external material bodies. However, the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not have an external material body that is different from Him. He and His spiritual body are identical. He is the supreme goal of life because He is imperishable, all-knowing, present within everything, and the final goal of life. Persons who, seeing that they themselves are different from their external material bodies, think the Supreme Personality of Godhead must also be different (dvaitinah) from His own spiritual body, and who therefore also think that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is neither all-pervading nor all-knowing, are fools who have no power to see the truth (atathya-darsinah). An example to show how the individual spirit souls, souls who are part and parcel of the Supreme, are different from their external material bodies, and are also simultaneously different and not-different from the Supreme Personality of Godhead is given in these two verses of Visnu Purana (2.14.32-33):

venu-randhra-vibhedena bhedah sadjadi-samjnitah abheda-vyapino vayos tatha tasya mahatmanah

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is not different from His body. He is like the air, air that never becomes broken, even when blowing through the holes of a flute and making various melodies in the sadja and other scales.

ekatvam rupa-bhedas ca bahya-karma-pravrtti-jah devadi-bheda-madhyas te nasty evavarano hi sah

"Thus the Supreme Personality of Godhead is identical with His body. Because of their various material activities, the individual souls in the material world have various external bodies, demigod bodies, and the bodies opf other forms of life also. However, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is never covered by an external material body."

The meaning of these verses is: "The Supreme Personality of Godhead is identical with His body." This verse says: "Because of their material activities (karma-pravrtti), the individual souls resideing in the external (bahya), the material world, souls who are all tiny particles of spirit, take birth in various material bodies (rupa-bheda) because their various material activities. These bodies are all different from the souls themselves. Manifesting His form as the Supersoul, the Supreme Personality of Godhead stays in those material bodies, the bodies of demigods and other species of life. However, the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not identify with those external bodies. Therefore it is said that He is never covered (nasty avaranam) by a material body. Sometimes the Supreme Personality of Godhead may assume the form of a demigod or other being, but His body is never material. These are His forms of His own transcendental pastimes. That is the meaning here.

To directly see the Supreme Personality of Godhead is to attain liberation. This is explained in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (7.6.18):

tato vidurat parihrtya daitya daityesu sangam visayatmakesu upeta narayanam adi-devam sa mukta-sangair isito 'pavargah

"Therefore, although you are sons of demons, keep aloof from such (materialistic) persons and take shelter of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, the origin of all the dmeigods, because the ultimate goal for the devotees of Narayana is liberation from the bondage of material existence."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"This verse explains: `Liberation is the ultimate goal'."

Directly seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead eventually leads to liberation. This is so because the great bliss one attains by seeing Him destroys one's continued residence in the world of repeated birth and death. Simply by the Supreme Lord's presence, the cycle of birth and death is destroyed. This verse was spoken by sri Prahlada.

It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (4.9.17):

satyasiso hi bhagavams tava pada-padmam asis tathanubhajatah purusartha-murteh apy evam arya bhagavan paripati dinan vasreva vatsakam anugraha-kataro 'sman

"My Lord, O Supreme Lord, You are the supreme personified form of all benediction. Therefore, for one who abides in Your devotional service with no other desire, worshiping Your lotus feet is better than becoming king and lording it over a kingdom. That is the benediction of worshiping Your lotus feet. To ignorant devotees like me, You are the causelessly merciful maintainer, just like a cow, who takes care of the newly born calf by supplying milk and giving it protection from attack."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"This verse means: `O Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan), Your form (murteh) is the supreme bliss that is the highest goal of life (purusartha). Your lotus feet (pada-padmam) are the true benediction (satya asih), a benediction far greater that other benedictions (asisah), benedictions such as ruling over a kingdom. That is the right conclusion (hi). Why is that the right conclusion? It is like this (tatha): For the devotees who worship You (anubhajatah) without any ulterior motive You are the highest goal of life. O master (arya),. even though this is so, You still maintain and protect poor (dinan) people like us (asman).' " This verse was spoken by Dhruva to sri Dhruvapriya (the Supreme Lord's incarnation who was dear to Dhruva).

Anuccheda 7

The Supreme Personality of Godhead appears before His devotees in two ways: 1. He appears within their hearts, and 2. He appears outside their hearts. The first of these is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.6.33):

pragayatah sva-viryani tirtha-padah priya-sravah ahuta iva me sighram darsanam yati cetasi

"The Supreme Lord, sri Krsna, whose glories and activities are pleasing to hear, at once appears on the seat of my heart, as if called for, as soon as I begin to chant His holy activities."

The second of these is described in these owrds of srimad- Bhagavatam (3.15.38):

te 'caksataksa-visayam sva-samadhi-bhagyam. . .

"The sages, headed by Saunaka Rsi, saw that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Visnu, who was formerly visible only within their hearts in ecstatic trance, had now actually become visible to their eyes."

How one becomes qualified to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead in one's heart is described in these words from the sri Rudra-gita (the Song of Lord siva, srimad-Bhagavatam 4.24.59):

na yasya cittam bahir-artha-vibhramam tamo-guhayam ca visuddham avisat yad-bhakti-yoganugrhitam anjasa munir vicaste nanu tatra te gatim

"The devotee whose heart has been completely cleansed by the process of devotional service and who is favored by Bhaktidevi does not become bewildered by the external energy, which is just like a dark well. Being completely cleansed of all material contamination in this way, a devotee is able to understand very happily Your name, fame, form, activities, etc."

This verse means: "The previously described devotee, whose (yasya) heart (cittam) has been completely cleansed (visuddham) by the process of devotional service and who is favored by Bhaktidevi (bhakti-yogenanugrhitam) does not become bewildered by the external energy, which is just like a dark well (tamo-guhayam). Such a person is a sage (munih)."

The way one becomes qualified to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead outside one's heart is described in these words spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to Narada (srimad- Bhagavatam 1.6.21):

hantasmin janmani bhavan na mam drastum iharhati avipaksa-kasayanam durdarso 'ham kuyoginam

"O Narada (the Lord spoke), I regret that during this lifetime you will not be able to see Me any more. Those who are incomplete in service and who are not completely free from all material taints can hardly see Me."

To have a pure heart is not the only qualification here. What other qualification is needed? With great devotion one must yearn to see the Lord. That is the root from which directly seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead grows. By seeing the Lord in this way one attains all perfection. Seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead within one's heart is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.2.21):

bhidyate hrdaya-granthih. . .

"Thus the knot in the heart is pierced, and all misgivings are cut to pieces. The chain of fruitive actions is terminated when one sees the self as the master."

Seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead outside one's heart is described in these words spoken by Citraketu to Lord Sankarsana (srimad-Bhagavatam 6.16.44):

na hi bhagavann aghatitam idam tvad-darsanan nrnam akhila-papa-ksayah

"My Lord, it is not impossible for one to be immediately freed from all material contamination by seeing You."

Lord Nrsimhadeva tells Prahlada (srimad-Bhagavatam 7.9.53):

mam aprinata ayusman darsanam durlabham hi me drstva mam na punar jantur atmanam taptum arhati

"My dear Prahlada, may you live a long time. One cannot appreciate or understand Me without pleasing Me, but one who has seen or pleased Me has nothing more for which to lament for his own satisfaction."

The Personified Vedas tell the Supreme Personality of Godhead (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.86.49):

sa tvam sadhi sva-bhrtyan nah kim deva karavama he etad-anto nrnam kleso yad bhavan aksi-gocarah

"You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Please order us. We are Your servants. O Lord, what may we do for You? When You come before the people's eyes, their sufferings all come to an end." With the help of the potency that makes Him visible, the Supreme Personality of Godhead appears in the pure hearts of His devotees. Then the devotees can see Him. The potency that makes Him visible is the potency of devotional service. This is explained in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.2.12):

"The seriously inquisitive student or sage, well equipped with knowledge and detchment, realizes that Absolute Truth by rendering devotional service in terms of what he has heard from the Vedanta-sruti."

Many words may be used to describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead. For example, He may be called "icchamaya" (He whose every desire is at once fulfilled). The words Bhagavan and Brahman both describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead. That these two words are both names of the Lord is seen in the following words spoken by Lord Matsya to Satyavrata, words that again show devotional service's power to reveal the Lord (srimad- Bhagavatam 8.24.38):

madiyam mahimanam ca param brahmeti sabditam vetsyasy anugrhitam me samprasnair vivrtam hrdi

"You will be thoroughly advised and favored by Me, and because of your inquiries, everything about My glories, which are known as param brahma, will be manifest within your heart. Thus you will know everything about Me."

Speaking to the demigod Brahma, the Supreme Personality of Godhead gives a similar instruction of the power of devotional service to reveal the Lord in these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 2.9.22):

manisitanubhavo 'yam mama lokavalokanam

"The highest perfectional ingenuity is the personal perception of My abodes, and this has been possible because of your submissive attitude in the performance of severe penance according to My order."

In the sri Narayanadhyatma it is also said that devotional service enables one to see the Lord:

nityavyakto hi bhagavan iksyate nija-saktitah tam rte pundarikaksam kah pasyetamitam prabhum

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is always invisible. However, with the help of His transcendental potency, one may see Him. Without the help of the Lord's potency, who has the power to see the lotus-eyed Supreme Lord?"

In the Katha Upanisad it is also said (1.2.23): yam evaisa vrnute tena labhyas tasyaisa atma vivrnute tanum svam

"The Lord is obtained only by one whom He Himself chooses. To such a person He manifests His own form."

The Lord does this by reflecting His internal potency on the pure senses of the devotee. Even persons who had committed sins, such as King Mucukunda who had committed the sin of hunting, were able to see the Lord because of their great devotion to Him. The Lord personally praised these devotees when they directly saw Him. Fearing that they would be deprived of the sight of the Lord, these devotees felt their love for Him increase. When Yudhisthira and his brothers, who were devotees that dearly loved the Supreme Lord, saw hell, that hell was only an illusion, a magic trick. That is clearly described in the Svargarohana- parva of Mahabharata. In the Visnu-dharma Purana it is said that after three births they gave grains and cows to a brahmana, and because of this pious deeds they were freed from hell and allowed to enter Svargaloka. However, srimad-Bhagavatam does not accept that account. srimad-Bhagavatam declares that they attained the abode of the Supreme Lord. When the Supreme Lord descends to the material world as an avatara, even persons with impure hearts are able to see Him with their own eyes. Still, their seeing Him is not direct. They see the reflection (abhasa) of HIm. That is explained in the scriptures. Otherwise, the people have no power to see Him. The Supreme Lord Himself declares in Bhagavad-gita (7.25):

naham prakasah sarvasya yoga-maya-samavrtah

"I am never manifest to the foolish and unintelligent. For them I am covered by My eternal creative potency (yogamaya)."

In the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, it is also said:

yogibhir drsyate bhaktya nabhaktya drsyate kvacit drastum na sakyo rosac ca matsarac ca janardanah

"Because of their devotion the yogis see the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Without devotion no one sees Him. he angry and envious have no power to see Him."

During the times when He is not manifest as an avatara, the Lord cannot be seen, even though He is present everywhere. At the time of the Lord's appearance as an avatara, the people do not see His true nature. They think He is the opposite of what He really is. In this way, even though He is the source of great bliss, some people think He makes others suffer. Even though is the most handsome and charming, some people think He is ferocious and horrible. Even though He is the friend of everyone, some people think He is their enemy. At that time the Lord's Yogamaya potency is the root cause of his manifestation before the people. Still, the people who have offended the Lord's devotees feel uneasy at heart when the Lord is present. Even though in truth the Lord is always present everywhere, these people have made their hearts as hard as stone to Him. Persons who do not have the qualities of a liberated soul, qualities described in srimad-Bhagavatam 2.10.6, see only the reflection of the Lord when He is present in this world. The word liberation" cannot be used to describe the status of these people. In the prose description that begins in Visnu Purana 4.15.8 it is said that although in the beginning he saw Lord Krsna in this indirect way, at the end sisupala saw Lord Krsna purely. In Visnu Purana 4.15.9 it is said:

atma-vinasaya bhagavad-asta-cakramsu-malojjvalam aksaya-tejah-svarupam parama-brahma-bhutam apagata- dvesadi-doso bhagavantam adraksit

"At the moment of his death, siupala, now cleansed of hatred and every other vice, gazed at the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose eternal form was filled with power and glory, and who was garlanded with light from the Sudarsana- cakra."

In srimad-Bhagavatam (10.86.49) it is said:

etad-anto nrnam kleso yad bhavan aksi-gocarah

"O Lord, when You come before the people's eyes, their sufferings all come to an end."

This means that the people whose hearts are pure, the people whose hearts are contaminated by offenses to the Lord's devotees, the people who eagerly turn their faces to the Lord, as well as the people who have turned their wyes away from the Lord all find that their sufferings are all destroyed. This is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.86.21):

tebhyah sva-viksana-vinasta-tamisra-drgbhyah ksemam tri-loka-gurur artha-drsam ca yacchan

"To them, their eyes destroyed by darkness, Lord Krsna, the master of the three worlds, gave auspiciousness. He gave them eyes to see the truth."

This is also described in the previously quoted prose passage of Visnu Purana. Persons whose hearts are impure are of two kinds: they who have turned their faces away from the Lord (bhagavad-bahir-mukha), and they who hate the Lord (bhagavad- vidvesi). The persons who have turned their faces away from the Lord are of two kinds: persons who see the Lord and insult Him, and persons who at the time of the Lord's incarnation in this world think the Lord is an ordinary demigod, human being, or other like being. This is described in the following insult spoken by the demigod Indra (srimad-Bhagavatam(10.25.3):

"The people of Vraja have taken shelter of Krsna, who is only a human being." The Supreme Lord's rescue of persons with impure hearts is described by the Personified Vedas in these words (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.87.35):

dadhati sakrn manas tvayi ya atmani nitya-sukhe na punar upasate purusa-sara-haravasathan

"O Supreme Personality of Godhead full of spiritual bliss, anyone who once places his thoughts in You will never again worship materialistic household life, which who rob a man of his dearest spiritual wealth."

This is also affirmed by the Supreme Lord Himself in these words spoken to the dmeigod Indra (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.27.16):

mam aisvarya-sri-madandho yasya cecchamy anugraham

"A man blinded by pride of wealth and power does not see the hand that waits to punish him. If I am kind to him, I make him fall from his fortunate position."

Tbis description of people with impure hearts does not apply to the cowherd people of Vraja, who dedicated their everything to serve Lord Krsna. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.35):

yad-dhamartha-suhrt-priyatma-tanaya- pranasayas tvat-krte

"O Lord, these residents of Vrndavana have given You everything: Their bodies, their minds, their love, their homes." This is also confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.10):

krsne 'rpitatma-suhrd-artha-kalatra-kamah

It is also confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.65.6):

krsne kamala-patrakse sannyastakhila-radhasah

"To lotus-eyed Krsna the cowherd people offered all that they had."

sayyasanatanalapa- krida-snanadi-karmasu na viduh santam atmanam vrsnayah krsna-cetasah

"Their love of Krsna was so intense that in their regular activities - in sitting, sleeping, traveling, talking, sporting, cleansing, and bathing - the members of Yadu dynasty were simply absorbed in thoughts of Krsna and paid no attention to bodily activities."

This is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.12.6):

kim te kamah sura-sparha ksudhitasya yathetare

"O brahmanas, the opulence of the king was so enchanting that the denizens of heaven aspired for it. But because he was absorbed in the service of the Lord, nothing could satisfy him except the Lord's service."

However, Dhrtarastra and the others like him are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.13.17):

evam grhesu saktanam pramattanam tad-ihaya

"They are too much attached to family affairs and are always engrossed in their thought." In the next verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.13.18) is described the instruction Dhrtarastra received, an instruction that was not given to the others, an instruction that begins with these words:

viduras tad abhipretya

To increase the Lord's sweetness, the Lord's pastime potency (lila-sakti) manifests among friends and among enemies also. Even the reflection of that potency of the Lord attracts the senses of the dear devotees. That this reflected potency attracts the devotees is seen in this description of Putana (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.6.6):

valgu-smitapanga-visarga-viksitair mano harantim vanitam vrajaukasam

"She was glancing at everyone with very attractive looks and smiling face, and all the residents of Vrndavana were captivated."

Here the word "mano-harantim" has a double meaning. It means both, "with a reflection of the Lord's potencies Putana attracted the hearts of the residents of Vrndavana" and

"Putana was charming and beautiful'." In the same passage it is also said (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.6.6):

The power of the Lord's potency is then described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.3):

na yatra sravanadini rakso-ghnani sva-karmasu kurvanti satvatam bhartur yatudhanyas ca tatra hi

"Wherever the chanting of the holy name of Krsna is done, even negligently, all bad elements - witches, ghosts, and dangerous calamities - immediately disappear."

Of Putana it is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.6.6):

amamsatambhoja-karane rupinim gopyah sriyam drastum ivagatam patim

"The innocent cowherd women thought that she was a goddess of fortune appearing in Vrndavana with a lotus flower in her hand. It seemed to them that she had personally come to see Krsna, who is her husband."

Here the word "sriyam" means "a girl who brings material prosperity and good fortune" and "patim" means "an appropriate pious man". There it is also said (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.6.9):

tam tiksna-cittam. . .tat-prabhayavaradharsite janani atisthatam

"When Putana was taking baby Krsna on her lap, both Yasoda and Rohini were present, but they did not forbid her because she was so beautifully dressed and because she showed motherly affection towards Krsna. They could not understand that she was a sword within a decorated case."

In this way the people of Vraja were defeated by the Lord's illusory (maya) poyency. Even Lord Balarama and others were defeated by that illusory potency, as is seen in these words spoken by Lord Balarama Himself (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.13.27):

prayo mayastu me bhartur nanya me 'pi vimohini

"It was arranged by Krsna, and even I could not check His mystic power."

The power of the Lord's illusory potency is also seen in the activities that led Jaya and Vijaya to take birth as demons. The Lord's illusory potency acted only very slightly on Lord Balarama. However, it acted very powerfully on Jaya and Vijaya. This is because Lord Balarama was full of love for Lord Krsna, but Jaya and Vijaya were not. Jaya and Vijaya did not become demons merely by the sages' curse, but rather by the will of the Supreme Lord Himself. The Lord confirms this in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.16.29):

matam tu me. . .

"The Lord then said to His attendants, Jaya and Vijaya: Depart this place, but fear not. All glories unto you. Thgough I am capable of nullifying the brahmanas' curse, I would not do so. On the contrary, it has My approval."

Jaya and Vijaya's acceptance of the role of enemeies of the Lord was not their own doing. Rather, it was personally arranged by the Lord. In srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.2) it is said:

svecchamayasya. . .

"O Lord, whatever You desire is at once fulfilled."

Still, the Lord was merciful to Jaya and Vijaya, who were His devotees. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (6.11.23):

traivargikayasa-vighattam asmat- patir vidhatte purusasya sakra

"Our Lord, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, forbids His devotees to endeavor uselessly for religion, economic development, and sense gratification. O Indra, onecant hus infer how kind the Lord is. Such mercy is obtainable only by unalloyed devotees, not by persons who aspire for material gain."

That the Supreme Lord continued to protect Jaya and Vijaya is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.2.33):

tatha na te madhava tavakah kvacid bhrasyanti margat tvayi baddha-sauhrdah

"O Madhava, Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord of the goddess of fortune, if devotees completely in love with You sometimes fall from the path of devotion, they do not fall like nondevotees, for You atill protect them."

Jaya and Vijaya did not choose to take birth as demons because then they could quickly be rid of the curse. Rather, they accepted that birth because a devotee will not accept residence on same planet where the Lord lives or any other auspicious condition of life if in that condition the devotee has no opportunity to serve the Lord. On the other hand, the devotee will accept life in hell if there he may serve the Lored. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.48):

"Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of less important benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom."

It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.49):

kamam bhavah sva-vrjinair nirayesu nah stat. . .

"O Lord, we pray that You let us be born in any hellish condition of life, just as long as our hearts and minds are always engaged in the service of Your lotus feet, our words are made beautiful (by speaking of Your activities) just as tulasi leaves are beautiful when offered unto Your lotus feet, and as long as our ears are always filled with the chanting of Your transcendental qualities."

ma vo 'nutapa-kalaya bhagavat-smrti-ghno moho bhaved iha tu nau vrajator adho 'dhah

In they had been real enemies of the Lord, Jaya and Vijaya would not have brought happiness to the devotees. They brought happiness to devotees because they were friends with many devotees. Therefore their enmity to the Lord was only the reflection of enmity, an enmity assumed to enable the Lord and the other devotees to taste certain rasas. For this we may assume that the Lord wished to enjoy pastimes of fighting, and to please Him the devotees Jaya and Vijaya, employing their mystic powers, manifested certain spiritual forms and assumed the role of His enemies. Then, meditating on the Lord as their enemy, they eventually relinquished that role of being the Lord's enemy. Therefore thei being the Lord's enemy was only an external show. This is confirmed by Lord Narayana Himself when he told them (0 3.16.29:

"Depart this place, but fear not. All glories unto you."

In its description of the Lord's battle with Hiranyaksa, srimad-Bhagavatam (3.18.9) explains that the Lord was not really angry with Jaya and Vijaya when they were playing the parts of demons:

paranusaktam. . .

"The demon, who had a wealth of ornaments, bangles, and beautiful golden armor on his body, chased the Lord from behind with a great mace. The Lord tolerated his piercing ill words, but in order to reply to them, He eexpressed His terrble anger."

srila sridhara Svami comments: "

"The Lord's terrible anger is here only an external show, a show intended to relieve the fears of the demigods, who were frighted by the demon's insults. The Lord did not really become angry by hearing those insults." srimad-Bhagavatam (3.19.8-9) again explains:

karala. . . .

"O saintly Vidura, while His enemy looked on, the Lord in His boar form, the enjoyer of all sacrificial offerings, playfully knocked down the mace with His left foot, even as it came upon Him with the force of a tempest."

srila sridhara Svami comments: "All of this shows that the Lord was not really angry."

In the story of the Syamantaka Jewel, the story of Maha- kala-pura, the story of ther mace, and toher stories, it is seen that the Lord's anger towards Lord Balarama, Arjuna, Narada Muni, and others is only a pretense, a pale reflection of true anger. Here there are two groups. In one group are Lord Balarama, Arjuna, and others who did not understand Lord Krsna's intention at the time, and in the second group are Narada Muni and others who did understand Lord Krsna's intention at the time. This second group is described in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.3.24), where Uddhava says:

kopita munayah sepur bhagavan-mata-kovidah

"Once upon a time, great sages were made angry by the sporting activities of the princely descendents of the Yadu and Bhoja dynasties, and thus, as desired by the Lord, the sages cursed them. The sages were aware that this was the Lord's desire."

Persons who in these situatuions understand the Lord's true intention, see the Lord directly. However, if their hearts are impure, even persons who understansd the Lord's true intention do not see Him directly. They see only the reflection of Him. Even though the Lord may come before their eyes, they see only the reflection of His form. These perssons with impure hearts are persons who have turned their faces away from the Loerd. Even though they see Him, they do not see Him as He really is. Persons who hate the Lord are of two kinds. Some see the handsomeness, sweetness,a nd other virtues of the Lord, bust still they hate Him. Kalayavana and other demons fall into this ctaegory. Others see the Lord only as ferocious and terrible, and therefore they hate Him. Kamsa's wrestlers and other demons fall into that category. Thus there are four categories: the two kinds of people who have turned their faces away from Krsna and the two kinds of people who hate Krsna. These four kinds of people are like persons who, because of a disease of the tongue cannot perceive the true taste of various foods. Some persons, because of an imbalance of bile and air in the bodyy, do nto experience the taste of various foods as pleasureable. Some persons, although they cannot experience the true taste, do not hold the food at fault for that. Other persons, persons who are proud, hold the food at fault and criticize it. Still other persons can indeed taste the sweetness of delicious food. But because they prefer the taste of bitter and sour things, they hate food that is sweet. Still other persons perceive sweet food as being bitter, and for that reason they hate sweet food. Thus these four kinds of people, by their own fault, do not see the Supreme Lord directly. They see only His reflection. They do not know the Lord's true nature. Because they have neither knowledge, devotion, nor pure spiritual love, they have no power to understand the Lord's ture nature and His glorious qualities, such as His eternity, omniscience, bliss, supreme power and opulence, amd supreme sweetness. Still, as a person who has a disease of the tongue may eventually become cured, so these persons may eventually become delivered. This is described in the following words of Visnu Purana (4.15.9):

"Although at first he hated the Lord, eventually his hatred and other vices were all removed. Then he saw the Supreme Personality of Godhead directly."

Therefore, they who have pure hearts see the Supreme Personality of Godhead directly. That is called liberation. That seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead directly is better than seeing the impersonal Brahman is described in the Bhagavat- sandarbha (anucchedas 78-80), in the description of the four Kumaras' seeing Vaikuntha, and in sri Vyasa's and sri Narada's conversation about the relative importance of impersonal Brahman and the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.43) it is said of the Four Kumaras:

"When the breeze carrying the aroma of tulasi leaves from the toes of the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead entered the nostrils of those sages, they experienced a change both in body and mind, even though they were attached to the impersonal Brahman understanding."

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is superior to the impersonal Brahman is hinted in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.5.4):

jijnasitam adhitam ca. . .

"You have fully delineated the subject of impersonal Brahman as well as the knowledge derived therefrom. Why should you be despondent in spite of all this, thinking that you are undone, my dear prabhu?"

ya nirvrtis tanu-bhrtam. . .

"My Lord, the transcendental bliss derived from meditating upon Your lotus feet or hearing about Your glories from pure devotees is so unlimited that it is far beyond the stage of brahmananda, where one thinks himself merged in the impersonal Brahman as one with the Supreme. Since brahmananda is also defeated by the transcendental bliss derived from devotional service, then what to speak of the temporary blissfulness of elevating oneself to the heavenly planets, which is ended by the separating sword of time? Although one may be elevated to the heavenly planets, he falls down in due course of time." About the author of srimad-Bhagavatam it is said (srimad- Bhagavatam 12.12.69):

"I offer my respectful obeisances unto srila sukadeva Gosvami, the son of Vyasadeva. He is the destroyer of all sinful reactions and is full in self-realization and bliss. Because of this, he has no other desire. Still, he was attracted by the transcendental pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and out of compassion for the people, he described the transcendental historical literature called srimad-Bhagavatam. This is compared to the light of the Absolute Truth."

In Bhagavad-gita (18.54) the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself declares: brahma-bhutah prasannatma. . .

"One who is thus transcendentally situated at once realizes the Supreme Brahman. He never laments nor desires to have anything. He is equally disposed to every living entity. In that state he attains pure devotional service unto Me."

When one directly see the Supreme Personality of Godhead, seeing Him outside the heart is better than seeing Him within the heart. In srimad-Bhagavatam (12.9.5) it is said:

grhitvajadayo yasya srimat-padabja-darsanam manasa yoga-pakvena

"O Lord whom Brahma and the demigods saw in their hearts advanced in yoga, You have now come before my eyes."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

In srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.12) it is also said:

yat-pada-pamsur bahu-janma-krcchratah. . .

"Who can estimate the transcendental fortune of the residents of Vrndavana? They were personally visualizing the Supreme Personality of Godhead face to face, He whom many yogis cannot find even after undergoing severe austerities, although He is sitting within the heart."

pragayatah sva-viryani tirtha-padah priya-sravah ahuta iva me sighram darsanam yati cetasi

Evenb though can always see the Lord within his heart, srila Narada Muni preferred to see Him outside the heart. This In described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.2.1):

govinda-bhuja-guptayam

"Eager to worship Lord Krsna, Narada stayed, O best of the Kurus, at Dvaraka, which is always protected by Lord Krsna's arms."

This verse was spoken by Markandeya Muni to sri Narayana Rsi.

A person who directly sees the Supreme Personality of Godhead is liberated, even if that person is still living in the material world. This is described in the following words spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself (srimad-Bhagavatam 11.14.13):

santasya sama-cetasah maya santusta-manasah sarvah sukha-maya disah

"For a person who is penniless, peaceful, self-controlled, and equipoised in every situation, and whose heart is satisfied with Me as its only possession, every direction is full of bliss."

That directly seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead in this way is the highest condition of life is affirmed by Prahlada Maharaja in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (7.9.16):

. . .usattama te 'nghri-mulam prito 'paravga-saranam hvayase kada nu

"O most powerful insurmountable Lord, . . .when will that moment come when You will call me to the shelter of Your lotus feet, which are the ultimate goal for liberation from conditional life?"

There are five kinds of liberation. They are: salokya, sarsti, sarupya, samipya, and sayujya. In salokya liberation one resides in Vaikuntha, the planet where the Supreme Personality of Godhead also resides. In sarsti liberation one possesses opulences like those of the Lord. In sarupya liberation one has a spiritual form like the Lord's. In samipya liberation one is able to stay close to the Lord. In sayujya liberation one some souls enter the Lord's form. To each of these five words (salokya, sarsti, sarupya, samipya, and sayujya) the word "mukti" (liberation may be affixed. In salokya, sarsti, and sarupya liberation one generally sees the Supreme Personality of Godhead within one's heart. In samipya liberation one generally sees the Supreme Personality of Godhead outside one's heart. In sayujya liberation one generally sees the Supreme Personality of Godhead within one's heart. Even though the Supreme Personality of Godhead is personally present before him, in sayujya liberation the individual soul is in a state of trance that is like a dreamless sleep. In that condition the soul cannot see the Supreme Personality of Godhead present before him. The highest state of liberation is described in these words of Chandogya Upanisad (7.25.2):

sa va evam pasyann evam manvana evam vijanann atma-ratir atma-krida atma-mithuna atmanandah. sa svarad bhavati sarvesu lokesu kama-caro bhavati.

"In this way the liberated soul directly sees the Supreme Personality of Godhead, thinks of Him, understands Him, delights in Him, enjoys pastimes with Him, becomes His companion, and enjoys bliss with Him."

By his own will a liberated soul can manifest many different forms. This is described in these words of Chandogya Upanisad (7.26.2):

sa ekadha bhavati, dvidha bhavati, tridha bhavati.

"The liberated soul may manifest one form, two forms, three forms, or more forms than that."

The spiritual world of Vaikuntha is far beyond the touch of the illusory potency maya. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (2.9.10):

na yatra maya. . .

"In that personal abode of the Lord, the material modesd of ignroance and passion do not prevail, nor is there any of their influence in goodness. There is no predominance of the influence of time, so what to speak of the illusory external energy? It cannot enter that region. Without discrimination, both the demigods and demons worship the Lord as devotees."

One who enters the spiritual world never returns to the material world. This is described in these words of Vedanta- sutra (4.4.23):

anavrttih sabdat

"By spiritual sound one attains the spiritual world, from which one never returns."

In the Chandogya Upanisad (8.15.1) it is said:

na sa punar avartate

"One who enters the spiritual world never returns to the material world of birth and death."

In srimad-Bhagavatam (7.4.22) the demigods harrassed by Hiranyakasipu pray:

tasyai namo 'stu kasthayai yatratma harir isvarah yad gatva na nivartante santah sannyasino 'malah

"Let us offer our respectful obeisances unto that direction where the Supreme Personality of Godhead is situated, where those purified souls in the renounced order of life go, and from which, having gone, they never return."

In srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.38) Lord Kapiladeva explains:

na karhicin mat-parah santa-rupe nanksyanti no me 'nimiso ledhi hetih

"My dear mother, devotees who receive such transcendental opulences are never bereft of them. Neither weapons nor the change of time can destroy such opulences."

Bhagavad-gita (8.16) Lord Krsna declares:

a-brahma-bhuvanal lokah punar avartino 'rjuna mam upetya tu kaunteya punar janma na vidyate

"From the highest planet in the material world down to the lowest all are places of misery wherein repeated birth and death take place. But one who attains to My abode, O son of Kunti, never takes birth again."

In Bhagavad-gita (15.6) Lord Krsna declares:

yad gatva na nivartante tad dhama paramam mama

"That abode of Mine is not illumined by the sun or moon, nor by electricity. One who reaches it never returns to this material world."

In Bhagavad-gita (18.62) Lord Krsna declares:

tat-prasadat param santim sthanam prapsyasi sasvatam

"By His grace you will attain transcendental peace and the supreme and eternal abode."

In Padma Purana, Srsti-khanda it is said:

a-brahma-sadanad eva dosah santi mahi-pate ata eva hi necchanti svarga-praptim manisinah

"Even up to Brahmaloka, all the material worlds are filled with a host of faults. That is why, O king, they who are truly wise do not desire to go even to Svargaloka.

a-brahma-sadanad urdhvam tad visnoh paramam padam subhram sanatanam jyotih para-brahmeti tad viduh

"They who are wise know that above Brahmaloka and all the material worlds is the supreme abode of Lord Visnu, an effulgent, glorious, eternal, spiritual abode.

na yatra mudha gacchanti purusa visayatmakah dambha-lobha-bhaya-droha-krodha-mohair abhidrutah

"Fools, hedonists, and persons conquered by pride, greed, fear, hatred, anger, and illusion do not go to that spiritual abode.

nirmama nirahankara nirdvandvah samyatendriyah dhyana-yoga-ratas caiva tatra gacchanti sadhavah

"Only saintly devotees who are free from false ego, false possessiveness, and the duality of material illusion, who control their senses, and who are rapt in spiritual meditation go to that spiritual abode."

In Padma Purana, Srsti-khanda, King Subahu says:

dhyana-yogena devesam yajisye kamala-priyam bhava-pralaya-nirmuktam visnulokam vrajamy aham

"In a trance of meditation I will worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the master of the demigods and the husband of the goddess of fortune. In this way I will go to the spiritual world of Lord VIsnu, a world that is not destroyed when the material worlds perish."

The pure devotees of the Lord are not even interested in attaining the five kinds of liberation. It is said in srimad- Bhagavatam (9.4.67):

mat-sevaya pratitam te salokyadi-catustayam necchanti sevaya purnah kuto 'nyat kala-viplutam

"My devotees, who are always satisfied to be engaged in My loving service, are not interested even in the four principles of liberation (salokya, sarupya, samipya, and sarsti), although these are automatically achieved by their service. What then is to be said of such perishable happiness as elevation to the higher planetary systems?"

Because everything in the material world will eventually be destroyed by time, and because they have heard that once going to the spiritual world they will never return, the devotees aspire to go to the spiritual abode of the Supreme Lord. They also aspire to join the Supreme Lord in His transcendental pastimes. The devotees' attainment of salokya liberation, where they reside in the same planet as the Lord, is described in these words of Bhavisya Purana, Uttara-khanda:

evam kaunteya kurute yo 'ranya-dvadasim narah sa dehante vimana-stho divya-kanya-samavrtah

"O son of Kunti, a person who resides in this twelve-forest land of Vrndavana, at the time of his death finds himself in a celestial airplane surrounded by glorious gopis.

yati jnati-samayuktah svetadvipam hareh puram yatra loka pita-vastrah

"Accompanied by his relatives, he goes to Lord Krsna's realm of svetadvipa, where the residents are all dressed in yellow garments.

There it is also said:

tisthanti visnu-sannidhye yavad ahuta-samplavam tasmad etya maha-viryah prthivyam nrpa-pujitah martya-loke kirtimantah sambhavanti narottamah

tato yanti param sthanam moksa-margam sivam sukham yatra gatva na socanti na samsare bhramanti ca

"On this earth are many saintly heroes and many glorious saints worshiped by many kings. These saintly persons stay always near to Lord Visnu. When this material world is destroyed by floods, these saints travel on the path pf liberation. They go to the auspicious and blissful spiritual abode. Going there, they never lament. Going there, they never again wander in this world of birth and death."

In the story of Jaya and Vijaya, where salokya liberation is described, it is seen that the liberated souls are free from the influence of the modes of mnaterial nature. In the same way the devotees aspiring for liberation also are free from the material modes. This Lord Krsna explains in the following words of srimad- Bhagavatam (11.25.26):

sattvikah karako 'sangi. . . . . .nirguno mad-apasrayah

"A worker free from attachment is in the mode of goodness, a worker blinded by desire is in the mode of passion, a worker who forgets right and wrong is in the mode of ignorance, and a worker who takes shelter of Me is always untouched by the modes of material nature."

In final liberation the devotees attain a spiritual nature and form like those of the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.14):

vasanti yatra purusah sarve vaikuntha-murtayah ye 'nimitta-nimittena dharmenaradhayan harim

"In the Vaikuntha planets all the residents are similar in form to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They all engage in devotional service ot the Lord without desires for sense gratification."

Here "nimitta" means "result", and animitta" means "without cause". These two words together mean, "without the desire for material sense gratification". "Dharmena" means "by devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead". Here the word "vaikuntha" means "the Supreme Personality of Godhead". "Vaikuntha-murtayah" means numberless forms of the individual souls who reside in Vaikuntha and who are manifest from tiny fragments of the effulgence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. There are many liberated souls, each with his own form, and there is one Supreme Personality of Godhead, who has His own form. Still, the liberated souls have forms that are like the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This verse was spoken by the demigod Brahma to the demigods.

Liberation is also described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (1.6.28):

prayujyamane mayi tam suddham bhagavatim tanum arabdha-karma-nirvano nyapatat panca-bhautikah

"Having been awarded a transcendental body befitting an associate of the Personality of Godhead, I quit the body made of five material elements, and thus all acquired fruitive results of work (karma) stopped."

It is again described in these words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.6.23):

hitvavadyam imam lokam ganta maj-janatam asi

"By service of the Absolute Truth, even for a few days, a devotee attains firm and fixed intelligence in Me. Consequently he goes to become My associate in the transcendental world after giving up the present deplorable material worlds."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 1.6.28 the Supreme Personality of Godhead promises to give the devotee a spiritual form like His own. Here "tam bhagavatim" means "a form that is a fragment of the spiritual effulgence of the Supreme Lord", suddham" means "untouched by matter", tanum" means "a form given by the Supreme Personality of Godhead", and "mayi prayujyamane" means attained by me when the results of karma came to an end". This happened when the material body made of five elements fell away (nyapatat panca-bhautikah). Here it is seen that the subtle material body of mind, intelligence, and false ego is also destroyed. Because of his faith in the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the devotee's past karma also comes to an end. In his commentary on this verse srila sridhara Svami explains:

"The bodies of a personal associates of the Supreme Lord are eternal, pure, and free from karma." This verse was spoken by sri Narada to sri Vyasa.

The body of a liberated soul is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (8.3.19):

yam dharma-kamartha. . .raty api deham avyayam

"After worshiping the Supreme Personality of Godhead, those who are interested in the four principles of religion, economic development, sense gratification and liberation obtain from Him what they desire. What, then, is be said of other benedictions? Indeed, sometimes the Lord gives a spiritual body to such ambitious worshipers."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"In this way the Supreme Lord gives the devotee an eternal spiritual body."

Anuccheda 13

The bodies of the liberated souls are also described in these words of Chandogya Upanisad (8.13.1):

asva iva romani vidhuya. . .dhutva sariram akrtam krtatma brahmalokam abhisambhavani

"As a horse sheds its hairs, . . .so will I shed this external material body and go to the spiritual abode odf the Supreme Lord."

Thus, by the intervention of the Supreme Lord's inconceivable potency, the devotee leaves behind his material body and attains a spiritual body like that of the Lord. This is described in the following narration of Dhruva Maharaja's activities (srimad-Bhagavatam 4.12.29):

bibhrad rupam hiranmayam

"Before getting aboard, Dhruva Maharaja worshiped the airplane, circumambulated it, and also offered obeisances to the associates of Visnu. In the meantime he became as brilliant and illuminating as molten gold. He was thus completely prepared to board the transcendental plane."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"This means he attained a form brilliant and illuminating as molten gold."

Sarsti liberation is described in these words of the Supreme Lord (srimad-Bhagavatam 11.29.34), which I have already discussed in Bhakti-sandarbha (anuccheda 309):

martyo yada tyakta-samasta-karma. . . . . .mayatma-bhuyaya ca kalpate vai

"A human being who renounces all fruitive activities, offers himself to Me, and yearns to serve Me, becomes immortal. He becomes glorious like Me."

Sarsti liberation is also described in these words of Chandogya Upanisad (8.12.3):

sa tatra paryeti jaksan kridan ramamanah

"In the spiritual world the liberated soul walks, plays, and enjoys life."

Sarsti liberation is also described in these words of Taittiriya Upanisad (1.6.2):

apnoti svarajyam

"The liberated soul attains a kingdom in the spiritual world."

In the Taittiriya Upanisad (1.5.3) it is said:

sarve 'smai deva balim aharanti

"All the demigods place offerings before the liberated soul."

In Chandogya Upanisad (7.25.2) it is said:

tasya sarvesu lokesu kama-caro bhavati

"The liberated soul can travel to whatever world he wishes, simply by wishing to be there."

In Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (4.4.22) it is said:

sarvesvarah. . .

"The liberated soul becomes glorious like the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself."

Still, the liberated soul does not have all the powers of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. For example, the liberated soul has no power to create universes. How, then, can the liberated souls become the rulers of the spiritual world of Vaikuntha? This is described in the following words of Vedanta-sutra (4.4.22):

jagad-vyapara-varjam

"Although he has powers and glories like those of the Supreme Lord, the liberated soul has no power to create universes."

Lord Krsna tells Devaki (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.3.41):

adrstvanyatamam loke. . .

"Since I found no one else as highly elevated as you in simplicity and other qualities of good character, I appeared in this world as Prsnigarbha, or one who is celebrated as having taken birth from Prsni."

In this way, in having saintly qualities, the devotee is in some ways equal to the Lord. Whatever the yogis attain by their eight mystic powers, powers that begin with anima siddhi, is only a small fraction of the glories and powers attained by the liberated devotee.

The great treasure that the devotee attains by the Supreme Lord's mercy is eternal and imperishable. srimad-Bhagavatam (3.23.7-8) explains:

ye me svadharma-niratasya tapah-samadhi- vidyatma-yoga-vijita bhagavat-prasadah tan eva te mad-anusevanayavaruddhan drstim prapasya vitaramy abhayan asokan

"Kardama Muni continued: I have achieved the blessings of the Lord in discharging my own religious life of austerity, meditation, and Krsna consciousness. Although you have not yet experienced these achievements, which are free from fear and lamentation, I shall offer them all to you because you are engaged in my service. Now just look at them. I am giving you the transcendental vision to see how nice they are.

anye punar bhagavato bhruva udvijrmbha- vibhramsitartha-racanah kim urukramasya siddhasi bhunksva vibhavan nija-dharma-dohan divyan narair duradhigan nrpa-vikriyabhih

"Kardama Muni continued: What is the use of enjoyments other than the Lord's grace? All material achievements are subject to be annihilated simply by a movement of the eyebrows of Lord Visnu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. By your principles of devotion to your husband, you have achieved and can enjoy transcendental gifts very rarely attained by persons proud of aristocracy and material possessions."

Here the words "tapah-samadhi-vidya" refer to the activities of devotional service. "Atma-yoga" means concentration of the mind". The rhetorical question, What is the use of enjoyments other than the Lord's grace?" is answered with the words, "They are of no use." Then it is said, "All material achievements are subject to be annihilated simply by a movement of the eyebrows of Lord Visnu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead." This verse was spoken by Kardama Muni to Devahuti.

Sarupya liberation is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (8.4.6):

gajendro bhagavat-sparsad vimukto 'jnana-bandhanat prapto bhagavato rupam pita-vasas catur-bhujah

"Because Gajendra, king of the elephants, had been touched directly by the hands of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he was immediately freed of all material ignorance and bondage. Thus he received the salvation of sarupya-nukti, in which he achieved the same bodily features as the Lord, being dressed in yellow garments, and possessing four hands."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 15

Samipya liberation is described in these verses (srimad- Bhagavatam 3.24.43-47), verses I have already discussed in Bhagavat-sandarbha (anuccheda 84), verses that describe Kardama Muni's attainment of liberation:

mano brahmani yunjanah. . . . . .labdhatma mukta-bandhanah. . . . . .bhagavad-bhakti-yuktena prapta bhagavati gatih

"He fixed his mind upon the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Parabrahman, who is beyond cause and effect, who manifests the three modes of material nature, who is beyond those three modes, and who is perceived only through unfailing devotional service. "Thus he gradually became unaffected by the false ego of material identity and became freed from material affection. Undisturbed, equal to everyone, and without duality, he could indeedf see himself also. His mind was turned inward and was perfectly calm, like an ocean unagitated by waves. "He thus became liberated from conditioned life and became self-situated in transcendental devotional service to the Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva, the omniscient Supersoul within everyone. "He began to see that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is situated in everyone's heart, and that everyone is existing on Him, because He is the Supersoul of everyone. "Freed from all hatred and desire, Kardama Muni, being equal to everyone because of discharging uncontaminated devotional service, ultimately attained the path back to Godhead."

Now we will discuss sayujya liberation, which was attained by Aghasura and other demons. srimad-Bhagavatam clearly explains that sayujya liberation is not auspicious and desirable. It is not like salokya and the other kinds of liberation. Some individual souls may desire to taste bliss by merging into the Lord's existence. In these situations the Lord may by His potency allow them to thus taste a small particle of the remnants of the bliss He has already tasted. However, the souls that merge into the Lord in this way do not become Him. Neither do they attain all His powers. For example they do not attain His power to create universes. This is described in the following words of the Brhat-sruti:

"The liberated soul then merges into the Lord. Then he is happy. Then his desires are fulfilled."

In the Madhyandinayana-sruti it is said:

brahmabhisampadya brahmana pasyati brahmana srnoti

"Then the soul merges into Brahman. When Brahman sees, the soul also sees. When Brahman hears, the soul also hears."

This state of merging into the Lord is attained by a very slight intervention of the Lord's potency. The scriptures explain:

adatte hari-hastena

"With His own hand Lord Krsna gives sayujya liberation."

Sometimes, if the Lord wishes to enjoy pastimes with that individual soul, the Lord may send him out of that merged condition and make him a personal associate of the Lord. sisupala and Dantavakra are examples of this. First they attained sayujya liberation, and then afterwards they became personal associates of the Lord. sri Narada describes them in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (7.1.47):

vairanubandha-tivrena dhyanenacyuta-satmatam nitau punar hareh parsvam jagmatur visnu-parsadau

"These two associates of Lord Visnu - Jaya and Vijaya - maintained a feeling of enmity for a very long time. Because of always thinking of Krsna in this way, they regained the shelter of the Lord, having returned home, back to Godhead."

In this way we have described how, by directly seeing the Supreme Lord, the individual soul may quickly attain salokya or the other kinds of liberation. Now we will show how the soul may gradually attain liberation and meet the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This gradual attainment of liberation is also described in the scriptures. For example, Ajamila's attainment of perfection is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.2.40-44):

sa tasmin deva-sadana asino yogam asthitah pratyahrtendriya-gramo yuyoja mana atmani

"In Hardwar, Ajamila took shelter at a Visnu temple, where he executed the process of bhakti-yoga. He controlled his senses and fully applied his mind in the service of the Lord.

tato gunebhya atmanam viyujyatma-samadhina yuyuje bhagavad-dhamni brahmany anubhavatmani

"Ajamila fully engaged in devotional service. Thus he detached his mind from the process of sense gratification and became fully absorbed in thinking of the form of the Lord.

yarhy uparata-dhis tasmin adraksit purusan purah upalabhyopalabdhan prag vavande sirasa dvijah

"When his intelligence and mind were fixed upon the form of the Lord, the brahmana Ajamila once again saw before him four celestial persons. He could understand that they were those he had seen previously, and thus he offered them his obeisances by bowing down before them.

hitva kalevaram tirthe gangayam darsanad anu sadyah svarupam jagrhe bhagavat-parsva-vartinam

"Upon seeing the Visnudutas, Ajamila gave up his material body at Hardwar on the bank of the Ganges. He regained his original spiritual body, which was a body appropriate for an associate of the Lord.

sakam vihayasa vipro mahapurusa-kinkaraih haimam vimanam aruhya yayau yatra sriyah patih

"Accompanied by the order-carriers of Lord Visnu, Ajamila boarded an airplane made of gold. Passing through the airways, he went directly to the abode of Lord Visnu, the husband of the goddess of fortune."

The meaning of these verses is clear. Of the two, the quick attainemnt of liberation is better than the gradual attainment of liberation.

Anuccheda 16

Samipya liberation is the best kind of liberation, better than salokya or the others. That is because the Supreme Lord is directly manifest outside the devotee's heart and before the devotee's eyes. This kind of liberation is described in this question posed by Vajra Maharaja in the Visnu-dharma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

kalpanam jiva-samye hi muktir naivopapadyate kadacid api dharma-jna tatra prcchami karanam

"Kalpa after kalpa the number of individual souls in the material world remains the same. Do the individual souls never attain liberation? O knower of religion, I ask you what is the reason for this.

ekaikasmin nare muktim kalpe kalpe gate dvija abhavisyaj jagac chunyam kalasyader abhavatah

"One by one, kalpa after kalpa, the individual souls attain liberation. O brahmana, would not the material world become gradually empty in the course of time?

To this question, sri Markandeya gave this answer:

jivasyanyasya sargena nare muktim upagate acintya-saktir bhagavan jagat purayate sada

"When one individual soul attains liberation, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who has inconceivable potencies, replaces him by creating another soul. In this way the Lord keeps the material world always filled.

brahmana saha mucyante brahma-lokam upagatah srjyante ca maha-kalpe tad-vidhas capare janah

"The souls who reside on Brahmaloka attain liberation along with the demigod Brahma. When, in the next maha-kalpa, the material worlds are created again, these souls are replaced with other souls like them."

In the numberless material universes there are numberless individual souls whose karma is not awakened and who are as if asleep, merged in material nature. When the Supreme Lord awakens these souls and gives them external material bodies, this is called "creation of the souls". In truth the souls do not have a beginning in time, a moment in time when they were created. Each individual soul always existed. No individual soul will ever cease to exist. Every individual soul exists eternally.

Now we will explain how pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is better than mere liberation. Although the liberated souls are not without pure love for the Lord, still, some souls wish to attain samipya or the other kinds of liberation so thatb they may become free from sufferings. This does not make pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead any the less important. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (12.13.12):

"And that one thing is the only goal of life."

The "one thing" referred to here is pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The preceding three quarters of this stanza all describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore this last quarter should be understood to refer to Him also. That the verses of srimad-Bhagavatam describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead has already been revealed in the Tattva and Bhagavat sandarbhas. In the preceding stanze it is said (srimad-Bhagavatam 12.13.11):

"srimad-Bhagavatam is filled with nectarean descriptions of Lord Krsna's transcendental pastimes, descriptions that delight the saintly devotees."

These words affirm that pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the primary topic of srimad-Bhagavatam. The words "hari-lila-kathamrta" mean "The descriptions of Lord Krsna's pastimes are nectar", and the words "sat-suram mean "The self satisfied (atmarama) devotees.

The glory of pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.11):

ittham satam brahma-sukhanubhutya

"Lord Krsna, who awards the impersonal brahman realization by His bodily effulgence, also gives pleasure to the devotees as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Those who are under the spell of external energy, maya, take Him only as a beautiful child. Yet He gave full transcendental pleasure to the cowherd boys who played with Him. Only after accumulating heaps of pious activities, those boys were promoted to personally associate with the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

It is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (2.1.9):

parinisthito 'pi nairgunye

"O saintly king, I was certainly situated perfectly in trascendence, yet I was still attracted by the delineation of the pastimes of the Lord, who is described by enlightened verses."

Therefore the word "kaivalya" in srimad-Bhagavatam 12.13.12 should be interpreted according to these explanations of the true prupose of srimad-Bhagavatam. The true meaning of kaivalya", then, is "pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead". However, even if the word kaivalya" is interpreted to mean "purity", it still refers to love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, for that love is the purest thing that exists. That the word suddha" (pure) may be used to describe the unalloyed devotees of the Lord has already been established in the Bhakti- sandarbha. Others, persons who are not devotees of the Lord, have many faults. These persons are criticized in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.1.2):

"Completely rejecting all religious activities which are materially motivated, this Bhagavata Purana propounds the highest truth."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse the preposition `pra' in the word `projjhita' indicates that the desire for liberation is also rejected in this book."

Therefore this verse of srimad-Bhagavatam declares that the desire for liberation is actually materially motivated (kaitava). Although the word "kaivalya" may be used to describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead, or the spiritual nature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the devotees who love the Supreme Lord still say (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.15.49): kamam bhavah sva-vrjinair nirayesu nah stac ceto 'livad yadi nu te padayo rameta

"O Lord, we pray that You let us be born in any hellish condition of live, just as long as our hearts and minds are always engaged in the service of Your lotus feet, our words are made beautiful (by speaking of Your activities) just as tulasi leaves are beautified when offered to Your lotus feet, and as long as our ears are always filled with the chanting of Your transcendental qualities."

Here it is seen that the devotees give their love to the Supreme Personality of Godhead alone. If the word kaivalya" may be interpreted to mean "liberation". Still, the best meaning of that word is "pure love for the Premadasa". That is the interpetation that should be accepted. In truth the word "kaivalya" nad other like words primarily refer to pure devotional service. This is seen in the following prose pasage of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.19.19-20):

yatha-varna-vidhanam apavargas capi bhavati. . .yo 'sau bhagavati sarva-bhutatmany anatmye 'nirukte 'nilayane paramatmani vasudeve 'nanya-nimitta-bhakti-yoga-laksano nana-gati-nimittavidya- granthi-randhana-dvarena yada hi maha-purusa-purusa-prasangah.

"If one's position is ascertained by a bona-fide spiritual master and one is properly trained to engage in the service of Lord Visnu according to the four social divisions (brahmana, ksatriya, vaisya, and sudra) and the four spiritual divisions (brahmacari, grhastha, vanaprastha, and sannyasa), one's life becomes perfect. "After many, many births, when the results of one's pious activities mature, one gets an opportunity to associate with pure devotees. Then one is able to cut the knot of bondage to ignorance, which bound him because of varied fruitive activities. As a result of associating with devotees, one gradually renders service to Lord Vasudeva, who is transcendental, free from attachment to the material world, beyond the mind and words, and independent of everything else. That bhakti-yoga, devotional service to Lord Vasudeva, is the real path of liberation."

In the first paragraph here it is said: "One who follows the varbnasrama system (varnasya yad vidhanam) and, following his own nature, engages in devotional service, offering the results of his work to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, will gradually attain liberation (apavargas ca bhavati). The nature of that liberation is described in the second paragraph. The word "atmya" here means material passion and other vices", and therefore the word "anatmya" means freedom from those vices". The person described here strives to attain the happiness felt by the devotees. He does not try to become happy separate from the Lord. He wishes to be happy as the devotees are happy. Here the word "anirukte" means the Supreme Personality of Godhead's form and qualities are beyond the descriptive power of words". The word anilayane" means "the Supreme Personality of Godhead never dies (nilayana). He exists eternally". Here the word bhakti-yogah" (devotional service" is modified by the adjective "ananya-nimitta", which means "free from liberation or any other material motivation". The word laksanah" means "that is the nature of devotional service". The activities by which one attains what is described by the word "apavargah" are described in the words: nana-gati-nimittavidya-granthi-randhana", which mean Then one is able to cut the knot of bondage to ignorance, which bound him because of varied fruitive activities." In this way (dvarena) one attains what is called "apavarga". That is the meaning here. The word "apavarga" comes from the verb "vrj" preceded by the peroposition "apa". It is derived in that way. It is said in the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda:

"The wise say that devotional service to Lord Visnu is true liberation."

In the same way it is said in the Skanda Purana, Reva- khanda:

niscala tvayi bhaktir ya saiva muktir janardane mukta eva hi bhaktas te tava visno yato hareh

"O Lord Krsna, unwavering devotion to You is true liberation. O Lord Visnu, Your devotees are already liberated."

Reassuring Queen Rukmini, Lord Krsna said (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.60.50-53):

santi hy ekanta-bhaktayas tava. . .

. . .mam prapya maniny apavarga-sampadam vanchanti ye sampada eva tat - patim

"O most beautiful Rukmini, you are My dearmost wife. I am greatly pleased to understand how much love you have for Me. Please take it for granted that no matter what ambition and desire you might have and no matter what you might expect from Me, I am always at your service. And it is a fact also that My devotees, My dearmost friends and servitors, are always free from material conbtamination, even though they are not inclined to ask from Me such liberation. My devotees never desire anything from Me except to be engaged in My service.

In srimad-Bhagavatam (2.3.12) it is said:

kaivalya-sammata-pathas tv atha bhakti-yogah

"Transcendental knowledge in relation with the Supreme Lord Hari is knowledge resulting in the complete suspension of the waves and whirlpools of the material modes. Such knowledge is self-satisfying due to its being free from material attachment, and being transcendental it is approved by authorities. Who could fail to be attracted?"

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"This verse means: `Devotional service is the true path of liberation."

The word "pathah" (path) here means "the way to attain association with the Supreme Personality of Godhead." This is described in srimad-Bhagavatam 5.19.20 (quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda) in the passage beginning with the words "yada hi". That in srimad-Bhagavatam (2.10.1) it is said:

atra sargo visargas ca. . .

"In the srimad-Bhagavatam there are tne divisions of statements regarding the following: the creation of the universe, subcreation, planetary systems, protection by the Lord, the creative impetus, the change of Manus, the science of God, returning home, back to Godhead, liberation, and the summum bonum."

In the this description of the ten topic of a maha-purana, the word "mukti" (liberation) comes toward the end. Therefore, before attaining liberation one must first attain posana", which precedes it in this list. Posana" here means "mercy". The greatest mercy is the gift of pure love (priti) for the Lord. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.6.18):

This is also confirmed by the following words, where Supreme Personality of Godhead tells King Prthu (srimad-Bhagavatam 4.20.16):

varam ca mat kancana manavendra vrnisva. . .

"My dear king, I am very captivated by your elevated qualities and excellent behavior, and thus I am very favorably inclined toward you. You may therefore ask from Me any benediction you like."

King Prthu spoke these words in reply to the Lord (srimad- Bhagavatam 4.20.31):

yatha cared bala-hitam pita svayam tatha tvam evarhasi nah samihitum

"My Lord, due to Your illusory energy, all living beings in this material world have forgotten their real constitutional position, and out of ignorance they are always desirous of material happinesss in the form of society, friendship, and love. Therefore please do not ask me to take some material benefits from You, but as a father, not waiting for the son's demand, does everything for the benefit of the son, please bestow upon me whatever You think best for me."

The Supreme Lord then said to King Prthu (srimad-Bhagavatam 4.20.32):

tam aha rajan mayi bhaktir astu

"The Lord, the seer of the universe, after hearing Prthu Maharaja's prayer, addressed the king: `My dear king, may you always be blessed by engaging in My devotional service'."

The word "bhakti" here means "devotional service filled with pure love for the Lord". This last verse was spoken by Lord Visnu.

Anuccheda 18

By hearing srimad-Bhagavatam one attains pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, love that is the true goal of life. This has already been briefly explained in Tattva- sandarbha. This truth about pure love for the Supreme Lord was revealed to Lord Vyasadeva is a mystic trance of samadhi and it was also revealed to srila sukadeva Gosvami in his heart. That one attains love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead by hearing srimad-Bhagavatam is confirmed by these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (1.7.7):

yasyam vai sruyamanayam. . .

"Simply by giving aural reception to this Vedic literature, the feeling for devotional service to Lord Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, sprouts up at once to extinguish the fire of lamentation, illusion, and fearfulness."

It is also confirmed by these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 12.12.69):

svasukha-nibhrta-cetas tad-vyudastanya-bhavah. . .

"I offer my respectful obeisances unto srila sukadeva Gosvami, the son of Vyasadeva. He is the destroyer of all sinful reactions and is full in self-realization and bliss. Because of this, he has no other desire. Still, he was attracted by the transcendental pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and out of compassion for the people, he described the transcendental historical literature called srimad-Bhagavatam. This is compared to the light of the Absolute Truth."

It is also confirmed by these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.1.2):

dharma-projjhita-kaitavo 'tra paramah. . . . . .kim va parair isvarah sadyo hrdy avarudhyate 'tra krtibhih susrusubhis tat-ksanat

"Completely rejecting all religious activities which are materially motivated, this Bhagavata Purana propounds the highest truth, which is understandable by those devotees who are fully pure in heart. The highest truth is reality distinguished from illusion for the welfare of all. Such truth uproots the threefold miseries. This beautiful Bhagavatam, complied by the great sage Vyasadeva (in his maturity), is sufficent in itself for God-realization. What is the need of any other scripture? As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhagavatam, by this culture of knowledge the Supreme Lord is established within his heart."

In the four most important verses of srimad-Bhagavatam (2.9.33-36) thw word "rahasya" (secret) refers to this truth: that by hearing srimad-Bhagavatam one attains love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This has already been described in Bhagavat-sandarbha's explanation of the third of these four most important verses. Love for the Supreme Lord is true liberation, is the Lord's greatest mercy, and is the greatest goal of life. Simply by hearing srimad-Bhagavatam one attains it. As sri Vyasa was about to write srimad-Bhagavatam, sri Narada rebuked him and gave him this instruction (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.5.9):

"Although, great sage, you have very broadly described the four principles beginning with religious performances, you have not described the glories of the Supreme Personality, Vasudeva."

In this verse the word "ca" means although". sri Narada spoke these words because he knew that the description of the Supreme Lord's glories would awaken love for Him. This verse was spoken by sri Narada.

Devotional service eclipses all kinds of liberation. Opening their throats, the scriptures loudly proclaim this truth. Sometimes liberation is offered by the Supreme Lord Himself, and sometimes it is given by the Lord's persopnal associates. In either case liberation is eclipsed by devotional service. That liberation offered by the Supreme Lord Himself is eclipsed by devotional service is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.6.17):

yasyam eva kavaya atmanam aviratam vividha-vrjina-samsara- paritapopatapyamanam anusavanam snapayantas tayaiva paraya nivrtya hy apavargam atyantikam parama-purusartham api svayam asaditam no evadriyante bhagavadiyatvenaiva parisamapta- sarvarthah.

"Devotees always bathe themselves in devotional service in order to be relieved of the various tribulations of material existence. By doing this, the devotees enjoy supreme bliss, and liberation personified comes to serve them. Nonetheless, they do not accept that service, even if it is offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Hismelf. For the devotees, liberation (mukti) is very unimportant because, having attained the Lord's transcendental loving service, they have attained everything desirable and have transcended all material desires."

In this passage the word "yasyam" means devotional service, which was described in the previous paragraph". Liberation and all other kinds of good fortune follow as by-products of devotional service. This is also confirmed by the following words of sri Narada-pancaratra:

hari-bhakti-maha-devyah sarva mukty-adi-siddhayah bhuktayas cadbhutas tasyas cetika-vad anuvratah

"Liberation and all other perfections, as well as all kinds of wonderful enjoyments are the followers and servants of the goddess of devotional service."

Still, the devotees disdain all these offered perfections and enjoyments. This is described in the following words spoken by King Indra to sri Vrtra srimad-Bhagavatam (6.12.22):

yasya bhaktir bhagavati harau nihsreyasesvare vikridato 'mrtambhodhau kim ksudraih khatakodakaih

"A person fixed in the devotional service of the Supreme Lord, Hari, the Lord of the highest auspiciousness, swims in the ocean of nectar. For him, what is the use of water in small ditches?"

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

That devotional service eclipses the liberated attained by serving great devotees and by hearing the descriptions of the Lord's glories is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.87.21):

duravagamatma-tattva-nigamaya tavatta-tanos carita-mahimamrtabdhi-parivarta-parisramanah na parilasanti kecid apavargam apisvara te carana-saroja-hamsa-kula-sanga-visrsta-grhah

"Dear Lord, it is very difficult to understand spiritual knowledge. Your appearance here, just as You are, is to explain to us this most difficult subject of knowledge of the spirit. As such, Your devotees who have left their domestic comforts to associate with the liberated acaryas (teachers) are now fully merged in the devotional service of Your Lordship, and thus they do not care for any so-called liberation."

In this verse the words "atma-tattvam" mean the truth of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose form is eternal and full of knowledge and bliss, "nigama" means "knowledge", "atta-tanoh" means whose form is maifest", "pari" means "for renouncing", "carita-mahamrtabdheh parivarta" means "by diving int the nectar of Your pastimes, they become free of all fatigue", "carana-saroja-hamsanam" means "the great souls like srila sukadeva Gosvami", kulani" means "the disciples and granddisciples", "sanga-visrsta" means because of that association they have renoucned their homes", and "apavargam na parilasanti" means "Because they are like swans at the lotus flowers of Your feet, they do not desire even liberation". What more need be said of these great souls? In this way the meaning of this verse is explained. This verse was spoken by the Personified Vedas.

In this way devotional service eclipses even the liberation attained by serving the Lord and also the liberation attained by chanting and hearing the Lord's glories. This has already been discussed in the Bhakti-sandarbha, where Lord Kapiladeva was quoted as saying srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.24):

naikatmatam me sprhayanti kecit. . .

"A pure devotee, who is attached to the activities of devotional service and who always engages in the service of My lotus feet, never desires to become one with Me. Such a devotee, who is unflinchingly engaged, always glorifies My pastimes and activities."

In this verse the word "ekatmatam" means either the liberation of merging into the impersonal Brahman" or "the liberation of merging into the Supreme Personality of Godhead". That devotional service eclipses even the liberation attained by serving the Lord is affirmed by Lord Visnu Himself in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.4.67):

mat-sevaya pratitam te. . .

"My devotees, who are always satisfied to be engaged in My loving service, are not interested even in the four principles of liberation (salokya, sarupya, samipya, and sarsti), although these are automatically achieved by their service. What then is to be said of such perishable happiness as elevation to the higher planetary systems?"

This is also affirmed by Lord Kapiladeva in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.29.13):

salokya-sarsti. . .

"A pure devotee does not accept any kind of liberation - salokya, sarsti, samipya, sarupya, or ekatva - even though they are offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In this way the scriptures say that liberation is to be rejected, as the other goals of life are also. In this way it is seen that all these goals are eclipsed by devotional servicve. That ordinary liberation is eclipsed by devotional service is affirmed by these words previously quoted in Bhakti-sandarbha and other places (srimad-Bhagavatam 11.20.34):

na kincit sadhavo dhirah. . .

"My dear Uddhava, the devotees who have completely taken shelter of My service are so steadfast in devotional service that they have no other desire. Even if they are offered the four kinds of spiritual opulences, they will refuse to accept them. So what to speak of their desiring anything within this material world!"

This truth is also affirmed by these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (12.10.6):

naivecchaty asisah kvapi brahmarsir moksam apy uta bhaktim param bhagavati labdhavan puruse 'vyaye

"My dear Devi, this great brahmana sage Markandeya has attained unflinching faith and devotion unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and as such he does not aspire after any benedictions, including liberation from the material world."

Liberation is also eclipsed by attachment to the Lord, an attachment that frees one from the material pleasures and sufferings destined by one's past karma. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.17.28):

narayana-parah sarve na kutascana bibhyati svargapavarga-narakesv api
tulyartha-darsinah

"Devotees solely engaged in the devotional service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, never fear any condition of life. For them, the heavenly planets, liberation, and the hellish planets are all the same, for such devotees are interested only in the service of the Lord."

Because their only goal is to attain the Supreme Personality of Godhead, these devotees see every place in the material world, from Svargaloka down to the lower worlds, as equally abominable. In this way they see with equal vision. This verse was spoken by Lord siva to Goddess Durga.

Liberation is also eclipsed by the intense longing to serve the feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.4.15):

"O Lord, devotees who engage in the transcendental loving service of Your lotus feet have no difficulty in achieving anything within the realm of the four principles of religiosity, economic development, sense gratification, and liberation. But, O great one, as far as I am concerned, I have preferred only to engage in the loving service of Your lotus feet."

Liberation is also eclipsed by the desire to worship the Lord by offering everything to Him. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.14.14):

na paramesthyam na mahendra-dhisnyam na sarvabhaumam na rasadhipatyam na yoga-siddhir apunar-bhavam va mayy arpitatmecchati mad vinanyat

"My dear Uddhava, a person whose consciousness is completely absorbed in My thought and activities does not aspire even to occupy the post of Brahma, or the post of Indra, or the post of lordship over the planets, or the eight kinds of mystic perfections, or even liberation itself."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"Here the word `rasadhipatyam' means `lordship over Patalaloka and the other lower worlds', `apunar-bhavam' means `liberation', `mad-vina anyan icchati' means `he does not desire anything but Me' The meaning here is `I am most dear to him'. That is the meaning.".

Here the word "sarvabhaumam" means "a great kingdom, like that of Maharaja Priyavrata and other great kings". In this verse the rulership of four planets, beginning with Brahmaloka (paramesthya) and going down from there to lesser worlds, is described. If the rulership of Brahmaloka is rejected here, then what need be said about the rulership of other, lesser worlds? Liberation and yogic powers are also rejected here. Devotional service is superior to them both. This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (6.11.25):

na naka-prstham na ca paramesthyam na sarvabhaumam na rasadhipatyam na yoga-siddhir apunar-bhavam va samanjasa tva virahayya kankse

"O my Lord, source of all opportunities, I do not desire to enjoy in Dhruvaloka, the heavenly planets, or the planet where Lord Brahma resides, nor do I want to be the supreme ruler of all the earthly planets or the lower planetary systems. I do not desire to be master of the powers of mystic yoga, nor do I want liberation if I have to give up Your lotus feet."

Here the word "naka-prstham" means Dhruvaloka". If Dhruvaloka is rejected, then what need be said about the four other worlds described in the pervious verse quoted here. Those four worlds are all inferior to Dhruvaloka. Dhruvaloka is superior because it is near the spiritual world of Lord Visnu. This verse was spoken by sri Vrtra.

That liberation is also eclipsed by attaining close association with the Lord is confirmed by these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.16.37):

"Dear Lord, the dust of Your lotus feet is very wonderful. Any person who is fortunate enough to achieve this dust does not care for heavenly planets, lordship over all the planetary systems, the mystic perfections of yoga, or even liberation from material existence."

This verse says: "He does not care for heavenly planets, what to speak of lordship over Brahmaloka, what to speak of lordship over Patalaloka." In the second half of this stanza the word "va" (or) shows the relationshiop of all these. There the word "pada-rajah" (the dust of Your lotus feet) indicates close devotional association with the Lord. This verse was spoken by the Nagapatnis to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Liberation is also eclipsed by the activities of chanting the glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (7.6.25):

tuste ca tatra kim alabhyam ananta adye kim tair guna-vyatikarad iha ye sva-siddhah dharmadayah kim agunena ca kanksitena saram jusam caranayor upagayatam nah

"Nothing is unobtainable for devotees who have satisfied the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the cause of all causes, the original source of everything. The Lord is the reservoir of unlimited spiritual qualities. For devotees, therefore, who are transcendental to the modes of material nature, what is the use of following the principles of religion, economic development, sense gratification, and liberattion, which are all automatically obtainable under the influence of the modes of nature? We devotees always glorify the lotus feet of the Lord, and therefore we need not ask for anything in terms of dharma, kama, artha, and moksa."

In this verse the word "agunena" means "by liberation", and "saram-jusam" means "of the saintly devotees who taste the sweetness of glorifying the Lord". This verse was spoken by sri Prahlada to the sons of the demons.

Liberation is also eclipsed by hearing the glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed by the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (4.20.23-24):

varan vibho tvad varadesvarad budhah katham vrnite guna-vikriyatmanam ye narakanam api santi dehinam tan isa kaivalya-pate vrne na ca

"My dear Lord, You are the best of the demigods who can offer benedictions. Why, therefore, should any learned person ask You for benedictions meant for living entities bewildered by the modes of material nature? Such benedictions are available automatically, even in the lives of the living entities suffering in hellish conditions.My dewar Lord, You can certainly bestow merging into Your existence, but I do not wish to have such a benediction.

na kamaye natha tad apy aham kvacin na yatra yusmac-caranambujasavah mahattamantar-hrdayan mukha-cyuto vidhatsva karnayutam esa me varah

"My dear Lord, I therefore do not wish to have the benediction of merging into Your existence, a benediction where there is no existence of the nectarean beverage of Your lotus feet. I want the benediction of at least one million ears, for thus I may be able to hear about the glories of Your lotus feet from the mouths of Your pure devotees."

In this verse the words "tad api" mean "even liberation". These verses were spoken by King Prthu to Lord Visnu.

Liberation is also eclipsed by the desire to become a servant of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed by the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.14.44):

yo dustyajan ksiti-suta-svajanartha-daran prarthyam sriyam sura-varaih sadayavalokam naicchan nrpas tad-ucitam mahatam madhudvit- sevanurakta-manasam abhavo 'pi phalguh

"My dear king, the activities of Bharata Maharaja are wonderful. He gave up everything difficult for others to give up. He gave up his kingdom, his wife, and his family. His opulence was so great that even the demigods envied it, yet he gave it up. It was quite befitting a great personality like him to be a great devotee. He could renounce everything because he was so attracted to the beauty, opulence, reputation, knowledge, strength, and renunciation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krsna. Krsna is so attractive that one can give up all desirable things for His sake. Indeed, even liberation is considered insignificant for those whose minds are attracted to the loving service of the Lord."

In this verse the word "yah" (who) refers to Rsabhadeva's son Bharata. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Liberation is also eclipsed by the desire to serve the Lord by becoming a demigod and ruling a planet on the Lord's behalf. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (7.8.42):

pratyanitah parama bhavata trayata nah sva-bhaga daityakrantam hrdaya-kamalam tad-grham pratyabodhi kala-grastam kiyad idam aho natha susrusatam te muktis tesam na hi bahumata narasimhaparaih kim

"O Supreme Lord, You are our deliverer and protector. Our shares of sacrifice, which are actually Yours, have been recovered from the demon by You. Because the demoniac king Hiranyakasipu was most fearsome, our hearts, which are Your permenant abode, were all overtaken by him. Now, by Your presence, the gloom and darkness in our hearts have been dissipated. O Lord, for those who always engage in Your service, which is more exalted than liberation, all material opulence is insignificant. They do not even care for liberation, not to speak of the benefits of kama, artha, and dharma."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by the demigod Indra to Lord Nrsimha.

"If one by chance associates with a devotee, even for a fraction of a moment, he no longer is subject to attraction by the results of karma or jnana. What interest, then, can he have in the benedictions of the demigods, who are subject to the laws of birth and death?"

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"A person who has attained the feet of a great devotee becomes free of all fear. What remains to be attained by him? Association with a devotee of the Lord dances on the heads of all other goals of life."

Afraid that they will turn their faces away from the Lord and become non-devotees, the devotees offer this prayer, to protect themselves from becoming non-devotees. By associating with devoptees, they save themselves from becoming non-devotees. In the second of these verses is described the limitless glory of the devotees. In the first of these verses the devotees say they wish to love the lotus feet of the Lord and stay near them. The devotees do not desire samipya-mukti or any other kind of liberation. These two verses were spoken by the Pracetas to the eight-armed Purusa-avatara.

Similar verses are seen in many different places in the scriptures. That devotional service is the highest attainment is also confirmed in the following words from the Brhat-tantra, words quoted by srila Madhvacarya in his commentary:

yatha srir nitya-muktapi prapta-kamapi sarvada upaste nityaso visnum evam bhakto bhaved api

"Even though she is eternally liberated, and even though her every desire is at once fulfilled, Goddess Laksmi still worships Lord Visnu eternally. The devotees also act in that way."

In the Brahma-vaivarta Purana it is said:

na hraso na ca vrddhir va muktanam vidyate kvacit vidvat-pratyaksa-siddhatvat karanabhavato 'numa

"For the liberated souls there is not improvement and no diminution. Because their knowledge is perfect, they are free from cause and effect.

harer upasana catra sadaiva sukha-rupini na ca sadhana-bhuta sa siddhir evatra sa yatah

"In the spiritual world they have forms of bliss. There they worship Lord Hari eternally. They do not make gradual advancement in devotional service, for their devotion is always perfect."

In the Sauparna-sruti it is said:

"The liberated souls worship Lord Hari eternally. The goddess of liberation herself worships Lord Hari."

In his Bharata-tatparya commentary on Mahabharata, srila Madhvacarya quotes these words from another place in the sruti-sastra:

muktanam pai bhaktir hi paramananda-rupini

"The liberated souls also engage in devotional service. It brings them great bliss."

evam diksam cared yas tu puruso vita-kalmasah sa loke vartamano 'pi jivan-muktah pramodate

"A sinless person initiated by a bona-fide spiritual master becomes liberated. Even as he lives in the material world he is both liberated and happy.

uditakrtir anandah sarvatra sama-darsakah purnahanta-mayi saksad bhaktih syat prema-laksana

"He becomes bliss personified. He sees with equal vision. Retaining his individual identity, he serves the Lord with great love and devotion."

The equal vision mentioned here means that the devotees are equal in both loss and gain. In the Gautamiya Tantra the sages ask this question:

katham bhaktir bhavet premna jivan-muktasya narada jivan-mukta-sariranam cit-satta-nihsprha yatah virakteh karanam bhaktih sa tu muktes tu sadhanam

"Why would a soul liberated in this life serve the Supreme Lord with love and devotion? The souls already liberated in this life have already attained eternal liberated life. Therefore they have no material desires. Devotional service is only a means to attain an end, to attain renunciation, or to attain liberation."

To this question sri Narada gives the following answer:

bhadra-muktam bhavadbhis ca muktis turya parat para niraham yatra cit-satta turya sa muktir ucyate

"You are all perfectly liberated. Liberation is beyond the material world. It is higher than the highest. Spiritual existence where individual identy no longer exists is called liberation.

purnahanta-mayi bhaktis turyatita nigadyate krsna-dhamamayam brahma kvacit kutrapi bhasate

"However, individual identity continues to exist in devotional service, which is said to be above even liberation. The impersonal Brahman effulgence that is the goal of liberation is only the effulgence of Lord Krsna's limbs.

nirvijendriya-gam tat tu atma-stham kevalam sukham krsnas tu paripurnatma sarvatra sukha-rupakah bhakti-vrtti-krtabhyasat tat-ksanad gocari-krtah "Spiritual bliss is perceived only by spiritual senses. Lord Krsna is the original form of the Supreme. He is always full of bliss. By regularly serving Him with devotion one can come to see Him directly."

Even the impersonalist philosophers accept the supreme position of the Lord's personal form. In the Nrsimha-tapani Upanisad (2.4) it is said:

yam vai sarve deva amananti mumuksavo brahma-vadinas ca

"The demigods, the brahmavadis, and the jnanis who long for liberation all bow down before the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In his commentary on that verse sri sankaracarya says:

yatha mukta api lilaya vigraham krtva bhagavantam bhajante

"The liberated souls attain spiritual bodies, worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead and participate in His pastimes."

The word "brahma-vadinah" here means "liberated souls". This is supported by these words of Panini (Astadhyayi 7.2.7):

vada sthairye

That the impersonalist jnanis eventually become devotees is also confiremd by these words (Bhagavad-gita 7.17):

tesam jnani nitya-yukta eka-bhaktir visisyate

"Of these, the wise one who is in full knowledge in union with Me through pure devotional service is the best."

That the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the highest attainemnt is confirmed by the following words of the Narada-pancaratra, Jitanta-stotra:

moksa-salokya-sarupyan prarthaye na dharadhara icchami hi maha-bhaga karunyam tava suvrata

"O Lord, O maintainer of the worlds, I do not pray for liberation, or to live on Your planet, or to have a from like Your form. I wish only for Your mercy."

That devotional service eclipses all other goals of life is confirmed by these words of sri Hayasirsa-pancaratra, sri Narayana-vyuha-stava:

na dharmam kamam artham va moksam va varadesvara prarthaye tava padabje dasyam evabhikamaye

"O Supreme Personality of Godhead, O giver of boons, I do not pray for piety, sense pleasure, or wealth. I wish only service to Your feet.

punah punar varan ditsur visnur muktim na yacitah bhaktir eva vrta yena prahladam tam namamy aham

"I offer my respectful obeisances to sri Prahlada. Even though Lord Visnu again and again offered boons to him, he never asked for liberation. The boons he chose were only devotional service.

yadrcchaya labdham api visnor dasarathes tu yah naicchan moksam vina dasyam tasmai hanumate namah

"I offer my respectful obeisances to sri Hanuman. Even though Lord Ramacandra offered him liberation, he would not accept it without devotional service."

In the Jitanta-stotra it is also said:

dharmartha-kama-moksesu neccha mama kadacana tvat-pada-pankajasyadho jivitam diyatam mama

"O Lord, never I will wish for material piety, sense pleasure, or money. Please give me only a place under Your lotus feet."

It is not surprising that love for the Supreme Lord eclipses all other goals of life. In srimad-Bhagavatam (5.18.12) it is said:

yasyasti bhaktir bhagavaty akincana sarvair gunais tatra samasate surah

"All the demigods and their exalted qualities, such as religion, knowledge, and renunciation, become manifest in the body of one who has developed unalloyed devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva."

Devotional service brings the virtue of compassion. In srimad-Bhagavatam (9.21.12) King Rantideva says:

na kamaye 'ham gatim isvarat param astarddhi-yuktam apunar-bhavam va artim prapadye 'khila-deha-bhajam antah-sthito yena bhavanty aduhkhah

"I do not pray to the Supreme Personality of Godhead for the eight perfections of mystic yoga, nor for salvation from repeated birth and death. I want only to stay among all the living entities and suffer all distresses on their behalf, so that they may be freed from suffering."

The meaning of this verse is clear. Because he was a great hero of compassion (daya-vira), King Rantideva would not abandon the people in general. Neither did he consider who was worthy and who was not worthy to receive charity from him. In the same way, persons who are heroes of charity (dana-vira), persons who, because of their earnest love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, have renounced even liberation, have nothing to fear. Such persons, persons like srila sukadeva Gosvami, persons who know the truth, persons who have faith that love for the Supreme Lord is the highest goal of life, are described in this verse. Such persons choose love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead over any kind of liberation. This verse was spoken by King Rantideva.

Love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is ultimate result obtained by following the spiritual practices described in the Vedas. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.9.41):

purtena tapasa yajnair danair yoga-samadhina raddham nihsreyasam pumsam mat-pritis tattvavin-matam

"It is the opinion of expert transcendentalists that the ultimate goal of performing all traditional good works, penances, sacrifices, charities, mystic activities, trances, etc. is to invoke My satisfaction."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse the Supreme Personality of Godhead says: `Nothing is more important than satisfying Me.' He says: `It is the opinion of expert transcendentalists (tattvavin-matam) that the ultimate goal (raddham nihsreyasam) of performing all traditional good works (beginning with purta) is to invoke My satisfaction (mat-pritih)'."

The meaning here is that persons who are not great transcendentalists, persons who do not know the real truth, think other results are more important than satisfying the Supreme Personality of Godhead. These persons think devotional service is only a tool that one uses to perform these other activities.

What is the opinion of the advanced transcendentalists, the persons who know the real truth? The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself explains (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.9.42):

aham atmatamanam dhatah presthah san preyasam api ato mayi ratim kuryad dehadir yat-krte priyah

"I am the Supersoul of every individual. I am the supreme director and the dearest. People are wrongly attached to the gross and subtle bodies, but they should be attached to Me only."

In this verse the Supreme Personality of Godhead says: I (aham) am the Supersoul (atma). I am like the sun, and the of individual souls (atmanam), are like the rays of My sunlight."

This is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.55):

krsnam enam avehi tvam atmanam akhilatmanam

in srimad-Bhagavatam 3.9.42.the Supreme Personality of Godhead declares: "I am supremely pure. I am the dearest (prestha) of all dear things (preyasam). People are wrongly attached to the gross and subtle bodies (krte dehadibhir priyah), but they should be attached to Me only." These words mean: "They who have the fault of not understanding Me do not do everything for Me." This verse was spoken by sri Garbhodakasayi Visnu to the demigod Brahma.

From this it may be understood that pure love (suddha- priti) for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the best of all spiritual attainments. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (6.14.3-5):

"In this material world there are as many living entities as atoms. Among these living entities, a very few are human beings, and among them few are interested in following religious principles.

prayo mumuksavas tesam kecanaiva dvijottama mumuksunam sahasresu kecin mucyeta sidhyati

"O best of the brahamnas, sukadeva Gosvami, out of many persons who follow religious principles, only a few desire liberation from the material world. among many thousands who desire liberation, one may actually achieve liberation, giving up material attachment to society, friendship, love, county, home, wife, and children. And among many thousands of such liberated persons, one who can understand the true meaning of liberation is very rare.

"O great sage, among many millions who are liberated and perfect in knowledge of liberation, one may be a devotee of Lord Narayana, or Krsna. Such devotees, who are fully peaceful, are very rare."

In these verses the word "sreyah" means persons who are interested in following religious principles so they will be happy in the next life, are better", and mucyeta" means "they beocme liberated even while living in the material world". If after they attain liberation, such souls do not commit offenses to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, they attain the highest, the final liberation. The liberated sousl who commit offenses to the Supreme Personality of Godhead are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.2.32):

aruhya krcchrena param padam tatah patanty adho 'nadrta-yusmad-anghrayah

"O lotus-eyed one, those who think they are liberated in this life but who are without devotional service to You are of impure intelligence. Although they accept severe austerities and penances to rise to the spiritual position, to impersonal Brahman realization, they fall down again because they neglect to worship Your lotus feet."

These persons were also described in these words of the scriptures quoted previously in Bhakti-sandarbha (110-120):

jivan-muktah prapadyante punah samsara-vasanam yady acintya-maha-saktau bhagavarty aparadhinah

"Even liberated souls will again take birth in the world of birth and death if they offend the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose great powers are beyond all understanding."

nanuvrajati yo mohad vrajantam paramesvaram jnanagni-dagdha-karmapi sa bhaved brahma-raksasah

"Even if his past karma is burned to ashes by spiritual knowledge, a person who does not worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead when He arrives will take birth as a brahma-raksasa demon."

Among many millions of liberated souls, one exalted devotee of the Lord is rare. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.21):

nayam sukhapo bhagavan. . .

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is known as the son of Yasoda and Nanda Maharaja, is never so completely known to the yogis and speculators. But He is easily available to His devotees."

It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (5.6.18):

muktim dadati karhicit sma na bhakti-yogam

In srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.5) it is said:

narayana-parayanah sudurlabhah

Such devotees are pezceful (prasantatma) because they have full faith in the sri Supreme Personality of Godhead.

This is confirmed in srimad-Bhagavatam (11.19.36), where the Supreme Lord declares:

"Faith in Me is peacefulness of the intelligence."

The verses quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda were spoken by King Pariksit to srila sukadeva Gosvami.

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (2.1.7):

prayena munayo rajan nivrtta vidhi-sedhatah nairgunya-stha ramante sma gunanukathane hareh

"O King Pariksit, mainly the topmost transcendentalists, who are above the regulative principles and restrictions, take pleasure in describing the glories of the Lord."

In these words the devotional service performed by the great souls is described. The position of the non-devotees is criticized in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (2.3.24):

tad asma-saram hrdayam batedam

"Certainly that heart is steel-framed which, in spite of one's chanting the holy name of the Lord with concentration, does not change when ecstasy takes place, tears fill the eyes, and the hairs stand on end."

The devotees are also praised in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (7.13.23):

tathapi brumahe prasnams tava rajan yatha-srutam sambhasaniyo hi bhavan atmanah suddhim icchata

"My dear king, although you know everything, you have posed some questions, which I shall try to answer according to what I have learned by hearing from authorities. I cannot remain silent in this regard, for a personality like you is just fit to be spoken to by one who desires self-purification."

In this verse the word "suddhim" means "the desire to attain pure dveotional service". This verse was spoken by Lord Dattatreya to sri Prahlada.

The Supreme Lord Himself praises the devotees in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.14.16):

nirapeksam munim santam nirvairam sama-darsanam anuvrajamy aham nityam puyeyety anghri-renubhih

"I follow a devotee who is peaceful and desireless, who always thinks of Me, who sees everyone equally. and who thinks of no one as his enemy. I follow him so I may become purified by the dust of his feet."

In this verse the Supreme Lord saus: "I follow a pure devotee (muni), a devotee like sri Narada and others, a devotee who is peaceful (santam) and desireless (nirapeksam), who does not think some things should be accepted and others should be rejected (sama-darsanam). and who thinks of no one as his enemy (nirvairam)."

In this verse the Supreme Lord says: "I am devoted to the saintly persons who have sincere devotion to Me." Why does the Lord follow such devotees. The Lord says: "I follow them so I may become absolved (puyeya) of the debt I owe them for their devotion to Me". That is the meaning here. this verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

"Who could list the innumerable transcendental qualities of Prahlada Maharaja? He had unflinching faith in Vasudeva, Lord Krsna (the son of Vasudeva), and unalloyed devotion to Him. His attachment ot Lord Krsna was natural because of His previous devotional service. Although his good qualities cannot be enumerated, they prove that he was a great soul (mahatma)."

All of this proves that pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the highest goal of life. This truth is also confirmed by this prose passage of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.9.39):

atha ha vava tava mahimamrta-rasa-samudra-viprusa sakrd avalidhaya sva-manasi nisyandamananavarata-sukhena vismarita-drsta-sruta-visaya-sukha-lesabhasah parama-bhagavata ekantino bhagavati sarva-bhuta-priya-suhrdi sarvatmani nitaram nirantaram nirvrta-manasah katham u ha va ete madhumanthana punah svartha-kusala hy atma-priya- suhrdah sadhavas tvac-caranambujanusevam visrjati na yatra punar ayam samsara-paryavartah

"Therefore, O killer of the Madhu demon, incessant transcendental bliss flows in the minds of those who have even once tasted but a drop of the nectar from the ocean of Your glories. Such exalted devotees forget the tiny reflection of so- called material happiness produced from the material senses of sight and sound. Free from all desires, such devotees are the real friends of all living entities. Offering their minds unto You, and enjoying transcendental bliss, they are expert in achieving the real goal of life. O Lord, You are the soul and dear friend of such devotees, who never need return to this material world. How could they give up engagement in Your devotional service?"

Liberation is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (7.15.35):

cittam brahma-sukha-sprstam naivottistheta karhicit

"When one's consciousness is uncontaminated by material lusty desires, it becomes calm and peaceful in all activities, for one is situated in eternal blissful life. Once situated on that platform, one does not return to materialistic activities."

These words of srimad-Bhagavatam say: "O Lord, You are the dear friend of the individual soirit souls". The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the demigods to the Supreme Personality of Godhead Liberation is again described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (1.5.18-19):

tasyaiva hetoh prayateta kovindo na labhyate yad bhramatam upary adhah tal labhyate duhkhavad anyatah sukham kalena sarvatra gabhira-ramhasa

"Persons who are actually intelligent and philosophically inclined should endeavor only for that purposeful end whoch is not obtainable ven by wandering from the topmost planet (Brahmaloka) to the lowest planet (Patala). As far as happiness derived from sense enjoyment is concerned, it can be obtained automatically in course of time, just as in the course of time we obtain miseries even though we do not desire them."

na vai jano jatu kathancanavrajen mukunda-sevy anyavad anga samsrtim smaran mukundanghry-upaguhanam punar vihatum icchen na rasa-graho janah

"My dear Vyasa, even though a devotee of Lord Krsna sometimes falls down somehow or other, he certainly does not undergo material existence like others (fruitive workers, etc.) because a person who has once relished the taste of the lotus feet of the Lord can do nothing but remember that ecstasy again and again."

The meaning of these verses is clear. These verses were spoken by sri Narada.

Devotional service and liberation are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (4.20.29):

bhajanty atha tvam ata eva sadhavo vyudasta-maya-guna-vibhramodayam bhavat-padanusmaranad rte satam nimittam anyad bhagavan na vidmahe

"Great saintly persons who are always liberated take to Your devotional service because only by devotional service can one be relieved from the illusions of material existence. O my Lord, there is no reason for the liberated souls to take shelter at Your lotus feet except that such souls are constantly thinking of Your feet."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"This verse says: `O Supreme Personality of Godhead, because You are kind and affectionate to the poor and fallen, the devotees (sadhavah), who have no material desires, worship (bhajanti) You (tvam), who are attained by those who have (atha turned away from impersonal speculations.' What is the Supreme Personality of Godhead like? He is free of all bewildered material activities inspired by the mode of material nature. Why do the devotees worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead? This verse explains: `O Lord, the devotees do not know anything but Your feet' (bhavat-padanusmaranad anyan na vidmahe)."

This verse was spoken by King Prthu to Lord Visnu.

Anuccheda 43

In this weay it is seen that the devotees desire only love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They reject everything else. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.39.1-2):

sukhopavistah paryanke rama-krsnoru-manitah lebhe manorathan sarvan pathi yan sa cakara ha

kim alabhyam bhagavati prasanne sri-niketane tathapi tat-para rajan na hi vanchanti kincana

"Akrura was warmly received by Lord Krsna and Nanda Maharaja and offered a resting place for the night. In the meantime the two brothers Balaraama and Krsna went to take Their supper. Akrura sat on his bed and began to reflect that all the desires which he had anticipated while coming from Mathura to Vrndavana had been fulfilled. Lord Krsna is the husband of the goddess of fortune. Being pleased with His pure devotee, He can offer whatever the devotee desires. But the pure devotee does not ask anything from the Lord for his personal benefit."

The word "sah" (he) in this verse refers to Akrura. The word "yan" (them) in this verse is explained in these words spoken by Akrura srimad-Bhagavatam (10.38.3):

kim mayacaritam bhadram kim taptam paramam tapah kim vathapy arhate dattam yad draksyamy adya kesavam

"What pious deeds did I do? What gerat austerities did I perform? What charity did I give, that today I will see Lord Krsna?"

In these words it is seen that the devotees desire only devotional service. Here someone may object: "Why do the devotees not pray for liberation and other desirable things?" This protest is answered in this verse by the words "kim alabhyam" (What cannot be attained when when has satisfied Lord Krsna?). These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 44

Pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is again described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.19.16):

punas ca bhuyad bhagavaty anante ratih prasangas ca tad-asrayesu mahatsu yam yam upayami srstim maitry astu sarvatra namo dvijebhyah

"Again, offering obeisances unto all you brahmanas, I pray that if I should again take my birth in the material world I will have complete attachment to the unlimited Lord Krsna, association with His devotees, and friendly relations with all living beings."

In this verse the word "srstim" means birth, and "sarvatra maitrim" means "without casting a cruel glance on anyone". Being especially respectful to the brahmanas, he says here "namah" (I offer my respectful obeisances). This verse was spojen by King Pariksit.

Anuccheda 45

That the devotees desire only to have love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (4.9.36):

na vai mukundasya padaravindayo rajo-jusas tata bhavadrsa janah vanchanti tad-dasyam rte 'rtham atmano yadrcchaya labdha-manah-samrddhayah

"My dear Vidura, persons like you, who are pure devotees of the lotus feet of Mukunda (the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who can offer libreation) and who are always attached to the honey of His lotus feet, are always satisfied in serving at the lotus feet of the Lord. In any condition of life such persons remain satisfied, and thus they never ask the Lord for material prosperity."

The words "yadrcchaya labdha-manah samrddhayah" mean "without making any effort they attain great spiritual wealth in their hearts". the briefest merciful glance of the Lord fulfills all desires. That is the power of devotional service.

That the devotees desire only to love the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (4.9.29):

naicchan mukti-pater muktim tasmat tapam upeyivan

"He did not demand actual liberation from the material world, but at the end of his devotional service, when the Supreme Personality of Godhead appeared before him, he was simply ashamed of the material demands he had in his mind."

In these words spoken by Dhruva Maharaja the word mukti" refers to devotional service. This interpretation of the word "mukti" is confirmed by these words of the scriptures:

visnor anucaratvam hi moksam ahur man;isinah

"The wise philosophers affirm that devotional service to Lord Visnu is true liberation."

The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by sri Maitreya.

Anuccheda 46

Desires other than the desire to love the Supreme Personality of Godhead are criticized in the following two prayers of a pure devotee, prayers recorded in the following five prose paragraphs of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.24.23.-26):

yat tad bhagavatanadhigatanyopayena yacna- cchalenapahrta-sva-sariravesita-loka-trayo varuna- pasais ca sampratimukto giri-daryam capaviddha iti hovaca.

"When the Supreme Personality of Godhead could see no other means of taking everything away from Bali Maharaja, He adopted the trick of begging from him and took away all the three worlds. Thus only his body was left, but the Lord was still not satisfied. He arrested Bali Maharaja, bound him with the ropes of Varuna, and threw him in a cave in a mountain. Nevertheless, although all his property was taken and he was thrown into a cave, Bali Maharaja was such a great devotee that he spoke as follows.

nunam batayam bhagavan arthesu na nisnato yo 'sav indro yasya sacivo mantraya vrta ekantato brhaspatis tam atihaya svayam upendrenatmanam ayacatatmanas casiso no eva tad-dasyam ati- gambhira-vayasah kalasya manvantara-parivrttam kiyal loka-trayam idam.

"Alas, how pitiable it is for Indra, the king of heaven, that although he is very learned and powerful and although he chose Brhaspati as his prime minister to instruct him, he is completely ignorant concerning spiritual advancement. Brhaspati is also unintelligent because he did not properly instruct his disciple Indra. Lord Vamanadeva was standing at Indra's door, but King Indra instead of begging Him for an opportunity to render transcendental loving service, engaged him in asking me for alms to gain the three worlds for his sense gratification. Sovereignty over the three worlds is very insignificant because whatever material opulence one may possess lasts only for an age of Manu, which is but a tiny fraction of endless time.

yasyanudasyam evasmat-pitamahah kila vavre na tu sva- pitryam yad utakutobhayam padam diyamanam bhagavatah param iti bhagavatoparate khalu sva-pitari.

"Bali Maharaja said: My grandfather Prahlada Maharaja is the only person who understands his own self- interest. Upon the death of Prahlada's father, Hiranyakasipu, Lord Nrsimhadeva wanted to offer Prahlada his father's kingdom and even wanted to grant him liberation from material bondage, but Prahlada accepted neither. Liberation and material opulence, he thought, are obstacles to devotional service, and therefore such gifts are not His actual mercy. Consequently, insteqad of accepting the results of karma and jnana, Prahlada Maharaja simply begged the Lord for engagement in the service of His servant.

"Bali Maharaja said: Persons like us, who are still attached to material enjoyment, who are conbtaminated by the modes of material nature, and who lack the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, cannot follow the supreme path of Prahlada Maharaja, the exalted devotee of the Lord."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"In this five paragraphs pure devotional service is desvribed."

These words were spoken by Maharaja Bali to Lord Vamana. In these paragraphs the word "tam" (to Him_ refers to Lord Vamana. Here "atihaya" means "not desiring any other goal". Here King Bali says: "Lord Vamanadeva was standing at Indra's door, but King Indra instead of begging Him for an opportunity to render transcendental loving service, engaged him in asking me for alms to gain the three worlds for his sense gratification."

In this passage the word "anudasyam" (serving the devotees of the Lord) is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (7.9.24):

naya mam nija-bhrtya-parsvam

"My dear Lord, I request You to place me in touch with Your pure devotee and let me serve him as a sincere servant."

In this passage the word "sva-pitryam" (my paternal property) refers to sovereignty over the three worlds. The phrase "yad uta akutobhayam padam" (the position of fearlessness) refers to liberation. Then Bali Maharaja says: "tan na tu vavre" (he did notr accept it). Why not? Because it was something other (param) than the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavatah). Fearing that one might think in terms of the Supreme Lord's shadow potency or the Lord's partial expansions, King Bali here uses the word bhagavatah" (the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself). The passage quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

The devotees are indifferent to pleasure or pain in this worldl. That is the proof of their purity. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.17.28):

narayana-parah sarve. . .

"Devotees solely engaged in the devotional service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, never fear any condition of life. For them the heavenly planets, liberation, and the hellish planets are all the same, for such devotees are interested only in the service of the Lord."

Out of kindness for His devotees, thwe Supreme Lord removes from them everything that has no relation to Him. The Lord throws these things far away. This is described in srimad-Bhagavatam (8.22.24), where the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself says:

"My dear Lord Brahma, because of material opulence a foolish person becomes dull-witted and mad. Thus he has no respect for anyone within the three worlds and defies even My authority. To such a person I show special favor by first taking away all his possessions."

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead forbids his devotees from struggling to attain things that have no relation to Him is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.11.23):

trai-vargikayasa-vighatam asmat- patir vidhatte purusasya sakra tato 'numeyo bhagavat-prasado yo durlabho 'kincana-gocaro 'nyaih

"Our Lord, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, forbids His devotees to endeavor uselessly for religion, economic development, and sense gratification. O Indra, one can thus infer how kind the Lord is. Such mercy is obtainable only by unalloyed devotees, not by persons who aspire for material gain."

This verse means: "If an independent-minded devotee (purusasya) strives to attain some material thing in the three worlds (traivargikayasa), then the Supreme Personality of Godhead personally creates obstacles (tad-vighatam vidhatta) to prevent the devotee from attaining his desires. The word akincana-gocara" means that if the devotee srtives to attain material pleasures or non-devotional liberation, the Lord creates obstacles to stop the devotee. The word "akincana" means "pure devotee". This has already been explained in the Bhakti-sandarbha. The verse qyoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by sriman Vrtra to the demigod Indra.

Anuccheda 48

If a devotee prays for material things, he wishes them only to serve the Supreme Lord. The devotee does not wish them for his own personal sense gratification. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.70.41):

yaksyati tvam makhendrena rajasuyena pandavah paramesthya-kamo nrpatis tad bhavan anumodatam

"First of all I may inform You that King Yudhisthira has all material opulences which are possible to achieve in the highets planetary system, Brahmaloka. He has no material opulence for which to aspire, and yet he wants to perform Rajasuya sacrifices only to get Your association and to please You."

In this verse the word "paramesthya" means Lord Krsna, the king of Dvaraka".That the word paramesthi" refers to Lord Krsna is confirmed by the following words describing Lord Krsna's accepting the rice brought by Sudama Vipra (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.81.10):

tavac chrir jagrhe hastam tat-para paramesthinah

"Rukmini-devi, who is the goddess of fortune herself, checked the Lord by catching hold of His hand."

Because "paramesthi" refers to Lord Krsna, the word "paramesthya" may be taken to mean "the opulence of Dvaraka City". Interpreted in this way, the word paramesthya-kamah" means "desiring opulence like that of Lord Krsna Himself". He desired opulence like that of Dvaraka so Indraprastha would a be a fit place for Lord Krsna to reside. He had no other desire. This truth about Maharaja Yudhisthira is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.12.6):

kim te kamah sura-sparha mukunda-manaso dvijah adhijahur mudam rajnah ksudhitasya yathetare

"O brahmanas, the opulence of the king was so enchanting that the denizens of heaven aspired for it. But because he was absorbed in the service of the Lord, nothing could satisfy him except the Lord's service."

By Lord Krsna's mercy, Maharaja Yudhisthira attained this desire. This is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.75.34-35):

sabhayam maya-klptayam kvapi dharma-suto 'dhirat vrto 'nugair bandhubhis ca krsnenapi sva-caksusa

asinah kancane saksad asane maghavan iva paramesthya-sriya justah stuyamanas ca vandibhih

"Once upon a time king Yudhisthira was sitting on the golden throne in the palace constructed by the demon Maya. His foru brothers and other relatives, as well as his great well- wisher, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krsna, were present and the material opulence of King Yudhisthira seemed no less than that of Lord Brahma."

In these verses the word "sva-caksusa" (with his own eye) is an advjective referring to Lord Krsna. A person who has eyes and can see has a possession a bind man does not have. A blind man will certainly yearn to attain such a possession, the possession of having eyes that can see. If a person loses his sight, then all his possessions become useless to him. For the devotees, devotees who consider Lord Krsna their Lord and master, Lord Krsna's is their precious eyes.

Making reference to the Pandavas, srila sukadeva Gosvami spoke these words to Maharaja Pariksit (srimad- Bhagavatam 1.16.20):

na va. . . . . .ye 'dhyasanam raja-kirita-justam sadyo jahur bhagavat-parsva-kamah

"O chief of all the saintly kings of the Pandu dynasty who are strictly in the line of Lord sri Krsna! It is not at all astonishing that you give up your throne, which is decorated with the helmets of many kings, to achieve eternal association with the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Speaking to Lord Krsna, sri Narada said:

tad bhavan anumodatam

"May Your Lordhsip be pleased."

In this way it is seen that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is pleased with His pure devotees. The Supreme Personality of Godhead personally affirmed this truth by saying (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.50):

yan yan kamayase kaman mayy akamaya bhamini santi hy ekanta-bhaktayas tava kalyani nityada

"O most beautiful Rukmini, You are My dearmost wife. I am greatly pleased to understand how much love you have for Me. Please take it for granted that no matter what ambition and desire you might have and no matter what you might expect from Me, I am always at your service."

Here the word "akamah" means "devotional service where pure love for Lord Krsna is present and where there is no other desire." In this way "akamah" means the desire for devotional service nad nothing else". The word "akamah is used in that way in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (2.3.10):

akamah sarva-kamo va. . .

"A person who has broader intelligence, whether he be full of all material desire, without any material desire, or desiring liberation, must by all means worship the Supreme whole, the Personality of Godhead."

Devotional service with pure love for the Supreme Lord is also described by sri Prahlada in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (7.10.3):

bhrtya-laksana-jijnasuh. . .

"O my worshipable Lord, because the seed of lusty desires, which is the root cause of material existence, is within the core of everyone's heart, You have sent me to this material world to exhibit the symptoms of a pure devotee. "Otherwise, O my Lord, O supreme instructor of the entire world, You are so kind to Your devotee that You could not induce him to do something unbeneficial for him. On the other hand, one who desires some material benefit in exchange for devotional service cannot be Your pure devotee. Indeed, he is no better than a merchant who wants profit in exchange for service."

Therefore, in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.50 the words akamaya yan yan kamayase kaman" mean "O Queen Rukmini, whatever you desire to attain the great treasure of loving devotional service to Me". Because Rukmini is Lord Krsna's eternal beloved, the eternal goddess Laksmi", she is here addressed by the word "santi" (o eternal one).

Here the word "ekanta-bhaktayah" means "who do not desire anything for your own benefit", "kamini" means "O you who desire only to please Me", and kalyani" means "O you who remove all obstacles to attaining the great good fortune that is devotional service". The verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Lord Krsna to Queen Rukmini.

The desire for samipya liberation is seen in srimad- Bhagavatam 1.16.20):

"O chief of all the saintly kings of the Pandu dynasty who are strictly in the line of Lord sri Krsna! It is not at all astonishing that you give up your throne, which is decorated with the helmets of many kings, to achieve eternal association with the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

This is a very intense kind of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In this kind of love the devotee yearns to be always near the Lord. Because residence in the world of birth of death is an obstacle to that end, these devotees pray that their stay in this world be brought to an end.

This is like the love a mother or father feel foel for their children. When the children are far away, the parents yearn to be with them. This desire to associate with the Lord is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (7.9.16):

trasto 'smy aham krpana-vatsala duhsahogra- samsara-cakra-kadanad grasatam pranitah baddhah sva-karmabhir usattama te 'nghri-mulam prito 'pavarga-saranam hvayase kada nu

"O most powerful, insurmountable Lord, who are kind to the fallen souls, I have been put into the association of demons as a result of my activities, and therefore I am very much afraid of my condition of life within this material world. When will that moment come when You will call me to the shelter of Your lotus feet, which are the ultimate goal from liberation from conditional life?"

This verse means: "O Lord, because everything in this material world is turned away from You, this world is intolerable (duhsaha) Because the things of this world are all obstacles to devotional service to You, this world is a very fearful (ugram) place. Therefore I am very afraid (trasto 'smi) of the miserable conditions (kadanam) in this material world (samsara-cakram), conditions that are bring sufferings to the hearts of the living entities. In this world I have no power to serve You properly. That even an auspicious situation in the material world is inauspicious for devotional service is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (7.10.1-2):

bhakti-yogasya tat sarvam antarayatayarbhakah manyamano hrsikesam smayamana uvaca ha

"The great saint Narada Muni continued: Although Prahlada Maharaja was only a boy, when he heard the benedictions offered by Lord Nrsimhadeva, he considered them impediments on the path of devotional service. Thus he smiled very mildly and spoke as follows.

ma mam pralobhayotpattya saktam kamesu tair varaih tat-sanga-bhito nirvinno mumuksus tvam upasritah

"Prahlada Maharaja said: My dear Lord, O Supreme Personality of Godhead, because I was born in an atheistic family I am naturally attached to material enjoyment. Therefore, kindly do not tempt me with these illusions. I am very much afraid of material conditions, and I desire to be liberated from materialistic life. It is for this reason that I have taken shelter of Your lotus feet."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 7.9.16, sri Prahlada says: Although i am afraid (trasto 'smi) of this material world, I am still, because of my offenses to the Lord, placed among these many demons who are like me. Bound by my past karma (sva- karmabhir baddhah), I am thrown (pranitah) amongst them. Therefore, suffering because I am now far from You, I beg: `When (kada nu) will You, being pleased with me (pritah), call me to the shelter of Your lotus feet (anghrim), which are the ultimate goal for liberation from conditional life (apavarga-saranam)?' " This verse was spoken by sri Prahlada to Lord Nrsimha.

Anuccheda 50

In the account of the Visnu Purana, sri Prahlada, although praying to attain love for the Lord, is not averse to residing in the material world. He says (Visnu Purana 1.20.18, 19, 26, and 27):

natha yoni-sahasresu yesu yesu vrajamy aham tesu tesv acyuta bhaktir acyute 'stu sada tvayi

"O Lord, I pray that I will always have unflinching devotion to You, even if I must take take birth in thousands of wombs in this world, ya pritir avivekanam visayesv anapayini tvam anusmaratah sa me hrdayan napasrpatu

"Fools fall in love with material sense objects. As they always love senses obejcts, may I always love You. I always meditate on You. I pray that You will never leave my heart."

krta-krtyo 'smi bhagavan varenanena yat tvayi bhavitri tvat-prasadena bhaktir avyabhicarini

"O Supreme Personality of Godhead, please give me the boon that by Your mercy I will always have unflinching devotion to You. With this boon my life will be successful.

dharmartha-kamaih kim tasya muktis tasya kare sthita samasta-jagatam mule yasya bhaktih sthira tvayi

"What to speak of piety, econimoc development, sense gratification, even liberation stands in the hand of anyone who has firm devotion to You, the root from which all the worlds have grown."

To these words the Supreme Personality of Godhead gave this reply (Visnu Purana 1.20.28):

yatha te niscalam ceto mayi bhakti-samanvitam tatha tvam mat-prasadena nirvanam param apsyasi

"Because your heart has unflinching devotion to Me, by My mercy you will attain final liberation."

This last verse means: "to the extent that you have unlfinching devotion to Me, to that extent You are qualified to serve My feet." This same idea is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.14.44):

sevanurakta-manasam abhavo 'pi phalguh

"Indeed, even liberation is considered insignificant for those whose minds are attracted to the loving service of the Lord."

This same meaning is also hinted in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (11.2.8):

aham kila puranantam prajartho bhuvi mukti-dam apujayam na moksaya mohito deva-mayaya

"Wishing a child, I long ago worshiped the limitlsess Supreme Lord, who can give the gift of liberation. Bewildered by the Lord's illusory potency, I did not worship Him to attain liberation."

This verse means: "Wishing a child, Im my own expanded form, where I bore the name Sutapa, I long ago worshiped (apujayam) the limitlsess Supreme Lord, who can give the gift of liberation (muktidam). I did not worship Him to attain liberation. Bewildered (mohitah) by the Lord's (deva) merciful (mayaya) glance, I desired to have a son." Here the word "maya" means "mercy". In the Visva- prakasa Dictionary it is said:

"The word `maya' may mean `trickery' or `mercy'."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 11.2.8 the word "kila" (indeed) means "the Supreme Personality of Godhead's words in the maternity room prove all this". It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (11.2.9):

yatha vicitra-vyasanat. . .

"O saintly spiritual master, please teach me how I may become free from this fearful material world filled with dangers."

In this verse the word "vyasana" (danger) mans the dangers that come from being separated from the Supreme Lord" and the word "bhaya" (fear) means "the fears that come fromk being separated from the Supreme Lord". It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (11.2.33):

manye kutascit. . .

"I think devotional service to the lotus feet of the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead is the only way a person whose heart is always agitated, a person who thinks his external material body is his true self, can become free from all fear. When devotional service is present fears come to an end."

sri Narada explains (srimad-Bhagavatam 11.5.45):

"O very fortunate one, by faithfully following the path of devotional service you have now heard, you will become liberated and will attain the Supreme."

Here the word "visva" shows that by ataining the Supreme Personality of Godhead one becomes free from both fears and dancers that come from His absence. At the end of this conversation it is said (srimad-Bhagavatam 11.5.54):

tvam apy etan. . .

"O fortunate one, by faithfully following this path you have heard from me, this path of worshipping the Supreme Personality of Godhead, you will become liberated and will attain the Supreme."

In this verse and the verse following it the way to attain association with Lord Krsna is described. srimad-Bhagavatam 11.2.8, which was quoted in this anuccheda, was spoken by sri Vasudeva Maharaja to sri Narada.

Anuccheda 51

In this way the devotees pray to attain loving pastimes with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Pure (ekanti) devotees are of two kinds: 1. devotees whose love for the Lord is not yet born (ajata-priti) and 2. devotees who love for the Lord has been born (jata-priti). The jata-priti devotees are of three kinds: 1. the devotees in santa-rasa and other devotees like them whose contact with the Lord consists mainly of seeing Him, 2. the Lord's associates in the various rasas who directly see the Lord and also serve Him, and 3. the most important associates of the Lord. The ajata-priti devotees pray that they will attain love for the Lord. It is thr goal of their lives. Among the jata- priti devotees, the devotees in santa-rasa pray to see the Lord directly, but they do not pray to serve Him. They do not desire to serve Him. They are satisfied if the Lord will even only once mercifully glance on them. This is seen in the following description of Kardama Muni srimad-Bhagavatam 3.21.46):

"His body shone most brilliantly. Though he had engaged in austere penance for a long time, he was not emaciated, for the Lord had cast His affectionate sidelong glance upon him and he had also heard the nectar flowing from the moonlike words of the Lord."

These devotees are not very eager or very determined to be always close to the Lord. However other devotees, the devotees who are the Lord's personal associates, yearn to love the Lord deeply. Yearning to serve the Lord in a particular way, they pray to stay near the Lord. Their prayer to attain loving pastimes with the Lord becomes stronger and stronger. That is the great virtue of these devotees. When, because they are very humble, they do not think they will ever become personal associates of the Lord, they still pray that their love for Him will never perish. That is their virtue. They pray that they will become free from the world of birth and death so they will attain personal association with the Lord. Still, they have not attained the stage of ecstatic love. These devotees have not yet attained the stage of ruci. That engaged in devotional service is the proper way to attain association with the Lord is confirmed by the Lord Himself in these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 11.20.33):

"Everything is attained by serving Me with devotion. If somehow he desires them, My devotee easily atatins Svargaloka, liberation, or My own spiritual abode."

Even so, it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.29.13):

salokya-sarsti. . .

This means that the devotees will never accept these kinds of liberation if by accepting them they will not be able to serve the Lord. However, if these kinds of liberation help them serve the Lord, then the devotees happily accept them. That is the meaning of these words of srimad-Bhagavatam. Sayujya liberation, where one becomes one with the Lord, is the only liberation the devotees will not accept. Filled with desires to serve the Lord in various ways, they happily accept sarupya liberation if that liberation helps their service. The eternal servants of the Lord in Vaikuntha are all devotees like this. In this world also are seen devotees who are like the Lord in some ways, devotees who are intelligent, youthful, princes, or who have forms in some ways like the Lord's. These devotees are praised by the people. Pure devotees have the attainment of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the goal of their lives. Such devotees desire only to attain love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They have no other desire. They are engaged in devotional service. They crush the cycle of repeated birth and death. They never act sinfully. They are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.32-38):

animitta bhagavati bhaktih siddher gariyasi

"When the service spirit is engaged in devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, without any motive, that is far better even than salvation.

jarayaty asu ya kosam nigirnam analo yatha

"Bhakti, devotional service, dissolves the subtle body of the living entity without separate effort, just as fire in the stomach digests all that we eat.

naikatmatam me sprhayanti kecin mat-pada-sevabhirata mad-ihah ye 'nyonyato bhagavatah prasajya sabhajayante mama paurusani

"A pure devotee, who is attached to the activities of devotional service and who always engages in the service of My ltous feet, never desires to become one with Me. Such a devotee, who is unflinchingly engaged, always glorifies My pastimes and activities.

pasyanti te me rucirany amba santah prasanna-vaktraruna-locanani rupani divyani vara-pradani sakam vacam sprhaniyam vadanti

"O My mother, My devotees always see the smiling face of My form, with eyes like the rising morning sun. They like to see My various transcendental forms, which are all benevolent, and they also talk favorably with Me.

tair darsaniyavayavair udara- vilasa-haseksita-vama-suktaih hrtatmano hrta-pranams ca bhaktir anicchato me gatim anvim prayunkte

"Upon seeing the charming forms of the Lord, smiling and attractive, and hearing His very pleasing words, the pure devotee almost loses all other consciousness. His senses are freed from all other engagements, and he becomes absorbed in devotional service. Thus in spite of his unwillingness, he attains liberation without separate endeavor.

atho vibhutim mama mayavinas tam aisvaryam astangam anupravrttam sriyam bhagavatim vasprhayanti bhadram parasya me te 'snuvate tu loke

"Thus because he is completely absorbed in thought of Me, the devotee does not desire even the highest benediction obtainable in the upper plenateary systems, including Satyaloka. He does not desire the eight material perfections obtained from mystic yoga, nor does he desire to be elevated to the kingdom of God. Yet even without desiring them, the devotee enjoys, even in this life, all the offered benedictions.

na karhicin mat-parah santa-rupe nanksyanti no me 'nimiso ledhi hetih yesam aham priya atma sutas ca sakha guruh suhrdo daivam istam

"The Lord continued: My dear mother, devotees who receive such transcendental opulences are never bereft of them. Neither weapons nor the change of time can destroy such opulences. Because the devotees accept Me as their friend, their relative, their son, preceptor, benefactor, and Supreme Deity, they cannot be deprived of their possessions at any time."

In these verses the word "anmvim" means the difficult to understand attainment of being a personal associate of the Supreme Personality of Godhead". The pure devotees are like a person determined to perform a yajna (kratu- nyaya). Attainment of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the only goal of their lives. This is described in the following words of the Chandogya Upanisad (3.14.1):

yatha kratur asmil loke puruso bhavati tathetah pretya bhavati

"According to the way he is determined to worship the Supreme Lord in this life, a person attains an appropriate reward after death."

Here the commentator says:

"Here the word `kratu' means `determination."

It is said in the Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad (4.4.5):

sa yatha-kamo bhavati tat-kratur bhavati. yat-kratur bhavati tat- karma kurute. yat karma kurute tad abhisampadyate.

"As a person desires, so he becomes determined to act. As he is determined, so he acts. As he acts, so he reaps the result."

It is also said in the scriptures:

yad yatha yathopasate tad eva bhavanti

"As one worships the Lord, so he attains an appropriate reward."

The Supreme Personality of Godhead promises (Bhagavad-gita 4.11):

ya yatha mam prapadyante tams tathaiva bhajamy aham

"All of them - as they surrender unto Me - I reward accordingly."

In the Brahma-vaivarta Purana the Supreme Personality of Godhead again promises:

yadi mam praptum icchanti prapnuvanty eva nanyatha

"If one desires to attain Me, he will attain Me. It is not otherwise."

This spiritual goal was also attained by the gopis of Vraja. They attained personal association with the Lord. This has already been discussed in sri Krsna-sandarbha, where these words spoken to the gopis by Lord Krsna were quoted (srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.44):

mayi bhaktir hi bhutanam amrtatvaya kalpate distya yad asin mat-sneho bhavatinam mad-apanah

"The means of attaining My favor is loving service unto Me, and fortunately you are all thus engaged. Those living beings who render service unto Me are eligible to be transferred to the spiritual world and attain eternal life with knowledge and bliss."

Srila Jiva Gosvami's

Sri Priti-sandarbha

"The means of attaining My favor is loving service unto Me, and fortunately you are all thus engaged. Those living beings who render service unto Me are eligible to be transferred to the spiritual world and attain eternal life with knowledge and bliss."

Many other passages from scripture could also be quoted to prove this truth. Lord Krsna personally accepted the gopis as His dear personal associates. He said to them (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.22.25-26):

sankalpo vidhita sadhvyo bhavatinam mad-arcanam mayanumoditah so 'sau satyo bhavitum arhati

na mayy avesita-dhiyam kamah kamaya kalpate bharjita kvathita dhanah prayo bijaya nesate

"My dear well-behaved girls, I know of your desire for Me and why you worship Goddess Katyayani and I completely approve of your action. Anyone whose full consciousness is always absorbed in Me, even if in lust, is elevated. As a fried seed cannot fructify, so any desire in connection with My loving service cannot produce any fruitive result, as in ordinary karma."

This verse means: "I know of your desire (bhvatinam sankalpo viditah) to worship Me as Your husband (mad-arcanam) and I approve of it (anumoditah). It is right (satyah) that you always worship Me in this way. You deeply love Me. You have no ulterior motive." The words: "na mayy avesita-dhiyam kamah kamaya kalpate" may mean either Persons who have an ulterior motive cannot be always absorbed in Me" or they may mean: "Devotees like you, who are always absorbed in worshiping Me, never have any ulterior motive." However, the first of these interpetation is refuted by the passage beginning with the word "bharjitah". The word "prayah" here is used in the sense of making a supposition. The words "bharjita kvathita dhanah prayo bijaya nesate" here mean: "As a ball of fried barley seeds cannot fructify, so any desire in connection with My loving service cannot produce any fruitive result, as in ordinary karma." Here Lord Krsna says: "Therefore your worship of Me brings the highest result." That is the meaning. According to their own experience, the devotees in santa- rasa may assume that the glory of this kind of pure love will bring a peaceful condition of life. However, it is sometimes seen that the devotees' love for Lord Krsna does not bring a peaceful condition. An example of this lack of peace is seen in these words of the gopis, who yearn to taste the nectar of Lord Krsna's lips (srimad-Bhagavatam (10.31.14):

"O hero of charity, please deliver unto us the nectar of Your lips. That nectar increases lusty desires for enjoyment and diminishes lamentation in the material world. Kindly give us the nectar of Your lips, which are touched by Your transcendentally vibrating flute, for that nectar makes all human beings forget all other attachments."

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.22.25-26) quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by Lord Krsna to the gopis.

Anuccheda 52

The Yadavas and the Lord's queens also have close association with the Lord. This is seen in the scriptures, where Lord Krsna declarea:

ete hi yadavah sarve mad-gana eva bhamini

"O beautiful one, the Yadavas are all My dear associates."

In srimad-Bhagavatam (10.59.43) it is said:

reme ramabhir nija-kama-samplutah. . .

"Filled with desire, He enjoyed pastimes with His many queens."

In srimad-Bhagavatam (10.90.48) it is also said:

"Lord sri Krsna is He who is known as jana-nivasa, the ultimate resort of all living entities, and who is also known as Devaki-nandana or Yasoda-nandana, the son of Devaki and Yasoda. He is the guide of the Yadu dynasty, and with His mighty arms He kills everything inauspicious as well as every man who is impious. By His presence He destroys all things inauspicious for all living entities, moving and inert. His blissful smiling face always increases the lusty desires of the gopis of Vrndavana. May He be all glorious and happy."

The meaning of these verses is clear. in some other pastimes a magical illusion is sometimes manifest. An example of this is given in the Kurma Purana, where it is said that an illusory Sita created by magic temporarily took the place of the real Sita. Magical illusions sometimes were manifested for the Pandavas and other associates of the Lord. An example of a magical illusion in relation to Arjuna is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.15.28-31):

evam cintayato jisnoh krsna-pada - saroruham sauhardenati-gadhena santasid vimala matih

"Thus being deeply absorbed in thinking of the instructions of the Lord, which were imparted in the great intimacy of friendship, and in thinking of His lotus feet, Arjuna's mind became pacified and free from all material contamination.

vasudevanghry-anudhyana- paribrmhita-ramhasa bhaktya nirmathitasesa-kasaya-dhisano 'rjunah

"Arjuna's constant remembrance of the lotus feet of Lord sri Krsna rapidly increased his devotion, and as a result all the trash in his mind subsided.

gitam bhagavata jnanam yat tat sangrama-murdhani kala-karma-tamo-ruddham punar adhyagamat prabhuh

"Because of the Lord's pastimes and activities and because of His absence, it appeared that Aejuna forgot the instruction left by the Personality of Godhead. But factually this was not the case, and again he became lord of his senses.

visoko brahma-sampattya sanchinna-dvaita-samsayah lina-prakrti-nairgunyad alingatvad asambhavah

"Because of his possessing spiritual assets, the doubts of duality were completely cut off. Thus he was freed from the three modes of material nature and placed in transcendence. There was no longer any chance of his becoming entangled in birth and death, for he was freed from material form."

Here the words "santa" means: "He became peaceful at heart. He was free of all suffering. It was as if Lord Krsna was again present before his eyes." "Vimala" means "His mind became free from all material contamination." This is all explained in the next verse (srimad- Bhagavatam 1.15.29). There the word "anudhyana" refers to the meditation described in the previous verse, and the word "kasayah" refers to the contamination also described in the previous verse. There the word "gitam" refers to these words the Lord spoke in Bhagavad-gita (18.65):

"Always think of Me and become My devotee. Worship Me and offer your homage unto Me. Thus you will come to Me without fail. I promise you this because you are My very dear friend."

Arjuna's attainment of success is described in the next verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.15.31). There the word brahma-sampattya" means "because of having directlys een the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose form is like that of a human being". There "sanchinna-dvaita-samsayah" means "because he had directly seen the Supreme Lord, his doubts of duality were completely cut off". Because he had attained the Supreme Lord's association, he did not take birth again at the time of his death. Here the words "lina-prakrti-nairgunyat" mean "because he was freed form the modes of material nature", and the words "alingatvad asambhavah" mean "because he no longer had a material body he did not take birth again". This happened because the Supreme Personality of Godhead was personally manifest before his eyes. That is the meaning.

yas tvam krsne gate duram saha-gandiva-dhanvana

"You rogue, you dare beat an innocent cow because Lord Krsna and Arjuna, the carrier of the Gandiva bow, are out of sight? Since you are beating the innocent in a secluded place, you are considered a culprit and therefore deserve to be killed."

The great sages said (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.19.20):

ye 'dhyasanam raja-kirita-justam sadyo jahur bhagavat-parsva-kamah

"O chief of all the saintly kings of the Pandu dynasty who are strictly in the line of Lord sri Krsna! It is not at all astonishing that you give up your throne, which is decorated with the helmets of many kings, to attain eternal association with the Personality of Godhead."

In these two verses is seen the great good fortune attained by the Pandavas and their associates. Vidura and some others of the Supreme Lord's personal associates were demigods who came to this world to help the Lord in His pastimes and who, after leaving this world returned to their homes in the upper material planets. For example, Vidura was the demigod Yamaraja. After leaving this world he returned to his home in Yamaloka. This statement does not contradict the information give in srimad- Bhagavatam and Mahabharata. srimad-Bhagavatam 1.15.28-31 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srilas Suta Gosvami.

The final destination attained by King Pariksit is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.18.16):

sa vai maha-bhagavatah pariksid yenapavargakhyam adabhra-buddhih jnanena vaiyasaki-sabditena bheje khagendra-dhvaja-pada-mulam

"O Suta Gosvami, please describe those topics of the Lord by which Maharaja Pariksit, whose intelligence was fixed on liberation, attained the lotus feet of the Lord, who is the shelter of Garuda, the king of birds. Those topics were vibrated by the son of Vyasa (srila sukadeva)."

His final destination is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.19.21):

sarve vayam tavad ihasmahe 'tha kalevaram yavad asau vihaya lokam param virajaskam visokam yasyaty ayam bhagavata-pradhanah

"We shall all wait here until the foremost devotee of the Lord, Maharaja Pariksit, returns to the supreme planet, which is completely free from all mundane contamination and all kinds of lamentation."

In this last verse the word "lokam" refers to a planet not like other planets. Because King Pariksit was very exalted it is said (in srimad-Bhagavatam 1.19.20) of him: bhagavat-parsva-kamah" (he desired to achieve eternal association with the Supreme Personality of Godhead). That is why in this verse it is said of him: "bhagavata-pradhanah" (he is the foremost devotee of the Lord). Although in the beginning the soul may aspire to attain the impersonal Brahman, after he has gradually made progress in spiritual life, he inevitavbly attains at the end the association of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. An example of this may be seen in the story of Ajamila. The two verses quoted in this anuccheda were spoken by a host of sages.

Now, as the previous verses were analyzed, so also will be analyzed this verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.9.44):

sampadyamanan ajnaya bhismam brahmani niskale

"Knowing that Bhismadeva had merged into the unlimited eternity of the Supreme Absolute, all present there became silent like birds at the end of the day."

In this verse the word "niskale" refers to Lord Krsna, who is the humanlike form of the Supreme Brahman, and who is beyond the touch of maya. Here the word sampadyamanam" means "attained the association".

It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (7.7.37):

adhoksajalambam ihasubhatmanah saririnah samsrti-cakra-satanam tad-brahma-nirvana-sukham vidur budhas tato bhajadhvam hrdaye hrdisvaram

"The real problem of life is the repetition of birth and death, which is like a wheel rolling repeatedly up and down. This wheel, however, completely stops when one is in touch with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In other words, by the transcendental bliss realized from constant engagement in devotional service, one is completely liberated from material existence. All learned men know this. Therefore, my dear friends, O sons of the asuras, immediately begin meditating upon and worshiping the Supersoul within everyone's heart."

Here the words "bhajadhvam hrdaye hrdi" mean Please worship the Lord who at this moment resides within your hearts".

This verse was spoken by sri Prahlada to the sons of the asuras.

Anuccheda 55

Here someone may say: "Lord Krsna manifests a limitless number of forms. Therefore when the verse quoted above explains that Bhismadeva attained Lord Krsna's association, this may refer to any one of Lord Krsna's forms."

This idea cannot be accepted, for it is contradicted by these words spoken by Bhismadeva Himself (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.9.33):

vijaya-sakhe ratir astu me 'navadya

"sri Krsna is the intimate friend of Arjuna. He has appeared on this earth in His transcendental body, which resembles the bluish color of the tamala tree. His body attracts everyone in the three planetary systems (upper, middle, and lower). May His glittering yellow dress and His lotus face, covered with paintings of sandalwood pulp, be the object of my attraction, and may I not desire fruitive results."

It may also be said that Maharaja Prthu and Maharaja Pariksit both also attained Lord Krsna as their final destination. It is said that Arci, Maharaja Prthu's wife, also attained the planet of the Supreme Lord, a planet very different from the impersonal liberation attained by meditating on the impersonal Brahman. Her liberation is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (4.23.25-26):

aho iyam vadhur dhanya ya caivam bhu-bhujam patim sarvatmana patim bheje yajnesam srir vadhur iva

"All glories to Queen Arci! We can see that this queen of the great King Prthu, the emperor of all the kings of the world, has served her husband with mind, speech, and body exactly as the goddess of fortune serves the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Yajnesa, or Visnu.

saisa nunam vrajaty urdhvam anu vainyam patim sati pasyatasman atityarcir durvibhavyena karmana

"Just see how this chaste lady, Arci, by dint of her inconceivable pious activities, is still following her husband upward, as far as we can see."

In his commentary srila sridhara Svami explains:

trayo-vimse sa-bharyasya vane nitya-samadhitah vimanam adhiruhyatha vaikuntha-gatir iryate

"In the 32nd Chapter it is said that Maharaja Prthu, accompanied by his wife, went to the forest, became rapt in meditation (samadhi), entered a celestial airplane, and went to the spiritual world of Vaikuntha."

These last two verses were spoken by the demigoddesses amongst themselves.

After many events Bharata Maharaja at last became steady in devotion to the Lord. Without doubt he also attained the most auspicious destination. He is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (5.9.3):

tatrapi. . .bhagavatah karma-bandha-vidhvamsana-sravana-samarana-guna-vivarana-caranaravinda-yugalam manasa vidadhat

"Due to his being specifically gifted with the Lord's mercy. Bharata Maharaja could remember the incidents of his past life. Although he recieved the body of a brahmana, he was still very much afraid of his relatives and friends who were not devotees. He was always very cautious of such association because he feared that he would again fall down. Consequently he manifested himself before the public eye as a madman - dull, blind, and deaf - so that others would not try to talk to him. In this way he saved himself from bad association. Within he was always thinking of the lotus feet of the Lord and chanting the Lord's glories, which save one from the bondage of fruitive reaction. In this way he saved himself from the onslaught of nondevotee associates."

The meaning of this passage is clear. It was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Maharaja Bharata is glorified in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (5.14.44):

yo dustyajan. . .madhudvit-sevanurakta-manasam abhavo 'pi phalguh

"My dear king, the activities of Bharata Maharaja are wonderful. He gave up everything difficult for others to give up. He gave up his kingdom, his wife, and his family. His opulence was so great that even the demigods envied it, yet he gave it up. It was quite befitting a great personality like him to be a great devotee. He could renounce everything because he was so attracted to the beauty, opulence, reputation, knowledge, strength, and renunciation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krsna. Krsna is so attractive that one can give up all desirable things for His sake. Indeed, even liberation is considered insignificant for those whose minds are attracted to the loving service of the Lord."

Anucchedas 59 and 60

In the Visnu Purana and some other scriptures it is said that Maharaja Bharata was a jnani (impersonalist). These passages describe events in a different kalpa. This must be so, for the great devotees are never indifferent to attaining love for the Supreme Lord. How, then, can they be, like the impersonalists, in opposition to that love? The great devotees desire material wealth only if it is helpful for attaining love and devotion to the Lord. That is the exalted nature of the devotees who love the Lord. If the Lord Himself offers wealth to them, then they may accept it. But it is love for the Lord that is their real happiness. If the Lord does not offer wealth to then, then they are not eager to attain it. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.81.20):

adhano 'yam dhanam prapya madyann uccair na mam smaret iti karuniko nunam dhanam me 'bhuri nadadat

"Yet the Lord was so kind to me that He did not give me even a farthing, knowing very well that I am a poverty- stricken man who, if I got some money, might become puffed up and mad after material opulence and forget Him."

It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.81.33):

nunam bataitan mama durbhagasya sasvad daridrasya samrddhi-hetuh maha-vibhuter avalokato 'nyo naivopapadyeta yaduttamasya

"From the beginning of my life I have been extremely poverty-stricken, so what could be the cause of such great and sudden opulence? I do not find any cause other than the all-merciful glance of my friend Lord Krsna, the chief of the Yadu dynasty."

Then it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.81.34):

nanv abruvano disate samaksam. . .

"The Lord is self-sufficient, the husband of the goddess of fortune, and thus He is always full with six opulences. He can understand the mind of His devotee, and He sumptuously fulfills the devotee's desires. All these are acts of my friend, Lord Krsna. My beautiful dark friend Krsna is more liberal than the cloud which can fill up the great ocean with water.

Then it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.81.35):

kincit karoty urv api yat sva-dattam. . .

"When the Lord receives a little thing in love and affection from His devotee, He considers it a great and valuable gift. The vivid example is myself. I simply offered Hima a morsel of chipped rice, and in exchange He has given me opulences greater than the opulence of the king of heaven.

Then it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.81.36):

tasyaiva me sauhrda-sakhya-maitri- dasyam punar janmani janmani syat mahanubhavena gunalayena visajjatas tat-purusa-prasangah

"I pray to have the friendship of Lord Krsna and to engage in His service and to surrender fully unto Him in love and affection, life after life. I do not want any opulence. I only desire not to forget His service. I simply wish to be associated with His pure devotees. May my mind and activities always be engaged in His service."

In this verse the word "sauhrda" means friendship without any ulterior motive", "sakhya" means "friendship of enjoying pastimes together", maitri" means "affection", and dasyam" means service". The words in the first line of this verse are a dvandva-samasa. The word "mahanubhavena" refers to Lord Krsna. The conclusion is that a devotees uses his wealth to serve Lord Krsna. These verses were spoken by sridama Vipra.

Anuccheda 61

In this way it is proved that love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavat-priti) is the ultimate goal of life (parama-purusartha). sri Prahlada describes the nature of that love in these words of the Visnu Purana (1.20.19):

ya pritir avivekanam visayesv anapayini tvam anusmaratah sa me hrdayan napasrpatu

In some ways love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is like love for material sense objects. Still, those two kinds of love are not the same. Later I will explain how they are similar. Although in some ways they are similar, in other ways they are different. The first (love for material sense objects is manifested from the Lord's maya potency. The second (love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead) is manifested from the Lord's internal spiritual potency. The word ppriti" (love) has two meanings. The first meaning is "happiness". In this sense "mut", pramoda", "harsa", "nanda", and other words are synonyms. The second meaning is "love". In this sense "bhava", harda", "sauhrda", and other words are synonyms. Happiness, or pleasure, is s epecific kind of sensation. When the object of sense perception is pleasurable, then one becomes a follower of the pleasure therein, and from that one yearns to attain that pleasure. By perceiving that sense object one comes to experience a specific kind of emotion, the emotion love. That is the difference bewteen pleasure and love. The opposites of pleasure and love are pain and hate. The pleasure attendant on love is percieved by the lover (asraya) but not by the beloved (visaya) who is not also a lover. In the same way the longings and sufferings that come from love are felt by the lover and not by the beloved. When love is thwarted hatred arises. In this way, as a result of his good and evil deeds, the conditioned soul experiences pleasures and sufferings. In this way the soul feels love and hatred, love and hatred that are directed to a person, to the object of love or hatred. Lovers act in a way to please the beloved, but persons who hate act in a way to attack or harm the object of their hate. Therefore it is said that the living entities act as they desire. According to their desire, they act. They act to attain their desire. Actions are of four kinds: 1. utpadya (for creation), 2. vikarya (for transformation), 3. samskarya (for improvement), and 4. prapya (for attainment). Here the verbal root pri", from which the noun "priti" (pleasure or love) comes, is intransitive. It is not transitive. As one may say "He creates a pot" (transitive), or "a pot is born" (intransitive), or "He causes the pot to take birth" (causitive), or as one may say, "He cooks rice" (transitive), or "the rice is plunged in water" (intransitive" or "He causes the rice to be plunged in water" (causative), and as the vers as (to be) and "dip" (to shine) are intransitive, so the ver "pri" (to feel pleasure, or to fall in love) is not transitive, but rather intransitive. It is not possible to consider it transitive. The verb "cint" (to think), and many other verbs like it, are also intransitive. Pleasure and love are spontaneously manifested. In that sense they are like knowledge of the Supreme Brahman, which is also spontaneously manifested, and unlike the knowledge of yajnas and other like rituals, knowledge that means learning a complex series of rules. The word "priti" may mean either "pleasure" or "love". In the words "ya pritir avivekanam" from the Visnu Purana, the latter meaning 9love) is clearly to be accepted. The former meaning (pleasure) should not be accepted here. When the former meaning is accepted, the words "ya pritih" mean "the pleasures found in material sense objects". When the second meaning is accepted, these words mean "falling in love with material sense objects". It is a forced and labored interpetation to say these words mean perceiving the material sense objects". The natural inrterpetation is that these words mean "as one may love his children or other kinsmen and friends, so may I love the Supreme Personality of Godhead". In that way the similarity of these two kinds of love is expressed. The first of these kinds of love (love for kin and friends) lies within the realm of the may.a potency and is explained in these words of Bhagavad-gita (13.6):

"Desire, hatred, happiness, and distress lie within the field of material activities."

In the conclusion of this book we will show how the second kind of love (love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead) lies within the realm of the Lord's internal, spiritual potency. In this way are gracefully explained the words "ya" (as the qualities of this) and sa (so the qualities of that) in this verse of Visnu Purana. The second of these words refers to devotion to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore this verse says: "As others love their parents and other superiors, may I love the Supreme Personality of Godhead". In the first verse (Visnu Purana 1.20.18), he specifically used the word "bhakti" (devotion) and in the second verse (Visnu Purana 1.20.19), he used the word priti" (love). By using two different words he avoided the rhetorical fault of repetition. Still, the words bhakti and priti have, in general, the same meaning. This is confirmed by the words the Supreme Lord employed when He gave His mercy. Then He said (Visnu Purana 1.20.20):

bhaktir mayi tavasty eva bhuyo 'py evam bhavisyati

"May you attain great devotion to Me."

In this way the use of the two words "bhakti" and "priti" is explained. Some texts give the reading "mapa sarpatu" instead of "napasarpatu". If this reading is accepted, then the passage should be interpreted: "O husband of Goddess Laksmi (mapa), may the love for material sense objects (pritih) flee (sarpatu) from my heart (hrdayat)." The noun "bhakti" is derived from the ver bhaj", and the noun "priti" is derived from the verb "pri". The affixes "ktin-pratyaya" and kta- pratyaya" are used here respectively. Therefore, when the noun "priti" is employed, it should be understood to be intransitive in the same way the verb "pri" is intransitive. Here love for material sense objects is given as an example. In the same way one loves material senses objects, the speaker prays that he may love and desire to attain the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In that way the word "priti" is used here. Still, the sweetness of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very different from whatever sweetness may exist in material sense objects. That those two kinds of sweetness are very different is confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.2.43):

bhaktir viraktir bhagavat-prabodhah

"By worshiping the Lord one gradually attains renunciation, knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and devotion to Him."

Bhakti (devotion to the Lord) is glorified in these words of Bhagavad-gita (11.54):

bhaktya tv ananyaya sakya aham evam-vidho 'rjuna jnatum drastum ca tattvena pravestum ca parantapa

"My dear Arjuna, only by undivided devotional service can I be known as I am, standing before you, and can thus be seen directly. Only in this way can you enter into the secrets of My understanding."

Bhakti is again glorified in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (3.25.32):

devanam guna-linganam anusravika-karmanam sattva evaika-manaso vrttih svabhaviki tu ya animitta bhagavati bhaktih siddher gariyasi

"The senses are symbolic representations of the demigods, and their natural inclination is to work under the direction of the Vedic injunctions. As the senses are representatives of the dmeigods, so the mind is the representative of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The mind's natural duty is to serve. When the service spirit is engaged in devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, without any motive, that is far better than salvation."

It is again glorified in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.25):

"In the association of pure devotees, discussion of the pastimes and activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very pleasing and satisfying to the ear and the heart. By cultivating such knowledge one gradually becomes advanced on the path of liberation, and thereafter he is freed and his attraction becomes fixed. Then real devotion and devotional service begin."

Although rati (attraction) and bhakti (devotion) are but stages in the development of priti (love), the word [bhakti" employed in this verse is "prema-bhakti", or bhakti where the deepest priti (love) is present. In that way the word bhakti" is employed in this verse. The words of srimad-Bhagavatam 3.25.32 quoted above may be defined in the following ways. "Guna-linganam" means "with the qualities of the material modes", anusravika" means "following the sruti-sastra, the Puranas, anD other scriptures", "karma" means the actions of the persons thus described", devanam" means "of sri Visnu, Brahma, and siva", and "sattve" means "Lord Visnu, or the one amongst these demigods who helps the manifestation of the mode of goodness and who by His internal potency manifests the mode of pure goodness". That is the nature of Lord Visnu. In the Supreme Lord's limitless manifestations this nature is always present. That is the meaning. The word "eva" (indeed) means "it is not otherwise, either in this place or any other place". Eka-manasah" means "of a person whose attention is undivided", "vrttih" means "the inclination", "animitta" means "without the desire for results", "svabhaviki" means "spontaneous attraction to the Lord's handsomeness, not an artificial attempt by force", and "bhagavati bhaktih" means "love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead". That is the meaning. In this weay it is seen that loving devotional service is spontaneous and natural (svabhaviki). Therefore the primary meaning of the word "vrttih" here is "the inclination to love (priti) the Lord". "Siddher gariyasi" means "that love is far better than salvation." That truth is confirmed by the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.29.13):

salokya-sarsti. . .

"A pure devotee does not accept any kind of liberation - salokya, sarsti, samipya, sarupya, or ekatva - even though they are offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

The word "siddheh" here means "impersonal knowledge. In this way love for the Lord completely eclipses the liberation attained by impersonal knowledge. Because it is much better than mere liberation, the inclination (vrttih) to love the Lord is beyond the modes of material nature. It is filled with intense spireitual bliss. The Lord very mercifully places it in the devotee's heart. In this way the nature of the inclination to love the Lord is revealed. The previously quoted verse from srimad-Bhagavatam (3.29.13) was spoken by Lord Kapiladeva.

Here we will again attempt to show that love for the Supreme Lord is beyond the modes of material nature. Knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the happiness that comes from that knowledge are beyond the modes of material nature. This the Supreme Lord Himself reveals in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (11.25.24 and 29):

kaivalyam sattvikam jnanam rajo vaikalpikam ca yat prakrtam tamasam jnanam man-nistham nirgunam smrtam

"Knowledge of impersonal liberation is in the mode of goodness. Knowledge of the bewildering labyrinth of philosophical speculations is in the mode of passion. Knowledge closely tied to the world of gross matter is in the mode of ignorance. Knowledge based on faith in Me is beyond the touch of the three material modes."

sattvikam sukham atmottham visayottham tu rajasam tamasam moha-dainyottham nirgunam mad-apasrayam

"Happiness that comes from one's original spiritual identity is in the mode of goodness. Happiness that comes from material sense objects is in the mode of passion. Happiness that comes from degraded activities and illusions is in the mode of ignorance. Happiness that comes from taking shelter of Me is beyond the touch of the three material modes."

In the story of sri Prahlada it is seen that after he understood Brahman, an understanding that destroyed all past sins, great love (parama-prema) for the Lord arose within him.That spontaneous and unmotivated love for the Lord is beyond the modes of material nature is proved in these words of Lord Kapiladeva (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.29.11-12):

"The manifestation of unadulterated devotional service is exhibited when one's mind is at once attracted to hearing the transcendental name and qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is residing in everyone's heart. just as the water of the Ganges flows naturally down towards the ocean, such devotional ecstasy, uninterrupted by any material condition, flows towards trhe Supreme Lord."

After speaking these words, Lord Kapiladeva said (srimad- Bhagavatam 3.29.13):

salokya. . .

"A pure devotee does not accept any kind of liberation - salokya, sarsti, samipya, sarupya, or ekatva - even though they are offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In this verse and the verses that follow it He revealed that love for the Supreme Lord is full of spiritual bliss. In other verses it is proved that love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the highest goal of life. This is explained in the following quotes. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (5.19.19-20):

yatha-varna-vidhanam. . .

"If one's position is ascertained by a bona fide spiritual master and one is properly trained to engage in the service of Lord Visnu according to the four social divisions (brahmana, ksatriya, vaisya, and sudra) and the four spiritual dividisons (brahmacari, grhastha, vanaprastha, and sannyasa) one's life becomes perfect. "After many, many births, when the results of one's pious activities become mature, one gets an opportunity to associate with pure devotees. Then one is able to cut the knot of bondage to ignorance, which bound him because of varied fruitive activities. As a result of associating with devotees, one gradually renders service to Lord Vasudeva, who is transcendental, free from attachment to the material world, beyond the mind and words, and independent of everything else. That bhakti-yoga, devotional service ot Lord Vasudeva, is the real path of liberation."

In this way it is revealed that devotional service is eternal and beyond the material modes. It is the true path of liberation. That devotional service, which is attained by the special mercy of the Lord, is superior to liberation is seen in this and the following three quotations from srimad-Bhagavatam. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (5.6.18):

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (4.20.23):

varan vibho. . .katham vrnite guna-vikriyatmanam

"My dera Lord, You are the best of the demigods who can offer benedictions. Why, therefore, should any learned person ask You for benedictions meant for living entities bewildered by the modes of nature? Such benedictions are available automatically, even in the lives of living entities suffering in hellish conditions. My dear Lord, You can certainly bestow merging into Your existence, but I do not wish to have such a benediction."

Here it is implied that devotional service is eternal and beyond the modes of material nature.

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (4.20.24):

na kamaye natha. . .

"My dear Lord, I therefore do not wish to have the benediction of merging into Your existence, a benediction where there is no existence of the nectarean beverage of Your lotus feet. I want the benediction of at least one million ears, for thus I may be able to hear about the glories of Your lotus feet from the mouths of Your pure devotees."

In this verse it is seen that devotional service is filled with intense bliss.

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.7.7):

yasyam vai sruyamanayam. . .

"Simply by giving aural recprtion to this Vedic literature, the feeling for loving service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead sprouts up at once to extinguish the fire of lamentation, illusion, and fearfulness."

In these three verses it is seen that srimad-Bhagavatam describes the highest goal of life. Simply by hearing of the self-realized sages who take pleasure in the spiritual self one becomes firmly fixed in devotional service. What, then, need be said of the result obtained by hearing of the Supreme Lord's personal associates in the spiritual world of Vaikuntha, which is beyond the world of maya? The nature of the devotees is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (7.6.25):

tuste ca tatra. . . kim tair guna-vyatikarad iha ye sva-siddhah dharmadayah. . .

"Nothing is unobtainable for devotees who have satisfied the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the cause of all causes, the original source of everything. The Lord is the reservoir of unlimited spiritual qualities. For devotees, therefore, who are transcendental to the modes of material nature, what is the use of following the principles of religion, economic development, sense gratification, and liberation, which are all automatically obtainable under the influence of the modes of nature? We devotees always glorify the lotus feet of the Lord, and therefore we need not ask for anything in terms of dharma, artha, kama, and moksa."

In these words it is seen that devotional service is beyond the touch of the modes of material nature. In this verse the words "kim agunena ca kanksitena" (What is the use of liberation?) show that devotional service brings a bliss far superior to any bliss found in impersonal liberation.

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (7.8.42):

pratyanitah. . .

"O Supreme Lord, You are our deliverer and protector. Our sahres of sacrifices, which are actually Yours, have been recovered from the demon by You. Because the demoniac king Hiranyakasipu was most fearsome, our hearts, which are Your permenant abode, were all overtaken by him. Now, by Your presence, the gloom and darkness in our hearts have been dissipated. O Lord, for those who always engage in Your service, which is more exalted than liberation, all material opulence is insignificant. They do not care for even liberation, not to speak of the benefits of kama, artha, and dharma."

In this verse it is said that devotional seervice is more blissful than imeprsonal liberation, which rests in the grip of material time, or anything else held in time's grip.

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.48):

natyantikam viganayanti. . .

"Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of other less important benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom."

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (9.4.67):

mat-sevaya pratitam te. . .

"My devotees, who are always satisfied to be engaged in My loving service, are not interested even in the four principles of liberation (salokya, sarupya, samipya, and sarsti), although these are automatically achieved by their service. What then is to be said of such perishable happiness as elevation to the higher planetary systems?"

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (4.9.10):

ya nirvrtis tanu-bhrtam. . .

"My Lord, the transcendental bliss derived from meditating upon Your lotus feet or heariong about Your glories from pure devotees is so unlimited that it is far beyond the stage of brahmananda, wherein one thinks himself merged in the impersonal Brahman or one with the Supreme. Since brahmananda is also defeated by the transcendental bliss derived from devotional service, thennwhat to speak of the temporary blissfulness of elevating oneself to the heavenly planets, which is ended by the separating sword of time? Although one may be elevated to the heavenly planets, he falls down in due course of time."

This last verse was spoken by Dhruva Maharaja. That devotional service contains everythiong valuable is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.6.17):

"Devotees always bathe themselves in devotional service in order to be relieved from the various tribulations of material existence. By doing this, the devotees enjoy supreme bliss, and liberation personified comes to serve them. Nonetheless, they do not accept that service, even if it is offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. For the devotees liberation (mukti) is very unimportant because, having attained the Lord's transcendental loving service, they have attained everything desirable and have transcended all material desires."

Hhere the words "taya paraya nirvrtya" also affirm that the bliss of devotional service is far greater than any bliss found in impersonal liberation. What more need be said? Love (priti) for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose form is full of transcendental bliss and who is Himself the resting place of great bliss, is filled with wonderful bliss. The blissful nature of the Supreme Lord is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.15.13):

pritah svayam pritim agad gayasya

"When the Supremew Lord is pleased by a person's actions, automatically all the demigods, human beings, animals, birds, bees, creepers, trees, grass, and all other living entities beginning with Lord Brahma are pleased. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is the Supersoul of everyone, and He is by nature fully pleased. Nonetheless, He came to the arena of Maharaja Gaya and said: `I am fully pleased.' "

The Supreme Personality of Godhead describes His own nature in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.4.63):

aham bhakta-paradhino hy asvatantra iva dvija sadhubhir grasta-hrdayo bhaktair bhakta-jana-priyah

"I am completely under the contyrol of My devotees. Indeed, I am not at all independent. Because My devotees are completely devoid of material desires, I sit only within the cores of their hearts. What to speak of My devotee, even those who are devotees of My devotee are very dear to Me."

Here the Supreme Personality of Godhead says: "as the individual spirit souls are dependent on others (hy asvatantrah), so am I dependent on My devotees (aham bhakta-paradhinah)". Then the Lord tells the reason He is dependent: "My heart (hrdayah) is conquered (grasta) by the devotion of saintly devotees (sadhubhih) who are free of any kind of deception, culminating in the deception called impersonal liberation." Then He tells the reason He is conquered: "I am delighted to receive their love (bhakta-janesu priyah)."

Anuccheda 63

The Supreme Personality of Godhead's bliss is of two kinds: 1. the bliss that is part of His nature (svarupananda), and 2. the bliss that comes from His internal potency (svarupa-sakty- ananda). The second of these is again divided into two kinds: 1. the bliss of the heart (manasananda) and 2. the bliss of the Lord's power and opulence (aisvaryananda). Manasananda is the kingdom of bliss the Lord feels in His heart because of the devotional service offered by His devotees. The relation between this bliss and the two blisses svarupananda and aisvaryananda is described in the following two verses of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.4.64-65):

naham atmanam asase mad-bhaktaih sadhubhir vina sriyam catyantikim brahman yesam gatir aham para

"O best of the brahmanas, without saintly persons for whom I am the only destination, I do not desire to enjoy My transcendental bliss and My supreme opulences. "Since pure devotees give up their homes, wives, children, relatives, riches, and even their lives simply to serve Me, without any desire for material improvement in this life or in the next, how can I give up such devotees at any time?"

Here the words "nasase" mean "I do not desire". This verse was spoken by Lord Visnu to Durvasa Muni.

Anuccheda 64

That the devotees are the best of all persons is confirmed by these words spoken by Lord Krsna to Uddhava (srimad-Bhagavatam 11.14.15):

na tatha me priyatama atma-yonir na sankarah na ca sankarsano na srir naivatma ca yatha bhavan

"My dear Uddhava, neither Brahma, siva, Sankarsana, Laksmi-devi, nor My own self are as dear to Me as you."

In this verse Lord Krsna says: "My dear Uddhava, because you are My devotee you are very dear to Me (yatha me priyatamah). Brahma is not more dear merely because he is M<y son. Nor is Siva more dear merely because hew is a guna-avatara. Nor is Sankarsana more dear because He is My brother. Nor is Laksmi-devi more dear because she is My wife. Nor is My own self more dear because I am filled with intense transcendental bliss."

This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

In the sruti-sastra it is said:

bhaktir evaitam nayati. bhaktir evaitam darsayati. bhakti- vasah puruso bhaktir eva bhuyasi.

"Devotional service leads one to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Devotional service enables one to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is conquered by devotional service. Devotional service is more powerful than the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

From this it may be understood that devotional service makes the Supreme Personality of Godhead wild with bliss. What is the nature of devotional service? Devotional service is not like the joy of the material mode of goodness measurede by the sankhya philosophers, for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is always self-satisfied and the sruti-sastras affirm that He is never conquered by His maya potency. Devotional service is not like the joy of the impersonal Brahman known by the impersonalists, for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very different from the false idea the impersonalists have of Him. Devotional service is not like the happinesses felt by the conditioned souls, for those happinesses are very small and pathetic. It is said in the Visnu Purana (1.12.69):

"O Lord, You are the support of everything. The three attributes hladini, sandhini, and samvit exist in You as one spiritual energy. But the material modes, which cause happiness, misery, and mixtures of the two, do not exist in You, for You have no material qualities."

This passage of Visnu Purana affirms that the potency named hladini is the internal potency (svarupa-sakti) that brings bliss to the Lord. It is by the agency of this potency that the Lord feels bliss. It is by the agency of this potency that the Lord gives bliss to others. Here someone may say: "I doubt that devotion to the Supreme Personality of Godhead is always most glorious and blissful." To answer this doubt much evidence (pramana) from scripture (sruty-artha), negative inference (anyathanupapatti), and inference (arthapatti) may be given, evidence clearly proving that love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavat-priti) brings to the devotees the greatest bliss, bliss brought by the hladini sakti (pleasure potency of the Lord). Seeing the devotees' devotion, the Supreme Lord also feels great priti (love) for the devotees. In this way the Lord and the devotees feel blissful love for each other. The Supreme Lord Hismelf describes this in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.4.38):

"The pure devotee is always within the core of My heart, and I am always in the heart of the pure devotee. My devotees do not know anything else but Me, and I do not know anything else but them."

In this verse the word "mahyam" means "of Me". The Lord and the devotee both feel the same emotion of love. They have become equal in love. The seed of this truth is revealed here in the words beginning with "mad-anyat". As an iron rod placed into a fire becomes like fire, in the same way the devotee becomes like the Supreme Lord. In this sense the devotee is not different from the Lord. That is the meaning. The srimad-Bhagavatam verse quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by Lord Vissnu to Durvasa Muni.

The Lord is conquered by the devotee and the devotee is conquered by the Lord. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.16.34):

ajita jita sama-matibhih sadhubhir bhavan jitatmabhir bhavata vijitas te 'pi ca bhajatam akamatmanam ya atma-do 'ti-karunah

"O unconquerable Lord, although You cannot be conquered by anyone, You are certainly conquered by devotees who have control of the mind and senses. They can keep You under their control because You are causelessly merciful to devotees who desire no material profit from You. Indeed, You give Yourself to them, and because of this You have full control over Your devotees."

sridhara Svami comments on this verse:

"In this verse the word `ajita' means `O Lord who are never conquered by anyone', `bhavan sadhubhir jitah' means `Even though You are supremely independent, You are conquered by Your devotees'. This is so because `bhavan ati- karunah' (You are very merciful). Here it is said: `Although the devotees (te 'pi) do not desire to attain anything from You, they are still conquered (vijitah) by You (bhavata). To the devotees who have no material motive (akamatmanam) You give Yourself.' "

With His own graceful mouth the Supreme Lord spoke these words to Prahlada Maharaja (Hari-bhakti-sudhodaya 14.27-30):

sabhayam sambhramam vatsa mad-gaurava-krtam tyaja naisa priyo me bhaktesu svadhina-pranayi bhava

"Child, please renounce this awe and veneration. I do not like those things in My devotees. Show your love for Me spontaneously, as you wish.

api me purna-kamasya navam navam idam priyam nihsanka-pranayad bhakto yan mam pasyati bhasate

"Although My every desire is always fulfilled, My devotee's love brings Me newer and newer pleasure. Because of his unwavering love, a devotee may see Me and converse with Me.

sada mukto 'pi baddho 'smi bhaktesu sneha-rajjubhih ajito 'pi jito 'ham tair avasyo 'pi vasi-krtah

"Although I am always unbound, I am bound to My devotees with ropes of love. Although I am unconquered, i am conquered by My devotees. Although I am supremely independent, I am controlled by them.

tyakta-bandhu-jana-sneho mayi yah kurute ratim ekas tasyasmi sa ca me na canyo 'sty avayoh suhrt

"If someone renounces all love for his friends and kin and loves only Me, then I become his property. He and I are affectionate friends. No one else is a friend like him."

From this it may be said that love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavat-priti) is not within the realm of the illusory potency maya. Here someone may ask: Then what is that love?" The answer is given: That love is manifest from the bliss of the Lord's internal spiritual potency. Indeed, the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself is conquered by that spiritual bliss of His internal potency. This is described in the following words of sri Gopala-tapani Upanisad (1.17):

vijnana-ghana ananda-ghanah sac-cid-anandaika-rase bhakti-yoge tisthati

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is full of spiritual knowledge and bliss, is manifest when devotional service, which is itself filled with the nectar of spiritual knowledge and bliss, is performed."

The srimad-Bhagavatam quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Maharaja Citraketu to Lord Sankarsana.

In this way the primary characteristics of loving devotion to the Lord are described. The secondary characteristics (external symptoms) of that devotion are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.3.31):

smaratah smarayantas ca mitho 'ghaugha-haram harim bhaktya sanjataya bhaktya bibhraty utpulakam tanum

"With great devotion meditating on and reminding each other of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who washes away a flood of sins, the devotees find the hairs of their bodies stand erect in the ecstasy of devotion that awakens within them."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by sri Prabuddha to Maharaja Nimi.

The secondary characteristics of devotion are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.14.23):

katham vina roma-harsam dravata cetasa vina vinanandasru-kalaya sudhyed bhaktya vinasayah

"Without standing up of the body's hairs, without a melting heart, without tears of bliss, and without devotion how can the heart become purified?"

In his commentary srila sridhara Svami explains:

"This verse means: `How can anyone attain devotional service without manifesting standing up of the body's hairs and other symptoms of ecstasy?' The verse continues: `Without devotion how can the heart become purified?' "

This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 69

In the verses quoted above it was said that melting of the heart, standing up of the body's hairs, and other symptoms are the symptoms of love (priti) for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. If somehopw the heart does not melt and the ecstatic symptoms beginning with standing up of the body's hairs are not manifest, then it should be known that the heart is not yet completely purified and pure devotion is not yet fully manifested. The heart is purified when all material desires are rejected and love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the heart's only goal. This state is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.32):

animitta svabhaviki ca. . .

"When the service spirit is engaged in devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, without any motive, that is far better than salvation."

It is also described in this description of Akrura (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.38.27):

deham-bhrtam iyan artho hitva dambham bhiyam sucam sandesad yo harer linga-darsana-sravanadibhih

"The very goal of life for all embodied beings is this ecstasy, which Akrura experienced when, upon receiving Kamsa's order, he put aside all pride, fear and lamentation and absorbed himself in seeing, hearing and describing the things that reminded him of Lord Krsna."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"Here someone may ask: ` Why did Akrura roll about on the ground? Rolling on the ground is not the result that comes from attaining pure love for the Supreme Lord?' This verse is spoken to answer that doubt. Tbe true goal of life for all embodied beings is the attainment of the ecstasy manifest here by Akrura. Here it is said of Akrura: `Upon receiving Kamsa's order, he absorbed himself in seeing, hearing and describing the things that reminded him of Lord Krsna.' "

It is also said in this verse: "Akrura put aside all pride, fear and lamentation." That he was not proud is seen in these words spoken by Akrura (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.38.18):

na mayy upaisyaty ari-buddhim acyutah. . .

"The infallible Lord will not consider me an enemy, even though Kamsa has sent me here as his messenger. After all, the omniscient Lord is the actual knower of the field of this material body, and with His perfect vision He witnesses, both externally and internally, all the endeavors of the conditioned soul's heart."

If the heart is filled with spiritual bliss, then pride cannot enter it. Therefore Akrura was free of pride. Also, Akrura knew that Lord Krsna had descended to the earth to rescue His family members from Kamsa's harassments. Knowing this, Akrura became free from fear and lamentation. For these reasons Akrura was overcome with spiritual bliss, bliss described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.38.26):

tad-darsanahlada-vivrddha-sambhramah premnordhva-romasru-kalakuleksanah rathad avaskandya sa tesv acestata prabhor amuny anghri-rajamsy aho iti

"Increasingly agitated by ecstasy at seeing the Lord's footprints, his bodily hairs standing on end because of his pure love, and his eyes filled with tears, Akrura jumped down from his chariot and began rolling about among those footprints, exclaiming, `Ah, this is the dust from my master's feet!' "

This incident is also described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (3.1.32):

prema-vibhinna-dhairyah. . .

"Akrura once lost his mental equilibrium due to his ecstasy of transcendental love and fell down on the dust of a road which was marked with the footprints of Lord Krsna."

Even if his sufferings had not been dispelled, Akrura still would have been overcoem with ecstasy by seeing the Lord's footprints. That ecstasy, as explained in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.38.27) is the true goal of life. What attainment is greater than that ecstasy of spiritual love? srimad-Bhagavatam 10.38.27, quoted in this anuccheda, was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Some examples of pure love (suddha-priti) are given by the Lord in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.17-18):

mitho bhajanti ye sakhyah svarthaikantodyama hi te na tatra sauhrdam dharmah svarthartham tad dhi nanyatha

"So-called friends who show affection for cach other only to benefit themselves are actually selfish. They have no true friendship, nor are they following the true principles of religion. Indeed, if they did not expect benefit for themselves, they would not reciprocate.

bhajanty abhajato ye vai karunah pitarau yatha dharmo nirapavado 'tra sauhrcj.am ca su-madhyamah

"My dear slender-waisted gopis, some people are genuinely merciful or, like parents, naturally affectionate. Such persons, who devotedly serve even those who fail to reciprocate with them, are following the true, faultless path of religion, and they are true well-wishers."

The meaning of these verses is clear.

Anuccheda 71

A love even better that that described in the previously quoted two verses is described by Lord Krsna in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.20):

naham tu sakhyo bhajato 'pijantun bhajamy amisam anuvrtti-vrttaye yathadhano labdha-dhane vinaste tac-cintayayan nibhrto na veda

"But the reason I do not immediately reciprocate the affection of living beings even when they worship Me, O gopis, is that I want to intensify their loving devotion. They then become like a poor man who has gained some wealth and then lost it, and who thus becomes so anxious about it that he can think of nothing else."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.32.18 (quoted in anuccheda 70) the words "bhajaty abhajatah" describe the situation where persons remain compassionate even when the person who is the object of the compassion is ungrateful. In the same way one may love (priti) an ungrateful person who does not love in return. Lord Krsna tries to make this kind of selfless love arise within His devotees. When they associate with Lord Krsna, the devotees feel very wonderful love for Him. However, when Lord Krsna ignores the devotees, the devotees' love for Him increases.

The srimad-Bhagavatam verse quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to the goddesses of Vraja.

The pure devotional love (suddha priti) of sriman Vrtrasura is seen in the following verses of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.11.24-27):

aham hare tava padaika-mula- dasanudaso bhavitasmi bhuyah manah smaretasu-pater gunams te grnita vak karma karotu kayah

"O my Lord, O Supreme Personality of Godhead, will I again be able to be a servant of Your eternal servants who find shelter only at Your lotus feet? O Lord of my life, may I again become their servant so that my mind may always think of Your transcendental attributes, my words always glorify those attributes, and my body always engage in the loving service of Your Lordship?

"O my Lord, source of all opportunities, I do not desire to enjoy in Dhruvaloka, the heavenly planets or the planet where Lord Brahma resides, nor do I want to be the supreme ruler of all the earthly planets or the lower planetary systems. I do not desire to be master of the powers of mystic yoga, nor do I want liberation if I have to give up Your lotus feet.

ajata-paksa iva mataram khagah stanyam yatha vatsatarah ksudh-artah priyam priyeva vyusitam visanna mano'ravindaksa didrksate tvam

"O lotus-eyed Lord, as baby birds that have not yet developed their wings always look for their mother to return and feed them, as small calves tied with ropes await anxiously the time of milking, when they will be allowed to drink the milk of their mothers, or as a morose wife whose husband is away from home always longs for him to return and satisfy her in all respects, I always yearn for the opportunity to render direct service unto You.

mamottamasloka-janesu sakhyam samsara-cakre bhramatah sva-karmabhih tvan-mayayatmatmaja-dara-gehesv asakta-cittasya na natha bhuyat

"O my Lord, my master, I am wandering throughout this material world as a result of my fruitive activities. Therefore I simply seek friendship in the association of Your pious and enlightened devotees. My attachment to my body, wife, children and home is continuing by the spell of Your external energy, but I wish to be attached to them no longer. Let my mind, my consciousness and everything I have be attached only to You."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 6.11.26 the word "ajata- paksah" means "baby birds whose wings are still undeveloped, and who thus have no power to fly and are not independent." These baby birds take shelter of their mother (mataram), and their mother is very merciful to them. It is seen that baby birds have great love (priti) for their mothers. With the same kind of love Vrtrasura here yerans to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In this example the baby birds are noursihed by the mother. By her their lives are maintained. By her they are made happy. However, if the reader is displeased with this example and has no faith in it, then the speaker of this verse gives another example, an example that begins with the word "stanyam". This is the example of the calf who yearns to attain its mother's udder (stanyam). The word stanyam" here means "udder", a particular part of a cow's body. By the mother cow's udder the calf is nourished and delighted. This example is better than the preceding example of the birds. Tied up by the human master, the small calf cannot approach its mother's udder. Therefore for a long time the calf is troubled by hunger (ksudharta). This example is btter than the previous one, for in a cow's body there is a greater oppurtunity to manifest affection. However, if one feels the example of the cow and calf and the example of the baby bird and its mother are too different in cause and effect from the relationship of the devotee and the Supreme Lord, then another examplke is given in this verse, an example that begins with the word "priyam". Here the example is given of two steadfast lovers whose love never changes, who love each other in youth, in old age, and up to the moment of death. In this example the morose (visanna) wife (priya) longs to see (didrksate) her beloved husband (priyam) who is away from home (vyusitam). Here Vrtrasura says: "As she longs to see her husband with her own eyes, so my heart longs to see You." In the first two parts of this analogy the baby bird and the calf are themselves the agent that performs the action. However in the last part of the analogy it is not Vrtrasura himself, but rather his heart that performs the action. The analogy here is of the variety called "ullekha". In this way the unchanging love of Vrtrasura's heart is described. He wishes that his heart may become like a bumblebee drawn to the sweetness of the lotus-eyed Supreme Lord. By this ullekha anaolgy is described the devotee's being maintained by the Lord and the devotee's finding happiness in the Lord. Thinking the good fortune of directly seeing the Supreme Lord is an impossible attainment for him, Vrtrasura, his eyes filled with tears, speaks the prayer in srimad-Bhagavatam 6.11.27. Becuase it is filled with these extraordinary prayers of pure spiritual love (prema), the description of Vrtrasura's death is included in srimad-Bhagavatam and other Puranas also. In the Matsya Purana it is said:

vrtrasura-vadhopetam tad bhagavatam isyate

"srimad-Bhagavatam contains the glorious description of Vrtrasura's death."

The srimad-Bhagavatam verses quoted in this anuccheda were spoken by sri Vrtrasura.

Anuccheda 73

In this way the supremely sweet perfection of pure spiritual love (priti) has been described. Now the nature of incomplete spiritual love (priter asamyag-avirbhava) will be described. Incomplete spiritual love is of two kinds: 1. the reflection of love (tad-abhasodaya) and 2. the partial manifestation of love (isad-udgama). The second of these is also of two kinds: 1. the ocassional partial manifestation of love (kadacid udbhava-tuccha-vimatratvam) and 2. the first manifestation of love (tad-udayavastha). When one has some other intention, but spiritual love is sometimes manifest, that is the reflection of love (tad-abhasodaya). When one specifically does not desire spiritual love at all and that love is manifest, that is the ocassional partial manifestation of love (kadacid udbhava- tuccha-vimatratvam). When, by destiny, one desires spiritual love alone and nothing else, that is the first manifestation of love (tad-udayavastha). The lack of desires for anything else is a secondary feature of that spiritual love. That lack of material desire is of two kinds: 1. when material desires are almost completely destroyed (nasta-prayatvam) and 2. when material desires are present only as a reflection (tad-abhasa- matratvam). Of these two the first is present in the first manifestation of spiritual love (prathamodayavastha) and the second is present when spiritual love is fully manifest (prakatodayavastha). In the first manifestation of spiritual love (prathamodayavastha), that love is manifest incompletely. In the full manifestation of spiritual love (prakatodayavastha), that love is manifest completely. When there is no longer any contact with material desire the manifestation is called "tad-darsita-prabhava" (the glory is revealed). From the first moment when spiritual love is completely manifest (prakatodayavastha), the devotee is completely liberated even while living in the material world (jivan-mukta). The devotees who attain the highest stage of liberation (parama-mukta) become personal associates of the Supreme Lord (bhagavat-parsada). Thus the eternally liberated (nitya-mukta) devotees are eternal associates of the Supreme Lord (nitya-parsada). The stage when material desires are present only as a reflection (tad-abhasa-matratvam) is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.28.34):

evam harau bhagavati pratilabdha-bhavo bhaktya dravad-dhrdaya utpulakah pramodat autkanthya-baspa-kalaya muhur ardyamanas tac capi citta-badisam sanakair viyunkte

"By following this course, the yogi gradually develops pure love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari. In the course of his progress in devotional service, the hairs on his body stand erect through excessive joy, and he is constantly bathed in a stream of tears occasioned by intense love. Gradually, even the mind, which he used as a means to attract the Lord, as one attracts a fish to a hook, withdraws from material activity."

In this verse the words "evam harau pratilabdha- bhavah" mean "by following the previously desrcibed practice of devotional seervice mixed with yoga (yoga-misra- bhakti) one attaisn love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead". The signs that this love is present are described in the passage beginning with the word "bhaktya". "Bhaktya" here means "the activities of devotional service, which begin with hearing about the Supreme Lord". Then the verse explains: "By tasting ythe sweetness of the Lord as one meditates on him, one's mind gradually withdraws from material activity (cittam sanakair viyunkte)". In this way, by practicing yoga, one becomes fixed in devotional service. Then one becomes free from the deception that is impersonal so-called liberation. That freedom from the fallacy of impersonalist philosophy is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.1.2):

"Completely rejecting all religious activities which are materially motivated, this Bhagavata Purana propounds the highest truth, which is understandable by those devotees who are fully pure in heart. The highest truth is reality distinguished from illusion for the welfare of all. Such truth uproots the threefold miseries. This beautiful Bhagavatam, compiled by the great sage Vyasadeva [in his maturity], is sufficient in itself for God realization. What is the need of any other scripture? As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhagavatam, by this culture of knowledge the Supreme Lord is established within his heart."

In these words the prefix "pra" in the word projjhita" refers to the desception that is impersonalist philosophy. In srimad-Bhagavatam 3.28.34 the word badisa" (fishhook) refers to the manifestation of harshness, dryness, crookedness, pride, and selfishness. The pure devotees (suddha-bhakta) never abandon their meditation on the Lord. This truth is confirmed by Maharaja Pariksit in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (2.8.5):

dhautatma purusah krsna- pada-mulam na muncati mukta-sama-pariklesah panthah sva-saranam yatha

"A pure devotee of the Lord whose heart has once been cleansed by the process of devotional service never relinquishes the lotus feet of Lord Krsna, for they fully satisfy him, as a traveler is satisfied at home after a troubled journey."

This truth is also confirmed by sri Narada in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.5.19):

"My dear Vyasa, even though a devotee of Lord Krsna sometimes falls down somehow or other, he certainly does not undergo material existence like others (fruitive workers etc.) becauase a person who has once relished the taste of the lotus feet of the Lord can do nothing but remember that ecstasy again and again."

This verse affirms that a person who has once tasted the nectar (rasa-grahah) of serving Lord Krsna can never abandon the nectar of that service. To him everything else is like iron or rocks or other hard and dry things. The Supreme Lord will not abandon His devotee either. These truths are confirmed by the demigod Brahma in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.9.5):

bhaktya grhita-caranah paraya ca tesam napaisi natha hrdayamburuhat sva-pumsam

"O my Lord, persons who smell the aroma of Your lotus feet, carried by the air of Vedic sound through the holes of the ears, accept Your devotional service. For them You are never separated from the lotus of their hearts."

This truth is also described by sri Avirhotra in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.2.55):

visrjati hrdayam na yasya saksat. . .

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead never leaves the heart of His devotee."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 3.9.5, in the word "sva- pumsam" (of His own devotees), the prefix "sva" (own) modifies the word "pumsam". The stage when material desires are present only as a reflection (tad-abhasa) is described by Lord Kapiladeva in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.26):

bhaktya puman jata-viragah. . .

"Thus consciously engaged in devotional service in the association of devotees, a person gains distaste for sense gratification, both in this world and in the next, by constantly thinking about the activities of the Lord. This process of Krsna consciousness is the easiest process of mystic power: when one is actually situated on that path of devotional service, he is able to control the mind."

The devotee described in this verse is also described in the previous verse of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.25):

sraddha ratir bhaktir anukramisyati

"In the association of pure devotees, discussion of the pastimes and activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is very pleasing and satisfying to the ear and the heart. By cultivating such knowledge one gradually becomes advanced on the path of liberation, and thereafter he is freed, and his attraction becomes fixed. Then real devotion and devotional service begin."

These verses describe devotional service. They do not describe anything else. In answer to a question about the characteristics of devotional service, Lord Kapiladeva spoke these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.25.32):

bhaktih siddher gariyasi>3

"When that service spirit is engaged in devotional service to the Personality of Godhead, without any motive, that is far better even than salvation."

The devotees never desire to attain impersonal liberation. This is among the devotees' most important characteristics. This Lord Kapiladeva affirms in the following verse of srimad- Bhagavatam (3.25.34):

naikatmatam me sprhayanti kecit. . .

Lord Kapila also explained (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.35.33):

"Bhakti, devotional service, dissolves the subtle body of the living entity without separate effort, just as fire in the stomach digests all that we eat."

Devotional service thus destroys the subtle body composed of maya. This destruction is a by-product of devotional service. In srimad-Bhagavatam 3.25.26 it was seen that, with the help of transcendental knowledge and other attainments, devotional service grants liberation. This is merely one of the by-products of devotional service. In that verse the reflection of devotional service (bhakty-abhasa) was described. It is again described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.9.29):

drstva tam avanau sarva iksana-hlada-viklavah dandavat patita rajan chanair utthaya tustuvuh

"Surrounding and serving the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Narayana, were sixteen personal attendants, decorated with ornaments and appearing exactly like Him but without the mark of srivatsa and the Kaustubha jewel. O King, when all the demigods saw the Supreme Lord in that posture, smiling with eyes like the petals of lotuses grown in autumn, they were overwhelmed with happiness and immediately fell down like rods, offering dandavats. Then they slowly rose and pleased the Lord by offering Him prayers."

The demigods mentioned in this verse, demigods who yearned to regain their kingdoms by killing Vrtrasura, manifested the reflection of devotional service (bhakty-abhasa). That is described here. The srimad-Bhagavatam verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by Lord Kapiladeva.

The ocassional partial manifestation of spiritual love (kadacid udbhava-tuccha-vimatratvam) is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.1.19):

sakrn manah krsna-padaravindayor nivesitam tad-guna-ragi yair iha na te yamam pasa-bhrtas ca tad-bhatan svapne 'pi pasyanti hi cirna-niskrtah

"Although not having fully realized Krsna, persons who have even once surrendered completely unto His lotus feet and who have become attracted to His name, form, qualities and pastimes are completely freed of all sinful reactions, for they have thus ac cepted the true method of atonement. Even in dreams, such sur rendered souls do not see Yamaraja or his order carriers, who are equipped with ropes to bind the sinful."

The love felt by these devotees is only the beginning of affection (ranjana). They do not yet feel the pure love (priti) that comes from understanding the Supreme Lord's sweetness in truth. Because love for the Supreme Lord is not yet the only goal of their lives, it is said here that they surrender only once (sakrt) to the Lord. Even so, they never see Yamaraja (na te yamam). For this reason they are more fortunate than Ajamila and many others. The srimad-Bhagavatam quoted in the beginning odf this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

The first manifestation of spiritual love (prathamodaya) is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.18.22):

yatranuraktah hasaiva dhira>3 vyapohya dehadisu sangam udham>3 vrajanti tat parama-hamsyam antyam>3 yasminn ahimsopasamah sva-dharmah>3

"Self-controlled persons who are attached to the Supreme Lord Sri Krsna can all of a sudden give up the world of material attachment, including the gross body and subtle mind, and go away to attain the highest perfection of the renounced order of life, by which nonviolence and renunciation are consequential."

In this verse the words "antyam paramahamsyam" mean "The state of being a swan-like devotee of the Supreme Personality of Godhead". The words beginning with yasmin" describe the qualities of such devotees. This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvmami.

sri Priyavrata's attainment of the full manifestation of spiritual love (prakatodayavastha) is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.1.1-3):

priyavrato bhagavata atmaramah katham mune grhe 'ramata yan-mulah karma-bandhah parabhavah. . .

"King Pariksit inquired from Sukadeva Gosvami: O great sage, why did King Priyavrata, who was a great, self- realized devotee of the Lord, remain in household life, which is the root cause of the bondage of karma [fruitive activities] and which defeats the mission of human life? "Devotees are certainly liberated persons. Therefore, O greatest of the brahmanas, they cannot possibly be absorbed in family affairs. "Elevated mahatmas who have taken shelter of the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are fully satiated by the shade of those lotus feet. Their consciousness cannot possibly become attached to family members."

The description continues in this verse of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.1.4):

samsayo'yam han brahman daragara-sutadisu saktasya yat siddhir abhut krsne ca matir acyuta

"The King continued: O great brahmana, this is my great doubt. Mow was it possible for a person like King Priyavrata, who was so attached to wife, children and home, to achieve the topmost infallible perfection in Krsna consciousness?"

The answer to the king's question is given in this prose passage of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.1.5):

badham uktam bhagavata uttamaslokasya srimac-carana- ravinda-makaranda-rasa avesita-cetaso bhagavata-paramahamsa- dayita-katham kincid antaraya-vihatam svam sivatamam padavim na prayena hinvanti.

"What you have said is correct. The glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is praised in eloquent, transcendental verses by such exalted personalities as Brahma, are very pleasing to great devotees and liberated persons. One who is attached to the nectarean honey of the Lord's lotus feet, and whose mind is always absorbed in His glories, may sometimes be checked by some impediment, but he still never gives up the exalted position he has acquired."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"With the word `badham' here the statements of Maharaja Pariksit are accepted and his doubts are dispelled. With the word `badham' the truth that Maharaja Priyavrata was not attached to material things is confirmed. Even if material things may sometimes have been an impediment, because of his pervious activities in devotional service he was able to turn from material things and again become rapt in devotional service."

This truth is also confirmed by these words spoken by Lord Visnu to Maharaja Prthu (srimad-Bhagavatam 4.20.12):

drstasu sampatsu vipatsu surayo na vikriyante mayi baddha-sauhrdah

"My devotee who is connected with Me in intense friendship and affection, being completely in knowledge, is never agitated by material happiness and distress."

For example, Agastya Muni was not angry when he was not offered respect by Maharaja Indradyumna. The sage acted as he did only to teach the king how to properly honor the Vaisnavas. For the same reason Narada Muni cursed the two sons of Kuvera. This is described in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.10.7):

tayor anugraharthaya sapam dasyann idam jagau

"Devarsi Narada, in order to show them special mercy, desired to give them a special curse. Thus he spoke as follows."

Desiring to bring him to His side, Lord Krsna arranged that Maharaja Pariksit would insult a brahmana. This is described in the following words of Maharaja Pariksit in srimad- Bhagavatam (1.19.14):

tasyaiva me 'ghasya paravareso vyasakta-cittasya grhesv abhiksnam nirveda-mulo dvija-sapa-rupo yatra prasakto bhayam asu dhatte

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, the controller of both the transcendental and mundane worlds, has graciously overtaken me in the form of a brahmana's curse. Due to my being too much attached to family like, the Lord, in order to save me, has appeared before me in such a way that only out of fear I will detach myself from the world."

Many other scripture passages may be quoted to show these truths. Althoughhe manifested only a reflection of material attachment (tad-abhasa), he still was placed in an uncomfortable situation, and he did indeed renounce his material situation. He said (srimad-Bhagavatam 5.1.37):

aho asadhv anusthitam. . .

"Alas, how condemned I have become because of my sense gratification! I have now fallen into material enjoyment, which is exactly like a covered well. I have had enough! I am not going to enjoy any more. Just see how I have become like a dancing monkey in the hands of my wife. Because of this, I am condemned."

The srimad-Bhagavatam verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

The outward signs that one has attained the full manifestation of spiritual love (prakatodayavastha) are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (7.4.42):

sa uttama-sloka-padaravindayor nisevayakincana-sanga-labdhaya tanvan param nirvrtim atmano muhur duhsanga-dinasya manah samam vyadhat

"Because of hsi association with perrfect, unalloyed devotees who had nothing to do with anything material, Prahlada Maharaja constantly engaged in the service of the Lord's lotus feet. By seeing his bodily features when he was in perfect ecstasy, persons very poor in spiritual understanding became purified. In other words, Prahlada Maharaja bestowed upon them transcendental bliss."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse it is said: `By seeing his bodily features when he was in perfect ecstasy, persons very poor in spiritual understanding became purified. In other words, Prahlada Maharaja bestowed upon them transcendental bliss.' "

Here the word "samam" may also be interprweted to mean, "He made their hearts like hsi heart". This verse was spoken by sri Narada to Maharaja Yudhisthira.

Anuccheda 78

The stage when there is no longer any contact with material desire, and the Suprmee Lord's glory is revealed (tad-darsita- prabhava) may be seen in srila sukadeva Gosvami and other great devotees. It is described in these words of sri Narayana- pancaratra:

bhavonmatto hareh kincin na veda sukham atmanah duhkham ceti mahesani paramananda aplutah

"Overcome with ecstatic love, he is no longer aware of material pleasures or pains. He is flooded with spiritual bliss."

In this way the different varieties of loving devotion (priti-bhakti) are described. The nature and qualities of loving devotion are also described by Lord Krsna Himself in thsee verses of Bhagavaed-gita (10.8-10):

aham sarvasya prabhavo mattah sarvam pravartate iti matva bhajante mam budha bhava-samanvitah

"I am the source of all spiritual and material worlds. Everything emanates from Me. The wise who perfectly know this engage in My devotional service and worship Me with all their hearts.

mac-citta mad-gata-prana bodhayantah parasparam kathayantas ca mam nityam tusyanti ca ramanti ca

"The thoughts of My pure devotees dwell in Me, their lives are fully devoted to My service, and they derive great satisfaction and bliss from always enlightening one another and conversing about Me.

tesam satata-yuktanam bhajatam priti-purvakam dadami buddhi-yogam tam yena mam upayanti te

"To those who are constantly devoted to serving Me with love, I give the understanding by which they can come to Me."

What follows is the gist of description of the characteristics of pure spiritual love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The devotees' love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, love that enters the heart and makes one ignore a host of petty rules and rituals, love full of bliss, love that cannot be limited by anything else, love that cannot tolerate any material apiration, love that is manifested from the Lord's hladini sakti, love that has the form of knowledge of the Lord, the desire to attain the Lord, following the Lord's commands, and favorable service to the Lord, love that fills the devotees' thoughts, love that has a form sweeter than nectar, love that decorates the devotees' eyes with pearls that are tears, the devotees' tongues with confidential descriptions of the Lord, and the devotees' other limbs with other like ornaments, love that is a treasure-house of all glories and virtues, love that grants the great goal of life, the goal of becoming the Supreme Lord's servant, love that is like the Supreme Lord's faithful wife, love that charms the Supreme Lord's heart, love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the Lord who is like a moon effulgent with the moonlight of spieritual bliss, the Lord whose sweetness is without equal or superior, the Lord who is eternally situated in the mode of pure transcendental goodness above maya's realm, the Lord whose limitless pastimes are the life of the realm of transcendental goodness and the great treasure that brings auspiciousness to all the worlds, shines with great splendor. Lord Krsna, who, as revealed in the Krsna-sandarbha, is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, is the highest object of the devotees' love. Therefore one should study the ways to love Him. Love may be directed to any form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. How much more, then, should one love Lord Krsna, the original form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead?

Complete love for Lord Krsna, the complete and original Supreme Personality of Godhead, is revealed in these words addressed to Lord Krsna (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.84.21):

adya no janma-saphalyam vidyayas tapaso drsah tvaya sangamya sad-gatya yad antah sreyasam parah

"Today our birth, education, austerity, and vision have all become perfect because we have been able to associate with You, the goal of all saintly persons. Indeed, You Yourself are the ultimate, supreme blessing."

This verse means: "Today, on the occasion of Your appearance in this world, our birth, education, austerity, and vision have all become perfect because we, Vasistha, the four Kumaras, Vamadeva, Markandeya, Narada, Krsna Dvaipayana Vyasa, and a host opf other sages, who have all directly experienced the Supreme Brahman, and who are expert in tasting the nectar of various kinds of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and who have seen many different incarnations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, have been able to associate with You, O Lord Krsna, who are the goal of all saintly persons, saintly persons who have faith in You alone. Indeed, You Yourself are the ultimate, supreme, limitless blessing, a blessing far greater than the blessings, the spiritual goals of life, the perfections of life we had previously attained when Your various incarnations were present here."

This verse was spoken by the great sages to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

The glories of Lord Krsna are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.6.1-5):

atha brahmatmajaih devaih prajesair avrto 'bhyagat bhavas ca bhuta-bhavyeso yayau bhuta-ganair vrtah. . .

"Lord Brahma then set off for Dvaraka, accompanied by his own sons as well as by the demigods and the great Prajapatis. Lord siva, the bestower of auspiciousness to all living beings, also went, surrounded by amny ghostly creatures. "The powerful Lord Indra, along with the Maruts, Adityas, Vasus, Asvinis, Rbhus, Angiras, Rudras, Visvadevas, Sadhyas, Gandharvas, Apsaras, Nagas, Siddhas, Caranas, Guhyakas, rthe great sages and forefathers, and the Vidyadharas and Kinnaras, arrived at the city of Dvaraka hoping to see Lord Krsna. By His transcendental form, Krsna, the Supreme Lord, enchanted all human biengs and spread His own fame throughout the worlds. The Lord's glories destroy all contamination within the universe. "In that resplendent city of Dvaraka, rich with all superior opulences, the demigods beheld with unsatiated eyes the wonderful form of sri Krsna."

In this last verse the word "adbhuta" means more wonderful than any of the other forms of the Lord". These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 80

Lord Krsna's glories are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.2.12):

yan martya-lilaupayikam sva-yoga- maya-balam darsayata grhitam vismapanam svasya ca sau bhagarddheh param padam bhusana-bhu-sanangam

"The Lord appeared in the mortal world by His internal potency, yogamaya. He came in His eternal form, which is just suitable for His pastimes. These pastimes were wonderful for everyone, even for those proud of their own opulence, including the Lord Himself in His form as the Lond of Vaikuntha. Thus His [Sri Krsna's] transcendental body is the ornament of all ornaments."

In this the word "yoga-maya-balam" means the power of His spiritual potency (cit-sakti)", darsayata" means "manifesting His glories and opulences", and "vsimapanam" means "His glories and opulences fill with wonder the sages and philosophers". That is not all. The sages and philosophers have never seen any form like His. Therefore because his form is now manifest before them, they are at every moment filled with wonder (svasya vsimapanam). This is som because His form is the supreme abode of glory and opulence (saubhagarddheh). Here someone may ask: "He may be very glorious and opulent, but does He not indeed wear ornaments to decorate His body?" This question is answered here in the words "His (sri Krsna's) body is the ornament of all ornaments". Next someone may ask: "What is sri Krsna's form like?" To this the answer is given: "His spiritual form is superficially like that of a human being (martya- lilaupayikam). Lord Krsna's form is so glorious even Lord Visnu yearns to see it. This is confirmed by the following words spoken by Lord Visnu in His form as the Maha-kalapuradhipa (srimad- Bhagavatam (10.89.58):

"O Krsna and Arjuna, I brought the brahmana's sons here because I yearn to see You."

This is also described in the Hari-vamsa, Visnu-parva (114.8) where Lord Krsna says:

mad-darsanartham te bala hrtas tena mahatmana

"Lord Visnu took those children because He yearned to see Me."

The srimad-Bhagavatam verse quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by sriman Uddhava to Vidura.

Anuccheda 81

In describing Maharaja Pariksit's many virtues, some brahmanas who yearned to see Lord Krsna compared Maharaja Pariksit's virtues to Lord Krsna's supreme virtues. They said (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.12.24):

esa krsnam anuvratah

"This child will be almost as good as Lord sri Krsna by following in His footsteps."

Of course, this does not mean that Maharaja Pariksit is equal to Lord Krsna. Lord Krsna is so glorious that He naturally arouses love for HIm in His devotees. This is seen in the following prayers from srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.39-40):

vijaya-ratha-kutumbha. . . . . .yam iha niriksya hata gatah sva-rupam

"At the moment of death, let my ultimate attraction be to Sri Krsna, the Personality of Godhead. I concentrate my mind upon the chariot driver of Arjuna who stood with a whip in His right hand and a bridle rope in His left, who was very careful to give protection to Arjuna's chariot by all means. Those who saw Him on the Battlefield of Kuruksetra attained their original forms after death.

lalita-gati-vilasa-valguhasa- pranaya-niriksana-kalpitoru manah krta-manu-krta-vatya unmadandhah prakrtim agan kila yasya gopa-vadhvah

"Let my mind be fixed upon Lord Sri Krsna, whose motions and smiles of love attracted the damsels of Vrajadhama (the gopis). The damsels imitated the characteristic movements of the Lord (after His disappearance from the rasa dance)."

How exalted is the kind of liberation described in these verses, sarupya liberation, where the devotee attains a spiritual form like that of the Lord? The gopis' activity of imitating Lord Krsna's pastimes is described in these owrds of Ujjvala-nilamani (Anubhava-prakarana 28):

priyanukaranam lila. . .

"The gopis imitated Lord Krsna's pastimes."

The word "prakrtim" in srimad-Bhagavatam 1.9.40 means "own nature". The gopis were so overwhelmed with love they thought their nature and Lord Krsna's nature had become one. This kind of great ecstasy (maha-bhava) is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani (Sthayi-bhava-prakarana 143):

radhayah bhavatas ca citta-jatuni svedair vilapya kramad yunjann adri-nikunja-kunjara-pate nirdhuta-bheda-bhramam citraya svayam anvaranjayad iha brahmanda-harmyodare bhuyobhir nava-raga-hingula-bharaih srngara-karuh krti

"O my Lord, You live in the forest of Govardhana Hill, and, like the king of elephants, You are expert in the art of conjugal love. O master of the universe, Your heart and srimati Radharani's heart are just like shallac and are now melted in Your spiritual perspiration. Therefore You can no longer distinguish between You and srimati Radharani. Now You have mixed Your newly invoked affection, which is like vermilion, with Your melted hearts, and for the benefit of the whole world You have painted both Your hearts red within this great palace of the universe."

Two verses from srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.39-40) quoted here were spoken by Bhisma to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

How Lord Krsna makes the devotees fall in love with Him is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.24.65):

yasyananam makara-kundala-caru-karna- bhrajat-kapola-subhagam savilasa-hasam nityotsavam na tatrpur drsibhih pibantyo naryo naras ca muditah kupita nimes ca

"Krsna's face is decorated with ornaments, such as earrings resembling sharks. His ears are beautiful, His cheeks brilliant, and His smiling attractive to everyone. Whoever sees Lord Krsna sees a festival. His face and body are fully satisfying for everyone to see, but the devotees are angry at the creator for the disturbance caused by the momentary blinking of their eyes."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"To teach the reader, the auther here describes the glory of Lord Krsna's face."

Here devotees become angry (kupitah) if their eyes blink (nimeh) as they gaze at Lord Krsna. This anger is the way of maha-bhava ecstatic love. In this way the perfection of that love is described. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

How Lord Krsna makes the devotees fall in love with Him is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.40):

ka stry anga te kala-padayata. . .

"Dear Krsna, what woman in all the three worlds wouldn't deviate from religious behavior when bewildered by the sweet, drawn-out melody of Your flute? Your beauty makes all three worlds auspicious. Indeed, even the cows, birds, trees and deer manifest the ecstatic symptom of bodily hair standing on end when they see Your beautiful form."

This is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.19):

aspandanam gati-matam pulakas tarunam. . .

"When Lord Krsna plays on His flute, the sweet music causes the moving living entities to become stunned and the nonmoving trees to tremble with ecstasy. These things are certainly very wonderful."

That Lord Krsna makes even the trees and vines tremble in ecstasy is confirmed by these words of Bilvamangala Thakura:

santv avatara bahavah puskara-nabhasya sarvato-bhadrah krsnad anyah ko va latasv api pramodo bhavati

"The lotus-naveled Supreme Personality of Godhead has many glorious and auspicious incarnations. Still, who but Lord Krsna Himself would bring ecstatic joy to the flowering vines?"

The srimad-Bhagavatam verse (10.29.40) quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the goddesseslike gopis of Vraja.

As the various incarnatiosn of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are on different levels, some higher or lower, so love for the Lord is also on different levels, some kinds of love higher and others lower. The various qualities of the different stages of spiritual love (priti) show many differences. These qualities are of two basic kinds: 1. qualities that prufy the devotees' hearts (bhakta-citta-samskriya), and 2. qualities that place certain conceptions in the devotees' hearts (tad-abhimana). The first group of qualities are these: 1. love brings bliss to the devotee's heart, 2. love gives the idea "Krsna is mine", 3. love creates faith in Krsna, 4. love gives the idea that Krsna is the object of love, 5. love makes the heart melt, 6. love makes the devotee see Lord Krsna as newer and newer at every moment, and 7. love makes the devotees become wild with a sense of wonder that has no equal or superior. When it brings great bliss, spiritual love is called rati". In that stage the devotee desires to attain Lord Krsna alone. Then all other desires seem petty and insignificant. When love fills the devotee with the idea "Krsna is mine", that stage is called "prema". When that stage is reached nothing has the power to lessen or wither the devotee's love. This stage of love, where the devotee is filled with the idea "Krsna is mine" is described in many places in the scriptures. For example, the nature of thinking "it is mine" in described in these words of the Markandeya Purana:

marjara-bhaksite duhkham yadrsam grha-kukkute na tadrn mamata-sunye kalavinke 'tha musike

"A rooster that shares the same living space with a housecat, thinks, `It is my cat', and fears that someday the cat will eat him. However, a sparrow or a rat, who do not live in the same hosue with the cat, and do not think, `It is my cat', and do not have the same fear."

The nature of thinking "it is mine" when it is manifested in loving devotional service (prema-bhakti) is seen in these words of Narada-pancaratra:

ananya-mamata visnau mamata prema-samyuta bhaktir ity acyute bhisma-prahladoddhava-naradaih

"Bhisma, Prahlada, Uddhava, and Narada were filled with devotion for the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead, pure devotion characterized by the thought, `Lord Visnu is mine. He is all I possess'."

Here the word "ananya-mamata" means "The thought: Lord Visnu is mine. He is all I possess." This kind of rapt devotion to the Lord is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.32):

sattva evaika-manasah. . .

"The mind's natural duty is to serve. When that service spirit is engaged in devotional service to the Personality of Godhead, without any motive, that is far better even than salvation."

When great faith is present, love for the Supreme Lord is called "pranaya". When this state is manifest it may seem appropriate that awe, veneration, and other like sentiments would be appropriate. However, they are not manifest. When the conception that Lord Krsna is one's beloved becomes very strong, and when a great wonder of varieties of the reflection of crookedness are manifest, then loving jealous anger (pranaya- mana) is manifest. When this kind of jealous anger is manifest even the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself feels love-filled fear born from His beloved's loving anger. When the melting of the heart becomes very prominent, the stage of love is called "sneha". In that stage from even a reflection of Lored Krsna's contact the devotee manifests great tears and other like symptoms. In this stage the devotee never becomes satiated by gazing at the beloved Krsna. The devotee also fears that some calamity may come. When in this stage of sneha, passionate desire becomes very strong, the stage is called "raga". In that stage the devotee cannot tolerate even a moment's separation from the beloved Krsna. When the devotee associates with Lord Krsna, the devotee thinks the greatest sufferings are all happinesses, and whne the devotee cannot associate with Krsna, the devotee thinks all happiness are the greatest sufferings. When in that stage of raga the devotee sees the beloved Krsna as newer and newer at every moment, the stage is called nava-navi-bhavann anuraga". In that stage Lord Krsna and His devotee become under each other's control. In that stage is manifest great anguish of love (prema-vaicittya). Then the devotee yearsn always to be with Krsna, and in Krsna's absence the devotee trembles with grief. When the stage of anuraga is manifest in a wonderful way without equal or superior, then the devotee becomes wild with love. This stage is called maha-bhava". In that stage the devotee cannot tolerate even the blinking of the eyes that may interrupt gazing at Lored Krsna. In Lord Krsna's presence a kalpa seems like a moment, and in Krsna's absence a moment seems like a kalpa. In both of these stages the uddipta (blazing) sattvika-bhavas are all manifest. In this way the qualities that purify the heart are revealed. The different qualities that place various conceptions in the loving devotees' hearts will now be described. As theLord manifests Himself in different ways, so the devotees feel different kinds of love for Him. Some devotees think of themselves as people who receive mercy from Lord. Other devotees think of themselves as people who give mercy to the Lord. Other devotees think of themselves as the Lord's friends. Other devotees think of themselves as the Lord's female beloved. As the Supreme Lord manifests different aspects of Himself, the devotees manifest a loving relationship appropriate to the feature the Lord manifested. In this way the Lord's eternal associates each have an eternal relationship with Him. The love manifested by the devotee when the devotee thinks himself the object of the Lord's mercy is called "bhakti". When the devotee thinks of the Lord as the object of worship, then bhakti (devotion) naturally follows. This is described in the following words of the Maya-vaibhava-sastra:

"When it is based on awe and reverence, the devotees love for the Lord is called bhakti."

Here the word "sneha" means "love" in a general sense. It is does not refer to a specific stage of love. Bhakti is also described in these words of the Padma Purana:

mahitva-buddhir bhaktis tu sneha-purvabhidhiyate

"Love where the devotee is filled with awe at the Lord's greatness is called sneha-bhakti."

The sages use the word "bhakti" in a general sense to mean "love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead". Thus the word "bhakti" has a general meaning (love and devotion) and a specific meaning (love in the stage of awe and reverence) also. Some words have a general and specific meaning in this way. For example the word "jiva" has the general meaning of "living entity". However, it also has a specific meaning of "human being". In the same way, the word "bhakti" sometimes means "inetnse bhakti", or, in other words, "prema" (love). In the same way, the word "brahmana" may refer to the brahmana class in general, or it may refer to one certain especially exalted brahmana. This usage is seen in the following verse of the Pancaratra:

mahatmya-jnana-purvas tu su-drdhah sarvato-'dhikah sneho bhaktir iti proktas taya sarsty-adi nanyatha

"When love in the mood of awe and reverence becomes very strong, it is called `sneha-bhakti'. By practicing sneha- bhakti one attains sarsti and the other kinds of Vaisnava liberation. It is not otherwise."

In some situations tyhe word "bhakti" is used to describe the state of love where in his heart the devotee thinks "Krsna is mine". In this situation the priomary meaning of the word "bhakti" is the state of devotion where the devotee thinks of himself as the recipient of thje Supreme Lord's mercy. This state where the devoptee thinks of himself as receiving the Lord's mercy is of two kinds: 1. the state where the devotee considers the Lord his maintainer, and 2. the state where the devotee thinks the Lord is especially kind to him. In the state where the devotee thinks of the Lord as the maintainer, the devotee is delighted by the Lord's nature and qualities. In the state where the devotee thinks the Lord is especially kind to him, the devotee yearns to serve the Lord. Then the devotee considers devotional service his great good fortune. His heart melts with devotion to the Lord. He spontaneously wishes to help and please the Lord. These devotees are of two kinds: 1. the devotees who do not think "the Lord is mine", and 2. the devotees who do think "the Lord is mine". The devotees who delight in thinking of the Lord as the Paramatma or Parabrahma do not think "the Lord is mine". These are the jnani-bhaktas (devotees whose conceptions are mixed with jnana). Amongst them sri Sanaka and the four Kumaras are the most prominent. Their idea, that "the Lord is not mine". is expressed in these words:

"O Supreme Lord, I am Yours, but You are not mine. You are like the ocean, and I am like a wave in the ocean. The wave is the property of the ocean, but the ocean is never the property of the wave."

As one gazes at the moon but does not think "the moon is mine", in the same way these devotees lovingly see the Lord, but do not think "the Lord is mine". These devotees are favorably inclined to the Lored. They offer prayers to Him and perform other like activities for Him. Still, their love for Him is called "jnana-bhakti", for they see HIm as the Brahman. Their relationship with Him is also called santa-rasa", for peacefulness (santi) is prominent amongst them. The Supreme Lord Hismelf describes them in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.19.36):

"They are peaceful, and their intelligence is devoted to Me."

Now we will consider the devotees who, thinking themselves the recipients of the Supreme Lord's mercy, also think the Lord is mine". These devotees think, "the Lord is ours". Their conception is described in these words of the Pancaratra (previously quoted here in anuccheda 84):

ananya-mamata. . .

Bhisma, Prahlada, Uddhava, Narada, and many other devotees think in this way. However, Sanaka-kumara and the other jnana-bhaktas do not think in this way. In this way the devotees who think themselves the recipients of the Lord's mercy also think, "the Lord is mine". The devotees who think themselves the recipients of the Lord's mercy are of three kinds: 1. the devotees who think themselves protected (palya) by the Lord, 2. the devotees who think themselves servants (bhrtya) of the Lord, and 3. the devotees who think themselves objects of the Lord's affection (lalya). Now we will considsr, one by one, the natures of these various kinds of devotees. The devotees who think the Lord is their protector are the citizens of Dvaraka and other like devotees. The devotees who think they should serve the Lord are the Lord's servants, like Daruka. The devotees who think they are objects of the Lord's affection are devotees who think of Him as their superior, devotees like His sons Pradyumna and Gada. These three kinds of devotees all have priti-bhakti (loving devotion) for the Lord. The previously described jnana- bhaktas are inferior, for their knowledge of the Lord is covered. The devoteeswho think"the Lord is mine" are superior. Their love for the Lord is greater. This is explained in srila Rupa Gosvami's Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu. Now these different kinds of devotion will be considered. In the devotion wehre one thinks oneself protected by the Lord on thinks the Lord one's shelter. In the devotion where one thinks oneself the Lord's servant, one has the conception of being a servant. In the devotion where one thinks onself the object of the Lord's affection one is humble and respectful before the Lord. It is implied here that these kinds of devotion to the Lord are filled with the idea that the Lord is one's superior and with reverent activities such as bowing down to offere respects. However, reverence is not considered the essence of this kind of devotion, for without the specific conceptions these devotees have (of being personally proetcted by the Lord, personally serving Him, or personally loved by Him) mere reverent loving loving devotion is only ordinary loving devotion (bhakti-samanya) to the Lord and not the exalted devotion of these personal associates of the Lord. In the conception that the devotee gives his mercy to the Lord, the devoptee thinks, "the Lord is my son", or has another similar idea. This kind of love is called "vatsalya". The word [vatsalya" is derived from the word "vatsa" (calf). As one may be affectionate to a calf, so parents may be affectionate to their children and hug the children, holding them to their chests. This kind of love is called "vatsalya" (parental love). This kind of relationship is filled with love. They who know the nature of rasa call this vatsalya-rasa. This state, and this derivation of the word "vatsalya" are seen in these words describing Devahuti when she was separated from her son (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.33.21):

"Devahuti's husband had already left home and accepted the renounced order of life, and then her only son, Kapila, left home. Although she knew all the truths of life and death, and although her hearet was cleansed of all dirt, she weas very aggrieved at the loss of her son, just as a cow is affected when her calf dies."

The sentiments of vatsalya-rasa are also felt by the king and queen of Vraja and many other devotees as well. When the devotee thinks: "Krsna is my equal in charm and virtues. Therefore without limit I love Him as a friend", that kind of love is called "maitra priti". When the devotee thinks: "Krsna and I enjoy many nectar pastimes together without limit. Therefore I love Him as a friend", that kind of love is called "sakhya priti". Lord Krsna's friends (mitras), therefore, are of two kinds: 1. suhrts, and 2. sakhas. Yudhisthira, Bhisma, and Draupadi are counted among the suhrts. Arjuna and sridama are counted among the sakhas. When the devotee thinks: "Krsna is my beloved", that is called "kanta-bhava". This love of a female devotee for her beloved Krsna is described in Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu (2.5.36) in the definition of the word "priyata". Ordinary scholars call this by the word "rat". They say the gopis' love for Lord Krsna is like ordinary material lust, and to describe that love they use the word "kama" (lust). However the gopis' love is very different from material lust. It is far superior. Ordinary material lust has ordinary material desires at its heart. Ordinary material love is characterized by the desire for pleasant contact with material sense objects. The activities that come from these two (material lust and material love) are the same, for both are based on the desire to please one's own self. When the desire to please the beloved is manifest as a secondary goal, after pleasing one's own self, that is called material love. Pure love (suddha- priti) is when the desire to please the beloved becomes the true goal of the lover. When the prinary goal is to please the beloved, that state is called by the word "priti" (love). As the happiness of material pleasure and material love are similar, although the happiness of love is superior, so the desires of material lust and material love are similar, although the desires of material love are superior. In the same way the desires of exalted, spiritual lust and exalted, spiritual love love are similar, although the desires of exalted, spiritual love are superior. An example of exalted, spiritual love is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.31.19):

"O dearly beloved! Your lotus feet are so soft that we place them gently on our breasts, fearing that Your feet will be hurt. Our life rests only in You. Our minds, therefore, are filled with anxiety that Your tender feet might be wounded by pebbles as You roam about on the forest path."

In this verse is seen exalted pure love, where the lover desires the happiness of the beloved. This love is exalted because its desires are exalted. Kubja and others feel spiritual lust to enjoy with Krsna This kind of lust is not material. When spiritual lust is present, then material lust cannot remain. This is confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.39):

vikriditam vraja-vadhubhir idam ca visnoh sraddhanvito nusrnuyad atha varnayed yah bhaktim param bhagavati pratilabhya kamam hrd-rogam asv apahinoty acirena dhirah

"Anyone who faithfully hears or describes the Lord's playful affairs with the young gopis of Vrndavana will attain the Lord's pure devotional service. Thus he will quickly become sober and conquer lust, the disease of the heart."

Hearing these pastimes quickly removes material lust, even from people separated by a long time or a great physicial distance from these pastimes. Then these pastimes grant spiritual love to the hearers. Material lust will never return to those hearers. Instead, exalted spiuritual love will stay with them. Mud is not washed away by more mud. Nor is love created by a lack of love. The Supreme Lord is greatly pleased by this pure love. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.22.18):

"When the Supreme Lord saw how the gopis were struck with embarrassment, He was satisfied by their pure loving affection."

Even though He isd the crest-jewel of all self-satisfied persons, the Supreme Lord is delighted by His devotees' pure love. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.19):

krtva tavantam atmanam. . .

"Expanding Himself as many times as there were cowherd women to associate with, the Supreme Lord, though self- satisfied, playfully enjoyed their company."

The Supreme Lord is controlled by His devotees' pure love. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.22):

na paraye 'ham niravadya-samyujam. . .

"I am not able to repay My debt for your spotless service, even within a lifetime of Brahma. Your connection with Me is beyond reproach. You have worshiped Me, cutting off all domestic ties, which are difficult to break. Therefore please let your own glorious deeds be your compensation."

In this verse the word "niravadya (spotless service) shows the purity of the gopis' love, the word "sva-sadhu- krtyam" (able to repay My debt) show the exalted nature of their love, and the words "na paraye" (I am not able) show how the Supreme Lord is controlled by their love. That the gopis' are the most exalted of all the pure lovers of the Supreme Lord is seed in these words spoken by sri Uddhava in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.58):

"Among all persons on earth, these cowherd women alone have actually perfected their embodied lives, for they have achieved the perfection of unalloyed love for Lord Govinda. Their pure love is hankered after by those who fear material existence, by great sages, and by ourselves as well. For one who has tasted the narrations of the infinite Lord, what is the use of taking birth as a high-class brahmana, or even as Lord Barhma himself?"

Therefore the gopis' love, where they think of the Supreme Lord as their paramour is the highest of all. In this way spiritual love (priti) has five basic conceptions: 1.jnana- bhakti (dveotion mixed with knowledge, or santa-rasa), 2. bhakti (devotion in the mood of servitude), 3. vatsalya (parental love), 4. maitri (friendship), and 5. kanta-bhava (conjugal love). Sometimes mixtures of these five conceptions are present. sri Bhisma and others are situated in a mixture of santa-rasa and servitude. sri Yudhisthira is situated in parwental love and well-wishing friendship (sauhrdya). sri Bhima is situated in parental love and pastime-friendship (sakhya). sri Kunti is situated in servitude and parental love. sri Vasudeva and Devaki are situated in parental love and servitude. In this way various mixtures may be seen. sri Uddhava is situated in a mixture of servitude and friendship. The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself describes this in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.11.49):

"O Uddhava, you are My servant, well-wisher, and friend."

Lord Balarama is situated in a mixture of friendship and parental love. Lord Balarama's mixture of friendship and parental love is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.14-15):

kvacit krida-parisrantam gopotsangopabarhanam svayam visramayaty aryam pada-samvahanadibhih

"When His elder brother, fatigued from playing, would lie down with His head upon the lap of a cowherd boy, Lord Krsna would help Him relax by personally massaging His feet and offering other services."

nrtyato gayatah kvapi valgato yudhyato mithah grhita-hastau gopalan hasantau prasasamsatuh

"Sometimes, as the cowherd boys danced, sang, moved about and playfully fought with each other, Krsna and Balarama, standing nearby hand in hand, would glorify Their friends' activities and laugh."

Lord Balarama is also situated in the conception of servitude. This is seen in the following words spoken by Lord Balarama Himself in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.37):

"This must be the illusory energy of My master, Lord Krsna, for who else can bewilder Me?"

In Vraja Lord Balarama's main rasa is friendship. Within that friendship servitude and parental love are also manifest. There friendship is Lord Balarama's main rasa because there from early childhood Krsna and Balarama played together. However, in the Yadus' city of Dvaraka, Lord Balaraama's main rasa is servitude, and His feelings of parental love and servitude are manifested within the rasa of servitude. There servitude is Lord Balarama's main rasa because in Dvaraka Lord Krsna manifested pastimes of opulence (aisvarya). Also, in Vraja Lord Balarama was considered like Lord Krsna's elder brother, for Krsna's and Balarama's fathers, Nanda and Vasudeva, were brothers. Because Nanda gave protection to Him, Lord Balarama considered Nanda Maharaja His father. This is described in the following words spoken by Maharaja Vasudeva to Maharaja Nanda in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.5.27):

bhratar mama sutah kaccin matra saha bhavad-vraje tatam bhavantam manvano bhavadbhyam upalalitah

"My son Baladeva, being raised by you and your wife, Yasoda-devi, considers you His father and mother. Is He living very peacefully in your home with His real mother, Rohini?"

That Lord Balarama was considered Lord Krsna's elder brother is also seen in these words spoken by Morher Yasoda to Lord Krsna in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.34):

vadanti tavaka hy ete kumaras te 'grajo 'py ayam

"This complaint has been lodged against You by all Your playmates, including Your elder brother, Balarama."

The queens at Dvaraka are situated in the conjugal rasa mixed with servitude. The gopis of Vraja are situated in the conjugal rasa mixed with friendship. When spiritual love (priti) is manifest without the specific conceptions of the different rasas, then that love is ordinary spiritual love (samanya priti). It is manifest among the devotees who are not yet qualified to relate to the Lord in one or more of the rasas. An example of this kind of love is seen in the following description of the people of Mithila and other places (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.86.20):

anarta-dhanva-kuru-jangala-kanka-matsya- pancala-kunti-madhu-kekaya-kosalarnah anye ca tan-mukha-sarojam udara-hasa- snigdheksanam nrpa papur drsibhir nr-naryah

The men and women of Anarta, Dhanva, Kuru-jangala, Kanka, Matsya, Pancala, Kunti, Madhua, Kekaya, Kosala, Arna, and many other kingdoms drank with their eyeas the nectarean beauty of Lord Krsna's lotuslike face, which was graced with generous smiles and affectionate glances."

These devotees do not have the conception "The Supreme Lord is mine". Their affection for the Lord is in the ordinary santa-rasa (samanya-santi), which is also called tatastha-santi (santa-rasa on the borderline). Their affection for the Lord is called "tatastha priti". The Lord's personal associates are other persons. The love felt by the Lord's personal associates is abundantly filled with the idea, "the Supreme Lord is mine". Amongst these personal associates of the Lord are included the Lord's servants (bhrtya) and persons who are protected (palya) by the Lord. These two kindsof personal associates of the Lord are situated in the rasa of servitude. Their love for the Lord is called sambhrama-priti" (love filled with reverence). The Lord's relatives are objects of the Lord's affection. Their love for the Lord is called "bandhava-priti" (the love of a relative). These different rasas and kinds of love are described by Lord Kapila in thesen words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.38):

"The devotees accept Me as their friend, their relative, their son, perceptor, benefactor, and Supreme Deity."

In this verse the word "priyah" means beloved", "atma" means "the Supersoul", "sutah" means "son, nephew, younger brother, ort other like relative", "sakha" means "an affectionate friend with whom one enjoys pastimea", guruh" means "father or other superior", suhrdah" refers to two kinds of friends: 1. a friend with whom one has a special relation, and 2. a friend for whom one wishes limitless good fortune. This list is given with the most intimate relationships given first. Here "daivam istam" means "the Deity of whom one takes shelter" or "the Deity one serves". When these rasas are absent, then spiritual love is of the ordinary (samanya) kind. Now the previously described bhavas, beginning with rati, will be described. Rati is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.5.26-27):

"O Vyasadeva, in that association and by the mercy of those great Vedantists, I could hear them describe thw attractive activities of Lord Krsna. And thus listening attentively, my taste for hearing of the Personality of Godhead increased at every step.

tasmims tada labdha-rucer maha-mate priya-sravasy askhalita matir mama yayaham etat sad-asat sva-mayaya pasye mayi brahmani kalpitam pare

"O great sage, as soon as I got a taste of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, my attention to hear of the Lord was unflinching. And as my taste developed, I could realize that it was only in my ignorance that i had accepted gross and subtle coverings, for both the Lord and I are transcendental."

Here the word "mayi" means "in a single pure individual soul", and "pare brahmani" means "In the Supreme, who is the sum total of everything". These words were spoken by sri Narada to sri Vyasa.

The stage of spiritual love called "prema" is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.51):

upalabdham pati-prema pativratyam ca te 'naghe yad-vakyais calyamanaya na dhir mayy apakarsita

"O sinless one, I have now seen firstahand the pure love and chaste attachment you have for your husband. Even though shaken by My words, your mind could not be pulled away from Me."

In this verse the phrase "na dhir mayy apakarsita" means "your mind could not be pulled away from Me." This means: "Even though you feareed that My words of renunciation would leave to My abandoning You, your love for Me did not decrease." This means "As you have always loved Me in the past, so you love Me now in the present". This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to Rukmini-devi.

"The intelligent, who have understood the Supreme Lord in association with pure devotees and have become freed from bad materialistic association, can never avoid hearing the glories of the Lord, even though they have heard them only once. How, then, could the Pandavas tolerate His separation, for they had been intimately associated with His person, seeing Him face to face, touching Him, conversing with Him, and sleeping, sitting and dining with Him?

"All their hearts were melting for Him on the pot of attraction. They looked at Him without blinking their eyes, and they moved hither and thither in perplexity.

nyarundhann udgalad baspam autkanthyad devaki-sute niryaty agaran no 'bhadram iti syad bandhava-striyah

"The female relatives, whose eyes were flooded with tears out of anxiety for Krsna, came out of the palace. They could stop their tears only with great difficulty. They feared that tears would cause misfortune at the time of departure."

Here the word "vicluh" means "to bring various articles of worship, they moved here and there". The words "no 'bhadram iti syat" mean "So no evil oment would be manifest", and "nyarundhan" means they suppressed". This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

The stage of spiritual love called "anuraga" is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.33):

yadyapy asau parsva-gato raho-gatas tathapi tasyanghri-yugam navam navam pade pade ka virameta tat-padac calapi yac chrir na jahati karhicit

"Although Lord sri Krsna was constantly by their sides, as well as exclusively alone, His feet appeared to them to be newer and newer. The goddess of fortune, although by nature always restless and moving, could not quit the Lord's feet. So what woman can be detached from those feet, having once taken shelter of them?"

In this verse the word "asau" means "sri Krsna", "parsva-gatah" means "staying near His queens", and "raho-gatah" means "in a solitary place". "Pade pade" means "at every moment". This was not surprising for the queens, who were naturally full of love (anuraga) for Lord Krsna. The verse then says:"ka virameta tat-padat", which means: "What woman would become satiated by tasting the nectar of the Lord's feet?" The phrase beginning with the words "calapi" means: If even the goddess of fortune, who is always restless and moving, could not quit the Lord's feetm how can any other woman be detached from those feet?" It is seen in this world that material wealth is flickering and temporary. In this example material wealth and the spiritual goddesses of fortune are equated. This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

The stage of spiritual love called "maha-bhava" is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.19.16):

gopinam paramananda asid govinda-darsane ksanam yuga-satam iva yasam yena vinabhavat

"The young gopis took the greatest pleasure in seeing Govinda [Krsna] come home, since for them even a moment without His association seemed like a hundred ages."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 92

Although they certainly experience rati, and although they feel the happiness of spiritual bliss, because they do not have the conception that "the Supreme Lord is mine", the devotees whose devotion is mixed with jnana (jnani-bhaktas) experience only ordinary love for the Supreme Lord. Their feelings of love for the Lord are seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.49):

kamam bhavah sva-vrjinair nirayesu nah stat. . .

"O Lord, we pray that You let usbe born in any hellish condition of life, just as long as our hearts and minds are always engaged in the service of Your lotus feet, our words are made beautiful (by speaking of Your activities) just as tulasi leaves are beautified when offereed unto Your lotus feet, and as long as our ears are always filled with the chanrting of Your transcendental qualities."

The four Kumaras headed by Sanaka speak this prayer of love (raga). Still, the raga they feel is not direct raga. The devotees who consider themselves protected (palya) by the Lord experience love up to the stage of prema. This is so because they clearly think, "The Lord is mine". However, they do not experience love up to the stage of sneha. This is so because their relationship with the Lord is distant and because their love is not very intense. They express their love in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.9):

"O lotus-eyed Lord, whenever You go away to Mathura-, Vrndavana or Hastinapura to meet Your friends and relatives, every moment of Your absence seems like a million years. O infallible one, at that time our eyes become useless, as if bereft of sun."

These words were spoken by Dvaraka's citizens. Included among them were the florist, barber, and others who had the good fortune to serve Lord Krsna directly. The devotees in the rasa of servitude (bhrtya) can experience spiritual love up to the stage of raga. This is so because they have a strong sense of "the Lord is mine", because they are very eager always to serve the Lord, and because the Lord is their very life. The devotee who think themselves the object of the Sup"reme Lord's love (lalya) also experience spiritual love up to the stage of raga. This is so because they have direct contact with the Lord's graceful form, and because they have an especially strong sense that the Lord is mine". The Lord's mother and father, who are situated in vatsalya-rasa, love the Lord more than these devotees. They have a very strong sense that "the Lord is mine", even stronger than the conception held by the Lord's friends (sakhas). sri Kunti's words in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.8.25 (quoted above) show that she loves the Lord even more than the Lord's friends. The great love manifest in vatsalya-rasa is not at all similar to the love manifest in sakhya-rasa. However, sakhya-rasa and srngara-rasa are similar in many ways. For example, loving anger (pranaya-mana) is possible only in those two rasas. Among the Lord's beloveds the queens at Dvaraka experience spiritual love up to the stage of maha-bhava anuraga. The ecstasies they feel in separation from the Lord are called prema-vaicittya" and are described in srimad- Bhagavatam 10.90.14-25). I have not heard in the scriptures any other description like this, nor have I not heard in the scriptures any other description of the queens' anuraga.

Here someone may protest: Is not anuraga described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.2): satam ayam sara-bhrtam nisargah. . .

"Paramahamsas, devotees who have accepted the essence of life, are attached to Krsna in the core of their hearts, and He is the aim of their lives. It is their nature to talk only of Krsna at every moment, as if such topics were newer and newer. They are attached to such topics, just as materialists are attached to topics of women and sex." ?

Is the love here not anuraga because the devotees see the Lord as newer and newer at every moment?

To this protest I reply: No. It is not so. The symptoms described in this verse are not the symptoms of anuraga. The symptoms of joy and distress described in this verse are rather the symptoms of rati or of other stages of love. Because it is not possible to say the symnptoms describned here are ther symptoms of anuraga, therefore it cvannot be concluded that anuraga is described in this verse. In this verse the word navya-vat" (the devotees consider the topics of the Lord as if they were newer and newer) is not the same as the devotees consider the topics of the Lord newer and newer". The gopis of Vraja experience spiritual love up to the stage of maha-bhava. Their love is described By Lord Krsna in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.12.11):

"Dear Uddhava, all of those nights that the gopis spent with Me, their most dearly beloved, in the land of Vrndavana, seemed to them to pass in less than a moment. Bereft of My association, however, the gopis felt that those same nights dragged on forever, as if each night were equal to a day of Brahma."

When they gazed at Lord Krsna, the gopis were not willing to tolerate even the blinking of their eyelids. This is seen in the following words spoken by the gopis to Lord Krsna in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.31.15):

kutila-kuntalam sri-mukham ca te jada udiksatam paksma-krd drsam

"When You go off to the forest during the day, a tiny fraction of a second becomes like a millennium for us because we cannot see You. And even when we can eagerly look upon Your beautiful face, so lovely with its adornment of curly locks, our pleasure is hindered by our eyelids, which were fashioned by the foolish creator."

The devotees' inability to tolerate the blinking of their eyelids when that blinking interrupts their gazing at Lord Krsna is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.24.65):

yasyananam. . .naryo naras ca muditah kupita nimes ca

"Krsna's face is decorated with ornaments, such as earrings resembling sharks. His ears are beautiful, His cheeks brilliant, and His smiling attractive to everyone. Whoever sees Lord Krsna sees a festival. His face and body are fully satisfying for everyone to see, but the devotees are angry at the creator for the disturbance caused by the momentary blinking of their eyes."

Here the words "naryo naras ca muditah" show that even ordinary men and women become delighted by gazing at Lord Krsna. Then the words "kupita nimes ca" mean "but some devotees, namely the graceful gopis, become angry at the creator who created eyelids." This same verse is not found in other places in the scriptures. However, in the deescription of the gopis' meeting with Lord Krsna at Kuruksetra, it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.39):

gopyas ca krsnam upalabhya cirad abhistam yat-preksane drsisu paksma-krtam sapanti drgbhir hrdi-krtam alam parirabhya sarvas tad-bhavam apur api nitya-yujam durapam

"While gazing at their beloved Krsna, the young gopis used to condemn the creator of their eyelids (which would momentarily block their vison of Him). Now, seeing Krsna again after such a long separation, with their eyes they took Him into their hearts, and there they embraced Him to their full satisfaction. In this way they became totally absorbed in ecstatic meditation on Him, although those who constantly practice mystic yoga find such absorption difficult to achieve."

In this verse it is seen that the gopis are the most exalted devotees. Although by His very nature Lord Krsna creates these ecstatic feelings of maha-bhava love in the gopis, the gopis still turn to Him for protection from the anxiety they feel in their love. As rain falling during the time of the Svati star creates pearls, so Lord Krsna inspires this kind of ecstatic love in the gopis. In the words "mad-bhavam apuh", the Lord affirms that the gopis indeed attained maha-bhava love for Him. Now the words "nitya-yujam durapam" will be discussed. Here the word "nitya-yujam" refers to the Dvaraka queens, who are like the gopis. It does not refer to others, who are not like the gopis, who are very far away from being like the gopis. The word "nitya-yujam" may also be interpeted to mean "We gopis, who are separated from our beloved and who day after day yearn to be with Him". The ecstatic love felt by the Dvaraka queens is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.84.1):

srutva prtha subala-putry atha yajnaseni madhavy atha ksitipa-patnya uta sva-gopyah krsne 'khilatmani harau pranayanubandham sarva visismyur alam asru-kalakulaksyah

"Prtha, Gandhari, Draupadi, Subhadra, the wives of other kings, and the Lord's cowherd girlfriends were all amazed to hear of the queens' deep love for Lord Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead and Soul of all beings, and their eyes filled with tears."

Glorifying the gopis, the Dvaraka queens say in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.83.43):

"We desire the same contact with the Supreme Lord's feet that thr young women of Vraja, the cowherd boys, and even the aborigine Pulinda women desire - the touch of the dust He leaves on the plants and grass as He tends His cows."

The spiritual love the Dvaraka queens feel almost touches the spiritual love the filled with wonder vraja-gopis feel. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.84.1 the word "sva" indicates that the gs are the Supreme Lord's most confidential (paramantaranga) internal potency. The glories and good fortune of the gopis ands the residents of Vraja, Mathura, and Dvaraka are described in the following three verses of srimad- Bhagavatam (1.10.26-28):

"Oh, how supremely glorified is the dynasty of King Yadu, and how virtuous is the land of Mathura, where the supreme leader of all living beings, the husband of the goddess of fortune, has taken His birth and wandered in His childhood. "Undoubtedly it is wonderful that Dvaraka has defeated the glories of the heavenly planets and has enchanced the celebrity of the earth. The inhabitants of Dvaraka are always seeing the soul of all living beings (Krsna) in His loving feature. He glances at them and favors them with sweet smiles.

"O friends, just think of His wives, whose hands He has accepted. How they must have undergone vows, baths, fire sacrifices and perfect worship of the Lord of the universe to constantly relish now the nectar from His lips [by kissing]. The damsels of Vrajabhumi would often faint just by expecting such favors."

In these verses the gopis' and Dvaraka queens' exalted status and supreme knowledge of spiritual nectar sweetness is described. By thinking of the nectar sweetness the gopis and queens' tasted, the demigods would faint. Although they seemed to be mere human beings as they enjoyed their nectar pastimes, they were in truth the most exalted of souls. The following explanation may be given here. The Supreme Personality of Godhead has two features: 1. His feature as Brahman, and 2. His feature as the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan). In general the devotees are of two kinds: 1. neophyte devotees (tatastha) and 2. devotees who are personal associates (parikara) of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Some of the neophyte (tatastha) devotees take pleasure in the Brahman feature of the Lord. These devotees are situated in santa-rasa. Other neophyte devotees love the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His personal associates, but have not yet themselves become personal associates of the Lord. The causes that attract one to become a personal associate of the Lord and results of becoming a personal associate of the Lord are both absent amongst the nephyte devotees who take pleasure in the Brahman feature of the Lord. For these reasons these neophyte devotees are not attracted to become personal associates of the Lord. The causes that help (sahaya) one attracted to become a personal associate of the Lord are of two kinds: 1. the idea the Supreme Lord is mine", and 2. perception of the various limbs and features (upanga) of the Lord, amongst which is included perception of the Lord's impersonal Brahman feature. That the devotees attrracted to the impersonal Brahman do not think, "the Supreme Lord is mine" has already been shown. Neiother do these devotees have any direct perception of the limbs of the Supreme Lord's body. However, these devotees do have knowledge of the the impersonal Brahman, which is one of the Supreme Lord's secondary features (upanga). Fropm this knowledge of Brahman knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead may eventually come. In this way these devotees m,ay eventually become attracted to the personal feature of the Supreme Lord. This truth is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.7.10):

"All different varieties of atmaramas [those who take pleasure in atma, or spirit self], especially those established on the path of seff-realization, though freed from all kinds of material bondage, desire to render unalloyed devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead. This means that the Lord possesses transcendental qualities and therefore can attract everyone, including liberated souls."

tasyaravinda-nayanasya. . . . . .cakara tesam sanksobham aksara-jusam api citta-tanvoh

"When the breeze carrying the aroma of tulasi leaves from the toes of the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead enetred the nosytrils of those sages, they experienced a change both in body and in mind, even though they were attached to the impersonal Brahman understanding."

In this way the impersonalists may renounced the impersonal idea. Then they attain the results of becoming attracted to the Supreme Lord. The result is they become rapt in meditation on the Lord. Eventually they may also see the Supreme Lord directly. The personal associates of the Supreme Lord directly serve the Lord again and again eternally. For this reason the good ofrtune of the Lord's personal associates is very great. The Supreme Lord, His personal associates, and some devotees' first directly seeing the Lord are described in srimad-Bhagavatam's account of the curse placed upon Jaya and Vijaya. In that account it is said: (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.15.37, 38, and 40):

tasmin yayau paramahamsa-maha-muninam anvesaniya-caranau calayan saha-srih

"Accompanied by His spouse, the goddess of fortune, He (the Supreme Lord) went to the spot on those very feet sought for by recluses and great sages.

tam tv agatam parihrtaupayikam sva-pumbhis te 'caksataksa-visayam sva-samadhi-bhagyam

"The sages, headed by Sanaka Rsi, saw that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Visnu, who was formerly visible only within their hearts in ecstatic trance, had now actually become visible to their eyes. As He came forward, accompanied by His own associates bearing all paraphernalia, such as an umbrella and a camara fan, the white bunches of hair moved very gently, like two swans, and do to their favorable breeze the pearls garlanding the umbrella also moved, like drops of nectar falling frem the white full moon or ice melting due to a gust of wind."

"He rested one of His hands on the shoulder of Garuda, His carrier."

In these verses it is clear that Jaya and Vijaya were the Supreme Lord's personal associates. The four Kumaras, however, were more distantly associated with the Lord, associated in the mood of awe and reverence. That Jaya and Vijaya were personal associates of the Lord and the four Kumaras were not is confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.37):

evam tadaiva bhagavan aravinda-nabhah svanam vibudhya sad-atikramam arya-hrdyah

"At that very moment the Lord, who is called Padmanabha because of the lotus grown from His navel and who is the delight of the righteous, learned about the insult offered by His own servants to the saints." This is also confirmed by the following words spoken by the Supreme Lord in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.40):

tad vah prasadayamy adya brahma daivam param hi me tad dhity atma-krtam manye yat sva-pumbhir asat-krtah

"To Me, the brahmana is the highest and most beloved personality. The disrespect shown by My attendants has actually been displayed by Me because the doormen are My servitors. I take this to be an offense by Myself: therefore I seek your forgiveness for the incident that has arisen."

When they saw the great good fortune of the Lord's personal associates, the four Kumaras became ashamed that they had cursed the Lord's associates. They said (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.16.25):

yam vanayor damam adhisa bhavan vidhatte vrttim nu va tad anumanmahi nirvyalikam asmasu va ya ucito dhriyatam sa dando ye 'nagasau vayam ayunksmahi kilbisena

"O Lord, whatever punishment You wish to award to these two innocent persons or also to us we shall accept without duplicity. We understand that we have cursed two faultless persons."

After the four Kumaras had departed, the Supreme Lord openly revealed His mercy to His personal associates. He said (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.16.29):

bhagavan anugav aha vatam ma bhaistam astu sam brahma-tejah samartho 'pi hantum necche matam tu me

"The Lord then said to His attendants, Jaya and Vijaya: Depart this place, but fear not. All glories unto you. Though I am capable of nullifying the brahmanas' curse, I would not do so. On the contrary, it has My approval."

In this way it is seen that the neophyte devotees are situated on a lower level of spiritual love and the personal associates of the Lord are situated on a higher level of spiritual love. Here someone may protest: "Is it not so that the Supreme is the abode of limitless spiritual love,love beyond all material designations? And is it not also so that to think of oneself as the Lord's personal associate is in itself a material designation, a designation that limits the love one may feel for the Supreme? Therefore the spiritual love felt by the worshipers of the impersonal Brahman is the true, the advanced spiritual love, and the spiritual love felt by persons who think themselves the Supreme Lord's personal associates is a very inferior kind of love. And furthermore the personal associates of the Lord have the mistaken idea that "the Supreme Lord is mine". Therefore the spiritual love felt by the worshipers of the impersonal Brahman is far superior." To this protest I give the following reply: It is not as you say. Whatever spiritual love may be felt in a general way without a personal relationship with the Lord is also included within the spiritual love the Lord's personal associates feel for Him. When thespirit soul attains perfection an realizes his true identity, then he becomes a personal associate of the Lord in a particular relationship with the Lord. What objection may be raised against this explanation? In this way, by comparison, the higher and lower levels of spiritual love are seen. The Supreme Personality of Godhead has His own individual nature, and the devotee has his individiual nature as the Lord's associate. An example of the love the Lord's personal associates feel for Him is given in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.25):

go-gopinam matrtasminn asit snehardhikam vina purovad. . .

"Previously, from the very beginning, the gopis had motherly affection for Krsna. Indeed, their affection for Krsna exceeded even their aaection for their own sons. In displaying their affection, they had thus distinguished between Krsna and their sons, but now that distinction disappeared."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

"O brahmanas (teachers), as iron attracted by a magnetic stone moves automatically toward the magnet, my consciousness, having been changed by His will, is attracted by Lord Visnu, who carries a disc in His hand. Thus I have no independence."

Anuccheda 94

Now we will describe the Lord's personal associates feel for the Supreme Lord when the Lord is manifest before them. All perfections are eternally manifest in the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This has been revealed in thr sri Bhagavat-sandarbha and many other books also. In the Agamas and other scriptures various methods of worshioping the Supreme Personality of Godhead are described. When the Lord is worshiped the devotee gradually attains spiritual love for the Lord and becomes His personal associate in aspecific personal relationship. In this way the devotee attains the personal association of the Lord. In this way various kinds of eternally perfect spiritual love for the Supreme Lord and various kinds of eternally perfect relationships with the Supreme Lord are manifest in the eternally perfect liberated devotees. In this way spiritual love for the Lord and a sepcific relationship with the Lord both take birth together within the devotee. In this way the devotee attains specific activities of love for the Lord. When it is joined with a personal rrlationship with the Lord, love for the Lord does notdie. Quite to the contrary. When it is joined with a personal relationship with the Lord, love fopr the Lord increases. In this way it is seen that love for the Lord is greater when it is joined to a personal relationship wityh Him. Even in the material world it is seen that love increases when a the lover feels, "the beloved is mine". In this way it is seen that sometimes a parent is willing even to die for the sake of the child. Lord Krsna Himself affirms this in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.45.21):

pitror abhyadhika pritir atmajesv atmano 'pi hi

"Parents love their children more than their own lives."

From the individual soul's personal relationship with the Supreme Lord, the idea "the Supreme Lord is mine" comes. From the individual soul's own original nature the soul's specific relationship with the Lord coems. Once that relationship is manifest, the idea "the Supreme Lord is mine" also becomes manifested. In this way the individual spirit soul's own original nature is the root from which love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead grows. This is seen in the following question posed by Maharaja Pariksit in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.49):

"During the absence of the original cowherd boys, when Krsna expanded Himself, why is it that the boys' parents became more loving toward Him than toward their own sons? Also, why did the cows become so loving toward the calves, more than toward their own calves?"

srila Sukadeva Gosvami answered the king's question by saying that love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is part of the individual soul's original nature. When that original nature is manifest, then the idea, "the Supreme Lord is mine" is also manifest. From that the greatest love for the Lord is manifest. Thus it is proved that the love connected to the idea "the Lord is mine" is hte greatest love. In this way, when the soul has a relationship with the Lord, the soul's love for the Lord is manifest. An example of that love is seen in the following words spoken by the people of Vraja in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.17.24):

"O Lord, we are Your true friends and devotees. Please protect us from this insurmountable fire of death. We can never give up Your lotus feet, which drive away all fear."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"This verse means: `We do not fear death. However, we cannot bear to be separated from Your feet.' "

This verse also means: "Nor is it right for us to throw far away the fear that we may be separated from Your feet." After speaking these words, the people say: "Your feet drive away all fear (akuto-bhayam)." Or, these words may also be interpreted to mean: "As long as we are near Your feet, we will be completely happy. However, if we cannto stay near Your feet, we will suffer greatly. Therefore, we have no fear from any source when Your feet are present." This verse was spoken by the people of Vraja to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 95

Thus love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is greater when the devotee has a personal relationship with the Lord. The devotees' relationships with the Lord are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.18, and 20-22):

esa vai bhagavan saksad. . .

"This sri Krsna is no other than the inconceivable, original Personality of Godhead. He is the first Narayana, the supreme enjoyer. But He is moving amongst the descendants of King Vrsni just like one of us and He is bewildering us with His self-created energy."

srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.20-22):

yam manyase matuleyam priyam mitram suhrttamam akaroh sacivam dutam sauhrdad atha sarathim

"O King, that personality whom, out of ignorance only, you thought to be your maternal cousin, your very dear friend, well-wisher, counselor, messenger, benefactor, etc., is that very Personality of Godhead, sri Krsna."

sarvatmanah sama-drso hy advayasyanahankrteh tat-krtam mati vaisamyam niravadyasya na kvacit

"Being the Absolute Personality of Godhead, He is present in everyone's heart. He is equally kind to everyone, and He is free from the false ego of differentiation. Therefore whatever He does is free from material inebriety. He is equibalanced."

tathapy ekanta-bhaktesu pasya bhupanukampitam yan me 'sums tyajatah saksat krsno darsanam agatah

"Yet, despite His being equally kind to everyone, He has graciously come before me while I am ending my life, for I am His unflinching servitor."

In these verses the word "sauhrdat" means because of love",

This verse means: "Out of love you thouight Him your maternal cousin, affectionate friend, well-wisher, and chariot driver, but in truth He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead". Here someone may protest: "Is it not so that because He is the Supersoul prsent in every living being, the Supreme Lord sees everyone equally (sama-drsah), and because everything that exists is His potency the Supreme Lord is not different from anything (advayasya), therefore the Supreme Lord does not think, `I am the maternal cousin of someone.'? How can the faultless Supreme Lord think He is someone's maternal cousin? He cannot be bewildered (mati-vaisamyam) into thinking He is someone's maternal cousin." To answer this protest, srimad-Bhagavatam 1.9.21-22) are spoken here. In these verses it is said: "Even though He cannot be anyone's maternal cousin, still (tathapi), O king (bhupa), please see how the Supreme Lord is merciful to His unalloyed devotees (ekanta-bhaktesu). He is so strongly controlled by His devotees' pure devotion that He indeed thinks that He is their friend or kinsman." In the contact between the Lord and His personal associates, Their bodies are one factor and Their relatrionship is another factor. Their relationship is the primary factor. Their bodies are not the primary factor. In this way it is proved that by both relationship and body Lord Krsna is Maharaja Yudhisthira's maternal cousin. An example of these factors is seen here in the words "yo 'sun", where Bhismadeva says: "Because of Our relationship You have graciously come before me while I am ending my life." Thus, at the moment of the devotee's death, the Supreme Personality of Godhead accepts the devotee and gives shelter to him. Bhismadeva prays to attain that shelter in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.33, 35, and 39):

"May sri Krsna, who is the intimate friend of Arjuna. be the object of my attraction."

partha-sakhe ratir mamastu

"Let my mind befixed upon that Krsna."

vijaya-ratha-kutumbha. . .bhagavati ratir astu me mumursor

"At the moment of death, let my ultimate attraction be to sri Krsna, the Personality of Godhead. I concentrate my mind upon the chariot driver of Arjuna who stood with a whip in His right hand and a bridle rope in His left, who was very careful to give protection to Arjuna's chariot by all means."

The srimad-Bhagavatam verses quoted in this anuccheda were spoken by Bhisma to sri Yudhisthira.

When the idea that one has a personal relationship with the Lord is combined with the idea "the Lord is mine", then love becomes very strong. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.6.18):

rajan patir gurur alam bhavatam yadunam daivam priyah kula-patih kva ca kinkaro vah astv evam anga bhagavan bhajatam mukundo muktim dadati karhicit sma na bhakti-yogam

"My dear King, the Supreme Person, Mukunda, is actually the maintainer of all the members of the Pandava and Yadu dynasties. He is your spiritual master, worshipable Deity, friend, and the director of your activities. To say nothing of this, He sometimes serves your family as a messenger or servant. This means He worked just as ordinary servants do. Those engaged in getting the Lord's favor attain liberation from the Lord very easily, but He does not very easily give the opportunity to render direct service unto Him."

That loving devotional service (priti-bhakti) is superior to liberation is described in this prose passage of srimad- Bhagavatam (5.6.17):

yasyam eva kavayah. . .

"Devotees always bathe themselves in devotional service in order to be relieved from the various tribulations of material existence. By doing this, the devotees enjoy supreme bliss, and liberation personified comes to serve them. Nonetheless, they do not accept that service, even if it is offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. For the devotees, liberation [mukti] is very unimportant because, having attained the Lord's transcendental loving service, they have attained everything desirable and have transcended all material desires."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 5.6.18 the words "rajan bhavatam yadunam bhagavan" mean "O king, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the property of you Yadus," evam" means "the love you feel for the Lord is very far from what others have attained". This verse says: Although others repeatedly worship the Supreme Lord, He gives them only liberation and not devotional service." In this way the glory of the Yadus' love for the Lord is described. The glories of devotional service are also described in this prayer spoken by Lord Brahma in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.30):

tad astu me natha sa bhuri-bhago

"My dear Lord, I pray that I may be so fortunate that, in this life or in another life, wherever I may take my birth, I may be counted as one of Your devotees. Wherever I may be, I pray that I may be engaged in Your devotional service."

Anuccheda 97

Now the different levels of advancement of the Lord's personal associates will be described. These levels are considered according to the degree in which the devotee is completely dependent on the Lord. In general the Supreme Personality of Godhead manifests two principal features: 1. supreme opulence (paramaisvarya) and 2. supreme sweetness (parama-madhurya). His opulence is His power and glory as the Supreme Lord (prabhuta), and His sweetness is His character, qualities, form, youthfulness, and pastimes that charm the heart. These features are supreme (parama) because they have no equal or superior. The Lord's devotees are of four kinds. The Lord's personal associates are of two kinds: 1. The associates primarily aware of the Lord's opulence (paramaisvaryanubhava-pradhana), and 2. the associates proimarily aware of the Lord's sweetness (parama-madhuryanubhava-pradhana). Awareness of the Lord's opulence gives birth to awe and reverence. Awareness of the Lord's sweetness gives birth to spiritual love.

The Supreme Lord's opueknce and sweetness are supreme. As these features of the Lord are supreme and beyond measure, so the devotees' feelings of awe and reverence and spiritual love are also supreme and beyond measure. Awe and reverence are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.51):

devaki vasudevas ca vijnaya jagad-isvarau krta-samvandanau putrau sasvajate na sankitau

"Devaki and Vasudeva, now knowing Krsna and Balarama to be the Lords of the universe, simply stood with joined palms. Being apprehensive, they did not embrace their sons."

Awe and spiritual love are both described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.45.1-11):

pitarav uplabadharthau viditva purusottamah ma bhud iti nijam mayam tatana jana-mohinim

"Understanding that Hisd parents were becoming aware of His transcendental opulences, the Supreme Personality of Godhead thought that this should not be allowed to happen. Thus He expanded His Yogamaya, which bewilders His devotees.

"Lord Krsna, the greatest of the Satvatas, approached His parents with His elder brother. Humbly bowing His head and gratifying them by respectfully addressing them as `My dear mother' and `My dear father', Krsna spoke as follows. "Dear father, because of Us, your two sons, you and mother Devaki always remained in anxiety and could never enjoy Our childhood, boyhood, or youth. "Deprived by fate, We could not live with you and enjoy the pampered happiness most children enjoy in their parent's home. "With one's body one can acuire all goals of life, and it is one's parents who give the body birth and sustenance. Therefore no mortal man can repay his debt to his parents, even if he serves them for a full lifetime of a hundred years. "A son who, though able to do so, fails to provide for his parents with his physical resources and wealth is forced after his death to eat his own flesh. "A man who, though able to do so, fails to support his elderly parents, chaste wife, young child, or spiritual master, or who neglects a brahmana or anyone who comes to him for shelter, is considered dead, though breathing. "Thus We have wasted all these days, unable as We were to properly honor you because Our minds were always disturbed by fear of Kamsa. "Dear father and mother, please forgive Us for not serving you. We are not independent and have been greatly frustrated by cruel Kamsa.

"Thus beguiled by the words of Lord Hari, the Supreme Soul of the universe, who by His internal illusory potency appeared to be human, His parents joyfully raised Him up on their laps and embraced Him, sincantav asru-dharabhih sneha-pasena cavrtau na kincid ucatu rajan baspa-kanthau vimohitau

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.45.1 the word upalabdharthau" means "they understood the truth that their son is the master of all the worlds". "Ma bhut" means "Devaki and Vasudeva walk on the path of being My parents. The love they bear for Me is very difficult for the jnani-bhaktas and even the pure devotees to attain. Therefore their awareness of My opulences should be covered over. For them this awareness should not be." The words "nijam mayam tatana" mean "the Lord extended His avarana- sakti (covering potency) to cover their awareness that Her is the Supreme Personality of Godhead". In the passage beginning with the word "uvaca" (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.45.2), Lord Krsna manifested His own sweetness in order to increase his parents' love for Him. Or, in another interpretation of this passage, the word "maya" may be interpreted to mean "mercy". The Visva-prakasa Dictionary gives this definition:

"The word `maya' may mean `pride' or `mercy'."

Accepting this definition of "maya", the passage "nijam mayam tatana" mean "the Lord manifested His mercy and increased His parents' love for Him in the rasa of parenthood". Someone may ask: "What is the nature of the Lord's mercy?" The answer is given in these words: The Supreme Lord's mercy is that with His sweetness He enchants every living entity. Someone may ask: "How does the Lord give this mercy?" The answer is the Lord covers His own opuelnce and manifests His sweetness. This is seen here in the passage beginning with the word "uvaca". Still another interpretation may be given for the words "nijam mayam tatana". The dictionary also gives this definition for the word "maya":

"The word `maya' may mean `spiritual knowledge'."

Interpreted according to this definition, the words nijam mayam tatana" mean "the Lord manifested the confidential knowledge of His sweetness. In this way he caused spiritual love for Him to take its birth in them." For this reason, then, the Lord may have spoken the passage here beginning with the word "uvaca". In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.45.10 the word "maya-manusyasya" means "of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is full of all transcendental knowledge, and whose form superficially resembles that of a human being". The passage from srimad-Bhagavatam quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

In devotion (bhakti) in the mood of appreciating the Supreme Lord's opulence (paramaisvarya) many sentiments may be said to increase (uddipana) the mood of devotion. Prominent among these sentiments are awe and reverence. These sentiments are like the limbs of the body of devotion. Ecstatic love (priti) for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is like the soul that rests within the body of devotion. That love is increased (uddipana) by awareness of the Lord's sweetness. Awareness of His opulence and His sweetness both stimulate the sentiment of devotion to the Lord. However, it is awareness of the Lord's sweetness, an awareness that specifically increases ecstatic love (priti) that is most natural to the people of Gokula. If awareness of the Lord's opulence enters amongst them, it is only an occasional guest. That awareness entered Gokula after Lord Krsna lifted Govardhana Hill. That awareness of the Lord's opulence is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.26.1-13):

"The cowherd men were astonished when they saw Krsna's activities, such as lifting Govardhana Hill. Unable to understand His transcendental potency, they approached Nanda Maharaja and spoke as follows. "Since this boy performs such extraordinary activities, how could He warrant a birth among worldly men like us - a birth that for Him would seem contemptible? "How could this seven-year-old boy playfully hold up the great hill Govardhana with one hand, just as a mighty elephant holds up a lotus flower? "As a mere infant who had hardly yet opened His eyes, He drank the breast milk of the powerful demonness Putana and then sucked out her very life air as well, just as the force of time sucks out the youth of one's body. "Once when only three months old, little Krsna was crying and kicking up His feet as He lay beneath a huge cart. Then the cart fell and turned upside-down simply because it was struck by the tip of His toe. "At the age of one, while sitting peacefully He was taken up into the sky by the demon Trnavarta. But baby Krsna grabbed the demon's neck, causing him great pain, and thus killed him. "Once, His mother tied Him with ropes to a kortar because she had caught Him stealing butter. Then, crawling on His hands, He dragged the mortar between a pair of arjuna trees and pulled them down. "Another time, when Krsna was tending the calves in the forest together with Balarama and the cowherd boys, the demon Bakasura came with the intention of killing Krsna. But Krsna seized this inimical demon by the mouth and tore him apart. "Desiring to kill Krsna, the demon Vatsa disguised himself as a calf and entered among Krsna's calves. But Krsna killed the demon and, using his body, enkoyed the sport of knocking kapittha fruits down from the trees. "Together with Lord Balarama, Krsna killed the jackass demon and all his friends, thereby securing the safety of the Talavana forest, which abounded with fully ripened palm fruits. "After arranging fdor the mighty Lord Balar.ama to kill the terrible demon Pralamba, Krsna saved Vraja's cowherd boys and their animals from a forest fire. "Krsna chastised the most poisonous serpent Kaliya, and after humbling him, drove him forcibly from the lake of the Yamuna. In this way the Lord made the water of that river free of the snake's powerful poison. "Dear Nanda, how is it that we and all the other residents of Vraja cannot give up our constant affection for your son? And how is it that He is so spontaneously attracted to us?"

In answer to the gopas' questions, Nanda Maharaja spoke these words describing His perception of the Lord's opulence and sweetness both (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.26.15-23):

sruyatam me vaco gopa vyetu sanka ca vo 'rbhake enam kumaram uddisya gargo me yad uvaca ha. . .

"O cowherd men, just hear my words and let all your doubts concerning my son be gone. Some time ago Garga Muni spoke to me as follows about this boy. "Your son Krsna appears as an incranation in every millenium. In the past He assumed three different colors - white, red, and yellow - and now He has appeared in a blackish color. "For many reasons, this beautiful son of yours sometimes appeared previously as the son of Vasudeva. Therefore, those who are learned sometimes call this child Vasudeva. "For this son of yours there are many forms and names according to His transcendental qualities and activities. These are known to me, but people in general do not understand them. "To increase the transcendental bliss of the cowherd men of Gokula, this child will always act auspiciously for you. And by His grace only you will surpass all difficulties. "O Nanda Maharaja, as recorded in history, when there was an irregular, incapable government, Indra having been dethroned, and when honest people were being harassed and disturbed by thieves, this child appeared in order to curb the rogues and to protect the people and enable them to flourish. "Demons cannot harm the demigods, who always have Lord Visnu on their side. Similarly, any person ro group attached to all-auspicious Lord Krsna cannot be defeated by enemies. "Therefore, O Nanda Maharaja, this child of yours is as good as Narayana. In His transcendental qualities, opulence, name, fame, and influence, He is exactly like Narayana. Thus you should nto be astonished by His activities. "After Garga Rsi spoke these words to me and returned home, I began to consider that Krsna, who keeps us free from trouble, is actually and expansion of Lord Narayana."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.26.15 teh words "gargo me yad uvaca ha" mean "Garga spoke secret knowledge". The words "arbhake kumaram" mean "there was great sweetness in His boyish nature". These verses were spoken by Nanda, the king of Vraja.

The Supreme Personality of Godhead explains in srimad- Bhagavatam (11.12.13):

mat-kama ramanam jaram asvarupa-vido 'balah

"The gopis passionately desired Me as their charming lover. They did not know the truth about Me."

It was not exactly that the gopis did not know the truth of Lord Krsna. Rather, because they were filled with knowledge of His sweetness, therefore knowledge of His status as the Supreme Personality of Godhead was impossible for them. It was impossible because they were not attracted to any other feature of the Supreme Lord, who is the delight of the self-realized souls. Not every devotee worships the Lord as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Nor does every devotee see the Lord as such. According to the nature of his own qualification, each devotee approsches a specific feature of the Lord. The Supreme Lord has numberless features. It is not possible for any devotee to approach all of these features. in Vedanta-sutra, the author of the sutras explains that the Lord has many different features, and the devotee may worship specific features of the Lord. The Vedanta- sutra (3.3.65) declares:

"The Supreme has many features and qualitiese."

It is also said in the scriptures:

yasya yasya hi yah kamas tasya tasya hy upasanam tadrsanam gunanam ca samaharam prakalpayet

"According to his own inclination each devotee worships a specific feature of the Lord. The Lord has many, many different features and qualities."

The truth that different persons approach the Lord in different ways is also described by srila sridhara Svami is these words of His commentary on srimad-Bhagavatam (10.43.17):

"In Lord Krsna's form srngara-rasa and the other rasas rest. The Lord manifests various features of Himself according to His devotee's desire. He does not appear in the same way to everyone."

The devotees who are aware of the Lord's supreme opulences approach the Syupreme Lord as the Absolute Truth. These devotees cannot perceive the supreme sweetness of the Lord. Other devotees, however, can perceive the Lord's supreme sweetness. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (5.18.12):

yasyasti bhaktir bhagavaty akincana sarvair gunais tatra samasate surah. . .

"All the demigods and their exalted qualities, such as religion, knowledge and renunciation, become manifest in the body of one who has developed unalloyed devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva."

In these words of srimad-Bhagavatam it is devotion, and not mere knowledge, that is honored. In the previously mentioned verse of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.43.17) is is said that the devotees aware of the Lord's sweetness are the wisest of devotees. There it is said (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.43.17):

mallanam asanir nrnam nara-varah strinam smaro murtiman gopanam svajano 'satam ksiti-bhujam sasta sva- pitroh sisuh mrtyur bhoja-pater virad avidusam tattvam param yoginam vrsninam para-devateti vidito rangam gatah sagrajah

"The various groups of people in the arena regarded Krsna in different ways when He entered it with His elder brother. The wrestlers saw Krsna as a lightning bolt, the men of Mathura as the best of males, the women as Cupid in person, the cowherd men as their relative, the impious rulers as a chastiser, His parents as their child, the king of the Bhojas as death, the unintelligent as the Lord's universal form, the yogis as the Absolute Truth, and the Vrsnis as their supreme worshipable Deity."

In this verse three kinds of persons are described: 1. enemies of the Lord (pratikula-jnana), 2. fools (mudha), and 3. wise philosophers (vidvan). The enemies of the Lord are: 1. the wrestlers (mallanam) who are enemies of the all-loving Supreme Lord, 2. the kings (ksiti-bhujam) who are Kamsa's allies, and 3. King Kamsa. The fools are the persons who see Lord Krsna as the universal form. The wise philosophers are the other persons mentioned in this verse. The mention here of the universal form refers to the idea that the Lord's form is made of material elements, and thus is part of the universal form. This is the idea of unintelligent persons. Of these fools some ignore the Lord's requests. Those persons are like the yajnika brahmanas (described in srimad-Bhagavatam's Tenth Canto). Others of these fools hate and insult the Lord. Still others of these fools neither hate nor like the Lord. The devotees are horrified by the idea that the Supreme Lord has a body made of matter. In truth the Supreme Lord uses this idea to nourish the bibhatsa-rasa (the rasa of horror). In this verse the word nrnam nara-varah" mean "ordinary people think the Supreme Lord, because of his sweetness, power, and opulence, is the best of human beings." In this idea there is some wisdom. Ordinary devotees may sometimes love the Lord according to this idea. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.43.20):

niriksya tav uttama-purusau jana manca-sthita nagara-rastraka nrpa praharsa-vegotkaliteksanananah. . .

Although they were citizens in the Lord's city, because they did not have the conception, "the Lord is mine" these people of Mathura were not, at least at that time, on the level of palya (devotees who consider themselves protected by the Lord). However, many other devotees, what to speak of the gopis (sri-gopinam) do have the kind of love for the Lord where one thinks "the Lord is mine". In this verse the word nrnam" means "ordinary devotees", the word yoginam" means "the four Kumaras and the other jnani-bhaktas who, staying in the sky, yearn to see the Lord's pastimes". These devotees do nto have the idea "the Lord is mine". It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.6):

"My dear King, all the women present, considering the match an unfair fight between the strong and the weak, felt extreme anxiety due to compassion. They assembled in groups around the arena and spoke to one another as follows."

srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.8):

kva vajra-sara-sarvangau. . .

"What comparison can there be between these two professional wrestlers, with limbs as strong as lightning bolts and bodies resembling mighty mountains, and these two young, immature boys with exceedingly tender limbs?"

The women (strinam) who spoke these words were filled with compassion and love for the Lord. They saw Lord Krsna as Cupid personified. It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.14):

gopyas tapah kim acaran. . .

"What austerities must the gopis have performed! With their eyes they always drink the nectar of Lord Krsna's form, which is the essence of loveliness and is not to be equaled or surpassed. That lovliness is the only abode of beauty, fame, and opulence. It is self-perfect, ever fresh and extremely rare."

Amorous love felt by even the most exalted of material girls in this world is always love mixed with other things. That love is not pure, like the love the gopis feel. That ordinary love will eventually break in the course of time. Then the lover will no longer think, "My beloved is mine". In srimad- Bhagavatam 10.43.17 are mentiond the Vrsnis, the gopas, and Lord Krsna's parents. The all very strongly think, "the Supreme Lord is mine". Amongst devotees who directly perceive the Supreme Lord's sweetness, they are the most exalted. Now the words "gopanam svajanah" and "vrsninam para-devata" will be discussed. The word "sri- gopanam" referrs to the gopas, who perceived the sweetness of the Lord in the relationship of being His friends and kinsmen. The words "gopanam svajanah" and vrsninam para-devata" describe how, thinking of the Lord as their supreme Deity, the Vrsnis were aware of the Lord's feature of supreme opulence. This is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (7.1.31):

"Because of their family relationship, the Vrsnis attained the mercy of Krsna."

From this it may be seen that for the Vrsnis the most important element of their relationship with the Lord was their family relationship with Him. Their perception of His supreme opulence was less important. Furthermore, amongst the Vrsnis were some very lowly persons, like Kamsa, who became the Supreme Lord's enemies, and also some fools, like satadhanva. About the Vrsnis it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.84.23):

"Neither these kings nor even the Vrsnis, who enjoy Your intimate association, know You as the Soul of all existence, the force of time, ansd the supreme controller. For them You are covered by the curtain of Maya."

Of the exalted Vrsnis, Devaki and Vasudeva are the best. They have the best knowledge of the Supreme Lord's opulence. However, because in the Lord's pastimes they became His parents (pitroh sisuh), Devaki and Vasudeva also have great knowledge of the Lord's sweetness. For them, awareness of the Lord's opulence and supremacy is less important than awareness of His sweetness. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.84.30):

nati-citram idam vipra vasudevo bubhutsaya krsnam matvarbhakam yan nah prcchati sreya atmanah

"O brahmanas, it is not so amazing that in his eagerness to know, Vasudeva has asked us about his ultimate benefit, for he considers Krsna a mere boy."

In this verse sri Narada does not specifically praise Devaki and Vasudeva for thinking the Lord was their son. However, Maharaja Pariksit does indeed praise Yasoda and Nanda for having that same thought. The king says in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.8.46):

nandah kim akarod brahman. . .

"O learned brahmana, mother Yasoda's breast milk was sucked by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. What past auspicious activities did she and Nanda Maharaja perform to achieve such perfection in ecstatic love?"

From the moment of the Lord's birth Devcaki and Vasudeva were aware of His opulence. Still, their awareness of His sweetness was more important. This is confirmed by srila sridhara Svami, who in His commentary on srimad-Bhagavatam (10.45.1) explains that althouh Devaki and Vasudeva were certainly aware of the Lord's opulence, their love for Him as their son was a more rare and valuable attainment for them. This is also true for the gopas, as srimad-Bhagavatam 10.43.17 explains in the words "sri-gopanam svajanah" (the cowherd men saw Lord Krsna as their relative). The cowherd people were not like Kamsa and the other enemies of the Lord. The cowherd people were overcome with love for Lord Krsna. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.15):

"All the inhabitants of Vrndavana, including the children, women and elderly persons, thought of Krsna just as a cow thinks of her helpless young calf, and thus these poor, suffering people rushed out of the village, intent upon finding Him."

Maharaja Nanda was situated in the most exalted eternal parental love for the Lord. The Lord personally became his son. What more need be said? srimad-Bhagavatam 10.43.17 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Srila Jiva Gosvami's Sri Priti-sandarbha Volume Two

Anuccheda 81

In describing Maharaja Pariksit's many virtues, some brahmanas who yearned to see Lord Krsna compared Maharaja Pariksit's virtues to Lord Krsna's supreme virtues They said (Srimad-Bhagavatam 1.12.24)

esa krsnam anuvratah

This child wilì be almost as good as Lord Sri Krsna by following in His footsteps"

Of course, this does not mean that Maharaja Pariksit is equaì to Lord Krsna Lord Krsna is so glorious that He naturally arouses love for HIm in His devotees This is seen in the following prayers from Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.39-40)

vijaya-ratha-kutumbha . .yam iha niriksya hata gatah sva-rupam

At the moment of death, let my ultimate attraction be to Sri Krsna, the Personality of Godhead I concentrate my mind upon the chariot driver of Arjuna who stood with a whip in His right hand and a bridle rope in His left, who was very carefuì to give protection to Arjuna's chariot by alì means Those who sat Him on the Battlefield of Kuruksetra attained their originaì forms after death.

Let my mind be fixed upon Lord Sri Krsna, whose motions and smiles of love attracted the damsels of Vrajadhama (the gopis) The damsels imitated the characteristic movements of the Lord (after His disappearance from the rasa dance)."

Hot exalted is the kind of liberation described in these verses, sarupya liberation, where the devotee attains a spirituaì form like that of the Lord: The gopis activity of imitating Lord Krsna's pastimes is described in these owrds of Ujjvala-nilamani (Anubhava-prakarana 28):

priyanukaranam lila .

The gopis imitated Lord Krsna's pastimes."

The word prakrtim in Srimad-Bhagavatam 1.9.4° means own nature" The gopis were so overwhelmed with love they thought their nature and Lord Krsna's nature had become one This kind of great ecstasy (maha-bhava) is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani (Sthayi-bhava-prakarana 143):

radhayah bhavatas ca citta-jatuni svedaih vilapya kramad yujann adri-nikuja-kujara-pate nirdhuta-bheda-bhramam citraya svayam anvarajayad iha brahmanda-harmyodare bhuyobhih nava-raga-hingula-bharaih srngara-karuh krti

O my Lord, You live in the forest of Govardhana Hill, and, like the king of elephants, You are expert in the art of conjugaì love O master of the universe, Your heart and Srimati Radharani's heart are just like shallac and are not melted in Your spirituaì perspiration Therefore You can no longer distinguish between You and Srimati Radharani Not You have mixed Your newly invoked affection, which is like vermilion, with Your melted hearts, and for the benefit of the whole world You have painted both Your hearts red within this great palace of the universe."

Two verses from Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.31-40) quoted here were spoken by Bhisma to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 82

Hot Lord Krsna makes the devotees falì in love with Him is also described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (9.24.65)

yasyananam makara-kundala-caru-karna- bhrajat-kapola-subhagam savilasa-hasam nityotsavam na tatrpur drsibhih pibantyo naryo naras ca muditah kupita nimes ca

Krsna's face is decorated with ornaments, such as earrings resembling sharks His ears are beautiful, His cheeks brilliant, and His smiling attractive to everyone Whoever sees Lord Krsna sees a festival His face and body are fully satisfying for everyone to see, but the devotees are angry at the creator for the disturbance caused by the momentary blinking of their eyes."

Srila Sridhara Svami comments:

To teach the reader, the auther here describes the glory of Lord Krsna's face."

Here devotees become angry (kupitah) if their eyes blink (nimeh) as they gaze at Lord Krsna This anger is the way of maha-bhava ecstatic love In this way the perfection of that love is described This verse was spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 83

Hot Lord Krsna makes the devotees falì in love with Him is also described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.40)

ka stry anga te kala-padayata .

Dear Krsna, what woman in alì the three worlds wouldn't deviate from religious behavior when bewildered by the sweet, drawn-out melody of Your flute: Your beauty makes alì three worlds auspicious Indeed, even the cows, birds, trees and deer manifest the ecstatic symptom of bodily hair standing on end when they see Your beautifuì form."

This is also described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.19)

aspandanam gati-matam pulakas tarunam .

When Lord Krsna plays on His flute, the sweet music causes the moving living entities to become stunned and the nonmoving trees to tremble with ecstasy These things are certainly very wonderful."

That Lord Krsna makes even the trees and vines tremble in ecstasy is confirmed by these words of Bilvamangala Thakura:

santö avatara bahavah puskara-nabhasya sarvato-bhadrah krsnad anyah ko va latasv api pramodo bhavati

The lotus-naveled Supreme Personality of Godhead has many glorious and auspicious incarnations Still, who but Lord Krsna Himself would bring ecstatic joy to the flowering vines?"

The Srimad-Bhagavatam verse (10.29.40) quoted in the beginning of this anuccheda was spoken by the goddesseslike gopis of Vraja

Anuccheda 84

As the various incarnatiosn of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are on different levels, some higher or lower, so love for the Lord is also on different levels, some kinds of love higher and others lower The various qualities of the different stages of spirituaì love (priti) show many differences These qualities are of two basic kinds 1 qualities that prufy the devotees hearts (bhakta-citta-samskriya), and 2 qualities that place certain conceptions in the devotees hearts (tad-abhimana) The first group of qualities are these 1 love brings bliss to the devotee's heart, 2 love gives the idea Krsna is mine", 3 love creates faith in Krsna, 4 love gives the idea that Krsna is the object of love, 5 love makes the heart melt, 6 love makes the devotee see Lord Krsna as newer and newer at every moment, and 7 love makes the devotees become wild with a sense of wonder that has no equaì or superior When it brings great bliss, spirituaì love is called rati" In that stage the devotee desires to attain Lord Krsna alone Then alì other desires seem petty and insignificant When love fills the devotee with the idea Krsna is mine", that stage is called prema" When that stage is reached nothing has the power to lessen or wither the devotee's love This stage of love, where the devotee is filled with the idea Krsna is mine is described in many places in the scriptures For example, the nature of thinking it is mine in described in these words of the Markandeya Purana:

marjara-bhaksite duhkham yadrsam grha-kukkute na tadrn- mamata-sunye kalavinke 'tha musike

A rooster that shares the same living space with a housecat, thinks, `It is my cat', and fears that someday the cat wilì eat him However, a sparrot or a rat, who do not live in the same hosue with the cat, and do not think, `It is my cat', and do not have the same fear.

The nature of thinking it is mine when it is manifested in loving devotionaì service (prema-bhakti) is seen in these words of Narada-pacaratra:

ananya-mamata visnau mamata prema-samyuta bhaktir ity acyute bhisma-prahladoddhava-naradaih

Bhisma, Prahlada, Uddhava, and Narada were filled with devotion for the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead, pure devotion characterized by the thought, `Lord Visnu is mine He is alì I possess'."

Here the word ananya-mamata means The thought Lord Visnu is mine He is alì I possess. This kind of rapt devotion to the Lord is also described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.32)

sattva evaika-manasah .

The mind's naturaì duty is to serve When that service spirit is engaged in devotionaì service to the Personality of Godhead, without any motive, that is far better even than salvation."

When great faith is present, love for the Supreme Lord is called pranaya" When this state is manifest it may seem appropriate that awe, veneration, and other like sentiments would be appropriate However, they are not manifest When the conception that Lord Krsna is one's beloved becomes very strong, and when a great wonder of varieties of the reflection of crookedness are manifest, then loving jealous anger (pranaya- mana) is manifest When this kind of jealous anger is manifest even the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself feels love-filled fear born from His beloved's loving anger When the melting of the heart becomes very prominent, the stage of love is called sneha" In that stage from even a reflection of Lored Krsna's contact the devotee manifests great tears and other like symptoms In this stage the devotee never becomes satiated by gazing at the beloved Krsna The devotee also fears that some calamity may come When in this stage of sneha, passionate desire becomes very strong, the stage is called raga" In that stage the devotee cannot tolerate even a moment's separation from the beloved Krsna When the devotee associates with Lord Krsna, the devotee thinks the greatest sufferings are alì happinesses, and whne the devotee cannot associate with Krsna, the devotee thinks alì happiness are the greatest sufferings When in that stage of raga the devotee sees the beloved Krsna as newer and newer at every moment, the stage is called nava-navi-bhavann anuraga" In that stage Lord Krsna and His devotee become under each other's control In that stage is manifest great anguish of love (prema-vaicittya) Then the devotee yearsn always to be with Krsna, and in Krsna's absence the devotee trembles with grief When the stage of anuraga is manifest in a wonderfuì way without equaì or superior, then the devotee becomes wild with love This stage is called maha-bhava" In that stage the devotee cannot tolerate even the blinking of the eyes that may interrupt gazing at Lored Krsna In Lord Krsna's presence a kalpa seems like a moment, and in Krsna's absence a moment seems like a kalpa In both of these stages the uddipta (blazing) sattvika-bhavas are alì manifest In this way the qualities that puri 6fy the heart are revealed. The different qualities that place various conceptions in the loving devotees hearts wilì not be described As theLord manifests Himself in different ways, so the devotees feeì different kinds of love for Him Some devotees think of themselves as people who receive mercy from Lord. Other devotees think of themselves as people who give mercy to the Lord Other devotees think of themselves as the Lord's friends Other devotees think of themselves as the Lord's female beloved As the Supreme Lord manifests different aspects of Himself, the devotees manifest a loving relationship appropriate to the feature the Lord manifested In this way the Lord's eternaì associates each have an eternaì relationship with Him The love manifested by the devotee when the devotee thinks himself the object of the Lord's mercy is called bhakti" When the devotee thinks of the Lord as the object of worship, then bhakti (devotion) naturally follows This is described in the following words of the Maya-vaibhava-sastra:

When it is based on awe and reverence, the devotees love for the Lord is called bhakti."

Here the word sneha means love in a generaì sense It is does not refer to a specific stage of love Bhakti is also described in these words of the Padma Purana:

mahitva-buddhir bhaktis tu sneha-purvabhidhiyate

The sages use the word bhakti in a generaì sense to mean love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead" Thus the word bhakti has a generaì meaning (love and devotion) and a specific meaning (love in the stage of awe and reverence) also Some words have a generaì and specific meaning in this way For example the word jiva has the generaì meaning of living entity" However, it also has a specific meaning of human being" In the same way, the word bhakti sometimes means inetnse bhakti", or, in other words, prema (love) In the same way, the word brahmana may refer to the brahmana class in general, or it may refer to one certain especially exalted brahmana This usage is seen in the following verse of the Pacaratra:

mahatmya-jana-purvas tu su-drdhah sarvato-'dhikah sneho bhaktir iti proktas taya sarsty-adi nanyatha

When love in the mood of awe and reverence becomes very strong, it is called `sneha-bhakti' By practicing sneha- bhakti one attains sarsti and the other kinds of Vaisnava liberation It is not otherwise."

In some situations tyhe word bhakti is used to describe the state of love where in his heart the devotee thinks Krsna is mine" In this situation the priomary meaning of the word bhakti is the state of devotion where the devotee thinks of himself as the recipient of thje Supreme Lord's mercy This state where the devoptee thinks of himself as receiving the Lord's mercy is of two kinds 1 the state where the devotee considers the Lord his maintainer, and 2 the state where the devotee thinks the Lord is especially kind to him In the state where the devotee thinks of the Lord as the maintainer, the devotee is delighted by the Lord's nature and qualities In the state where the devotee thinks the Lord is especially kind to him, the devotee yearns to serve the Lord Then the devotee considers devotionaì service his great good fortune His heart melts with devotion to the Lord He spontaneously wishes to help and please the Lord These devotees are of two kinds 1 the devotees who do not think the Lord is mine", and 2 the devotees who do think the Lord is mine" The devotees who delight in thinking of the Lord as the Paramatma or Parabrahma do not think the Lord is mine" These are the jani-bhaktas (devotees whose conceptions are mixed with jana) Amongst them Sri Sanaka and the four Kumaras are the most prominent Their idea, that the Lord is not mine" is expressed in these words:

O Supreme Lord, I am Yours, but You are not mine You are like the ocean, and I am like a wave in the ocean The wave is the property of the ocean, but the ocean is never the property of the wave."

As one gazes at the moon but does not think the moon is mine", in the same way these devotees lovingly see the Lord, but do not think the Lord is mine" These devotees are favorably inclined to the Lored They offer prayers to Him and perform other like activities for Him Still, their love for Him is called jana-bhakti", for they see HIm as the Brahman Their relationship with Him is also called santa-rasa", for peacefulness (santi) is prominent amongst them The Supreme Lord Hismelf describes them in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (11.19.36)

samo man-nisthata buddheh

They are peaceful, and their intelligence is devoted to Me."

Not we wilì consider the devotees who, thinking themselves the recipients of the Supreme Lord's mercy, also think the Lord is mine" These devotees think, the Lord is ours" Their conception is described in these words of the Pancaratra (previously quoted here in anuccheda 84):

ananya-mamata .

Bhisma, Prahlada, Uddhava, and Narada were filled with devotion for the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead, pure devotion characterized by the thought, `Lord Visnu is mine He is alì I possess'."

Bhisma, Prahlada, Uddhava, Narada, and many other devotees think in this way However, Sanaka-kumara and the other jana-bhaktas do not think in this way In this way the devotees who think themselves the recipients of the Lord's mercy also think, the Lord is mine" The devotees who thing themselves the recipients of the Lord's mercy are of three kinds 1 the devotees who thing themselves protected (palya) by the Lord, 2 the devotees who thing themselves servants (bhrtya) of the Lord, and 3 the devotees who thing themselves objects of the Lord's affection (lalya) Not we wilì considsr, one by one, the natures of these various kinds of devotees The devotees who thing the Lord is their protector are the citizens of Dvaraka and other like devotees The devotees who thing they should serve the Lord are the Lord's servants, like Daruka The devotees who thing they are objects of the Lord's affection are devotees who thing of Him as their superior, devotees like His sons Pradyumna and Gada These three kinds of devotees alì have priti-bhakti (loving devotion) for the Lord The previously described jnana- bhaktas are inferior, for their knowledge of the Lord is covered The devoteeswho think the Lord is mine are superior Their love for the Lord is greater This is explained in Srila Rupa Gosvami's Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu Not these different kinds of devotion wilì be considered In the devotion wehre one thinks oneself protected by the Lord on thinks the Lord one's shelter In the devotion where one thinks oneself the Lord's servant, one has the conception of being a servant In the devotion where one thinks onself the object of the Lord's affection one is humble and respectfuì before the Lord It is implied here that these kinds of devotion to the Lord are filled with the idea that the Lord is one's superior and with reverent activities such as bowing down to offere respects However, reverence is not considered the essence of this kind of devotion, for without the specific conceptions these devotees have (of being personally proetcted by the Lord, personally serving Him, or personally loved by Him) mere reverent loving loving devotion is only ordinary loving devotion (bhakti-samanya) to the Lord and not the exalted devotion of these personaì associates of the Ìord. In the conception that the devotee gives his mercy to the Lord, the devoptee thinks, the Lord is my son", or has another similar idea This kind of love is called vatsalya" The word [vatsalya is derived from the word vatsa (calf) As one may be affectionate to a calf, so parents may be affectionate to their children and hug the children, holding them to their chests This kind of love is called vatsalya (parentaì love) This kind of relationship is filled with love They who knot the nature of rasa calì this vatsalya-rasa This state, and this derivation of the word vatsalya are seen in these words describing Devahuti when she was separated from her son (Srimad-Bhagavatam 3.33.21)

Devahuti's husband had already left home and accepted the renounced order of life, and then her only son, Kapila, left home Although she knet alì the truths of life and death, and although her hearet was cleansed of alì dirt, she weas very aggrieved at the loss of her son, just as a cot is affected when her calf dies."

The sentiments of vatsalya-rasa are also felt by the king and queen of Vraja and many other devotees as well. When the devotee thinks Krsna is my equaì in charm and virtues Therefore without limit I love Him as a friend", that kind of love is called maitra priti" When the devotee thinks Krsna and I enjoy many nectar pastimes together without limit Therefore I love Him as a friend", that kind of love is called sakhya priti" Lord Krsna's friends (mitras), therefore, are of two kinds 1 suhrts, and 2 sakhas Yudhisthira, Bhisma, and Draupadi are counted among the suhrts Arjuna and Sridama are counted among the sakhas. When the devotee thinks Krsna is my beloved", that is called kanta-bhava" This love of a female devotee for her beloved Krsna is described in Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu (2.5.36) in the definition of the word priyata" Ordinary scholars calì this by the word rat" They say the gopis love for Lord Krsna is like ordinary materiaì lust, and to describe that love they use the word kama (lust) However the gopis love is very different from materiaì lust It is far superior Ordinary materiaì lust has ordinary materiaì desires at its heart Ordinary materiaì love is characterized by the desire for pleasant contact with materiaì sense objects The activities that come from these two (materiaì lust and materiaì love) are the same, for both are based on the desire to please one's own self When the desire to please the beloved is manifest as a secondary goal, after pleasing one's own self, that is called materiaì love Pure love (suddha- priti) is when the desire to please the beloved becomes the true goaì of the lover When the prinary goaì is to please the beloved, that state is called by the word priti (love) As the happiness of materiaì pleasure and materiaì love are similar, although the happiness of love is superior, so the desires of materiaì lust and materiaì love are similar, although the desires of materiaì love are superior In the same way the desires of exalted, spirituaì lust and exalted, spirituaì love love are similar, although the desires of exalted, spirituaì love are superior An example of exalted, spirituaì love is seen in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.31.19)

O dearly belovedi Your lotus feet are so soft that we place them gently on our breasts, fearing that Your feet wilì be hurt Our life rests only in You Our minds, therefore, are filled with anxiety that Your tender feet might be wounded by pebbles as You roam about on the forest path."

In this verse is seen exalted pure love, where the lover desires the happiness of the beloved This love is exalted because its desires are exalted Kubja and others feeì spirituaì lust to enjoy with Krsna This kind of lust is not material When spirituaì lust is present, then materiaì lust cannot remain This is confirmed by these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.39)

vikriditam vraja-vadhubhir idam ca visnoh sraddhanvito nusrnuyad atha varnayed yah bhaktim param bhagavati pratilabhya kamam hrd-rogam asö apahinoty acirena dhirah

Anyone who faithfully hears or describes the Lord's playfuì affairs with the young gopis of Vrndavana wilì attain the Lord's pure devotionaì service Thus he wilì quickly become sober and conquer lust, the disease of the heart."

Hearing these pastimes quickly removes materiaì lust, even from people separated by a long time or a great physiciaì distance from these pastimes Then these pastimes grant spirituaì love to the hearers Materiaì lust wilì never return to those hearers Instead, exalted spiurituaì love wilì stay with them Mud is not washed away by more mud Nor is love created by a lacë of love The Supreme Lord is greatly pleased by this pure love This is seen in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.22.18)

bhagavan ahata viksya suddha-bhava-prasaditah

When the Supreme Lord sat hot the gopis were strucë with embarrassment, He was satisfied by their pure loving affection"

Even though He isd the crest-jeweì of alì self-satisfied persons, the Supreme Lord is delighted by His devotees pure love This is seen in the following words of

Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.19)

krtva tavantam atmanam .

Expanding Himself as many times as there were cowherd women to associate with, the Supreme Lord, though self- satisfied, playfully enjoyed their company."

The Supreme Lord is controlled by His devotees pure love This is seen in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.22)

na paraye 'ham niravadya-samyujam .

I am not able to repay My debt for your spotless service, even within a lifetime of Brahma Your connection with Me is beyond reproach You have worshiped Me, cutting off alì domestic ties, which are difficult to break Therefore please let your own glorious deeds be your compensation."

In this verse the word niravadya (spotless service) shows the purity of the gopis love, the word sva-sadhu- krtyam (able to repay My debt) shot the exalted nature of their love, and the words na paraye (I am not able) shot hot the Supreme Lord is controlled by their love That the gopis are the most exalted of alì the pure lovers of the Supreme Lord is seed in these words spoken by Sri Uddhava in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.58)

vachanti yad bhava-bhiyo munayo vayam ca

Among alì persons on earth, these cowherd women alone have actually perfected their embodied lives, for they have achieved the perfection of unalloyed love for Lord Govinda Their pure love is hankered after by those who fear materiaì existence, by great sages, and by ourselves as well For one who has tasted the narrations of the infinite Lord, what is the use of takinç birth as a high-class brahmana, or even as Lord Barhma himself?"

Therefore the gopis love, where they thinë of the Supreme Lord as their paramour is the highest of all In this way spirituaì love (priti) has five basic conceptions 1.jana- bhakti (dveotion mixed with knowledge, or santa-rasa), 2 bhakti (devotion in the mood of servitude), 3 vatsalya (parentaì love), 4 maitri (friendship), and 5 kanta-bhava (conjugaì love) Sometimes mixtures of these five conceptions are present Sri Bhisma and others are situated in a mixture of santa-rasa and servitude Sri Yudhisthira is situated in parwentaì love and welì-wishinç friendship (sauhrdya) Sri Bhima is situated in parentaì love and pastime-friendship (sakhya) Sri Kunti is situated in servitude and parentaì love Sri Vasudeva and Devaki are situated in parentaì love and servitude In this way various mixtures may be seen Sri Uddhava is situated in a mixture of servitude and friendship The Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself describes this in these words of

tvam me bhrtyah suhrt sakha

O Uddhava, you are My servant, welì-wisher, and friend."

Lord Balarama is situated in a mixture of friendship and parentaì love Lord Balarama's mixture of friendship and parentaì love is seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.1´-15)

kvacit krida-parisrantam gopotsangopabarhanam svayam visramayaty aryam pada-samvahanadibhih

When His elder brother, fatigued from playing, would lie down with His head upon the lap of a cowherd boy, Lord Krsna would help Him relaø by personally massaging His feet and offering other services."

nrtyato gayatah kvapi valgato yudhyato mithah grhita-hastau gopalan hasantau prasasamsatuh

Sometimes, as the cowherd boys danced, sang, moved about and playfully fought with each other, Krsna and Balarama, standing nearby hand in hand, would glorify Their friends activities and laugh."

Lord Balarama is also situated in the conception of servitude This is seen in the following words spoken by Lord Balarama Himself in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.37)

prayo mayastu me bhartur

This must be the illusory energy of My master, Lord Krsna, for who else can bewilder Me?"

In Vraja Lord Balarama's main rasa is friendship Within that friendship servitude and parentaì love are also manifest There friendship is Lord Balarama's main rasa because there from early childhood Krsna and Balarama played together However, in the Yadus city of Dvaraka, Lord Balaraama's main rasa is servitude, and His feelings of parentaì love and servitude are manifested within the rasa of servitude There servitude is Lord Balarama's main rasa because in Dvaraka Lord Krsna manifested pastimes of opulence (aisvarya) Also, in Vraja Lord Balarama was considered like Lord Krsna's elder brother, for Krsna's and Balarama's fathers, Nanda and Vasudeva, were brothers Because Nanda gave protection to Him, Lord Balarama considered Nanda Maharaja His father This is described in the following words spoken by Maharaja Vasudeva to Maharaja Nanda in Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.5.27)

That Lord Balarama was considered Lord Krsna's elder brother is also seen in these words spoken by Morher Yasoda to Lord Krsna in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.34)

vadanti tavaka hy ete kumaras te 'grajo 'py ayam

This complaint has been lodged against You by alì Your playmates, including Your elder brother, Balarama."

The queens at Dvaraka are situated in the conjugaì rasa mixed with servitude The gopis of Vraja are situated in the conjugaì rasa mixed with friendship. When spirituaì love (priti) is manifest without the specific conceptions of the different rasas, then that love is ordinary spirituaì love (samanya priti) It is manifest among the devotees who are not yet qualified to relate to the Lord in one or more of the rasas An example of this kind of love is seen in the following description of the people of Mithila and other places (Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.86.20) anarta-dhanva-kuru-jangala-kanka-matsya- pacala-kunti-madhu-kekaya-kosalarnah anye ca tan-mukha-sarojam udara-hasa- snigdheksanam nrpa papur drsibhir nr-naryah

The men and women of Anarta, Dhanva, Kuru-jangala, Kanka, Matsya, Pacala, Kunti, Madhua, Kekaya, Kosala, Arna, and many other kingdoms dranë with their eyeas the nectarean beauty of Lord Krsna's lotuslike face, which was graced with generous smiles and affectionate glances."

These devotees do not have the conception The Supreme Lord is mine" Their affection for the Lord is in the ordinary santa-rasa (samanya-santi), which is also called tatastha-santi (santa-rasa on the borderline) Their affection for the Lord is called tatastha priti" The Lord's personaì associates are other persons The love felt by the Lord's personaì associates is abundantly filled with the idea, the Supreme Lord is mine" Amongst these personaì associates of the Lord are included the Lord's servants (bhrtya) and persons who are protected (palya) by the Lord These two kindsof personaì associates of the Lord are situated in the rasa of servitude Their love for the Lord is called sambhrama-priti (love filled with reverence) The Lord's relatives are objects of the Lord's affection Their love for the Lord is called bandhava-priti (the love of a relative) These different rasas and kinds of love are described by Lord Kapila in thesen words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (3.25.38):

The devotees accept Me as their friend, their relative, their son, perceptor, benefactor, and Supreme Deity."

In this verse the word priyah means beloved", atma means the Supersoul", sutah means son, nephew, younger brother, ort other like relative", sakha means an affectionate friend with whom one enjoys pastimea", guruh means father or other superior", suhrdah refers to two kinds of friends 1 a friend with whom one has a speciaì relation, and 2 a friend for whom one wishes limitless good fortune This list is given with the most intimate relationships given first Here daivam istam means the Deity of whom one takes shelter or the Deity one serves" When these rasas are absent, then spirituaì love is of the ordinary (samanya) kind. Not the previously described bhavas, beginning with rati, wilì be described Rati is described in these words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (1.5.2¶-27)

O Vyasadeva, in that association and by the mercy of those great Vedantists, I could hear them describe tht attractive activities of Lord Krsna And thus listening attentively, my taste for hearing of the Personality of Godhead increased at every step.

tasmims tada labdha-rucer maha-mate priya-sravasy askhalita matir mama yayaham etat sad-asat sva-mayaya pasye mayi brahmani kalpitam pare

O great sage, as soon as I got a taste of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, my attention to hear of the Lord was unflinching And as my taste developed, I could realize that it was only in my ignorance that i had accepted gross and subtle coverings, for both the Lord and I are transcendental."

Here the word mayi means in a single pure individuaì soul", and pare brahmani means In the Supreme, who is the sum totaì of everything" These words were spoken by Sri Narada to Sri Vyasa.

The stage of spirituaì love called prema is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.51)

upalabdham pati-prema pativratyam ca te 'naghe yad-vakyais calyamanaya na dhir mayy apakarsita

O sinless one, I have not seen firstahand the pure love and chaste attachment you have for your husband Even though shaken by My words, your mind could not be pulled away from Me."

In this verse the phrase na dhir mayy apakarsita means your mind could not be pulled away from Me. This means Even though you feareed that My words of renunciation would leave to My abandoning You, your love for Me did not decrease. This means As you have always loved Me in the past, so you love Me not in the present" This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to Rukmini-devi.

Anuccheda 86

The stage of spirituaì love called pranaya is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.18.24)

uvaha krsno bhagavan sridamanam parajitah

Defeated, the Supreme Lord Krsna carried Sridama."

The meaning of this verse is clear This verse was spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 87

The stage of spirituaì love called mana is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.6):

eka bhru-kutim abadhya prema-samrambha-vihvala

One gopi, beside herself with loving anger, bit her lips and stared at Him with frowning eyebrows, as if to wound Him with her harsh glances."

The meaning of this verse is clear This verse was spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 88

The stage of spirituaì love called sneha is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.10.1±-14)

sat-sangan mukta-duhsango hatum notsahate budhah kirtyamanam yaso yasya sakrd akarnya rocanam tasmin nyasta-dhiyah parthah saheran viraham katham darsana-sparsa-samlapa-sayanasana-bhojanaih

The intelligent, who have understood the Supreme Lord in association with pure devotees and have become freed from bad materialistic association, can never avoid hearing the glories of the Lord, even though they have heard them only once How, then, could the Pandavas tolerate His separation, for they had been intimately associated with His person, seeing Him face to face, touching Him, conversing with Him, and sleeping, sitting and dining with Him?

The female relatives, whose eyes were flooded with tears out of anxiety for Krsna, came out of the palace They could stop their tears only with great difficulty They feared that tears would cause misfortune at the time of departure."

Here the word vicluh means to bring various articles of worship, they moved here and there" The words no 'bhadram iti syat mean So no eviì oment would be manifest", and nyarundhan means they suppressed" This verse was spoken by Srila Suta Gosvami.

Anuccheda 89

The stage of spirituaì love called raga is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.8.25)

vipadah santu tah sasvat tatra tatra jagad-guro bhavato darsanam yat syad apunar bhava-darsanam

I wish that alì those calamities would happen again and again so that we could see You again and again, for seeing You means that we wilì no longer see repeated births and deaths."

In this verse the word bhavatah means because of past karma", darsanam means the sight", yad means in which", apunar-bhavam means may I not take birth in any situation where I cannot see You glorious sweetness" This verse was spoken by Sri Kunti to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 90

The stage of spirituaì love called anuraga is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.33)

yadyapy asau parsva-gato raho-gatas tathapi tasyanghri-yugam navam navam pade pade ka virameta tat-padac calapi yac chrir na jahati karhicit

Although Lord Sri Krsna was constantly by their sides, as welì as exclusively alone, His feet appeared to them to be newer and newer The goddess of fortune, although by nature always restless and moving, could not quit the Lord's feet So what woman can be detached from those feet, having once taken shelter of them?"

In this verse the word asau means Sri Krsna", parsva-gatah means staying near His queens", and raho-gatah means in a solitary place" Pade pade means at every moment" This was not surprising for the queens, who were naturally fulì of love (anuraga) for Lord Krsna The verse then says: ka virameta tat-padat", which means What woman would become satiated by tasting the nectar of the Lord's feet? The phrase beginning with the words calapi means If even the goddess of fortune, who is always restless and moving, could not quit the Lord's feetm hot can any other woman be detached from those feet? It is seen in this world that materiaì wealth is flickering and temporary In this example materiaì wealth and the spirituaì goddesses of fortune are equated This verse was spoken by Srila Suta Gosvami.

The stage of spirituaì love called maha-bhava" is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.19.16)

gopinam paramananda asid govinda-darsane ksanam yuga-satam iva yasam yena vinabhavat

The young gopis tooë the greatest pleasure in seeing Govinda [KrsnaÝ come home, since for them even a moment without His association seemed like a hundred ages."

The meaning of this verse is clear This verse was spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 92

Although they certainly experience rati, and although they feeì the happiness of spirituaì bliss, because they do not have the conception that the Supreme Lord is mine", the devotees whose devotion is mixed with jnana (jani-bhaktas) experience only ordinary love for the Supreme Lord Their feelings of love for the Lord are seen in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.49)

kamam bhavah sva-vrjinair nirayesu nah stat .

O Lord, we pray that You let usbe born in any hellish condition of life, just as long as our hearts and minds are always engaged in the service of Your lotus feet, our words are made beautifuì (by speaking of Your activities) just as tulasi leaves are beautified when offereed unto Your lotus feet, and as long as our ears are always filled with the chanrting of Your transcendentaì qualities."

The four Kumaras headed by Sanaka speaë this prayer of love (raga) Still, the raga they feeì is not direct raga. The devotees who consider themselves protected (palya) by the Lord experience love up to the stage of prema This is so because they clearly think, The Lord is mine" However, they do not experience love up to the stage of sneha This is so because their relationship with the Lord is distant and because their love is not very intense They express their love in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.9) yarhy ambujaksapasasara bho bhavan, .

O lotus-eyed Lord, whenever You go away to Mathura-, Vrndavana or Hastinapura to meet Your friends and relatives, every moment of Your absence seems like a million years O infallible one, at that time our eyes become useless, as if bereft of sun."

These words were spoken by Dvaraka's citizens Included among them were the florist, barber, and others who had the good fortune to serve Lord Krsna directly The devotees in the rasa of servitude (bhrtya) can experience spirituaì love up to the stage of raga This is so because they have a strong sense of the Lord is mine", because they are very eager always to serve the Lord, and because the Lord is their very life The devotee who thinë themselves the object of the Sup reme Lord's love (lalya) also experience spirituaì love up to the stage of raga This is so because they have direct contact with the Lord's gracefuì form, and because they have an especially strong sense that the Lord is mine" The Lord's mother and father, who are situated in vatsalya-rasa, love the Lord more than these devotees They have a very strong sense that the Lord is mine", even stronger than the conception held by the Lord's friends (sakhas) Sri Kunti's words in Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.8.2µ (quoted above) shot that she loves the Lord even more than the Lord's friends The great love manifest in vatsalya-rasa is not at alì similar to the love manifest in sakhya-rasa However, sakhya-rasa and srngara-rasa are similar in many ways For example, loving anger (pranaya-mana) is possible only in those two rasas. Among the Lord's beloveds the queens at Dvaraka experience spirituaì love up to the stage of maha-bhava anuraga The ecstasies they feeì in separation from the Lord are called prema-vaicittya and are described in Srimad- Bhagavatam 10.90.1´-25) I have not heard in the scriptures any other description like this, nor have I not heard in the scriptures any other description of the queens anuraga.

Here someone may protest Is not anuraga described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.2) satam ayam sara-bhrtam nisargah .

Paramahamsas, devotees who have accepted the essence of life, are attached to Krsna in the core of their hearts, and He is the aim of their lives It is their nature to talk only of Krsna at every moment, as if such topics were newer and newer They are attached to such topics, just as materialists are attached to topics of women and sex."[a] ?

Is the love here not anuraga because the devotees see the Lord as newer and newer at every moment?

To this protest I reply No It is not so The symptoms described in this verse are not the symptoms of anuraga The symptoms of joy and distress described in this verse are rather the symptoms of rati or of other stages of love Because it is not possible to say the symnptoms describned here are ther symptoms of anuraga, therefore it cvannot be concluded that anuraga is described in this verse In this verse the word navya-vat (the devotees consider the topics of the Lord {.fn as if {.fn 1}they were newer and newer) is not the same as the devotees consider the topics of the Lord newer and newer" The gopis of Vraja experience spirituaì love up to the stage of maha-bhava Their love is described By Lord Krsna in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (11.12.11)

Dear Uddhava, alì of those nights that the gopis spent with Me, their most dearly beloved, in the land of Vrndavana, seemed to them to pass in less than a moment Bereft of My association, however, the gopis felt that those same nights dragged on forever, as if each night were equaì to a day of Brahma."

When they gazed at Lord Krsna, the gopis were not willing to tolerate even the blinking of their eyelids This is seen in the following words spoken by the gopis to Lord Krsna in Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.31.15)

kutila-kuntalam sri-mukham ca te jada udiksatam paksma-krd drsam

When You go off to the forest during the day, a tiny fraction of a second becomes like a millennium for us because we cannot see You And even when we can eagerly look upon Your beautifuì face, so lovely with its adornment of curly locks, our pleasure is hindered by our eyelids, which were fashioned by the foolish creator."

The devotees inability to tolerate the blinking of their eyelids when that blinking interrupts their gazing at Lord Krsna is also seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (9.24.65)

yasyananam .naryo naras“ca muditah„ kupita nimes“ca

Krsna's face is decorated with ornaments, such as earrings resembling sharks His ears are beautiful, His cheeks brilliant, and His smiling attractive to everyone Whoever sees Lord Krsna sees a festival His face and body are fully satisfying for everyone to see, but the devotees are angry at the creator for the disturbance caused by the momentary blinking of their eyes."

Here the words naryo naras“ca muditah shot that even ordinary men and women become delighted by gazing at Lord Krsna Then the words kupita nimes“ca mean but some devotees, namely the gracefuì gopis, become angry at the creator who created eyelids. This same verse is not found in other places in the scriptures However, in the deescription of the gopis meeting with Lord Krsna at Kuruksetra, it is said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.39)

gopyas ca krsnam upalabhya cirad abhistam yat-preksane drsisu paksma-krtam sapanti drgbhir hrdi-krtam alam parirabhya sarvas tad-bhavam apur api nitya-yujam durapam

While gazing at their beloved Krsna, the young gopis used to condemn the creator of their eyelids (which would momentarily block their vison of Him) Now, seeing Krsna again after such a long separation, with their eyes they took Him into their hearts, and there they embraced Him to their fulì satisfaction In this way they became totally absorbed in ecstatic meditation on Him, although those who constantly practice mystic yoga find such absorption difficult to achieve."

In this verse it is seen that the gopis are the most exalted devotees Although by His very nature Lord Krsna creates these ecstatic feelings of maha-bhava love in the gopis, the gopis stilì turn to Him for protection from the anxiety they feeì in their love As rain falling during the time of the Svati star creates pearls, so Lord Krsna inspires this kind of ecstatic love in the gopis In the words mad-bhavam apuh", the Lord affirms that the gopis indeed attained maha-bhava love for Him Not the words nitya-yujam- durapam wilì be discussed Here the word nitya-yujam refers to the Dvaraka queens, who are like the gopis It does not refer to others, who are not like the gopis, who are very far away from being like the gopis The word nitya-yujam may also be interpeted to mean We gopis, who are separated from our beloved and who day after day yearn to be with Him" The ecstatic love felt by the Dvaraka queens is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.84.1)

srutva prtha subala-putry atha yajaseni madhavy atha ksitipa-patnya uta sva-gopyah krsne 'khilatmani harau pranayanubandham sarva visismyur alam asru-kalakulaksyah

Prtha, Gandhari, Draupadi, Subhadra, the wives of other kings, and the Lord's cowherd girlfriends were alì amazed to hear of the queens deep love for Lord Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead and Souì of alì beings, and their eyes filled with tears."

Glorifying the gopis, the Dvaraka queens say in Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.83.43)

vraja-striyo yad vachanti .

We desire the same contact with the Supreme Lord's feet that thr young women of Vraja, the cowherd boys, and even the aborigine Pulinda women desirethe touch of the dust He leaves on the plants and grass as He tends His cows."

The spirituaì love the Dvaraka queens feeì almost touches the spirituaì love the filled with wonder vraja-gopis feel In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.84.± the word sva indicates that the gs are the Supreme Lord's most confidentiaì (paramantaranga) internaì potency The glories and good fortune of the gopis ands the residents of Vraja, Mathura, and Dvaraka are described in the following three verses of Srimad- Bhagavatam (1.10.26-28) aho alam slaghyatamam yadoh kulam .

Oh, hot supremely glorified is the dynasty of King Yadu, and hot virtuous is the land of Mathura, where the supreme leader of alì living beings, the husband of the goddess of fortune, has taken His birth and wandered in His childhood. Undoubtedly it is wonderfuì that Dvaraka has defeated the glories of the heavenly planets and has enchanced the celebrity of the earth The inhabitants of Dvaraka are always seeing the souì of alì living beings (Krsna) in His loving feature He glances at them and favors them tith sweet smiles.

O friends, just think of His wives, whose hands He has accepted Hot they must have undergone vows, baths, fire sacrifices and perfect worship of the Lord of the universe to constantly relish not the nectar from His lips [by kissing] The damsels of Vrajabhumi would often faint just by expecting such favors."

In these verses the gopis and Dvaraka queens exalted status and supreme knowledge of spirituaì nectar sweetness is described By thinking of the nectar sweetness the gopis and queens tasted, the demigods would faint Although they seemed to be mere human beings as they enjoyed their nectar pastimes, they were in truth the most exalted of souls The following explanation may be given here The Supreme Personality of Godhead has two features 1 His feature as Brahman, and 2 His feature as the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan) In generaì the devotees are of two kinds 1 neophyte devotees (tatastha) and 2 devotees who are personaì associates (parikara) of the Supreme Personality of Godhead Some of the neophyte (tatastha) devotees take pleasure in the Brahman feature of the Lord These devotees are situated in santa-rasa Other neophyte devotees love the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His personaì associates, but have not yet themselves become personaì associates of the Lord The causes that attract one to become a personaì associate of the Lord and results of becoming a personaì associate of the Lord are both absent amongst the nephyte devotees who take pleasure in the Brahman feature of the Lord For these reasons these neophyte devotees are not attracted to become personaì associates of the Lord The causes that help (sahaya) one attracted to become a personaì associate of the Lord are of two kinds 1 the idea the Supreme Lord is mine", and 2 perception of the various limbs and features (upanga) of the Lord, amongst which is included perception of the Lord's impersonaì Brahman feature That the devotees attrracted to the impersonaì Brahman do not think, the Supreme Lord is mine has already been shown Neiother do these devotees have any direct perception of the limbs of the Supreme Lord's body However, these devotees do have knowledge of the the impersonaì Brahman, which is one of the Supreme Lord's secondary features (upanga) Fropm this knowledge of Brahman knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead may eventually come In this way these devotees m,ay eventually become attracted to the personaì feature of the Supreme Lord This truth is seen in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.7.10)

Alì different varieties of atmaramas [those who take pleasure in atma, or spirit self], especially those established on the path of seff-realization, though freed from alì kinds of materiaì bondage, desire to render unalloyed devotionaì service unto the Personality of Godhead This means that the Lord possesses transcendentaì qualities and therefore can attract everyone, including liberated souls."

These devotees may also become attracted ot the Supreme Lord directly this is seen in the following words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (3.15.43)

tasyaravinda-nayanasya . .cakara tesam sanksobham aksara-jusam api citta-tanvoh

When the breeze carrying the aroma of tulasi leaves from the toes of the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead enetred the nosytrils of those sages, they experienced a change both in body and in mind, even though they were attached to the impersonaì Brahman understanding."

In this way the impersonalists may renounced the impersonaì idea Then they attain the results of becoming attracted to the Supreme Lord The result is they become rapt in meditation on the Lord Eventually they may also see the Supreme Lord directly The personaì associates of the Supreme Lord directly serve the Lord again and again eternally For this reason the good ofrtune of the Lord's personaì associates is very great The Supreme Lord, His personaì associates, and some devotees first directly seeing the Lord are described in Srimad-Bhagavatam's account of the curse placed upon Jaya and Vijaya In that account it is said (Srimad-Bhagavatam 3.15.37, 38, and 40):

Accompanied by His spouse, the goddess of fortune, He (the Supreme Lord) went to the spot on those very feet sought for by recluses and great sages.

tam tö agatam parihrtaupayikam sva-pumbhis te 'caksataksa-visayam
sva-samadhi-bhagyam

The sages, headed by Sanaka Rsi, sat that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Visnu, who was formerly visible only within their hearts in ecstatic trance, had not actually become visible to their eyes As He came forward, accompanied by His own associates bearing alì paraphernalia, such as an umbrella and a camara fan, the white bunches of hair moved very gently, like two swans, and do to their favorable breeze the pearls garlanding the umbrella also moved, like drops of nectar falling frem the white fulì moon or ice melting due to a gust of tind."

In these verses it is clear that Jaya and Vijaya were the Supreme Lord's personaì associates The four Kumaras, however, were more distantly associated with the Lord, associated in the mood of awe and reverence That Jaya and Vijaya were personaì associates of the Lord and the four Kumaras were not is confirmed by these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.37):

evam tadaiva bhagavan aravinda-nabhah svanam vibudhya sad-atikramam arya-hrdyah

At that very moment the Lord, who is called Padmanabha because of the lotus grown from His naveì and who is the delight of the righteous, learned about the insult offered by His own servants to the saints." This is also confirmed by the following words spoken by the Supreme Lord in Srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.40)

tad vah prasadayamy adya brahma daivam param hi me tad dhity atma-krtam manye yat sva-pumbhir asat-krtah

To Me, the brahmana is the highest and most beloved personality The disrespect shown by My attendants has actually been displayed by Me because the doormen are My servitors I take this to be an offense by Myself: therefore I seek your forgiveness for the incident that has arisen."

When they sat the great good fortune of the Lord's personaì associates, the four Kumaras became ashamed that they had cursed the Lord's associates They said (Srimad-Bhagavatam 3.16.25)

yam vanayor damam adhisa bhavan vidhatte vrttim nu va tad anumanmahi nirvyalikam asmasu va ya ucito dhriyatam sa dando ye 'nagasau vayam ayunksmahi kilbisena

O Lord, whatever punishment You wish to award to these two innocent persons or also to us we shalì accept without duplicity We understand that we have cursed two faultless persons."

After the four Kumaras had departed, the Supreme Lord openly revealed His mercy to His personaì associates He said (Srimad-Bhagavatam 3.16.29)

bhagavan anugav aha vatam ma bhaistam astu sam brahma-tejah samartho 'pi hantum necche matam tu me

The Lord then said to His attendants, Jaya and Vijaya Depart this place, but fear not Alì glories unto you Though I am capable of nullifying the brahmanas curse, I would not do so On the contrary, it has My approval."

In this way it is seen that the neophyte devotees are situated on a lower leveì of spirituaì love and the personaì associates of the Lord are situated on a higher leveì of spirituaì love Here someone may protest Is it not so that the Supreme is the abode of limitless spirituaì love,love beyond alì materiaì designations: And is it not also so that to think of oneself as the Lord's personaì associate is in itself a materiaì designation, a designation that limits the love one may feeì for the Supreme: Therefore the spirituaì love felt by the worshipers of the impersonaì Brahman is the true, the advanced spirituaì love, and the spirituaì love felt by persons who think themselves the Supreme Lord's personaì associates is a very inferior kind of love And furthermore the personaì associates of the Lord have the mistaken idea that the Supreme Lord is mine" Therefore the spirituaì love felt by the worshipers of the impersonaì Brahman is far superior." To this protest I give the following reply It is not as you say Whatever spirituaì love may be felt in a generaì way without a personaì relationship with the Lord is also included within the spirituaì love the Lord's personaì associates feeì for Him When thespirit souì attains perfection an realizes his true identity, then he becomes a personaì associate of the Lord in a particular relationship with the Lord What objection may be raised against this explanation: In this way, by comparison, the higher and lower levels of spirituaì love are seen The Supreme Personality of Godhead has His own individuaì nature, and the devotee has his individiuaì nature as the Lord's associate An example of the love the Lord's personaì associates feeì for Him is given in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.25)

go-gopinam matrtasminn asit snehardhikam vina purovad .

Previously, from the very beginning, the gopis had motherly affection for Krsna Indeed, their affection for Krsna exceeded even their aaection for their own sons In displaying their affection, they had thus distinguished between Krsna and their sons, but not that distinction disappeared."

The meaning of this verse is clear This verse was spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 93

The nature of the Lord and the nature of the Lord's devotee are described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (7.5.14)

yatha bhramyaty ayo brahman svayam akarsa-sannidhau tatha me bhidyate cetas cakra-paner yadrcchaya

O brahmanas (teachers), as iron attracted by a magnetic stone moves automatically toward the magnet, my consciousness, having been changed by His will, is attracted by Lord Visnu, who carries a disc in His hand Thus I have no independence."

The meaning of this verse is clear This verse was spoken by Sri Prahlada.

Anuccheda 94

Not we wilì describe the Lord's personaì associates feeì for the Supreme Lord when the Lord is manifest before them Alì perfections are eternally manifest in the Supreme Personality of Godhead This has been revealed in thr Sri Bhagavat-sandarbha and many other books also In the Agamas and other scriptures various methods of worshioping the Supreme Personality of Godhead are described When the Lord is worshiped the devotee gradually attains spirituaì love for the Lord and becomes His personaì associate in aspecific personaì relationship In this way the devotee attains the personaì association of the Lord In this way various kinds of eternally perfect spirituaì love for the Supreme Lord and various kinds of eternally perfect relationships with the Supreme Lord are manifest in the eternally perfect liberated devotees In this way spirituaì love for the Lord and a sepcific relationship with the Lord both take birth together within the devotee In this way the devotee attains specific activities of love for the Lord When it is joined with a personaì rrlationship with the Lord, love for the Lord does notdie Quite to the contrary When it is joined with a personaì relationship with the Lord, love fopr the Lord increases In this way it is seen that love for the Lord is greater when it is joined to a personaì relationship wityh Him Even in the materiaì world it is seen that love increases when a the lover feels, the beloved is mine" In this way it is seen that sometimes a parent is willing even to die for the sake of the child Lord Krsna Himself affirms this in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.45.21):

pitror abhyadhika pritir atmajesö atmano 'pi hi

Parents love their children more than their own lives."

From the individuaì soul's personaì relationship with the Supreme Lord, the idea the Supreme Lord is mine comes From the individuaì soul's own originaì nature the soul's specific relationship with the Lord coems Once that relationship is manifest, the idea the Supreme Lord is mine also becomes manifested In this way the individuaì spirit soul's own originaì nature is the root from which love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead grows This is seen in the following question posed by Maharaja Pariksit in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.49)

During the absence of the originaì cowherd boys, when Krsna expanded Himself, why is it that the boys parents became more loving toward Him than toward their own sons: Also, why did the cows become so loving toward the calves, more than toward their own calves?"

Srila Sukadeva Gosvami answered the king's question by saying that love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is part of the individuaì soul's originaì nature When that originaì nature is manifest, then the idea, the Supreme Lord is mine is also manifest From that the greatest love for the Lord is manifest Thus it is proved that the love connected to the idea the Lord is mine is hte greatest love In this way, when the souì has a relationship with the Lord, the soul's love for the Lord is manifest An example of that love is seen in the following words spoken by the people of Vraja in Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.17.24)

O Lord, we are Your true friends and devotees Please protect us from this insurmountable fire of death We can never give up Your lotus feet, which drive away alì fear."

Srila Sridhara Svami comments:

This verse means `We do not fear death However, we cannot bear to be separated from Your feet "

This verse also means Nor is it right for us to throt far away the fear that we may be separated from Your feet. After speaking these words, the people say Your feet drive away alì fear (akuto-bhayam). Or, these words may also be interpreted to mean As long as we are near Your feet, we wilì be completely happy However, if we cannto stay near Your feet, we wilì suffer greatly Therefore, we have no fear from any source when Your feet are present. This verse was spoken by the people of Vraja to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 95

Thus love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is greater when the devotee has a personaì relationship with the Lord The devotees relationships with the Lord are seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.18, and 20-22)

esa vai bhagavan saksad .

This Sri Krsna is no other than the inconceivable, originaì Personality of Godhead He is the first Narayana, the supreme enjoyer But He is moving amongst the descendants of King Vrsni just like one of us and He is bewildering us with His self-created energy."

Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.2°-22)

yam manyase matuleyam priyam mitram suhrttamam akaroh sacivam dutam sauhrdad atha sarathim

O King, that personality whom, out of ignorance only, you thought to be your maternaì cousin, your very dear friend, well-wisher, counselor, messenger, benefactor, etc., is that very Personality of Godhead, Sri Krsna."

sarvatmanah sama-drso hy advayasyanahankrteh tat-krtam mati vaisamyam niravadyasya na kvacit

Being the Absolute Personality of Godhead, He is present in everyone's heart He is equally kind to everyone, and He is free from the false ego of differentiation Therefore whatever He does is free from materiaì inebriety He is equibalanced."

Yet, despite His being equally kind to everyone, He has graciously come before me while I am ending my life, for I am His unflinching servitor." In these verses the word sauhrdat means because of love",

This verse means Out of love you thouight Him your maternaì cousin, affectionate friend, welì-wisher, and chariot driver, but in truth He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead" Here someone may protest Is it not so that because He is the Supersouì prsent in every living being, the Supreme Lord sees everyone equally (sama-drsah), and because everything that exists is His potency the Supreme Lord is not different from anything (advayasya), therefore the Supreme Lord does not think, `I am the maternaì cousin of someone.': Hot can the faultless Supreme Lord think He is someone's maternaì cousin: He cannot be bewildered (mati-vaisamyam) into thinking He is someone's maternaì cousin. To answer this protest, Srimad-Bhagavatam 1.9.2±-22) are spoken here In these verses it is said Even though He cannot be anyone's maternaì cousin, stilì (tathapi), O king (bhupa), please see hot the Supreme Lord is mercifuì to His unalloyed devotees (ekanta-bhaktesu) He is so strongly controlled by His devotees pure devotion that He indeed thinks that He is their friend or kinsman. In the contact between the Lord and His personaì associates, Their bodies are one factor and Their relatrionship is another factor Their relationship is the primary factor Their bodies are not the primary factor In this way it is proved that by both relationship and body Lord Krsna is Maharaja Yudhisthira's maternaì cousin An example of these factors is seen here in the words yo 'sun", where Bhismadeva says Because of Our relationship You have graciously come before me while I am ending my life. Thus, at the moment of the devotee's death, the Supreme Personality of Godhead accepts the devotee and gives shelter to him Bhismadeva prays to attain that shelter in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.33, 35, and 39)

May Sri... Krsna, who is the intimate friend of Arjuna be the object of my attraction."

partha-sakhe ratir mamastu

Let my mind befixed upon that Krsna."

vijaya-ratha-kutumbha .bhagavati ratir astu me mumursor

At the moment of death, let my ultimate attraction be to Sri... Krsna, the Personality of Godhead I concentrate my mind upon the chariot driver of Arjuna who stood with a whip in His right hand and a bridle rope in His left, who was very carefuì to give protection to Arjuna's chariot by alì means."[a]

The Srimad-Bhagavatam verses quoted in this anuccheda were spoken by Bhisma to Sri Yudhisthira.

Anuccheda 96

When the idea that one has a personaì relationship with the Lord is combined with the idea the Lord is mine", then love becomes very strong This is seen in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (5.6.18)

rajan patir gurur alam bhavatam yadunam daivam priyah kula-patih kva ca kinkaro vah astv evam anga bhagavan bhajatam mukundo muktim dadati karhicit sma na bhakti-yogam

My dear King, the Supreme Person, Mukunda, is actually the maintainer of alì the members of the Pandava and Yadu dynasties He is your spirituaì master, worshipable Deity, friend, and the director of your activities To say nothing of this, He sometimes serves your family as a messenger or servant This means He worked just as ordinary servants do Those engaged in getting the Lord's favor attain liberation from the Lord very easily, but He does not very easily give the opportunity to render direct service unto Him."

That loving devotionaì service (priti-bhakti) is superior to liberation is described in this prose passage of Srimad- Bhagavatam (5.6.17)

yasyam eva kavayah .

.fn 1 Devotees always bathe themselves in devotionaì service in order to be relieved from the various tribulations of materiaì existence By doing this, the devotees enjoy supreme bliss, and liberation personified comes to serve them Nonetheless, they do not accept that service, even if it is offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself For the devotees, liberation [muktiÝ is very unimportant because, having attained the Lord's transcendentaì loving service, they have attained everything desirable and have transcended alì materiaì desires."

In Srimad-Bhagavatam 5.6.1¸ the words rajan bhavatam yadunam bhagavan mean O king, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the property of you Yadus, evam means the love you feeì for the Lord is very far from what others have attained" This verse says Although others repeatedly worship the Supreme Lord, He gives them only liberation and not devotionaì service. In this way the glory of the Yadus love for the Lord is described The glories of devotionaì service are also described in this prayer spoken by Lord Brahma in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.30)

My dear Lord, I pray that I may be so fortunate that, in this life or in another life, wherever I may take my birth, I may be counted as one of Your devotees Wherever I may be, I pray that I may be engaged in Your devotionaì service."

Anuccheda 97

Not the different levels of advancement of the Lord's personaì associates wilì be described These levels are considered according to the degree in which the devotee is completely dependent on the Lord In generaì the Supreme Personality of Godhead manifests two principaì features 1 supreme opulence (paramaisvarya) and 2 supreme sweetness (parama-madhurya) His opulence is His power and glory as the Supreme Lord (prabhuta), and His sweetness is His character, qualities, form, youthfulness, and pastimes that charm the heart These features are supreme (parama) because they have no equaì or superior. The Lord's devotees are of four kinds The Lord's personaì associates are of two kinds 1. The associates primarily aware of the Lord's opulence (paramaisvaryanubhava-pradhana), and 2 the associates proimarily aware of the Lord's sweetness (parama-madhuryanubhava-pradhana) Awareness of the Lord's opulence gives birth to awe and reverence Awareness of the Lord's sweetness gives birth to spirituaì love The Supreme Lord's opueknce and sweetness are supreme As these features of the Lord are supreme and beyond measure, so the devotees feelings of awe and reverence and spirituaì love are also supreme and beyond measure Awe and reverence are described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.51):

devaki vasudevas ca vijaya jagad-isvarau krta-samvandanau putrau sasvajate na sankitau

Devaki and Vasudeva, not knowing Krsna and Balarama to be the Lords of the universe, simply stood with joined palms Being apprehensive, they did not embrace their sons."

Awe and spirituaì love are both described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.45.±-11)

pitaraö uplabadharthau viditva purusottamah ma bhud iti nijam mayam tatana jana-mohinim

Understanding that Hisd parents were becoming aware of His transcendentaì opulences, the Supreme Personality of Godhead thought that this should not be allowed to happen Thus He expanded His Yogamaya, which bewilders His devotees.

uvaca pitaraö etya sagrajah satvatarsabhah prasrayavanatah prinann amba tateti sadaram .

Lord Krsna, the greatest of the Satvatas, approached His parents with His elder brother Humbly bowing His head and gratifying them by respectfully addressing them as `My dear mother and `My dear father', Krsna spoke as follows Dear father, because of Us, your two sons, you and mother Devaki always remained in anxiety and could never enjoy Our childhood, boyhood, or youth. Deprived by fate, We could not live with you and enjoy the pampered happiness most children enjoy in their parent's home. With one's body one can acuire alì goals of life, and it is one's parents who give the body birth and sustenance Therefore no mortaì man can repay his debt to his parents, even if he serves them for a fulì lifetime of a hundred years. A son who, though able to do so, fails to provide for his parents with his physicaì resources and wealth is forced after his death to eat his own flesh. A man who, though able to do so, fails to support his elderly parents, chaste wife, young child, or spirituaì master, or who neglects a brahmana or anyone who comes to him for shelter, is considered dead, though breathing. Thus We have wasted alì these days, unable as We were to properly honor you because Our minds were always disturbed by fear of Kamsa. Dear father and mother, please forgive Us for not serving you We are not independent and have been greatly frustrated by crueì Kamsa.

Thus beguiled by the words of Lord Hari, the Supreme Souì of the universe, who by His internaì illusory potency appeared to be human, His parents joyfully raised Him up on their laps and embraced Him, sicantaö asru-dharabhih sneha-pasena cavrtau na kicid ucatu rajan baspa-kanthau vimohitau

In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.45.± the word upalabdharthau means they understood the truth that their son is the master of alì the worlds" Ma bhut means Devaki and Vasudeva walk on the path of being My parents The love they bear for Me is very difficult for the jani-bhaktas and even the pure devotees to attain Therefore their awareness of My opulences should be covered over For them this awareness should not be. The words nijam mayam tatana mean the Lord extended His avarana- sakti (covering potency) to cover their awareness that Her is the Supreme Personality of Godhead" In the passage beginning with the word uvaca (Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.45.2), Lord Krsna manifested His own sweetness in order to increase his parents love for Him Or, in another interpretation of this passage, the word maya may be interpreted to mean mercy" The Visva-prakasa

Dictionary gives this definition:

The word `maya may mean `pride or `mercy'."

Accepting this definition of maya", the passage nijam mayam tatana mean the Lord manifested His mercy and increased His parents love for Him in the rasa of parenthood" Someone may ask What is the nature of the Lord's mercy? The answer is given in these words The Supreme Lord's mercy is that with His sweetness He enchants every living entity Someone may ask Hot does the Lord give this mercy? The answer is the Lord covers His own opuelnce and manifests His sweetness This is seen here in the passage beginning with the word uvaca" Stilì another interpretation may be given for the words nijam mayam tatana" The dictionary also gives this definition for the word maya":

The word `maya may mean `spirituaì knowledge'."

Interpreted according to this definition, the words nijam mayam tatana mean the Lord manifested the confidentiaì knowledge of His sweetness In this way he caused spirituaì love for Him to take its birth in them. For this reason, then, the Lord may have spoken the passage here beginning with the word uvaca" In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.45.1° the word maya-manusyasya means of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is fulì of alì transcendentaì knowledge, and whose form superficially resembles that of a human being" The passage from Srimad-Bhagavatam quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami.

In devotion (bhakti) in the mood of appreciating the Supreme Lord's opulence (paramaisvarya) many sentiments may be said to increase (uddipana) the mood of devotion Prominent among these sentiments are awe and reverence These sentiments are like the limbs of the body of devotion Ecstatic love (priti) for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is like the souì that rests within the body of devotion That love is increased (uddipana) by awareness of the Lord's sweetness Awareness of His opulence and His sweetness both stimulate the sentiment of devotion to the Lord However, it is awareness of the Lord's sweetness, an awareness that specifically increases ecstatic love (priti) that is most naturaì to the people of Gokula If awareness of the Lord's opulence enters amongst them, it is only an occasionaì guest That awareness entered Gokula after Lord Krsna lifted Govardhana Hill That awareness of the Lord's opulence is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.26.1-13)

evam-vidhani karmani gopah krsnasya viksya te atad-virya-vidah procuh samabhyetya su-vismitah .

.dustyajas“canurago 'smin sarvesam no vrajaukasam nanda te tanaye'smasu tasyapy autpattikah katham

The cowherd men were astonished when they sat Krsna's activities, such as lifting Govardhana Hill Unable to understand His transcendentaì potency, they approached Nanda Maharaja and spoke as follows. Since this boy performs such extraordinary activities, hot could He warrant a birth among worldly men like usa birth that for Him would seem contemptible¿ Hot could this seven-year-old boy playfully hold up the great hilì Govardhana with one hand, just as a mighty elephant holds up a lotus flower? As a mere infant who had hardly yet opened His eyes, He drank the breast milk of the powerfuì demonness Putana and then sucked out her very life air as well, just as the force of time sucks out the youth of one's body. Once when only three months old, little Krsna was crying and kicking up His feet as He lay beneath a huge cart Then the cart felì and turned upside-down simply because it was struck by the tip of His toe. At the age of one, while sitting peacefully He was taken up into the sky by the demon Trnavarta But baby Krsna grabbed the demon's neck, causing him great pain, and thus killed him. Once, His mother tied Him with ropes to a kortar because she had caught Him stealing butter Then, crawling on His hands, He dragged the mortar between a pair of arjuna trees and pulled them down. Another time, when Krsna was tending the calves in the forest together with Balarama and the cowherd boys, the demon Bakasura came with the intention of killing Krsna But Krsna seized this inimicaì demon by the mouth and tore him apart. Desiring to kilì Krsna, the demon Vatsa disguised himself as a calf and entered among Krsna's calves But Krsna killed the demon and, using his body, enkoyed the sport of knocking kapittha fruits down from the trees. Together with Lord Balarama, Krsna killed the jackass demon and alì his friends, thereby securing the safety of the Talavana forest, which abounded with fully ripened palm fruits. After arranging fdor the mighty Lord Balar.ama to kilì the terrible demon Pralamba, Krsna saved Vraja's cowherd boys and their animals from a forest fire. Krsna chastised the most poisonous serpent Kaliya, and after humbling him, drove him forcibly from the lake of the Yamuna In this way the Lord made the water of that river free of the snake's powerfuì poison. Dear Nanda, hot is it that we and alì the other residents of Vraja cannot give up our constant affection for your son: And hot is it that He is so spontaneously attracted to us?"

In answer to the gopas questions, Nanda Maharaja spoke these words describing His perception of the Lord's opulence and sweetness both (Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.26.15-23)

sruyatam me vaco gopa vyetu sanka ca vo 'rbhake enam kumaram uddisya gargo me yad uvaca ha .

.ity addha mam samadisya garge ca sva-grham gate manye narayanasyamsam krsnam aklista-karinam

O cowherd men, just hear my words and let alì your doubts concerning my son be gone Some time ago Garga Muni spoke to me as follows about this boy. Your son Krsna appears as an incranation in every millenium In the past He assumed three different colorswhite, red, and yellowand not He has appeared in a blackish color. For many reasons, this beautifuì son of yours sometimes appeared previously as the son of Vasudeva Therefore, those who are learned sometimes calì this child Vasudeva. For this son of yours there are many forms and names according to His transcendentaì qualities and activities These are known to me, but people in generaì do not understand them. To increase the transcendentaì bliss of the cowherd men of Gokula, this child wilì always act auspiciously for you And by His grace only you wilì surpass alì difficulties. O Nanda Maharaja, as recorded in history, when there was an irregular, incapable government, Indra having been dethroned, and when honest people were being harassed and disturbed by thieves, this child appeared in order to curâ the rogues and to protect the people and enable them to flourish. Demons cannot harm the demigods, who always have Lord Visnu on their side Similarly, any person ro group attached to alì-auspicious Lord Krsna cannot be defeated by enemies. Therefore, O Nanda Maharaja, this child of yours is as good as Narayana In His transcendentaì qualities, opulence, name, fame, and influence, He is exactly like Narayana Thus you should nto be astonished by His activities. After Garga Rsi spoke these words to me and returned home, I began to consider that Krsna, who keeps us free from trouble, is actually and expansion of Lord Narayana."

In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.26.1µ teh words gargo me yad uvaca ha mean Garga spoke secret knowledge" The words arbhake kumaram mean there was great sweetness in His boyish nature" These verses were spoken by Nanda, the king of Vraja.

Anuccheda 99

The Supreme Personality of Godhead explains in Srimad- Bhagavatam (11.12.13):

mat-kama ramanam jaram asvarupa-vido 'balah

The gopis passionately desired Me as their charming lover They did not knot the truth about Me."

It was not exactly that the gopis did not knot the truth of Lord Krsna Rather, because they were filled with knowledge of His sweetness, therefore knowledge of His status as the Supreme Personality of Godhead was impossible for them It was impossible because they were not attracted to any other feature of the Supreme Lord, who is the delight of the self-realized souls Not every devotee worships the Lord as the Supreme Personality of Godhead Nor does every devotee see the Lord as such According to the nature of his own qualification, each devotee approsches a specific feature of the Lord The Supreme Lord has numberless features It is not possible for any devotee to approach alì of these features in Vedanta-sutra, the author of the sutras explains that the Lord has many different features, and the devotee may worship specific features of the Lord The Vedanta- sutra (3.3.65) declares:

The Supreme has many features and qualitiese."

It is also said in the scriptures:

yasya yasya hi yah kamas tasya tasya hy upasanam tadrsanam gunanam ca samaharam prakalpayet

According to his own inclination each devotee worships a specific feature of the Lord The Lord has many, many different features and qualities."

The truth that different persons approach the Lord in different ways is also described by Srila Sridhara Svami is these words of His commentary on Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.43.17):

In Lord Krsna's form srngara-rasa and the other rasas rest The Lord manifests various features of Himself according to His devotee's desire He does not appear in the same way to everyone."

The devotees who are aware of the Lord's supreme opulences approach the Syupreme Lord as the Absolute Truth These devotees cannot perceive the supreme sweetness of the Lord Other devotees, however, can perceive the Lord's supreme sweetness It is said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (5.18.12) yasyasti bhaktir bhagavaty akicana sarvair gunais tatra samasate surah .

.fn 1 Alì the demigods and their exalted qualities, such as religion, knowledge and renunciation, become manifest in the body of one who has developed unalloyed devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva"

In these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam it is devotion, and not mere knowledge, that is honored In the previously mentioned verse of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.43.17) is is said that the devotees aware of the Lord's sweetness are the wisest of devotees There it is said

mallanam asanir nrnam nara-varah strinam smaro murtiman gopanam svajano 'satam ksiti-bhujam sasta sva- pitroh sisuh mrtyur bhoja-pater virad avidusam tattvam param yoginam vrsninam para-devateti vidito rangam gatah sagrajah

The various groups of people in the arena regarded Krsna in different ways when He entered it with His elder brother The wrestlers sat Krsna as a lightning bolt, the men of Mathura as the best of males, the women as Cupid in person, the cowherd men as their relative, the impious rulers as a chastiser, His parents as their child, the king of the Bhojas as death, the unintelligent as the Lord's universaì form, the yogis as the Absolute Truth, and the Vrsnis as their supreme worshipable Deity."

In this verse three kinds of persons are described 1 enemies of the Lord (pratikula-jana), 2 fools (mudha), and 3 wise philosophers (vidvan) The enemies of the Lord are 1 the wrestlers (mallanam) who are enemies of the alì-loving Supreme Lord, 2 the kings (ksiti-bhujam) who are Kamsa's allies, and 3 King Kamsa The fools are the persons who see Lord Krsna as the universaì form The wise philosophers are the other persons mentioned in this verse The mention here of the universaì form refers to the idea that the Lord's form is made of materiaì elements, and thus is part of the universaì form This is the idea of unintelligent persons Of these fools some ignore the Lord's requests Those persons are like the yajika brahmanas (described in Srimad-Bhagavatam's Tenth Canto) Others of these fools hate and insult the Lord Stilì others of these fools neither hate nor like the Lord The devotees are horrified by the idea that the Supreme Lord has a body made of matter In truth the Supreme Lord uses this idea to nourish the bibhatsa-rasa (the rasa of horror) In this verse the word nrnam nara-varah mean ordinary people think the Supreme Lord, because of his sweetness, power, and opulence, is the best of human beings. In this idea there is some wisdom Ordinary devotees may sometimes love the Lord according to this idea This is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.43.20)

Although they were citizens in the Lord's city, because they did not have the conception, the Lord is mine these people of Mathura were not, at least at that time, on the leveì of palya (devotees who consider themselves protected by the Lord) However, many other devotees, what to speak of the gopis (sri-gopinam) do have the kind of love for the Lord where one thinks the Lord is mine" In this verse the word nrnam means ordinary devotees", the word yoginam means the four Kumaras and the other jani-bhaktas who, staying in the sky, yearn to see the Lord's pastimes" These devotees do nto have the idea the Lord is mine" It is said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.6)

tad balabalavad yuddham sametah sarva-yositah ucuh parasparam rajan sanukampa varuthasah

My dear King, alì the women present, considering the match an unfair fight between the strong and the weak, felt extreme anxiety due to compassion They assembled in groups around the arena and spoke to one another as follows."

Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.8)

kva vajra-sara-sarvangau .

What comparison can there be between these two professionaì wrestlers, with limbs as strong as lightning bolts and bodies resembling mighty mountains, and these two young, immature boys with exceedingly tender limbs?"

The women (strinam) who spoke these words were filled with compassion and love for the Lord They sat Lord Krsna as Cupid personified It is also said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.14)

gopyas tapah kim acaran .

What austerities must the gopis have performedi With their eyes they always drink the nectar of Lord Krsna's form, which is the essence of loveliness and is not to be equaled or surpassed That lovliness is the only abode of beauty, fame, and opulence It is self-perfect, ever fresh and extremely rare."

Amorous love felt by even the most exalted of materiaì girls in this world is always love mixed with other things That love is not pure, like the love the gopis feel That ordinary love wilì eventually break in the course of time Then the lover wilì no longer think, My beloved is mine" In Srimad- Bhagavatam 10.43.1· are mentiond the Vrsnis, the gopas, and Lord Krsna's parents The alì very strongly think, the Supreme Lord is mine" Amongst devotees who directly perceive the Supreme Lord's sweetness, they are the most exalted Not the words gopanam svajanah and vrsninam para-devata wilì be discussed The word sri- gopanam referrs to the gopas, who perceived the sweetness of the Lord in the relationship of being His friends and kinsmen The words gopanam svajanah and vrsninam para-devata describe how, thinking of the Lord as their supreme Deity, the Vrsnis were aware of the Lord's feature of supreme opulence This is also described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (7.1.31)

sambandhad vrsnayah .

Because of their family relationship, the Vrsnis attained the mercy of Krsna."

From this it may be seen that for the Vrsnis the most important element of their relationship with the Lord was their family relationship with Him Their perception of His supreme opulence was less important Furthermore, amongst the Vrsnis were some very lowly persons, like Kamsa, who became the Supreme Lord's enemies, and also some fools, like Satadhanva About the Vrsnis it is said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.84.23)

na yam vidanty ami bhupa ekaramas ca vrsnayah .

Neither these kings nor even the Vrsnis, who enjoy Your intimate association, knot You as the Souì of alì existence, the force of time, ansd the supreme controller For them You are covered by the curtain of Maya."

Of the exalted Vrsnis, Devaki and Vasudeva are the best They have the best knowledge of the Supreme Lord's opulence However, because in the Lord's pastimes they became His parents (pitroh sisuh), Devaki and Vasudeva also have great knowledge of the Lord's sweetness For them, awareness of the Lord's opulence and supremacy is less important than awareness of His sweetness This is seen in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.84.30)

nati-citram idam vipra vasudevo bubhutsaya krsnam matvarbhakam yan nah prcchati sreya atmanah

O brahmanas, it is not so amazing that in his eagerness to know, Vasudeva has asked us about his ultimate benefit, for he considers Krsna a mere boy."

In this verse Sri Narada does not specifically praise Devaki and Vasudeva for thinking the Lord was their son However, Maharaja Pariksit does indeed praise Yasoda and Nanda for having that same thought The king says in Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.8.46):

nandah kim akarod brahman .

O learned brahmana, mother Yasoda's breast milk was sucked by the Supreme Personality of Godhead What past auspicious activities did she and Nanda Maharaja perform to achieve such perfection in ecstatic love?"

From the moment of the Lord's birth Devcaki and Vasudeva were aware of His opulence Still, their awareness of His sweetness was more important This is confirmed by Srila Sridhara Svami, who in His commentary on Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.45.1) explains that althouh Devaki and Vasudeva were certainly aware of the Lord's opulence, their love for

Him as their son was a more rare and valuable attainment for them This is also true for the gopas, as Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.43.1· explains in the words sri-gopanam svajanah (the cowherd men sat Lord Krsna as their relative) The cowherd people were not like Kamsa and the other enemies of the Lord The cowherd people were overcome with love for Lord Krsna This is seen in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.15)

krsna-darsana-lalasah

Alì the inhabitants of Vrndavana, including the children, women and elderly persons, thought of Krsna just as a cot thinks of her helpless young calf, and thus these poor, suffering people rushed out of the village, intent upon finding Him."

Maharaja Nanda was situated in the most exalted eternaì parentaì love for the Lord The Lord personally became his son What more need be said¿ Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.43.1· quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 100

Because they were aware of the Supreme Lord's sweetness, the cowherd people became the the most wise philosophers (parama- jani) The demigod Brahma, who had personally seen numberless four-armed forms of the Lord, specifically took shelter of the form of Lord Krsna Brahma said in Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.14.1)

naumidya te 'bhra-vapuse tadid-ambaraya gujavatamsa-paripiccha-lasan-mukhaya vanya-sraje kavala-vetra-visana-venu- laksma-sriye mrdu-pade pasupangajaya

My dear Lord, You are the only worshipfuì Supreme Lord, Personality of Godhead Therefore I am offering my humble obeisances and prayers just to please You Your bodily features are of the color of clouds filled with water You are glittering with a silver electric aura emanating from Your yellot garments. Let me offer my respectfuì repeated obeisances unto the son of Maharaja Nanda who is standing before me with conchshell, earrings, and peacock feather on His head His face is beautiful He is wearing a helmet, garlanded with forest flowers, and He stands with a morseì of food in His hand He is decorated with cane and bugle, and He carries a buffalo horn and flute He stands before me with smalì lotus feet."

The spirituaì love the cowherd people feeì for Lord Krsna is the crest jeweì of alì kinds of love When opposing things suddenly appear, that love does not waver On the contrary, that love eclipses alì opposition When obstacles arise, that love increases In this way spirituaì love is like the love hedonists feeì for materiaì sense objects That love the hedonists feeì for materiaì senses objects, love that the scriptures and direct perception both declare to be be fulì of faults, is indeed very passionate and strong In that sense spirituaì love is similar to that materiaì love This is seen in the following prayer spoken by Prahlada Maharaja to Lord Nrsimha in Visnu Purana (1.20.19):

ya pritir avivekanam visayesö anapayini tvam anusmaratah sa me hrdayan napasrpatu

Fools falì in love with materiaì sense objects As they always love senses obejcts, may I always love You I always meditate on You I pray that You wilì never leave my heart."

The intensity of spirituaì love is also seen in these words spoken by Nanda and Yasoda to Lord Balarama in Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.65.3)

ciram nah pahi dasarha sanujo jagad-isvarah ity aropyankam alingya netraih sisicatur jalaih

168ý `O descendant of Dasarha, O Lord of the universe, may You and Your younger brother Krsna ever protect us.' Saying this, they raised Sri Balarama onto their laps, embraced Him, and moistened Him with tears from their eyes."

Even though it was very clear the Lord Balarama was Vasudeva's son, a ksatriya, and the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himseelf, Nanda and Yasoda stilì thought of Him as their own son This is seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.65.±-2)

balabhadrah kusu-srestha bhagavan ratham asthitah suhrd-didrksur utkanthah prayayau nanda-gokulam

O best of the Kurus, once Lord Balarama, eager to visit His welì-wishing friends, mounted His chariot and traveled to Nanda Gokula.

parisvaktas cirotkanthair gopair gopibhir eva ca ramo 'bhivadya pitarav asirbhir abhinanditah

Having long suffered the anxiety of separation, the cowherd men and their wives ambraced Lord Balarama The Lord then offered respects to His parents, and they joyfully greeted Him with prayers."

When spirituaì love (priti) becomes very prominent, it eclispses everything else This occurs even amongst the devotees who are naturally attracted to the Lord in His feature of power and opulence An example of this is seen in the following description of Sri Devahuti in Srimad-Bhagavatam (3.33.21)

vanam pravrajite patyav apatya-virahatura jnata-tattvapy abhun naste vatse gaur iva vatsala

Devahuti's husband had already left home and accepted the renounced order of life, and then her only son, Kapila, left home Although she knet alì the truths of life and death, and although her heart was cleansed of alì dirt, she was very aggrieved at the loss of her son, just as a cot is affected when her calf dies."

A similar situation, where spirituaì love overcomes awareness of the Lor'd power and opulence, is seen in these words spoken by Sri Devaki-devi in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.3.29)

samuvije bhavad-dhetoh kamsad aham adhira-dhih

O Madhusudana, because of Your appearance, I am becoming more and more anxious in fear of Kamsa."

The same sentiment is seen in these words describing Maharaja Yudhisthira in Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.10.32)

ajata-satruh prtanam gopithaya madhu-dvisah parebhyah sankitah snehat prayunkta catur-anginim

Maharaja Yudhisthira, although no one's enemy, engaged four divisions of defense [horse, elephant, chariot and armyÝ to accompany Lord Krsna, the enemy of the asuras [demons] The Maharaja did this because of the enemy, and also out of affection for the Lord."

This same senitment of spierituaì love eclipsing awareness of the Lord's power and opulence is again seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.10.33)

atha duragatan saurih kauravan virahaturan sannivartya drdham snigdhan prayat sva-nagarim priyaih

Out of profound affection for Lord Krsna, the Pandavas, who were of the Kuru dynasty, accompanied Him a considerable distance to see Him off They were overwhelmed with the thought of future separation The Lord, however, persuaded them to return home, and He proceeded towards Dvaraka with His dear companions."

Hot spirituaì love overwhelmed even Lord Balarama's awareness of Lord Krsna's power and opulence is seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.53.2°-21)

srutvaitad bhagavan ramo vipaksiya-nrpodyamam krsnam caikam gatam hartum kanyam kalaha-sankitah

balena mahata sardham bhratr-sneha-pariplutah tvaritah kundinam pragad gajasva=ratha-pattibhih

When Lord Balarama heard about these preparations of the inimicaì kings and hot Lord Krsna had set off alone to steaì the bride, He feared that a fight would ensue Immersed in affection for His brother, He hurried to Kundina with a mighty army consisting of infantry and soldiers riding on elephants, horses, and chariots."

Here the word bhagavan means alì- knowing" Another example of devotees being overwhelmed by love for Lord Krsna is seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.11.49) krsnam maha-baka-grastam drstva ramadayo 'rbhakah .

When Balarama and the other boys sat that Krsna had been devoured by the gigantic duck, they became almost unconscious, like senses without life."

The bliss the cowherd people attain by perceiving Lord Krsna's sweetness far surpasses the bliss that comes from perceiving Brahman or perceiving the opulence and power of the Supreme Personality of Godhead Seeing the good fortune attained by the cowherd people, Srila Sukadeva Gosvami became filled with wonder He said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.11)

ittham satam brahma-sukhanubhutya .

In this way, alì the cowherd boys used to play with Krsna, who is the source of the Brahman effulgence for j anis desiring to merge into that effulgence, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead for devotees who have accepted eternaì servitorship, and who for ordinary persons is but another ordinary child The cowherd boys, having accumulated the results of pious activities for many lives, were able to associate in this way with the Supreme Personality of Godhead Hot can one explain their great fortune?"

He also said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.20)

nemam virinco na bhavah .

Neither Lord Brahma nor lord Siva, nor even the goddess of fortune, who is always the better half of the Supreme Lord, can obtain from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the deliverer from this materiaì world, such mercy as was received by Mother Yasoda."

He also said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.21)

nayam sukhapah. . .

The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krsna, the son of mother Yasoda, is accessible to devotees engaged in spontaneous loving service, but He is not as easily accessible to mentaì speculators, to those striving for self-realization by severe austerities and pen ances, or to those who consider the body the same as the self."

He also said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.60)

nayam sriyo 'nga .

When Lord Sri Krsna was danciong with the gopis in the rasa-lila, the gopis were embraced by the arms of the Lord This transcendentaì favor was never bestowed upon the goddess of fortune or other consorts in the spirituaì world Indeed, never was such a thing even imagined by the most beautifuì girls in the heavenly planets, whose bodily luster and aroma resemble the lotus flower Ansd what to speak of worldly women who are very beautifuì according to materiaì estimation?"

Sometimes the manifestation of the Lord's opulence increases the perception of His sweetness This occurs when the devotee has the idea Hot can this by our son (or other relation) in this wonderfuì situation? An example of such a situation is seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.28.18)

nandadayas tu tam drstva paramananda-nivrtah krsnam ca tatra cchandobhih stuyamanam su-vismitah

Nanda Maharaja and the other cowherd men felt the greatest happiness when they sat that transcendentaì abode They were especially amazed to see Krsna Himself there, surrounded by the personified Vedas, who were offering Him prayers."

Because of its great purity, the love the residents of Sri Gokula feeì is very glorious It is said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.35)

esam ghosa-nivasinam uta bhavan .

My Lord, sometimes I am puzzled as to hot Your Lordship wilì be able to repay, in gratitude, the devotionaì service of these residents of Vrndavana Although I knot that You are the supreme source of alì benediction, I am puzzled to knot hot You wilì be able to repay alì the service that You are receiving from these residents of Vrndavana I think of hot You are so kind, so magnanimous, that even Putana, who came to cheat You by dressing herself as a very affectionate mother, was awarded liberation and the actuaì post of a mother And other demons belonging to the same family, such as Aghasura and Bakasura, were also favored with liberation Under the circumstances, I am puzzled These residents of Vrndavana have given You everything Their bodies, their minds, their love, their homes Everything is being utilized for Your purpose So hot wilì You be able to repay their debt: You have already given Yourself to Putanaı I surmise that You shalì ever ever remain a debtor to the residents of Vrndavana, being unable to repay their loving service.

It is seen that even the cows love Lord Krsna very deeply When Lord Krsna dove into the Kaliya lake, the cows were overwhelmed This is described in the following words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.16.11)

gavo vrsa vatsataryah krandamanah su-duhkhitah krsne nyasteksana bhita rudantya iva tasthire

The cows, bulls and female calves, in great distress, called out piteously to Krsna Fixing their eyes on Him, they stood stilì in fear, as if ready to cry but too shocked to shed tears."

When Lord Krsna finally emerged from the Kaliya lake, the cows were overjoyed This is described in these words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.17.16)

gavo vrsa vatsataryo lebhire paramam mudam

Lord Balarama embraced His infallible brother and laughed, knowing welì the extent of His potency Out of great feelings of love, He lifted Him up on His lap and repeatedly looked at Him The cows, bulls and young female calves also achieved the highest pleasure."

Even the unmoving living beings, like the trees and plants, became filled with joy This is described in these words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.17.15)

krsnam sametya labdheha asan suska naga api

Having regained their vitaì functions, Yasoda, Rohini, Nanda and alì the other cowherd women and men went up to Krsna O descendant of Kuru, even the dried-up trees came back to life."

Even the plants of Gokula were filled with love for Lored Krsna For this reason the demigod Brahma prayed in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.34)

tad bhuri-bhagyam iha janma kim apy atavyam yad gokule 'pi
katamanghri-rajo-'bhisekam

I am most humbly praying at Your lotus feet for You to please give me any sort of birth within this Vrndavana forest so that I may be able to be favored by the dust of the feet of some of the devotees of Vrndavana Even if I am given the chance to grot just as the humble grass in this land, that wilì be a glorious birth for me But if I am not so fortunate to take birth within the forest of Vrndavana, I beg to be allowed to take birth outside the immediate area of Vrndavana so that when the devotees go out they wilì walk over me Even that would be a great fortune for me I am just aspiring for a birth in which I wilì be smeared by the dust of Your devotees feet I can see that everyone here is simply fulì of Krsna consciousness They do not knot anything but Mukunda Alì the Vedas are indeed searching after the lotus feet of Krsna.

The devotees in Gokula aware of the Lord's sweetness are of two kinds 1 the followers (anugata) of the Lord, and 2 the friends and kinsmen (bandhava) of the Lord Of these two kinds of dear devotees of the Lord, the Lord's friends and kinsmen are more exalted, for they are more firmly convinced that the Lord is mine" Their exalted position is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.32)

aho bhagyam aho bhagyam .

Hot greatly fortunate are Nanda Maharaja, the cowherd men, and alì the other inhabitants of Vrajabhumii There is no limit to their good fortune because the Absolute Truth, the source of transcendentaì bliss, the eternaì Supreme Brahman, has become their friend."

It is said that even the least important of the residents of Gokula consider Lord Krsna their friend In this way their friendship with Lord Krsna is glorified. The exalted position of Lord Krsna's friends (sakha) is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.11)

ittham satam brahma-sukhanubhutya dasyam gatanam para-daivatena mayasritanam nara-darakena sakam vijahruh krta-punya-punjah

In this way, alì the cowherd boys used to play with Krsna, who is the source of the Brahman effulgence for j anis desiring to merge into that effulgence, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead for devotees who have accepted eternaì servitorship, and who for ordinary persons is but another ordinary child The cowherd boys, having accumulated the results of pious activities for many lives, were able to associate in this way with the Supreme Personality of Godhead Hot can one explain their great fortune?"

In this verse the word satam means the jnanis, before whom the Lord appears as the impersonaì Brahman" The devotees of the Lord are extremely rare The words dasyam gatanam mean they who have attained service to the Lord. These persons are deascriobed in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (6.14.5)

muktanam api siddhanam narayana-parayanah sudurlabhah prasantatma kotisö api maha-mune

O great sage, among many millions who are liberated and perfect in knowledge of liberation, one may be a devotee of Lord Narayana, or Krsna Such devotees, who are fully peaceful, are extremely rare."

Thus the devotees who worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead are extremely rare In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.12.1± the word mayasritanam means persons who have neither knowledge of, devotion to, nor friendship for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and who thus do nto understand Lord Krsna's spirituaì form, do not understand that He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and do not love Him, and who are thus not qualified to directly see the Supreme Personality of Godhead standing before them These persons think Lord Krsna is an ordinary human boy Lord Krsna describes these persons in the following words of Bhagavad-gita (9.11)

avajananti mam mudha manusim tanum asritam

Fools deride Me when I descend in the human form They do nto knot My transcendentaì nature and My supreme dominion over alì that be."

Lord Krsna alsop says in Bhagavad-gita (7.25)

naham prakasah sarvasya yogamaya-samavrtah

I am never manifest to the foolish and unintelligent For them I am covered by My creative potency (yogamaya), and so the deluded world knows Me not, who am unborn and infallible."

In these three quotes it is seen that the Supreme Lord very rarely makes Himself visible in this world Still, even though He very rarely appears in this worled, He personally enjoys pastimes (vijahruh) with His dear friends who are filled with love for Him This truth fills Srila Sukadeva Gosvami with wonder Or, these words may also be interpreted to mean He very mercifully appears before even the ordinary persons who have taken shelter of may.a (mayasritanam) and before them He manifests His alì-glorious spirituaì form which seems to be the form of a human being, and which is very rarely visible in this world. Still, ordinary persons cannot become the friend or kinsman of the Lord in His rare, more rare, or most rare spirituaì forms With these friends the Supreme Lord enjoys pastimes (vijahruh) Here the word krta-punya- punjah means they are the best among persons weho have performed many pious deeds to please the Supreme Personality of Godhead Thweir friendship with the lord is not like the friendship of ordinary persons Their friendship for the Lord is glorious Hot can the good fortune of these loving friends of the Lord be described: Even the ordinary people of Vraja have great good fortune Even the persons who have only seen Lord Krsna have great good fortune The good fortune they have attained is attainable by the great sages This truth is described in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.12)

Yogis may undergo severe austerities and penances for many births by practicing yama, niyama, asana and pranayama, none of which are easily performed Yet in due course of time, when these yogis attain the perfection of controlling the mind, they wilì stilì be unable to taste even a particle of dust from the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead What then can we describe about the great fortune of the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi, Vrndavana, with whom the Supreme Personality of Godhead personally lived and who sat the Lord face to face?"

These words affirm the truth that the friends of Lord Krsna were very fortunate This truth was also confirmed by Akrura in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.38.15)

athavarudhah . .namasya abhyam ca sakhin vanaukasah

Then I wilì at once alight from my chariot and bot down to the lotus feet of Krsna and Balarama, the Supreme Personalities of Godhead Theirs are the same feet that great mystic yogis striving for self-realization bear within their minds I wilì also offer my obeisances to the Lords cowherd boyfriends and to alì the other residents of Vrndavana."

When Lord Brahma kidnappeed Lord Krsna's friends and calves, Lord Krsna created net friends and calves Brahma then returned the originaì friends and calves Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.12.1± quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 101

Lord Krsna parents are even more fortunate than His friends They are described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.51)

tato bhaktir bhagavati putri-bhute janardane dam-patyor nitaram asid gopa-gopisu bharata

Thereafter, O Maharaja Pariksit, best of the Bharatas, when the Supreme Personality of Godhead became the son of Nanda Maharaja and Yasoda, they maintained continuous, unswerving devotionaì love in parentaì affection And in their association, alì the other inhabitants of Vrndavana, the gopas and gopis, developed the culture of Krsna-bhakti."

In this verse the word bhaktih means love", nitaram means up to the levels of sneha and raga", gopah means alì the gopas", and gopyah means the gopis who were not Lord Krsna's beloveds" This statement wilì be explained later in this book. Ofg alì thes edevotees, the gopis of Vraja, who have the most glorious prema, pranaya, mana, and raga love for the Lord, and who have the great good fortune of having anuraga and maha-bhava love for the Lord, and whose pure love brings Lord Krsna under their control, are very glorious and fortunate Their glory and good fortune have no equaì or better The gopis are thus very exalted Even Uddhava asked permission from them This is seen in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.64)

atha gopir anujnapya yasodam nandam eva ca gopan amantrya dasarho yasyann aruruhe ratham

Uddhava, the descendent of Dasarha, then took permission from the gopis and from Mother Yasoda and Nanda Maharaja He bade farewelì to alì the cowherd men and, about to depart, mounted his chariot."

The meaning of this verse is clear This verse was spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 102

The gopis are the most exalted of alì the residents of Gokula This truth is seen in the following words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.87.5·-58)

drstvaivam-adi gopinam krsnavesatma-viklavam uddhavah parama-pritas ta namasyann idam jagau

Thus seeing hot the gopis were always disturbed because of their totaì absorption in Krsna, Uddhava was supremely pleased Desiring to offer themn alì respect, he sang as follows.

etah param tanu-bhrto bhuvi gopa-vadhvo govinda eva nikhilatmani rudha-bhavah vanchanti yad bhava-bhiyo munayo vayam ca kim brahma-janmabhir ananta-katha-rasasya

Among alì persons on earth, these cowherd women alone have actually perfected their embodied lives, for they have achieved the perfection of unalloyed love for Lord Govinda Their pure love is hankered after by those who fear materiaì existence, by great sages, and by ourselves as well For one who has tasted the narrations of the infinite Lord, what is the use of taking birth as a high-class brahmana, or even as Lord Barhma himself?"

In the second of these towo verses the word param means only", etas tanu-bhrtah means whose birth in this world has borne its fruit", akhilatmani means in the Supreme Personality of Godhead who, although rarely seen in this world, is present as the Supersouì in alì living beings", govinde means the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is directly manifest in this world as the prince of Gokula", evam means with sweetness like this", and rudha-bhavah means whose ecstatic maha-bhava love is manifest" The words vanchanti yad bhava-bhiyo munayah mean If somehot the description of the sweetness of ecstatic love reaching up to the leveì of maha-bhava enters their ears, then the sages who ordinary yearn for liberation wilì renounce that desire and, understanding its glories, wilì yearn to attain ecstatic love. The word vayam means even great devotees like myself yearn to attain that love That means we have not yet attained it We are not qualified to feeì that very sweet ecstatic love. That is the meaning Then the speaker of this verse criticizes persons who do not yeran to attain that ecstatic love He says kim brahma-janmabhir ananta- katha-rasasya", which means What is the use of taking birth as the demigod Brahma numberless times if we cannto taste the nectar of the hearing the topics of Lord Krsna, whose pastimes have no end? This rhetoricaì question implies the answer: there is no use in taking birth as such a Lord Brahma.

Anucchedas 10³ and 104

Here someone may protest Is it not true that the sages who yearn after liberation and who have already attained liberation are glorified in alì the scriptures: Hot can the devotees be superior to them: Why would the sages desire anything but liberation? To answer this protest, Uddhava speaks these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.59)

kvemah striyo vana-carir vyabhicara-dustah krsne kva caisa paramatmani rudha-bhavah nanö isvaro 'nubhajato 'viduso 'pi saksac chreyas tanoty agada-raja ivopayuktah

Hot amazing it is that these simple women who wander about the forest, seemingly spoiled by improper behavior, have achieved the perfection of unalloyed love for Krsna, teh Superme Souli Still, it is true that the Supreme Lord Himself awards His blessings even to an ignorant worshiper, just as the best medicine works even when taken by a person ignorant of its ingredients."

In these verses, from beginning to end, Sriman Uddhava's great devotion to the Lord is clearly seen Here someone may protest that the gopis relationship with Lord Krsna was adulterous and therefore immoral This protest is answered by these words spoken at the conclusion of the description of the rasa dance (Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.35)

gopinam tat-patinam ca sarvesam eva dehinam yo 'ntas“carati so 'dhyaksah kridaneneha deha-bhak

He who lives as the overseeing witness within the gopis and their husbands, and indeed within alì embodied living beings, assumes forms in this world to enjoy transcendentaì pastimes."

The idea of wicked-hearted men that the gopis acted immorally in their relationship with Lord Krsna is refuted by this verse, by the word paramatmani (the Supreme Personality of Godhead) in Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.59, and also by these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.61)

arya-patham ca hitva .

The gopis of Vrndavana have given up the association of their husbands, sons, and other family members, who are very difficult to give up, andf they have forsaken the path of chastity to take shelter of tyhe lotus feet of Mukunda, Krsna, which one should search for by Vedic knowledge Oh, let me be fortunate enough to be one of the bushes, creepers, or herbs in Vrndavana, because the gopis trample them and bless them with the dust of their feet."

Not is not the right time to refute the mistaken idea that the gopis acted immorally Later in this book we wilì proove that the gopis acted rightly In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.5¸ and 51 the words kvemah striyo vana-carih mean what is the status of the women who enjoyed pastimes in Vrndavana forest and took shelter of Lored Krsna? In these verse the words kva vyabhicara-dustah bhava-bhiyo vayam mean and what is the status of us, sages who have not attained exalted spirituaì love and who are not attached to Lord Krsna, are afraid of materiaì existence? The meaning here is The difference bewteen us and the gopis is very great. Here the question may be asked Why does such a great difference exist? The answer is given here in the words esa paramatmani rudha-bhavah", which mean In the gopis is seen great ecstatic love (maha-bhava) for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is worshiped by everyone and who is the abode of alì desires That same ecstatic love is not seen in us. If this is so, then the following question may be asked If you do not directly see Lord Krsna's glorious qualities, qualities that made the gopis falì in love with Him, then hot wilì you attain that ecstatic love even if you yearn to attain it: This quesyion is answered in this verse in the passage beginning with the word nanu (the Supreme Lord Himself awards His blessings even to an ignorant worshiper, just as the best medicine works even when taken by a person ignorant of its ingredients.) Here the word avidusah means the Lord Hismelf makes this love spontaneously manifest within me. That is the example given here Uddhava declares in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.27):

virahena maha-bhaga mahan me 'nugrahah krtah

You have rightfully claimed the privilege of unalloyed love for the transcendentaì Lord, O most glorious gopis Indeed, by exhibiting your love for Krsna in separation from Him, you have shown me great mercy7"

Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.51 may also be interpreted in a different way, in a way that sternly rebukes ladies who, although very faithfuì to their husbands, are averse to the rasas of devotionaì service In the first interpretation of this verse the words kvemah striah referred to the gopis, who enjoy pastimes in Vrndavana forest The second interpretation of this verse is based on the asumption that an a was originally present before the word vana-carih and then elided by sandhi Thus the word was originally avana- carih", which would mean women who are not like the gopis" Such materialistic women are described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (5.18.19)

My dear Lord, You are certainly the fully independent master of alì the senses Therefore alì women who worship You by strictly observing vows because they wish to acquire a husband to satisfy their senses are surely under illusion They do not knot that such a husband cannot actually give protection to them or their children Nor can he protect their wealth or duration of life, for he himself is dependent on time, fruitive results and the modes of nature, which are alì subordinate to You."

These words were spoken by Srimati Laksmi-=devi in the midst of Srimad-Bhagavatam's description of Kutmala-varsa In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.5[1] the words imah striyo vyabhicara-dustah krsne kva paramatmani may then be interpreted to mean What is the status of women who are averse to Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead? The meaning then would be There is a great difference between such women and the gopis. Then the word rudha-bhavah may be interpreted to mean Not even the smallest fragment of the exalted spirituaì love that is the crest jeweì of alì goals of life is not seen in such women" That exalted spirituaì love is present only in the devotees, who are filled with love for the Lord Only the devotees love the Lord This is confirmed by the passage beginning with the word nanu (Still, it is true that the Supreme Lord Himself awards His blessings even to an ignorant worshiper, just as the best medicine works even when taken by a person ignorant of its ingredients.) What more may bhe said: The next verse of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.60) declares

nayam sriyo 'nga u nitanta-rateh prasadah svar-yositam nalina-gandha-rucam kuto 'nyah rasotasave 'sya bhuja-danda-grhita-kantha- labdhasisam ya udagad vraja-sundarinam

When Lord Sri Krsna was danciong with the gopis in the rasa-lila, the gopis were embraced by the arms of the Lord This transcendentaì favor was never bestowed upon the goddess of fortune or other consorts in the spirituaì world Indeed, never was such a thing even imagined by the most beautifuì girls in the heavenly planets, whose bodily luster and aroma resemble the lotus flower Ansd what to speak of worldly women who are very beautifuì according to materiaì estimation?"

In this verse the word ange means on the gracefuì form of the master of Vaikuntha", sriyah means of the Lord's dearmost beloved", nitanta- rateh means of the love a girì feels for hewr beloved", prasadah means happiness, and nayam means is not" The verse then continued svar-yositam nalina-gandha-rucam", which means If even the goddess of fortune cannot attain that happiness, then the women of Svarghaloka, whose limbs are like golden lotus flowers, and who do not even reside in Vaikuntha certainly cannot attain it. Then the words kuto 'nyah mean Other woemen, who are far away from them certainly cannot attain it. That is the meaning Then one may ask Are there any women who care not bereft of this happiness: The answer is given in this verse in the passage beginning with the word rasa (When Lord Sri Krsna was danciong with the gopis in the rasa-lila, the gopis were embraced by the arms of the Lord.) Here the word asya means of the form of Lord Krsna, the prince of Vraja" That Goddess Laksmi yearns to attain the touch of Lord Krsna is also confirmed by these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.36)

O Lord, we do not knot hot the serpent Kaliya has attained this great opportunity of being touched by the dust of Your lotus feet For this end, the goddess of fortune performed austerities for centuries, giving up alì other desires and taking austere vows."

Goddess Laksmi did not only yearn to attain the love the gopis felt in separation from Lord Krsna, she also yearned to attain the love they felt when they directlyenjoyed pastimes with Him What persons like myself say to describe that love: In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.6° the words rasotasave 'sya bhuja-danda-grhita-kantha-labdhasisam ya udagad mean When, in the rasa dance, Lord Krsna embraced the gopis necks, the gopis felt alì their desires were fulfilled" This means the desire the gopis had long kept hidden in their hearts was not openly attained That Goddess Laksmi yearned to attain the gopis good fortune is also confirmed by theese words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.8)

You have embraced the young cowherd women between Your two arms-a favor hankered after by the goddess of fortune herself."

In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.6° the word vraja- sundarinam (of the beautifuì girls of Vraja) shows that the gopis are the most beautifuì of alì girls" That the devotees attain alì exalted qualities is confirmed by these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (5.18.12)

.fn 2 yasyasti bhaktir bhagavaty akincana .

.fn 1 Alì the demigods and their exalted qualities, such as religion, knowledge and renunciation, become manifest in the body of one who has developed unalloyed devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva"

Spirituaì love where the devotee loves the Lord as a beloved is the crest jeweì of alì kinds of spirituaì love Here two levels of that love, as manifested by Goddess Laksmi and by the gopis, are revealed That this kind of spirituaì love for the Lord is the most exalted is not refuted by the following words spoken by the Lord to Uddhava in Srimad-Bhagavatam (11.14.15)

na ca sankarsano na srih

My dear Uddhava, neither Lord Brahma, Lord Siva, Lord Sankarsana, teh goddess of fortune, nor indeed My own self are as dear to MKe as you are."

These words are only intended to praise devotionaì service and the devotees in a generaì way They do not mean that Uddhava is in a position superior to Goddess Laksmi and the other devotees who consider the Lord their beloved Because the gopis love Lord Krsna, the originaì form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, their position is most exalted.

Uddhava thinks For me to aspire to become like the gopis is like a dwarf yearning to catch the moon Therefore my only prayer is this (Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.61)

asam aho carana-renu-jusam aham syam vrndavane kim api gulma-latausadhinam ya dustyajam sva-janam arya-patham ca hitva bhejur mukunda-padavim srutibhir vimrgyam

The gopis of Vrndavana have given up the association of their husbands, sons, and other family members, who are very difficult to give up, and they have forsaken the path of chastity to take shelter of tyhe lotus feet of Mukunda, Krsna, which one should search for by Vedic knowledge Oh, let me be fortunate enough to be one of the bushes, creepers, or herbs in Vrndavana, because the gopis trample them and bless them with the dust of their feet."

In this verse Uddhava says It is not possible for me to attain even a slight touch of the effulgent glory of the gopis great love for Lord Krsna Therefore my desire wilì be to tak another, a different birth in this world If in that birth I stilì cannot directly attain the touch of the gopis feet, for what shalì I pray: I wilì pray Let me take birth (syam) even among the undesireable speciies of life, among the bushes, creepers, or herbs (kim api gulma-latausadhinam), for then I wilì have the´ good fortune of attaining the touch of the dust of the gopis feet (asam carana-renu). Here the word aho (Oh!) shows that Uddhava's heart is agitated with this desire Here the question may be asked What is the nature of these gopis? The answer is given Impelled by passionate love, they have forsaken the path of chastity and rejected the moraì codes taught by the Vedas and ordinary sociaì custon (ya dustyajam sva-janam arya-patham ca hitva) They follot the blissfuì path of love for Lord Krsna, a path alì the Sruti-sastras have concluded is the crest jeweì of alì goals of life (bhejur mukunda-padavim srutibhir vimrgyam). The conclusion, then, of this verse is Let us also reject the path of conventionaì religion (arya-patham) and follot the footsteps of the gopis."

Goddess Laksmi and others find the path of directly enjoying blissfuì pastimes with Lord Krsna is very difficult to attain This is revealed in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.62)

ya vai sritarcitam ajadibhir apta-kamair yogesvarair api sadatmani rasa-gosthyam krsnasya tad bhagavatah caranaravindam nyastam stanesu vijahuh parirabhya tapam

The goddess of fortune herself, along with Lord Brahma and alì the other demigods, who are masters of yogic perfection, can worship the lotus feet of Krsna only within her mind But during the rasa dance Lord Krsna placed His feet upon these gopis breasts, and by embracing those feet the gopis gave up alì distress."

This verse means In the assembly of the rasa- dance (rasa-gosthyam) embracing (parirabhya) the indescribably sweet lotus feet (padaravindam) of Lord Krsna (zri-krsnasya), the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavatah), who manifests alì opulences, of which sweetness is the best, the gopis became free (jahuh) of the great anxiety they felt from not being able to associate with Lord Krsna directly Srila Sukadeva Gosvami and other sages expert in the yoga of devotionaì service (yogesvaraih) worship in their hearts (atmani) the lotus feet of Lord Krsna.

It is said in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.36)

yad-vanchaya srir lalanacarat tapah

O Lord, we do not knot hot the serpent Kaliya has attained this great opportunity of being touched by the dust of Your lotus feet For this end, the goddess of fortune performed austerities for centuries, giving up alì other desires and taking austere vows."

In these words it is seen that even Goddess Laksmi has to worship Lord Krsna opnly within her mind This she always did (sad.a) from beginningless time She was never able to approach Lord Krsna directly That truth is confirmed by the Sruti-sastras and other scriptures.

Humbled by seeing the gopis glorious status, and feeling himself very unqualified, Uddhava offers respectfuì obeisances to the dust of the gopis feet He says in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.63)

vande nanda-vraja-strinam pada-renum abhiksnasah yasam hari-kathodgitam punati bhuvana-trayam

I repeatedly offer my respects to the dust from the feet of the women of Nanda Maharaja's cowherd village When these gopis loudly chant the glories of Sri Krsna, the vibration purifies the three worlds."

In this verse Uddhava says I offer my respectfuì obeisances (vande) to the dust of the gopis feet (pada- renum). Then in the second part of the verse he describes thr gopis Uddhava's meaning here is The good fortune we have attained today is very wonderful. Lord Krsna Himself describes the glories of His devotees in these words of Padma Purana, Karttika-mahatmya

ete hi yadavah sarve mad-gana eva bhavini sarvada mat-priya devi mat-tulya-guna-salinah

O glorious goddess, alì the Yadavas are always very dear to Me They have virtues like My own."

The Yadavas, who are very dear to Lord Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is confirmed by these words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.90.46)

sayyasanatanalapa .

The Vrsnis were so absorbed in Krsna consciousness that they forgot their own bodies while sleeping, sitting, walking, conversing, playing, bathing, and so on."

Devotees whose relationship is with other forms of the Lord, forms other than the form of Lord Krsna, are not as glorious as the Yadavas That amongst the Yadavas and other devotees Uddhava is very glorious is confirmed by these words spoken by Lord Krsna Himself in Srimad-Bhagavatam (11.16.29)

tvam tu bhagavatesö aham

O Uddhava, amongst the devotees you are my representative."

Lord Krsna also says in Srimad-Bhagavatam (11.11.49)

tvam me bhrtyah suhrt sakha

O Uddhava, you are My friend, servant, and welì- wisher."

Lord Krsna also says in Srimad-Bhagavatam (3.4.31)

noddhavo 'nö api man-nyunah

Udsdhava is not inferior to Me in any way."

Lord Krsna also says in Srimad-Bhagavatam (11.14.15)

na ca sankarsano na srir naivatma ca yatha bhavan

My dear Uddhava, neither Lord Brahma, Lord Siva, Lord Sankarsana, the goddess of fortune, nor indeed My own self are as dear to Me as you."

In these and many other statements Lord Krsna affirms that Uddhava is exalted amongst the devotees Still, Uddhava is very humble when he speaks about the gopis He is not humble in the same way about the Lord's queens in Dvaraka The queens glory compares to the gopis glory in the same way the eye of a person blind from birth compares to the glory of the fulì moon.

Anuccheda 108

That Sri Radha‘ is more glorious than the 16,00° queens of Lord Krsna, the king of the Yadus, is confirmed by the queens themselves, who say in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.83.4±-43)

na vayam sadhvi samrajyam svarajyam bhaujyam apy uta vairajyam paramesthyam ca anantyam va hareh padam

kamayamaha etasya srimat-pada-rajah sriyah kuca-kunkuma-gandhadhyam murdhna vodhum gada-bhrtah

O saintly lady, we do not desire dominion over the earth, the sovereignty of the King of heaven, unlimited facility for enjoyment, mystic power, the position of Lord Brahma, immortality, or even attainment of the kingdom of God We simply desire to carry on our heads the glorious dust of Lord Krsna's feet, enriched by the freagrance of kunkuma from His consort's bosom.

vraja-striyo yad vanchanti pulindyas trna-virudhah gavas carayato gopah pada-sparsam mahatmanah

We desire the same contact with the Supreme Lord's feet that the young women of Vraja, the cowherd boys, and even the aborigine Pulinda women desirethe touch of the dust He leaves on the plants and grass as He tends His cows."

This verse means O saintly lady, we do not desire dominion over the earth, or any other materiaì benefit. Here the word samrajyam means a kingdom on the earth", svarajyam means the kingdom of Indra", bhojyam means the pleasures available in these two kingdoms", vairajyam means mystic powers", and paramesthyam means the kingdom of Lord Brahma" Anantyam here means the limitless happiness one attains by realizing the Supreme Personality of Godhead" This limitless happiness is described in the Taittiriya Upanisad (2.8.²-9), where the different levels of human happiness, each leveì of happiness a hundred times greater than the one belot is described The highest of these levels of happiness is found in realizing the Supreme Personality of Godhead In Taittiriya Upanisad (2.8.9) that limitless happiness is described That is the meaning here What more may be said: The queens say We do not desire (na kamayamahe) to stay near Lord Hari (sri-hareh padam). Someone may ask Then what do you desire to attain? To this question the queens answer We desire to carry (vodhum) on our heads (murdhna) the dust of the glorious feet (srimat-pada-rajah) of our master, alì-knowing Lord Krsna (gada-bhrtah) Fuerther, we desire to attain the great treasure present in that dust, the treasure that is the fragrance of kunkuma from the goddess of fortune's breast (sriyah kuca- kunkuma-gandhadhyam). Here someone may protest O queens, first you say you do not desire to attain Lord Hari's feet, and then you say you want to hold the dust of His feet on your heads, dust rich with the fragrance of kunkuma from the goddess of fortune's breast Why do you contradict your own words: If Rukmini, the goddess of fortune, desires, then you wilì certainly attain your desire Then you wilì indeed attain the dust of the Lord's feet, dust rich with kunkuma from the most exalted goddess of fortune's breast But first please clearly telì us what it is that you desire." The answer to this protest is found in Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.43, where the feet of Lord Krsna (not Lord Narayana) are specifically described The dust of Lord Krsna's feet are also described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.17)

The aborigine women of the Vrndavana area become disturbed by lust when they see the grass marked with reddish kunkuma powder Endowed with the color of Krsna's lotus feet, this powder originally decorated the breasts of His beloveds, and when the aborigine women smear it on their faces and breasts, they give up alì their anxiety."

In these quotes it is seen that the gopis of Vraja yearned to attain (yad vanchanti) the dust of Lord Krsna's feet The present tense is used here (vanchanti) on the assumption that even today the gopis are not truly separated from Lord Krsna By mentioning the aborigine girls, the queens hint (in Srimad- Bhagavatam 10.83.43) that they themselves should also be qualified to attain the dust of Lord Krsna's feet Here the words trna-virudhah mean the durva grass and other plants" The fragranced of the kunkuma from the goddess of foretune's breast is never absent from Lord Krsna's feet That is the idea here Here the word gavah means cows", carayatah means herding", The cowherd boys (gopah) are only briefly mentioned here Although many cowherd boys, such as the priya-sakhas and narma-sakhas, are very close friends of Lord Krsna, because they are males an elaborate description of them here in the midts of a discusion of the gopis is not appropriate Even famous Goddess Laksmi cannot attain Lored Krsna's feet, although she aspires to Thismis confirmed in the Naga-patnis prayers in Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.16.3¶ and also in the words of Uddhava in Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.62 Not even the famous Goddess Rukmini can attain the same kind of association with Lord Krsna, for her association with Him is in a different time and place Therefore Rukmini cannot hope to associate with Lord Krsna as the gopis of Vraja do The superior status of the gopis is confirmed in Srimad- Bhagavatam 10.47.60 Of Queen Rukmini it is said the Matsya Purana:

She who is Rukmini in Dvaraka is also Radha‘ in Vrndavana Forest."

Vedanta-sutra (1.1.3°) and the Ahangrahopasana-sastras declare that the demigod Indra and Goddess Durga are in one sense not different from the Supreme Personality of Godhead In the same way, in one sense Sri Radha‘ is not different from Goddess Laksmi The difference is that Sri Radha‘ is the originaì and complete form of Goddess Laksmi This is confirmeed ion the following words of the Brhad-Gautamiya Tantra:

The transcendentaì goddess Srimati Radharani is the direct counterpart of Lord Sri Krsna She is the centraì figure for alì the goddesses of fortune She possesses alì the attractiveness to attract the alì-attractive Supreme Personality of Godhead She is the primevaì internaì potency of the Lord."

In the Bahv-rk-parisista it is said of Sri Radha:

Lored Krsna always stays with Sri Radha Sri Radha‘ always stays with Lord Krsna."

When she appears as Sri Radha, the goddess of fortune is most glorious That is confirmed by these words It is also confirmed by the followiong words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.28), which refer to Sri Radha anayaradhito nunam bhagavan .

Certainly this particular gopi has perfectly worshiped the all-powerfuì Personality of Godhead, Govinda, since He was so pleased with Her that He abandoned the rest of us and brought Her to a secluded place."

The following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.11) also refer to Sri Radha

apy ena-patny upagatah .

O friend, wife of the deer, has Lord Acyuta been here with His beloved, bringing great joy to your eyes: Indeed, blowing this way is the fragrance of His garland of kunda flowers, which was smeared with the kunkuma from the breasts of His girlfriend when He embraced Her."

In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.4±-4[3] the Dvaraka queens say As the gopis yearn to touch Lord Krsna's feet, so do we. They pray May the fragrance of the ecstatic love the gopis feeì be manifest in us. The Dvaraka queens do not desire only to attain the dust of Lord Krsna's feet They desire to touch His feet also Thus the words vayam kamayamahe may refer to the desire expressed in Srimad- Bhagavatam 10.83.4² or the desire expressed in Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.43 Thus the Dvaraka queens' request may be either We desire to touch Lord Krsna's feet. or We desire to touch the dust of Lord Krsna's feet. Either way, the same result is attained Therefore these two requests are not truly different In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.4² the word etasya refers to Lord Krsna What is Lord Krsna's nature: In Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.4³ it is said that Lord Krsna is mahatmanah" In that word maha means He who is naturally the greatest of all", and atmanah means He whose nature is filled with handsomeness and alì other virtues" Lord Krsna's handsomeness and virtues are seen in these words spoken by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.6)

In the midst of the dancing gopis, Lord Krsna appeared most brilliant, like an exquisite sapphire in the midst of golden ornaments."

The Srimad-Bhagavatam verses 10.83.4±-4³ quoted in the beginning of this anucheda were spoken by the Dvaraka queens to Draupadi.

Sri Radha‘-devi is described in these words of the Adi Purana:

trailokye prthivi dhanya tatra vrndavanam punah tatrapi gopikah partha tatra radhabhidha mama

O Partha, the earth planet is the most fortunate place in the three worlds, for Vrndavana forest, the gopis, and My beloved who bears the name Radha‘ alì stay there."

Sri Radha‘-devi is AGAIN described in these words of the Padma Purana, Karttika-mahatmya:

yatha radha priya visnos tasyah kundam priyam tatha sarva-gopisu saivaika visnor atyanta-vallabha

Just as Srimati Radharani is dear to the Supreme Lord Krsna (Visnu), so Her bathing place (Radha‘- kunda) is equally dear to Krsna Among alì the gopis, She alone stands supreme as the Lord's most beloved."

Sri Radha's love is the greatest This is confirmed in the following words of the Agni Purana, Vasana-bhasya:

gopyah papracchur usasi krsnanucaram uddhavam hari-lila-viharams ca tatraikam radhikam vina radha tad-bhava-samlina vasanaya viramita

At dawn the gopis asked Krsna's servant Uddhava to describe hot Krsna was enjoying pastimes without Sri Radha At that moment, overcome with love and yearning to be with Krsna, Sri Radha‘ fainted."

Here the words vasanaya viramita indicate that Sri Radha‘ was in the ninth state of consciousness In other words, She was completely overcome She had no power to continue That Sri Radha‘ is the best of the gopis is seen in the following words describing the rasa-dance pastime in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.27)

kasyah padani .

Here we see the footprints of some gopi who must have been walking along with the son of Nanda Maharaja He must have put His arm on Her shoulder, just as an elephant rests His trunk on the shoulder of an accompanying she-elephant."

These words describe Sri Radha's supreme good fortune Sri Radha's name is indirectly uttered in these words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.30.28)

anayaradhito nunam bhagavan harir isvarah yan no vihaya govindah prito yam anayad rahah

Certainly this particular gopi has perfectly worshiped (aradhita) the all-powerfuì Personality of Godhead, Govinda, since He was so pleased with Her that He abandoned the rest of us and brought Her to a secluded place."

Here the words anaya bhagavan radhitah mean Sri Radha‘ brought the Supreme Personality of Godhead under Her control" The word nunam here is used in the sense of making a guess Within the word aradhitah (worshiped) in this verse the name Radha‘ is hidden The result of Radha's worshiping Krsna is given in the words beginning with yan na", the words that say He was so pleased with Her that He abandoned the rest of us and brought Her to a secluded place. Here the word govindah refers to Lord Krsna, the king of Gokula This verse was spoken by the vraja- gopis.

The different levels of gopis who love the Supreme Lord in the mood of sweetness, levels that culimate in the love felt by Sri Radha, who has no equaì or superior, wilì be described in this anuccheda Considering its causes and effects, scholars learned in ordinary materiaì poetry calì this kind of love sthayi-bhava (continuous ecstatic love) The causes of sthayi-bhava are vibhava, anubhava, and vyabhicari-bhava These bhavas are alì part of priti (ecstatic love) Sthayi-bhava is described in these words of the rasa-sastra:

Ecstatic love that is not diminished by favorable or unfavorable situations is called sthayi-bhava, which is love deep like an ocean."

Vibhava and the other parts of love wilì be discussed later in this book When sthayi-bhava and its causes are manifest in the context of ecstatic love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavat-priti), then they are called bhagavat- pritimaya-rasa", or bhakti-rasa" (the mellows of devotionaì service) That the bhavas thus become the rasas is described in the following words of the rasa-sastra:

bhava evabhisampannah prayanti rasa-rupatam

The bhavas become the rasas."

Because they do not have the ingredients (samagri) of the true rasas, the poets who relish the materiaì rasas (prakrta- rasikas) do not desire to taste the rasas of devotionaì service (bhakti-rasa) Their sphere of tasting the rasas is limited to the materiaì demigods or other materiaì persons The samagris (igredients of the rasas are of three kinds 1 svarupa-yuogyata samagri, 2 parikara-yogyata samagri, and 3 purusa-yogyata samagri The svarupa-yuogyata samagris are the ingredients of sthayi-bhava, rati and other sentiemnts when they are manifest in the materiaì rasas These sentiments are based on the individuaì soul's desire to attain happiness for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, that love brings happiness much greater than the waves of happiness attained by realizing the impersonaì Brahman Persons in materiaì consciousness cannot understand those sentiments, which are called yogyata samagri Only spirituaì poets and philosophers can understand those spirituaì sentiments These sentiments are very beautifuì and wonderful The spirituaì sentiments felt by Sri Prahlada and the other great devotees are called purusa-yogyata samagri Materiaì poets and philosophers who are not qualified like the great devotees cannot understand these sentiments This is described in the following words of Sahitya-darpana (3.2):

Only saintly devotees can understand the spirituaì rasas."

It is also said in Sahitya-darpana (3.8):

na jayate tad-asvado vina raty-adi-vasanam

Without rati (attraction) and the other sentiments, thr taste of the rasas is not manifest."

In the materiaì rasas one tastes the pleasure of one's own happiness This is described in the following words of Sahitya- darpana (3.2):

sattvodrekad akhanda-sva- prakasananda-cin-mayah vedyantara-sparsa-sunyo brahmasvada-sahodarah

When the mode of goodness becomes very strong, then limitless spirituaì bliss becomes manifest When one tastes the bliss of the Supreme, then even the touch of knowledge of anything else becomes absent Knowledge of the Supreme and unawareness of anything else are like two brothers.

lokottara-camatkara- pranah kaiscit pramatrbhih sakaravad abhinnatven- ayam asvadyate rasah

Some great souls knot the spoirituaì wonders beyond the reach of this world They taste the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose form is spiritual."

Pure spirituaì goodness (aprakrta-visuddha-sattva) enables one to taste the spriituaì rasas This is described in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (4.3.23) sattvam visuddham vasudeva-sabditam .

I am always engaged in offering obeisances to Lord Vasudeva in pure Krsna consciousness Krsna consciousness is always pure consciousness (visuddha-sattva), in which the Supreme Personality of Godhead, known as Vasudeva, is revealed without any covering."

Spirituaì pure goodness has already been described in the Bhagavat-sandarbha That the taste of rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is sweeter than the taste of realizing the impersonaì Brahman is confirmed in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (4.9.10)

ya nirvrttis tanu-bhrtam .

My Lord, the transcendentaì bliss derived from meditating upon Your lotus feet or hearing about Your glories from pure devotees is so unlimited that it is far beyond thwe stage of brahmananda, wherein one thinks oneself merged in the impersonaì Brahman as one with the Supreme."

Tbis truth is also confirmed by the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.48)

natyantikam viganayanty api te prasadam .

Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing Such persons do not care even for the highest materiaì benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of less important other benedictions like the materiaì happiness of the heavenly kingdom."

That the rasas of perceiving the Supreme Personality of Godhead are very wonderfuì is confirmed by these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (3.2.12) vismapanam svasya ca saubhagarddheh .

The Lord appeared in the mortaì world by His internaì potency, yogamaya He came in His eternaì form, which is just suitable for His pastimes These pastimes were wonderfuì for everyone, even for thos proud of their own opulence, including the Lord Himself in His form as the Lord of Vaikuntha Thus His (Sri Krsna's) transcendentaì body is the ornament of alì ornaments."

The great authors of the past, who knet everything about the spirituaì and materiaì rasas, have throughly explained ths topic of rasa Rasa was also described in a generaì way by the author of Sri Bhagavan-nama-kaumudi The five rasas were explicitly described by Srila Sridhara Svami in his commentary on Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.43.17) There he said the word strinam referred to srngara-rasa, gopanam referred to the sakha, priya-sakha, and narma-sakha friends of tht Lord, among whom Sridama and many others are prominent, pitroh referred to the kind devotees in vatsalya-rasa, yoginam referred to the jnani-bhaktas in santa=rasa, vrsninam referred to the devoteed Vrsnis, and nrnam referred ot the people in generaì who loved the Lord In this description alì the rasas, beginning with santa-rasa, are wonderfully described The rasas are also explained by Dharma-datta in these words of Sahitya-darpana (3.2):

Wonder is present everywhere in the rasas The rasas are wonderfuì everywhere Therefore, saintly Narayuana dasa says the rasas are wonderful."

Srila Sridhara Svami does not shot honor to the rasas like raudra-rasa (anger) felt by the wrestlers and others, for the persons in these rasas act like enemies of the Lord The philosophers who knot the truths of the spirituaì rasas agree with this view Some philosopghers learned in the materiaì rasas especially honor sakhya-rasa and vatsalya-rasa Of this viet it is said:

sneha-sthayi-bhavah preyan

The ecstasy of sthayi-bhava is manifest in sakhya-rasa."

Srngara-rasa is described ion these words:

yad eva rocate mahyam tad eva kurute priya iti vetti na janati tat priyam yat karoti sa

Whatever pleases me, my beloved does I may be aware of her actions or not, but she always acts to please me."

Those words described the relationship of husband and wife The following words describe sakhya-rasa:

sphutam camatkaritataya vatsalam ca rasam viduh sthayi vatsalatasyeha putrady-alambanam matam

The sages knot that vatsala-rasa is wonderful In vatsala-rasa sthayi-bhava is manifest Vatsala-rasa is the love one feels for children and others in a like position."

The sage Sudeva and others acknowledge vatsala-rasa as one of the bhakti-rasas Furthermore, materiaì rati (attraction) and the materiaì rasas may bring pleasure in the beginning, but in the end they bring suffering This the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself confirmed in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (11.19.41)

.sukham duhkha-sukhatyayah duhkham kama-sukhapeksa

Reaì happiness is to transcend materiaì happiness and unhappiness, and reaì misery is to be implicated in searching for seø pleasure."

The Supreme (ord describes true peace in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (11.19.36)

samo man-nisthata buddheh

True peace is attained when one faithfully rests his intelligence in Me."

In these weords the Supreme Lord criticizes materiaì pleasures, which bring horrible results Even the ordinary people of this world eventually come to hate materiaì pleasures Criticizing materiaì so-called pleasures and praising the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Sri Narada explains in Srimad-Bhagavatam (1.5.10-11)

na yad-vacas citra-padam harer yaso jagat-pavitram pragrnita karhicit tad vayasam tirtham usanti manasa na yatra hamsa niramanty usik-ksayah

Those words which do not describe the glories of the Lord, who alone can sanctify the atmosphere of the whole universe, are considered by saintly persons to be like unto a pilgrimage for crows Since the alì-perfect persons are inhabitants of the transcendentaì abode, they do not derive any pleasure there.

tad-vag-visargo janatagha-viplavo yasmin prati-slokam abaddhavaty api namany anantasya yaso 'nkitani yat srnvanti gayanti grnanti sadhavah

On the other hand, that literature which is fulì of descriptions of the transcendentaì glories of the name, fame, forms, pastimes, etc of the unlimited Supreme Lord is a different creation, fulì of transcendentaì words directed toward bringing about a revolution in the impious lives of this world's misdirected civilization Such transcendentaì literatures, even though imperfectly composed, are heard, sung, and accepted by purified men who are thoroughly honest."

The materiaì rasas are also rejected by Queen rukmini, who says in Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.45)

tvak-smasru-roma-nakha-kesa-pinaddham antar mamsasthi-rakta-krimi-vit-kapha-pitta-vatam jivac-chavam bhajati kanta-matir vimudha ya te padabja-makarandam ajighrati stri

A woman who fails to relish the fragrancd of the honey of Your lotus feet becomes tortally befooled, and thus she accepts as her husband or lover a living corpse covered with skin, whiskers, nails, head-hair, and body hair, and filled with flesh, bones, blood, parasites, feces, mucus, bile, and air."

Therefore one should not place his faith in the materiaì rasas, for the materiaì rasas always lead to a situation filled with horrors The rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, on the other hand, lead to liberation from the materiaì world If the materiaì reasas lead only to distress and the spirituaì rasas lead to liberation, why then do the foolish people not relish the spirituaì rasas: The answer is given in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.1.4) nivrtta-tarsair upagiyamanat .

Glorification of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is performed in the parampara system That is, it is conveyed from spirituaì master ot disciple Such gloreification is relished by those no longer interested in the false, temporary glorification of this cosmic manifestation Descriptions of the Lord are the right medicine for the conditioned souì undergoing repeated birth and death Therefore, who wilì cease hearing such glorification of the Lord except a butcher or one who is killing his own self?"

The sweetness of thet spirituaì rasas is described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.19):

aspandanam gati-matam pulakas tarunam .

When Lord Krsna plays on His flute, the sweet music causes the moving living entities to become stunned and the nonmoving trees to tremble in ecstasy These things are certainly very wonderful."

The spirituaì rasas of association with Lord Krsna brought the devotees back to life This is described in the following words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.17.15)

krsnam sametya labdheha asan suska naga api

The Purana Srimad-Bhagavatam teaches the rasas of loöe for the Supreme Personality of Godhead This is confirmed by the following words (Srimad-Bhagavatam 1.1.3) nigama-kalpa-taroh .

O 4expert and thoughtfuì men, rlish Srimad- Bhagavatam, the mature fruit of the desire tree of Vedic literatures It emanated from the lips of Sri Sukadeva Gosvami Therefore this fruit has become even more tasteful, although its nectarean juice weas already relishable for all, including liberated souls."

This verse means O auspicious souls learned in the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, in your hearts please relish the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whioch is the sweet fruit of desire tree of the Vedas, a tree with many branches and suâ-branches that bear alì fruits, a tree that has come to this earth from the spirituaì world of Vaikuntha. Here the word aho ismnused to hint that Srimad-Bhagavatam enables one to attain what is otherwise unattainable The scripture Srimad-Bhagavatam is desdcriubeed here with the wOord rasa because it is sweet with the spirituaì rasas It is called Bhagavatam because it describes the rasas of love for Bhagavan (the Supreme Personality of Godhead) That Srimad- Bhagavatam is filled with the reasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in these words (Srimad- Bhagavatam 1.7.7)

Simply by giving auraì reception to this Vedic literature (Srimad-Bhagavatam), the feeling for loving devotionaì service to Lord Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, sprouts up at once to extinguish the fire of lamentation, illusion and fearfulness."

The word rasa is used in relation to the Supreme Personality of Godhead in these words of Taittiriya Upanisad (2.7.1):

raso vai sah rasam hy evayam labdhvanandi-bhavati.

When one understands the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the reservoir of pleasure (rasa), Krsna, he actually becomes transcendentally blissful."

In Srimad-Bhagavatam 1.1.3 the word rasikah shows that the sages who attained perfection in ancient times as welì as the sages who attained perfection in recent tiomes knet the truth of the rasas The word galitam shows that the fruit here is perfectly ripe and sweet Here it is seen that because it has come from the tree of the scriptures, this fruit is very sweet and delicious Rasam here shows that this fruit has neither skin nor pit It has no defect in any way The words bhagavatam nigamasya here shot that Srimad- Bhagavatam is the best of alì the sacred fruits of the tree of the scriptures This is so because it teaches the highest goaì of life Even though the nectar of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is naturally very excellent, it is made even more excellent in Srimad-Bhagavatam This is shown here by the word suka" Although the fruit of Srimad-Bhagavatam is very wonderfuì because it has fallen from the kalpa-vrksa tree of the scriptures, it is made even more sweet and nectarean because it is touched by ther mouth of Srila Sukadeva Gosvami When it touches Srila Sukadeva Gosvami's mouth, that fruit becoems sweeter When they come from the mouth of a great devotee, descroptions of the Supreme Personality of Godhead become sweeter Hot much more is this true when such descriptions come from the mouth of Srila Sukadeva Gosvami, the king of alì great devotees: By tasting ther nectar of Srimad-Bhagavatam one wilì never become satiated His desire to taste it wilì never become diminished Therefore, even after attaining liberation (alayam), one should drink (pibata) the nectar of Srimad- Bhagavatam That even liberated souls are attracted to Srimad- Bhagavatam is confirmed by Srila Sukadeva Gosvami in the following words (Srimad-Bhagavatam 2.1.9)

O saintly king, I was perfectly situated in transcendence, yet I was stilì attracted by the delineation of the pastimes of the Lord, who is described by enlightened verses."

The sweetness of other things fades in the course of time The sweetness of Srimad-Bhagavatam is not like that It does not fade The reasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead are of two kinds 1 prity-upayukta and 2 priti-parinama These are described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (12.3.1´- 15)

vijnana-vairagya-vivaksaya vibho vaco-vibhutir na tu paramarthyam

O mighty Pariksit, I have related to you the narrations of alì these great kings, who spread their fame throughout the world and then departed My reaì purpose was to teach transcendentaì knowledge and renunciation Stories of kings lend power and opulence to these narrations but do not in themselves constitute the ultimate aspect of knwoledge.

yas tuttama-sloka-gunanuvadah sangiyate 'bhiksnam amangala-ghnah tam eva nityam
srnuyad abhiksnam krsne 'malam bhaktim abhipsamanah

The person who desires pure devotionaì service to Lord Krsna should hear the narrations of Lord Uttamasloka's glorious qualities, the constant chanting of which destoys everything inauspicious The devotee should engage in such listening in regular daily assemblies and should also continue his hearing throughout the day."

After describing the rasas in a generaì way, Srila Sukadeva Gosvami describes thme in more detaiì in the word amrta" Amrta here refers to the nectar of the Lord's pastimes, nectar described in these owrds of Srimad- Bhagavatam (12.13.11)

hari-lila-katha-vrata- mrtanandita-sat-suram

Srimad-Bhagavatam is fulì of nectarean accounts of Lord Krsna's pastimes, which guve ecstasy ot the saintly devotees and demigods."

That narrations of Lord's pastimes are sweet is confirmed by these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (12.4.40)

lila-katha-rasa-nisevanam .

Narrations of lord Krsna's pastimes are sweet like nectar."

In the word sat-suram from Srimad-Bhagavatam 12.13.11, the word sat refers to the atmarama transcendentalists situated in Brahman realization, who are referred to by thet word satam in Srimad-Bhagavatam 10.12.11, and the word suram refers to the devotees who taste only the nectar of devotionaì service ot the Lord In Srimad-Bhagavatam 1.1.³ the word amrta-drava means the sweetest nectar of the Lord's pastimes" The following exp lanation may be given Although the nectar of love (pritimaya-rasa) for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the sweetest of alì nectars (sreyah), various levels of that nectar be certainly be distinguished The taste of the nectar of the rasas, as described in the word pibata is of two kinds, the first of which is the rasas tasted by the Lord's personaì associates who personally participate in the Supreme Lord's pastimes This perception of the rasas is the best, because it is direct and confidentiaì (antaranga) The other perception of the rasas is tasted by alì others It is indirect and not confidentiaì (bahiranga) These two levels of the perception of the nectar of the rasas are both described here by the single word pibata" This nectar is like a river flowing from the mouth of Srila Sukadeva Gosvami That Srimad-Bhagavatam describes the sweetest nectar of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is confirmed by these words (Srimad-Bhagavatam 12.13.15):

Srimad-Bhagavatam is declared to be the essence of alì Vedanta philosophy One who has felt satisfaction from its nectarean mellot wilì never be attracted by any other literature."

In His commentary Srila Sridhara Svami defines the word bhavukah in this way:

168ý `Bhavukah here means `they who are expert at meditating on the nectar rasas'."

This meditation is described in these words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (1.5.19)

smaran mukundanghry-upaguhanam punar vidhatum icchen na rasa-graho janah

A person who has once relished the taste of the lotus feet of the Lord can do nothing but remember that ecstasy again and again."

Srimad-Bhagavatam 1.1.[3] quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by Srila Vedavyasa.

Anuccheda 111

Thus joined with vibhava and its other components, the rasac of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is manifest They who are learned i n the materiaì rasas shown in dramas describe four kinds of characters First is the hero who is primarily served by the rasa He is the first character in the drama Then there is the person who because of being limited, or because of fear or some other impediment, becomes a follower or servant of the hero That person, the follower or servant, is the second kind of character Then there is a person who, an ordinary person among the people in generaì who, because he is unintelligent and needs to accept instructions and orders, becomes a follower or servant of the hero That follower or servant is the third kind of character Can the follower or servant who is the second character not be intelligent: If he is he becomes the fourth kind of character The devotees of the Lord taste the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead In this way the rasas they taste are not materiaì in nature In this way the rasas of love present in the hearts of this hero and His servants and followers are eternal They are perfect and complete In this way it is demonstrated that the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead are limitless and spirituaì in nature They are not like the materiaì rasas described in materiaì poems That is their nature For example, it is seen that Sri Prahlada, the vraja-gopis, and many other devotees were completely unaffected by fear, and Sri Vrtra, Sri Gajendra, Sri Bharata, and other devotees were completely unaffected by the actions of their previous births What more need be said: Sri Sukadeva Gosvami and other devotees were completely unaffected by the bliss of impersonaì Brahman realization In these ways it shoul;d be known that the love they felt for the Supreme Personality of Godhead was certainly spirituaì in nature It was not material Here the alambana (main cause of feeling the rasa of love) is the Supreme Lord's opulences, glories, and virtues, which have no equaì or superior The personaì assaociates of the Lord have spirituaì qualities like the Lord's This truth is proclaimed by the great dundubhi drums that are the Vedas, Puranas, and other scriptures The uddipanas (secondary causes of feeling the rasa of love) are the things in relation to the Lord These secondary causes of rasa are described in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.43)

When the breeze carrying the aroma of tulasi leaves from the toes of the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead entered the nostrils of those sages, they experienced a change both in body and in mind, even though they were attached to the impersonaì Brahman understanding."

The Supreme Lord's handsomeness as a cause of rasa is seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.14)

gopyas tapah kim acaran .

What austerities must the gopis have performedi With their eyes they always drink the nectar of Lord Krsna's form, which is the essence of loveliness and is not to be equaled or surpassed That loveliness is the only abode of beauty, fame, and opulence It is self-perfect, ever fresh and extremely rare.

The causes of rasa are also seen in these words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.29.40)

ka stry anga . .yad go-dvija-druma-mrgah pulakany abibhran

Dear Krsna, what woman in alì the three worlds wouldn't deviate from religious behavior when bewildered by the sweet, drawn-out melody of Your flute: Your beauty makes alì three worlds auspicious Indeed, even the cows, birds, trees and deer manifest the ecstatic symptom of bodily hair standing on end when they see Your beautifuì form."

Lord Krsna's flute-music as a cause of rasa is seen in these words of Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.1´-15) vividha-gopa-caranesu vidagdhah .

.savanasas tad upadharya suresah sakra-sarva-paramesthi-purogah kavaya anata-kandhara-cittah kasmalam yayur aniscita-tattvah

O pious mother Yasoda, your son, who is expert in alì the arts of herding cows, has invented many net styles of flute- playing When He takes His flute to His bimba-red lips and sends forth the tones of the harmonic scale in variegated melodies, Brahma, Siva, Indra and other chief demigods become confused upon hearing the sound Although they are the most learned authorities, they cannot ascertain the essence of that music, and thus they bot down their heads and hearts."

Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.20.31)

Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.19)

Srimad-Bhagavatam (10.90.26)

sruta-matro 'pi yah strinam prasahyakarsate manah uru-gayoru-gito va pasyantinam ca kim punah

The Lord, whom countless songs glorify in countless ways, forcibly attracts the minds of alì women who simply hear about Him What to speak, then, of those women who see Him directly?

Srila Jiva Gosvami's

Sri Priti-sandarbha

His opulence. Still, their awareness of His sweetness was more important. This is confirmed by srila sridhara Svami, who in His commentary on srimad-Bhagavatam (10.45.1) explains that althouh Devaki and Vasudeva were certainly aware of the Lord's opulence, their love for Him as their son was a more rare and valuable attainment for them. This is also true for the gopas, as srimad-Bhagavatam 10.43.17 explains in the words

"sri-gopanam svajanah" (the cowherd men saw Lord Krsna as their relative). The cowherd people were not like Kamsa and the other enemies of the Lord. The cowherd people were overcome with love for Lord Krsna. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.15):

krsna-darsana-lalasah

"All the inhabitants of Vrndavana, including the children, women and elderly persons, thought of Krsna just as a cow thinks of her helpless young calf, and thus these poor, suffering people rushed out of the village, intent upon finding Him."

Maharaja Nanda was situated in the most exalted eternal parental love for the Lord. The Lord personally became his son. What more need be said? srimad-Bhagavatam 10.43.17 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 100

Because they were aware of the Supreme Lord's sweetness, the cowherd people became the the most wise philosophers (parama- jani). The demigod Brahma, who had personally seen numberless four-armed forms of the Lord, specifically took shelter of the form of Lord Krsna. Brahma said in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.14.1):

naumidya te 'bhra-vapuse tadid-ambaraya gujavatamsa-paripiccha-lasan-mukhaya vanya-sraje kavala-vetra-visana-venu- laksma-sriye mrdu-pade pasupangajaya

"My dear Lord, You are the only worshipful Supreme Lord, Personality of Godhead. Therefore I am offering my humble obeisances and prayers just to please You. Your bodily features are of the color of clouds filled with water. You are glittering with a silver electric aura emanating from Your yellow garments. "Let me offer my respectful repeated obeisances unto the son of Maharaja Nanda who is standing before me with conchshell, earrings, and peacock feather on His head. His face is beautiful. He is wearing a helmet, garlanded with forest flowers, and He stands with a morsel of food in His hand. He is decorated with cane and bugle, and He carries a buffalo horn and flute. He stands before me with small lotus feet."

The spiritual love the cowherd people feel for Lord Krsna is the crest jewel of all kinds of love. When opposing things suddenly appear, that love does not waver. On the contrary, that love eclipses all opposition. When obstacles arise, that love increases. In this way spiritual love is like the love hedonists feel for material sense objects. That love the hedonists feel for material senses objects, love that the scriptures and direct perception both declare to be be full of faults, is indeed very passionate and strong. In that sense spiritual love is similar to that material love. This is seen in the following prayer spoken by Prahlada Maharaja to Lord Nrsimha in Visnu Purana (1.20.19):

ya pritir avivekanam visayesv anapayini tvam anusmaratah sa me hrdayan napasrpatu

"Fools fall in love with material sense objects. As they always love senses obejcts, may I always love You. I always meditate on You. I pray that You will never leave my heart."

The intensity of spiritual love is also seen in these words spoken by Nanda and Yasoda to Lord Balarama in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.65.3):

ciram nah pahi dasarha sanujo jagad-isvarah ity aropyankam alingya netraih sisicatur jalaih

" `O descendant of Dasarha, O Lord of the universe, may You and Your younger brother Krsna ever protect us.' Saying this, they raised sri Balarama onto their laps, embraced Him, and moistened Him with tears from their eyes."

Even though it was very clear the Lord Balarama was Vasudeva's son, a ksatriya, and the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himseelf, Nanda and Yasoda still thought of Him as their own son. This is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.65.1-2):

balabhadrah kusu-srestha bhagavan ratham asthitah suhrd-didrksur utkanthah prayayau nanda-gokulam

"O best of the Kurus, once Lord Balarama, eager to visit His well-wishing friends, mounted His chariot and traveled to Nanda Gokula.

parisvaktas cirotkanthair gopair gopibhir eva ca ramo 'bhivadya pitarav asirbhir abhinanditah

"Having long suffered the anxiety of separation, the cowherd men and their wives ambraced Lord Balarama. The Lord then offered respects to His parents, and they joyfully greeted Him with prayers."

When spiritual love (priti) becomes very prominent, it eclispses everything else. This occurs even amongst the devotees who are naturally attracted to the Lord in His feature of power and opulence. An example of this is seen in the following description of sri Devahuti in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.33.21):

vanam pravrajite patyav apatya-virahatura jata-tattvapy abhun naste vatse gaur iva vatsala

"Devahuti's husband had already left home and accepted the renounced order of life, and then her only son, Kapila, left home. Although she knew all the truths of life and death, and although her heart was cleansed of all dirt, she was very aggrieved at the loss of her son, just as a cow is affected when her calf dies."

A similar situation, where spiritual love overcomes awareness of the Lor'd power and opulence, is seen in these words spoken by sri Devaki-devi in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.3.29):

samuvije bhavad-dhetoh kamsad aham adhira-dhih

"O Madhusudana, because of Your appearance, I am becoming more and more anxious in fear of Kamsa."

The same sentiment is seen in these words describing Maharaja Yudhisthira in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.10.32):

ajata-satruh prtanam gopithaya madhu-dvisah parebhyah sankitah snehat prayunkta catur-anginim

"Maharaja Yudhisthira, although no one's enemy, engaged four divisions of defense [horse, elephant, chariot and army] to accompany Lord Krsna, the enemy of the asuras [demons]. The Maharaja did this because of the enemy, and also out of affection for the Lord."

This same senitment of spieritual love eclipsing awareness of the Lord's power and opulence is again seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.10.33):

atha duragatan saurih kauravan virahaturan sannivartya drdham snigdhan prayat sva-nagarim priyaih

"Out of profound affection for Lord Krsna, the Pandavas, who were of the Kuru dynasty, accompanied Him a considerable distance to see Him off. They were overwhelmed with the thought of future separation. The Lord, however, persuaded them to return home, and He proceeded towards Dvaraka with His dear companions."

How spiritual love overwhelmed even Lord Balarama's awareness of Lord Krsna's power and opulence is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.53.20-21):

balena mahata sardham bhratr-sneha-pariplutah tvaritah kundinam pragad gajasva - ratha-pattibhih

"When Lord Balarama heard about these preparations of the inimical kings and how Lord Krsna had set off alone to steal the bride, He feared that a fight would ensue. Immersed in affection for His brother, He hurried to Kundina with a mighty army consisting of infantry and soldiers riding on elephants, horses, and chariots."

Here the word "bhagavan" means "all- knowing". Another example of devotees being overwhelmed by love for Lord Krsna is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.11.49):

krsnam maha-baka-grastam drstva ramadayo 'rbhakah. . .

"When Balarama and the other boys saw that Krsna had been devoured by the gigantic duck, they became almost unconscious, like senses without life."

The bliss the cowherd people attain by perceiving Lord Krsna's sweetness far surpasses the bliss that comes from perceiving Brahman or perceiving the opulence and power of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Seeing the good fortune attained by the cowherd people, srila sukadeva Gosvami became filled with wonder. He said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.11):

ittham satam brahma-sukhanubhutya. . .

"In this way, all the cowherd boys used to play with Krsna, who is the source of the Brahman effulgence for j anis desiring to merge into that effulgence, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead for devotees who have accepted eternal servitorship, and who for ordinary persons is but another ordinary child. The cowherd boys, having accumulated the results of pious activities for many lives, were able to associate in this way with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. How can one explain their great fortune?"

He also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.20):

nemam virico na bhavah. . .

"Neither Lord Brahma nor lord siva, nor even the goddess of fortune, who is always the better half of the Supreme Lord, can obtain from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the deliverer from this material world, such mercy as was received by Mother Yasoda."

He also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.21):

nayam sukhapah. . .

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krsna, the son of mother Yasoda, is accessible to devotees engaged in spontaneous loving service, but He is not as easily accessible to mental speculators, to those striving for self-realization by severe austerities and penances, or to those who consider the body the same as the self."

He also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.60):

nayam sriyo 'nga. . .

"When Lord sri Krsna was danciong with the gopis in the rasa-lila, the gopis were embraced by the arms of the Lord. This transcendental favor was never bestowed upon the goddess of fortune or other consorts in the spiritual world. Indeed, never was such a thing even imagined by the most beautiful girls in the heavenly planets, whose bodily luster and aroma resemble the lotus flower. Ansd what to speak of worldly women who are very beautiful according to material estimation?"

Sometimes the manifestation of the Lord's opulence increases the perception of His sweetness. This occurs when the devotee has the idea "How can this by our son (or other relation) in this wonderful situation?" An example of such a situation is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.28.18):

nandadayas tu tam drstva paramananda-nivrtah krsnam ca tatra cchandobhih stuyamanam su-vismitah

"Nanda Maharaja and the other cowherd men felt the greatest happiness when they saw that transcendental abode. They were especially amazed to see Krsna Himself there, surrounded by the personified Vedas, who were offering Him prayers."

Because of its great purity, the love the residents of sri Gokula feel is very glorious. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.35):

esam ghosa-nivasinam uta bhavan. . .

"My Lord, sometimes I am puzzled as to how Your Lordship will be able to repay, in gratitude, the devotional service of these residents of Vrndavana. Although I know that You are the supreme source of all benediction, I am puzzled to know how You will be able to repay all the service that You are receiving from these residents of Vrndavana. I think of how You are so kind, so magnanimous, that even Putana, who came to cheat You by dressing herself as a very affectionate mother, was awarded liberation and the actual post of a mother. And other demons belonging to the same family, such as Aghasura and Bakasura, were also favored with liberation. Under the circumstances, I am puzzled. These residents of Vrndavana have given You everything: Their bodies, their minds, their love, their homes. Everything is being utilized for Your purpose. So how will You be able to repay their debt? You have already given Yourself to Putana! I surmise that You shall ever ever remain a debtor to the residents of Vrndavana, being unable to repay their loving service.

It is seen that even the cows love Lord Krsna very deeply. When Lord Krsna dove into the Kaliya lake, the cows were overwhelmed. This is described in the following words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.16.11):

gavo vrsa vatsataryah krandamanah su-duhkhitah krsne nyasteksana bhita rudantya iva tasthire

"The cows, bulls and female calves, in great distress, called out piteously to Krsna. Fixing their eyes on Him, they stood still in fear, as if ready to cry but too shocked to shed tears."

When Lord Krsna finally emerged from the Kaliya lake, the cows were overjoyed. This is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.17.16):

gavo vrsa vatsataryo lebhire paramam mudam

"Lord Balarama embraced His infallible brother and laughed, knowing well the extent of His potency. Out of great feelings of love, He lifted Him up on His lap and repeatedly looked at Him. The cows, bulls and young female calves also achieved the highest pleasure."

Even the unmoving living beings, like the trees and plants, became filled with joy. This is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.17.15):

krsnam sametya labdheha asan suska naga api

"Having regained their vital functions, Yasoda, Rohini, Nanda and all the other cowherd women and men went up to Krsna. O descendant of Kuru, even the dried-up trees came back to life."

Even the plants of Gokula were filled with love for Lord Krsna. For this reason the demigod Brahma prayed in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.34):

tad bhuri-bhagyam iha janma kim apy atavyam yad gokule 'pi
katamanghri-rajo-'bhisekam

"I am most humbly praying at Your lotus feet for You to please give me any sort of birth within this Vrndavana forest so that I may be able to be favored by the dust of the feet of some of the devotees of Vrndavana. Even if I am given the chance to grow just as the humble grass in this land, that will be a glorious birth for me. But if I am not so fortunate to take birth within the forest of Vrndavana, I beg to be allowed to take birth outside the immediate area of Vrndavana so that when the devotees go out they will walk over me. Even that would be a great fortune for me. I am just aspiring for a birth in which I will be smeared by the dust of Your devotees' feet. I can see that everyone here is simply full of Krsna consciousness. They do not know anything but Mukunda. All the Vedas are indeed searching after the lotus feet of Krsna.

The devotees in Gokula aware of the Lord's sweetness are of two kinds: 1. the followers (anugata) of the Lord, and 2. the friends and kinsmen (bandhava) of the Lord. Of these two kinds of dear devotees of the Lord, the Lord's friends and kinsmen are more exalted, for they are more firmly convinced that the Lord is mine". Their exalted position is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.32):

aho bhagyam aho bhagyam. . .

"How greatly fortunate are Nanda Maharaja, the cowherd men, and all the other inhabitants of Vrajabhumi! There is no limit to their good fortune because the Absolute Truth, the source of transcendental bliss, the eternal Supreme Brahman, has become their friend."

It is said that even the least important of the residents of Gokula consider Lord Krsna their friend. In this way their friendship with Lord Krsna is glorified. The exalted position of Lord Krsna's friends (sakha) is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.11):

ittham satam brahma-sukhanubhutya dasyam gatanam para-daivatena mayasritanam nara-darakena sakam vijahruh krta-punya-punjah

"In this way, all the cowherd boys used to play with Krsna, who is the source of the Brahman effulgence for j anis desiring to merge into that effulgence, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead for devotees who have accepted eternal servitorship, and who for ordinary persons is but another ordinary child. The cowherd boys, having accumulated the results of pious activities for many lives, were able to associate in this way with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. How can one explain their great fortune?"

In this verse the word "satam" means "the jnanis, before whom the Lord appears as the impersonal Brahman". The devotees of the Lord are extremely rare. The words dasyam gatanam" mean "they who have attained service to the Lord." These persons are deascriobed in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.14.5):

"O great sage, among many millions who are liberated and perfect in knowledge of liberation, one may be a devotee of Lord Narayana, or Krsna. Such devotees, who are fully peaceful, are extremely rare."

Thus the devotees who worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead are extremely rare. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.12.11 the word "mayasritanam" means "persons who have neither knowledge of, devotion to, nor friendship for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and who thus do nto understand Lord Krsna's spiritual form, do not understand that He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and do not love Him, and who are thus not qualified to directly see the Supreme Personality of Godhead standing before them. These persons think Lord Krsna is an ordinary human boy. Lord Krsna describes these persons in the following words of Bhagavad-gita (9.11):

avajananti mam mudha manusim tanum asritam

"Fools deride Me when I descend in the human form. They do nto know My transcendental nature and My supreme dominion over all that be."

Lord Krsna alsop says in Bhagavad-gita (7.25):

naham prakasah sarvasya yogamaya-samavrtah

"I am never manifest to the foolish and unintelligent. For them I am covered by My creative potency (yogamaya), and so the deluded world knows Me not, who am unborn and infallible."

In these three quotes it is seen that the Supreme Lord very rarely makes Himself visible in this world. Still, even though He very rarely appears in this worled, He personally enjoys pastimes (vijahruh) with His dear friends who are filled with love for Him. This truth fills srila sukadeva Gosvami with wonder. Or, these words may also be interpreted to mean: "He very mercifully appears before even the ordinary persons who have taken shelter of may.a (mayasritanam) and before them He manifests His all-glorious spiritual form which seems to be the form of a human being, and which is very rarely visible in this world." Still, ordinary persons cannot become the friend or kinsman of the Lord in His rare, more rare, or most rare spiritual forms. With these friends the Supreme Lord enjoys pastimes (vijahruh). Here the word "krta-punya- pujah" means "they are the best among persons weho have performed many pious deeds to please the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Thweir friendship with the lord is not like the friendship of ordinary persons. Their friendship for the Lord is glorious. How can the good fortune of these loving friends of the Lord be described? Even the ordinary people of Vraja have great good fortune. Even the persons who have only seen Lord Krsna have great good fortune. The good fortune they have attained is attainable by the great sages. This truth is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.12):

"Yogis may undergo severe austerities and penances for many births by practicing yama, niyama, asana and pranayama, none of which are easily performed. Yet in due course of time, when these yogis attain the perfection of controlling the mind, they will still be unable to taste even a particle of dust from the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. What then can we describe about the great fortune of the inhabitants of Vrajabhumi, Vrndavana, with whom the Supreme Personality of Godhead personally lived and who saw the Lord face to face?"

These words affirm the truth that the friends of Lord Krsna were very fortunate. This truth was also confirmed by Akrura in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.38.15):

athavarudhah. . . . . .namasya abhyam ca sakhin vanaukasah

"Then I will at once alight from my chariot and bow down to the lotus feet of Krsna and Balarama, the Supreme Personalities of Godhead. Theirs are the same feet that great mystic yogis striving for self-realization bear within their minds. I will also offer my obeisances to the Lords' cowherd boyfriends and to all the other residents of Vrndavana."

When Lord Brahma kidnappeed Lord Krsna's friends and calves, Lord Krsna created new friends and calves. Brahma then returned the original friends and calves. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.12.11 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 101

Lord Krsna parents are even more fortunate than His friends. They are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.51):

tato bhaktir bhagavati putri-bhute janardane dam-patyor nitaram asid gopa-gopisu bharata

"Thereafter, O Maharaja Pariksit, best of the Bharatas, when the Supreme Personality of Godhead became the son of Nanda Maharaja and Yasoda, they maintained continuous, unswerving devotional love in parental affection. And in their association, all the other inhabitants of Vrndavana, the gopas and gopis, developed the culture of Krsna-bhakti."

In this verse the word "bhaktih" means love", nitaram" means "up to the levels of sneha and raga", "gopah" means "all the gopas", and gopyah" means "the gopis who were not Lord Krsna's beloveds". This statement will be explained later in this book. Ofg all thes edevotees, the gopis of Vraja, who have the most glorious prema, pranaya, mana, and raga love for the Lord, and who have the great good fortune of having anuraga and maha-bhava love for the Lord, and whose pure love brings Lord Krsna under their control, are very glorious and fortunate. Their glory and good fortune have no equal or better. The gopis are thus very exalted. Even Uddhava asked permission from them. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.64):

atha gopir anujapya yasodam nandam eva ca gopan amantrya dasarho yasyann aruruhe ratham

"Uddhava, the descendent of Dasarha, then took permission from the gopis and from Mother Yasoda and Nanda Maharaja. He bade farewell to all the cowherd men and, about to depart, mounted his chariot."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 102

The gopis are the most exalted of all the residents of Gokula. This truth is seen in the following words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.87.57-58):

drstvaivam-adi gopinam krsnavesatma-viklavam uddhavah parama-pritas ta namasyann idam jagau

"Thus seeing how the gopis were always disturbed because of their total absorption in Krsna, Uddhava was supremely pleased. Desiring to offer themn all respect, he sang as follows.

etah param tanu-bhrto bhuvi gopa-vadhvo govinda eva nikhilatmani rudha-bhavah vachanti yad bhava-bhiyo munayo vayam ca kim brahma-janmabhir ananta-katha-rasasya

"Among all persons on earth, these cowherd women alone have actually perfected their embodied lives, for they have achieved the perfection of unalloyed love for Lord Govinda. Their pure love is hankered after by those who fear material existence, by great sages, and by ourselves as well. For one who has tasted the narrations of the infinite Lord, what is the use of taking birth as a high-class brahmana, or even as Lord Barhma himself?"

In the second of these towo verses the word "param" means "only", "etas tanu-bhrtah" means whose birth in this world has borne its fruit", akhilatmani" means "in the Supreme Personality of Godhead who, although rarely seen in this world, is present as the Supersoul in all living beings", "govinde" means the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is directly manifest in this world as the prince of Gokula", "evam" means with sweetness like this", and "rudha-bhavah" means "whose ecstatic maha-bhava love is manifest". The words "vachanti yad bhava-bhiyo munayah" mean If somehow the description of the sweetness of ecstatic love reaching up to the level of maha-bhava enters their ears, then the sages who ordinary yearn for liberation will renounce that desire and, understanding its glories, will yearn to attain ecstatic love." The word "vayam" means "even great devotees like myself yearn to attain that love. That means we have not yet attained it. We are not qualified to feel that very sweet ecstatic love." That is the meaning. Then the speaker of this verse criticizes persons who do not yeran to attain that ecstatic love. He says: "kim brahma-janmabhir ananta- katha-rasasya", which means "What is the use of taking birth as the demigod Brahma numberless times if we cannto taste the nectar of the hearing the topics of Lord Krsna, whose pastimes have no end?" This rhetorical question implies the answer:"there is no use in taking birth as such a Lord Brahma."

Anucchedas 103 and 104

Here someone may protest: "Is it not true that the sages who yearn after liberation and who have already attained liberation are glorified in all the scriptures? How can the devotees be superior to them? Why would the sages desire anything but liberation?" To answer this protest, Uddhava speaks these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.59):

kvemah striyo vana-carir vyabhicara-dustah krsne kva caisa paramatmani rudha-bhavah nanv isvaro 'nubhajato 'viduso 'pi saksac chreyas tanoty agada-raja ivopayuktah

"How amazing it is that these simple women who wander about the forest, seemingly spoiled by improper behavior, have achieved the perfection of unalloyed love for Krsna, teh Superme Soul! Still, it is true that the Supreme Lord Himself awards His blessings even to an ignorant worshiper, just as the best medicine works even when taken by a person ignorant of its ingredients."

In these verses, from beginning to end, sriman Uddhava's great devotion to the Lord is clearly seen. Here someone may protest that the gopis' relationship with Lord Krsna was adulterous and therefore immoral. This protest is answered by these words spoken at the conclusion of the description of the rasa dance (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.35):

gopinam tat-patinam ca sarvesam eva dehinam yo 'ntas carati so 'dhyaksah kridaneneha deha-bhak

"He who lives as the overseeing witness within the gopis and their husbands, and indeed within all embodied living beings, assumes forms in this world to enjoy transcendental pastimes."

The idea of wicked-hearted men that the gopis acted immorally in their relationship with Lord Krsna is refuted by this verse, by the word "paramatmani" (the Supreme Personality of Godhead) in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.59, and also by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.61):

arya-patham ca hitva. . .

"The gopis of Vrndavana have given up the association of their husbands, sons, and other family members, who are very difficult to give up, andf they have forsaken the path of chastity to take shelter of tyhe lotus feet of Mukunda, Krsna, which one should search for by Vedic knowledge. Oh, let me be fortunate enough to be one of the bushes, creepers, or herbs in Vrndavana, because the gopis trample them and bless them with the dust of their feet."

Now is not the right time to refute the mistaken idea that the gopis acted immorally. Later in this book we will proove that the gopis acted rightly. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.58 and 59 the words "kvemah striyo vana-carih" mean "what is the status of the women who enjoyed pastimes in Vrndavana forest and took shelter of Lord Krsna?" In these verse the words "kva vyabhicara-dustah bhava-bhiyo vayam" mean and what is the status of us, sages who have not attained exalted spiritual love and who are not attached to Lord Krsna, are afraid of material existence?" The meaning here is: The difference bewteen us and the gopis is very great." Here the question may be asked: "Why does such a great difference exist?" The answer is given here in the words esa paramatmani rudha-bhavah", which mean "In the gopis is seen great ecstatic love (maha-bhava) for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is worshiped by everyone and who is the abode of all desires. That same ecstatic love is not seen in us." If this is so, then the following question may be asked: If you do not directly see Lord Krsna's glorious qualities, qualities that made the gopis fall in love with Him, then how will you attain that ecstatic love even if you yearn to attain it? This quesyion is answered in this verse in the passage beginning with the word "nanu" (the Supreme Lord Himself awards His blessings even to an ignorant worshiper, just as the best medicine works even when taken by a person ignorant of its ingredients.) Here the word "avidusah" means the Lord Hismelf makes this love spontaneously manifest within me." That is the example given here. Uddhava declares in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.27):

"You have rightfully claimed the privilege of unalloyed love for the transcendental Lord, O most glorious gopis. Indeed, by exhibiting your love for Krsna in separation from Him, you have shown me great mercy7"

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.59 may also be interpreted in a different way, in a way that sternly rebukes ladies who, although very faithful to their husbands, are averse to the rasas of devotional service. In the first interpretation of this verse the words "kvemah striah" referred to the gopis, who enjoy pastimes in Vrndavana forest. The second interpretation of this verse is based on the asumption that an "a" was originally present before the word "vana-carih" and then elided by sandhi. Thus the word was originally "avana- carih", which would mean "women who are not like the gopis". Such materialistic women are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.18.19):

striyo vratais tva. . .

"My dear Lord, You are certainly the fully independent master of all the senses. Therefore all women who worship You by strictly observing vows because they wish to acquire a husband to satisfy their senses are surely under illusion. They do not know that such a husband cannot actually give protection to them or their children. Nor can he protect their wealth or duration of life, for he himself is dependent on time, fruitive results and the modes of nature, which are all subordinate to You."

These words were spoken by srimati Laksmi- - devi in the midst of srimad-Bhagavatam's description of Kutmala-varsa. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.59 the words "imah striyo vyabhicara-dustah krsne kva paramatmani" may then be interpreted to mean "What is the status of women who are averse to Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead?" The meaning then would be: "There is a great difference between such women and the gopis." Then the word rudha-bhavah" may be interpreted to mean: "Not even the smallest fragment of the exalted spiritual love that is the crest jewel of all goals of life is not seen in such women". That exalted spiritual love is present only in the devotees, who are filled with love for the Lord. Only the devotees love the Lord. This is confirmed by the passage beginning with the word "nanu" (Still, it is true that the Supreme Lord Himself awards His blessings even to an ignorant worshiper, just as the best medicine works even when taken by a person ignorant of its ingredients.) What more may bhe said? The next verse of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.47.60) declares:

nayam sriyo 'nga u nitanta-rateh prasadah svar-yositam nalina-gandha-rucam kuto 'nyah rasotasave 'sya bhuja-danda-grhita-kantha- labdhasisam ya udagad vraja-sundarinam

"When Lord sri Krsna was danciong with the gopis in the rasa-lila, the gopis were embraced by the arms of the Lord. This transcendental favor was never bestowed upon the goddess of fortune or other consorts in the spiritual world. Indeed, never was such a thing even imagined by the most beautiful girls in the heavenly planets, whose bodily luster and aroma resemble the lotus flower. Ansd what to speak of worldly women who are very beautiful according to material estimation?"

In this verse the word "ange" means "on the graceful form of the master of Vaikuntha", "sriyah" means "of the Lord's dearmost beloved", "nitanta- rateh" means "of the love a girl feels for hewr beloved", "prasadah" means "happiness, and nayam" means "is not". The verse then continued: "svar-yositam nalina-gandha-rucam", which means: "If even the goddess of fortune cannot attain that happiness, then the women of Svarghaloka, whose limbs are like golden lotus flowers, and who do not even reside in Vaikuntha certainly cannot attain it." Then the words "kuto 'nyah" mean "Other woemen, who are far away from them certainly cannot attain it." That is the meaning. Then one may ask: Are there any women who care not bereft of this happiness? The answer is given in this verse in the passage beginning with the word "rasa" (When Lord sri Krsna was danciong with the gopis in the rasa-lila, the gopis were embraced by the arms of the Lord.) Here the word "asya" means of the form of Lord Krsna, the prince of Vraja". That Goddess Laksmi yearns to attain the touch of Lord Krsna is also confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.36):

"O Lord, we do not know how the serpent Kaliya has attained this great opportunity of being touched by the dust of Your lotus feet. For this end, the goddess of fortune performed austerities for centuries, giving up all other desires and taking austere vows."

Goddess Laksmi did not only yearn to attain the love the gopis felt in separation from Lord Krsna, she also yearned to attain the love they felt when they directlyenjoyed pastimes with Him. What persons like myself say to describe that love? In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.60 the words "rasotasave 'sya bhuja-danda-grhita-kantha-labdhasisam ya udagad" mean "When, in the rasa dance, Lord Krsna embraced the gopis' necks, the gopis felt all their desires were fulfilled". This means the desire the gopis had long kept hidden in their hearts was now openly attained. That Goddess Laksmi yearned to attain the gopis' good fortune is also confirmed by theese words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.8):

"You have embraced the young cowherd women between Your two arms--a favor hankered after by the goddess of fortune herself."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.60 the word "vraja- sundarinam (of the beautiful girls of Vraja) shows that the gopis are the most beautiful of all girls". That the devotees attain all exalted qualities is confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.18.12):

yasyasti bhaktir bhagavaty akicana. . .

"All the demigods and their exalted qualities, such as religion, knowledge and renunciation, become manifest in the body of one who has developed unalloyed devotion for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva."

Spiritual love where the devotee loves the Lord as a beloved is the crest jewel of all kinds of spiritual love. Here two levels of that love, as manifested by Goddess Laksmi and by the gopis, are revealed. That this kind of spiritual love for the Lord is the most exalted is not refuted by the following words spoken by the Lord to Uddhava in srimad-Bhagavatam (11.14.15):

na ca sankarsano na srih

"My dear Uddhava, neither Lord Brahma, Lord siva, Lord Sankarsana, teh goddess of fortune, nor indeed My own self are as dear to MKe as you are."

These words are only intended to praise devotional service and the devotees in a general way. They do not mean that Uddhava is in a position superior to Goddess Laksmi and the other devotees who consider the Lord their beloved. Because the gopis love Lord Krsna, the original form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, their position is most exalted.

Anuccheda 105

Uddhava thinks: "For me to aspire to become like the gopis is like a dwarf yearning to catch the moon. Therefore my only prayer is this: (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.61):

asam aho carana-renu-jusam aham syam vrndavane kim api gulma-latausadhinam ya dustyajam sva-janam arya-patham ca hitva bhejur mukunda-padavim srutibhir vimrgyam

"The gopis of Vrndavana have given up the association of their husbands, sons, and other family members, who are very difficult to give up, and they have forsaken the path of chastity to take shelter of tyhe lotus feet of Mukunda, Krsna, which one should search for by Vedic knowledge. Oh, let me be fortunate enough to be one of the bushes, creepers, or herbs in Vrndavana, because the gopis trample them and bless them with the dust of their feet."

In this verse Uddhava says: "It is not possible for me to attain even a slight touch of the effulgent glory of the gopis' great love for Lord Krsna. Therefore my desire will be to tak another, a different birth in this world. If in that birth I still cannot directly attain the touch of the gopis' feet, for what shall I pray? I will pray: Let me take birth (syam) even among the undesireable speciies of life, among the bushes, creepers, or herbs (kim api gulma-latausadhinam), for then I will have the4 good fortune of attaining the touch of the dust of the gopis' feet (asam carana-renu)." Here the word aho" (Oh!) shows that Uddhava's heart is agitated with this desire. Here the question may be asked: "What is the nature of these gopis?" The answer is given: "Impelled by passionate love, they have forsaken the path of chastity and rejected the moral codes taught by the Vedas and ordinary social custon" (ya dustyajam sva-janam arya-patham ca hitva). They follow the blissful path of love for Lord Krsna, a path all the sruti-sastras have concluded is the crest jewel of all goals of life (bhejur mukunda-padavim srutibhir vimrgyam)." The conclusion, then, of this verse is: "Let us also reject the path of conventional religion (arya-patham) and follow the footsteps of the gopis."

Anuccheda 106

Goddess Laksmi and others find the path of directly enjoying blissful pastimes with Lord Krsna is very difficult to attain. This is revealed in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.62):

ya vai sritarcitam ajadibhir apta-kamair yogesvarair api sadatmani rasa-gosthyam krsnasya tad bhagavatah caranaravindam nyastam stanesu vijahuh parirabhya tapam

"The goddess of fortune herself, along with Lord Brahma and all the other demigods, who are masters of yogic perfection, can worship the lotus feet of Krsna only within her mind. But during the rasa dance Lord Krsna placed His feet upon these gopis' breasts, and by embracing those feet the gopis gave up all distress."

This verse means: "In the assembly of the rasa- dance (rasa-gosthyam) embracing (parirabhya) the indescribably sweet lotus feet (padaravindam) of Lord Krsna (sri-krsnasya), the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavatah), who manifests all opulences, of which sweetness is the best, the gopis became free (jahuh) of the great anxiety they felt from not being able to associate with Lord Krsna directly. srila sukadeva Gosvami and other sages expert in the yoga of devotional service (yogesvaraih) worship in their hearts (atmani) the lotus feet of Lord Krsna."

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.36):

yad-vachaya srir lalanacarat tapah

"O Lord, we do not know how the serpent Kaliya has attained this great opportunity of being touched by the dust of Your lotus feet. For this end, the goddess of fortune performed austerities for centuries, giving up all other desires and taking austere vows."

In these words it is seen that even Goddess Laksmi has to worship Lord Krsna opnly within her mind. This she always did (sad.a) from beginningless time. She was never able to approach Lord Krsna directly. That truth is confirmed by the sruti-sastras and other scriptures.

Humbled by seeing the gopis' glorious status, and feeling himself very unqualified, Uddhava offers respectful obeisances to the dust of the gopis' feet. He says in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.63):

vande nanda-vraja-strinam pada-renum abhiksnasah yasam hari-kathodgitam punati bhuvana-trayam

"I repeatedly offer my respects to the dust from the feet of the women of Nanda Maharaja's cowherd village. When these gopis loudly chant the glories of sri Krsna, the vibration purifies the three worlds."

In this verse Uddhava says: "I offer my respectful obeisances (vande) to the dust of the gopis' feet (pada- renum)." Then in the second part of the verse he describes the gopis. Uddhava's meaning here is: "The good fortune we have attained today is very wonderful." Lord Krsna Himself describes the glories of His devotees in these words of Padma Purana, Karttika-mahatmya:

ete hi yadavah sarve mad-gana eva bhavini sarvada mat-priya devi mat-tulya-guna-salinah

"O glorious goddess, all the Yadavas are always very dear to Me. They have virtues like My own."

The Yadavas, who are very dear to Lord Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is confirmed by these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.90.46):

sayyasanatanalapa. . .

"The Vrsnis were so absorbed in Krsna consciousness that they forgot their own bodies while sleeping, sitting, walking, conversing, playing, bathing, and so on."

Devotees whose relationship is with other forms of the Lord, forms other than the form of Lord Krsna, are not as glorious as the Yadavas. That amongst the Yadavas and other devotees Uddhava is very glorious is confirmed by these words spoken by Lord Krsna Himself in srimad-Bhagavatam (11.16.29):

tvam tu bhagavatesv aham

"O Uddhava, amongst the devotees you are my representative."

Lord Krsna also says in srimad-Bhagavatam (11.11.49):

tvam me bhrtyah suhrt sakha

"O Uddhava, you are My friend, servant, and well- wisher."

Lord Krsna also says in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.4.31):

noddhavo 'nv api man-nyunah

"Udsdhava is not inferior to Me in any way."

Lord Krsna also says in srimad-Bhagavatam (11.14.15):

na ca sankarsano na srir naivatma ca yatha bhavan

"My dear Uddhava, neither Lord Brahma, Lord siva, Lord Sankarsana, the goddess of fortune, nor indeed My own self are as dear to Me as you."

In these and many other statements Lord Krsna affirms that Uddhava is exalted amongst the devotees. Still, Uddhava is very humble when he speaks about the gopis. He is not humble in the same way about the Lord's queens in Dvaraka. The queens' glory compares to the gopis' glory in the same way the eye of a person blind from birth compares to the glory of the full moon.

Anuccheda 108

That sri Radha is more glorious than the 16,000 queens of Lord Krsna, the king of the Yadus, is confirmed by the queens themselves, who say in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.83.41-43):

na vayam sadhvi samrajyam svarajyam bhaujyam apy uta vairajyam paramesthyam ca anantyam va hareh padam

kamayamaha etasya srimat-pada-rajah sriyah kuca-kunkuma-gandhadhyam murdhna vodhum gada-bhrtah

"O saintly lady, we do not desire dominion over the earth, the sovereignty of the King of heaven, unlimited facility for enjoyment, mystic power, the position of Lord Brahma, immortality, or even attainment of the kingdom of God. We simply desire to carry on our heads the glorious dust of Lord Krsna's feet, enriched by the freagrance of kunkuma from His consort's bosom.

vraja-striyo yad vachanti pulindyas trna-virudhah gavas carayato gopah pada-sparsam mahatmanah

"We desire the same contact with the Supreme Lord's feet that the young women of Vraja, the cowherd boys, and even the aborigine Pulinda women desire - the touch of the dust He leaves on the plants and grass as He tends His cows."

This verse means: "O saintly lady, we do not desire dominion over the earth, or any other material benefit." Here the word "samrajyam" means "a kingdom on the earth", "svarajyam" means "the kingdom of Indra", bhojyam" means "the pleasures available in these two kingdoms", "vairajyam" means "mystic powers", "and "paramesthyam" means

"the kingdom of Lord Brahma". "Anantyam" here means "the limitless happiness one attains by realizing the Supreme Personality of Godhead". This limitless happiness is described in the Taittiriya Upanisad (2.8.2-9), where the different levels of human happiness, each level of happiness a hundred times greater than the one below is described. The highest of these levels of happiness is found in realizing the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In Taittiriya Upanisad (2.8.9) that limitless happiness is described. That is the meaning here. What more may be said? The queens say: "We do not desire (na kamayamahe) to stay near Lord Hari (sri-hareh padam)." Someone may ask: "Then what do you desire to attain?" To this question the queens answer: "We desire to carry (vodhum) on our heads (murdhna) the dust of the glorious feet (srimat-pada-rajah) of our master, all-knowing Lord Krsna (gada-bhrtah). Fuerther, we desire to attain the great treasure present in that dust, the treasure that is the fragrance of kunkuma from the goddess of fortune's breast (sriyah kuca- kunkuma-gandhadhyam)." Here someone may protest: "O queens, first you say you do not desire to attain Lord Hari's feet, and then you say you want to hold the dust of His feet on your heads, dust rich with the fragrance of kunkuma from the goddess of fortune's breast. Why do you contradict your own words? If Rukmini, the goddess of fortune, desires, then you will certainly attain your desire. Then you will indeed attain the dust of the Lord's feet, dust rich with kunkuma from the most exalted goddess of fortune's breast. But first please clearly tell us what it is that you desire." The answer to this protest is found in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.43, where the feet of Lord Krsna (not Lord Narayana) are specifically described. The dust of Lord Krsna's feet are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.17):

"The aborigine women of the Vrndavana area become disturbed by lust when they see the grass marked with reddish kunkuma powder. Endowed with the color of Krsna's lotus feet, this powder originally decorated the breasts of His beloveds, and when the aborigine women smear it on their faces and breasts, they give up all their anxiety."

In these quotes it is seen that the gopis of Vraja yearned to attain (yad vanchanti) the dust of Lord Krsna's feet. The present tense is used here (vanchanti) on the assumption that even today the gopis are not truly separated from Lord Krsna. By mentioning the aborigine girls, the queens hint (in srimad- Bhagavatam 10.83.43) that they themselves should also be qualified to attain the dust of Lord Krsna's feet. Here the words "trna-virudhah" mean the durva grass and other plants". The fragranced of the kunkuma from the goddess of foretune's breast is never absent from Lord Krsna's feet. That is the idea here. Here the word "gavah" means cows", "carayatah" means "herding", The cowherd boys (gopah) are only briefly mentioned here. Although many cowherd boys, such as the priya-sakhas and narma-sakhas, are very close friends of Lord Krsna, because they are males an elaborate description of them here in the midts of a discusion of the gopis is not appropriate. Even famous Goddess Laksmi cannot attain Lord Krsna's feet, although she aspires to. Thismis confirmed in the Naga-patnis' prayers in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.16.36 and also in the words of Uddhava in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.62. Not even the famous Goddess Rukmini can attain the same kind of association with Lord Krsna, for her association with Him is in a different time and place. Therefore Rukmini cannot hope to associate with Lord Krsna as the gopis of Vraja do. The superior status of the gopis is confirmed in srimad- Bhagavatam 10.47.60. Of Queen Rukmini it is said the Matsya Purana:

rukmini dvaravatyam tu radha vrndavane vane

"She who is Rukmini in Dvaraka is also Radha in Vrndavana Forest."

Vedanta-sutra (1.1.30) and the Ahangrahopasana-sastras declare that the demigod Indra and Goddess Durga are in one sense not different from the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In the same way, in one sense sri Radha is not different from Goddess Laksmi. The difference is that sri Radha is the original and complete form of Goddess Laksmi. This is confirmeed ion the following words of the Brhad-Gautamiya Tantra:

devi krsnamayi prokta radhika. . .

"The transcendental goddess srimati Radharani is the direct counterpart of Lord sri Krsna. She is the central figure for all the goddesses of fortune. She possesses all the attractiveness to attract the all-attractive Supreme Personality of Godhead. She is the primeval internal potency of the Lord."

In the Bahv-rk-parisista it is said of sri Radha:

"Lord Krsna always stays with sri Radha. sri Radha always stays with Lord Krsna."

When she appears as sri Radha, the goddess of fortune is most glorious. That is confirmed by these words. It is also confirmed by the followiong words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.28), which refer to sri Radha:

anayaradhito nunam bhagavan. . .

"Certainly this particular gopi has perfectly worshiped the all-powerful Personality of Godhead, Govinda, since He was so pleased with Her that He abandoned the rest of us and brought Her to a secluded place."

The following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.11) also refer to sri Radha:

apy ena-patny upagatah. . .

"O friend, wife of the deer, has Lord Acyuta been here with His beloved, bringing great joy to your eyes? Indeed, blowing this way is the fragrance of His garland of kunda flowers, which was smeared with the kunkuma from the breasts of His girlfriend when He embraced Her."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.41-43 the Dvaraka queens say: "As the gopis yearn to touch Lord Krsna's feet, so do we." They pray: "May the fragrance of the ecstatic love the gopis' feel be manifest in us." The Dvaraka queens do not desire only to attain the dust of Lord Krsna's feet. They desire to touch His feet also. Thus the words "vayam kamayamahe" may refer to the desire expressed in srimad- Bhagavatam 10.83.42 or the desire expressed in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.43. Thus the Dvaraka queens' request may be either We desire to touch Lord Krsna's feet." or "We desire to touch the dust of Lord Krsna's feet." Either way, the same result is attained. Therefore these two requests are not truly different. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.42 the word etasya" refers to Lord Krsna. What is Lord Krsna's nature? In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.43 it is said that Lord Krsna is mahatmanah". In that word "maha" means "He who is naturally the greatest of all", and "atmanah" means "He whose nature is filled with handsomeness and all other virtues". Lord Krsna's handsomeness and virtues are seen in these words spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.6):

"In the midst of the dancing gopis, Lord Krsna appeared most brilliant, like an exquisite sapphire in the midst of golden ornaments."

The srimad-Bhagavatam verses 10.83.41-43 quoted in the beginning of this anucheda were spoken by the Dvaraka queens to Draupadi.

Anuccheda 109

sri Radha-devi is described in these words of the Adi Purana:

trailokye prthivi dhanya tatra vrndavanam punah tatrapi gopikah partha tatra radhabhidha mama

"O Partha, the earth planet is the most fortunate place in the three worlds, for Vrndavana forest, the gopis, and My beloved who bears the name Radha all stay there."

sri Radha-devi is AGAIN described in these words of the Padma Purana, Karttika-mahatmya:

yatha radha priya visnos tasyah kundam priyam tatha sarva-gopisu saivaika visnor atyanta-vallabha

"Just as srimati Radharani is dear to the Supreme Lord Krsna (Visnu), so Her bathing place (Radha- kunda) is equally dear to Krsna. Among all the gopis, She alone stands supreme as the Lord's most beloved."

sri Radha's love is the greatest. This is confirmed in the following words of the Agni Purana, Vasana-bhasya:

gopyah papracchur usasi krsnanucaram uddhavam hari-lila-viharams ca tatraikam radhikam vina radha tad-bhava-samlina vasanaya viramita

"At dawn the gopis asked Krsna's servant Uddhava to describe how Krsna was enjoying pastimes without sri Radha. At that moment, overcome with love and yearning to be with Krsna, sri Radha fainted."

Here the words "vasanaya viramita" indicate that sri Radha was in the ninth state of consciousness. In other words, She was completely overcome. She had no power to continue. That sri Radha is the best of the gopis is seen in the following words describing the rasa-dance pastime in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.27):

kasyah padani. . .

"Here we see the footprints of some gopi who must have been walking along with the son of Nanda Maharaja. He must have put His arm on Her shoulder, just as an elephant rests His trunk on the shoulder of an accompanying she-elephant."

These words describe sri Radha's supreme good fortune. sri Radha's name is indirectly uttered in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.30.28):

anayaradhito nunam bhagavan harir isvarah yan no vihaya govindah prito yam anayad rahah

"Certainly this particular gopi has perfectly worshiped (aradhita) the all-powerful Personality of Godhead, Govinda, since He was so pleased with Her that He abandoned the rest of us and brought Her to a secluded place."

Here the words "anaya bhagavan radhitah" mean sri Radha brought the Supreme Personality of Godhead under Her control". The word "nunam" here is used in the sense of making a guess. Within the word "aradhitah" (worshiped) in this verse the name Radha is hidden. The result of Radha's worshiping Krsna is given in the words beginning with "yan na", the words that say: "He was so pleased with Her that He abandoned the rest of us and brought Her to a secluded place." Here the word "govindah" refers to Lord Krsna, the king of Gokula. This verse was spoken by the vraja- gopis.

Anuccheda 110

The different levels of gopis who love the Supreme Lord in the mood of sweetness, levels that culimate in the love felt by sri Radha, who has no equal or superior, will be described in this anuccheda. Considering its causes and effects, scholars learned in ordinary material poetry call this kind of love sthayi-bhava" (continuous ecstatic love). The causes of sthayi-bhava are vibhava, anubhava, and vyabhicari-bhava. These bhavas are all part of priti (ecstatic love). Sthayi-bhava is described in these words of the rasa-sastra:

"Ecstatic love that is not diminished by favorable or unfavorable situations is called sthayi-bhava, which is love deep like an ocean."

Vibhava and the other parts of love will be discussed later in this book. When sthayi-bhava and its causes are manifest in the context of ecstatic love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavat-priti), then they are called "bhagavat- pritimaya-rasa", or "bhakti-rasa" (the mellows of devotional service). That the bhavas thus become the rasas is described in the following words of the rasa-sastra:

bhava evabhisampannah prayanti rasa-rupatam

"The bhavas become the rasas."

Because they do not have the ingredients (samagri) of the true rasas, the poets who relish the material rasas (prakrta- rasikas) do not desire to taste the rasas of devotional service (bhakti-rasa). Their sphere of tasting the rasas is limited to the material demigods or other material persons. The samagris (igredients of the rasas are of three kinds: 1. svarupa-yuogyata samagri, 2. parikara-yogyata samagri, and 3. purusa-yogyata samagri. The svarupa-yuogyata samagris are the ingredients of sthayi-bhava, rati and other sentiemnts when they are manifest in the material rasas. These sentiments are based on the individual soul's desire to attain happiness for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, that love brings happiness much greater than the waves of happiness attained by realizing the impersonal Brahman. Persons in material consciousness cannot understand those sentiments, which are called yogyata samagri. Only spiritual poets and philosophers can understand those spiritual sentiments. These sentiments are very beautiful and wonderful. The spiritual sentiments felt by sri Prahlada and the other great devotees are called purusa-yogyata samagri. Material poets and philosophers who are not qualified like the great devotees cannot understand these sentiments. This is described in the following words of Sahitya-darpana (3.2):

punyavantah pamanvanti yogi-vad rasa-santatim

"Only saintly devotees can understand the spiritual rasas."

It is also said in Sahitya-darpana (3.8):

na jayate tad-asvado vina raty-adi-vasanam

"Without rati (attraction) and the other sentiments, the taste of the rasas is not manifest."

In the material rasas one tastes the pleasure of one's own happiness. This is described in the following words of Sahitya- darpana (3.2):

sattvodrekad akhanda-sva- prakasananda-cin-mayah vedyantara-sparsa-sunyo brahmasvada-sahodarah

"When the mode of goodness becomes very strong, then limitless spiritual bliss becomes manifest. When one tastes the bliss of the Supreme, then even the touch of knowledge of anything else becomes absent. Knowledge of the Supreme and unawareness of anything else are like two brothers.

lokottara-camatkara- pranah kaiscit pramatrbhih sakaravad abhinnatven- ayam asvadyate rasah

"Some great souls know the spoiritual wonders beyond the reach of this world. They taste the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose form is spiritual."

Pure spiritual goodness (aprakrta-visuddha-sattva) enables one to taste the spriitual rasas. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (4.3.23):

sattvam visuddham vasudeva-sabditam. . .

"I am always engaged in offering obeisances to Lord Vasudeva in pure Krsna consciousness. Krsna consciousness is always pure consciousness (visuddha-sattva), in which the Supreme Personality of Godhead, known as Vasudeva, is revealed without any covering."

Spiritual pure goodness has already been described in the Bhagavat-sandarbha. That the taste of rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is sweeter than the taste of realizing the impersonal Brahman is confirmed in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (4.9.10):

ya nirvrttis tanu-bhrtam. . .

"My Lord, the transcendental bliss derived from meditating upon Your lotus feet or hearing about Your glories from pure devotees is so unlimited that it is far beyond thwe stage of brahmananda, wherein one thinks oneself merged in the impersonal Brahman as one with the Supreme."

Tbis truth is also confirmed by the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.48):

natyantikam viganayanty api te prasadam. . .

"Persons who are very expert and most intelligent in understanding things as they are engage in hearing narrations of the auspicious activities and pastimes of the Lord, which are worth chanting and worth hearing. Such persons do not care even for the highest material benediction, namely liberation, to say nothing of less important other benedictions like the material happiness of the heavenly kingdom."

That the rasas of perceiving the Supreme Personality of Godhead are very wonderful is confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.2.12):

vismapanam svasya ca saubhagarddheh. . .

"The Lord appeared in the mortal world by His internal potency, yogamaya. He came in His eternal form, which is just suitable for His pastimes. These pastimes were wonderful for everyone, even for thos proud of their own opulence, including the Lord Himself in His form as the Lord of Vaikuntha. Thus His (sri Krsna's) transcendental body is the ornament of all ornaments."

The great authors of the past, who knew everything about the spiritual and material rasas, have throughly explained ths topic of rasa. Rasa was also described in a general way by the author of sri Bhagavan-nama-kaumudi. The five rasas were explicitly described by srila sridhara Svami in his commentary on srimad- Bhagavatam (10.43.17). There he said the word "strinam" referred to srngara-rasa, "gopanam" referred to the sakha, priya-sakha, and narma-sakha friends of thw Lord, among whom sridama and many others are prominent, "pitroh" referred to the kind devotees in vatsalya-rasa, "yoginam" referred to the jani-bhaktas in santa - rasa, vrsninam" referred to the devoteed Vrsnis, and "nrnam" referred ot the people in general who loved the Lord. In this description all the rasas, beginning with santa-rasa, are wonderfully described. The rasas are also explained by Dharma-datta in these words of Sahitya-darpana (3.2):

"Wonder is present everywhere in the rasas. The rasas are wonderful everywhere. Therefore, saintly Narayuana dasa says: the rasas are wonderful."

srila sridhara Svami does not show honor to the rasas like raudra-rasa (anger) felt by the wrestlers and others, for the persons in these rasas act like enemies of the Lord. The philosophers who know the truths of the spiritual rasas agree with this view. Some philosopghers learned in the material rasas especially honor sakhya-rasa and vatsalya-rasa. Of this view it is said:

sneha-sthayi-bhavah preyan

srngara-rasa is described ion these words:

yad eva rocate mahyam tad eva kurute priya iti vetti na janati tat priyam yat karoti sa

"Whatever pleases me, my beloved does. I may be aware of her actions or not, but she always acts to please me."

Those words described the relationship of husband and wife. The following words describe sakhya-rasa:

sphutam camatkaritataya vatsalam ca rasam viduh sthayi vatsalatasyeha putrady-alambanam matam

"The sages know that vatsala-rasa is wonderful. In vatsala-rasa sthayi-bhava is manifest. Vatsala-rasa is the love one feels for children and others in a like position."

The sage Sudeva and others acknowledge vatsala-rasa as one of the bhakti-rasas. Furthermore, material rati (attraction) and the material rasas may bring pleasure in the beginning, but in the end they bring suffering. This the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself confirmed in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.19.41):

. . .sukham duhkha-sukhatyayah duhkham kama-sukhapeksa

"Real happiness is to transcend material happiness and unhappiness, and real misery is to be implicated in searching for sex pleasure."

The Supreme (ord describes true peace in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.19.36):

samo man-nisthata buddheh

"True peace is attained when one faithfully rests his intelligence in Me."

In these weords the Supreme Lord criticizes material pleasures, which bring horrible results. Even the ordinary people of this world eventually come to hate material pleasures. Criticizing material so-called pleasures and praising the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, sri Narada explains in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.5.10-11):

na yad-vacas citra-padam harer yaso jagat-pavitram pragrnita karhicit tad vayasam tirtham usanti manasa na yatra hamsa niramanty usik-ksayah

"Those words which do not describe the glories of the Lord, who alone can sanctify the atmosphere of the whole universe, are considered by saintly persons to be like unto a pilgrimage for crows. Since the all-perfect persons are inhabitants of the transcendental abode, they do not derive any pleasure there.

tad-vag-visargo janatagha-viplavo yasmin prati-slokam abaddhavaty api namany anantasya yaso 'nkitani yat srnvanti gayanti grnanti sadhavah

"On the other hand, that literature which is full of descriptions of the transcendental glories of the name, fame, forms, pastimes, etc. of the unlimited Supreme Lord is a different creation, full of transcendental words directed toward bringing about a revolution in the impious lives of this world's misdirected civilization. Such transcendental literatures, even though imperfectly composed, are heard, sung, and accepted by purified men who are thoroughly honest."

The material rasas are also rejected by Queen rukmini, who says in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.45):

tvak-smasru-roma-nakha-kesa-pinaddham antar
mamsasthi-rakta-krimi-vit-kapha-pitta-vatam jivac-chavam bhajati kanta-matir vimudha ya te padabja-makarandam ajighrati stri

"A woman who fails to relish the fragranc of the honey of Your lotus feet becomes totally befooled, and thus she accepts as her husband or lover a living corpse covered with skin, whiskers, nails, head-hair, and body hair, and filled with flesh, bones, blood, parasites, feces, mucus, bile, and air."

Therefore one should not place his faith in the material rasas, for the material rasas always lead to a situation filled with horrors. The rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, on the other hand, lead to liberation from the material world. If the material reasas lead only to distress and the spiritual rasas lead to liberation, why then do the foolish people not relish the spiritual rasas? The answer is given in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.1.4):

nivrtta-tarsair upagiyamanat. . .

"Glorification of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is performed in the parampara system. That is, it is conveyed from spiritual master ot disciple. Such gloreification is relished by those no longer interested in the false, temporary glorification of this cosmic manifestation. Descriptions of the Lord are the right medicine for the conditioned soul undergoing repeated birth and death. Therefore, who will cease hearing such glorification of the Lord except a butcher or one who is killing his own self?"

The sweetness of thew spiritual rasas is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.19):

aspandanam gati-matam pulakas tarunam. . .

"When Lord Krsna plays on His flute, the sweet music causes the moving living entities to become stunned and the nonmoving trees to tremble in ecstasy. These things are certainly very wonderful."

The spiritual rasas of association with Lord Krsna brought the devotees back to life. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.17.15):

krsnam sametya labdheha asan suska naga api

"Having regained their vital functions, Yasoda, Rohini, Nanda and all the other cowherd women and men went up to Krsna. O descendant of Kuru, even the dried-up trees came back to life."

The Purana srimad-Bhagavatam teaches the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed by the following words (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.1.3):

nigama-kalpa-taroh. . .

"O expert and thoughtful men, rlish srimad- Bhagavatam, the mature fruit of the desire tree of Vedic literatures. It emanated from the lips of sri sukadeva Gosvami. Therefore this fruit has become even more tasteful, although its nectarean juice weas already relishable for all, including liberated souls."

This verse means: "O auspicious souls learned in the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, in your hearts please relish the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whioch is the sweet fruit of desire tree of the Vedas, a tree with many branches and sub-branches that bear all fruits, a tree that has come to this earth from the spiritual world of Vaikuntha." Here the word "aho" ismnused to hint that srimad-Bhagavatam enables one to attain what is otherwise unattainable. The scripture srimad-Bhagavatam is desdcriubeed here with the w0ord "rasa" because it is sweet with the spiritual rasas. It is called Bhagavatam because it describes the rasas of love for Bhagavan (the Supreme Personality of Godhead). That srimad- Bhagavatam is filled with the reasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is described in these words (srimad- Bhagavatam 1.7.7):

yasyam vai sruyamanayam. . .

"Simply by giving aural reception to this Vedic literature (srimad-Bhagavatam), the feeling for loving devotional service to Lord Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, sprouts up at once to extinguish the fire of lamentation, illusion and fearfulness."

The word "rasa" is used in relation to the Supreme Personality of Godhead in these words of Taittiriya Upanisad (2.7.1):

raso vai sah. rasam hy evayam labdhvanandi-bhavati.

"When one understands the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the reservoir of pleasure (rasa), Krsna, he actually becomes transcendentally blissful."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 1.1.3 the word "rasikah" shows that the sages who attained perfection in ancient times as well as the sages who attained perfection in recent tiomes knew the truth of the rasas. The word "galitam" shows that the fruit here is perfectly ripe and sweet. Here it is seen that because it has come from the tree of the scriptures, this fruit is very sweet and delicious. "Rasam" here shows that this fruit has neither skin nor pit. It has no defect in any way. The words "bhagavatam nigamasya" here show that srimad-Bhagavatam is the best of all the sacred fruits of the tree of the scriptures. This is so because it teaches the highest goal of life. Even though the nectar of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is naturally very excellent, it is made even more excellent in srimad-Bhagavatam. This is shown here by the word "suka". Although the fruit of srimad-Bhagavatam is very wonderful because it has fallen from the kalpa-vrksa tree of the scriptures, it is made even more sweet and nectarean because it is touched by ther mouth of srila sukadeva Gosvami. When it touches srila sukadeva Gosvami's mouth, that fruit becoems sweeter. When they come from the mouth of a great devotee, descroptions of the Supreme Personality of Godhead become sweeter. How much more is this true when such descriptions come from the mouth of srila sukadeva Gosvami, the king of all great devotees? By tasting ther nectar of srimad-Bhagavatam one will never become satiated. His desire to taste it will never become diminished. Therefore, even after attaining liberation (alayam), one should drink (pibata) the nectar of srimad- Bhagavatam. That even liberated souls are attracted to srimad- Bhagavatam is confirmed by srila sukadeva Gosvami in the following words (srimad-Bhagavatam 2.1.9):

parinisthito 'pi. . .

"O saintly king, I was perfectly situated in transcendence, yet I was still attracted by the delineation of the pastimes of the Lord, who is described by enlightened verses."

The sweetness of other things fades in the course of time. The sweetness of srimad-Bhagavatam is not like that. It does not fade. The reasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead are of two kinds: 1. prity-upayukta and 2. priti-parinama. These are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (12.3.14- 15):

vijana-vairagya-vivaksaya vibho vaco-vibhutir na tu paramarthyam

"O mighty Pariksit, I have related to you the narrations of all these great kings, who spread their fame throughout the world and then departed. My real purpose was to teach transcendental knowledge and renunciation. Stories of kings lend power and opulence to these narrations but do not in themselves constitute the ultimate aspect of knwoledge.

yas tuttama-sloka-gunanuvadah sangiyate 'bhiksnam amangala-ghnah tam eva nityam
srnuyad abhiksnam krsne 'malam bhaktim abhipsamanah

"The person who desires pure devotional service to Lord Krsna should hear the narrations of Lord Uttamasloka's glorious qualities, the constant chanting of which destoys everything inauspicious. The devotee should engage in such listening in regular daily assemblies and should also continue his hearing throughout the day."

After describing the rasas in a general way, srila sukadeva Gosvami describes thme in more detail in the word amrta". "Amrta" here refers to the nectar of the Lord's pastimes, nectar described in these owrds of srimad- Bhagavatam (12.13.11):

hari-lila-katha-vrata- mrtanandita-sat-suram

"srimad-Bhagavatam is full of nectarean accounts of Lord Krsna's pastimes, which guve ecstasy ot the saintly devotees and demigods."

That narrations of Lord's pastimes are sweet is confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (12.4.40):

lila-katha-rasa-nisevanam. . .

"Narrations of lord Krsna's pastimes are sweet like nectar."

In the word "sat-suram" from srimad-Bhagavatam 12.13.11, the word "sat" refers to the atmarama transcendentalists situated in Brahman realization, who are referred to by thew word "satam" in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.12.11, and the word "suram" refers to the devotees who taste only the nectar of devotional service ot the Lord. In srimad-Bhagavatam 1.1.3 the word "amrta-drava" means the sweetest nectar of the Lord's pastimes". The following exp"lanation may be given: Although the nectar of love (pritimaya-rasa) for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the sweetest of all nectars (sreyah), various levels of that nectar be certainly be distinguished. The taste of the nectar of the rasas, as described in the word "pibata" is of two kinds, the first of which is the rasas tasted by the Lord's personal associates who personally participate in the Supreme Lord's pastimes. This perception of the rasas is the best, because it is direct and confidential (antaranga). The other perception of the rasas is tasted by all others. It is indirect and not confidential (bahiranga). These two levels of the perception of the nectar of the rasas are both described here by the single word "pibata". This nectar is like a river flowing from the mouth of srila sukadeva Gosvami. That srimad-Bhagavatam describes the sweetest nectar of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is confirmed by these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 12.13.15):

sarva-vedanta-saram hi. . . . . .tad-rasamrta-trptasya. . .

"srimad-Bhagavatam is declared to be the essence of all Vedanta philosophy. One who has felt satisfaction from its nectarean mellow will never be attracted by any other literature."

In His commentary srila sridhara Svami defines the word bhavukah" in this way:

" `Bhavukah' here means `they who are expert at meditating on the nectar rasas'."

This meditation is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (1.5.19):

smaran mukundanghry-upaguhanam punar vidhatum icchen na rasa-graho janah

srimad-Bhagavatam 1.1.3 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila Vedavyasa.

Anuccheda 111

Thus joined with vibhava and its other components, the rasac of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead is manifest. They who are learned i n the material rasas shown in dramas describe four kinds of characters. First is the hero who is primarily served by the rasa. He is the first character in the drama. Then there is the person who because of being limited, or because of fear or some other impediment, becomes a follower or servant of the hero. That person, the follower or servant, is the second kind of character. Then there is a person who, an ordinary person among the people in general who, because he is unintelligent and needs to accept instructions and orders, becomes a follower or servant of the hero. That follower or servant is the third kind of character. Can the follower or servant who is the second character not be intelligent? If he is he becomes the fourth kind of character. The devotees of the Lord taste the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In this way the rasas they taste are not material in nature. In this way the rasas of love present in the hearts of this hero and His servants and followers are eternal. They are perfect and complete. In this way it is demonstrated that the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead are limitless and spiritual in nature. They are not like the material rasas described in material poems. That is their nature. For example, it is seen that sri Prahlada, the vraja-gopis, and many other devotees were completely unaffected by fear, and sri Vrtra, sri Gajendra, sri Bharata, and other devotees were completely unaffected by the actions of their previous births. What more need be said? sri sukadeva Gosvami and other devotees were completely unaffected by the bliss of impersonal Brahman realization. In these ways it should be known that the love they felt for the Supreme Personality of Godhead was certainly spiritual in nature. It was not material. Here the alambana (main cause of feeling the rasa of love) is the Supreme Lord's opulences, glories, and virtues, which have no equal or superior. The personal assaociates of the Lord have spiritual qualities like the Lord's. This truth is proclaimed by the great dundubhi drums that are the Vedas, Puranas, and other scriptures. The uddipanas (secondary causes of feeling the rasa of love) are the things in relation to the Lord. These secondary causes of rasa are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.43):

"When the breeze carrying the aroma of tulasi leaves from the toes of the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead entered the nostrils of those sages, they experienced a change both in body and in mind, even though they were attached to the impersonal Brahman understanding."

The Supreme Lord's handsomeness as a cause of rasa is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.14):

gopyas tapah kim acaran. . .

"What austerities must the gopis have performed! With their eyes they always drink the nectar of Lord Krsna's form, which is the essence of loveliness and is not to be equaled or surpassed. That loveliness is the only abode of beauty, fame, and opulence. It is self-perfect, ever fresh and extremely rare.

The causes of rasa are also seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.29.40):

ka stry anga. . . . . .yad go-dvija-druma-mrgah pulakany abibhran

"Dear Krsna, what woman in all the three worlds wouldn't deviate from religious behavior when bewildered by the sweet, drawn-out melody of Your flute? Your beauty makes all three worlds auspicious. Indeed, even the cows, birds, trees and deer manifest the ecstatic symptom of bodily hair standing on end when they see Your beautiful form."

Lord Krsna's flute-music as a cause of rasa is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.14-15):

vividha-gopa-caranesu vidagdhah. . .

. . .savanasas tad upadharya suresah sakra-sarva-paramesthi-purogah kavaya anata-kandhara-cittah kasmalam yayur aniscita-tattvah pravrt-sriyam ca tam viksya sarva-kala-sukhavaham bhagavan pujayam cakre atma-sakty-upabrmhitam

"O pious mother Yasoda, your son, who is expert in all the arts of herding cows, has invented many new styles of flute- playing. When He takes His flute to His bimba-red lips and sends forth the tones of the harmonic scale in variegated melodies, Brahma, Siva, Indra and other chief demigods become confused upon hearing the sound. Although they are the most learned authorities, they cannot ascertain the essence of that music, and thus they bow down their heads and hearts."

That the accidental manifestation of one of the Lord's potencies can become a cause of spiritual rasa is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.20.31):

"Observing the beauty and opulence of Vrndavana's rainy season, a perennial source of great happiness, the Lord offered all respect to that season, which was expanded from His own internal potency."

Here the clouds and other features of the rainy season bring ecstatis symptoms, like standing up of the body's hairs.

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.19):

aspandanam gati-matam pulakas tarunam

"When Lord Krsna plays on His flute, the sweet music causes the moving living entities to become stunned and the nonmoving trees to tremble with ecstasy. These things are certainly very wonderful."

Here even the trees and other like living entities wonderfully become like human beings. Even grief and other like emotions can help one taste the spiritual rasas. In that greif it is said there may come madness or other like conditions caused by sorrow and by separation from the Lord. These emotions can certainly be manifest on the spiritusl platform. The spiritual world is described in these words of Brahma-samhita (5.56-57):

sriyah kantah kantah parama-purusah kalpa-taravo druma bhumis cintamani-gana-mayi toyam amrtam katha ganam natyam gamanam api vamsi priya-sakhi cid-anandam jyotih param api tad asvadyam api ca sa yatra ksirabdhih sravati surabhibhyas ca su-mahan nimesardhakhyo va vrajati na hi yatrapi samayah bhaje svetadvipam tam aham iha golokam iti yam vidantas te santah ksiti-virala-carah katipaye

"I worship thyat transcendental seat, known as svetadvipa, where as loving consorts the Laksmis in their unalloyed spiritual essence practice the amorous service ofnthe Supreme Lord Krsna as their only lover, where every tree is a transcendental purpose tree, where the sopil is the purpose gem, all water is nectar, every word is a song, every gait is a dance, the flute is the favorite attendant, effulgence is full of transcendental bliss, and the supreme spiritual entities are all enjoyable and tasty, where numberless milk cows always emit transcendental oceans of milk, where there is eternal existence of transcendental time, who is ever-present and without past or future and hence is nto subject to the quality of passing away even for the space of half a moment. That realm is known nas Goloka only to a very few self-realized souls in this world."

Here the words "ganam natyam" refer to the rasas. The causes that create the rasas of love for the supreme hero, Lord Krsna, rasas that are spiritual and have many spiritual quialities, are called vibhavas. The vibhavas are described in these words of Sahitya-darpana (3.13):

vibhavanam raty-ader visesenasvadankura-yogyatanayanam. anubhavanam evam-bhutasya raty-adeh samantaram eva rasadi- rupataya bhavanam. sacaranam tatha-bhutasya tasyaiva samyak caranam.

"Vibhava makes rati and the other aspects of rasas first appear as a new sprout. Comeing after vibhava, anubhava enables one to directly perceive the nature of rasa. Then sacari-bhava makes the rasas become active."

Even material poets who know the material rasas say that happiness can arise out of sorrow. We also say that spiritual bliss can arise even out of separation from the Lord. Externally the devotee separated from the Lord may seem to be sorrowful. However, during the anguish of separation the supremely blissful Lord is always manifest in the devotee's thoughts. Therefore the devotee is also filled with intense spiritual bliss. In such a situation it is not possible for the devotee to avoid those two emotions of anguish and bliss. These two emoptions do nto contradict each other. Rather they are like sweetened hot milk placed before a hungry person. The two features of sweetness and heat do not negate each other. Rather they compliment each other. In this way the anguish of separation from the Lord is actually the cause of intense spiritual bliss, just as the shining of the moon and stars is a source of pleasure. Because it is nourished by the memory of the bliss of directly associating with the Supreme Lord, the anguish of separation brings bliss with it. In that state of separatuion the karuna-rasa (the rasa of a pitiable condition) is manifest. At that time the devotee yearns to be with the Lord. In this way the manifeastatoon of the rasas of love for ther supreme hero, Lord Krsna, is described. The rasas arise in two primary ways: 1. the love (anuraga) created by hearing, and 2. the love created by seeing. These are both described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.90.26):

"The Lord, whom countless songs glorify in countless ways, forcibly attracts the minds of all women who simply hear about Him. What to speak, then, of those women who see Him directly?"

The arisal of the rasa of love for the Lord is described by Uddhava in the following two verses of srimad-Bhagavatam 11.6.44- 45):

tava vikriditam brahman. . .

"My dear Krsna, Your pastimes are supremely auspicious for mankind and are an intoxicating beverage for the ears. Tasting such pastimes, people forget their desires for other things. "My dear Lord, You are the Supreme Soul, and thus You are most dear to us. We are Your devotees, and how can we possibly reject You or live without You for even a moment? Whether we ar lying down, sitting, walkign, standing, bathing, enjoying recreation, eating, or doing anything else, we are constantly engaged in Your service."

The anukarta, or follower or servant of the Lord is thus a devotee of the Lord.Non-devotees cannot become followers or servants of the Lord. The rasas of love for the Lord arise amongst the devotees. Here the word "anukarta" should not be inter"reted to mean "imitator". It is not possible for the individual spirit souls to imitate the actions of the Lord. The attempt to imitate the Lord is against the principles of devotional service. The devotees associate with the Lord and directly perceive Him, but they never become one with Him. In this way the uddipanas of the rasas, which arouse the devotees' love, enchance the Lord's pastimes. If the pure devotees sometimes imitate the Lord, the devotees always think, "the Lord is mine". They never think, "I have become the Lord. I am the Lord." That kind of imitation is seen in Vasudeva's son Gada and the Lord's other brothers, who think themselves the Lord's equal. Their sentiments are not against the principles of devotional service. The ordinary (samajika) devotees yearn to attain such a glorious position. In drsya- kavyas (staged dramas), the audience sees with their eyes and meditates on the rasas. In sravya-kavyas (recited narrative poems), the audioence hears the descriptions of the Lord. In this way the audience meditates on the Lord. The sprout of rati (attraction to the Lord) arises within them. They attain great love (prema) for the Lord. Melodies in the sixth note may also be a cause (uddipana) of rasa. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (6.5.22):

svara-brahmani nirbhata- hrsikesa-padambuje akhandam cittam avesya lokan anucaran munih

"The seven musiacl notes - sa, r, ga, ma, pa, dha, and ni - are used in musical instruments, but originally they come from the Sama Veda. The great sage Narada vibrates sounds describing the pastimes of the Supreme Lord. By such transcendental vibrations such as Hare Krsna, Hare Krsna, Krsna Krsna, Hare Hare, Hare Rama, Hare Rama, Rama Rama, Hare Hare,, he fixes his mind at the lotus feet of the Lord. Thus he directly perceives Hrsikesa, the master of the senses. After delivering the Haryasvas, Narada Muni continued traveling throughout the planetary systems, His mind always fixed at the lotus feet of the Lord."

Prema and the other kinds of ecstatic love (bhavas) create the samagris (ingredients of rasa). This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (7.4.39-41):

kvacid rudati vaikuntha- cinta-sabala-cetasah. . .

. . .kvacid utpulakas tusnim aste samsparsa-nirvrtah aspanda-pranayananda-salilamiliteksanah

"Because of advancement in Krsna consciousness, he sometimes cried, sometimes laughed, sometimes expressed jubilation, and sometimes sang loudly. "Sometimes, upon seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Prahlada Maharaja would loudly call in full anxiety. He sometimes lost his shyness in jubilation and began dancing in ecstasy, and sometimes, being fully absorbed in thoughts of Krsna, he felt oneness and imitated the pastimes of the Lord. "Sometimes, feeling the touch of the Lord's lotus hands, he became spiritually jubilant and remained silent, his hairs standing on end and tears gliding down from his half-closed eyes because of his love for the Lord."

Materialists who relish the material rasas are attracted by something that is imperfect and incomplete. Persons who taste the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavat-priti-rasika) are of two kinds: 1. the devotees who directly participate in the Lord's pastimes (tadiya-lilantah- pati), and 2. the devotees who aspire to participate in the Lord's pastimes (tadiya-lilantah-patitabhimana). Because of their past devotional activities, the devotees ion the first group attained the Lord's direct association. The devotees in the second group are of two kinds: 1. the devotees who hear description of ther Lord's pastimes with His personal associates, and 2. the devotees who hear descriptions of the Lord's sweetness and other transcendental qualities. If a devotee in the first of these two groups desires in the sameee way the personal associates of the Lord desire, then that devotee eventually becomes the Lord's personal associate. Then that devotee attains the vibhavas and other elements of rasas manifest in a personal associate of the Lord. How the gopis think is seen in the following words of Sahitya-darpana (3.12):

parasya na parasyeti na mameti mameti ca tad-asvade vibhavadeh paricchedo na vidyate

"My beloved may be another's husband, or He may not be another's husband. He may be my husband, or he may not be my husband. When I taste the vibhavas and other elements of the rasas of love for Him, it makes no difference to me if He is my husband or not."

If a devotee desires in a way different from the way the Lord's personal associates desire, then that devotee attains vibhava, anubhava, and sacari-bhava that are generally ordinary in nature. Even when the uddipanas (which arouse the feelings of rasa) are present, that devotee does not perceive the sweetness of rasa. If a devotee desires ina way that opposes the the way the Lord's personal associates desire, then, even if the uddipanas of vatsalya-rasa and the other rasas are present, that devotee will not perceive the different bhavas (ecstasies of love), nor will he perceive the sweetness of rasa. Now we will discuss the devotees who hear descriptions of the Lord's sweetness and other transcendental qualities. These devotees are are independent like the Lord's personal associates who participate in the Lord's pastimes. These devotees have th4e power to perceive the sweetness of rasa. Now the perfection of the reasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead will be considered. When love for thwe Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavat-priti) is mixed with the vibhavas and other elements of rasa, the result is the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavat-pritimaya-rasa). This is described in the following words of Sahitya-darpana (3.15):

yatha khanda-maricadinam sammelanad apurva iva kascid asvadah prapanaka-rase sajayate. vibhavadi-sammelanad ihapi tatha.

"As sugar, black pepper, and other ingredients make a drink delightful for the tongue, so the vibhavas and other elements of rasa make the rasas delightful to taste."

The sweetness of the Lord is counted among the uddipanas, the secondary elements that help one to taste the spiritual rasas. The Supreme Lord Himself is the alambana, the primary element that enables one to taste the spiritual rasas. The alambanas and uddipanas are described in these words of Agni Purana:

vibhavyate hi raty-ader yatra yena vibhavyate vibhavo nama sa devdha-lambanoddipanatmakah

"Vibhava enables one to perceive rati and the other elements of rasa. Vibhava is of two kinds: 1. alambana, and 2. uddipana."

The alambana may be of two kinds: 1. Lord Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is dearly loved by the devotees, and 2. the Lord's devotees, who are filled with lofve for Him. These two kinds ofalambanas are indicsted in Sanskrit by use of the locative case. Lord Krsna as the alambana is described in these owrds of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.24.65):

yasyananam makara-kundala. . .

"Krsna's face is decorated with ornaments, such as earrings resembling sharks. His ears are beautiful, His cheeks brilliant, and His smiling attractive to everyone. Whoever sees Lord Krsna sees a festival. His face and body are fully satisfying for everyone to see."

Lord Krsna as the alambana is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.14):

gopyas tapah kim acaran yad amusya rupam

"What austerities must the gopis have performed! With their eyes they always drink the nectar of Lord Krsna's form, which is the essence of loveliness and is not to be equaled or surpassed. That lovliness is the only abode of beauty, fame, and opulence. It is self-perfect, ever fresh and extremely rare."

As long as Lord Krsna's sweetness is not manifest, the individual soul will see his own self as the most dear and lovable being in the whole world. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.27):

prana-buddhi-manah-svatma- darapatya-dhanadayah yat-samparkat priya asams tatah ko nv aparah priyah

"It is only by contact with the self that one's vital breath, intelligence, mind, friends, body, wife, children, wealth and so on are dear. Therefore what object can possibly be more dear than one's own self?"

In this verse the word "sva" means "the pure soul", "atma" means "the material body", and "yat-samparkat" means "because of my contact with that". This verse implies: "As a spirit soul I am full of spiritual bliss. Therefore I am dear to myself." This verse also implies: "Because I am His part-and-parcel, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the Supersoul in my heart, is also dear to me." This verse also implies: "The things in relation to me are also dear to me." Thus the vital breath and other things are dear because of their relation to the soul. Even when He appears in many different forms, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is always dear to the individual soul. This is seen in the following words spoken by Lord Balarama in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.36):

kim etad adbhutam iva vasudeve'khilatmani vrajasya satmanas tokesv apurvam prema vardhate

"What is this wonderful phenomenon? The affection of all the inhabitants of Vraja, including Me, toward these boys and calves is increasing as never before, just like our affection for Lord Krsna, the Supersoul of all living entities."

Lord Krsna's own form is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.23.22):

syamam hiranya-paridhim vanamalya-barha- dhatu-pravala-nata-vesam anuvratamse vinyasta-hastam itarena dhunanam abjam karnotpalalaka-kapola-mukhabja-hasam

"His complexion was dark blue and His garment golden. Wearing a peacock feather, colored minerals, sprigs of flower buds, and a garland of forest flowers and leaves, He was dressed just like a dramatic dancer. He rested one hand upon the shoulder of a friend and the with the other twirled a lotus. Lilies graced His ears, His hair hung down over His cheeks, and His lotuslike face was smiling."

The words of this verse imply: "Will you not become wonderfully attracted to these features of Lord Krsna?" srimad- Bhagavatam 10.23.27, quoted in this anuccheda, was spoken by Lord Krsna to the yaja-patnis.

Anuccheda 112

The devotees dear to the Lord are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.18.13):

tulayama lavenapi. . .

"The value of a moment's association with the devotee of the Lord cannot be compared to the attainment of heavenly planets or liberation from matter, and what to speak of worldly benedictions in the form of material prosperity, which are for those who are meant for death."

In this way it is seen that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the object of love (visaya) and He is also the primary cause (alambana) that makes the devotees fall in love with Him. By following the path that begins with hearing about the Lord, the devotees attain love (priti) for Him. The word "visaya" may mean either the person who loves or the person who is loved. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.16.5-6):

tat kathyatam maha-bhaga yadi krsna-kathasrayam athavasya padambhoja-makaranda-liham satam

"Please describe all these incidents if they realte to the topics of Lord Krsna. The devotees of the Lord are accustomed to licking up the honey available from the lotus feet of the Lord."

By associating with the Supreme Lord, one falls in love with Him. In this way the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the primary cause (alambana) of ecstatic love for Him. The secondary causes (uddipana) of ecstatic love are different. The Lord's dear devotees, who are of two kinds, namely the devotees who have the same desire (savasana) and the devotees who have different desires (bhinna-vasana), are also objects (visaya) of ecstatic love. The devotees are also the reservoirs of love (adhara) for the Lord. However, one's material friends and kinsmen are not the causes of attaining love ofr Lord Krsna. Indeed, the devotees do not pray to attain love for their friends and kinsmen. Rthaer they pray only to love the Supreme Lord. That they do not pray to attain love for their friends and kinsmen is seen in these words of Queen Kunti in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.8.41):

atha visvesa visvatman visva-murte sva-kesu me sneha-pasam imam chindhi drdham pandusu vrsnisu

"O Lord of the universe, soul of the universe, O personality of the form of the universe, please, therefore, sever my tie of affection for my kinsmen, the Pandavas and the Vrsnis."

The love the devotees accept (angikara) is described in these words of Queen Kunti in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.8.43):

"O Krsna, O friend of Arjuna, O chief amongst the descendants of Vrsni, You are the destroyer of those political parties which are disturbing elements on this earth. Your prowess never deteriorates. You are the proprietor of the transcendental abode, and You descend to relieve the distresses of the cows, the brahmanas and the devotees. You possess all mystic powers, and You are the preceptor of the entire universe. You are the almighty God, and I offer You my respectful obeisances."

Here Kunti calls out to Krsna, addressing Him with names such as "O friend of Arjuna (Krsna-sakha). In this context Queen Kunti accepts a loving relationship with Arjuna and others because they are all filled with love for the Supreme Lord. These verses were spoken by Queen Kunti to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Krsna.

Anuccheda 115

Now we may consider these words spoken by Uddhava in srimad- Bhagavatam (11.29.39-40):

vrknas ca me su-drdhah sneha-paso dasarha-vrsny-andhaka-satvatesu prasaritah srsti-vivrddhaye tvaya sva-mayaya hy atma-subodha-hetina

"The firmly bindfing rope of my affection for the families of the Dasarhas, Vrsnis, Andhakas, and Satvatas - a rope You originally cast over me by Your illusory energy for the purpose of developing Your creation - is now cut off by the weapon of transcendental knowledge of the self.

namo 'stu te maha-yogin prapannam anusadhi mam yatha tvac-caranambhoje ratih syad anapayini

"Obeisances unto You, O greatest of yogis. Please instruct me, who am surrendered unto You, how I may have undeviating attachment to Your lotus feet."

Here Uddhava says: "The rope of my affection for others in a bodily relationshoip with me, a rope You originally cast over me by Your illusory energy for the purpose of developing Your creation - is now cut off." How was that rope cut off? The answer is given in the words: "by the weapon of transcendental knowledge of the self." This means "by the weapon of knowledge of Your glory and attractiveness, which make the devotee fall in love (prity-utpadaka) with You". Uddhava's statement here that His affection for the Dasarhas, Vrsnis, Andhakas, and Satvatas is maya and his prayer that this affection be removed is a kind of self-delusion on Uddhava's part, for these kinsmen of his are all perfect liberated souls. In the words of srimad-Bhagavatam 0 1.8.41 quoted here, Queen Kunti thinks: "If Lord Krsna departs from Hastinapura, that will be inauspicious for the Pandavas, and if He does not depart from Hastinapura and return to Dvaraka that will be inauspicious for the Vrsnis. Her heart thus agitated by competeing affections for these two sides of of her family, Queen Kunti here prays that the affection she bears for her kinsmen be destroyed. The truth is that when she sees how the two sides of her family dearly love Lord Krsna, her own love for Lord Krsna increases. Therefore, the pretext of saying Please destroy my affection for my kinsmen", Queen Kunti really prays: "Please do not leave the association of either of the two sides of my family." After Queen Kunti offered her prayers, Lord Krsna still prepared to depart. srila Suta Gosvami explains in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.8.45):

tam badham ity upamantrya. . .

"Thus accepting the prayers of Srimati Kuntidevi, the Lord subsequently informed other ladies of His departure by entering the palace of Hastinapura. But upon preparing to leave, He was stopped by King Yudhisthim, who implored Him lovingly.".

In srimad-Bhagavatam 11.29.39 Uddhava also prayed to attain Lord Krsna's association. srimad-Bhagavatam 11.29.39-40 was spoken by Uddhava.

Anuccheda 116

In the same way it is seen that sri Devaki was affectionate to her six sons. Because of her affection for them, Lord Krsna kindly delivered them. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam

apayayat stanam prita suta-sparsa-parisnutam mohita mayaya visnor yaya srstih pravartate

"Lovingly she let her sons drink from her breast, which became wet with milk just by their touch. She was entranced by the same illusory energy of Lord Visnu that initiates the creation of the universe."

pitvamrtam payas tasyah pita-sesam gada-bhrtah. . . . .yayur dhama divaukasam

"By drinking her nectarean milk, the remnants of what Krsna Himself had previously drunk, the six sons touched the transcendental body of Lord Narayana, and this contact awakened them to their original identities. They bowed down to Govinda, Devaki, their father, and Balarama, and then, as everyone looked on, they left for the abode of the demigods."

Here the words "mohita mayaya" mean that Devaki was bewildered into thinking her other six sons were in truth Lord Krsna's brothers. Now wwe will consider Rukmini's affection for Rukmi. For Rukmini's sake Lord Krsna, who wanted to see Rukmi mocked and humiliated, spared Rukmi. These activities were manifested by the Lord's pastime potency. Rukmini trembled with devotion. Still, the devotion in her heart weas mixed with knowledge of the Lord's supreme power and opulence. That is why she addressed Him: "You are the supreme controller, and he is very lowly and fallen. Therefore, please do not mock and humiliate him. Therefore please be compassionate. O Lord, I take shelter of Your feet. I have a relationship with Your body. Please be merciful and give fearlessness to him." Aware of Lord Krsna's power and opulence, Rukmini spoke these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.54.33):

"O controller of all mystic power, immeasurable one, Lord of lords, master of the universe! O all-pausoicious and mighty-armed one, please do not kill my brother!"

In tyhe same way LordBalarama became a partisan of His student Duryodhana. When Duryodhana was attacked, Lord Balarama became angry. A similar situation occurred during the kidnapping of Laksmana. The Lord's pastime potency created these situations to increase the wonder and glory of the Lord's pastimes. Now the uddipanas will be considered. As Lord Krsna Himself, who is the alambana (the primnary cause of relishing the rasas) is the cause of bhava and vibhava, so the uddipanas (secondary causes of relishing the rasas) are also the causes of bhava and vibhava. Included among the uddipanas are Lord Krsna's qualities, family, activities, paraphernalia, age, and form. The Supreme Lord's qualities are of three kinds: those in relation to His 1. body, 2. words, and 3. mind. None of the Lord's qualities are material. Lord Krsna Himself affirms this in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.13.40):

mam bhajanti gunah sarve nirgunam nirapeksakam suhrdam priyam atmanam samyasangadayo 'gunah

" All superior transcendental qualities, such as being beyond the modes of nature, detached, the well-wisher, the most dear, the Supersoul, equally situated everywhere, and free from material entanglement - all such qualities, free from the transformations of material qualities, find their shelter and worshipable object in Me."

The qualities of Lord Krsna, who is the alambana (primary impetus for ecstatic love), are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.16.27-30):

satyam saucam daya ksantis tyagah santosa arjavam samo damas tapah samyam titiksoparatih srutam janam viraktir aisvaryam sauryam tejo balam smrtih svatantryam kausalam kantir dhairyam mardavam eva ca pragalbhyam prasrayah silam saha ojo balam bhagah gambhiryam sthairyam astikyam kirtir mano'nahankrtih

ete canye ca bhagavan nitya yatra maha-gunah prarthya mahattvam icchadbhir na viyanti sma karhicit

"In Him (Lord Krsna) reside (1) truthfulness, (2) cleanliness, (3) intolerance of another's unhappiness, (4) the power to control anger, (5) self-satisfaction, (6) straightforwardness, (7) steadiness of mind, (8) control of the sense organs, (9) responsibility, (10) equality, (11) tolerance, (12) equanimity, (13) faithfulness, (14) knowledge, (15) absence of sense enjoyment, (16) leadership, (17) chivalry, (18) influence, (19) the power to make everything possible, (20) the discharge of proper duty, (21) complete independence, (22) dexterity, (23) fullness of all beauty, (24) serenity, (25) kindheartedness, (26) ingenuity, (27) gentility, (28) magnanimity, (29) detemnination, (30) perfection in all knowledge, (31) proper execution, (32) possession of all objects of enjoyment, (33) joyfulness, (34) immovability, (35) fidelity, (36) fame, (37) worship, (38) pridelessness, (39) being (as the Personality of Godhead), (4O) eternity, and many other transcendental qualities which are eternally present and never to be separated from Him."

In these verses the word "satyam" means truthfulness", "saucam" means "cleanliness", and "daya" means "intolerance of another's unhappiness". This means the Lord protects

His devotees. He is the friend and well-wisher of His devotees. "Ksanti" means "power to control anger", "tyaga" means "generosity", "santosa" means "self- satisfaction", "arjavam" means "being without crookedness", and "sama" means "steadiness of mind". By this last quality the Lord is firm in vow. Dama" means "being uaffected by the external senses", "tapah" means "in His lila-avatara as a ksatriya performing the appropriate religious duties", "samyam" means "not thinking one person is a friend and another person is an enemy", "titiksa" means "tolerance of others' offenses", "uparati" means indifference to personal gain", "srutam" means being learned in the scriptures", "janam" means "the five kinds of knowledge: which are: 1. intelligence, 2. gratefulness, 3. being an appropriate judge of time and place, 4. being all-knowing, and 5. spiritual knowledge of thew self", "virakti" means "not having a thirst to enjoy wicked pleasures", "aisvaryam" means being a controller", "sauryam" means "ability to fight in battle", "tejah" means "power", and balam" means "expertness". This last quality means the power to perform difficult deeds quickly. In some texts the word here is "dhrtih", which means "to remain unagitated even in distressing conditions". "Smrti" means "the power to know what should be done", svatantryam" means "not being dependent on others", "kausalam" means "three kinds of expertise: 1. expertise in performing activities, 2. expertise in perfoming two or more actions simultaneously, and 3. expertise in arts and playful activities", "kanti" means handsomeness, which is of four kinds: 1. handsomeness of the various parts of the body, including the hands and other parts of the body, 2. handsomeness of color, taste, fragrance, touch, and sound, which means whatever touches His lips or feet becomes sweet like nectar, 3. handsomeness of the prime of youth, and 4. handsomeness that charms the hearts of beautiful women", "dhairyam" means "not becoming agitated", "mardavam" means "having a heart that melts with love", "pragalbhyam" means "brilliant genius, which brings eloquent speech", "prasraya" means humbleness, which brings shyness, appropriate respect for all others, and speaking affectionate words", "silam" means "good character, which makes one inclined to take shelter of a saintly devotee", "sahah" means sharpness of intellect", "ojah" means expert skill of the knowledge-acquiring senses", balam" means "expert skill of the working senses", "bhaga" means "good fortune, which is of three kinds: 1. good fortune in enjoying sense objects, 2. good fortune in being happy, and 3. good fortune in possessing all wealth and opulence", "gambhiryam" means "being the reservoir of unknowable secrets", "sthairyam" means being not fickle", "astikyam" means "seeing through the eyes of the scriptures", "kirti" means being famous for one's virtues", "mana" means being worshipable, and "anahankrti" means freedom from pride". Here the word "ca" (and) hints that the Lord also has the qualities of being the well-wisher of the brahmanas, being served by all perfections, and having an eternal form filled with transcendental bliss. In this way the Supreme Lord has many glorious qualities (maha-gunah prarthya mahattvam icchadbhih). Lord Krsna has all other good qualities in the highest degree. All other persons have these good qualities only slightly and for a brief time. However Lord Krsna has them in fullness eternally. This is confirmed by the following words of srila Suta Gosvami in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.26:

nityam niriksamananam yad api dvarakaukasam na vitrypanti hi drsah sriyo dhamangam acyutam

"The inhabitants of Dvaraka were regularly accustomed to look upon the reservoir of all beauty, the infallible Lord, yet they were never satiated."

In this way the Supreme Lord's transcendental qualities are eternal (nityah). They never become diminished (na viyanti). The Lord's qualities are eternally present in His transcendental form. Some other (anye ca) qualities of the Lord, qualities the individual souls cannot attain include: 1. the power to attain anything simply by desiring it, 2. complete control over a host of inconceivable potencies, 3. being the sole resting place of perfect goodness, 4. being the protector of the worlds, 5. giving residence in the spiritual world to the enemies He kills, 6. being attractive to all liberated souls, 7. beinsg served by Brahma, siva, and all the demigods and sages, 8. having a spiritual form in which inconceivable transcendental poetncies reside, 9. having handsomeness and other glorious virtues that are limitless and eternally new and fresh, 10. in His forms as the purusa-avataras controlling the world of maya, 11. being the creator, maintainer, and destroyer of the material worlds, 12. being the seed from which the guna-avataras and other avataras have come, 13. the pores of whise body are the resting place of numberless material universes, 14. whose original form as the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan) has all inconceivable potencies and all the transcendental qualities of Vasudeva, Narayana, and His other expansions, 15. in His original form as Lord Krsna He gives liberation and devotional service to the enemies He kills, 16. whose form and other features have a wonderful sweetness, 17. association with Him brings perfect bliss, a bliss beyond anything the material senses or mind can know. srimad-Bhagavatam 1.16.27-30 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by the earth-goddess to Dharma.

That the Supreme Lord's transcendental qualities are limitless is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.7):

gunatmanas te 'pi gunan vimatum hitavatirnasya ka isire 'sya. . .

"In time, great scientists may be able to count all the atoms of the universe, all the stars and planets in the sky, and all the particles of snow, but who among them can count the unlimited transcendental qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead?"

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by the demigod Brahma to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 118

By the Lord's inconceivable poetncy even mutually contradictory qualities reside within Him. This is known on thw authority of scripture. In Vedanta-sutra (2.1.27) it is said:

srutes tui sabda-mulatvat

"The nature of the Supreme is known only by the revelation of scripture."

Some of these mutually contradictory features of the Lord are seen in the words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.43.17):

mallanam asanih. . .

"The various groups of people in the arena ragarded Krsna in different ways when He entered it with His elder brother. The wrestlers saw Krsna as a lightning bolt, the men of Mathura as the best of males, the women as Cupid in person, the cowherd men as their relative, the impious rulers as a chastiser, His parents as their child, the King of thwe Bhojas as death, the unintelligent as the Supreme Lord's universal form, the yogis as the Absolute Truth, and the Vrsnis as their supreme worshipable Deity."

The inconceivable power of thw Lord is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.7.7):

sisor analpaka-pravala-mrdv-anghri-hatam vyavartata. . .

"Lord sri Krsna was lying down underneath the handcart in one corner of the courtyard, and although His little legs were as soft as leaves, when He struck the cart with His legs, it turned over violently and collapsed. The wheels separated from the axle, the hubs and spokes fell apart, and the pole of the handcart broke. On the cart there were many little utensils made of various metals, and all of them scattered hither and thither."

Lord Krsna's transcendental gentleness sis described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.16):

kvacit pallava-talpesu niyuddha-srama-karsitah. . .

"Sometimes Lord Krsna grew tired from fighting and lay down at the base of a tree, resting upon a bed made of soft twigs and buds and using the lap of a cowherd friend as His pillow."

The Supreme Lord's gentleness is also seen in the pastime where Goddess Laksmi stopped Him from eating the inferior rice Sudama Vipra brought. Lord Krsna's transcendental gentleness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.7):

vala-vyajanam adaya ratna-dandam sakhi-karat

"From her maidservant's hand Goddess Rukmini took a yak-hair fan with a jeweled handle, and then she began to worship her master by fanning Him."

The pastime where Goddess Laksmi stopped Lord Krsna from eating Sudama Vipra's rice is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.81.10):

iti mustim. . . tat-para

"After saying this, the Supreme Lord ate one plamful and was about to eat a second when the devoted goddess Rukmini took hold of His hand."

In this pastime Lord Krsna thought: "By My mercy I have already given a little of My opulences to this devotee. Why should I continue to eat this inferior rice?" Even if He breaks the rules of religion, the Supreme Lord is never sinful or impious. This is seen in the following words of Chandogya Upanisad (8.1.5):

ayam atmapahata-papma

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is always free from sin."

This truth is also confirmed by the following words of Kurma Purana:

aisvarya-yogad bhagavan viruddhartho 'bhidhiyate tathapi dosah parame naivaharyah samantatah

"Even if He breaks the rules of religion, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is always sinless, for He is the all-opulent supreme master."

The idea that among the Supreme lord's qualities there are some faults is refuted in the following passage of srimad- Bhagavatam (8.8.18-19):

tatas tato nupura-valgu-sijitair visarpati hema-lateva sa babhau

"As she (the goddess of fortune) walked here and there, her ankle-bells jingling softly, she appeared like a creeper of gold.

vilokayanti niravadyam atmanah padam dhruvam cavyabhicari-sad-gunam gandharva-siddhasura-yaksa-carana- traipistapeyadisu nanvavindata

"While walking among the Gandharvas, Yaksas, asuras, Siddhas, Caranas, and denizens of heaven, Laksmi-devi, the goddess of fortune, was scrutinizingly examining them, but could not find anyone naturally endowed with all good qualities. None of them was devoid of faults, and therefore she could not take shelter of any of them."

In this passage the word "sa" (she) refers to Goddess Laksmi, "padam" means "shelter", dhruvam" means "eternal", and "avyabhicari- sad-gunam" means "the person who has eternal good qualities".

Anuccheda 119

The passage continues in the next three verses of srimad- Bhagavatam (8.8.20-22):

nunam tapo yasya na manyu-nirjayo janam kvacit tac ca na sanga-varjitam kascin mahams tasya na kama-nirjayah sa isvarah kim parato vyapasrayah

"The goddess of fortune, examining the assembly, thought in this way: Someone who has undergone great austerity has not yet conquered anger. Someone possesses knowledge, but he has not conquered material desires. Someone is a very great personality, but he cannot conquer lusty desires. Even a great personality depends on something else. How, then, can he be the supreme controller?

dharmah kvacit tatra na bhuta-sauhrdam tyagah kvacit tatra na mukti-karanam viryam na pumso 'sty aja-vega-niskrtam na hi dvitiyo guna-sanga-varjitah

"Someone may possess full knowledge of religion but still not be kind to all living entities. In someone, whether human of demigod, there may be renunciation, but that is not the cause of liberation. Someone may possess great power and yet be unable to check the power of eternal time. Someone else may have renounced attachment to the material world, yet het cannot compare to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. TRherefore no one is completely freed from the influence of the material modes of nature.

kvacic cirayur na hi sila-mangalam kvacit tad apy asti na vedyam ayusah yatrobhayam kutra ca so 'py amangalah sumangalah kasca na kanksate hi mam

"Someone may have longevity but not have auspiciousness or good behavior. Someone may have both auspiciousness and good behavior, but the duration of his life is not fixed. Although such demigods as Lord siva have eternal life, they have inauspicious habits like living in crematoriums. And even if others are well qualified in all respects, they are not devotees of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In this passage it is seen that no one possesses austerity or any other virtue in the same degree as ther Supreme Personality of Godhead possesses them. This is seen in the words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.16.30) quoted above. The saintly devotees may possess austerity and the other virtues, but they possess them only imperfectly and in relatively small quantities. Thus they are not equal to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In srimad-Bhagavatam 8.8.20-22 the word "yasya" refers to Durvasa and the sages, "kascid" refers to sukra and his followers and also to Brahma, Soma, and their followers, "parato vyapasrayah" refers to Indra and his followers, "sa kim isvarah kvacit na bhuta-sauhrdam" refers to Parasurama and other sages like Him, "na mukti-karanam tyagah" refers to Maharaja sibi and others like him, and "pumsah viryam asti" refers to Karttavirya and others like him. The words "aja-vega-niskrtam" mean "not free of the power of time", "na hi dvitiyo guna-sanga-varjitah" mean "aside from Lord Krsna, no one, not even the four Kumaras and the great atmarama sages, is completely freed from the influence of the material modes of nature, for their peacefulness, self-control, and other virtues are all made of the illusory potency maya". Even Lord siva is not free of the material modes of nature. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.88.3):

sivah sakti-yutah sasvat tri-lingo guna-samvrtah vaikarikas taijasas ca tamasas cety aham tridha

"Lord siva is always united with his personal energy, the material nature. Manifesting himself in three features in response the the entreaties of nature's three modes, he thus embodies the threefold principle of material ego in goodness, passion, and ignorance."

Only Lord Visnu is free of the material modes. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.88.5):

harir hi nirgunah saksat purusah prakrteh parah sa sarva-drg upadrasta tam bhajan nirguno bhavet

"Lord Hari, however, has no connection with the material modes. He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the all-seeing eternal witness, who is transcendental to material nature. One who worships Him becomes similarly free from the material modes."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 8.8.20-22 Godedess Laksmi rejects even Lord siva. The words "kvacin cirayuh" mean Markandeya and other sages may live a long life". The words "sila-mangala" are explained by srila sridhara Svami in these words of his commentary: "Good character means sense-control". Hoewever, even if a person controls his senses, if he is not auspicious (mangala) he is not honored in the world. Some persons like Maya Danava and others may live long lives, but they have neither good character nor auspiciousness. This is because they are demons. Others, like Bali Maharaja, may have both good character and auspiciousness, but they do not have long lives, for they are subject to death. Lord siva is auspicious by nature, and He also lives eterbnally. Still, His activities seem externally to be inauspicious, for He lives in a cermatiroum and engages in seemingly inauspicious activities. However, Lord Visnu has limitless good qualities. He is very auspicious. Indeed,is form is a great treasure-house of all that is auspicious. In this passage Goddess Laksmi laments: "Becuase His form is filled with all virtues and opulences, Lord Visnu does not desire me, even though my form is filled with transcendental bliss and I am the giver of all wealth and opuelnces. How can He not desire me, even though I love Him so dearly? Even though He is supremely auspicious, He does not desire me."

The supremely blissful Supreme Personality of Godhead has two kinds of internal potency: 1. the potency of His linmitless qualities and opulences, and 2. the internal potency that is His own body. This second potency is manifest only in His own transcendental body. The first potency is manifest outside His body and is known by the name Goddess Laksmi. The form of Goddess Laksmi is thus the origin of all qualities and opulences. Becuase He is always perfect and complete, the blissful Supreme Personality of Godhead is not different from His qualities and opulences, and therefore these two opulences are not separate from each other. Also, the Lord is controlled by the love His devotees bear for Him. This is certainly true in relation to oddess Lsksmi, who loves Him dearly. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (8.8.23):

evam vimrsyavyabhicari-sad-gunair varam nijaikasrayatayagunasrayam vavre varam sarva-gunair apeksitam rama mukundam nirapeksam ipsitam

"In this way, after full deliberation, the goddess of fortune accepted Mukunda as her husband because although He is independent and not in want of her, He possesses all transcendental qualities and mystic powers and is therefore the most desirable."

In this verse the words "avyabhicari-sad-gunaih" mean "supreme with qualities that have no defect", nijaikasrayataya" means "without being dependent on anyone", and "gunasrayam" means "He whose qualities are perfect". In this way the Lord's qualities are described. The words "sarva-gunair apeksitam nirapeksam ipsitam" mean "because His nature is full of transcendental bliss, the Supreme Personality of Godhead has all good qualities. Therefore Goddess Laksmi chose Him." Thisverse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

No fault or defect is present in any of the Supreme Lord's qualities, for their presence would contradict what was previously said of the Lord's qualities. Compassiona is different from the other opulences of the Lord, for compassion means contact with the sufferings present in the material world, as for example the sufferings the non-devotees feel in the hellish worlds. This is so because material sufferings can never touch the Supreme Lord's heart, as has already been explained in the Paramatma-sandarbha. The sufferings the Pandavas and others feel because of separation from Lord Krsna are not material sufferings. Those sufferings are part of sacari-bhava in the reasas of devotional service. In them devotee humbly thinks he is not worthy of the Lord's mercy. This kind of sacari-bhava increases the devotees' love for the Lord. An example of this kind of humbleness is seen in these words spoken by Queen Kunti in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.8.20):

bhakti-yoga-vidhanartham katham pasyema hi striyah

"You Yourself descend to propagate the transcendental science of devotional service unto the hearts of the advanced transcendentalists and mental speculators, who are purified by being able to discriminate between matter and spirit. How, then, can we women know You perfectly?"

Sometimes the Lord personally acts to creeate humbleness in His devotee. This is seen in the following words spoken by the Supreme Lord in srimad-Bhagavatam (8.22.24):

brahman yam anugrhnami tad-viso vidhunomy aham

"My dear lord Brahma, because of material opulence a foolish person becomes dull-witted and mad. Thus he has no respect for anyone within the three worlds and defies even My authority. To such a person I show special favor by first taking away all his possessions."

An example of a prayer spoken by such humble devotees is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.17.24):

su-dustaran nah svan pahi. . .na saknumas tvac-caranam santyaktum. . .

"O Lord, we are Your true friends and devotees. Please protect us from this insurmountable fire of death. We can never give up Your lotus feet, which drive away all fear."

Another example is seen in these words spoken by Queen Kunti in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.8.25):

vipadah santu tah sasvat. . .

"I wish that all those calamities would happen again and again so that we could see You again and again, for seeing You means that we will no longer see repeated births and deaths."

That the Lord deliberately puts the devotee in distress to increase the devotee's devotion is seen in these words spoken by Lord Krsna Himself in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.20):

naham tu sakhyo bhajato 'pi. . .

"But the reason I do not immediately reciprocate the affection of living beings even when they worship Me, O gopis, is that I want to intensify their loving devotion. They then become like a poor man who has gained some wealth and then lost it, and who thus becomes so anxious about it that he can think of nothing else."

In these ways the the scriptures explain that the devotees' humbleness and distress increases their devotion for the Lord. The demigod Brahma once kidnapped the cowherd boys of Vraja and made them unconscious. After one year of unconsciousness the cowehrd boys awakened and saw Lord Krsna reeturning from looking for the calves. Seeing Lord Krsna, their loev (prema-rasa) for Him increased. At that time they spoke these words recorded in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.45):

ucus ca suhrdah krsnam sv-agatam te 'ti-ramhasa naiko 'py abhoji kavala ehiitah sadhu bhujyatam

"They began to laugh, thinking that Krsna was not willing to leave their lunchtime company. They were very jubilant and invited Him, `Dear friend Krsna, You have come back so quickly! All right, we have not as yet begun our lunch, not even taken one morsel of food. So please come and join us and let us eat together.' "

In the description of the pastime of accepting food from the yajna-patnis it is said that Lord Krsna attracts and delights the devotees. It is said in that passage of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.36):

bhajate tadrsih krida yah srutva tat-paro bhavet

"When the Lord assumes a humanlike body to show mercy to His devotees, He engages in such pastimes as will attract those who hear about them to become dedicated to Him."

The all-powerful Supreme Personality of Godhead is always faultless, regardless of what action He performs. This is not so for others. For example, the sages said to the dmeigod Brahma in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.12.30-31):

naitat purvaih krtam tvad ye na karisyanti capare yas tvam duhitaram gaccher anigrhyangajam prabhuh tejiyasam api hy etan na suslokyam jagad-guro

"O father, this performance in which you are endeavoring to complicate yourself was never attempted by any other Brahma, nor by anyone else, nor by you in previous kalpas, nor will anyone dare to attempt in in the future. You are the supreme being in the universe, so how is it that you want to have sex with your daughter and cannot control your desire? "Even though you are the most powerful being, this act does not suit you because your character is followed for spiritual improvement by the people in general."

Here the words "tejiyasam api" mean "it is not right, even for very powerful persons". Lord Krsna gave the following advice to the yaja-patnis in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.32):

na pritaye 'nuragaya hy anga-sango nrnam iha tan mano mayi yujana aciran mam avapsyatha

"For you to remain in My bodily association would certainly not please people in this world, nor would it be the best way for you to increase your love for Me. Rather, you should fix your minds on Me, and very soon you will achieve Me."

Here Lord Krsna says: "If yhou stayed in this birth in brahmana families and personally associated with Me and served Me directly, then the people of this world who saw or heard of your activities would not be pleased. Therefore you should not associate with Me directly. However, very soon, in your next birth, you will attain My association." These words were spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to the yaja-patnis.

Anuccheda 122

In this way is manifest the superficial appearance that the Supreme Lord is not the friend and well-wisher of His devotee. The Lords devotees are of two kinds: 1. the devotees who are not intimate associates of the Lord (durastha), and 2. the Lord's personal associates (parikara). To benefit the durastha devotees, the Supreme Lord manifests His feature as their friend and well-wisher. In this way He is known as brahmanya (the friend of the brahmanas) and many other like names also. This feature of the Lord is seen in His pastime orf protecting Maharaja Ambarisa and in manynother pastimes also. However, this feature of being the devotee's friend and well-wisher is not always seen in the Lord's dealings with His personal associates. This is seen in the pastime of the curse placed on Jaya and Vijaya and in many other pastimes also. It is also seen in the mischievous activities of Durvasa Muni described in the Skanda Purana, Dvaraka-mahatmya. However, in both situations, ehether the Lord seems to be the devotee's friend or seems not to be the devotee's friend, the Lord is in truth always the devotee's friend and well-wisher. The Supreme Lord considers the devotees who are not His personal associates to be like His friends or kisnmen. However, the devotees who are His personal associates the Lord considers to be like His own self. This is described by the Supreme Lord in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.4.63):

aham bhakta-paradhinah. . .

"I am completely under the control of my devotees. Indeed, I am not at all independent. Because my devotees are completely devoid of material desires, I sit only within the cores of their hearts. What to speak of My devotee, even those who are devotees of My devotee are very dear to Me."

The Supreme Lord again says His personal associates are like Himself in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.16.4):

tad dhity atma-krtam manye yat sva-pumbhir asat-krtah

"The disrespect shown by My attendants has actually been displayed by Me because the doormen are My servitors. I take this to be an offense by Myself. Therefore I seek your forgiveness for the incident that has arisen."

In this wya the Supreme Lord is the friend and well-wisher of His devotee. The Lord melts with love for His devotee. Indeed, He is controlled by His devotee's love. In this way the nature of the Lortd's love for His devotees is revealed. The Lord's love is prominent amongst the uddipanas (impetuses to the rasas of ecstatic love). His love is a source of great wonder. The Lord melts with love (premardra) for His devotees. Melting with love is included among the anubhavas known as udbhasvaras.. Melting with love is described in these owrds of srimad- Bhagavatam (4.20.19-21):

bhagavan atha visvatma prthunopahrtarhanah samujjihanaya bhaktya grhita-czranambujah

"King Prthu abundantly worshiped the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who was so merciful to him. While worshiping the lotus feet of the Lord, Prthu Maharaja gradually increased his ecstasy in devotional service.

prasthanabhimukho 'py enam anugraha-vilambitah pasyan padma-palasakso na pratasthe suhrt satam

"The Lord was just about to leave, but because He was so greatly inclined toward the behavior of King Prthu, He did not depart. Seeing the behavior of Maharaja Prthu with His lotus eyes, He was detained because He is always the well-wisher of His devotees.

sa adi-rajo racitajalir harim vilokitum nasakad asru-locanah. . .

"The original king, Maharaja Prthu, his eyes full of tears and his voice faltering and choked up, could not see the Lord very distinctly nor speak to address the Lord in any way.He simply embraced the Lord within his heart and remained standing in that way with folded hands."

The meaning of these verses is clear. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Impelled by sattvika-bhava, the Supreme Personality of Godhead also melts with devotion. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.21.38-39):

yasmin bhagavato netran nyapatann asru-bindavah krpaya samparitasya prapanne 'rpitaya bhrsam tad vai bindusaro nama. . .

"The holy lake Bindu-sarovara, flooded by the waters of the River Sarasvati, was resorted to by hosts of eminent sages. Its holy water was not only auspicious but as sweet as nectar. Itwas called Bindu-sarovara because drops of tears had fallen there from the eyes of the Lord, who was overwhelmed by extreme compassion for the sage who had sought His protection."

In these verses the word "bhagavatah" means of the Supreme Personality of Godhead in His incarnation named sukla", and "prapanne" means "for the devotee named sri Kardama Muni". This verse was spoken by sri Maitreya.

The Supreme Lord's melting weith love for His gopi beloveds is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.20):

tasam rati-viharena srantanam vadanani sah pramrjat karunah premna santamenanga panina

"Seeing that the gopis were fatigued from conjugal enjoyment, my dear King, merciful Krsna lovingly wiped their faces with His comforting hand."

In this verse the word "tasam" means "of the gopis", and "premnah karunah" means "with tears in His eyes". These loving feelings of sattvika-bhava are also described in these words of Visnu Purana (5.13.54):

gopi-kapola-samslesam abhipatya harer bhujau pulakodgama-sasyaya svedambu-ghanatam gatau

"With His two hands Lord Krsna wiped the perspiration from the gopis' cheeks. The hairs of His arms stood erect with ecstasy. His hairs were like many plants growing luxuriantly in the monsoon rains of the gopis' perspiration."

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.20 quoted here was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

As He is controlled by His devotees' love, so the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also controlled by His devotees' pure devotion. This is described in the following prose passage of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.24.27):

yasya bhagavan svayam akhila-jagad-gurur narayano dvari gada-panir avatisthate nija-jananukampita-hrdayah. . .

"My dear King, how shall I glorify the character of Bali Maharaja? The Supreme Personality of Godhead, the master of the three worlds, who is most compassionate to His own devotee, stands with club in hand at Bali Maharaja's door."

Here the word "yasya" (of whom) refers to Bali Maharaja. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 128

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is controlled by the love of the devotees in vatsalya-rasa is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.11.7):

gopibhih stobhito 'nrtyad bhagavan balavat kvacit udgayati kvacin mugdhas tad-vaso daru-yantravat

"The gopis would say, `If You dance, my dear Krsna, ou half a sweetmeat.' By saying these words or by clapping their hands, all the gopis encouraged Krsna in different ways. At such times, although He was the supremely powerful Personality of Godhead, He would smile and dance according to their desire, as if He were a wooden doll in their hands. Sometimes He would sing very loudly, at their bidding. In this way Krsna came completely under the control of the gopis."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is controlled by the love of the devotees in sakhya-rasa is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.16.16):

sarathya-parasada-sevana-sakhya-dautya- virasananugamana-stavana-pranaman snigdhesu pandusu jagat-pranatim ca visnor bhaktim karoti nr-patis caranaravinde

"Maharaja Pariksit heard that out of His causeless mercy Lord Krsna (Visnu), who is universally obeyed, rendered all kinds of service to the malleable sons of Pandu by accepting posts ranging from chariot driver to president to messenger, friend, night watchman, etc., according to the will of the Pandavas, obeying them like a servant and offering obeisances like one younger in years. When he heard this, Maharaja Pariksit became overwhelmed with devotion to the lotus feet of the Lord."

This verse means: "Hearing that Lord Visnu, who is universally obeyed, had rendered all kinds of service to the malleable sons of Pandu, service beginning with becoming their chariot driver, Maharaja Pariksit became overwhelmed with devotion to the lotus feet of the Lord." Here "parasadam" means "acceptance of presidency in the assembly", "sevana" means "obeying the desires in the heart", and "virasana" means "staying awake at night and standing guard with a sword in one's hand". This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is controlled by the love of the devotees in srngara-rasa is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.22):

na paraye 'ham niravadya-samyujam sva-sadhu-krtyam vibudhayusapi vah ya mabhajan durjara-geha-srnkhalah samvrscya tad vah pratiyatu sadhuna

"I am not able to repay My debt for your spotless service, even within a lifetime of Brahma. Your connection with Me is beyond reproach. You have worshiped Me, cutting off all domestic ties, which are difficult to break. Therefore please let your own glorious deeds be your compensation."

In the verse the word "niravadya" means pure because their nature and actions are both opure", samyujam" menas "contact with them", "vah sva-sadhu-krtyam" means "supremely blissful devotional service to Me", and "na paraye" means "I have not power to repay". Someone may ask: "Why does the Lord have not power to repay the gopis?" The answer is given in the words "I could not repay you even within a lifetime of Brahma." The Lord says: "Your love for Me is so great that for My sake you disobeyed even the rules of custom and religion." This the Lord said in the third and fourth lines of this verse. There the Lord said: "Please let your own glorious deeds be your compensation. I am always in debt to you." This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Melting with love for His devotee, to please His devotee the Supreme Lord sometimes acts ina way contrary to ordinary good behavior. In this way the Lord becomes glorious, decorated with the crest jewel of all transcendental virtues. An example of such contrary behavior by the Lord is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.37):

sva-nigamam apahaya mat-pratijam rtam adhikartum. . .

"Fulfilling my desire and sacrificing His own promise, He got down from the chariot, took up its wheel, and ran towards me hurriedly, just as a lion goes to kill an elephant. He even dropped His outer garment on the way."

"He who hates My devotees hates Me. He who loves My devotees loves Me."

Another example is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.32-34):

dhanam harata gopanam. . . . . .evam vikatthamane vai kamse prakupito 'vyayah

"Kamsa said: Drive the two wicked sons of Vasudeva out of the city! Confiscate the cowherds' property and arrest that fool Nanda! "Kill that most evil fool Vasudeva! And also kill my father, Ugrasena, along with his followers, who have all sided with our enemies! "As Kamsa thus raved so audaciously, the infallible Lord Krsna became intensely angry."

Sometimes the Supreme Lord acts in a way contrary to the virtue of being always satisfied. For example, in the Hari- bhakti-sudhodaya (14.28) Lord Krsna declares:

api me purna-kamasya. . .

"With great love My devotees see Me and talk with Me. The happiness I feel by associating with My devotees is newer and newer at every moment. Although My desires are always fulfilled, My desire to associate with My devotees never ends."

Another example of the Supreme Lord's not being satisfied is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.5-6):

tam ankam arudham apayayat stanam sneha-snutam sa-smitam iksati mukham atrptam utsrjya. . .jaghasa haiyangavam antaram gatah

"Mother Yasoda then embraced Krsna, allowed Him to sit down on her lap, and began to look upon the face of the Lord with great love and affection. Because of her intense affection, milk was flowing from her breast. But when she saw that the milk pan on the oven was boiling over, she immediately left her son to take care of the overflowing milk, although the child was not yet fully satisfied with drinking the milk of His mother's breast." "Being very angry and biting His reddish lips with His teeth, Krsna, with false tears in His eyes, broke the container of yogurt with a piece of stone. Then He entered a room and began to eat the freshly churned butter in a solitary place."

In these verses the word "rahah" means "in these confidential pastimes". These srimad-Bhagavatam verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 135

Sometimes the Supreme Lord acts in a way contrary to the virtue of being honest and straightforward. For example, bceomign allies with Hanuman, Sugriva, and others, three Lord was not straughtforward in His dealings with Vali and others. In these situations the Lord's dishonesty is all-auspicious. This is seen in the following example:

krodho 'pi devasya varena tulyah

"The Supreme Lord's anger is as auspicious as His blessing."

The Supreme Lord may sometimes seem to be lusty in His dealings with His consorts. However, what seems to be lust on His part is actually the purest love. This is seen in the following explanation of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.35):

sa esa nara-loke 'sminn avatirnah sva-mayaya reme stri-ratna-kutastho bhagavan prakrto yatha

"That Supreme Personality of Godhead sri Krsna, out of His causeless mercy, appeared on this planet by His internal potency and enjoyed Himself amongst competent women as if He were engaging in mundane affairs."

In this verse the word "sva-mayaya" mean with mercy to His devotees, mercy that means love, the love that makes Him wish to please them", "avatirnah" means "all the incarnations of the Lord descend to the material world because They are impelled by that mercy and love", stri-ratna-kutasthah" means "women who with their great love bring the Lord under their control", "reme" means "because of that love the lord enjoys pastimes with them. He does not enjoy pastimes with them because of the lust that is so well-known in the material world. Here the word ratna" indicates that these women are very qualified to associate with the Lord. It indicates that they have great love for Him. Although the Lord's pastimes with these women is very different from anything in the material world, these pastimes superifically seem to be like the activities of the material world. This is described here by the words "prakrto yatha". Thus, although the Lord's pastimes may seem to be like ordinary activities of the material world, the idea that He is impelled by lust is here refuted.

That the Supreme Lord's pastimes with His affectionate consorts are completely different from the activities of material lust is again confirmed in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.36):

uddama-bhava-pisunamala-valgu-hasa- vridavaloka-nihato madano 'pi yasam sammuhya capam ajahat pramadottamas ta yasyendriyam vimathitum kuhakair na sekuh

"Although the queens' beautiful smiles and furtive glances were all spotless and exciting, and although they could conquer Cupid himself by making him give up his bow in frustration, and although even the tolerant siva could fall victim to them, still, despite all their magical feats and attractions, they could not agitate the senses of the Lord."

Here the word "madanah" means "the material demigod Cupid", "hasa-vridavaloka" means with affectionate, pure, and charming glances", and -nihatah" means "conquered by the power of the weapon that is the glory of those glances".The words sammuhya capam ajahat" are explained by these words:

"A beautiful girl's eyebrows are like a vine or like an archer's bow. Her sidelong glances are like waves, or like arrows shot from the bow of her eyebrows."

All of this means that the demigod Cupid has no power to use his weapons against the Supreme Lord's consorts. The word pramadottamah" here means "women filled with the bliss of the most exalted spiritual love". If some women, not possessing this exalted spiritual love, try to agitate the Supreme Lord's senses with sidelong glances or other kinds of trickery used in this world, these women will certainly fail. This is described here in the words "yasyendriyam vimathitum kuhakair na sekuh". This means that the Lord's desires become awakened only by pure spiritual love, and the Lord's activities are very different from those of an ordinary lusty man of this world.

Materialistic persons cannot understand this truth of the Lord. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.37):

tam ayam manyate loko hy asangam api sanginam atmaupamyena manujam vyaprnvanam yato 'budhah

"The common materialistic conditioned souls speculate that the Lord is one of them. Out of their ignorance they think that the Lord is affected by matter, although He is unattached."

Here the word "ayam lokah" means: "the people in general", "asaktam api" means "although not attached to the material modes of nature", atmaupamyena manujam vyaprnvanam manyate" means they think the Lord isa lusty material man like themselves", and "yato 'budhah" means "they think in this way because they are not intelligent".

Anuccheda 138

The reason why the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not attached to the material modes is given in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (1.11.38):

etad isanam isasya prakrti-stho 'pi tad-gunaih na yujyate sadatma-sthair yatha buddhis tad-asraya

"This is the divinity of the Personality of Godhead: He is not affected by the qualities of material nature, even though He is in contact with them. Similarly, the devotees who have taken shelter of the Lord do not become influenced by the material qualities."

Here the words "prakrti-stho 'pi tad-gunaih na yujyate sada" mean "even when He descends to the material world the Supreme Personality of Godhead is never affected by the material modes", and "etad isanam isasya" means "that is the opulence of the Supreme Lord". In the last line of this verse an example is given. There the words "na yujyate yatha buddhis tad-asraya" mean "The Supreme Lord's consciousness is not like the consciousness of the conditioneed souls who have taken shelter of the material nature." These words may also be interpreted to mean: "the great devotees who have taken shelter of the Supreme Lord have a consciousness like Lords. Thus, even though they reside in the material world they are not influenced by the modes of material nature".

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is always deatched from matter is confirmed by Uddhava in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (3.3.19):

bhagavan api visvatma loka-veda-pathanugah kaman siseve dvarvatyam asaktah sankhyam asthitah

"Simultaneously, the Personality of Godhead enjoyed life in the city of Dvaraka, strictly in conformity with the Vedic customs of society. He was situated in detachment and knowledge, as enunciated by the Sankhya system of philosophy."

Here someone may ask: "Do the Lord's consorts know the Lord possesses this great opulence of detachment? If they know, then their loev for Him in their confidential pastimes with Him would certainly be broken into pieces." Fearing that someone might spoeak these words, the author of srimad-Bhagavatam explains (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.11.39):

"The simple and delicate women truly thought that Lord sri Krsna, their beloved husband, followed them and was dominated by them. They were unaware of the extent of the glories of their husband, as the atheists are unaware of Him as the supreme controller."

Here the word "isvaram" means "even though He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead", "rahah" means in confidential pastimes", "maudhyat" means bewildered by love for Him", "apramana-vido bhartuh" means "unaware of their husband's true opulences and powers", "strainam canuvratam menire" means "they thought He weas controlled by women, a follower of women". This idea they have is not the truth. Here the words "matayo yatha" mean "this idea was created by the desire born of their love for Him". The Supreme Lord appears before His devotees in the way they desire Him to appear. This is confirmed by the Lord HImself in these words of Bhagavad-gita (4.11):

ye yatha mam. . .

"All of them, as they surrender unto Me, I reward accordingly."

This is also confirmed by the following words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.14.2):

sveccha-mayasya. . .

"O Lord, Your appearance as a cowherd child is for the benefit of the devotees, to fulfill their desires."

srimad-Bhagavatam 1.11.39 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

Anuccheda 141

Here someone may ask: "If He is always spiritually satisfied in Himself, why does the Supreme Personality of Godhead love His wives?" To this question the answer is given: The Lord does not love like an ordinary husband or lover in the material world. His love is completely pure. This truth is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.61.3):

carv-abja-kosa-vadanayata-bahu-netra- sa-prema-hasa-rasa-viksita-valgu-jalpaih
sammohita bhagavato na mano vijetum svair vibhramaih samasakan vanita vibhumnah

"The Supreme Lord's wives were fully enchanted by His lovely, lotuslike face, His long arms, and large eyes, His loving glances imbued with laughter, and His charming talks with them. But with all their charms these ladies could not conquer the mind of the all-powerful Lord."

In this verse the word "sa-prema" means with Lord Krsna's love for His wives". One of the many definitions of the word "vanitah" is given in the following words:

vanita janitatyartha- nuragayam ca yositi

"The word `vanita' means `a very affectionate woman'."

In this verse the Lord's love for His queens is revealed. Still, the Lord's wives did not have the power to conquer the Lord with their charms.

Srila Jiva Gosvami's

Sri Priti-sandarbha

The meaning of this verse is clear. These words were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 133

Sometimes the Supreme Lord acts in a way contrary to the virtue of forgiveness. For example, in the Mahabharata, Lord Krsna declares:

yas tan dvesti sa mam dvesti yas tan anu sa mam anu

"He who hates My devotees hates Me. He who loves My devotees loves Me."

Another example is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.32-34):

dhanam harata gopanam. . . . . .evam vikatthamane vai kamse prakupito 'vyayah

"Kamsa said: Drive the two wicked sons of Vasudeva out of the city! Confiscate the cowherds' property and arrest that fool Nanda! "Kill that most evil fool Vasudeva! And also kill my father, Ugrasena, along with his followers, who have all sided with our enemies! "As Kamsa thus raved so audaciously, the infallible Lord Krsna became intensely angry."

The meaning of these verses is clear. These srimad- Bhagavatam verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 134

Sometimes the Supreme Lord acts in a way contrary to the virtue of being always satisfied. For example, in the Hari- bhakti-sudhodaya (14.28) Lord Krsna declares:

api me purna-kamasya. . .

"With great love My devotees see Me and talk with Me. The happiness I feel by associating with My devotees is newer and newer at every moment. Although My desires are always fulfilled, My desire to associate with My devotees never ends."

Another example of the Supreme Lord's not being satisfied is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.5-6):

tam ankam arudham apayayat stanam sneha-snutam sa-smitam iksati mukham atrptam utsrjya. . .jaghasa haiyangavam antaram gatah

"Mother Yasoda then embraced Krsna, allowed Him to sit down on her lap, and began to look upon the face of the Lord with great love and affection. Because of her intense affection, milk was flowing from her breast. But when she saw that the milk pan on the oven was boiling over, she immediately left her son to take care of the overflowing milk, although the child was not yet fully satisfied with drinking the milk of His mother's breast." "Being very angry and biting His reddish lips with His teeth, Krsna, with false tears in His eyes, broke the container of yogurt with a piece of stone. Then He entered a room and began to eat the freshly churned butter in a solitary place."

In these verses the word "rahah" means "in these confidential pastimes". These srimad-Bhagavatam verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 135

Sometimes the Supreme Lord acts in a way contrary to the virtue of being honest and straightforward. For example, bceomign allies with Hanuman, Sugriva, and others, three Lord was not straughtforward in His dealings with Vali and others. In these situations the Lord's dishonesty is all-auspicious. This is seen in the following example:

krodho 'pi devasya varena tulyah

"The Supreme Lord's anger is as auspicious as His blessing."

The Supreme Lord may sometimes seem to be lusty in His dealings with His consorts. However, what seems to be lust on His part is actually the purest love. This is seen in the following explanation of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.35):

sa esa nara-loke 'sminn avatirnah sva-mayaya reme stri-ratna-kutastho bhagavan prakrto yatha

"That Supreme Personality of Godhead sri Krsna, out of His causeless mercy, appeared on this planet by His internal potency and enjoyed Himself amongst competent women as if He were engaging in mundane affairs."

In this verse the word "sva-mayaya" mean with mercy to His devotees, mercy that means love, the love that makes Him wish to please them", "avatirnah" means "all the incarnations of the Lord descend to the material world because They are impelled by that mercy and love", stri-ratna-kutasthah" means "women who with their great love bring the Lord under their control", "reme" means "because of that love the lord enjoys pastimes with them. He does not enjoy pastimes with them because of the lust that is so well-known in the material world. Here the word ratna" indicates that these women are very qualified to associate with the Lord. It indicates that they have great love for Him. Although the Lord's pastimes with these women is very different from anything in the material world, these pastimes superifically seem to be like the activities of the material world. This is described here by the words "prakrto yatha". Thus, although the Lord's pastimes may seem to be like ordinary activities of the material world, the idea that He is impelled by lust is here refuted.

That the Supreme Lord's pastimes with His affectionate consorts are completely different from the activities of material lust is again confirmed in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.36):

uddama-bhava-pisunamala-valgu-hasa- vridavaloka-nihato madano 'pi yasam sammuhya capam ajahat pramadottamas ta yasyendriyam vimathitum kuhakair na sekuh

"Although the queens' beautiful smiles and furtive glances were all spotless and exciting, and although they could conquer Cupid himself by making him give up his bow in frustration, and although even the tolerant siva could fall victim to them, still, despite all their magical feats and attractions, they could not agitate the senses of the Lord."

Here the word "madanah" means "the material demigod Cupid", "hasa-vridavaloka" means with affectionate, pure, and charming glances", and -nihatah" means "conquered by the power of the weapon that is the glory of those glances".The words sammuhya capam ajahat" are explained by these words:

bhru-pallavam dhanur apanga-tarangitani banah

"A beautiful girl's eyebrows are like a vine or like an archer's bow. Her sidelong glances are like waves, or like arrows shot from the bow of her eyebrows."

All of this means that the demigod Cupid has no power to use his weapons against the Supreme Lord's consorts. The word pramadottamah" here means "women filled with the bliss of the most exalted spiritual love". If some women, not possessing this exalted spiritual love, try to agitate the Supreme Lord's senses with sidelong glances or other kinds of trickery used in this world, these women will certainly fail. This is described here in the words "yasyendriyam vimathitum kuhakair na sekuh". This means that the Lord's desires become awakened only by pure spiritual love, and the Lord's activities are very different from those of an ordinary lusty man of this world.

Materialistic persons cannot understand this truth of the Lord. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.37):

tam ayam manyate loko hy asangam api sanginam atmaupamyena manujam vyaprnvanam yato 'budhah

"The common materialistic conditioned souls speculate that the Lord is one of them. Out of their ignorance they think that the Lord is affected by matter, although He is unattached."

Here the word "ayam lokah" means: "the people in general", "asaktam api" means "although not attached to the material modes of nature", atmaupamyena manujam vyaprnvanam manyate" means they think the Lord isa lusty material man like themselves", and "yato 'budhah" means "they think in this way because they are not intelligent".

Anuccheda 138

The reason why the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not attached to the material modes is given in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (1.11.38):

etad isanam isasya prakrti-stho 'pi tad-gunaih na yujyate sadatma-sthair yatha buddhis tad-asraya

"This is the divinity of the Personality of Godhead: He is not affected by the qualities of material nature, even though He is in contact with them. Similarly, the devotees who have taken shelter of the Lord do not become influenced by the material qualities."

Here the words "prakrti-stho 'pi tad-gunaih na yujyate sada" mean "even when He descends to the material world the Supreme Personality of Godhead is never affected by the material modes", and "etad isanam isasya" means "that is the opulence of the Supreme Lord". In the last line of this verse an example is given. There the words "na yujyate yatha buddhis tad-asraya" mean "The Supreme Lord's consciousness is not like the consciousness of the conditioneed souls who have taken shelter of the material nature." These words may also be interpreted to mean: "the great devotees who have taken shelter of the Supreme Lord have a consciousness like Lords. Thus, even though they reside in the material world they are not influenced by the modes of material nature".

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is always deatched from matter is confirmed by Uddhava in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (3.3.19):

bhagavan api visvatma loka-veda-pathanugah kaman siseve dvarvatyam asaktah sankhyam asthitah

"Simultaneously, the Personality of Godhead enjoyed life in the city of Dvaraka, strictly in conformity with the Vedic customs of society. He was situated in detachment and knowledge, as enunciated by the Sankhya system of philosophy."

Anuccheda 139

Here someone may ask: "Do the Lord's consorts know the Lord possesses this great opulence of detachment? If they know, then their loev for Him in their confidential pastimes with Him would certainly be broken into pieces." Fearing that someone might spoeak these words, the author of srimad-Bhagavatam explains (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.11.39):

tam menire 'bala maudhyat strainam canuvratam rahah apramana-vido bhartur isvaram matayo yatha

"The simple and delicate women truly thought that Lord sri Krsna, their beloved husband, followed them and was dominated by them. They were unaware of the extent of the glories of their husband, as the atheists are unaware of Him as the supreme controller."

Here the word "isvaram" means "even though He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead", "rahah" means in confidential pastimes", "maudhyat" means bewildered by love for Him", "apramana-vido bhartuh" means "unaware of their husband's true opulences and powers", "strainam canuvratam menire" means "they thought He weas controlled by women, a follower of women". This idea they have is not the truth. Here the words "matayo yatha" mean "this idea was created by the desire born of their love for Him". The Supreme Lord appears before His devotees in the way they desire Him to appear. This is confirmed by the Lord HImself in these words of Bhagavad-gita (4.11):

ye yatha mam. . .

"All of them, as they surrender unto Me, I reward accordingly."

This is also confirmed by the following words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.14.2):

svaccha-mayasya. . .

"O Lord, Your appearance as a cowherd child is for the benefit of the devotees, to fulfill their desires."

srimad-Bhagavatam 1.11.39 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

Anuccheda 140

That the Lord's consorts did not understand the truth about their husband is confirmed by the following words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.61.2):

grhad anapagam viksya raja-putryo 'cyutam sthitam prestham nyamamsata svam svam na tat-tattva-vidah striyah

"Because each of these princesses saw that Lord Acyuta never left her palace, each thought herself the Lord's favorite. These women did not understand the truth about Him."

Here the words "prestham nyamamsata svam svam" mean "each one thought herself the most dear", and "na tat-tattva-vidah" means "each one thinking herself the most dear, they did not understand the truth."

Anuccheda 141

Here someone may ask: "If He is always spiritually satisfied in Himself, why does the Supreme Personality of Godhead love His wives?" To this question the answer is given: The Lord does not love like an ordinary husband or lover in the material world. His love is completely pure. This truth is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.61.3):

sammohita bhagavato na mano vijetum svair vibhramaih samasakan vanita vibhumnah

"The Supreme Lord's wives were fully enchanted by His lovely, lotuslike face, His long arms, and large eyes, His loving glances imbued with laughter, and His charming talks with them. But with all their charms these ladies could not conquer the mind of the all-powerful Lord."

In this verse the word "sa-prema" means with Lord Krsna's love for His wives". One of the many definitions of the word "vanitah" is given in the following words:

vanita janitatyartha- nuragayam ca yositi

"The word `vanita' means `a very affectionate woman'."

In this verse the Lord's love for His queens is revealed. Still, the Lord's wives did not have the power to conquer the Lord with their charms.

The charms of the Lord's wives are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.61.4):

smayavaloka-lava-darsita-bhava-hari- bhru-mandala-prahita-saurata-mantra-saundaih patnyas tu sodasa-sahasram ananga-banair yasyendriyam vimathitum karanair na sekuh

"The arched eyebrows of these sixteen-thousand queens enchantingly expressed those ladies' secret intentions through coyly smiling sidelong glances. Thus their eyebrows boldly set forth conjugal messages. Yet even with these arrows of Cupid, and with other means as well, they could not agitate Lord Krsna's senses."

Even with flirting arrows of Cupid they could not agitate the Lord. Here the word "smaya" means "smiling", "bhava" means "intention", "bhru- mandala-prahita" means "sent from the eyebrows", saurata-mantra" means "mantras of love", and saundaih" means "bold". This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 143

Describing Lord Ramacandra's pastimes, srimad-Bhagavatam (9.10.11) explains:

stri-sanginam gatim iti prathayams cakara

"Lord Ramacandra showed by His personal example the condition of a person attached to women."

These words mean: "He showed by His personal example the condition of a person attached to women." It is also said in that chapter of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.10.55):

premanuvrttya silena prasrayavanata sati bhiya hriya ca bhava-jna bhartuh sitaharan manah

"Mother Sita was very submissive, faithful, shy, and chaste, always understanding the attitude of her husband. Thus by her character and her love and service she completely attracted the mind of the Lord."

It is said in the following chapter of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.11.16):

tac chrutva bhagavan ramo rundhann api dhiya sucah smarams tasya gunams tams tan nasaknod roddhum isvarah

"After hearing the news of Mother Sita's entering the earth, the Supreme Personality of Godhead was certainly aggrieved. ASlthough He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, upon remembering the exalted qualities of Mother Sita, He could not check His grief in transcendental love."

The truth is that Lord Rama was actually controlled by Mother Sita's pure spiritual love and devotion. However, He externally acted in the way a lusty conditioned soul acts. He acted in that way to teach renunciation to the people in general. The need for renunciation is described in the next verse of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.11.17):

stri-pum-prasanga etadrk sarvatra trasam-avahah

"The attraction between man and woman, or male and female, always exists everywhere, making everyone always fearful. Such feelings are present even among the controllers like Brahma and Lord siva and is the cause of fear for them, what to speak of others who are attached to household life in this material world."

Thus Lord Rama's pastimes have two purposes (1. to show His love to His devotees and 2. to teach the people in general the path of renunciation). In this way the Lord's pastimes bring auspiciousness to all kinds of people. What seems on the surface to be material lust is in truth spiritual love for His devotee. Thus there is no defect in the Lord's actions. That the Supreme Lord is motivated by spiritual love and not by material lust is described in this verse of (srimad-Bhagavatam (10.59.43):

reme ramabhir nija-kama-samplutah. . .

"Although fully satisfied within Himself, Lord Krsna enjoyed with His pleasing wives, and like an ordinary husband He carried out His household duties.

This truth is also described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.33.25):

sa satya-kamo 'nuratabala-ganah. . .

"Although the gopis were firmly attached to Lord Krsna, whose desires ar always fulfilled, the Lord was not internally affected by any mundane sex desire. Still, to perform His pastimes the Lord took advantage of all those moonlit autumn nights, which inspire poetic descriptions of transcendental affairs."

Although He is equal to everyone, the Lord especially loves His devotees. Lord Krsna Himself confirms these in these words of Bhagavad-gita (9.29):

samo 'ham sarva-bhutesu na me dvesyo 'sti na priyah ye bhajanti tu mam bhaktya mayi te tesu capy aham

"I envy no one, nor am I partial to anyone. I am equal to all. But whoever renders service unto Me in devotion si a friend, is in Me, and I am a friend to Him."

When, in His humanlike form, the Supreme Personality of Godhead enjoys loving pastimes with His devotees, it is sometimes seen that He becomes bewildered, that He is no longer all-knowing. That bewilderment is a virtue on His part. That bewilderment makes His pastimes more sweet. Therefroe, because that bewilderment brings to the wise devotees the bliss of spiritual love, that bewilderment is not a fault. Indeed, the Lord voluntarily accepts that bewilderment for that purpose. An example of the Lord being all-knowing is given in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.25-26):

rakso viditvakhila-bhuta-hrt-sthitah svanam niroddhum bhagavan mano dadhe tavat pravistas tv asurodarantaram

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, sri Krsna, who is situated as antaryami, the Supersoul, in the core of everyone's heart, heard the boys talking among themselves about the artificial python. Unknown to them, it was actually Aghasura, a demon who had appeared as a python. Krsna, knowing this, wanted to forbid His associates to enter the demon's mouth. "In the meantime, while Krsna was considering how to stop them, all the cowherd boys entered the mouth of the demon. The demon, however, did not swallow them, for he was thinking of his own relatives who had been killed by Krsna and was just waiting for Krsna to enter his mouth."

An example of the Lord voluntarily accepting bewilderment is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.16):

tato vatsan adrstvaitya. . .

Thereafter, when Krsna was unable to find the calves, He returned to the bank of the river, but there He was also unable to see the cowherd boys. Thus He began to search for both the calves and the boys, as if He could not understand what had happened."

This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

If He does not wish to be bewildered, the Supreme Personality of Godhead will not be bewildered. This is seen in the description of the magical powers of the demon salva in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.77.30-31):

"How can lamentations, bewilderment, material affection, or fear, all born out of ignorance, be ascibed to the infinte Supreme Lordeee, whose perception, knowledge, and power are all similarly infinite?"

Anuccheda 145

When the Lord does manifest lamentation or other like emotions it is because He is controlled by the love of His devotee. An examples is seen in this description of Lord Ramacandra's pastimes in srimad-Bhagavatam (9.11.16):

tac chrutva bhagavan ramah. . .

"After hearing the news of Mother Sita's entering the earth, the Supreme Personality of Godhead was certainly aggrieved. ASlthough He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, upon remembering the exalted qualities of Mother Sita, He could not check His grief in transcendental love."

Another example is seen in this description of the Lord's pastimes with Sudama brahmana in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.80.19):

sakhyuh priyasya viprarseh. . .

" The lotus-eyed Supreme Lord felt intense ecstasy upon touching the body of His dear friend, the wise brahmana, and thus He shed tears of love."

Another example is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.8.31):

gopy adade tvayi krtagasi dama tavad ya te dasasru-kalilanjana-sambhramaksam vaktram niniya bhaya-bhavanaya sthitasya sa mam vimohayati bhir api yad bibheti

"My dear Krsna, Yasoda took up a rope to bind You when You committed an offense, and Your perturbed eyes overflooded with tears, which washed the mascara from Your eyes. And You were afraid, though fear personified is afraid of You. This sight is bewildering to me."

Here it is said that fear personified is afraid of the Lord. In this way the Lord has all glory, power, opulence, and knowledge. He is never truly afraid. In the same way He is never truly bewildered. Even so, in this pastime fear entered His heart (bhaya-bhavanaya sthitasya). This verse was spoken by Queren Kunti to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

The Supreme Lord is independent only when He is away from His devotees. He Himself affirms in srimad-Bhagavatam (9.4.63):

aham bhakta-paradhinah. . .

"I am completely under the control of My devotees. Indeed, i am not at all independent."

The Supreme Personality of Godhead enjoys great pleasure in His pastime of herding the cows and in other like pastimes. On the pretext of herding the cows He enjoys many blissful pastimes. Something of these pastimes is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.18.2-3):

vraje vikridator evam gopala-cchadma-mayaya grismo namartur abhavan nati-preyan chariirinam

"While Krsna and Balarama were thus enjoying life in Vrndavana in the guise of ordinary cowherd boys, the summer season gradually appeared. This season is not very pleasing to embodied souls."

sa ca vrndavana-gunair vasnta iva laksitah

"Nevertheless, because the Supreme Personality of Godhead was personally staying in Vrndavana along with Balarama, summer manifested the qualities of spring. Such are the features of the land of Vrndavana."

These two verses affirm that in teh Supreme Personality of Godhead's pastimes there is no suffering. In thwse verses the word "chadma" means "pretext", "maya" means "cheating", "Thus, on the pretext of protecting the cows, Krsna and Balarama enjoyed many pastimes. In the morning they left Vraja village and went to the forest on the pretext of herding the cows. In this way they cheated the people of Vraja, for actually They went to the forsest of

Their own will to enjoy pastimes as They liked. That is the meaning here. When They returned home in the evening They enjoyed still other pastimes. In the second of these verses it is affirmed that time never brinsg unhappiness to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Neither does any place bring unhappiness to Him. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

In His childhood pastimes the Supreme Lord abandons His gravity and calmness and becomes restless and mischievous. As was previously described in relation to bewilderment and other like things, this is not a defect for the Lord. The Lord's childhood restlessness and mischief are described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.8.29):

vatsan muncan kvacid asamaye. . .

"Our dear friend Yasoda, your son sometimes comes to our houses before the milking of the cows and releases the calves, and when the master of the house becomes angry, your son merely smiles. Sometimes He devises some process by which He steals palatavble curd, butter, and milk, which He then eats and drinks. When the monkeys assemble, He divides it with them, and when the monkeys have their bellies so full that they won't take any more, He breaks the pots. Sometimes, if He gets no opportunity to stral butter and milk from a house, He will be angry at the householders, and for His revenge He will agitate the small children by pinching them. Then, when they begin crying, Krsna will go away."

The Supreme Personality of Godhead delights His devotees and the people of the world. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.3.20-21):

snigdha-smitavalokena vaca piyusa-kalpaya ca ritre nanavadyena sri-niketena catmana

"He was there in His transcendental body, the residence of the goddess of fortune, with His usual gentle and sweetly smiling face, His nectarean words and His flawless character.

imam lokam amum caiva ramayan sutaram yadun reme ksanadaya datta-ksana-stri-ksana-sauhrdah

"The Lord enjoyed His pastimes, both in this world and in other worlds [higher planets], specifically in the association of the Yadu dynasty. At leisure hours offered by night, He enjoyed the friendship of conjugal love with women."

Here the words "datta-ksana-stri-ksana- sauhrdah" mean "At leisure hours offered by night, He enjoyed a festival of the friendship of conjugal love with women." This verse was spoken by sriman uddhava.

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead delights His devotees is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.37):

evam lila-nara-vapuh. . .

"Thus the Supreme Lord, appearing like a human being to perform His pastimes, imitated the ways of human society. He enjoyed pleasing His cows, cowherd boyfriends, and cowherd girlfriends with His beauty, words, and actions."

What more need be said of how the Lord delights His devotees? However, the demons are not delighted by the Lord or the devotees. The reason why is given in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (4.3.21):

papacyamanena hrdaturendriyah samrddhibhih purusa-buddhi-saksinam akalpa esam adhirodhum anjasa param padam dvesti yathasura harim

"One who is conducted by false ego and thus always distressed, both mentally and sensually. cannot tolerate the opulence of self-realized persons. Being unable to rise to the standard of self-realization, he envies such persons as much as demons envy the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by Lord siva.

Anuccheda 149

Although all transcendental virtues are eternally present in the Supreme Personality of Godhead, to make the Lord's pastimes completely perfect those qualities are sometimes outwardly manifest and sometimes not outwardly manifest. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.10.19):

asruyantasisah satyas tatra tatra dvijeritah nanurupanurupas ca nirgunasya gunatmanah

"It was being heard here and there that the benedictions being paid to Krsna were neither befitting nor unbefitting because they were all for the Absolute, who was now playing the part of a human being."

Here the word "nirgunasya" is originally "nirgata- gunasya" (from whom qualities have gone), but the middle word (gata) is elided. The benedictions here were not befitting because the Supreme Lord, being eternally perfect and complete, never needs to attain anything. However, beause the Lord does is playing the part of a human being (gunatmanah) and because He is the ultimate creator and remover of all qualities, He volumtarily accepted the benedictions, and therefore the benedictions were befitting. Therefore, because the benedictions were true, the Lord accepted them. The Lord sometimes manifests His qualities and sometimes does not manifest them. He is more effulgent than many billions of moons, but to manifest the sweetness of His pastimes, He sometimes appears to be like a great darkness. This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

In different situations the Lord manifests different featires of His character. He has four primary features, beginning with Dhirodatta. Dhirodatta is described in the following words of Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu (2.1.226):

gambhiro vinayi ksanta karunah sudrdha-vratah akatthano gudha-garvo dhirodattah su-sattva-bhrt

"A Dhirodatta is a person who is naturally very grave, gentle, forgiving, merciful, determined, humble, highly qualified, chivalrous, and physically attractive."

Lord Krsna manifested these qualities whne He lifted Govardhana Hilla, conversed with Indra, and enjoyed other like pastimes.

The Lord's feature of dhira-lalita is described in the following words of Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu (2.1.226):

vidagdho nava-tarunyah parihasa-visaradah niscinto dhira-lalitah syat prayah preyasi-vasah

"A person is called dh.ira-lalita id he is naturally very funny, always in full youthfulness, expert in joking and free from all anxieties. Such a dhira-lalita personality is generally found to be domesticated and very submissive to his lover."

Lord Krsna manifested these qualities when He enjoyed pastimes with the goddesslike vraja-gopis.

The Lord's feature of dhira-prasanta is described in the following words of Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu (2.1.226):

sama-prakrtikah klesa- sahanas ca vivecakah vinayadi-gunopeto dhira-santa udiryate

"A person who is very peaceful, forbearing, considerate, and obliging is called dhira-prasanta."

Lord Krsna manifested these qualities when He enjoyed pastimes of associating with and protecting Maharaja Yudhisthira and other devotees.

The Lord's feature of dhiroddhata is described in the following words of Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu (2.1.226):

matsaryavan ahankari mayavi rosanas calah vikatthanas ca vidvadbhir dhiroddhata udahrtah

"A person who is very envious, prud, easily angered, restless, and complacent is called dhiroddhata by learned schoalrs."

Lord Krsna manifested these qualities when He approached the demons. These qualities are manifest to punish the demons. All these different features are couinted among the uddipanas (secondary causes of ecstatic love).

Lord Krsna has two castes: 1. gopa, and 2. ksatriya. His complexion is dark. He is youthful. He has a host of transcendental qualities poets may describe in many metaphors and similies. His associates are gopas and members of other castes also. His pastimes are also counted among the uddipanas (causes of ecstatic love). His pastimes are of two kinds: 1. the pastimes of creation, maintenance, and destruction of the material worlds, pastimes manifested by the maya potency, and 2. His pastimes that are the activities He performs with His own graceful transcendental form, pastimes like smiling, playing, dancing, and fighting, pastimes manifest by His internal potency (svarupa-sakti). His internal potency is so called because it is manifested from the bliss of His own transcendental form. The Lord's internal potency is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (3.9.23):

ramayatma-saktya yad yat karisyati

"The Supreme Lord's activities are always enacted through His internal potency, Rama, or the goddess of fortune."

Because He is the supreme controller, the Lord may act in any way He pleases. His pastimes are described in these words of Vedanta-sutra (2.1.33):

lokavat tu lila-kaivalyam

"Although they seem to be the actions of an ordinary person in the material world, the Lord's pastimes are all transcendental."

To enjoy pastimes the lord sometimes acts as if He were not all-powerful. This is seen in the following owrds of srimad- Bhagavatam (8.6.17):

eka evesvaras tasmin sura - karye suresvarah vihartu-kamas tan aha samudronmathanadibhih

"Although the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the master of the demigods, was capable of performing the activities of the dmmigods by Himself, He wanted to enjoy pastimes in churning the ocean. Therefore He spoke as follows."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"Here the words `eka evesvarah' mean `although He was capable of performing these activities by Himself'. "

The Lord's. different castes and pastimes are described in these words of Visnu-dharmottaraPurana:

yasyam yasyam yada yonau pradurbhavati karanat tad-yoni-sadrsam vatsa tada loke vicestate

"O child, in whatever species of life He incarnates, the Supreme Personality of Godhead acts as a member of that species would act.

samhartum jagad-isanah samartho 'pi tada nrpa tad-yoni-sadrsopayair vadhyan himsati yadava

"O king, O descendent of Maharaja Yadu, although He is always the master of all the worlds, and although He has the power to destroy all the worlds, He acts as a member of that species would act. In those incarnations the Lord acts to kill the demons, demons that deserve death."

srimad-Bhagavatam 8.6.17, quoted in this anuccheda, was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 151

The activities the Supreme Personality of Godhead performs in His transcendental form are of two kinds: 1. activities of power and opulence (aisvarya-cesta), and 2. activities of charming sweetness (madhurya-cesta). Because His devotees love Him so much, the Lord manifests His great sweetness before them. Filled with wonder and bliss, srila sukadeva Gosvami explains in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.19):

evam nigudhatma-gatih sva-mayaya gopatmajatvam caritair vidambayan reme rama-lalita-pada-pallavo gramyaih samam gramya-vad isa-cestitah

"In this way the Supreme Lord, whose soft lotus feet are personally attended by the goddess of fortune, concealed His transcendental opulences by His internal potency and acted like the son of a cowherd. Yet even while enjoying like a village boy in the company of other village residents, He often exhibited feats only God could perform."

This verse means: "The Supreme Lord, whose soft lotus feet are personally attended by the goddess of fortune when He manifests His form as Lord Narayana, stayed amongst the people of Vraja."

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.18.27):

niriksya tad-vapur alam ambare carat. . .haladhara isad atrasat

"When Lord Balarama, who carries the plow weapon, saw the gigantic body of the demon as he moved swiftly in the sky - with his blazing eyes, fiery hair, terrible teeth reaching toward his scowling brows, and an amazing effulgence generated by his armlets, crown and earrings - the Lord seemed to become a little frightened."

In this pastime the Lord's sweetness is manifest because He pretends to be an ordinary human beings. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.15.19 the word "mayaya" means "by My mercy". The Lord acts like an ordinary human beings so the people of Vraja will think He is one of them. The Lord acts in this way because He loves His devotees, as He has declared in

srimad- Bhagavatam (9.4.68):

sadhavo hrdayam mahyam. . .

"The pure devotee is always within the core of My heart, and I am always in the heart of the pure devotee. My devotees do not know anything else but Me, and I do not know anyone else but them."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.15.19 the word nigudhatma-gatih" means "concealing His supreme opulence and acting like an ordinary human being of this world", "gopatmajatvam" means "like the son of an ordinary cowherd man", "caritair vidambayan reme" means "imitating an ordinary gopa's activities, He enjoyed pastimes". The word "rama-lalita-pada-pallavah" indicates that the Lord does not desire to enjoy the pastime where the goddess of fortune serves His feet as much as He desires to enjoy His pastimes with the people of Vraja. The pastimes with Vraja's peoples are described here in the words "gramyaih samam" which mean "pastimes with village boys". The Lord's pastimes with the people of Vraja are His most important pastimes. The pastimes where He displays His power and opulence are not His most important pastimes. An example of these pastimes is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.6):

sanjata-kopah sphuritarunadharam. . .

"Being very angry and biting His reddish lips with His teeth, Krsna, with false tears in His eyes, broke the container of yogurt with a piece of stone. Then He entered a room and began to eat the freshly churned butter in a solitary place."

Even though He was in a solitary place, Lord Krsna still acted like an ordinary child. Another example of Lord Krsna acting as if He were an ordinary human beings is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.27):

tan viksya krsnah. . .

"Krsna saw that all the cowherd boys, who did not know anyone but Him as their Lord, had now gone out of His hand and were helpless, having entered like straws into the fire of the abdomen of Aghasura, who was death personified. It was intolerable for Krsna to be separated from His friends the cowherd boys. Therefore, as if seeing that this had been arranged by His internal potency, Krsna was momentarily struck with wonder and unsure of what to do."

In this pastime Lord Krsna became distressed, thinking that the cowherd boys were now under the control of fate. In this pastime the Lord thought ans acted as if He were an ordinary human being. When they describe these activities of the Lord, the great sages become filled with wonder. In describing the battle with Jarasandha, srila sukadeva Gosvami says in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.50.29):

sthity-udbhavantam bhuvana-trayasya yah samihite 'nanta-gunah sva-lilaya na tasya citram para-paksa-nigrahas tathapi martyanuvidhasya varnyate

"For Him who orchestrates the creation, maintenace, and destruction of the three worlds, and who posseses unlimited spiritual qualities, it is hardly amazing that He subdues an opposing party. Still, when the Lord does so, imitating human behavior, sages glorify His acts."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.15.19 quoted above, the word isa" means "the Lord's pastime potency, which with its own perfect power establishes the extraordinary transcendental pastimes of the Lord, who yearns to taste the nectar of pastimes", and the word "cestitam" means "the Lord's pastimes, which sometimes seem to be oprdinary activities and sometimes are wonderful activities impossible for others to perform". An example of the extraordinary and ordinary nature of the Lord's pastimes is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.69.37):

athovaca hrsikesam naradah prahasann iva yoga-mayodayam viksya manusim iyuso gatim

"Thus having seen this display (where Lord Krsna was present in 16,000 palaces simultaneously) of the Lord's Yogamaya, Narada mildly laughed and then addressed Lord Hrsikesa, who was adopting the bahvior of a human beings."

The extraordinary and ordinary nature of the Lord's pastimes is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.36-37):

yady evam tarhi vyadehity uktah sa bhagavan harih vyadattavyahataisvaryah krida-manuja-balakah

sa tatra dadrse visvam

"Mother Yasoda challenged Krsna, `If You have not eaten earth, then open Your mouth wide.' When challenged by His mother in this way, Krsna, the son of Nanda Maharaja and Yasoda, to exhibit pastimes like a human child, opened His mouth. Although the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krsna, who is full of all opulences, did not disturb His mother's parental affection, His opulence was automatically displayed, for Krsna's opulence is never lost at any stage, but is manifest at the proper time. "When Krsna opened His mouth wide by the order of Mother Yasoda, she saw within His mouth all moving and nonmoving entities, outer space, and all directions, along with mountains, islands, oceans, the surface of the earth, the blowing wind, fire, the moon, and stars. She saw the planetary systems, water, light, air, sky, and creation by transformation of akankara. She also saw the senses, the mind, sense perception, and the three qualities goodness, passion, and ignorance. She saw the time allotted for the living entities, she saw natural instinct and the reactions of karma, and she saw desires and different varieties of bodies, moving and nonmoving. Seeing all these aspects of the cosmic manifestation, along with herself and Vrndavana-dhama, she became doubtful and fearful of her son's nature."

The Supreme Lord's sweetness, as was previously described in these pages, is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.35):

naham bhaksitavan amba sarve mithyabhisamsinah yadi satya-giras tarhi samaksam pasya me mukham

"Lord sri Krsna replied: My dear mother, I have never eaten dirt. All My friends complaining against Me ar liars. If You think they are being truthful, you can directly look in My mouth and examine it."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.8.36 quoted above the word avyahataisvaryah" shows that the Supreme Lord's pastimes are arranged by His pastime potency (lila-sakti). It is His pastime potency that increases Yasaoda's motherly affection for Krsna and fills her with awe and wonder. It is the lord's pastime potency that turns the Lord's anxious lie "I have never eaten dirt" into the truth. In His Damodara pastime as long as the Lord to not agree to be bound with rope, the rope to bind Him was always too short by the measurement of two fingers. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.15):

tad dama. . .

"When mother Yasoda was trying to bind the offending child, she saw that the binding rope was short by a distance the width of two fingers. Thus she brought another rope to join to it."

However, when Mother Yasoda became exhausted, Lord Krsna agrred to be bound. Then the rope was not longer two fingers short. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.18):

sva-matuh svinna-gatraya. . .

"Because of mother Yasoda's hard labor, her whole body became covered with perspiration, and the flowers and comb were falling from her hair. When child Krsna saw His mother thus fatigued, He became merciful to her and agreed to be bound."

In the same way with His merciful glance Lord Krsna revived His gopa friends after they fainted by drinking the poisoned water of Kaliya Lake, and in the same way He swalloed a forest fire and performed many other extraordinary activities. The words "krida-manuja-balakah" (who enjoyed pastimes as if He were a human child) is echoed in these owrds of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.16.68):

krida-manusa-rupinah

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead was manifesting a humanlike form to enjoy His pastimes."

It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.60):

karya-manusah. . .

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead was acting the role of a human being."

In this way srimad-Bhagavatam 10.15.19 is explained. That verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 152

These truths of the Supreme Lord's pastimes, truths discussed in the previous explanations given here, are confirmed by these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.19):

krtva tavantam atmanam yavatir gopa-yositah reme sa bhagavams tabhir atmaramo 'pi lilaya

"Expanding Himself as many times as there were cowherd women to associate with, the Supreme Lord, though self-satisfied, playfully enjoyed their company."

Here the words "rarama abhih" mean "the lOrd enjoyed pastimes with the gopis". It is said in srimad- Bhagavatam (3.15.43):

tasyaravinda-nayanasya. . . cakara tesam sanksobham aksara jusam api citta-tanvoh

"When the breeze carrying the aroma of tulasi leaves from the toes of the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead entered the nostrils of those sages, they experienced a change both in body and in mind, even though they were attached to the impersonal Brahman understanding."

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.19 means: "When the Lord desired to enjoy pastimes with all the the gopis simultaneously, His pastime potency arranged that the Lord be manifested in this way." The word "lilaya" in this verse indicates that this pastimes was arranged by the Lord's pastime potency. The Lord did not make these arrangements Himself. Here the words krtva tavantam atmanam" indicate that the Lord manifested His own form as many times as there were gopis. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

The Lord's pastimes of sweetness are the most exalted of His pastimes. To increasee His enjoyment, the Lord enjoys these wonderful pastimes with many gopis simultaneously.

srila Sukadeva Gosvami, Lord Siva, Lord Brahma, and the sages and demigods know these pastimes of the Lord are the most sweet. Lord Krsna's pastimes are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.11):

ittham satam brahma-sukhanubhutya. . .

"In this way, all the cowherd boys used to play with Krsna, who is the source of the Brahman effulgence for jnanis desiring to merge into that effulgence, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead for devotees who have accepted eternal servitorship, and who for ordinary persons is but another ordinary child. The cowherd boys, having accumulated the results of pious activities for many lives, were able to associate in this way with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. How can one explain their great fortune?"

The Lord's pastimes are again described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.15):

sakra-sarva-paramesthi-purogah. . .kasmalam yayuh. . .

"When Krsna takes His flute to His bimba-red lips and sends forth the tones of the harmonic scale in variegated melodies, Brahma, siva, Indra, and other chief demigods become confused upon hearing the sound. Although they are the most learned authorities, they cannot ascertaint he essence of that music, and thus they bow down their heads and hearts."

In this way the demigods become bewildered by hearing Lord Krsna's flute music.

The devotees attracted to the principles of religion appreciate the sweetness of the Lord enjoying pastimes of preaching the rules of religion in His humanlike (krida-manusa-rupinah) pastimes. These pastimes of preaching are seen in the following words spoken by Lord Krsna in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.69.40):

brahman dharmasya vaktaham karta tad-anumodita tac chiksayan lokam imam asthitah putra ma khidah

"O brahmana, I am the speaker of religion, its performer and sanctioner. I observe religious principles to to each them to the world, My child, so do not be disturbed."

After seeing many of Lord Krsna's pastimees, Narada MUni became filled with bliss. Still, thinking of the duty of precahing the principles of religion, he became worried. Lord Krsna spoek this verse to him.

The Lord's pastimes of detachment from the material world are considered sweet by the neophyte devotees. These pastimes are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.3.22):

tasyaivam ramamanasya samvatsara-ganan bahun grhamedhesu yogesu viragah samajayata

"The Lord was thus engaged in household life for many, many years, but at last His detachment from ephemeral sex life wa fully manifested."

Here the world "grhamedhesu" means in the religious duties of pious household life", and viragah" means "detachment". This verse was spoken by sriman Uddhava to Vidura.

Anuccheda 155

Now will be considered the various objects (dravya) included amongst the uddipanas (impetuses for ecstatic love). Included amongst these objects are the Lord's ornaments, musical instruemnts, places, markings, personal associates, devotees, tulasi, remnants, and many other things. The Lord's ornaments include His garments, ornaments, flower-ornaments, and many other things. All these are manifested on the Lord transcendental form. They were described in the Bhagavat-sandarbha, Anuccheda 61. They are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.2.12):

bhusana-bhusanangam

"His (sri Krsna's) transcendental body is the ornament of all ornaments."

This is means that is because they come into contact with Lord Krsna's handsomeness, bodily fragrance, and other glorious features that the Lord's ornaments have the power to decorate the Lord's transcendental body. On their own the ornaments have no power to decorate the Lord's body. Because they are in contact with the Lord's form, potencies, pastimes, and qualities, the Lord's ornaments become glorious. They are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.2):

pitambara-dharah sragvi saksan manmatha-manmathah

"Then Lord Krsna, a smile on His lotus face, appeared before the gopis. Wearing a garland and a yellow garment, He directly appeared as one who can bewilder the mind of Cupid, who himself bewilders the minds of ordinary people."

In this way it is said that the flower-garland and yellow garments decorate the the Supreme Lord, whose glorious handsomeness has no equal or superior. It is also said in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.41.35):

idrsany eva vasamsi nityam giri-vane-carah

"You impudent boys! You're accustomed to roaming the mountains and forests, and yet You would dare put on such closhes as these! These are the king's possessions You're asking for!"

These words were spoken by a demonic washerman. He saw the lord's clothing and ornaments in that way. The way the people in general saw the Lord's clothing and ornaments is described in these words of Visnu Purana:

suvarnanjana-curnabhyam tau tada bhusitambarau

"Krsna and Balarama were decorated with fragrant ointments and powders, with splendid garments, and with golden ornaments."

The Lord's ornaments are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.22):

syamam hiranya-paridhim. . .

"His complexion was dark blue and His garment golden. Wearing a peacock feather, colored minerals, sprigs of flower buds, and a garland of forest flowers and leaves, he was dressed just like a dramatic dancer. He rested one hand upon the shoulder of a friend and with the other twirled a lotus. Liles graced His ears, His hair hung down over His cheeks, and His lotuslike face was smiling."

Kaliya-, Varuna, and Indra who offered abhiskeato the Lord, all presented to thee Loerd gifts of glorious garments and ornaments. By the arrangement of the Lord's internal potency Lord Krsna accepted the garmanets that had belonged to Kamsa. Also by the arrangement of the Lord's internal potency Lord Krsna accepted the many wives of Narakasura. The Lord's weapons include His clud and cakra. His musical instruments include His flute and conchshell. His places include Vrndavana ande Mathura. His auspicious markings include the markings on the soles of His feet. His personal associates include the cowherd people and the Yadavas. The remnants of things He has used include gopi- candana. Amongst the uddipanas are also the times sacred to the Lord, times such as Janmastami. All these are uddipanas that arouse the devotees' love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. An example of the uddipanas arousing a devotee's attraction for the Lord is seen in these owrds of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.42.9):

tato rupa-gunaudarya- sampanna praha kesavam uttariyantam akrsya smayanti jata-hrc-chaya

"Now endowed with beauty, character, and generosity, Trivakra began to feel lusty desires for Lored Kesava. Taking hold of the upper end of His cloth, she smiled and addressed Him as follows."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

In the different rasas different limbs and features of the Lord become uddipanas to arouse the devotees' love. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.27):

sriyo nivaso yasyorah pana-patram mukham drsam bahavo loka-palanam saranganam padambujam

"The Lord's chest is the abode of the goddess of fortune. His moonlike face is the drinking vessel for eyes which hanker after all that is beautiful. His arms are the resting places for the administrative demigods. And His lotus feet are the refuge of pure devotees who never talk or sing of any subject except His Lordship."

Here the word "sriyah" means "of the Lord's beloved", "drsam" means "of the eyes of all the dear devotees", "loka-palanam" means "of they who should be protected", "saranganam" means of all the devotees", and "nivasah" means shelter". These features are described in this way because they are all uddipanas (impetuses for ecstatic love). This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

Sometimes great obstacles also become uddipanas. The following wexample is seen in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.53.20-21):

srutvaitad bhagavan ramo vipaksiya-nrpodyamam krsnam caikam gatam hartum kanyam kalaha-sankitah

balena mahata sardham bhratr-sneha-pariplutah

"When Lord Balarama heard about these preparations of the inimical kings and how Lord Krsna had set off alone to steal the bride, He feared that a fight would ensue. Immersed in affection for His brother, He hurried to Kundina with a mighty army."

The Lord's body being anointed with dust and mud in His pastimes act as uddipanas in the same way for the devotees in vatsalya-rasa. The obstacles presented by elder relatives and others also act as uddipanas for the devotees in srngara- rasa. In the same way various kinds of obstacles act as uddipanas in the five primary and seven secondary rasas. The vyabhicaris (disturbing symptoms of ecstatic love) are also manifest in the various rasas, as described in the following words of Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu (4.7.14):

ami pancaiva santadya harer bhakti-rasa matah esu hasadayah prayo bibhrati vyabhacaritam

"The five primary bhakti-rasas beginning with santa-rasa, and the seven secondary bhakti-rasas beginning with hasa-rasa all manifest the vyabhicaris (disturbing symptoms of ecstatic love)."

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.53.20-21) quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 158

In this way the uddipanas were described. Among the uddipanas those manifested in Vrndavana are the most exalted. This is so because in Vrndavana Lord Krsna is the sole object of the highest spiritual love. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.11.36):

vrndavanam govardhanam. . .

"O King Pariksit, when Rama and Krsna saw Vrndavana, Govardhana, and the banks of the River Yamuna, They both enjoyed great pleasure."

Speaking to Lord Balarama, Lord Krsna described the glories of Vrndavana in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.5):

aho ami deva-varamararcitam. . .

"O greatest of Lords, just see how these trees are bowing their heads at Your lotus feet, which are worshipable by the immortal demigods. lhe trees are offering You their fruits and flowers to eradicate the dark ignorance that has caused their birth as trees."

The great devotees who reside in Vrndavana are praised in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.14.34):

tad bhuri-bhagyam iha janma. . .

"I am most humbly praying at Your lotus feet for You to please give me any sort of birth within this Vrndavana forest so that I may be able to be favored by the dust of the feet of some of the devotees of Vrndavana. Even if I am given the chance to grow just as the humble grass in this land, that will be a glorious birth for me. But if I am not so fortunate to take birth within the forest of Vrndavana, I beg to be allowed to take birth outside the immediate area of Vrndavana so that when the devotees go out they will walk over me. Even that would be a great fortune for me. I am just aspiring for a birth in which I will be smeared by the dust of Your devotees' feet. I can see that everyone here is simply full of Krsna consciousness. They do not know anything but Mukunda. All the Vedas are indeed searching after the lotus feet of Krsna."

The great devotees who reside in Vrndavana are also praised in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.61):

asam aho carana-renu-jusam. . .

"The gopis of Vrndavana have given up the association of their husbands, sons, and other family members, who are very difficult to give up, andf they have forsaken the path of chastity to take shelter of the lotus feet of Mukunda, Krsna, which one should search for by Vedic knowledge. Oh, let me be fortunate enough to be one of the bushes, creepers, or herbs in Vrndavana, because the gopis trample them and bless them with the dust of their feet."

The great devotees who reside in Vrndavana are also praised in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.10):

vrndavanam sakhi bhuvo vitanoti kirtim. . .

"O friend, Vrndavana is spreading the glory of the earth, having obtained the treasure of the lotus feet of Krsna, the son of Devaki. The peacocks dance madly when they hear Govinda's flute, and when other creatures see them from the hilltops, they all become stunned." The pastimes Lord Krsna enjoys in Vrndavana are the best of all His pastimes.

This is described in the following words of the Trailokya-sammohana Tantra, srimad-astadasaksara- prastava:

santi tasya maha-bhaga avatarah sahasrasah tesam madhye 'vataranam balatvam ati-durlabham

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead has thousands and thousands of glorious incarnations. Amongst them all His incarnation as a child is the most glorious and the most rare."

Here the word "bala" (child) means "until the age of sixteen". In the Hari-lila-tika-smrti it is said:

garbhastha - sadrso jneya astamad vatasrac chisuh balas casodasad varsat paugandas ceti procyate

"From the time of living in the womb until the age of age a child is called `sisu'. Up to thw age of sixteen a child is called `bala' or `pauganda'."

The childhood of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is glorified in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.46-47):

nandah kim akarod brahman sreya evam mahodayam yasoda ca maha-bhaga papau yasyah stanam harih

"Having heard of the great fortune of Mother Yasoda, Pariksit Maharaja inquired from sukadeva Gosvami: O learned brahmana, mother Yasoda's breast milk was sucked by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. What past auspicious activities did she and Nanda Maharaja perform to achieve such perfection in ecstatic love?

pitarau nanvavindetam krsnodararbhakehitam gayanty adyapi kavayo yal loka-samalapaham

"Although Krsna was so pleased with Vasudeva and Devaki that He descended as their son, they could not enjoy Krsna's magnanimous childhood pastimes, which are so great that simply chanting about them vanquishes the contamination of the material world. Nanda Maharaja and Yasoda, however, enjoyed these pastimes fully, and therefore their position is always better than that of Vasudeva and Devaki."

In srimad-Bhagavatam's Eleventh Canto, after describign Lord Krsna's pastimes in a general way, and after explaining that Lord Krsna's pastimes arouse devotion (bhakty-uddipana) in the hearers, it is said that Lord Krsna's childhood pastimes are the best of His pastimes. There it is said (srimad-Bhagavatam 11.31.28):

ittham harer bhagavato ruciravatara- viryani bala-caritani ca santamani anyatra ceha ca srutani grnan manusyo bhaktim param paramahamsa-gatau labheta

"The all-auspoicious exploits of the all-attractive incarnations of Lord sri Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and also the pastimes He performed as a child, are described in this srimad-Bhagavatam and in other scriptures. Anyone who clearly chants these descriptions of His pastimes will attain transcendental loving service unto Lord Krsna, who is the goal of all perfect sages."

Lord Krsna's exalted Vrndavana pastimes are of many kinds. For example, there are the pastimes where He reveals His power and opulence (aisvarya), such as the pastime where He shows that many millions of universes are present in His eternal spiritual form full of knowledge and limitless bliss. There are also his pastimes of compassion (karunya), such as He pastime of showing compassion to Putana and allowing her to become like His own mother. Then there are also His pastimes of sweetness (madhurya), which are described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.8.22):

tav anghri-yugmam anukrsya sarisrpantau. . .

"When Krsna and Balarama, with the strength of Their legs, crawled in the muddy places created in Vraja by cow dung and cow urines, Their crawling resembled the crawling of serpents, and the sound of Their ankle bells was very charming. Very much pleased by the spound of other people's ankle bells, They used to follow these people as if going to Their mothers, but when They saw that these were other people, They became afraid and returned to Their real mothers, Yasoda and Rohini."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.29):

vatsan muncan kvacid asamaye. . .

"Our dear friend Yasoda, your son sometimes comes to our houses before the milking of the cows and releases the calves, and when the master of the house becomes angry, your son merely smiles. Sometimes He devises some process by which He steals palatavble curd, butter, and milk, which He then eats and drinks. When the monkeys assemble, He divides it with them, and when the monkeys have their bellies so full that they won't take any more, He breaks the pots. Sometimes, if He gets no opportunity to stral butter and milk from a house, He will be angry at the householders, and for His revenge He will agitate the small children by pinching them. Then, when they begin crying, Krsna will go away."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.11.7):

gopibhih stobhito 'nrtyat. . .

"The gopis would say: `If You dance, my dear Krsna, then I shall give You half a sweetmeat.' By saying these words or by clapping their hands, all the gopis encouraged Krsna in different ways. At such times, although He was the supremely powerful Personality of Godhead, He would smile and dance according to their desire, as if He were a wooden doll in their hands. Sometimes He would sing very loudly, at their bidding. In this way, Krsna came completely undere the control of the gopis."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.11.39-40):

kvacid vadayato venum. . .

"Sometimes Krsna and Balarama would play on Their flutes, sometimes They would throw ropes and stones devised for getting fruits from the trees, sometimes They would throw only stones, and sometimes, Their ankle-bells tinkling, They would play football with fruits like bael and amalaki. Sometimes They would cover Themselves with blankets and imitate cows and bulls and fight with one another, oraring loudly, and sometimes They would imitae the voices of the animals. In this way They enjoyed sporting, exactly like two ordinary human children."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.1):

kvacid vanasaya mano dadhad vrajat. . .

"O King, one day Krsna decided to take His breakfast as a picnic in the forest. Having risen early in the morning, He blew His bugle made of horn and woke all the cowherd boys and calves with its beautiful sound. Then Krsna and the boys, keeping their respective groups of calves before them, proceeded from Vrajabhumi to the forest."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.10-12):

kvacid gayati gayatsu. . .

"Sometimes the honeybees in Vrndavana became so mad with ecstasy that they closed their eyes and began to sing. Lord Krsna, moving along the forest Path with His cowherd boyfriends and Baladeva, would then respond to the bees by imitating their singing while His friends sang about His pastimes. Sometimes Lord Krsna would imitate the chattering of a parrot, sometimes, with a sweet voice, the call of a cuckoo, and sometimes the cooing of swans. Sometimes He vigorously imitated the dancing of a peacock, making His cowherd boyfriends laugh. Sometimes, with a voice as deep as the rumbling of clouds, He would call out with great affection the names of the animals who had wandered far from the herd, thus enchanting the cows and the cowherd boys."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.42):

tam gorajas-churita-kuntala-baddha-barha. . .

"Lord Krsna's hair, powdered with the dust raised by the cows, was decorated with a peacock feather and forest flowers. The Lord glanced charmingly and smiled beautifully, playing upon His flute while His companions chanted His glories. The gopis, all together, came forward to meet Him, their eyes very eager to see Him."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.18.10):

krsnasya nrtyatah kecit. . .

"As Krsna danced, some of the boys accompanied Him by singing, and others by playing flutes, hand cymbals and buffalo horns, while still others praised His dancing."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.20.26):

dhenavo manda-gaminya. . .

"The cows had to move slowly because of their weighty milk bags, but they quickly ran to the Supreme Personality of Godhead as soon as He called them, their affection for Him causing their udders to become wet."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.7):

aksanvatam phalam. . .

"The cowherd girls said: O friends, those eyes that see the beautiful faces of the sons of Maharaja Nanda are certainly fortunate. As these two sons enter the forest, surrounded by Their friends, driving the cows before Them, They hold Their flutes to Their mouths and glance lovingly upon the residents of Vrndavana. For those who have eyes, we think there is no greater object of vision."

Srila Jiva Gosvami's

Sri Priti-sandarbha

"The cowherd girls said: O friends, those eyes that see the beautiful faces of the sons of Maharaja Nanda are certainly fortunate. As these two sons enter the forest, surrounded by Their friends, driving the cows before Them, They hold Their flutes to Their mouths and glance lovingly upon the residents of Vrndavana. For those who have eyes, we think there is no greater object of vision."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.22):

syamam hiranya-paridhim. . .

"His complexion was dark blue and His garment golden. Wearing a peacock feather, colored minerals, sprigs of flower buds, and a garland of forest flowers and leaves, He was dressed just like a dramatic dancer. He rested one hand upon the shoulder of a friend and with the other twirled a lotus. Lilies graced His ears, His hair hung down over His cheeks, and His lotuslike face was smiling."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.1):

bhagavan api ta ratrih

"Sri Badarayani said: Sri Krsna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, full in all opulences, yet upon seeing those autumn nights scented with blossoming jasmine flowers, He turned His mind toward loving affairs. To fulfill His purposes He employed His internal potency."

Lord Krsna's sweetness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.2):

vama-bahu-krta-vama-kapolah. . .

"When Mukunda vibrates the flute He has placed to His lips, stopping its holes with His tender fingers, He rests His left cheek on His left arm and makes His eyebrows dance. At that time the demigoddesses traveling in the sky with their husbands, the Siddhas, become amazed. As those ladies listen, they are embarrassed to find their minds yeilding to the pursuit of lusty desires, and in their distress they are unaware that the belts of their garments are loosening."

What more need be said? Devotees who in their hearts love the Lord will easily understand all these descriptions.

Amongst the bhavas manifest in the heart are the anubhavas, which will now be discussedf. The anubhavas are of two kinds: 1. udbhasvara-anubhavaa, and 2. sattvika-anubhavas. The udbhasvaras are anubhavas manifest as external activities. They are described in these words of Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu (2.2.2):

nrtyam viluthitam ganam krosanam anumotanam hunkaro jrmbhanam svasa- bhuma lokanupeksita lala-sravo 'tta-hasas ca ghurna-hikkadayo 'pi ca

"The udbhasvaras are dancing, rolling on the ground, singing very loudly, stretching the body, crying loudly, yawning, breathing very heavily, negvlecting the presence of others, drooling, laughing like a madman, wheeling the head, and belching."

The sattvika-anubhavas are ecstatic symptoms that come from the heart. They are described in these words of Bhakti- rasamrta-sindhu (2.3.16):

te stambha-sveda-romancah svara-bhedo 'tha vepathuh vaivarnyam asru pralaya ity astau sattvikah smrtah

"The eight sattvika-bhavas are becoming stunned, perspiring, standing of the hairs on the body, faltering of the voice, trembling of the body, changing of bodily colors, shedding of tears, and devastation."

In this verse the word "pralaya" (devastation) means "when all activities are lost". This means "when, for the sake of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, all external material activities are lost". In this state internal spiritual activities for the sake of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are not lost. These internal devotional activities are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.2.4-6):

sa muhurtam abhut tusnim krsnanghri-sudhaya bhrsam tivrena bhakti-yogena nimagnah sadhu nirvrtah

sanakair bhagaval-lokan nrlokam punar agatah

"For a moment he remained dead silent, and his body did not move. He became absorbed in the nectar of remembering the Lord's lotus feet in devotional ecstasy, and he appeared to be going increasingly deeper into that ecstasy. "It was so observed by Vidura that Uddhava had all the transcendental bodily changes due to total ecstasy, and he was trying to wipe away tears of separation from his eyes. Thus Vidura could understand that Uddhava had completely assimilated extensive love for the Lord. "The great devotee Uddhava soon came back from the abode of the Lord to the human plane."

These internal devotional activities are also described in these words of the Garuda Purana:

jagrat-svapna-susuptesu yoga-sthasya ca yoginah ya kacin manaso vrttih sa bhaved acyutasraya

"During wakefulness, dream, and dreamless sleep a yogi situated in yoga keeps the activities of his mind fixed always on the infallible Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In that condition of rapt meditation on the Lord one can understand the different tastes of the different rasas.

Now the sancari-bhavas, which are also called vyabhicari-bhavas will be discussed. The 33 vyabhicaris are described in these words of Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu (2.4.1-2, and 4-6):

sancarayanti bhavasya gatim. . . . . .visesenabhimukhyena caranti sthayinam prati. . .

nirvedo 'tha visado dainyam glani-sramo ca mada-garvau sanka-trasavega unmadapasmrti tatha vyadhih moho mrtir alasyam jadyam vridavahittha ca smrtir atha vitarka-cinta- mati-dhrtayo harsa utsukatvam ca augryamarsasuyas capalyam caiva nidra ca suptir bodha itime bhava vyabhicarinah samakhyatah

"There are some bodily symptoms which express overwhelming ecstatic love (vyabhicari-bhava). They are counted at 33 as follows: disappointment, lamentation, humility, guilt, fatigue, intoxication, pride, doubt, apprehension, intense emotion, madness, forgetfulness, disease, confusion, death, laziness, inertness, bashfulness, concealment, remembrance argumentativeness, anxiety, thoughtfulness, endurance, happiness, eagerness, violence, haughtiness, envy, impudence, dizziness, sleepiness, and alertness."

To understand the characteristics of all these one may look in the Ujjvala-nilamani. Here the word "trasa" (apprehension) means "when the devotees in vatsalya-rasa and the other rasas become apprehensive that their association with Krsna will become broken". "Nidra" (sleepiness) here means "with a heart free of cares, in a dream the devotee meets Krsna". "srama" (fatigue) here means fatigue attained by engaging in blissful activities for Krsna's sake". "Alasyam" (laziness) here means unwillingness to perform actions that have no relation to Lord Krsna". "Bodha" (alertness) here means "alert to see Lord Krsna". These 33 vyabhicaris are not material, for they are beyond the modes of material nature. This is so because the bring love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavat- priti). Together these anubhavas are part of the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.3.31-32):

smarantah smarayantas ca mitho 'ghaugha-haram harim bhaktya sanjataya bhaktya bibhraty utpulakam tanum

"The devotees of the Lord constantly discuss the glories of the Personality of Godhead among themselves. Thus they constantly remember the Lord and remind one another of His qualities and pastimes. In this way, by their devotion to the principles of bhakti-yoga, the devotees please the Personality of Godhead, who takes away from them everything inauspicious. Being purified of all impediments, the devotees awaken to pure love of Godhead, and thus, even within this world, their spiritualized bodies exhibit symptoms of transcendental ecstasy, such as standing of the bodily hairs on end.

kvacid rudanty acyuta-cintaya kvacid dhasanti nandanti vadanty alaukikah nrtyanti gayanty anusilayanty ajam bhavanti tusnim param etya nirvrtah

"Having achieved love of Godhead, the devotees sometimes cry out loud, absorbed in thought of the infallible Lord. Sometimes they laugh, feel great pleasure, speak out loud to the Lord, dance, or sing. Such devotees, havign transcended material, conditional life, sometimes imitate the unborn Supreme by acting out His pastimes. And sometimes, achieving His personal audience, they remain peaceful and silent."

In these two verses Lord Hari is the alambana (primary impetus for ecstatic love, remembering Lord Hari is the uddipana (secondary impetus for ecstatic love), reminding one another of Lord Hari and other like devotional activities are the udbhasvaras (external activities of ecstatic love), the standing up of the body's hairs is one of the sattvika-bhavas, and the activities beginning with being rapt in thought of the Lord are the sancari-bhavas. When devotion is awakened in this way sthayi- bhava (continuous ecstasy) is manifest. The words "And sometimes, achieving His personal audience, they (the devotees) remain peaceful and silent" describe samvalana (the situation when all the elements of rasa are joined together). Here the word "param" means "the supreme object of rasa". The rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead are five. These five are santa-rasa (neutrality), dasya-rasa (servitorship), sakhya-rasa (friendship), vatsalya-rasa (paternal love), and srngara-rasa (conjugal love). Because they manifest sthayi-bhava and because they are eternal and unchanging, always manifest, these five rasas are said to be the primary rasas. Sometimes amnifest among these fiver primary rasas are other rasas, rasas that begin with adbhuta (wonder). Because they are not always manifest, these rasas are said to be secondary rasas. The primary rasas are described in these words:

madhurena samapayet

"The five rasas culminating in srngara-rasa are the primary rasas."

Certain combinations of the secondary rasas are considered rasabhasa (incompatible mixtures of rasa).

Now the secondary rasas will be discussed. The secondary rasasa, which begin with adbhuta (wonder) increase the devotees' love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. They are described in these words:

adbhuto hasya-virau ca raudro bhisana ity api bibhatsah karunas ceti gaunah sapta rasah smrtah

"The seven kinds of indirect ecstasies of devotional service are known as laughing, astonishment, chivalry, compassion, anger, dread, and ghastilness."

The adbhuta-rasa (wonder) here is wonder that is full of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Here the alambanas are the extraordinary and unexpected activities of the Lord, the visaya (object of perception) is Lord Krsna, adhara (person who loves) is the devotee, the uddipanas (secondary impetuses for ecstatic love) are the Lord's activities, the anubhavas (bodily manifestations of rasa) are glances and other like things, the vyabhicaris (external manifestations of ecstatic love) are agitation, joy, becomign stunned, and other like ecstatic symptoms, the sthayi-bhava (continuous ecstasy) is the rasa of wonder filled with love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The rasa of wonder is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.69.2):

citram bataitad ekena vapusa yugapat prthak grhesu dvy-asta-sahasram striya eka udavahat

"It is astounding that Lord sri Krsna, who is one without a second, expanded Himself in sixteen-thousand similar forms to marry sixteen-thousand queens in their respective homes."

Now the rasa of laughter and comedy (hasya-rasa) filled with love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead willbe discussed. In hasya-rasa the alambanas are various activities, garments, and joking words, the visaya (source of comedy) is Lord Krsna, and the adhara is the devotee. If pleasant and unpleasant things bring the rasa of comedy then that rasa increases the devotee's love for Lord Krsna. This rasa is also manifest in dana-rasa (the rasa of giving charity), yuddha-rasa (the rasa of conflict), and vira-rasa (the rasa of chivalry). The uddipanas here are the actions, words, garments, and other things that create laughter. The anubhavas are the trembling of the nostrils and lips and other like symptoms. The vyabhicaris are joy, laziness, dissimulation, and other like things. The styayi-bhava is comedy based on love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The jokes in this rasa bring pleasure to the heart. An example of this rasa of joking and laughter is given in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.29):

vatsan muncan kvacid asamaye krosa-sanjata-hasah. . .

"Our dear friend Yasoda, your son sometimes comes to our houses before the milking of the cows and releases the calves, and when the master of the house becomes angry, your son merely smiles. Sometimes He devises some process by which He steals palatavble curd, butter, and milk, which He then eats and drinks. When the monkeys assemble, He divides it with them, and when the monkeys have their bellies so full that they won't take any more, He breaks the pots. Sometimes, if He gets no opportunity to stral butter and milk from a house, He will be angry at the householders, and for His revenge He will agitate the small children by pinching them. Then, when they begin crying, Krsna will go away."

Another example is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.30):

hastagrahye racayati vidhim. . .

"When the milk and curd are kept high on a swing hanging from a ceiling and Krsna and Balarama cannot reach it, They arrange to reach it by piling up various planks and turning upside down the mortar for grinding spices. Being quite aware of the contents of a pot, They pick holes in it. While the elderly gopis go abou their affairs, Krsna ande Balarama sometimes go into a dark room, brightening the place with the valuable jewels and ornaments on Their bodies and taking advantage of this light by stealing."

Another example is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.31):

evam dharstyany usati kurute. . . . .itttham stribhih sa-bhaya-nayana-sri-mukhalokinibhir vyakhyatartha prahasita-mukhi na hy upalabdhum aicchat

"When Krsna is caught in His naughty activities, the master of the house will say to Him: `Oh, You arew a thief,' and artifically express anger at Krsna. Krsna will then reply, `I am not a thief. You are a thief.' Sometimes, being angry, Krsna passes urine and stoll in a neat, clean place in our houses. But now, our dear friend Yasoda, this expert thief is sitting before you like a very good boy..' Sometimes all tyhe gopis would look at Krsna sitting there, His eyes fearful so His mother would not chastise Him, and when they saw Krsna's beautiful face, instead of chastising Him they would simply look upon His face and enjoy transcendental bliss. Mother Yasoda wouls mildly smile at all this fun, and she would not want to chastise her blessed transcendental child."

In tyhis verse the word "vyakhyatarthah" means "while complaining about Krsna's mischievous activities".

An example of utprasa (mocking and satire) is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.22.9):

tasam vasamsy upadaya nipam aruhya satvarah hasadbhih prahasan balaih parihasam uvaca ha

"Taking the girls' garments, He quickly climbed to the top of a kadamba tree. Then, as He laughed loudly and His companions also laughed, He addressed the girls jokingly."

The meaning of this verse ios clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Now the rasa of chivalry (vira-rasa) filled with love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead will be described. Vira-rasa is of four kinds: 1. dharma-vira (munificent in executing religious rites), 2. daya-vira (showing extraordinary mercy), 3. dana-vira (charitable activities), and 4. yuddha-vira (chivalrous activities in fighting). Now dharma-vira will be considered. In that rasa the alambana is the intense desire to perform religious rites. The visaya (object of loev) is Lord Krsna. The adhara (lover) is the devotee. The uddipanas are the instructions of the scriptures and other like things. The anubhavas are humility, faith, and other like virtues. The vyabhicaris are thoughtfulness, memory, and other like things. The sthayi-bhava is the eagerness to perform religious rites, an eagerness born of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. An example of dharma-vira is seen in these owrds spoken by Maharaja Yudhisthira in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.72.3):

kratu-rajena gpvinda rajasuyena pavanih yaksye vibhutir bhavatas tat sampadaya nah prabho

"O Govinda, I desire to worship Your auspicious, opulent expansions by the Rajasuya sacrifice, the king of Vedic ceremonies. Please make our endeavor a success, my Lord."

Now the daya-vira rasa of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead will be considered. In this rasa the alambana is overwhelming compassion for all living entities, seeing everyone as originally devotees of the Supreme Lord. In this way the devotee satisfied Lord Krsna, who is seen as the visaya (object of love. The adhara (lover) here is the devotee. This rasa is also seen in Lord Krsna's parents and many others who show compassion to Lord Krsna Himself. The uddipanas here are the perceptin of others' sufferings. The anubhavas are speaking words of consolation and other like activities. The vyabhicaris are eagerness, thoughtfulness, joy, and other like emotions. The sthayi-bhava is eagerness to be compassionate. An example of daya-rasa is given in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (9.21.5- 15):

krcchra-prapta-kutumbasya ksut-trdbhyam jata-vepathoh atithir brahmanah kale bhoktu-kamasya cagamat

"Rantideva never endeavored to earn anything. He would enjoy whatever he got by the arrangement of Providence, but when guests came he would give them everything. Thus he underwent considerable suffering, along with the members of his family. Indeed, he and his family members shivered for want of food and water. Yet Rantideva always remained sober. Once, after fasting for forty-eight days, in the morning Rantideva recieved some water and some foodstuffs made with milk and ghee, but when he and his family were about to eat, a brahmana guest arrived. "Because Rantideva percieved the presence of the Supreme Godhead everywhere and in every living entity, he recieved the guest with faith and respect and gave him a share of the food. The brahmana guest ate his share and then went away. "Thereafter, having divided the remaining food with hsi relatives, Rantideva was just about to eat his own share when a sudra guest arrived. Seeing the sudra in relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, King Rantideva gave him also a share of the food. "When the sudra went away, another guest arrived, surrounded by dogs, and said: `O king, I and my company of dogs are very hungry. Please give us something to eat.' "With great respect Kign Rantideva offered the balance of food to the dogs and the master of the dogs, who had come as guests. The king offered them all respects and obeisances. "Thereafter only the drinking water remained, and there was only enough to satisfy one person, but when the king was just about to drink it a candala appeared and said: `O king, although I am lowborn, kindly give me some drinking water. "Aggrieved at hearing the pitiable words of the poor aggrieved candala, Maharaja Rantideva spoke the following nectarean words. "I do nto pray to the Supreme Personality of Godhead for the eight perfections of mystic yoga, nor for salvation from repeated birth and death. I want only to stay among all the living entities and suffer all distresses on their behalf, so that they may be freed from all suffering. "By offering my water ot maintain the life of this poor candala, who is struggling to live, I have been freed from all hunger, thirst, fatigue, trembling of the body, moroseness, distress, lamentation, and illusion. "Having spoken thus, King Rantideva, although on the verge of death because of thirst, gave his own portion of water to the candala without hesitation, for the king was naturally very kind and sober. "Demigods like Lord Brahma and Lord siva, who can satisfy all materially ambitious men by giving them the rewards they desire, then manifested their own identities before King Rantideva, for it was they who had presented themselves as the brahmana, sudra, candala, and so on."

The meaning og these verses is clear. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Now the dana-vira rasa (rasa of giving charity) in relation to love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead will be considered. This rasa is of two kinds: 1. giving charity very liberally (bahu-pradatva) and 2. giving away in charity one's own valuable possessions, possessions attained with great difficulty (samuthita-durapartha-tyaga). Now the first of these, the bahu-pradatva dana-vira rasa will be considered. In this rasa the alambana is the conclusion that great satisfaction comes from giving charity. For the person very eager thuis to give charity, the visaya (object of love) is Lord Krsna. Here the adhara (lover) is the devotee. Other persons who give charity, persons who are not devotees, give charity only extewrnally (bahiranga). Here the uddipanas are seeing charity and other like things. The anubhavas are the smile that comes from giving in charity more the the recipient could have desired. Other like rspsonses are also included here amongst theanubhavas.

The vyabhicaris are thoughtfulness, eagerness, joy, and other like emotions. The sthayi-bhava is eagerness to give charity, eagerness impelled by love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. An example of this kind of charity is given in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.5.1):

nandas tv atmaja utpanne jatahlado maha-manah. . .

"Delighted at the birth of His son, Maharaja Nanda gave abundanrt charity."

Anuccheda 164

Now the second kind of dana-vira, namely giving away in charity one's own valuable possessions, possessions attained with great difficulty (samuthita-durapartha-tyaga), will be considered. In this second kind of dana-vira great enthusiasm is manifest in thew same way enthusiasm is manifest in dharma- vira. In dana-vira the visaya is Lord Krsna, the adhara is the devotee, the uddipanas are Lord Krsna's smiles, talks, and other things, the anubhavas are the earnest description of Lord Krsna's glories, the sancari-bhava is great determination, the sthayi-bhava is eagerness to renounce possessions, an eagerness impelled by spiritual love for Lord Krsna. An eexample of this second kind of dana-vira is seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (3.29.13):

salokya-sarsti-samipya-sarupya. . .

"A pure devotee does not accept any kind of liberation - salokya, sarsti, samipya, sarupya, or ekatva - even though they are offered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Now yuddha-vira-rasa (chivalrous activities in fighting) in relation to the Supreme Personality of Godhead will be discussed. In this rasa the person who fights Krsna is full of love. Impelled by love for Krsna, he is eager to fight Him. Here the opponent may be an enemy fighting Krsna in a pastime-battle, or the opponent may be a friend standing before Krsna. The first kind of opponent takes Krsna as his enemy and, impelled by spiritual love, is eager to fight with Him. The second kind of opponent is a friend and his battle with Krsna is like a joke or a game. In this sense the yuddha-rasa becomes like hasya-rasa (the rasa of comedy or laughter). Here love for Krsna is the alambana. The alambana here is not the desire to fight. Here the two fighters, Krsna and the devotee, are two friends. Each thinks of the other as a friend. Their friendship is the alambana. In this rasa the uddipanas are the smiles and other like gestures manifest in battle. The anubhavas are the boasts, insults and other like words hurled in the heat of battle. The vyabhicaris are pride, agitation and other like sentiments. The styhayi-bhava is eagerness to fight, an eagerness born of friendship. Thus there are three kinds of opponents (Lord Krsna, Krsna's friend, and Krsna's enemy). Yuddha-vira rasa is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.18.12):

bhramanair langhanaih ksepair asphotana-vikarsanaih cikridatur niyuddhena
kaka-paksa-dharau kvacit

"Krsna and Balarama played with Their cowherd boyfriends by whirling about, leaping, hurling, slapping and fighting. Sometimes Krsna and Balarama would pull the hair on the boys' heads."

Here the word "kaka-paksa-dharau" means Krsna and Balarama would pull the hair in the boys' topknots, and "niyuddhena" means "they would whirl about and fight in many ways". This kind of friendly fighting is described in these words of Hari-vamsa:

tatha gandiva-dhanvanam vikridan madhusudanah jigaya bharata-srestham kuntyah pramukhato vibhuh

"Playing, Krsna and Arjuna fought. As Kunti watched, Lord Krsna defeated Arjuna."

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.18.12 quoted above was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 167

Now raudra-rasa (anger) will be considered. Here the object (visaya) of loving anger is Lord Krsna and the person who feels the anger (adhara) is the dear devotee. When Lord Krsna is the object of anger the anger is either favorable, unfavorable, or unfavorable for the angry person. As before in the situation when Lord Krsna was the object of love, Lord Krsna is here the primary (mula) alambana. When teh anger is directed to someone other than Lord Krsna, then that person is a secondary (bahiranga) alambana. There may be the following kinds of raudra-rasa: 1. When a gopi, because of bewilderment or some other cause, is very angry at Lord Krsna, 2. when the family elders or other persons become angry to learn that the young gopis or other persons are meeting with Krsna, 3. when a devotee concerned for Lord Krsna's welfare is angry at another person for not properly protecting or caring for or dealing with Krsna, 4. the demons or others who try to harm Lord Krsna, and 5. a person who, angry at Lord Krsna, harms himself by preventing himself from associating with Lord Krsna. Here the uddipanas are insults hurled in anger and other like things. The anubhavas are striking blows with one's hand and other like actions. The vyabhicaris are becoming agitated and manifesting other like emotions. The sthayi-bhava is loving anger. The anger the elder gopis feel toward Lord Krsna is also loving anger. Because they are residents of Vraja, the elder gopis are by nature filled with love toward Lord Krsna. They certainly desire His welfare. Of these five kinds of raudra-rasa the first three will be discussed in another place. The last two are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.74.41):

tatah pandu-sutah kruddha matsya-kaikaya-srnjayah udayudhah samuttasthuh sisupala-jighamsavah

"Then the sons of Pandu became furious, and toegther with the warriors of the Matsya, Kaikaya, and srnjaya clans, they rose up from their seats with weapons poised, ready to kill sisupala."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 169

Now bhayanaka-rasa (fear) willbe considered. Here the alambana is fear of pain or injury. The visaya (object) is Lord Krsna. The adhara is the devotee. In addition to feeling fear for Lord Krsna's well-being, sometime this rasa is manifest as the fear that one may be separated from Lord Krsna. Thus one may fear for Lord Krsna's sake or one may fear what will happen to one's own self because of his offenses to Loerd Krsna. Thus Lord Krsna may be the root (mula) alambana, or the devotee himself may be the root alambana. The uddipanas here are the causes of fear. This is described in Bhakti-rasamrta-sindhu (2.1.15). There the word "vibhave" is in the locative case, and the word "yena" is in the instrumental case. Thus the visaya (object) may be either Lord Krsna or the devotee. When the devotee is the visaya and He fears separation from Lord Krsna, then the devotee is the secondary (bahiranga) alambana. When the devotee is the adhara (the person who fears for Lord Krsna's welfare, then Lord Krsna is the primary (antaranga) alambana. Here the uddipanas are fearful knitting of the eyebrows and other like actions. The anubhavas are withering of the face and other like actions. The vyabhicaris are restlessness and other like responses. The sthayi-bhava is fear impelled by love. The following example is seen in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.3.29):

janma te mayy asau papo ma vidyan madhusudana samudvije bhaved dhetoh kamsad aham adhira-dhih

"O Lord Krsna, You have now taken birth as my son. For this reason my mind is now restless with fear of Kamsa."

Here Lord Krsna is Himself the visaya. There is no other cause for fear. This verse was spoken by Devaki to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Now bhibhatsa-rasa (horror) in relation to the Supreme Personality of Godhead will be considered. In this rasa of horror, Lord Krsna is, as in the previous rasas, themula (root) alambana because He is the object of the devotee's love. The adhara is the devotee. When the horror has someone else, and not Lord Krsna, as the object, the alambana it a bahiranga (external) alambana. Here the uddipanas are a series of horrible, unclean, and abominable things. The anubhavas are spitting and other like activities. The vyabhicaris are moroseness and other like emotions. The sthayi-bhava is horror impelled by love for Lord Krsna. An example of bhayanaka-rasa is seen in the following words spoken by Queen Rukmini to Lord Krsna in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.45):

tvak-smasru-roma-nakha-kesa-pinaddham. . .

"A woman who fails to relish the fragrance of the honty of Your lotus feet becomes totally befooled, and thus she accepts as her husband or lover a living corpse covered with skin, whiskers, nails, head-hair, and body-hair and filled with flesh, bones, blood, parasites, feces, mucus, bile, and air."

Now karuna-rasa (anguish) in relation to the Supreme Personality of Godhead will be considered. In this karuna-rasa, which is born from the idea that someting inauspicious is happening one's dear freind or kinsman, the visaya is Lord Krsna. The adhara is the devotee. The uddipanas are Lord Krsna's form, qualities, and activities, and other things in relation to Him. The anubhavas are withering of the face, lamentation, and other like things. The vyabhicaris are becoming stunned, grieving, and other like things. The sthayi-bhava is grief impelled by love for Lord Krsna. The following example is seen in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.19):

antar hrade bhujaga-bhoga-paritam arat krsnam niriham upalabhya jalasayante gopams ca mudha-dhisanan paritah pasums ca sankrandatah parama-kasmalam apur artah

"As they hurried along the path to the bank of the Yamuna River, they saw from a distance that Krsna was in the lake, motionless within the coils of the black serpent. They further saw that the cowherd boys had fallen unconscious and that the animals were standing on all sides, crying out for Krsna. Seeing all this, the residents of Vrndavana were overwhelmed with anguish and confusion."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

When the devotees, who dearly loev Lord Krsna, feel compassion and lament for the non-devotees who have not yeat attained Lord Krsna's mercy, that is also karuna-rasa. The following example is seen in srimad-Bhagavatam (7.5.31):

na te viduh svartha-gatim hi visnum durasaya ye bahirartha-maninah andha yathandhair upaniyamanas te 'pisa-tantryam uru-dhamni baddhah

"Persons who are strongly entrapped by the consciousness of enjoying material life, and who have therefore accepted as their leader or guru a similar blind man attached to external sense objects, cannot understand that the goal of life is to return home, back to Godhead, and engage in the service of Lord Visnu. As blind men guided by another blind man miss the right path and fall into a ditch, materially attachd men led by another materially attached man are bound by the ropes of fruitive labor, which are made of very strong cords, and they continue again and again in materialistic life, suffering the threefold miseries."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by sri Prahlada to a fellow student.

Anuccheda 174

If adbhuta-rasa (wonder) and the other secondary rasas are felt by Lord Krsna and the object of His feelings is the devotees, then adbhuta-rasa nad other rasas are manifest with the devotrees as their object. An example of this is seen in these words spoken by Lord Krsna to Lord Balarama in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.5):

aho ami deva-vararcitam. . .

"O greatest of Lords, just see how these trees are bowing down their heads at Your lotus feet, which are worshipable by the immortal demigods. The trees are offering You their fruits and flowers to eradicate the dark ignorance that has caused their birth as trees."

In this way adbhuta-rasa and the other secondary rasas may be manifest even in relation to living entities who have not yet developed ecstatic love for the Lord. In this verse the trees' activities are an imitation of human activities.

Now rasabhasa (incompatible mixing of rasas), which should be avouided, will be considered. Rasabhasa is the rasas relating to Lord % should also be avoided. As rasabhasa should be avoided in the material vatsalya-rasa and other material rasas, so it should also be avoided in the five primary spiritual rasas. This wise and respectable people all accept. Mixtures of rasas that should be rejected in the material rasas should also be rejected in the spiritual rasas. What should nto be accepted in the material reasas should not be accepted in the spiritual rasas. Mixtures of rasa that are good and should be accepted in the material rasas are also good and should be accepted in the spiritual rasas. In this way the mixtures in srngara-rasa, vatsalya-rasa, and the other rasas should be considered. Now what is good, neutral, and to be avoided in the five primary and seven secondary rasas will be considered. In hasya- rasa (laughter) the four devotional rasas in relation to separation are incompatible, santa-rasa is neutral, and the other rasas are compatible. In relation to each other the secondary rasas are thus grouped into enemies, neutral parties, and friends. To hasya- rasa (laughing), karuna (anguish) and bhayanaka (fear) are enemies, adbhuta (wonder) is a friend, and the others are neutral. In this way amongst the twelve rasas the various sthayi-bhavas, sancari-bhavas, anubhavas, vibhavas, visayas, and other bhavas are all grouped into compatible, incompatible, and neutral. In this way in people and poems that have a relationship with Lord Krsna the taste of rasabhasa (incompatible rasas) should be avoided. When the rasas are compatible, that is good. That is glorious. In certain special cases rasabhasa is also good and glorious. An example of good and acceptible rasabhasa is seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (1.10.21 and 28):

sa vai kilayam purusah puratano ya eka asid avisesa atmani

"They said: Here He is, the original Personality of Godhead as we definitely remember Him. He alone existed before the manifested creation of the modes of nature, and in Him only, because He is the Supreme Lord, all living beings merge, as if sleeping at night, their energy suspended."

nunam vrata-snana-hutadinesvarah samarcito hy asya grhita-panibhih pibanti yah sakhy adharamrtam muhur vraja-striyah sammumuhur yad-asayah

"O friends, just think of His wives, whose hands He has accepted. How they must have undergone vows, baths, fire sacrifices and perfect worship of the Lord of the universe to constantly relish now the nectar from His lips [by kissing]. The damsels of Vrajabhumi would often faint just by expecting such favors."

This passage begins with a philosophical reflection in santa-rasa and concludes with a description of srngara-rasa. This is incompatible in the same way a mixture of vatsalya-rasa and santa-rasa is incompatible. However, in these two verses there is no true rasabhasa. That is because they are spoken by different groups of speakers. srimad-Bhagavatam 1.10.21 is spoken by one group of speakers, and srimad-Bhagavatam 1.10.28 is spoken by another group of speakers. That this is so and there was no rasabhasa in these speakers' words is confirmed by these words immediately following that passage (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.10.31):

evam-vidha gadantinam. . .

"While the ladies of the capital of Hastinapura were greeting Him and talking in this way, the Lord, smiling, accepted their good greetings, and casting the grace of His glance over them, He departed from the city."

These words spoken by srila Suta Gosvami are glorious and blissful. srimad-Bhagavatam 1.10.21 and 28 were spoken by the ladies in the capital city of the Kauravas.

Anuccheda 175

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (4.20.27-28):

athabhaje tvakhila-purusottamam gunalayam padma-karena lalasah apy avayor eka-pati-sprdhoh kalir na syat krta-tvac-caranaika-tanayoh

"Now I wish to engage in the service of the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and serve just like the goddess of fortune, who carries a lotus flower in her hand, because His Lordship, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is the reservoir of all transcendental qualities. I am afraid that the goddess of fortune and I would quarrel because both of us would be attentively engaged in the same service.

jagaj-jananyam jagad-isa vaisasam syat

"My dear Lord of the universe, the goddess of fortune, Laksmi, is the mother of the universe, and yet I think she may be angry with me because of my intruding upon her service and acting on the very platform to which she is so much attached. Yet I am hopeful that even though there is some misunderstanding, You will take my part, for You are very much inclined to the poor and You always magnify even insignificant service unto You. Therefore even though she becomes angry, I think there is no harm for You, because You are so self-sufficient that You can do without her."

Here it is seen that Maharaja Prthu's true rasa is dasya- rasa. Because his rasa is clearly not srngara-rasa, these words seem to be rasabhasa. Maharaja Prthu's rasa is dasya-rasa and Goddess Laksmi's (padma-kerva lalasah) rasa is srngara-rasa. Here is the explanation: Maharaja Prthu's desire is not at all based on srngara-rasa. It is based only on dasya-rasa. The examples he gives are examples only of devotional service in dasya-rasa. His perception of rivalry with Goddess Laksmi are not inappropriate for a devotee situated in vira-dasya-rasa (heroic servitorship), a devotee who has attained great mercy from the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Others may say Maharaja Prtbu'd words show only his great love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is so merciful to the poor and fallen, and these words do not at all show any true rivalry with goddess Laksmi. This kind of apreciation for the Lord's greeat mercy, thinking the Lord is more merciful to the devotee than He is even to Goddess Laksmi, is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (8.23.6), where Prahlada Maharaja describes Lord Vamana's pastime of stepping on Bali Maharaja's head:

nemam virinco labhate prasadam. . .

"O Supreme Personality of Godhead, You are universally worshiped. Even Lord Brahma and Lord Siva worship Your lotus feet. Yet although You are such a great personality, You have kindly promised to protect us, the demons. I think that such kindness never has been achieved even by Lord Brahma, Lord Siva, or the Goddess of fortune, Laksmi, what to speak of other dmeigods or common people."

That the Supreme Personality of Godhead is more merciful to the devotee than He is even to Goddess Laksmi is seen in this prayer, where Prahlada Maharaja glorifies Lord Nrsimhadeva's mercy to him (srimad-Bhagavatam 7.9.26):

kvaham rajah-prabhava isa tamo 'dhike 'smin jatah suretara-kule kva tavanukampa na brahmano na tu bhavasya na vai ramaya yan me 'rpitah sirasi padma-karah prasadah

"O my Lord, O Supreme, because I was born in a family full of the hellish material qualities of passion and ignorance, what is my position? And what is to bge said of your causeless mercy, which was never offered even to Lord Brahma, Lord siva, or the goddess of fortune, Laksmi? You never put Your lotus hand upon their heads, but You have put it upon mine."

Here Prahlada Maharaja says: "In the presence of Brahma and the demigods You placed Your hand on my head". He says: "Never was such mercyever given in any of Your other avataras." srimad-Bhagavatam 4.20.27-28 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by Maharaja Prthu to Lord sri Visnu.

Anuccheda 176

Now we will consider the vatsalya-rasa enjoyed by the Lord's father, Maharaja Vasudeva, and by others also, and which is sometimes properly manifested, and sometimes improperly manifested in the form of rasabhasa. Vtsalya-rasa is seen in these words spoken by Maharaja Nanda (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.66):

manaso vrttayo nah syuh. . .

"May our thoughts always take shelter of Krsna's lotus feet, may our words always chant His names, and may our bodies always bow down to Him and serve Him."

Lord Krsna's spiritual master also has a relationship in vatsalya-rasa. This is seen in these words spoken by Sudama brahmana in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.80.44):

kim asmabhir anirvrttam deva-deva jagad-guro bhavata satya-kamena yesam vaso guror abhut

"What could I possibly have failed to achieve, O Lord of lords, O universal teacher, since I was able to personally live with You, whose every desire is fulfilled, at the home of our spiritual master?"

Vatsalya - rasa is also seen in these words of Srimad- Bhagavatam (10.80.6 and 27):

krsnasyasit sakha kascit. . .

"Lord Krsna had a certain brahmana friend (named Sudama) who was most learned in Vedic knowledge and detached from all sense enjoyment. Furthermore, his mind was peaceful and his senses subdued."

kathayam cakratuh. . .karau grhya parasparam

"Taking each other's hands, O King, Krsna and Sudama talked pleasantly about how they once lived together in the school of their guru."

In this way vatsalya - rasa is described. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.80.44 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

srngara-rasa is seen in the following words spoken by Queen Rukmini in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.39):

tvam nyasta-danda-munibhir gaditanubhava atmatma-das ca jagatam iti me vrto 'si. . .

"Knowing that the great sages who have renounced the sannyasi's danda proclaim Your glories, that You are the Supreme Soul of all the worlds, and that You are so gracious that You give away even Your own self, I chose You as my husband, rejecting Lord Brahma, Lord siva, and the rulers of heaven, whose aspirations are all frustrated by the force of time, which is born from Your eyebrows. What interest, then, could I have in any other suitors?"

In this verse the word "atma" means paramatma", and "atma-dah" means "who reveals Himself to the liberated souls". Someone may say that in this vesre the mixture of srngara-rasa and santa-rasa creat rasabhasa. This is not so. What seems to be santa-rasa here is simply devotional service, is Queen Rukmini's declaration that she is the maidservant ofher dear husband. Her words are appropriate because they show that she is the crest jewel of all faithful wives devoted to their hsubands. Although they eacvh had hundreds of maidservants, Lord Krsna's queens considered themselves the maidservants of Lord Krsna. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.59.45):

dasi-sata api vibhor vidadhuh sma dasyam

"Although the Supreme Lord's queens each had hundreds of maidservants, they chose to personally serve the Lord.."

Queen Rukmini is Goddess Laksmi herself. Her devotion to the Lord is mixed with knowledge of the Lord's supreme power and opulence. Therefore there is no rasabhasa is her prayers describing that opulence. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.6.39 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by Queen Rukmini.

Anuccheda 178

Even the vraja-gopis, who think only of Lord Krsna's sweetness, are sometimes aware of His power and opulence. This is seen in the following words spoken by the gopiws in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.31.4):

na khalu gopika-nandano bhavan. . .

"You are not actually the son of the gopi Yasoda, O friend, but rather the indwelling witness in the hearts of all embodied souls. Because Lord Brahma prayed for Yon to come and protect the universe, You have now appeared in the Satvata dynasty."

What here seems to be srngara-rasa mixed with santa- rtasa is in truth only joking words spoken by the gopis. This will be explained later in this book. Therefore everything in this verse is proper and there is no rasabhasa. It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.23):

baddhanyaya sraja kacit. . .

"One gopi tied up her slender companion with a flower garland and said, ``Now I will bind this boy who has broken the butter pots and stolen the butter.'' The second gopi then covered her face and beautiful eyes, pretending to be afraid."

These words seem to be a mixture of vatsalya-rasa and srngara-rasa . In truth there is no mixture, nor any rasabhasa in these words. This will be explained later. An example of natural srngara-rasa is seen in these words describing the rasa-dance pastime (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.10):

duhsaha-prestha-viraha. . .

"For those gopis who could not go to see Krsna, intolerable separation from their beloved caused an intense agony that burned away all impious karma. By meditating upon Him they realized His embrace, and the ecstasy they then felt exhausted their material piety. Although Lord Krsna is the Supreme Soul, these girls simply thought of Him as their male lover and associated with Him in that intimate mood. Thus their karmic bondage was nullified and they abandoned their gross material bodies."

These words were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami, the king of sages. Then it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.12):

krsnam viduh param kantam. . .

"O sage, the gopis knew Krsna only as their lover, not as the Supreme Absolute Truth. So how could these girls, their minds caught up in the waves of the modes of nature, free themselves from material attachment?"

These words are a question posed by Maharaja Pariksit. In srila sukadeva Gosvami's answer to this question may seem to be based on a description of liberation, a description of santa- rasa, a description that may seem to be rasabhasa in the context of srngara-rasa. Actually there is no rasabhasa here. This is explained in Krsna-sandarbha. What is seen as liberation (moksa) here is in truth merely the gopis' overcoming the obstacles that prevent them from meeting Lord Krsna. This is not a description of anything else. It is not a description of impersonal liberation (moksa). It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.8):

tam kacin netra-randhrena. . .yogivananda-sampluta

"One gopi took the Lord through the aperture of her eyes and placed Him within her heart. Then, with her eyes closed and her bodily hairs standing on end, she continuously embraced Him within. Thus immersed in transcendental ecstasy, she resembled a yogi meditating upon the Lord."

In this verse the word "yogi" is in the neuter gender. Although they shyly embrace Lord Krsna in their hearts, the gopis in truth embraced Him very earnestly. In this way they attained His association (yogi). Thus there is no rasabhasa here. In whatever passaghes of srimad-Bhagavatam there may seem to be rasabhasa, there is no rasabhasa in truth. Everything in srimad-Bhagavatam is proper and right.

Now seeming contardictions in relation to Lord Balarama and others will be considered. Many contradictions may seem to be manifest in Lord Krsna's many blissful pastimes with His devotees. None of these are contradictions in truth. This is so because of the action of the Lord's inconceivable spiritual potency (acintya-sakti). This is truew for all the devotees qualifiedto participate in the Lord's pastimes. Because He is Lored Krsna's elder brother, Lord Balarama is situated in vatsalya-rasa. Because He is identical with Lord Krsna and beacuse from childhood He enjoys pastimes with Lord Krsna, Lord Balarama is situated in sakhya-rasa. Because He is aware of Lord Krsna's supreme power and opulence (aisvarya), Lord Balarama is a devotee of Lored Krsna. All these features are manifest at the time of Lord Krsna's pastimes with Lord Balarama. The two of Them acting together, Krsna and Balarama attacked sankhacuda, enjoyed the holi-lila, sang, and enjoyed many pastimes. From Dvaraka Lord Balarama carried Lord Krsna's message to the gopis. There is nothing wrong in any of these activities. This truth is confirmed by the words of sriman Uddhava and many others also.

Now will be considered the rasabhasa present when a primary rasa is incompatible with a secondary rasa. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.51):

devaki vasudevas ca vijnaya jagad-isvarau krta-samvandanau putrau sasvajate na sankitau

"Devaki and Vasudeva, now knowing Krsna and Balarama to be the Lords of the universe, simply stood with joined palms. Being apprehensive, they did not embrace their sons."

Here someone may saty that the combination of vatsalya-rasa and bhayanaka-rasa (fear) in this verse is rasabhasa. The previous explanations have already shown that in this situation there is no rasabhasa.

Now will be considered the rasabhasa present when two secondary rasas are incompatible. In the pastime when Lord Krsna entered Kaliya Lake it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.16):

tams tatha kataran viksya bhagavan madhavo balah prahasya kincin novaca prabhava jno 'nujasya sah

"The Supreme Lord Balarama, the master of all transcendental knowledge, smiled and said nothing when He saw the residents of Vrndavana in such distress, since He understood the extraordinary power of His younger brother."

Here Lord Balarama is fully aware of Lord Krsna's power and opulence, and the people of Vraja are plunged in karuna-rasa (grief). In this situation grief is appropriate, but someone may say that Lord Balarama's manifestation of hasya-rasa (smiling) is not appropriate, and therefore rasabhasa is present in this verse. The truth is that Lord Balarama manifests many different natures according to His different pastimes. This has already been explained. In this way He enjoys different pastimes. Here the cause of His smiling is His knowledge of Lord Krsna's supreme power. The people of Vraja, eager to protect Lord Krsna, are situated in a different mood in this situation. If they had known the secret truth of their dear Krsna, they would have smiled also. They would not have worried or lamented. An activity of Lord Balarama performed to benefit the people of Vraja is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.16.22):

krsna-pranan nirvisato nandadin viksya tam hradam pratyasedhat sa bhagavan ramah krsnanubhava-vit

"Lord Balarama then saw that Nanda Maharaja and the other cowherd men, who had dedicated their very lives to Krsna, were beginning to enter the serpent's lake. As the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Balarama fully knew Lord Krsna's actual power, and therefore He restrained them."

At the end of this pastime the people of Vraja regained their Lord Krsna. This is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.17.16):

ramas caCyutam alingya jahasasyanubhava-vit

"Lord Balarama embraced His infallible brother and laughed, knowing well the extent of His potency. Out of great feelings of love, He lifted Him up on His lap and repeatedly looked at Him. The cows, bulls and young female calves also achieved the highest pleasure."

In this verse Lord Balarama smiled because he regained Lord Krsna. In the pastime of the kidnapping of Rukimini and in manyother pastimes also, Lord Balarama's nature of being flooded with love for His brother Krsna is described. In all these pastimes nothing is inappropriate. Therefore Lord Balarama's smiling here is not rasabhasa. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.16.16 quoted here was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Incompatible mixtures of sthayi-bhava in ecstatic love ofr the Supreme Personality of Godhead are called "prity- abhasa". Prity-abhasa is included within rasabhasa. Incompatible mixtures of sancari-bhava are also a kind of rasabhasa.It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.86.32):

sva-vacas tad rtam kartum asmad-drg-gocaro bhavan yad atthaikanta-bhaktan me nanantah srir ajah priyah

"You have said: `Neither Ananta, Goddess sri, nor unborn Brahma is dearer to Me than My unalloyed devotee.' To prove Your own words true, You have now revealed Yourself to our eyes."

This verse may seem to be an incompatible mixture (abhasa) of devotion (bhakti) and pride (garva). In truth there is nothing incompatible in this verse. This verse means: "Because I am Your unalloyed devotee, I am very dear to You. You said: `Lord Ananta is not dear to Me merely because He is the abode where I rest. Goddess sri is not dear to Me merely because she is My wife. Unborn Brahma is not dear to Me merely because he is My son. However, he who is the best of My unalloyed devotees is most dear to Me.' To show that the words You spoke are the truth You have now appeared before my eyes. By coming before me You have given Your mercy to me." These words were spoken by the King of Mithila to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.46.29):

"Uddhava then joyfully addressed Nanda Maharaja, having clearly seen the supreme loving attraction he and Yasoda felt for Krsna, the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In this verse is seen the grief Nanda and Yasoda felt in separation freom Lord Krsna. It would seem that their grief in separation and Uddhava's joy are incompatible. The truth is that they are not incompatible. Here the situation is like the previously described situation where Lord Balarama smiled as the people of Vraja grieved. Uddhava had come to console the people of Vraja. Therefore it would not have been appropriate for him to be morose in their presence. Therefore Uddhava's joy here is filled with a great wonder of the glories of appropriate ecstatic spiritual love. Udshava did succeed in consoling the people of Vraja. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 182

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.14):

tava sutah sati yadadhara-bimbe. . .

"O pious mother Yasoda, your son, who is expert in all the arts of herding cows, has invented many new styles of flute- playing. When He takes His flute to His bimba-red lips and sends forth the tones of the harmonic scale in variegated melodies, Brahma, siva, Indra and other chief demigods become confused upon hearing the sound. Although they are the most learned authorities, they cannot ascertain the essence of that music, and thus they bow down their heads and hearts."

The restlessness here is not like the restlessness felt by Kubja. In srimad-Bhagavatam is a passage where in groups of doble stanzas the gopis describe the sweetness of Lord Krsna's flute. The gopis, however, do not become bewildered by the sound of Lord Krsna's flute as the demigods do. The gopis say in that passage of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.17):

vrajati tena vayam. . .

"As Krsna strolls through Vraja with His lotus- petal-like feet, marking the ground with the distinctive embIems of flag, thunderbolt, lotus and elephant goad, He relieves the distress the ground feels from the cows' hooves. As He plays His renowned flute, His body moves with the grace of an elephant. Thus we gopis, who become agitated by Cupid when Krsna playfully glances at us, stand as still as trees, unaware that our hair and garments are slackening."

There the gopis also say (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.35.3):

vyoma-yana-vanitah. . .

"When Mukunda vibrates the flute He has placed to His lips, stopping its holes with His tender fingers, He rests His left cheek on His left arm and makes His eyebrows dance. At that time the demigoddesses traveling in the sky with their husbands, the Siddhas, become amazed. As those ladies listen, they are embarrassed to find their minds yielding to the pursuit of lusty desires, and in their distress they are unaware that the belts of their garments are loosening."

These words describe the expression of natural ecstatic love. The gopis say in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.20):

kunda-dama. . .

"O sinless Yasoda, your darling child, the son of Maharaja Nanda, has festively enhanced His attire with a jasmine garland, and He is now playing along the Yamuna in the company of the cows and cowherd boys, amusing His dear companions. The gentle breeze honors Him with its soothing fragrance of sandalwood, while the various Upadevas, standing on all sides like panegyrists, offer their music, singing and gifts of tribute."

The gopis also say in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.31):

maivam vibho 'rhati bhavan. . .

"O all-powerful one, You should not speak in this cruel way. Do not reject us, who have renounced all material enjoyment to render devotional service to Your lotus feet. Reciprocate with us, O stubborn one, just as the primeval Lord, sri Narayana, reciprocates with His devotees in their endeavors for liberation."

Someone may say that the gopis' humble appeal for Lord Krsna's association in this verse is inappropriate, an example of rasabhasa. Itis not rasabhasa. In truth these words spoken by the gopis may be interpreted to be a series of puns that show a meaning very different from what seems to be an impassionaed appeal. This will be explained later. In this way the sublime sweetness of the Lord's pastimes is established.

Someone may say that rasabhasa is present in the following statement of Bali Maharaja in srimad-Bhagavatam (8.20.12-13):

yadyapy asav adharmena mam badhniyad anagasam tathapy enam na himsisye bhitam brahma-tanum ripum. . .

"Although He is Visnu Himself, out of fear He has covered Hismelf in the form of a brahmana to come to me begging. Under the circumstances, because He has assumed the form of a brahmana, even if He irreligiously arrests me or even kills me, I shall not retaliate, although He is my enemy. "If this brahmana really is Lord Visnu, who is worshiped by Vedic hymns, He would never give up His widespread reputation. Either He would lie down having been killed by me, or He would kill me in a fight."

Someone may say that these impious words inspired by sukracarya's trickery are improper and therefore bhakty-abhasa (incompatible with devotional service). However, because with His feet Lord Vamana directly touched Bali Maharaja and gave him devotion, these words are not truly bhakty-abhasa. These two verses were spoken by Bali Maharaja to sukracarya.

Here someone may say that because in this verse Uddhava directly addresses Lord Krsna by His name, these words are an example of dasyabhasa (incompatible with Uddhava's mellow of daysa-rasa).In truth there is no dasyabhasa in these words. Because Lord Krsna's names are filled with descriptions of His glories, it is not improper for the Lord's servants to speak His names directly. That the Supreme Lord's names are filled with His glories is described in these words of svetasvatara Upanisad (4.19):

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.75.5):

satam susrusane jisnuh krsnah padavanejane

"Arjuna attended the respectable elders, and Krsna washed everyone's feet."

Here someone may say: "It is not right that Maharaja Yudhisthira engaged Lord Krsna in washing everypne's feet. This is an example of bhakty-abhasa (incompatible with devotional service)." In truth there is no bhakty-abhasa in this verse. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.75.3):

bandhavah paricaryayam tasyasan prema-bandhanah

"At the Rajasuya sacrifice of your saintly grandfather his family members, bound by their love for him, engaged themselves in humble services on his behalf."

Here the family members were not assigned to various services by Maharaja Yudhisthira. Rather, but their own desire they performed these services. Therefore by His own desire Lord Krsna washed everyone's feet. It was not otherwise. In this situation Lord Krsna thought, "My kinsmen still have some past karmic reactions present in their bodies. I should remove all thos karmic reactions." Thus, by the power of Lord Krsna's unstoppable desire, He acted in that way. Lord Krsna also desired to show devotion to Narada Muni and the other brahmanas present there. Therefore He washed their feetto show the respect that should be offered to a brahmana. Lord Krsna Himself said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.69.40):

putra ma khidah

"O brahmana, I am the speaker of religion, its performer and sanctioner. I observe religious principles to teach them to the world, My child, sop do not be disturbed."

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.20-21):

sridama nama gopalo rama-kesavayoh sakha subala-stokakrsnadya gopah premnedam abruvan

"Once, some of the cowherd boys - Sridama, the very close friend of Rama and Krsna, along with Subala, Stokakrsna and others - lovingly spoke the following words.

rama rama maha-sattva krsna dusta-nibarhana ito 'vidure su-mahad vanam talali-sankulam

"(The cowherd boys said:) Rama, Rama, O mighty- armed one! O Krsna, destroyer of the miscreants! Not far from here is a very great forest filled with rows of palm trees."

Someone may say that because the cowherd bosy approached Krsna and Balarama with awe and veneration, this passage is inappropriate for sakhya-rasa (sakhyabhasa). However, yhis passage is in truth not at all inappropriate, for although they were aware that Krsna and Balarama were both very powerful and heroic, the boys still though Krsna and Balarama were still their equals and not their superiors at all. Their awareness of the great power and heroism of Krsna and Balarama, only increased the boys' affection for Them in sakhya-rasa. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.58.14):

salam krsnena sannaddho vihartum vipinam mahat bahu-vyala-mrgakirnam pravisat para-vira-ha

"Once Arjuna, the slayer of powerful enemies, donned his armor, mounted his chariot flying teh flag of Hanuman, took up his bow and his two inexhaustible quivers, and went to sport with Lord Krsna in a large forest filled with fierce animals."

As it was shown in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.15.20-21, the knowledge of Lord Krsna's heroic power enhancted Arjuna's affection for Him in sakhya-rasa. The same kind of situation, where the knowledge of Lord Krsna's heroic power enhances the love His friends feel for Him is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.24):

asman kim atra grasita nivistan ayam tatha ced bakavad vinanksyati

"Then the boys said, `Has this living creature come to swallow us? If he does so, he will immediately be killed like Bakasura, without delay.' Thus they looked at the beautiful face of Krsna, the enemy of Bakasura, and, laughing loudly and clapping their hands, they entered the mouth of the python."

Anuccheda 186

In the description of Lord Krsna's water-pastimes at Dvaraka it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.90.22):

na calasi. . .vasudeva-nandananghrim

"O magnanimous mountain, you neither move nor speak. You must be pondering some matter of great importance. Or do you, like us, desire to hold on your breasts the feet of Vasudeva's darling son?"

Here someone may protest that the queens' mention of their father-in-law's name in addressing their husband in the words "vasudeva-nandananghrim" (the feet of Vasudeva's son) is improper. It is kanta-bhavabhasa (improper in relation to the husband). This protest is without merit. In truth the word "vasudeva" here does not refer to Lord Krsna's father. Rather it means: "the worshipable Lord (deva) who is the great wealth (vasu) of the heart. Even if one argues that still, even if only by coincidence, the word "vasudeva-nandana" certainly soes mean "the son of Vasudeva" and is still improper, then the answer is given that the queens spoke these words in the impulse of wild ecstatic love and they should not be criticized for any fault they may commit by accident. This verse was spoken by Lord Krsna's queens.

It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.33):

tam atmajair drstibhir antaratmana duranta-bhavah parirebhire patim niruddham apy asravad ambu netrayor vilajjatinam bhrgu-varya vaiklavat

"The insuperable ecstasy was so strong that the queens, who were shy, first embraced the Lord in the innermost recesses of their hearts. Then they embraced Him visually, and then they sent their sons to embrace Him [which is equal to personal embracing]. But, O chief amongst the Bhrgus, though they tried to restrain their feelings, they inadvertently shed tears."

Here it is said that, filled with great love (duranta- bhavah), the queens wept (niruddham apy asravat). Here someone may claim that the queens' becoming filled with love for their husband as they watched Him embrace their sons is an improper response on their part. It is kanta-bhavabhasa (improper in relation to the husband). This is so because their making an connection between their sons' embracing their husband with the pleasures they enjoy in private with their husband is improper. This claim of impropriety has no basis. Their feeling their love for their husband increase as they watch Him embrace their sons is an increase of love only in a general sense. It has no relation to the private pleasures of husbands and wives. Therefore there is nothing improper with the queens' glances in this situation. This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

Now the abhasas in relation to the vibhavas will be discussed. In relation to the uddipanabhasas (improper manifestation of the uddipanas) it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.38.8):

yad arcitam. . .yad gopikanam kuca-kunkumankitam

"Those lotus feet are worshiped by Brahma, siva and all the other demigods, by the goddess of fortune, and also by the great sages and Vaisnavas. Upon those lotus feet the Lord walks about the forest while herding the cows with His companions, and those feet are smeared with the kunkuma from the gopis' breasts."

Here someone may complain that these signs indicating the Lord's confidential pastimes are not appropriate for a devotee who seeks to associate with the Lord in the mood of dasya-rasa, and therefore this verse is an example of dasya-bhavabhasa (incompatible with dasya-rasa). In truth there is fault in this verse. The speaker of this verse (Akrura) is thinking only that the Supreme Lord is easily attained by devotional service. The speaker of this verse does not desire to participate in the gopis' confidential pastimes with Lord Krsna. In his commentary on this verse srila sridhara Svami says: "Here the words `yad-gopikanam' indicate that by serving Him with devotion the gopis easily attained association with Lord Krsna." Because the speaker in this verse aspired only to attain devotion to Lord Krsna in general way, there is no fault in this verse. In the same way there is no fault in these words (also spoken by Akrura) in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.38.17):

samarhanam yatra. . .

"By offering charity to that lotus hand, Purandara and Bali earned the status of Indra, King of heaven, and during the pleasure pastimes of the rasa dance, when the Lord wiped away the gopis perspiration and removed their fatigue, the touch of their faces made that hand as fragrant as a sweet flower."

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.38.8 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by Akrura.

Anuccheda 189

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.55.40):

yam vai muhuh. . .

"It is not astonishing that the palace women, who should have felt maternal affection for Pradyumna, privately felt ecstatic attraction for him as if he were their own lord. After all, the son exactly resembled his father. Indeed, Pradyumna was a perfect reflection of the beauty of Lord Krsna, the shelter of the goddess of fortune, and appeared before their eyes as Cupid himself. Since even those on the level of his mother felt conjugal attraction for him, then what to speak of how other women felt when they saw him?"

Here the truth that the palace women were agitated by feelings of amorous love for Pradyumna seems to be inappropriate. What seems here to be inappropriate is actually appropriate, as has already been explained in a previous passage of this book. Someone may say that innapropriate alambanas or inappro{.inappropriate lovers (prity-adhara) bring rasabhasa situations in the descriptions of the yajna - -patnis, pulinda girls, does, and others in srimad-Bhagavatam. This assertion will be refuted later in this book. Someone may claim that an inappropriateness in relation to the object of love (priti-visaya) is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.7):

aksanvatam. . .vaktram vrajesa-sutayoh

"The cowherd girls said: O friends, those eyes that see the beautiful faces of the sons of Maharaja Nanda are certainly fortunate. As these two sons enter the forest, surrounded by Their friends, driving the cows before Them, They hold Their flutes to Their mouths and glance lovingly upon the residents of Vrndavana. For those who have eyes, we think there is no greater object of vision."

Here someone may say that although Lord Krsna and Lord Balarama , still the form of Lord Balarama is not the same as the form of Lord Krsna, and therefore it is not appropriate for Lord %'s girlfriends to have feelings of amorous love for Lord Balarama, and therefore this verse has a rasabhasa of srngara-rasa. The truth, however, is that in this verse the gopis are hiding their amorous feelings for Lord Krsna. They are pretending that they have no amorous feelings for Lord Krsna. Therefore their praising Lord Krsna and Lord Balarama equally is in now way a statement of their amorous feelings for Lord Balarama. Therefore there is no rasabhasa in this verse. In his commentary on srimad-Bhagavatam (10.65.17) srila sridhara Svami states: "The gopis who enjoyed amorous pastimes with Lord Balarama were different from the gopis who enjoyed pastimes with Lord Krsna." srimad-Bhagavatam 10.21.7 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by the goddesslike gopis of Vraja.

Here someone may say that in srimad-Bhagavatam there are descriptions of love where the object of love is a person other than lord Krsna. This, they say, is sangaty-abhasa (improper object of love). They quote this verse describing srimati Devahuti in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.22.16):

kamah sa bhuyat. . .ksipatim iva sriyam

"Let your daughter's desire for marriage, which is recognized in the Vedic scriptures, bew fulfilled. Who would not accept her hand? She is so beautiful that by her bodily luster alone she excels the beauty of her ornaments."

Somoeone may say that Devahuti's devotion to Kardama Muni is bhakty-abhasa (devotion directed to the wrong person). This criticism is not valid. Her union with Kardama Muni brought great glory and good fortune to the world. Therefore no one should find fault with it. This verse was spoken by sri Kardama Muni.

"The almighty Lord Balarama stayed in Mithila for several years, honored by His affectionate devotee Janaka Maharaja. During that time Dhrtarastra's son Duryodhana learned from Balarama the art of fighting with a club."

In this verse the word "vibhuh" (almighty) refers to Lord Balarama. The word "manitah" (honored) and other worlds like it are adjectives modifying Lord Balarama. Any claim that rasabhasa is present in this verse is not justified. There is no rasabhasa here.

Anuccheda 192

These and other seeming examples of rasabhasa in srimad- Bhagavatam are thus shown to be free of any true rasabhasa. It is said: "Even if there is some seeiming rasabhasa, if the sthayi-bhava is very exalted and powerful, then there is no rasabhasa. Then then the rasas are properly manifest. An example of a very exalted and powerful primary rasa negating the possibility of rasabhasa is seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.14.32):

aho bhagyam aho bhagyam nanda-gopa-vrajaukasam yan-mitram paramanandam purnam brahma sanatanam

"How greatly fortunate are Nanda Maharaja, the cowherd men, and all the other inhabitants of Vrajabhumi! There is no limit to their good fortune because the Absolute Truth (Brahman), the source of transcendental bliss, the eternal Supreme Brahman, has become their friend."

In this verse spoken by the demigod Brahma todescribe the people of Vreja there is a misture of jnana-bhakti (the santa- rasa mixture of devoption and philosophical speculation present here by the description of the Brahman feature of the Lord) and bandhu-bhava (love for Lord Krsna as one's friend or kinsman). This misture is not rasabhasa because the taste of the sentiment of thinking of the Lord is one's friend is so sweet and exalted that its glory eclipses the dry mellow of santa-rasa here. The description here of jnana-bhakti is done in the mood of wonder felt within the heart, in the mood of praising the gloriosu good fortune of Vraja's people. Therefore there is no rasabhasa and the rasas are properly manifest (rasollasa) in this description. A similar situation is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam 10.21.11

"All the cowherd boys used to play with Krsna, who is the source of the Brahman effulgence "

A similar situation is also seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.49.9):

bhratreyo bhagavan krsnah saranyo bhakta-vatsalah paitr-svasreyan smareati ramas camburuheksanah

"Does my nephew Krsna, the Supreme Personality and the compassionate shelter of His devotees, still remember His aunt's sons? And does lotus-eyed Rama remember them also?"

For Lord Krsna's paternal aunt devotion mixed with knowledge of Lord Krsna's supreme power and opulence (aisvarya-jnana- mayi bhakti) is not appropriate. For her vatsalya-rasa is proper and appropriate. Here the knowledge that Lord Krsna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead is eclipsed by overwhelming feelings of vatsalya-rasa, feelinsg seen here in the words bhratreyo", "paitr-svasreyan", and amburuheksanah" Because vatsalya-rasa is so gloriosu and prominent in thisverse there is no rasabhasa. All is proper with the rasas (rasollasa). This verse was spoken by Queen Kunti.

Anucchedas 193 and 194

In Lord Ramacandra's sweet pastimes Hanuman has pure dasya- rasa, a rasa still mixed with the knowledge that his master iss the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Although initially it may seem that this is not an appropriate mixture, the sweetness of Hanuman's dasya-rasa eclipses his knowledge that his master is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Thus there is not rasabhasa and everything in these rasas is proper (rasollasa). The glory of this kind of mixture of madhurya (perception of the Lord's sweetness) and aisvarya (knowledge of the Lord's power and opulence) is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.19.3):

om namo bhagavate uttamaslokaya. . .

"Let me please Your Lordship by chanting the bija- mantra omkara. I wish to offer my respectful obeisances unto the Personality of Godhead, who is the best among the most highly elevated personalities. Your Lordship is the reservoir of all the good qualities of Aryans, people who are advanced. Your character and behavior are always consistent, and You always control Your senses and mind. Acting just like an ordinary human being, You exhibit exemplary character to teach others how to behave. There is a touchstone that can be used to examine the quality of gold, but You are like a touchstone that can verify all good qualities. You are worshiped by brahmanas who are the foremost of all devotees. You, the Supreme Person, are the King of kings, and therefore I offer my respectful obeisances unto You."

In this verse the word "bhagavatah" shows the Lord's feature of aisvarya and the word "uttama-slokaya" shows the Lord's feature of madhurya. The Lord's true nature is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.19.4):

yat tad visuddhanubhava-matram ekam. . .

"The Lord, whose pure form [sac-cid-ananda-vigraha] is uncontaminated by the modes of material nature, can be perceived by pure consciousness. In the Vedanta He is described as being one without a second. Because of His spiritual potency, He is un- touched by the contamination of material nature, and because He is not subjected to material vision, He is known as transcendental. He has no material activities, nor has He a material form or name. Only in pure consciousness, Krsna consciousness, can one perceive the transcendental form of the Lord. Let us be firmly fixed at the lotus feet of Lord Ramacandra, and let us offer our respectful obeisances unto those transcendental lotus feet."

In this verse the words "yat-tat" refer to Lord Ramacandra's celebrated form dark like durva grass. The word "matram" describes the Lord's wualities and form, a form manifest sometimes in a white color and sometimes in other colors, a form more effulgent and glorious than the sun and other luminaries. The Lord's nature and His internal potency have already been described in the Bhagavat-sandarbha and other books. Here the Lord's nature is described by the word "ekam". Here the words "sva-tejasa dhvasta-guna-vyavastham" mean "His internal potency throws far away the external potency consisting of three modes". Here the word prasantam" means "he is never stopped by any obstacle", and "pratyak" means "He is seen only by spiritual eyes". This is described in the following words of Katha Upanisad (2.3.9 and 1.2.23):

na caksusa pasyati rupam asya

"With material eyes no one can see the Supreme Lord's form."

yam evaisa vrnute tena labhyas tasyaisa atma vivrnute tanum svam

"The Lord is obtained only by one whom He Hismelf chooses. To such a person He manifests His own form."

What is the nature of the Supreme Lord's form? srimad- Bhagavatam declares: "anama-rupam" (His name and form are not material). Material names and forms are described in these words of Chandogya Upanisad 6.3.2):

etas tisro devata anena jivenatmananupravisya nama-rupe vyakaravani

"In this way the individual spirit souls entered three kinds of material bodies and obtained various material names."

The Supreme Personality of Godhead does not have material names and forms like those of the conditioned spirit souls. The reason the Lord has no material names or forms is given here in the word "niraham" (He is free of material false-ego). In the passage from Chandogya Upanisad the word "atma" refers to the individual spirit soul, who is part and parcel of the Supreme Personality of Godhead (paramatma). The word anena" (by him) here indicates that the individual soul is different from the Supreme Lord. That individual spirit soul then enters a material body The word "devata" here refers to the various kinds of material bodies made of the elements fire, water, and earth. Because of material false-ego the individual soul enters a material body. Although He is present within thr material body as the Supersoul, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not affected by material false ego and thus remains always free from possessing a material name or material body. Free from material false ego, He does not accept a material name or material body. Here someone may ask: "Why does not everyone accept this idea that Lord Ramacandra's form is spiritual in nature?" To this srimad-Bhagavatam gives the answer: "sudhiyopalambhanam" (Only in pure consciousness, Krsna consciousness can one perceive the transcendental form of the Lord). The spiritual nature of the Supreme Lortd's form is also described by Lord Brahma in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.9.3):

natah param parama yad bhavatah svarupam. . .

"O my Lord, I do not see a form superior to Your present form of eternal bliss and knowledge."

Anuccheeda 195

Here someone may ask: "If the Supreme Personality of Godhead has a spiritual form as you say, then why does He come and stay amongst the conditioned souls?" To this the answer is given: There ar many secondary reasons, bu the primary reason the Supreme Personality of Godhead comes to the material world is to show to His devotees the sweetness of His pastimes. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (5.19.5):

martyavataras tv iha

"It was ordained that Ravana, chief of the Raksasas, could not be killed by anyone but a man, and for this reason Lord Ramacandra, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, appeared in the form of a human being. Lord Ramacandra's mission, however, was not only to kill Ravana but also to teach mortal beings that material happiness centered around sex life or centered around one's wife is the cause of many miseries. He is the self-sufficient Supreme Personality of Godhead, and nothing is lamentable for Him. Therefore why else could He be subjected to tribulations by the kidnapping of mother Sita?"

In this verse the word "tu" (but) is used to dispel doubt. Here "martyavatarah" means "He who incarnates in the world of mortals". Then the verse explains: "He does not come to the world of mortals only to kill the demons who trouble the saintly devotees, He comes also to teach the conditioned souls. He reveals to them the true goal of life." But these are only the external secondary reasons He appears in the world of mortals. He also comes to reveal the great sweetness of His pastimes to the devotees, devotees whose desire of the heart is to engage in devotional service, devotees whose heart melt in anguish in separation from the Lord. If the Lord had desired only to kill the demons, He could very easily have killed them by His expansion as the all-pervading Supersoul, and He Himself, in His original form, could have remained in the spiritual world enjoying His pastimes. Why did He come, then, to this world? His main purpose was not to kill the demons. His main purpose was the reveal the sweetness of His pastimes. That is the meaning here.

Anuccheda 196

In this way the Supreme Lord's pastimes are filled with mercy and sublime sweetness. Lord Rama's distess at His separation from Goddess Sita, a distress foundwithin the sweetness of His pastimes, is not a defect in any way. WithiHis pastimes there is no attachment to lust or other faulty emotions, as there is in ordinary material activities. The Lord manifests these pastimes to give mercy to His devotees. This is seen in the following explanation in srimad-Bhagavatam (5.19.6):

na vai sa atmatmavatam. . .

"Since Lord sri Ramacandra is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva, He is not attached to anything in this material world. He is the most beloved Supersoul of all self-realized souls, and He is their very intimate friend. He is full of all opulences. Therefore He could not possibly have suffered because of separation from His wife, nor could He have given up His wife and Laksmana, His younger brother. To give up either would have been absolutely impossible."

Here it is said that the Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva, is not attached to anything in this material world. The reason why He is not attached is given here in the word atma", which means "the Supersoul", and the word bhagavan", which means "He who is full of all powers and opulences", and the word "vasudeva", which means "the shelter of all". Furthermore, it is said here that He is the dearest friend (suhrttamah) of the devotees, who consider Him their master, and who think "the Lord is mine" (atmavatam). It is also said here that the Lord does not truly feel anguished (kaslamam) on separation from His wife. He only manifests this anguish to show His great love. Also,at the time of the devaduta Lord Ramacxandra did not in truth abandon Laksmana. He had not power truly to abandon Him. At the time when He ascended to His own abode in the spiritual world, Lord Ramacandra was reunited with His associates, who had all been waiting for Him. Even today Lord Rama, Sita-devi, and Their associates may be seen on Kimpurusa-varsa. Therefore those pastimes of Lord Rama were only an imitation of the activities natural to human society. That is the meaning here.

Anuccheda 197

To confirm what was said before, the following two verses of srimad-Bhagavatam declare that devotion to the Lord is the only way one can attain the Lord's mercy, mercy that is the sweetest of the Lord's virtues. This is confirmed by the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (5.19.7):

na janma nunam mahato na saubhagam na van na buddhir nakrtis tosa-hetuh tair yad visrstan api no vanaukasas cakara sakhye bata laksmanagrajah

"One cannot establish a friendship with the Supreme Lord Ramacandra on the basis of material qualities such as one's birth in an aristocratic family, one's personal beauty, one's eloquence, one's sharp intelligence or one's superior race or nation. None of these qualifications is actually a prerequisite for friendship with Lord sri Ramacandra. Otherwise how is it possible that although we un- civilized inhabitants of the forest have not taken noble births, although we have no physical beauty and although we cannot speak like gentlemen, Lord Ramacandra has nevertheless accepted us as friends?"

In this verse the word "janma mahatah" means birth from the Supreme Personality of Godhead", saubhagam" means "beauty", "akrtih" means "birth", "yat" means "from which", taih" means "birth and other like things", visrstan" means "rejected", "nah" means we who pleased the Lord with our devotional service of searching for Sita-devi and engaging in other kinds of devotional service also", "bata" means indeed", laksmanagrajah" the elder brother of Laksmana, who is endowed with all virtues and who is Sumitra's son", sakhye" means "made friendship, for in these pastimes friendship and not servitude was the appropriate rasa". This verse describes Sugriva.

Anucchedab 198

The next verse declares (srimad-Bhagavatam 5.19.8):

suro 'suro vapy atha vanaro narah sarvatmana yah sukrtajnam uttamam bhajeta ramam manujakrtim harim ya uttaran anayat kosalan divam iti

"Therefore, whether one is a demigod or a demon, a man or a creature other than man, such as a beast or bird, everyone should worship Lord Ramacandra, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who appears on this earth just like a human being. There is no need of great austerities or penances to worship the Lord, for Me accepts even a small service offered by His devotee. Thus He is satisfied, and as soon as He is satisfied, the devotee is successful. Indeed, Lord sri Ramacandra brought all the devotees of Ayodhya back home, back to Godhead [Vaikuntha]."

The previous verse described devotion to the Lord's humanlike transcendental form, devotion based on knowledge of the Lord's true nature and status. This verse describes devotion based on perception of the Lord's sweetness. In that situation the devotee worships the humanlike form of the Lord (manujakrtim harim). Here the word "ramam" means "the form of Lord Rama, not the form of Kapila or any other form of the Lord". Here "uttamam" means "whose transcendental qualities have no equal ro superior", and "sukrtaj am" means "He who is pleased by even a small quantity of devotional service". This verse was spoken by sri Hanuman.

It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.29-32):

maivam vibho 'rhati. . .

"The wives of the brahmanas replied: O almighty one, please do not speak such cruel words. Rather, You should fulfill Your promise that You always reciprocate with Your devotees in kind. Now that we have attained Your lotus feet, we simply wish to remain here in the forest so we may carry upon our heads the garlands of tulasi leaves You may neglectfully kick away with Your lotus feet. We are ready to give up all material relationships."

It is again said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.30):

prestho bhavams tanu-bhrtam kila bandhur atma

"Our dear Krsna, as an expert in religion You have advised us that the proper religious duty for women is to faithfuIly serve their husbands, children and other relatives. We agree that this principle is valid, but actually this service should be rendered to You. After all, O Lord, You are the dearmost friend of all embodied souls. You are their most intimate relative and indeed their very Self."

Because they are filled with jokes and puns, these verses are very glorious and show perfectly compatible cominations of the rasas.

Sometimes in a secondary way the rasas may be incompatibe and in the primary way the rasas are compatible. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.45):

tvak-smasru-roma-nakha-kesa. . .

"A woman who fails to relish the fragrance of the honey of Your lotus feet becomes totally befooled, and thus she accepts as her husband or lover a living corpse covered with skin, whiskers, nails, head-hair, and body hair and filled with flesh, bones, blood, parasites, feces, mucus, bile, and air."

These words were spoken by sri Rukmini. Here, although the presence of bibhatsa-reasa (horror) is incompatible, that incompatibility is eclipsed by Rukimini-devi's praise of her beloved husband, Lord Krsna. Therefore the result is glorious and in the final result the rasas are considered compatible. It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.10.30):

etah param stritvam apastapesalam nirasta-saucam bata sadhu kurvate yasam grhat puskara-locanah patir na jatv apaity ahrtibhir hrdi sprsan

"All these women auspiciously glorified their lives despite their being without individuality and without purity. Their husband, the lotus-eyed Personality of Godhead, never left them alone at home. He always pleased their hearts by making valuable presentations."

In this verse the word "stritvam" mweans birth as a woman". sri Rukmini and the other queens came from different classes of society. The word "apastapesalam" here describes their situation. These words do not describe sri Rukimini and the other queens born in higher classes. The other queens, born as lower-class women, may have had some faults, but by glorifying Lord Krsna they all became supremely purified. That is the way they became saintly, free of faults, and decorated with all virtues. Then this verses explains that Lord Krsna, giving apopropriate gifts to His beloved queens, touched their hearts. At heart attached to them, Lord Krsna did not leave their homes. As in a previous example the presence of bibhatsa- rasas gave a superficial appearance of rasabhasa that in in the end was not atb all present, so in this verse any appearance of rasabhasa is not real. There is no rasabhasa in this verse. This verse was spoken by the ladies in Hastinapura, the city of the Kauravas.

As before, an example of what seems to be rasabhasa of a primary and secondary rasa, but in the end is understood to be a compatible mixture of rasas is seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.16.20):

gopyo 'nurakta-manaso bhagavaty anante tat-sauhrda-smita-viloka-girah smarantyah graste 'hina priyatame bhrsa-duhkha-taptah sunyam priya-vyatihrtam dadrsus tri-lokam

"When the young gopis, whose minds were constantly attached to Krsna, the unlimited Supreme Lord, saw that He was now within the grips of the serpent, they remembered His loving friendship, His smiling glances and His talks with them. Burning with great sorrow, they saw the entire universe as void."

Here the secondary rasa, karuna-rasa (lamentation), is compatible, and the primary rasa, srngara-rasa, seems to be incompatible. However, in this situation the gopis' remembrace of Lord Krsna's smiling glances acts to make their sorrow glorious. For this reason the mixture of these rasas is compatible, and there is no rasabhasa. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

An example of what seems to be a sancari-bhava incompatible with a primary rasa is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.8):

ta varyamanah patibhih. . .

"Their husbands, fathers, brothers and other relatives tried to stop them, but Krsna had already stolen their hearts. Enchanted by the sound of His flute, they refused to turn back."

Here it may at first seem that the gopis' restlessness (capalya) is incompatible with their being completely enchanted (moha) by Lord Krsna. Both, however, combine to nourish the gopis' exalted, guileless ecstatic love for Lord Krsna. Therefore the rasas here are compatible, and there is no rasabhasa. Now some other similar examples will be given. Sometimes what at first seems to be rasabhasa in the end is found to be a perfectly compatible misture of rasas. An example of this may be seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.85.18):

yuvam na nah sutau saksat pradhana-purusesvarau

"You are not our sons but the very Lords of both material nature and its creator (Maha-Visnu). As You Yourself have told us, You have descended to rid the earth of the rulers who are a heavy burden upon her."

Someone may claim that in this verse Vasudeva's paternal vatsalya-rasa is incompatible with his devotion in awe and reverence. In truth these two sentiments are not incompatible here. This has already been described in our discussion of another verse, a verse describing Lord Balarama. In this way it is seen that the rasas are compatible in this verse. There is no rasabhasa here.

Anuccheda 203

In this way the rasas of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead are described. The rasa of devotional service mixed with knowledge (jnana-bhaktimaya-rasa) is also called by the name santa-rasa. In this rasa of devotion mixed with knowledge the alambana (prime impetus of ecstatic love) and the visaya (object of love) are both the transcendental form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead (bhagavan) manifest as the Supreme Brahman (para-brahma). Here the adhara (lovers) are the great jnani- bhaktas who personally participate in the Supreme Lord's pastimes. The Supreme Personality of Godhead as He manifests in this rasa is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.37):

evam tadaiva bhagavan aravinda-nabhah

"At that very moment, the Lord, who is called Padmanabha because of the lotus grown from His navel and who is the delight of the righteous, learned about the insult offered by His own servants to the saints. Accompanied by His spouse, the goddess of fortune, He went to the spot on those very feet sought for by recluses and great sages."

When they arrived in Vaikuntha, the four Kumaras saw this form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The jnani-bhaktas are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.7.10):

atmaramas ca munayo

"All different varieties of atmaramas [those who take pleasure in atma, or spirit self], especially those established on the path of seff-realization, though freed from all kinds of material bondage, desire to render unalloyed devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead. This means that the Lord possesses transcendental qualities and therefore can attract everyone, including liberated souls."

The four Kumaras and many others are atmaramas are described in this verse. srila sukadeva Gosvami, who was attracted by the nectar sweetness of the rasas in the Supreme Lord's pastimes and who was rapt in reciting srimad-Bhagavatam, is also described in that verse. In santa-rasa the uddipanas (secondary impetuses for ecstatic love) are primarily the Supreme Lord's qualities, activities, and paraphernalia. Here the Lord's qualities include His eternal form of knowledge and bliss, His form always being manifest, His being the master of all opulences, His being the all-pervading Supersoul, His being the master of the knoledge- potency, His being all-powerful, His giving liberation to the enemies He kills, His being dear to the devotees in santa-rasa, His being equal to all, His being self-controlled, His being peaceful, His purity, and His manifesting wonderful forms. The Lord's activities being with His acting to protect His devotees and include a host of other activities also. His paraphenralia include His great Upanisads, the dust of the jnani-bhaktas' feet, His Tulasi-devi, His transcendental abodes, and many other things also. Now the anubhavas (activities of ecstatic love) will be described. Here the anubhavas include: praising the Supreme Lord's transcendental qualities and other features, chanting the holy names of the Lord in His forms as Brahman, Paramatma, and other forms, tasting the bliss of seeing the Lord in His Brahman feature, and yearning to see the Lord in His original feature as Bhagavan (the Supreme Personality of Godhead). Here the sattvika-bhavas include: staring at the tip of the nose, performing the actions of an avadhuta, assuming the jnana-mudra posture, yawning, observing silence, bowing down before the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and offering prayers to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Most of these activities are material in nature. In this rasa the sancari-bhavas (symptoms of ecstatic love) include: being detached from material things, steadiness, joyfulness, thoughtfulness, meditation, gravity, eagerness, earnestness, and the philosophical search for the truth. The sthayi-bhava (continuous ecstasy) of the jnani-bhaktas is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.46):

yo 'ntarhito hrdi gato 'pi duratmanam tvam so 'dyaiva no nayana-mulam ananta raddhah

"Our dear Lord, You are not manifested to rascals, even though You are seated within the heart of everyone. But as far as we are concerned, we see You face to face, although You are unlimited. The statements we have heard about You from our father, Brahma, through the ears have now been actually realized by Your kind appearance."

The attainment of santa-rasa is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.15.43):

tasyaravinda-nayanasya padaravinda- kinjalka-misra-tulasi-makaranda-vayuh antar-gatah sva-vivarena cakara tesam sanksobham aksara jusam api citta-tanvoh

"When the breeze carrying the aroma of tulasi leaves from the toes of the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead entered the nostrils of those sages, they experienced a change both in body and in mind, even though they were attached to the impersonal Brahman understanding."

In this verse the lotus-eyed Lord (aravinda-nayanasya) is the alambana, the breeze is the uddipana, the change in body is the udbhasvara, sattvika-bhava, and anubhava, and the change in mind is the sancari-bhava, which consists of spiritual happiness. Even though they were situated in impersonal Brahman understanding, the sages attained devotional service mixed with knowledge (jnana-bhakti). That kind of devotional service was the sthayi-bhava (continuous ecstasy) they felt. All these together culiminate in jnana-bhakti (devotional service mixed with knowledge). That was the rasa they experienced. Now we will discuss the bhakti-rasa known as asraya-rasa (the rasa of taking shelter of Lord Krsna). In this rasa Lord Krsna is the object of love and certain devotees who participate in Lord Krsna's pastimes are the lovers. In different situations sometimes Lord Krsna manifests His humanlike form and sometimes He manifests His form as the supreme controller. In the presence of the residents of Vraja He manifests His supremely sweet and glorious humanlike form. The devotees are of two kinds: 1. the external devotees who serve the Lord by performing specific duties in the material world, and 2. the confidential devotees for whom the shade of Lord Krsna's feet is their very life. In the first group the demigods Brahma, siva, and some others are considered confidential devotees because of their great devotion to the Lord. The second group is divided into three parts: 1. the devotees in general, 2. the residents of the cities of the Yadus (like Mathura and Dvaraka), and 3. the residents of Vraja. In the first of these groups are included the kings imprisoned by Jarasandha, the great sages, and many others, and in the second and third groups are included Janaka Maharaja (the king of Mithila) and many other devotees. Included among the uddipanas in this rasa are Lord Krsna's qualities. Included among His qualities are the following: 1. being the master of all opulences (bhagavattvam) in His relationship with the devotees who take shelter of Him as the supreme controller, 2. being the seed of all avataras (avataravali-bijatvam), 3. being the attractor of the self- satisfied sages (atmaramakarsitvam), 4. being the giver of ecstatic devotional service to Putana and others who only pretend to engage in devotional service, 5. manifesting numberless material universes from the pores of His skin, 6. being an ocean of mercy to the devotees who take shelter of Him as He is manifest in His humanlike form, 7. being the protector of anyone who takes shelter of Him, 8. possessing inconceivable potencies, 9. being the supreme object of worship, 10. being all- knowing, 11. being firm in vow, 12. possessing all wealth and all good fortune, 13. being naturally patient and tolerant, 14. being righteous, 15. being truthful, 16. being expert, 17. being all- auspicious, 18. being supremely powerful and glorious, 19. being the best follower of religion, 20. seeing through the eyes of the scriptures, 21. being the devotee's friend and well-wisher, 22. generosity, 23. power 24. fame, 25. strength, 26. tolerance, 27. ability, 28. being controlled by love, and many other transcendental qualities also. Now we will consider Lord Krsna's castes. The first group of devotees (the devotees in general) accept that Lord Krsna is a cowherd boy or a member of another caste (as a ksatirya in Dvaraka). This acceptance of caste by the Lord is only an imitation. Lord Krsna's dark complexion and many other things remind (smaraka) the devotees of Him. The devotees in the second group (the residents of Vraja, Mathura, and Dvaraka) thinkt hat Lord Krsna is the best of all gopas or the best of all ksatriyas. Now Lord Krsna's activities will be considered. For the first group of devotees (the devotees in general) Lord Krsna's creation and maintenance of the material worlds and His revelation of His universal form are prominent. For the second group of devotees (the residents of Vraja, Mathura, and Dvaraka) Lord Krsna's killing the dfemons, protecting His devotees, and casting His glance of mercy are prominent. Now Lord Krsna's paraphernalia will be considered. Lord Krsna's weapons, musical instruments, ornaments, abodes, footprints, and devotees are prominent among His paraphernalia. For the first group of devotees these are all clearly transcendental. For the second group of devotees these seem to be material even though they certainly are transcendental in fact. Now the time sequence of Lord Krsna will be considered. For both the first and second groups of devotees these begin with Lord Krsna's birth in this world and end with His departure for the spiritual world. Now the anubhavas in this rasa will be considered. The anubhavas include residing in places sacred to Lord Krsna, chanting the glories of Lord Krsna's holy names and qualities, and performing other like devotional activities. Now the sancari-bhavas in this rasa will be discussed. When the devotees associate with Lord Krsna the sancari-bhavas are joy, pride, and steadiness. When the devotees are separated from Lord Krsna the sancari-bhavas are sickness and exhaustion. In both association with and separation from the Lord are manifest the sancari-bhavas detachment, anxiety, moroseness, humbleness, worry, meditation, embarassment, thoughtfulness, and death. An example of meditation on the Lord even when the Lord is present before the devotee is seen in this description of Bhismadeva's actions in srimad- Bhagavatam (1.9.31):

"By pure meditation, looking at Lord sri Krsna, he at once was freed from all material inauspiciousness and was relieved of all bodily pains caused by the arrow wounds. Thus all the external activities of his senses at once stopped, and he prayed transcendentally to the controller of all living beings while quitting his material body."

Unhappy that he may have offended Lord Krsna by attacking Him in battle, Bhismadeva prays in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.34):

yudhi turaga-rajah. . .mama nisita-sarair vibhidyamana-tvaci

"On the battlefield [where sri Krsna attended Arjuna out of friendship], the flowing hair of Lord Krsna turned ashen due to the dust raised by the hoofs of the horses. And because of His labor, beads of sweat wetted His face. All these decorations, intensified by the wounds dealt by my sharp arrows, were enjoyed by Him. Let my mind thus go unto sri Krsna."

Bhismadeva again prays in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.9.38):

sita-visikha-hatah. . .

"May He, Lord Sri Krsna, the Personality of Godhead, who awards salvation, be my ultimate destination. On the battlefield He charged me, as if angry because of the wounds dealt by my sharp arrows. His shield was scattered, and His body was smeared with blood due to the wounds."

srimad-Bhagavatam 1.9.31 quoted here was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

Sthayi-bhava (continuous ecstasy) as manifested in asraya- rasa is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.7):

bhavaya nas tvam bhava visva-bhavana tvam eva ma-tatha suhrt-patih pita tvam sad-gurur nah paramam ca daivatam yasyanuvrttya krtino babhuvima

"O creator of the universe, You are our mother, well-wisher, Lord, father, spiritual master and worshipable Deity. By following in Your footsteps we have become successful in every respect. We pray, therefore, that You continue to bless us with Your mercy."

In this verse the vibhavas, udbhasvaras, anubhavas, sattvika-bhavas, and other kinds of ecstasy combine to make a wonderfully sweet rasa. It is said:

sad-bhavas ced vibhavader dvayor ekasya va bhavet jhatity anya-samaksepat tada doso na vidyate

"If the transcendental bhavas and vibhavas meet together and nothing incompatible arises, then there is no fault in the rasas."

Here the word "anya-samaksepat" means incompatible in that situation". srimad-Bhagavatam 1.11.7 quoted here was spoken by the citizens of Dvaraka to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Asraya-rasa is of two kinds: 1. asraya-rasa in separation from the Lord, and 2. asraya-rasa in direct association with the Lord. Asraya-rasa in separation from the Lord is again of two kinds: 1. initial separation, before meeting the Lord, and 2. separation when the Lord is far away. Asraya-rasa in direct association with the Lord is also of two kinds: 1. eventually meeting the Lord again after one of the two kinds of separation, and 2. the regular direct association called by the names siddhi" (perfection" and "tusti" (happiness). Initial separation, before meeting the Lord, is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.70.31):

iti magadha-samruddha bhavad-darsana-kanksinah prapannah pada-mulam te dinanam sam vidhiyatam

"This is the message of the kings imprisoned by Jarasandha, who all hanker for Your audience, having surrendered to Your feet. Please bestow good fortune on these poor souls."

Here the words "bhavad-darsana-kanksinah" indicate that the kings yearned to become free of their imprisonment in order to see Lord Krsna. In this is seen the sthayi-bhava. Here the soles of the Lord's feet (pada-mulam) are the alambana, the kings' imprisonment is the uddipana, their surrender to the Lord is the udbhasvara, their eagerness and humility are the sancari- bhavas. From this the sattvika-bhavas and other bhavas are known. This verse was spoken by the kings' messenger to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

The "siddhi" kind of direct association with the Lord is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.73.2- 7):

dadrsus te ghana-syamam pita-kauseya-vasasam srivatsankam catur-bahum. . .

. . .pibanta iva caksurbhyam lihanta iva jihvaya jighranta iva nasabhyam rambhanta iva bahubhih pranemur hata-papmano murdhabhih padayor hareh krsna-sandarsanahlada- dhvasta-samrodhana-klamah prasasamsur hrsikesam girbhih pranjalayo nrpah

"The kings then beheld the Lord before them. His complexion was dark blue like the color of a cloud, and Hewore a yellow silk garment. He was distinguished by the srivatsa mark on His chest, His four mighty arms, the pinkish hue of His eyes, which resembled the whorl of a lotus, His lovely, cheerful face, His gleaming makara earrings, and the lotus, club, conchshell, and disc in His hands. A helemt, a jeweled necklace, a golden belt, and golden bracelets and armlest decorated His form, and on His neck He wore both the brilliant precious Kaustubha gem and a garland of forest flowers. The kings seemed to drink His beauty with their eyes, lick Him with their tongues, relish His fragrance with their nostrils, and embrace Him with their arms. Their past sins now eradicated, the kings all bowed down to Lord Hari, placing their heads at His feet. "The ecstasy of beholding Lord Krsna having dispelled the weariness of theior imprisonment, the kings stood with joined palsm and offered words of praise to that supreme master of the senses."

These verses are an example of utpreksa, the fanciful kind of metaphor where one things is imagined to have become another. Here wide-opened eyes are imagined to be drinking, wide- opened mouths are imagined to be licking Lord Krsna's fragrant lotus feet, and blossomed-wide nostrils are imagined to be smelling the fragrance of all of Lord Krsna's limbs. UIn this way, because of their great devotion, the kings are attracted to Lord Krsna's feet. Overcome with ecstatic love, it is as if they embraced the lord's feet. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Separation when the Lord is in a distant place is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.9):

yarhy ambujaksapasasara. . .

"O lotus-eyed Lord, whenever You go away to Mathura-Vrndavana or Hastinapura to meet Your friends and relatives, every moment of Your absence seems like a million years. O infallible one, at that time our eyes become useless, as if bereft of sun."

This verse describes the separation felt by the citizens of Dvaraka. The separation felt by the people of Vraja is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.25):

yadu-patir dvirada-raja-viharah. . .

"With His cheerful face resembling the moon, lord of the night, the Lord of the Yadus moves with the grace of a regal elephant. Thus He returns in the evening, delivering the cows of Vraja from the heat of the day."

Here it is said that Lord Krsna deliughted the young and old cows. How much more did He give delight to the human beings? The "tusti" kind of association with the Lord is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.1):

anartan sa upavrajya svrddhan jana-padan svakan dadhmau daravaram tesam visadam samayann iva

"Upon reaching the border of His most prosperous metropolis, known as the country of the Anartas [Dvaraka], the Lord sounded His auspicious conchshell, heralding His arrival and apparently pacifying the dejection of the inhabitants."

The word "iva" (as if) used here is a rhetorical ornament. This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

Anuccheda 208

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.35.25 quoted above it was said that Lord Krsna delighted the people of Vraja and delivered them from their sufferings. This is confirmed by the folloing words spoken by the goddesslike gopis of Vraja in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.10):

vrndavanam sakhi bhuvo vitanoti kirtim. . .

"O friend, Vrndavana is spreading the glory of the earth, having obtained the treasure of the lotus feet of Krsna, the son of Devaki. The peacocks dance madly when they hear Govinda's flute, and when other creatures see them from the hilltops, they all become stunned."

TRe gopis also say in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.4):

hanta citram abalah srnutedam. . .

"O girls! This son of Nanda, who gives joy to the distressed, bears steady lightning on His chest and has a smile like a jeweled necklace. Now please hear something wonderful. When He vibrates His flute, Vraja's bulls, deer and cows, standing in groups at a great distance, are all captivated by the sound, and they stop chewing the food in their mouths and cock their ears. Stunned, they appear as if asleep, or like figures in a painting."

Now the devotional dasya-rasa (servitorship) will be considered. In this rasa the alambana is Lord Krsna in His feature as a master. The object of service is Lord Krsna, and the servitors are the glorious servants who directly participate in Lord Krsna's pastimes. As in the previous rasa, in this rasa Lord Krsna manifests two kinds of forms: 1. the form of the opulent supreme controller (paramesvara-akara), and 2. a glorious humanlike form (nara-akara). Some servants serve the forst of these forms, and other servants serve the other. Thus there are two kinds of servants. Again there are three kinds of servants: 1. servants who serve the Lord's body (anga-sevaka), 2. servants who act as the Lord's associates (parsada), and 3. servants the Lord sends on specific missions (presya). The anga-sevaka servants anoint the Lord's body with fragrant ointments, offer the Lord betelnuts and fragrant scents, dress the Lord in exquisite garments, and serve Him in many other ways. The parsada servants become the Lord's advisor, chariot-driver, a general of His army, a judge in His judicial system, an administrator of parts of His kingdom, and they also assume many other like duties. With their great learning and expertise they delight the Lord's royal conclave. Because of his exalted position the Lord's priest is counted among His gurus. Thus the Lord's priest is amongst His associates (parsada). The presyas include the Lord's chariot-driver, footsoldiers, artisans, and others. As were the previously mentioned servants, these servants are all very dear to the Lord. sri Uddhava, Daruka, and others who very closely serve the Lord are the most dear of the Lord's servitors. Lord Krsna said to Uddhava in srimad-Bhagavatam (11.11.49):

tvam me bhrtyah suhrt sakha

"O Uddhava, you are my servant, well-wisher, and friend."

In this rasa the uddipanas are the same as were previously described. For the anga-sevaka servants the Lord's qualitiese include His handsomeness, delicateness, and other qualities, the Lord's activities include His eating, sleeping, and other like activities, and the Lord's paraphernalia include the articles used to serve the Lord and the remnants of what has been enjoyed by the Lord. For the parsada servants the Lord's qualities include His status as the supreme master, and many other qualities. For the presya servants the Lord's qualities include His power, glory, and other qualities. Here the anubhavas are primarily as were described before. Directly associating with the Lord, the servants perform their respective duties. If trembling, becoming stunned, or other ecstatic symptoms become manifest in them when they perform thir duties of serving the Lord, the servants lament. The Lord's servants are very extraordinary. For them ecstatic symptoms are both common and powerful. Even when the Lord is not present dasya-rasa is very powerful and exalted. When the Lord is not present His servants continue to perform their duties of serving Him. Here the sancari-bhavas are as previously were described. The sthayi-bhava is service with devotion. For Akrura and others like him knowledge of the Lord's power and opulence is prominent. For Uddhava and others like him knwoledge of the Lord's sweetness is prominent. The Lord's servants in Vraja know only the Lord's sweetness and nothing else. Their devotion is very great. They worship Lord Krsna because His is Vraja's prince, because He has a host of transcendental qualities, and because He is supremely glorious. About Akrura it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.38.28):

dadarsa krsnam ramam ca vraje go-dohanam gatau. . .

"Akrura then saw Krsna and Balarama in the village of Vraja, going to milk the cows. Krsna wore yellow garments, Balarama blue, and Their eyes resembled autumnal lotuses. One of those two mighty-armed youths, the shelters of the goddess of fortune, had a dark-blue complexion, and the other's was white. With Their fine-featured faces They were the most beautiful of all persons. As they walked with the gait of young elephants, glancing about with compassionate smiles, those two exalted personalities beautified the cow pasture with the impressions of Their feet, which bore the marks of the flag, lightning bolt, elephant goad and lotus. The two Lords, whose pastimes are most magnanimous and attractive, were ornamented with jeweled necklaces and flower garlands, anointed with auspicious, fragrant substances, freshly bathed, and dressed in spotless raiment. They were the primeval Supreme Personalities, the masters and original causes of the universes, who had for the welfare of the earth now descended in Their distinct forms of Kesava and Balarama. O King Pariksit, They resembled two gold-bedecked mountains, one of emerald and the other of silver, as with Their effulgence They dispelled the sky's darkness in all directions."

In this part of the Lord's pastimes Akrura saw the Lord's sweetness. Later Akrura saw the Lord's power and opulence manifest in a lake of the Yamuna. For Akrura seeing the Lord's wonderful power and opulence was more important that seeing His sweetness. For sri Uddhava Lord Krsna's sweetness was most important. This is clearly seen in the words Uddhava spoke glorifying the good fortune of Gokula's residents. When the Lord's was absent, Uddhava meditated on the sweetness of Lord Krsna's humanlike pastimes. Thus he felt the pangs of separation from the Lord. Uddhava said in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.2.16):

mam khedayaty etad ajasya janma- vidambanam yad vasudeva-gehe vraje ca
vaso'ri-bhayad iva svayam purad vyavatsid yad-ananta-viryah

"When I think of Lord Krna - how He was born in the prison house of Vasudeva although He is unborn, how He went away from His father's protection to Vraja and lived there incognito out of fear of the enemy, and how, although unlimitedly powerful, He fled from Mathura in fear - all these bewildering incidents give me distress."

Lord Krsna's glories are described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (3.2.12):

yan martya-lilaupayikam. . .

"The Lord appeared in the mortal world by His internal potency, yoga-maya. He came in His eternal form, which is just suitable for His pastimes. These pastimes were wonderful for everyone, even for those proud of their own opulence, including the Lord Himself in His form as the Lond of Vaikuntha. Thus His (sri Krsna's) transcendental body is the ornament of all ornaments."

Lord Krsna's supremely sweet pastimes are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.2.25-28):

vasudevasya devakyam jato bhojendra-bandhane cikirsur bhagavan asyah sam ajenabhiyacitah

"The Personaiity of Godhead, Lord sri Krsna, being prayed to by Brahma to bring welfare to the earth, was begotten by Vasudeva in the womb of his wife Devaki in the prison of the King of Bhoja."

tato nanda-vrajam itah pitra kamsad vibibhyata ekadasa samas tatra gudharcih sa-balo 'vasat

"Thereafter, His father, being afraid of Kamsa, brought Him to the cow pastures of Mabaraja Nanda, and there He lived for eleven years like a covered flame with His elder brother, Baladeva."

parito vatsapair vatsams carayan vyaharad vibhuh yamunopavane kujad-dvija-sankulitanghripe

"In His childhood, the Almighty Lord was surrounded by cowherd boys and calves, and thus He traveled on the shore of the Yamuna River, through gardens densely covered with trees and filled with vibrations of chirping birds."

kaumarim darsayams cestam preksaniyam vrajaukasam rudann iva hasan mugdha-bala-simhavaloka nah

"When the Lord displayed His activities just suitable for childhood, He was visible only to the residents of Vrndavana. Sometimes He would cry and sometimes laugh, just like a child, and while so doing He would appear like a lion cub."

Here the words "Sometimes He would cry and sometimes laugh" mean that in the presence of Mother Yasoda and others Lord Krsna acted like an ordinary child. These verses were spoken by sriman Uddhava.

The residents of Vraja knew only the Lord's sweetness. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.17):

pada-samvahanam cakruh kecit tasya mahatmanah apare hata-papmano vyajanaih samavijayan

"Some of the cowherd boys, who were all great souls, would then massage His lotus feet, and others, qualified by being free of all sin, would expertly fan the Supreme Lord."

Here the word "mahatmanah" means "endowed with great virtues" and the word "hata-papmanah" means "free of any sins that might stop their good fortune". Speaking these humble words, srila sukadeva Gosvami yearns to become like these cowherd boys. These words were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Dasya-rasa is also described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.21.18):

"Of all the devotees, this Govardhana Hill is the best! O my friends, this hill supplies Krsna and Balarama, along with Their calves, cows and cowherd friends, with all kinds of necessities-water for drinking, very soft grass, caves, fruits, flowers and vegetables. In this way the hill offers respects to the Lord. Being touched by the lotus feet of Krsna and Balarama, Govardhana Hill appears very jubilant."

Beginning with the vibhavas and culminating in sthayi-bhava, this rasa is fiilled with wonder. An example of a devotee at the time before His first meeting Lord Krsna is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.38.10):

apy adya visnor manujatvam iyuso bharavataraya bhuvo nijecchaya lavanya-dhamno bhavitopalambhanam mahyam na na syat phalam anjasa drsah

"I am going to see the Supreme Lord Visnu, the reservoir of all beauty, who by His own sweet will has now assumed a humanlike form to relieve the earth of her burden. Thus there is no denying that my eyes will achieve the perfection of their existence."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by Akrura.

"The joy of seeing the Supreme Lord flooded Akrura's eyes with tears and decorated his limbs with eruptions of ecstasy. He felt such eagerness that he could not speak to present himself, O King."

The words "he could not speak to present himself" mean "He could not say: I am Akrura. I offer my respectful obeisances to You.' " This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

An example of a devotee feels separation in Lord Krsna's absence is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.2.1-3):

iti bhagavatah prstah ksattra vartam priyasrayam prativaktum na cotseha autkanthyat smaritesvarah

"When the great devotee Uddhava was asked by Vidura to speak on the messages of the dearest Lord Krsna, Uddhava was unable to answer immediately due to excessive anxiety at the remembrance of the Lord.

yah panca-hayano matra pratar-asaya yacitah tan naicchad racayan yasya saparyam bala-lilaya

"He was one who even in his childhood, at the age of five years, was so absorbed in the service of Lord Krsna that when he was called by his mother for morning breakfast, he did not wish to have it.

sa katham sevaya tasya kalena jarasam gatah prsto vartam pratibruyad bhartuh padav anusmaran

"Uddhava thus served the Lord continually from childhood, and in his old age that attitude of service never slackened. As soon as he was asked about the message of the Lord, he at once remembered all about Him."

In these verses the word "Bhagavatah" refers to sriman Uddhava and ksattra" refers to Vidura. The word jarasam" means "twenty-five years old". This word does not mean that he had become old. True, he was of approximately the same age as Lord Krsna. Still, as Lord Krsna never became old and infirm, so Uddhava also never became old. This is described in sri Krsna-sandarbha (Anuccheda 117). Lord Krsna personally glorified Uddhava in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (3.4.31):

noddhavo 'nv api man-nyunah. . .

"Uddhava is not inferior to Me in any way because he is never affected by the modes of material nature. Therefore he may remain in this world in order to disseminate specific knowledge of the Personality of Godhead."

It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.45.19):

tatra pravasayo 'py asan yuvano 'ti-balaujasah. . .

"Even the most elderly inhabitants of the city appeared youthful, full of strength and vitality."

If the residents of Mathura were eternally youthful, then how much more so was Uddhava eternally youthful? srimad- Bhagavatam 3.2.1-3 was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

"My dear Vidura, the sun of the world, Lord Krsna, has set, and our house has now been swallowed by the great snake of time. What can I say to you about our welfare? The universe with all its planets is most unfortunate."

In these words Uddhava lamented his separation from Lord Krsna. However, after feeling ditsress in separation from Lord Krsna, Uddhava perceived Lord Krsna direct prwsence.and became joyful. It was as if Lord Krsna directly came before him. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.2.4):

"For a moment he remained dead silent, and his body did not move. He became absorbed in the nectar of remembering the Lord's lotus feet in devotional ecstasy, and he appeared to be going increasingly deeper into that ecstasy."

Anuccheda 216

To save the lives of the people of Vraja, who were plunged in despair because Lord Krsna was no longer amongst them, Lord Krsna sent Uddhava with a message. When he entered there,.Uddhava saw that Vraja was filled with spiritual bliss. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.46.9):

vasitarthe 'bhiyudhyadbhih. . .

"Gokula resounded on all sides with the sounds of bulls in rut fighting with one another for fertile cows, with the mooing of cows, burdened with their udders, chasing after their calves, with the noise of milking and of the white calves jumping here and there, with the liud reverberation of flute-polaying, and with the singing of the all-auspicipus deeds of Krsna and Balarama by the cowherd men and women, who made the village resplendent with their wonderfully ornamented attire. The cowherds' homes in gokula appeared most charming with their abundant paraphernalia for worship of the sacrifical fire, the sun, unexpected guests. the cows, the brahmanas, the forefathers, and the demigods. On all sides lay the flowring forest, echoing with flocks of birds and swarms of bees and beautified by its lakes crowded with swans, karandava ducks, and bowers of lotuses."

It is also said in that chapter of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.46.45):

ta dipa-diptair manibhir virejuh. . .

"As they puiled on the churning ropes with their bangled arms, the women of Vraja shone with the splendor of their jewels, which reflected the lamps' light. Their hips, breasts, and necklaces moved about, and their faces, anointed with reeddish kunkuma, glowed radiantly with the luster of their earrings reflecting from their cheeks."

Concerned for the welfare of His parents and His gopi- beloveds, Lord Krsna said to Uddhava in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.46.3):

gacchoddhava vrajam saumya. . .

"Dear gentle Uddhava, go to Vraja and give pleasure to Our parents. And also relieve the gopis, suffering in separation from Me, by giving them My message."

Lord Krsna's parents and the other residents of Vraja felt only unhappiness. Without Lord Krsna present before them they found no happiness in anything. They said to Uddhava in

srimad- Bhagavatam (10.46.18):

api smareati nah krsno mataram suhrdah sakhin gopan vrajam catma-natham gavo vrndavanam girim

"Does Krsna remember us? Does He remember His mother and His friends and well-wishers? Does He remember the cowherds and their village of Vraja, of which He is the master? Does He remember the cows, Vrndavana forest, and Govardhana Hill?" These words were spoken by Nanda Maharaja. Uddhava's visit to Vraja is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.54-56):

uvasa katicin masan gopinam vinudan sucah krsna-lila-katham gayan ramayam asa gokulam

"Uddhava remained there for several months, dispelling the gopis' sorrow by chanting the topics of Lord Krsna's pastimes. Thus he brought joy to all the people of Gokula.

yavanty ahani nandasya vraje 'vatsit sa uddhavah vrajaukasam ksana-prayany asan krsnasya vartaya

"All the days that Uddhava dwelled in Nanda's cowherd village seemed like a single moment to the residents of Vraja, for Uddhava was always discussing Krsna.

sarid-vana-giri-dronir viksan kusumitan druman krsnam samsmarayan reme hari-daso vrajaukasam

"The servant of Lord Hari, seeing the rivers, forests, mountains, valleys, and flowering trees of Vraja, enjoyed inspiring the inhabitants of Vrndavana by reminded them of Lord Krsna."

In this verse the word "samsmarayan" means reminding". Reminding them of Lord Krsna, Uddhava dispelled the sadness the people of Vraja felt. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.54- 56 was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 217

The joy that comes from directly seeing Lord Krsna is described in these words spoken by Uddhava in srimad-Bhagavatam (11.29.47):

tatas tam antar hrdi sannivesya gato maha-bhagavato visalam yathopadistam jagad - eka-bandhuna tapah samasthaya harer agad gatim

"Thereupon, placing the Lord deeply within his heart, the great devotee Uddhava went to Badarikasrama. By engaging there in austerities, he attained the Lord's personal abode, which had been described to him by the only friend of the universe, Lord Krsna Himself."

Here the words "yathopadistam gatim" refer to the Third Csnto of srimad-Bhagavatam, where Lord Krsna said to Uddhava (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.4.11):

vedaham antar manasipsitam te dadami yat tad duravapam anyaih

"O Vasu, I know from within your mind what you desired in the days of yore when the Vasus and other demigods responsible for expanding the universal affairs performed sacrifices. You particularly desired to achieve My association. This is very difficult to obtain for others, but I award it unto you."

Here Lord Krsna says to Uddhava: "You particularly desired to achieve My association. This is very difficult to obtain for others, but I award it unto you." Then Lord Krsna said to Uddhava in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.4.13):

pura maya proktam ajaya nabhye

"O Uddhava, in the lotus millennium in the days of yore, at the beginning of the creation, I spoke unto Brahma, who is situated on the lotus that grows out of My navel, about My transcendental glories, which the great sages describe as Srimad-Bhagavatam."

In these words Lord Krsna describes the gist of srimad- Bhagavatam. Uddhava describes his eagerness to hear srimad- Bhagavatam by speaking these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.4.15):

ko nv isa te pada-saroja-bhajam sudurlabho 'rthesu catursv apiha tathapi naham pravrnomi bh uman bhavat-padambhoja-nisevanotsukah

"O my Lord, devotees who engage in the transcendental loving service of Your lotus feet have no difficulty in achieving anything within the realm of the four principles of religiosity, economic development, sense gratification and liberation. But, O great one, as far as I am concerned, I have preferred only to engage in the loving service of Your lotus feet."

Uddhava then suddenly expresses his bewilderment. He tells Lord Krsna in srimad-Bhagavatam (3.4.16-17):

karmany anihasya bhavo 'bhavasya. . .

"My Lord, even the learned sages become disturbed in their intelligence when they see that Your Greatness engages in fruitive work although You are free from all desires, that You take birth although You are unborn, that You flee out of fear of the enemy and take shelter in a fort although You are the controller of invincible time, and that You enjoy householder life surrounded by many women although You enjoy in Your Self. "O my Lord, Your eternal self is never divided by the influence of time, and there is no limitation to Your perfect knowledge. Thus You were sufficiently able to consult with Yourself, yet You called upon me for consultation, as if bewildered, although You are never bewildered. And this act of Yours bewilders me."

Later Lord Krsna would reassure Uddhava with these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.4.31):

noddhavo 'nv api man-nyunah. . .

"Uddhava is not inferior to Me in any way because he is never affected by the modes of material nature. Therefore he may remain in this world in order to disseminate specific knowledge of the Personality of Godhead."

Wishing to hear Lord Krsna's explanation of many topics, Uddhava spoke to Him these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (3.4.18):

jnanam param svatma-rahah-prakasam provaca kasmai. . .

"My Lord, kindly explain to us, if You think us competent to receive it, the transcendental knowledge which gives enlightenment about Yourself and which You explained before to Brahmaji."

In the phrase "yad vrjinam tarema" (may cross over all difficulties) the word "vrjinam" may mean the unhappiness of being separated from My direct service" or it may mean "the distress and bewilderment of residing in the material world". It is by confidential transcendental knowledge that once crosses over this difficulty. Then Uddhava said: "Lord Krsna then fulfilled my desire." Uddhava said to sri Vidura (srimad-Bhagavatam 3.4.19):

ity avedita-hardaya mahyam sa bhagavan parah adidesaravindaksa atmanah paramam sthitim

"When I thus expressed my heartfelt desires unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the lotus-eyed Lord instructed me about His transcendental situation."

In this verse the words "transcendental situation" refers to the spiritual world of Vaikuntha, which the Lord revealed to the demigod Brahma in the Second Canto ofsrimad- Bhagavatam. These words also refer ot the transcendental realm of Dvaraka, as has been deascribed in sri Bhagavat-sandarbha, Anuccheda 7. This spiritual world is described in the four nutshell verses of srimad-Bhagavatam (2.9.33-36). In wo derful pastimes like these, the Supreme Personality of Godhead reveals the truth that He is controlled by His devotees' love. By understanding these truths, Uddhava became again peaceful and composed. Then he himself entered that spiritual abode the Lord had described to him. Lord Krsna gives this same instuction in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.29.33):

jnane karmani yoge ca vartayam danda-dharane yavan artho nrnam tata tavams te 'ham catur-vidhah

"Through analytic knowledge, ritualistic work, mystic yoga, mundane business, and political rule, people seek to advance in religiosity, economic development, sense gratification, and liberation. But because you are My devotee, whatever men can accomplish in these multifarious ways you will very easily find within Me."

For Uddhava Lord Krsna was the supreme goal of life. This srila sukadeva Gosvami had previously explained in srimad- Bhagavatam. Lord Krsna kept Uddhava on the earth so he could preach the science of devotional service. Later, when srila sukadeva Gosvami was preaching the glories of the Lord's pastimes, there was no longer any need for Uddhava to stay on the earth. Then, in his original spiritual form, Uddhava attained the glorious spiritual land of Vraja. This was Uddhava's earnest desire, as he himself had said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.61):

asam aho carana-renu-jusam aham syam. . .

"The gopis of Vrndavana have given up the association of their husbands, sons, and other family members, who are very difficult to give up, andf they have forsaken the path of chastity to take shelter of the lotus feet of Mukunda, Krsna, which one should search for by Vedic knowledge. Oh, let me be fortunate enough to be one of the bushes, creepers, or herbs in Vrndavana, because the gopis trample them and bless them with the dust of their feet."

srimad-Bhagavatam 11.29.47 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 218 and 219

Now the devotional mellow of prasraya-rasa (filial love) will be considered. In this reasa the alambana and visaya are Lored Krsna, the doting parent. The adhara (lovers) are Lord Krsna's children and other like kinsmen who are the objects of His parental affections. As before, in this rasa also Lord Krsna manifests two forms: 1. the form of the supreme controller, and 2. a humanlike form. The devotees who are thus the objects of Lord Krsna's parental affection are of three kinds: 1. the devotees who have a relationship with the Lord in His feature as the supreme controller, 2. the devotees who have a relationship with the Lord in His humanlike feature, and 3. the devotees who have a relationship with the Lord in both these two features. The demigod Brahma and other demigods have a relationship with the Lord in His feature as the supreme controller. The children in Gokula, which is revealed in the twelve-syllable mantra, have a relationship with the Lord in His humanlike feature. The Lord's children born to Him at Dvaraka have a relationship with the Lord in both these features. This filial relationship includes Lord Krsna's own children, nephews, nieces, followers, and other like persons. Some of lord's Krsnas children have qualities like their father, and others have forms like their father. The Lord's children who have qualities like those of their father are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.61.1):

ekaikasas tah krsnasya putran dasa-dasabalah ajijanann anavaman pituh sarvatma-sampada

"Each of Lord Krsna's wives gave birth to ten sons, who were not less than their father, having all His personal opulence."

Srila Jiva Gosvami's

Sri Priti-sandarbha

Samba and others like him had glorious transcendental qualities like those of their father. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.61.2):

jambavatyah suta hy ete sambadyah pitr-sammatah

"Samba and the other sons of Jambavati were just like their father."

In the Eleventh Canto is a description of Samba's acting in an improper way (by teasing Narada Muni). It should be understood that those actions were instigated by Lord Krsna Himself by His own wish to arrange for certain pastimes. Amongst all of Lord Krsna's sons, sri Rukmini's ans were the best. This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.61.9):

pradyumna-pramukha jata rukminyam navamah pituh

Again and again the superiority of those sons is described. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Pradyumna's glory is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.55.40):

yam vai muhuh pitr-svarupa-nijesa-bhavas tan-mataro yad abhajan raha-rudha-bhavah citram na tat khalu ramaspada-bimba-bimbe kame smare 'ksa-visaye kim utanya-naryah

"It is not astonishing that the palace women, who should have felt maternal affection for Pradyumna, privately felt ecstatic attraction for Him as if He were their own Lord. After all, the son exactly resembled His father. Indeed, Pradyumna was a perfect reflection of the beauty of Lord Krsna, the shelter of the goddess of fortune, and appeared before their eyes as Cupid himself. Since even those on the level of His mother felt conjugal attraction for Him, then what to speak of how other women felt when they saw Him?"

In this verse the word "yam" refers to Pradyumna. The words "tan-mataro yad abhajan rahah" mean His mothers came to see Him. Shyly taking Him to a secluded place, they worshiped Him." The words "tat khalu ramaspada-bimba-bimbe" mean "He was like a picture of Lord Krsna, the place where the goddess of fortune enjoys pastimes". "Na citram" means "It was not surprising that the mothers felt maternal love for Him, for He was exactly like His father." The words "pitr-svarupa- nijesa-bhavah" mean "This was also not surprising because Pradyumna's body closely resembled that of His father, and therefore the queens thought Pradyumna was their master, Lord Krsna." Still, they did not think of Him as their husband, and therefore it was proper for them to take Him to a secluded place. The same explanation was already given previously in that chapter where it was said (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.55.27-28):

tam drstva jalada-syamam. . .

. . .krsnam matva striyo hrita nililyus tatra tatra ha

"The women of the palace thought he was Lord Krsna when they saw His dark-blue complexion the color of a rain-cloud, His yellow silk garments, his long arms, and red-tinged eyes, his charming lotus face adorned with a pleasing smile, His fine ornaments, and His thick, curly black hair. Thus the women became bashful and hid themselves here and there."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.55.40 the words "rudha- bhavah" indicate that the queens thought Pradyumna was Lord Krsna, who is very dear to them. Because He very closely resembled His father, they thought He was their master, Lord Krsna. Still, they did not think of Him as their husband. sri Rukmini thought of HIm as her son. She did not think He was her master, Lord Krsna. Because He so closely resembled Lord Krsna, Rukmini thought He must be her own son. This is seen in the following words spoken by sri Rukmini in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.55.33-34):

katham tv anena sampraptam. . .

. . .sa eva va bhaven nunam yo me garbhe dhrto 'rbhakah amusmin pritir adhika vamah sphurati me bhujah

"But how is it that this young man so much resembles my own Lord, Krsna, the wielder of sarnga, in his bodily form and His limbs, in His gait and the tone of His voice, and in His smiling glance? "Yes, He must be the same child I bore in my womb, sicne I feel great affection for Him and my left arm is quivering."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.55.40 the words ramaspada-bimba-bimbe kame smare" mean the queens were bewildered into thinking Pradyumna was the spiritual Kamadeva who had now incarnated in the material world. The words aksa-visaye kim utanya-naryah" mean, if the queens saw Him in that way, then how enchanted must other women have become by seeing Him?" srimad-Bhagavatam 10.55.40 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

In prasraya-rasa the uddipanas are Lord Krsna's transcendental qualities, beginning with His smiling glance filled with paternal love. Also included among the uddipanas are the glories of Lord Krsna's fame, intelligence, strength, and other attributes. Also included are Lord Krsna's noble birth, activities, and many other like things. The anubhavas are as follows. In childhood the anubhavas include: 1. again and again asking quaestions in a sweet voice, 2. grasping rthe arm and the fingers, 3. sitting on the lap, and 4. accepting the betelnuts chewed by the Lord. After childhood the anubhavas include: 1. following the commands, 2. imitating the activities, and 3. renouncing all independence. In both childhood and after the sons are followers of their father. All the sattvika-bhavas are manifest here. The vyabhicaris are also as before described. The sthayi-bhava is prasraya-rasa. In childhood hugging and dealing with great affection are the seed of prasraya-rasa. Those are the activities in childhood. The activities after childhood are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.17-18):

. . .pradyumnas carudesnas ca sambo jambavatt-sutah praharsa-vegocchasita-sayanasana-bhojanah

"On hearing that the most dear Krsna was approaching Dvaraka-dhama, magnanimous Vasudeva, Akrura, Ugrasena, Balarama (the superhumanly powerful), Pradyumna, Carudesna and Samba the son of Jambavati, all extremely happy, abandoned resting, sitting and dining.

varanendram puraskrtya brahmanaih sasumangalaih sankha-turya-ninadena brahma-ghosena cadrtah pratyujjagmu rathair hrstah pranayagata-sadhvasah

"They hastened toward the Lord on chariots with brahmanas bearing flowers. Before them were elephants, emblems of good fortune. Conchshells and bugles were sounded, and Vedic hymns were chanted. Thus they offered their respects, which were saturated with affection."

In this verse the word "pranayah" means great devotion". This verse was spoken by srila Suta Gosvami.

In prasraya-rasa the vibhavas and other conditions are as previously described. In this rasa there is great devotion for the Lord.

Now will be considered vatsalya-rasa, thr rasa of parental love. In that rasa the alambana is Lord Krsna, who is the object of His parents affection. The visaya is Lord Krsna. the adhara (lovers) are Lord Krsna's parents and other superiors. In this reasa Lord Krsna manifests only His humanlike form. In this reas Lord Krsna's superiors are sri Vasudeva, Devaki, Kunti, and others. Their devotion for the Lord is mixed (misra- bhakti). Also included in this rasa are sri Yasoda, Nanda, and their contemporary gopas and gopis, and others also. Their devotion for Lord Krsna is pure (suddha). The devotees in vatsalya-rasa are expert in performing their parental duties in relation to Lord Krsna. This expertise is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.6.21):

gopyah samsprsta-salila angesu karayoh prthak nyasyatmany atha balasya bija-nyasam akurvata

"The gopis first executed the process of acamana, drinking a sip of water from the right hand. They purified their bodies and hands with the nyasa-mantra and then applied the same mantra upon the body of the child."

The meaning of this verse is clear. Included among the uddipanas are Lord Krsna's qualities. The first of these is His quality of being an adorable child (lalya-bhava). This quality is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.4):

tam stanya-kama asadya mathnantim jananim harih grhitva dadhi-manthanam nyasedhat pritim avahan

"While mother Yasoda was churning butter, Lord Krna, desiring to drink the milk of her breast, appeared before her, and in order to increase her transcendental pleasure, He caught hold of the churning rod and began to prevent her from churning."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Vatsalya-rasa is also seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.45.2-10):

uvaca pitarav etya sagrajah satvatarsabhah prasrayavanatah prinann amba tateti sadaram. . .

. . .iti maya-mausyasya

"Lord Krsna, the greatest of the Satvatas, approached His parents with His elder brother. Humbly bowing His head and gratifying them by respectfully addressing them as `My dear mother' and `My dear father', Krsna spoke as follows. " `Dear father, because of Us, your two sons, you and mother Devaki always remained in anxiety and could never enjoy Our childhood, boyhood, or youth. " `Deprived by fate, We could not live with you and enjoy the pampered happiness most children enjoy in their parents' home. " `With one's body one can acquire all goals of life, and it is one's parents who give the body birth and sustenance. Therefore no mortal man can repay his debt to his parents, even if he serves them for a full lifetime of a hundred years. " `A son who, though able to do so, fails to provide for his parents with hsi physical resources and wealth is forced after his death to eat his own flesh. " `A man who, though able to do so, fails to support his elderly parents, chaste wife, young child, or spiritual master, or who neglects a brahmana or anyone who comes to him for shelter, is considered dead, though breathing. "Thus We have wasted all these days, unable as We were to properly honor you because Our minds were always disturbed by fear of Kamsa. " `Dear father and mother, please forgive Us for not serving you. We are not independent and have been greatly frustrated by cruel Kamsa.' "Thus beguiled by the words of Lord Hari, the Supreme Soul of the universe, who by his internal illusory potency appeared to be a human, His parents joyfully raised Him up on their laps and embraced Him."

In these verses the word "pitarau" (parents) refers to sri Devaki and Vasdueva, and the word "prinan" means "delighting". These verses were spoken by sri la sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 226-229

Lord Krsna's childhood restlessness is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.25):

srngy-angi-damstry-asi-jala-dvija-kantakebhyah krida-parav ati-calau sva-sutau niseddhum grhyani kartum api yatra na taj-jananyau sekata apatur alam manaso 'navastham

"When Mother Yasoda and Rohini were unable to protect the babies from calamities threatened by horned cows, by fire, by animals with claws and teeth such as monkeys, dogs, and cats, and by thorns, swords, and other weapons on the ground, they were always in anxiety, and their household engagements were disturbed. At that time they were fully equipoised in the transcendental ecstasy known as the distreess of material affection, for this was aroused within their minds."

Lord Krsna's childhood restlessness is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.28-29):

krsnasya gopyo ruciram viksya kaumara-capalam srnvantyah kila tan-matur iti hocuh samagatah

"Observing the very attractive childish restlessness of Krsna, all the gopise in the neighborhood, to hear about Krsna's activities again and again, would approach Mother Yasoda ans speak to her as follows."

vatsan muncan kvacid asamaye. . .

" `Our dear friend Yasoda, your son sometimes comes to our houses before the milking of the cows and releases the calves, and when the master of the house becomes angry, your son merely smiles. Sometimes He devises some process by which He steals palatavble curd, butter, and milk, which He then eats and drinks. When the monkeys assemble, He divides it with them, and when the monkeys have their bellies so full that they won't take any more, He breaks the pots. Sometimes, if He gets no opportunity to stral butter and milk from a house, He will be angry at the householders, and for His revenge He will agitate the small children by pinching them. Then, when they begin crying, Krsna will go away.' "

The word "gopyah" (gopis) here refers to Mother Yasoda's friends and Lord Krsna's aunts. In other situations in this rasa Lord Krsna manifests humility, shyness, speaking sweet words, honesty, generosity and other virtues. These virtues are seen in the following description of Lord Krsna's pastimes at the pilgrimage to Kuruksetra in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.34):

krsna-ramau parisvajya pitarav abhivadya ca. . .

"O hero of the Kurus, Krsna and Balarama embraced Their foster parents and bowed down to them, bu Their throats were so choked up with tears of love that the two Lords could say nothing."

In His childhood Lord Krsna was very forceful and arrogant when He stopped the Indra-yajna. Still, His actions delighted His parents and superiors. Lord Krsna's handsomeness and auspicious features gradually increased until they reached their apex in His full-blown youth (purna-kaisora). The growing-up of Lord Krsna is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.21 and 26):

kalena vrajatalpena gokule rama-kesavau janubhyam saha panibhyam ringamanau vijahratuh

"After a short time passed, both brothers, Rama and Krsna, began to crawl on the ground of Vraja with the strength of Their hands and knees and thus enjoy Their childhood play."

kalenalpena rajarse ramah krsnas ca gokule aghrsta-janubhih padbhir vicakramatur anjasa

"O King Pariksit, within a very short time both Rama and Krsna began to walk very easily in Gokula on Their legs, by Their own strength, without the need to crawl."

The meaning of these verses is clear. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

"When Lord Rama and Lord Krsna attained the age of pauganda [six to ten] while living in Vrndavana, the cowherd men allowed Them to take up the task of tending the cows. Engaging thus in the company of Their friends, the two boys rendered the land of Vrndavana most auspicious by imprinting upon it the marks of Their lotus feet."

Lord Krsna's birth was already described. Lord Krsna's activities include His birth pastimes and His childhood pastimes. Lord Krsna's birth pastimes are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.5.1):

nandas tv atmaja utpanne. . .

"Nanda Maharaja was naturally very magnanimous, and when Lord sri Krsna appeared as his son, he was overwhelmed with jubilation."

Lord Krsna's childhood pastimes are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.22-24):

tav anghri-yugmam anukrsya sarisrpantau ghosa-praghosa-ruciram vraja-kardamesu tan-nada-hrsta-manasav anusrtya lokam mugdha-prabhitavad upeyatur anti matroh. . .

"When Krsna and Balarama, with the strength of Their legs, crawled in the muddy places created in Vraja by cow dung and cow urines, Their crawling resembled the crawling of serpents, and the sound of Their ankle bells was very charming. Very much pleased by the spound of other people's ankle bells, They used to follow these people as if going to Their mothers, but when They saw that these were other people, They became afraid and returned to Their real mothers, Yasoda and Rohini. "Dressed with muddy earth mixed with cow dung and cvow urine, the babies looked very beautiful, and when They went to Their mothers, both Yasoda and Rohini picked Them up with great affection, embraced Them, and allowed Them to suck the milk flowing from their breasts. While sucking the breast, the babies smiled, and Their small teeth were visible. Their mothers, upon seeing those beautiful teeth, enjoyed great transcendental bliss.

"Within the house of Nanda Maharaja the cowherd ladies would enjoy seeing the pastimes of the babies Rama and Krsna. The babies would catch the ends of the calves' tails, and the calves would drag Them here and there. When thre ladiers saw these pastimes, they certainly stopped their household activities and laughed and enjoyed the incidents."

In this context the word "adi" (beginning with) means "beginning with the pauganda years (six until ten). Here the parahpernalia of the Lord's pastimes include his garments, clay pots, and other things. Different specific times include Lord Krsna's birthday and other like times. Lord Krsna's birthday celebration is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.7.4):

kadacid autthanika-kautukaplave janmarksa-yoge samaveta-yositam

"When Mother Yasoda's baby was slanting His body to attempt to rise and turn around, this attempt was observed by a Vedic ceremony. In such a ceremony, called utthana, which is performed when a child is due to leave the house for the first time, the child is properly bathed. Just after Krsna turned three months old, mother Yasoda celebrated this ceremony with other women of the neighborhood. On that day there was a conjunction of the moon with the constellation Rohini. As the brahmanas joined by chanting Vedic hymns and professional musicians also took part, this great ceremony was observed by mother Yasoda."

All these activitirs are performed by the many kinds of devotees in vatsalya-rasa, but they are especially performed by Lord Krsna's parents. For His benefit, Lord Krsna's parents also rebuke Him. An example of this is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.32-34):

ekada kridamanas te ramadya gopa-darakah krsno mrdam bhaksitavan iti matre nyavedayan

"One day while Krsna was playing with His small playmates, including Balarama and the other sons of the gopas, all His friends came together and lodged a complaint to Mother Yasoda. `Mother,' they submitted, "Krsna has eaten earth.'

sa grhitva kare krsnam upalabhya haitaisini yasoda bhaya-sambhranta- preksanaksam abhasata

"Upon hearing this from Krsna's playmates, mother Yasoda, who was always full of anxiety over Krsna's welfare,, picked Krsna up with her hands to look into His mouth and chastise Him. Her eyes fearful, she spoke to her son as follows.

kasman mrdam adantatman bhavan bhaksitavan rahah vadanti tavaka hy ete kumaras te 'grajo 'py ayam

An example of what happened to child Krsna after He broke the yogurt-pot is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.11-12):

krtagasam tam prarudantam aksini kasantam anjan-masini sva-panina udviksamanam bhaya-vihvaleksanam haste grhitva bhisayanty avagurat

"When caught by mother Yasoda, Krsna became more and more afraid and admitted to being an offender. As she looked upon Him, she saw that He was crying, His tears mixing with the black ointment around His eyes, and as He rubbed His eyes with His hands, He smeared the ointment all over His face. Mother Yasoda, catching her beautiful son by the hand, mildly began to chastise Him."

tyaktva yastim sutam bhitam vijnayarbhaka-vatsa la iyesa kila tam baddhum damnatad-virya-kovida

"Mother Yasoda was always overwhelmed by intense love for Krsna, not knowing who Krsna was or how powerful He was. Because of maternal affection for Krsna, she never even cared to know who He was. Therefore, when she saw that her son had become excessively afraid, she threw the stick away and desired to bind Him so that He would not commit any further naughty activities."

The meaning of these verses is clear. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 239 and 240

Wishing only His welfare and happiness, the devotees in vatsalya-rasa discipline Krsna, give Him bitter-tasting medicine, and perform other like activities. An example of these activities is seen in the following wrds of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.5):

tam ankam arudham apayayat stanam sneha-snutam sa-smitam iksati mukham atrptam utsrjya javena sa yayav utsicyamane payasi tv adhisrite

"Mother Yasoda then embraced Krsna, allowed Him to sit down on her lap, and began to look upon the face of the Lord with great love and affection. Because of her intense affection, milk was flowing from her breast. But when she saw that the milk pan on the oven was boiling over, she immediately left her son to take care of the overflowing milk, although the child was not yet fully satisfied with drinking the milk of His mother's breast."

These devotees are also described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.14.35):

yad-dhamartha-suhrt-priyatma-tanaya-pranasayas tvat-krte

"My Lord, sometimes I am puzzled as to how Your Lordship will be able to repay, in gratitude, the devotional service of these residents of Vrndavana. Although I know that You are the supreme source of all benediction, I am puzzled to know how You will be able to repay all the service that You are receiving from these residents of Vrndavana. I think of how You are so kind, so magnanimous, that even Putana, who came to cheat You by dressing herself as a very affectionate mother, was awarded liberation and the actual post of a mother. And other demons belonging to the same family, such as Aghasura and Bakasura, were also favored with liberation. Under the circumstances, I am puzzled. These residents of Vrndavana have given You everything: Their bodies, their minds, their love, their homes. Everything is being utilized for Your purpose. So how will You be able to repay their debt? You have already given Yourself to Putana! I surmise that You shall ever ever remain a debtor to the residents of Vrndavana, being unable to repay their loving service."

Here we see Mother Yasoda is eager to protect the wealth in her house. Cowherd people are naturally very determined to attain great wealth in milk and milk-products. Mother Yasoda was eager to protect her wealth of milk. Still, this eagerness only nourished her love for Lord Krsna in vatsalya-rasa. As waves increase the ocean, so these activities increased her love for her son. In her heart she did not think of protecting her own wealth. She only thought: "This is what I must do now". In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.9.5 the word "sneha-snutam" shows that she had deep love for her son. Even when her son broke the yogurt pots, she had only a dim reflection of anger. In her heart she was delighted and amused by her son's mischief. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.7):

uttarya gopi susrtam payah punah pravisya sandrsya ca dadhy-amatrakam bhagnam vilokya sva-sutasya karma taj jahasa tam capi na tatra pasyati

"Mother Yasoda, after taking down the hot milk from the oven, returned to the churning spot, and when she saw that the container of yogurt was broken and that Krsna was not present, she concluded that the breaking of the pot was the work of Krsna. Seeing this, she smiled."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Even when he is in distress, a devotee in vatsalya-rasa may pretend to smile in order to reassure Lord Krsna. An example of this is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.11.6):

ulukhalam vikarsantam damna baddham svam atmajam vilokya nandah prahasad-vadano vimumoca ha

"When Nanda Maharaja saw his own son bound with ropes to the wooden mortar and dragging it, he smiled and released Krsna from His bonds."

An alternate reading here is "prahasad-vadanam" (Lord Krsna weas smiling). This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

A devotee in vatsalya-rasa may fear that calamities brought by wicked people or other sources may harm Lord Krsna. An example of this is seen in these words spoken by Devaki in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.3.29):

janma te mayy asau papo ma vidyan madhusudana samudvije bhavad-dhetoh kamsad aham adhira - dhih

"O Madhusudana, because of Your apperance I am becoming more and more anxious in fear of Kamsa. Therefore, please arrange for that sinful Kamsa to be unable to understand that You have taken birth from my womb."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by sri Devaki.

This fear is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.25):

srngy-angi-damstry-asi-jala-dvija. . .

"When Mother Yasoda and Rohini were unable to protect the babies from calamities threatened by horned cows, by fire, by animals with claws and teeth such as monkeys, dogs, and cats, and by thorns, swords, and other weapons on the ground, they were always in anxiety, and their household engagements were disturbed. At that time they were fully equipoised in the transcendental ecstasy known as the distreess of material affection, for this was aroused within their minds."

For Lord Krsna's welfare a devotee in vatsalya-rasa may worship the demigods or other exalted beings. An example of this is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.5.16):

tais taih kamair adinatma yathocitam apujayat visnor aradhanarthaya sva-putrasyodayaya ca

"The great-minded Maharaja Nanda gave clothing, ornaments, and cows in charity to the cowherd men in order to please Lord Visnu, and thus he improved the condition of his own son in all respects."

Here Nanda Maharaja thought: "By these activities Lord Visnu will be pleased. When He is pleased then good will come to my son." Thinking in this way, Nanda properly performed these activities of worship. That is the meaning here. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 244

Seeing a display of Lord Krsna's extraordinary power, a devotee in vatsalya-rasa may think the power came not from Krsna, but from some other source instead. An example of this is seen in the following words spoken by Lord Krsna's parents in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.7.31):

aho bataty-adbhutam esa raksasa balo nivrttim gamito 'bhyagat punah himsrah sva-papena vihimsitah khalah sadhuh samatvena bhayad vimucyate

"It is most astonishing that although this innocent child was taken away by the Raksasa to be eaten, He has returned without having been killed or even injured. Because this demon was envious, cruel, and sinful, he has been killed for his own sinful activities. This is the law of nature. An innocent devotee is always protecvted by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and a sinful person is always vanquished for his sinful life."

Lord Krsna's prents thought in this way. Lord Krsna's mother spoke these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.40):

kim svapna. . .

"(Mother Yasoda began to argue with herself:) Is this a dream, or is it an illusory creation by the external energy? Has this been manifested by my own intelligence, or is it some mystic power of my child?"

After seeing Lord Krsna manifest the entire material universe within His abdomen, Mother Yasoda could not believe that this was a display of her son's great power. She assumed that He had no power to manifest this vision. (She assumed that the vision of the universal form was caused by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is different from her son.) She thought in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.41):

atho yathavan na vitarka-gocaram. . .

"Therefore let me surrender to the Supreme Personality of Godhead and offer my obeisances unto Him, who is beyond the conception of human speculation, the mind, activities, words, and arguments, who is the original cause of this cosmic manifestation, by whom the entire cosmos is maintained, and by whom we can conceive of its existence. Let me simply offer my obeisances, for He is beyond my contemplation, speculation, and meditation. He is beyond all of my material activities."

Here Mother Yasoda assumes that this vision of the universal form was caused by the Supreme Personality of Godhead (who is different from her son). To become free from seeing this fearful vision, she takes shelter of the Supreme Lord's lotus feet. Then she thought (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.8.42):

aham mamasau. . .

"It is by the influence of the Supreme Lord's maya that I am wrongly thinking that Nanda Maharaja is my husband, that Krsna is my son, and that because I am the queen of Nanda Maharaja, all the wealth of cows and calves are my possessions and all the cowherd men and their wives are my subjects. Actually, I also am eternally subordinate to the Supreme Lord. He is my ultimate shelter."

With these words Mother Yasoda firmlytakes shelter of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Speaking the words "Nanda Maharaja is my husband, that Krsna is my son," she refers to Lord Krsna, who was then before her eyes. Then she says: "I am bewildered (kumatih) by these many manifestations of the universal form (yan-mayaya)." Then she says: "the Supreme Personality of Godhead (sah) is the goal of my life (gatih). There srila sukadeva Gosvami explained (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.8.43):

ittham vidita-tattvayam. . .

"Mother Yasoda, by the grace of the Lord, could understand the real truth. But then again, the supreme master, by the influence of the internal potency, Yogamaya, inspired her to become absorbed in intense maternal affection for her son."

Here the word "tattva" reefers to her son. Here the words "sa isvarah" refer to Lord Krsna's feature as the supreme controller.In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.8.42 the words "pranatasmi tat-padam" mean "Let me simply offer obeisances, for He is beyond my contemplation". In srimad- Bhagavatam 10.8.43 the words "vaisavim mayam" may mean "the Supreme Lord's internal potency", or they may also mean "the Supreme Lord's mercy". The it is explained in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.45):

trayya copanisadbhis ca. . .

"The glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead are studied through the three Vedas, the Upanisads, the literature of sankhya-yoga, and other Vaisnava literature, yet mother Yasoda considered the Supreme Person her ordinary child."

It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.21):

nayam sukhapo bhagavan. . .

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Krsna, the son of mother Yasoda, is accessible to devotees engaged in spontaneous loving service, but He is not as easily accessible to mental speculators, to those striving for self-realization by severe austerities and penances, or to those who consider the body the same as the self."

It these words the srimad-Bhagavatam sings thre glories of Mother Yasoda. It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.46.18- 19):

api smarati nah krsnah. . .

"Does Krsna remember us? Does He remember His mother and His friends and well-wishers? Does He remember the cowherds and their village of Vraja, of which He is thr master? Does He remember the cows, Vrndavana forest, and Govardhana Hill?

apy ayasyati govindah. . .

"Will Govinda return even once to see His family? If He ever does, we may then glance upon His beautiful face, with its beautiful eyes, nose, and smile."

After Nanda Maharaja had spoken these words, Uddhava, following the way of this world, to console him spoke these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.46.30):

yuvam slaghyatamau nunam. . .

"O respectful Nanda, certainly you and mother Yasoda are the most praiseworthy persons in the entire world, since you have developed such a loving attitude toward Lord Narayana, the spiritual master of all living beings."

Even as Uddhava spoke these words of praise, Nanda's remained convinced that Krsna was his son and not the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He could nto be moved from that idea. Then it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.46.44):

evam nisa sa bhruvator vyatita nandasya krsnanucarasya rajan. . .

"While Krsna's messenger continued speaking with Nanda, the night ended, O king. The women of the cowherd village rose from bed and, lighting lamps, worshiped their household deities. Then they began churning yogurt into butter."

In this way Uddhava spoke many words to console Nanda Maharaja, who was griving in separation from Krsna. No matter what Uddhava said, Nanda remained always convinced that Krsna was his son and not the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The truth of Uddhava's words, that Lord Krsna is indeed the original form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is elaboratedly explained in the Krsna-sandarbha. Even at Kuruksetra, when a great host of saintly devotees affirmed that Lord Krsna is indeed the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Nanda and Yasoda remained unconvinced. They continued to believe that Krsna was only their son. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.35):

tav atmasanam aropya bahubhyam parirabhya ca yasoda ca maha-bhaga sutau vijahatuh sucah

"Raising their two sons onto their laps and holding Them in their arms, Nanda and saintly mother Yasoda forgot their sorrow."

It is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.66):

manaso vrttayo nah syuh. . .

"May our thoughts always take shelter of Krsna's lotus feet, may our words always chant His names, and may our bodies always bow down to Him and serve Him."

Even though the truth that sri Krsna is the all-powerful Supreme Personality of Godhead was again and again proved to him, Nanda Maharaja continued to believe Krsna was only his son and nothing more. These words (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.66) Nanda spoke to Uddhava mean: "We pray that birth after birth we may love Krsna." This prayer of love spoken by Nanda is filled with anuraga love. Loev is not absent from it. Then it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.65):

tam nirgatam samasadya nanopayana-panayah nandadayo 'nuragena pravocann asru-locanah

"As Uddhava was about to leave, Nanda and the others approached him bearing various items of worship. With tears in their eyes they addressed him as follows."

In these verses it is seen that Nanda and Yasoda are filled with anuraga ecstatic love for Lord Krsna. Their devotion to the Lord is not in the mood of awe and veneration, the mood of appreciating Lord Krsna's supreme power and opulence. Here Uddhava thinks: "Although I am far from attaining this kind of good fortune, I still pray that someday I will attainj this kind of ecstatic love. I pray this love will nto be denied to me." With a voice choked with emotion Uddhava prays in this way. Praying that in some other lifetime he may some day attain this kind of anuraga ecstatic love, Uddhava says (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.67):

karmabhir bhramyamananam. . .

"Wherever we are made to wander about this world by the Supreme Lord's will, in accordance to the reactions to our fruitive work, may our good works and charity always grant us love for Lord Krsna."

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.66 may be interpreted in two ways. It may be interpreted to refer to vatsalya-rasa alone, or it may also be interpreted to refer to the other rasas also. Here the phrase beginning with the word "pada" (taking shelter of Krsna's feet) is considered appropriate in vatsalya-rasa because Nanda Maharaja feels great anguish because he cannto associate with Krsna who has gone to a faraway country. A similar situation in karuna-rasa is seen in the story of Maharaja Citraketu. Here the word "prahvana" means "bowing down". In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.67 the word "isvare" is used, as it was used before, as an affectionate term used to address a child. It is sometimes used in that way in this world. These are included amongst the udbhasvaras. Now the sattvika- bhavas will be considered. Of these there are eight, as were described before. For Lord Krsna's mother there is a ninth sattvika-bhava, which is milk flowing from her breasts. Now the sancari-bhavas will be considered. These are: 1. those born from the pastimes Lord Krsna directly performs, and 2. those born from the pastimes of power and opulence manifest with thr aid of Lord Krsna's pastime potency. The first of these is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.34):

"Dear Krsna, why are You so restless that You have eaten dirt in a solitary place? This complaint has been lodged against You by all Your playmates, including Your elder brother, Balarama. How is this?"

This is an example of Lord Krsna's restlessness. The second of these sancari-bhavas (those pastimes of power and opulence manifest with the aid of Lord Krsna's pastime potency) is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.37):

sa tatra dadrse visvam. . .

"When Krsna opened His mouth wide by the order of Mother Yasoda, she saw within His mouth all moving and nonmoving entities, outer space, and all directions, along with mountains, islands, oceans, the surface of the earth, the blowing wind, fire, the moon, and stars. She saw the planetary systems, water, light, air, sky, and creation by transformation of akankara. She also saw the senses, the mind, sense perception, and the three qualities goodness, passion, and ignorance. She saw the time allotted for the living entities, she saw natural instinct and the reactions of karma, and she saw desires and different varieties of bodies, moving and nonmoving. Seeing all these aspects of the cosmic manifestation, along with herself and Vrndavana-dhama, she became doubtful and fearful of her son's nature."

In this passage is seen Mother Yasoda's wonder and doubt. Here the sthayi-bhava is vatsalya-rasa. This sthayi-bhava is seen in these owrds of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.23):

tan-matarau nija-sutau ghrnaya snuvantyau pankanga-raga-rucirav upagrhya dorbhyam dattva stanam prapibatoh sma mukham niriksya mugdha-smitalpa-dasanam yayatuh pramodam

"Dressed with muddy earth muxed with cow dung and cow urine, the babies looked very beautiful, and when They went to Their mothers, both Yasoda and Rohini picked Them up with great affection, embraced Them, and allowed Them to suck the milk flowing from their breasts. While sucking the breast, the babies smiled, and Their small teeth were visible. Their mothers, upon seeing those beautiful teeth, enjoyed great transcendental bliss."

In this verse the word "tan-matarau" means the mothers of Krsna and Balarama", and "ghrnaya" means "with compassion". srimad-Bhagavatam 10.8.23 was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Vatsalya - rasa is wonderful with many vibhavas and other bhavas. Even before the devotees have seen Lord Krsna for the first time, these ecstasies are manifest. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.5.9):

gopyas cakarnya mudita yasodayah sutodbhavam atmanam bhusayam cakrur vastrakalpanjanadibhih

"The gopi wives of the cowherd men were very pleased to hear that mother Yasoda had given birth to a son, and they began to decorate themselves very nicely with proper dresses, ornaments, black ointment for the eyes, and so on."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

After the devotees attain Lord Krsna's direct association the ecstasies of vatsalya-rasa become perfectly manifest. They are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.5.12):

ta asisah. . .

"Offering blessings to the newborn child, Krsna, the wives and the daughters of the cowherd men said, `May You become the king of Vraja and logn maintain all its inhabitants.' They sprinkled a mixture of turmeric powder, oil, and water upon the birthless Supreme Lord and offered their prayers."

When the devotees become separated from Lord Krsna, the ecstasies of vatsalya-rasa are also seen. An example is given in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.46.27-28):

iti samsmrtya samsmrtya nandah krsnanurakta-dhih aty-utkantho 'bhavat tusnim prema-prasara-vihvalah

"Thus intensely remembering Krsna again and again, Nanda Maharaja, his mind completely attached to the Lord, felt extreme anxiety and fell silent, overcome by the strength of his love.

yasoda varnyamanani putrasya caritani ca srnvaty asruni avasraksit sneha-snuta-payodhara

"As mother Yasoda heard the descriptions of her son's activities, she poured out her tears, and milk flowed from her breasts out of love."

The meaning of srimad-Bhagavatam 10.46.27-28 is clear. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 247 and 248

After being separated from Him, when they again meet Krsna, the devotees in vatsalya-rasa are very pleased. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.35):

tav atmasanam aropya

"Raising their two sons onto their laps and holding Them in their arms, Nanda and saintly mother Yasoda forgot their sorrow."

These ecstasies are also seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.84.66):

nandas tu sakhyuh priya-krt premna govinda-ramayoh adya sva iti masams trin yadubhir manito 'vasat

"And on his part, Nanda was also full of affection for his friend Vasudeva. Thus during the following days Nanda would repeatedly announce, `I will be leaving later today' and `I will be leaving tomorrow'. But out of love for Krsna and Balarama he remained there for three more months, honored by all the Yadus."

In this verse it is said: "But out of love for Krsna and Balarama he remained there for three more months." For three months he would repeatedly announce, `I will be leaving later today' and `I will be leaving tomorrow'." Overcome with bliss, Nanda felt those three months apss as if they were only two days. Someone may ask: "What did he do as he resided there?" The answer is given here in the words: "Nanda was also full of affection for his friend Vasudeva." This means that when Vasudeva was present Nanda did not act as if Krsna were his son. Neither did he attempt to take Krsna back with him to Vraja. Then it is said here: "Nanda was honored by all the Yadus." Afterward Nanda was again separated from Lord Krsna. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.84.67-69):

tatah kamaih puryamanah sa-vrajah saha-bandhavah parardhyabharana-ksauma-nananarghya-paricchadaih

vasudevograsenabhyam krsnoddhava-baladibhih dattam adaya paribarham yapito yadubhir yayau

"Then, after Vasudeva, Ugrasena, Krsna, Uddhava, Balarama, and others had fulfilled his desires and presented him with precious ornaments, fine linen, and varieties of priceless household furnishing, Nanda Maharaja accepted all these gifts and took his leave. Seen off by all the Yadus, he departed with his family members and the residents of Vraja.

nando gopas ca gopyas ca govinda-caranambuje manah ksiptam punar hartum anisa mathuram yayau

"Unable to withdraw their minds from Lord Govinda's lotus feet, where they had surrendered them, Nanda and the cowherd men and women returned to Mathura."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.84.67 the word "kamaih" means "with the desires that begin with the desire that Krsna would return to Vraja", and the word "puryamanah" means "satisfied by Lord Krsna". It was Lord Balarama who returned to Vraja. In describing that pastime srila sukadeva Gosvami said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.65.6):

krsne kamala-patrakse sanyastakhila-radhasah

"The cowherds had dedicated everything to lotus-eyed Krsna."

srila sridhara Svami comments:

"In this verse the word `krsne' means `for the purpose of attaining Lord Krsna's association', and ` sanyastakhila-radhasah' means `they renounced everything'."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.84.67-69 it is said: With great love Vasudeva and the others gave gifts of many ornaments." Here the word "apitah" means escorted by a great army". srimad-Bhagavatam 10.84.69 describes the great love the people of Vraja felt for Lord Krsna. Whent hey had returned to Mathura, the cowherd people again yearned for Lord Krsna's association. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.84.66- 69 was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 249

It was after these pastimes that the citizens of Dvaraka spoke these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.9):

yarhy ambujaksapasasara bho bhavan kurun madhun vatha suhrd-didrksaya

"O lotus-eyed Lord, whenever You go away to Mathura-Vrndavana or Hastinapura to meet Your friends and relatives, every moment of Your absence seems like a million years. O infallible one, at that time our eyes become useless, as if bereft of sun."

In sri Krsna-sandarbha (Anuccheda 174) it was explained that Lord Krsna resides in Vraja eternally in His aprakata (unmanifest) form, and therefore they people of vraja are never truly separated from Him. Their desire to associate with Him is always satisfied. In this way vatsalya-rasa has been described. Now sakhya-rasa will be described. In this rasa the alambana is Lord manifest as a friend. The visaya is Lord Krsna. The asraya is the friends who aprticipate in Lord Krsna's glorous pastimes. In this rasa the Lord sometimes manifests a form-armed form and other times manifests a humanlike form. The four-armed form is described by Arjuna in these words of Bhagavad-gita (11.46):

tenaiva rupena catur-bhujena sahasra-baho bhava visva-murte

"O universal form, O thousand-armed Lord, I wish to see You in Your four-armed form."

Afterward, when Lord Krsna's humanlike form was manifest, Arjuna said in Bhagavad-gita (11.51):

drstvedam manusam rupam tava saumyam janardana idanim asmi samvrttah sa-cetah prakrtim gatah

"When Arjuna saw Krsna in His origina form, he said: O Janardana, seeing this humanlike form, so very beautiful, I am now composed in mind, and I am restored to my original nature."

Amongst the devotees in sakhya-rasa are the mitras, suhrts, and sakhas. Among the suhrts, sri Bhimasena and sri Draupadi are prominent. Among the sakhas, sriman Arjuna and sridama Vipra are prominent. In Gokula the gopa sridama is prominent. These great devotees are glorified in srimad-Bhagavatam and other scriptures. In the Agama-sastras, Vasudama, Kinkini, and other devotees in sakhya-rasa are described. In the Bhavisya Purana's description of pastimes of wrestling, the names of some devotees in sakhya-rasa are given in these words:

subhadra-mandalibhadra- bhadravardhana-gobhatah yaksendrabhatah. . .

"Subhadra, Mandalibhadra, Bhadravardhana, Gobhata, and Yaksendrabhata participated in these pastimes."

The gopas in sakhya-rasa are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.2):

tenaiva sakam prthukah sahasrasah. . .

"At that time, hundreds and thousands of cowherd boys came out of their respective homes in Vrajabhumi and joined Krsna, keeping before them their hundreds and thousands of groups of calves. The boys were very beautiful, and they were equipped with lunch bags, bugles, flutes, and sticks for controlling the calves."

These gopas were all Lord Krsna's equals. It is said in the scriptures:

gopaih samana-guna-sila-vayo-vilasa-vasais ca

"In their qualities, character, age, pastimes, and garments, the gopa boys were like Krsna."

Of the gopas it is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.18.11):

gopa jati-praticchanna. . .

"O King, demigods disguised themselves as members of the cowherd community and, just as dramatic dancers praise another dancer, worshiped Krsna and Balarama, who were also appearing as cowherd boys."

This verse has been explained in sri Krsna-sandarbha, Anuccheda 117. The gopas' great learning is seen in these words they spoke in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.8):

diksayah pasu-samsthayah. . .

"Except during the interval between the initiation of the performer of a sacrifice and the actual sacrifice of the animal, O most pure brahmanas, it is not contaminating for even the initiated to partake of food, at least in sacrifices other than the Sautramani."

The gopas' expert artistic skill is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.18.13):

kvacin nrtyatsu canyesu. . .

"While the other boys were dancing, O King, Krsna and Balarama would sometimes accompany them with song and instrumental music, and sometimes the two Lords would praise the boys, saying, ``Very good! Very good!' "

In these words Lord Krsna Himself praised the gopas' glorious qualities. The gopas are of three kinds: 1. sakha (ordinary friends), 2. priya-sakha (more confidential friends), and 3. priya-narma-sakha (intimate friends). The gopa sridamaa and the other gopas enjoy very sweeet pastimes with Lord Krsna. They are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.11):

ittham satam. . .

"In this way, all the cowherd boys used to play with Krsna, who is the source of the Brahman effulgence for jnanis desiring to merge into that effulgence, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead for devotees who have accepted eternal servitorship, and who for ordinary persons is but another ordinary child. The cowherd boys, having accumulated the results of pious activities for many lives, were able to associate in this way with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. How can one explain their great fortune?"

In this rasa lord Krsna is the alambana. Lord Krsna as the alambana is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.5):

barhapidam nata-vara-vapuh. . .

"Wearing a peacock-feather ornament upon His head, blue karnikara flowers on His ears, a yellow garment as brilliant as gold, and the Vaijayanti garland, Lord Krsna exhibited His transcendental form as the greatest of dancers as He entered the forest of Vrndavana, beautifying it with the marks of His footprints. He filled the holes of His flute with the nectar of His lips, and the cowherd boys sang His glories."

Mow the uddipanas in this rasa will be considered. Amongst these uddipanas are included the following transcendental qualities: loving friendship, straightforwardness, gratitude, intelligence, learning, glory, expert skill, heroism, strength, tolerance, mercy, and giving delight to the people. Also included amongst these uddipanas are youthful handsomeness, all- auspicious bodily features, and other qualities. For the suhrt friends the qualities beginning with straightforwardness are prominent. For the sakha friends the qualities beginning with handsomeness and skill are prominent. For the mitra friends the qualities beginning with straightforwardness, handsomeness, and skill are prominent. The suhrt, sakha, and mitra kinds of friendship are mentioned by lamenting Arjuna in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.15.4):

sakhyam maitrim sauhrdam ca. . .

"Remembering Lord Krsna and His well wishes, benefactions, intimate familial relations and His chariot driving, Arjuna, overwhelmed and breathing very heavily, began to speak."

Lord Krsna's friendly affection for the gopas is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.13 and 16):

tan drstva bhaya-santrastan uce krsno'sya bhi-bhayam mitrany asan ma viramate-hanesye vatsakan aham

"When Krsna saw that His friends the cowherd boys were frightened, He, the fierce controller even of fear itself, said, just to mitigate their fear, `My dear friends, do not stop eating. I shall bring your calves back to this spot by personally going after them Myself.' "

tato vatsan adrstvaitya puline 'pi ca vatsapan ubhav api vane krsno vicikaya samantatah

"Thereafter, when Krsna was unable to find the calves, He returned to the bank of the river, but there He was also unable to see the cowherd boys. Thus He began to search for both the calves and the boys, as if He could not understand what had happened."

The meaning of these verses (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.13.13 and 16) is clear. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

For the gopa sakha freinds Lord Krsna's pastimes of joking, singing, conversing, calling the cows, playing the flute, showing artistic skill, and other like pastimes are prominent. Lord Krsna's pastimes of joking are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.11):

bibhrad venum jathara-patayoh. . . . .tisthan madhye sva-parisuhrdo hasayan narmabhih svaih. . .

"Krsna is yajna-bhuk - that is, He eats only offerings of yajna - but to exhibit His childhood pastimes, He now sat with His flute tucked between His waist and His tight cloth on His right side and with His horn bugle and cow-driving stick on His left. Holding in His hand a very nice preparation of yogurt and rice, with pieces of suitable fruit between His fingers, He sat like the whorl of a lotus flower, looking forward toward all His friends, personally joking with them and creating jubilant laughter among them as He ate. At that time, the denizens of heaven were watching, struck with wonder at how the Personality of Godhead, who eats only in yajna, was now eating with His friends in the forest."

Some of the other pastimes Lord Krsna enjoys with the gopa sakhas are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.9-10):

evam vrndavanam srimat krsnah prita-manah pasun reme sancarayann adreh sarid-rodhahsu sanugah

"Thus expressing His satisfaction with the beautiful forest of Vrndavana and its inhabitants, Lord Krsna enjoyed tending the cows and other animals with His friends on the banks of the river Yamuna below Govardhana Hill.

kvacid gayati gayatsu madandhalisv anuvrataih upagiyamana-caritah pathi sankarsananvitah. . .

"Sometimes the honeybees in Vrndavana became so mad with ecstasy that they closed their eyes and began to sing. Lord Krsna, moving along the forest Path with His cowherd boyfriends and Baladeva, would then respond to the bees by imitating their singing while His friends sang about His pastimes. Sometimes Lord Krsna would imitate the chattering of a parrot, sometimes, with a sweet voice, the call of a cuckoo, and sometimes the cooing of swans. Sometimes He vigorously imitated the dancing of a peacock, making His cowherd boyfriends laugh."

Govardhana Hill is always famous for supplying natural red dyes, and Krsna and His friends painted their bodies with them. Each of them had a bugle made of buffalo horn and a stick and a flute, and each called his respective calves by their particular names. They were so proud of Krsna's wonderful activities that, while entering the village, they all sang His glories. All the gopis in Vrndavana saw beautiful Krsna entering the village."

Lord Krsna's apperance when He wears the garments of a gopa, wearing colorful and wonderful garments, sash, pearls, and ornaments are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.19):

ga gopakair anu-vanam nayatoh. . . . . .niryoga-pasa-krta-laksanayor vicitram

"My dear friends, as Krsna and Balarama pass through the forest with Their cowherd friends, leading Their cows, They carry ropes to bind the cows' rear legs at the time of milking. When Lord Krsna plays on His flute, the sweet music causes the moving living entities to become stunned and the nonmoving trees to tremble with ecstasy. These things are certainly very wonderful."

Lord Krsna's appearance dressed as a wrestler is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.6):

barhina-stabaka-dhatu-palasair baddha-malla-paribarha-vidambah. . .

"My dear gopi, sometimes Mukunda imitates the appearance of a wrestler by decorating Himself with leaves, peacock feathers and colored minerals. Then, in the company of Balarama and the cowherd boys, He plays His flute to call the cows. At that time the rivers stop flowing, their water stunned by the ecstasy they feel as they eagerly wait for the wind to bring them the dust of His lotus feet. But like us, the rivers are not very pious, and thus they merely wait with their arms trembling out of love."

Lord Krsna's appearance dressed as a dancer is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.22):

syamam hiranya-paridhim. . .nata-vesam

"His complexion was dark blue and His garment golden. Wearing a peacock feather, colored minerals, sprigs of flower buds, and a garland of forest flowers and leaves, He was dressed just like a dramatic dancer."

The elder gopas' appearance dressed like kings is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.5.8):

maharha-vastrabharana- kancukosnisa-bhusitah gopah samayuyu rajan. . .

"O King Pariksit, the cowherd men dressed very opulently with valuable ornaments and garments such as coats and turbans."

In Dvaraka and other like places Lord Krsna wears a great variety of garments. In Gokula Lord Krsna primarily wears the standard upper and lower garments of a pious householder. Lord Krsna's Gokula garments are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.45):

nivim vasitva ruciram

"By being bathed and massaged, the two young Lords were relieved of the weariness caused by walking on the country roads. Then They were dressed in attractive robes and decorated with transcendental garlands and fragrances."

Lord Krsna's paraphernalia include His garemnts, ornaments, conchshell, cakra, buffalo-horn bugle, flute, stick, and dear associates. The appropriate times are the times appropriate for specific pastimes. Some of these pastimes are seen in the following verses of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.20.25-31):

evam vanam tad varsistham pakva-kharjura jambumat go-gopalair vrto rantum sa-balah pravisad dharih

"When the Vrndavana forest had thus become resplendent, filled with ripe dates and jambu fruits, Lord Krsna, surrounded by His cows and cowherd boyfriends and accompanied by Sri Balarama, entered that forest to enjoy."

dhenavo manda-gaminyah. . .

"The cows had to move slowly because of their weighty milk bags, but they quickly ran to the Supreme Personality of Godhead as soon as He called them, their affection for Him causing their udders to become wet."

vanaukasah pramuditah. . .

"The Lord saw the joyful aborigine girls of the forest, the trees dripping sweet sap, and the mountain waterfalls, whose resounding indicated that there were caves nearby."

kvacid vanaspati-krode. . .

"When it rained, the Lord would sometimes enter a cave or the hollow of a tree to play and to eat roots and fruits."

dadhy-odanam samanitam. . .

"Lord Krsna would take His meal of boiled rice and yogurt, sent from home, in the company of Lord Sankarsana and the cowherd boys who regularly ate with Him. They would all sit down to eat on a large stone near the water."

sadvalopari samvisya. . . pravrt-sriyam ca tam viksya. . .

"Lord Krsna watched the contented bulls, calves and cows sitting on the green grass and grazing with closed eyes, and He saw that the cows were tired from the burden of their heavy milk bags. Thus observing the beauty and opulence of Vrndavana s rainy season, a perennial source of great happiness, the Lord offered all respect to that season, which was expanded from His own internal potency."

Now other features of sakhya-rasa will be considered. Amongst the anubhavas are the udbhasvaras. Amongst the suhrt friends the udbhasvaras include attempts to bring limitless good fortune to Krsna, discussion of what is proper and improper, smiling conversations, and other like activities. Amongst the sakha friends the udbhasvaras include activities of unwavering affection, activities like various playful games, singing, artistic skill, eating together, sitting down together, taking naps, and other like pastimes. Telling jokes, hearing descriptions of confidential pastimes, and other like activities are also included here. These friends are glorified in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.12.11):

ittham satam. . .

"In this way, all the cowherd boys used to play with Krsna, who is the source of the Brahman effulgence for jnanis desiring to merge into that effulgence, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead for devotees who have accepted eternal servitorship, and who for ordinary persons is but another ordinary child. The cowherd boys, having accumulated the results of pious activities for many lives, were able to associate in this way with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. How can one explain their great fortune?"

The sakha friends are also described in these owrds of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.18.9-14):

pravala-barha-stabaka- srag-dhatu-krta-bhusanah rama-krsnadayo gopa nanrtur yuyudhur jaguh

"Decorating themselves with newly grown leaves, along with peacock feathers, garlands, clusters of flower buds, and colored minerals, Balarama, Krsna and Their cowherd friends danced, wrestled and sang."

krsnasya nrtyatah kecij jaguh kecid avadayan venu-panitalaih srngaih prasasamsur athapare

"As Krsna danced, some of the boys accompanied Him by singing, and others by playing flutes, hand cymbals and buffalo horns, while still others praised His dancing."

gopa jati-praticchanna deva gopala-rupinau idire krsna-ramau ca nata iva natam nrpa bhramanair langhanaih ksepair asphotana-vikarsanaih cikridatur niyuddhena kaka-paksa-dharau kvacit kvacid bilvaih kvacit kumbhaih. . .

"Sometimes the cowherd boys would play with bilva or kumbha fruits, and sometimes with handfuls of amalaka fruits. At other times they would play the games of trying to touch one another or of trying to identify somebody while one is blindfolded, and sometimes they would imitate animals and birds."

Lord Krsna's pastimes with His sakha friends are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.13.8):

krsnasya visvak puru-raji-mandalair abhyananah phulla-drso vrajarbhakah sahopavista vipine virejus c hada yathambhoruha-karnikayah

"Like the whorl of a lotus flower surrounded by its petals and leaves, Krsna sat in the center, encircled by lines of His friends, who all looked very beautiful. Every one of them was trying to look forward toward Krsna, thinking that Krsna might look toward him. In this way they all enjoyed their lunch in the forest."

These pastimes are also described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.13.9-10):

kecit puspair dalaih kecit. . .

"Among the cowherd boys, some placed their lunch on flowers, some on leaves, fruits, or bunches of leaves, some actually in their baskets, some on the bark of trees and some on rocks. This is what the children imagined to be their plates as they ate their lunch."

Now other aspects of sakhya-rasa will be considered. Now the sattvika-bhavas of the suhrt and sakha friends will be considered. Shedding tears is among the sattvika-bhavas of the suhrt friends. This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.71.27):

tam matuleyam parirabhya nirvrto bhimah smayan prema-jalakulendriyah yamau kiriti ca suhrttamam muda pravrddha-baspah parirebhire 'cyutam

"Then Bhima, his eyes bnrimming with tears, laughed with joy as he embraced his maternal cousin Krsna. Arjuna and the twins - Nakula and Sahadeva - also joyfully embraced their dearmost friend, the infallible Lord, and they cried profusely."

Of the Lord's associates described here some were elder than Krsna and some younger than Krsna. Still, all of them considered Krsna their suhrt friend. There is no rasabhasa in this. This is a proper arrangement of the rasas. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

"When the members of the cowherd community, who had accepted Krsna as their dearmost friend, saw Him enveloped in the snake's coils, motionless, they were greatly disturbed. They had offered Krsna everything--their very selves, their families, their wealth, wives and all pleasures. At the sight of the Lord in the clutches of the Kaliya snake, their intelligence became deranged by grief, lamentation and fear, and thus they fell to the ground."

Now the sancari-bhavas will be considered. An example of the sancari-bhava harsa (joy) manifest among the suhrt friends is seen in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.71.27 (which was qouted in Anuccheda 263). This same sancari-bhava (joy) as manifested among the sakha friends is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.17.13-14):

"Krsna rose up out of the lake wearing divine garlands, fragrances and garments, covered with many hne jewels, and decorated with gold. In sakhya-rasa the sthayi-bhava is friendship. For sridama Vipra and others like him the sentiment of friendship is lessened by awareness of the Lord's power and opulence. For Arjuna and others like him, however, their awareness of the Lord's friendship and opulence is itself lessened. For the gopa boys there is no awareness of the Lord's power and opulence. Therefore their friendship is pure and unalloyed. Their sentiment of friendship is never altered. Their friendship is described in the following words in relation to Lord Balarama's return to Vraja (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.65.5):

samupetyatha gopalan hasya-hasta-grahadibhih. . .

"Lord Balarama then paid proper respects to the elder cowherd men, and the younger ones all greeted Him respectfully. He met them all with smiles, handshakes, and so on."

In this way the activities of the Lord's friends are seen. The different kinds of suhrt friends may be seen in srimad- Bhagavatam 10.71.27 (which was quoted here in Anuccheda 263). An example of the activities of the sakha friends is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.58.13-14):

ekada ratham aruhya vijayo vanara-dhvajam gandivam dhanur adaya tunau caksaya-sayakau sakam krsnena sannaddho vihartum vipinam mahat bahu-vyala-mrgakirnam pravisat para-vira-ha

"Once Arjuna, the layer of powerful enemies, donned his armor, mounted his chariot flying the flag of Hanuman, took up his bow and his two inexhaustible quivers, and went to sport with Lord Krsna in a large forest filled with fierce animals."

If this passage had been prose the word sequence would have been "krsnena sakam vihartum". This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

The vibhavas and other features of sakhya-rasa have thus been described. The twho kinds of friends, the suhrts and the sakhas, ahve also been described. The situations before meeting Krsna and while the friends haveKrsna's association are like what has previously been described in the decription of vatsalya- rasa. The situation when the friends are separated from Lord Krsna is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.15.1-4):

evam krsna-sakhah krsno bhratra rajna vikalpitah nana-sankaspadam rupam krsna-vislesa-karsita h

"Arjuna, the celebrated friend of Lord Krsna, was griefstricken because of his strong feeling of separation from Krsna, over and above all Maharaja Yudhisthira's speculative inquiries.

sokena susyad-vadana- hrt-sarojo hata-prabhah vibhum tam evanusmaran nasaknot pratibhasitum

"Due to grief, Arjuna's mouth amd lotuslike heart had dried up. Therefore his body lost all luster. Now, remembering the Supreme Lord, he could hardly utter a word in reply.

krcchrena samstabhya sucah paninamrjya netrayoh paroksena samunnaddha-pranayautkanthya-katarah

"With great difficulty he checked the tears of grief that smeared his eyes. He was very distressed because Lord Krsna was out of his sight, and he increasingly felt affection for Him.

sakhyam maitrim sauhrdam ca sarathyadisu samsmaran nrpam agrajam ity aha baspa-gadgadaya gira

"Remembering Lord Krsna and His well wishes, benefactions, intimate familial relations and His chariot driving, Arjuna, overwhelmed and breathing very heavily, began to speak."

In these verses the word "Krsnah" means Arjuna". The word "rajnavikalpitah" is divided into "rajna" and "avikalpitah".

The words "nana-sankaspadam rupam vikalpitah" mean "He was filled with doubts". The words "sucah amrjya" mean "He wiped the tears of grief from his eyes". "Paroksena" means "because Lord Krsna was no longer present before his eyes". However, because Arjuna did not fear that some calamity had befallen Lord Krsna, this is not an example of karuna-rasa (compassion). Arjuna did not fear that a calamity had befallen Lord Krsna becausze Arjuna was aware of Lord Krsna's supreme power and opulence, His status as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is seen in the next verse, where Arjuna laments (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.15.5):

vancito 'ham. . .

"O King! The Supreme Personality of Godhead Hari, who treated me exactly like an intimate friend, has left me alone. Thus my astounding power, which astonished even the demigods, is no longer with me."

Anucchedas 272 and 273

Later in that chapter the devotee's attainment of blissful association with the Supreme Lord is described in these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 1.15.46-48):

te sadhu-krta-sarvartha jnatvatyantikam atmanah manasa dharayam asur vaikuntha-caranambujam

"They all had performed all the principles of religion and as a result rightly decided that the lotus feet of the Lord Sri Krsna are the supreme goal of all. Therefore they meditated upon His feet without interruption.

tad-dhyanodriktaya bhaktya visuddha-dhisanah pare tasmin narayana-pade ekanta-matayo gatim avapur duravapam te asadbhir visayatmabhih vidhuta-kalmasam sthanam virajenatmanaiva hi

"Thus by pure consciousness due to constant devotional remembrance, they attained the spiritual sky, which is ruled over by the Supreme Narayana, Lord Krsna. This is attained only by those who meditate upon the one Supreme Lord without deviation. This abode of the Lord sri Krsna, known as Goloka Vrndavana, cannot be attained by persons who are absorbed in the material conception of life. But the Pandavas, being completely washed of all material contamination, attained that abode in their very same bodies."

In these verses the word "te" means "the Pandavas", sadhu" means "properly", "krta-sarvarthah" means "having attained economic development, religiosity, sense gratification, and liberation", "vaikuntha-caranambujam" means "the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead", "atyantikam" means "the supreme goal of life", "jnatva" means "understanding". Understanding this is the supreme goal of liife, they became rpat in meditation "manasa dharayam asuh). Here "narayana" means "sri Krsna", This means they again attained Lord Krsna's association. "Vidhuta-kalmasam sthanam" means "the supremely pure spiritual abode where Lord Krsna is manifest eternally", and "atmanah" means "in their very same bodies". This was possible because their bodies were not material (virajena). The word "hi" (certainly) is used here to dispell any doubt that is is not possible.

It is then said in the same passage of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.15.50):

draupadi ca tadajnaya patinam anapeksatam vasudeve bhagavati hy ekanta-matir apa tam

"Draupadi also saw that her husbands, without caring for her, were leaving home. She knew well about Lord Vasudeva, Krsna, the Personality of Godhead. Both she and Subhadra became absorbed in thoughts of Krsna and attained the same results as their husbands."

Here the words "patinam anapeksatam" means independent of their husbands", "tat" means the associationof Lord Krsna", "ajnaya" means properly understanding", "vasudeve" means Lord Krsna, the son of Maharaja Vasudeva", "hi" means "certainly", and "ekanta-matih" means thoughts absorbed ion Lord Krsna". In this way they attained the association of Lord Krsna.

The gopa boys of Vraja are separated from Krsna when Krsna goes to live in a faraway place. Later they meet Him again and feel happiness. These experiences for them are like the previously described experiences of the devotees in vatsalya- rasa. Thus concludes the description of sakhya-rasa. Now srngara-rasa will be described. In this Krsna the alambana is Lord Krsna as the object of amorous love. The visaya is the beloved Krsna. The lovers (adhara) are of two kinds: 1. sajatiya-bhava, and 2. tadiya-parama-vallabha. Lord Krsna as the alambana and visaya is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.52.37):

srutva gunan bhuvana-sundara srnvatam te nirvisya karna-vivarair harato 'nga-tapam rupam drsam drsimatam akhilartha-labham tvayy acyutavisati cittam apatrapam me

Lord Krsna as the alambana and visaya is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.2):

tasam avirabhuc chaurih smayamana-mukhambujah pitambara-dharah sragvi saksan manmatha-manmathah

"Then Lord Krsna, a smile on His lotus face, appeared before the gopis. Wearing a garland and a yellow garment, He directly appeared as one who can bewilder the mind of Cupid, who himself bewilders the minds of ordinary people."

Here the word "manmatha-manmathah" mweans who bewilders even Cupid". This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 276

The Supreme Lord's ordinary lovers (samanya-vallabha) include the girl Kubja and the damsels on Mount Kailasa, damsels described in the Kurma Purana. Kubja is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.48.8):

saivam kaivalya-natham tam prapya dusprapyam isvaram anga-ragarpanenaho durbhagedam ayacata

"Having thus gotten the hard-to-get Supreme Lord by the simple act of offering Him body ointment, unfortunate Trivakra submitted to that Lord of freedom the following request."

This verse says: "Even though she was unfortuante, Kubja attained the Supreme Personality of Godhead simply by offering bodily ointment to Him. This is very surprising." Then Kubja said to Lord Krsna in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.48.9):

sahosyatam. . .

"O beloved, please stay here with me for a few days more and enjoy. I cannot bear to give up Your association, O lotus-eyed one."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.48.8 the word "ayacata" means "she approached to beg a favor". What were the characteristics of Lord Krsna? It is said here that He is kaivalya-natha", which means "the beloved whose love is pure". Although originally she approached Lord Krsna so that she herself would find pleasure, at the end Kubja loved Krsna with pure and selfless love. In this way she became like the goddesslike gopis of Vraja. sri Rukmini and the other queens of Lord Krsna are praised in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.90.27):

yah samparyacaran premna pada-samvahanadibhih jagad-gurum bhartr-buddhya tasam kim varnyate tapah

"And how could one possibly describe the great austerities that had been performed by the women who perfectly served Him, the spiritual master of the universe, in pure ecstatic love? Thinking of Him as their husband, they rendered such intimate services as massaging His feet."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Lord Krsna's queens are also praised in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.61.5-6):

ittham rama-patim avapaya patim striyas ta brahmadayo 'pi na viduh padavim yadiyam bhejur mudaviratam edhitayanuraga- hasavaloka-nava-sangama-lalasadyam

"Thus these women obtained as their husband the master of the goddess of fortune, although even great demigods like Brahma do not know how to approach Him. With ever-increasing pleasure, they felt loving attraction for Him, exchanged smiling glances with Him, eagerly anticipated associating with Him in ever-fresh intimacy, and enjoyed in many other ways.

pratyudgamasana-vararhana-pada-sauca- tambula-visramana-vijana-gandha-malyaih kesa-prasara-sayana-snapanopaharyaih dasi-sata api vibhor vidadhuh sma dasyam

"Although the Supreme Lord's queens each had hundreds of maidservants, they chose to personally serve the Lord by approaching Him humbly, offering Him a seat, worshiping Him wityh excellent paraphernalia, bathing and massaging His feet, giving Him pan to chew, fanning Him, anointing Him with fragrant sandalwood paste, adorning Him with flower garlands, dressing His hair, arranging His bed, bathing Him, and presenting Him with various gifts."

Persons who think someone other than Lord Krsna is the supreme love of their life are criticized in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.52):

ye mam bhajanti dam-patye. . .

"Although I have the pwoer to award spiritual liberation, lusty persons worship Me with penance and vows in order to get My blessings for their mundane family life. Such persons are bewildered by My illusory energy."

Later in that chapter Lord Krsna affirms (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.54):

distya grhesvari. . .

"Fortunately, O mistress of this house, you have always rendered Me faithful devotional service, which liberates one from material existence. This service is very difficult for the envious to perform, especially for a woman whose intentions are wicked, who lives only to gratify her bodily demands, and who indulges in duplicity."

In Ketumala-varsa Gosddess Laksmi worships the Supreme Personality of Godhead manifest there in His form as Kamadeva. She prays to Him (srimad-Bhagavatam 5.18.19):

striyo vratais tva hrsikesvaram svato hy aradhya loke patim asasate 'nyam. . .

"My dear Lord, You are certainly the fully independent master of all the senses. Therefore all women who worship You by strictly observing vows because they wish to acquire a husband to satisfy their senses are surely under illusion. They do not know that such a husband cannot actually give protection to them or their children. Nor can he protect their wealth or duration of life, for he himself is dependent on time, fruitive results and the modes of nature, which are all subordinate to You."

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.61.5-6 was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

In addition to Lord Krsna's queens (svakiya), there are the goddesslike gopis of Vraja, who love Lord Krsna as their paramour (parakiya). No lovers are equal or superior to the gopis, who are glorified in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.60):

nayam sriyo 'nga u nitanta-rateh prasadah svar-yositam nalina-gandha-rucam kuto 'nyah rasotasave 'sya bhuja-danda-grhita-kantha- labdhasisam ya udagad vraja-vallabhinam

"When Lord sri Krsna was dancing with the gopis in the rasa-lila, the gopis were embraced by the arms of the Lord. This transcendental favor was never bestowed upon the goddess of fortune or other consorts in the spiritual world. Indeed, never was such a thing even imagined by the most beautiful girls in the heavenly planets, whose bodily luster and aroma resemble the lotus flower. Ansd what to speak of worldly women who are very beautiful according to material estimation?"

The gopis are again glorified in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.44.14):

gopyas tapah kim acaran yad amusya rupam. . .

"What austerities must the gopis have performed! With their eyes they always drink the nectar of Lord Krsna's form, which is the essence of loveliness and is not to be equaled or surpassed. That lovliness is the only abode of beauty, fame, and opulence. It is self-perfect, ever fresh and extremely rare."

This verse says: "The gopis gazed at Lord Krsna's form, which is not to be equaled or surpassed". The gopis are again glorified in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.44.15):

ya dohane 'vahanane mathanopalepa. . . . . .dhanya vraja-striya urukrama-citta-yanah

"The ladies of Vraja are the most fortunate of women because, with their minds fully attached to Krsna and their throats always choked up with tears, they constantly sing about Him while milking the cows, winnowing grain, churning butter, gathering cow dung for fuel, riding on swings, taking care of their crying babies, sprinkling the ground with water, cleaning their houses, and so on. By their exalted Krsna consciousness they automatically acquire all desirable things."

In this verse the word "urukrama-citta-yanah" means "they whose chariot is the all-powerful mind". This means that wherever their minds went, they, riding on the chariot of the mind, were able to go." An alternate reading gives us cinta-yanah" instead of "citta-yanah". The meaning, however, remains the same. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.44.15 was spoken by the women of Mathura City.

Anuccheda 279

In this way the great glory of the gopis' love for Lord Krsna is seen. Their love is gloriosu because it is forbidden, because it is love for a paramour (parakiya). Even in ordinary affairs of the materuial world, this kind of forbidden love is understood to be very intense. The author Bharata explains:

bahu varyate yatah khalu yatra pracchanna-kamukatvam ca ya ca mitho durlabhata sa parama manmathasya ratih

"The highest amorous pleasure is attained when love is forbidden, when the lovers must conceal their love, when the lovers rarely meet."

The author Rudra explains:

vamata durlabhatvam ca strinam ya ca nivarana tad eva panca-banasya manye paramam ayudham

"Contrariness, difficulty of attainment, and rejection by women I consider Kamadeva's greatest weapons."

The author Visnu-gupta explains:

yatra nisedha-visesah su-durlabhatvam ca yan mrgaksinam tatraiva nagaranam nirbharam asajjate hrdayam

"When love is forbidden and the doe-eyed beloved is difficult to attain, then the passionate lover's heart becomes very attached to his beloved."

Some gopi girls prayed to Goddess Katyayani that they might attain Lord Krsna as their husband. Their desire to attain Him was very strong. Because Krsna was unattainable for them, their love for Him was very great. The greatness oftheir love is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.83.43):

vraja-striyo yad vanchanti. . .

"We desire the same contact with the Supreme Lord's feet that thr young women of Vraja, the cowherd boys, and even the aborigine Pulinda women desire - the touch of the dust He leaves on the plants and grass as He tends His cows."

Their love is also described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.47.58):

vanchanti yad bhava-bhiyah. . .

"Among all persons on earth, these cowherd women alone have actually perfected their embodied lives, for they have achieved the perfection of unalloyed love for Lord Govinda. Their pure love is hankered after by those who fear material existence, by great sages, and by ourselves as well. For one who has tasted the narrations of the infinite Lord, what is the use of taking birth as a high-class brahmana, or even as Lord Barhma himself?"

Still, the gs' intesne desire to attain Lord Krsna was not born merely because they were forbidden to associate with Him. They certrainly did not wish to be forbidden or to have so many obstacles placed befope them. Rather they loved Him in spite of being so strongly forbidden, This is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.61):

ya dustyajam. . .

"The gopis of Vrndavana have given up the association of their husbands, sons, and other family members, who are very difficult to give up, andf they have forsaken the path of chastity to take shelter of tyhe lotus feet of Mukunda, Krsna, which one should search for by Vedic knowledge. Oh, let me be fortunate enough to be one of the bushes, creepers, or herbs in Vrndavana, because the gopis trample them and bless them with the dust of their feet."

As a wild elephant cannot be stopped, so the gopis' passionate love for Krsna could not be stopped. Although the gopis were all forbidden in the smae way to associate with Lord Krsna, still they each had a different intensity of love for Him. Of them all Radha had the greatest love. She had the greatest power to bring Lord Krsna under Her control. The supremely exalted position of sri Radha's love is indirectly described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.28):

anayaradhito nunam. . .

"Certainly this particular gopi has perfectly worshiped the all-powerful Personality of Godhead, Govinda, since He was so pleased with Her that He abandoned the rest of us and brought Her to a secluded place."

In tyhis way the gopis' love for Lord Krsna blossomed. It was as if they had been bitten by the black snake of love for Krsna. They did not associate with Krsna as a wife associates with her husband. Rather they passionately loved Krsna as a girl loves her paramour. This kind of love is criticized in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.7-8):

nihsvam tyajanti ganika. . .

"Prostitutes abandon a penniless man."

jara bhuktva ratam striyam

"A lover abandons the woman he has enjoyed, even though she remains attached to him."

It is said that girls who love someone other than their husbands (parakiya) are fallen and worthy of contempt. This is true for girls who take shelter of individual souls who live in the material world. The situation of such girls is abominable. However these defects asnd criticisms do not apply to the gopis. This truth is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.35):

gopinam tat-patinam ca. . .

"He who lives as the overseeing witness within the gopis and their husbands, and indeed within all embodied living beings, assumes forms in this world to enjoy transcendental pastimes."

From the material point of view it seemed that the gopis had husbands other than Krsna. However, from the spiritual point of view these so-called husbands did not exist. In the Krsna- sandarbha it has already been shown that the gopis' so-called husbands were in truth only a display manifested from Lord Krsna's internal potency. Therefore it is Lord Krsna Himself who is ultimately the gs only true husband. The gopis' exalted position, which has so equal or superior, is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.58):

etah param tanu-bhrtah. . .

"Among all persons on earth, these cowherd women alone have actually perfected their embodied lives, for they have achieved the perfection of unalloyed love for Lord Govinda. Their pure love is hankered after by those who fear material existence, by great sages, and by ourselves as well. For one who has tasted the narrations of the infinite Lord, what is the use of taking birth as a high-class brahmana, or even as Lord Barhma himself?"

The gopis' glories are also described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani:

nesta yad angini rase kavibhih parodha tad gokulambuja-drsam kulam antarena asamsaya rasa-vidher avataritanam kamsarina rasika-mandala-sekharena

"Philosophers do not praise adultery. However, they do praise the pastimes Lord Krsna, the crown of all rasikas, enjoys with Gokula's lotus-eyed girls, girls who descended to this world to enjoy nectar pastimes with Him."

The gopis did not have even a dim reflection of contact with their so-called husbands. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.37):

nasuyan khalu krsnaya mohitas tasya mayaya manyamanah sva-parsva-sthan svan svan daran vrajaukasah

"The cowherd men, bewildered by Krsna's illusory potency, thought their wives had remained home at their sides. Thus they did not harbor any jealous feelings against Him."

The gopis are eternally dear to Lord Krsna. They are His consorts eternally. This verse explains: "The cowherd men, bewildered by Krsna's illusory potency, thought their wives had remained home at their sides. Thus they did not harbor any jealous feelings against Him." This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

The spiritual powers and glories and virtues of Lord Krsna and the gopis are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.10):

tabhir vidhuta-sokabhir bhagavan acyuto vrtah vyarocatadhikam tata purusah saktibhir yatha

"Encircled by the gopis, who were now relieved of all distress, Lord Acyuta, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, shone forth splendidly. My dear King, Krsna thus appeared like the Supersoul encircled by His spiritual potencies."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 283

The transcendental artistic genius of Lord Krsna and the gopi is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.7-8):

pada-nyasair bhuja-vidhutibhih. . .

"As the gopis sang in praise of Krsna, their feet danced, their hands gestured, and their eyebrows moved with playful smiles. With their braids and belts tied tight, their waists bending, their faces perspiring, the garments on their breasts moving this way and that, and their earrings swinging on their cheeks, Lord Krsna's young consorts shone like streaks of lightning in a mass of clouds.

uccair jagur nrtyamana rakta-kanthyo rati-priyah krsnabhimarsa-mudita yad-gitenedam avrtam

"Eager to enjoy conjugal love, their throats colored with various pigments, the gopis sang loudly and danced. They were overjoyed by Krsna's touch, and they sang songs that filled the entire universe."

In this verse the word "idam" (this) refers to the universe. This verse says that the gopis' songs filled the entire universe. In the Sangita-sara itis said:

tavanta eva raga syur yavatyo jiva-jatayah tesu sodasa-sahasri pura gopi-krta vara

"The ragas number 16,000, as many as there are species of life. The gopis sang songs in all these ragas."

At the end of this book it is said that these ragas are seen in Svargaloka and the other higher material planets.

The gopis' songs are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.9):

kacit samam mukundena svara jatir amisritah unninye pujita tena priyata sadhu sadhv iti tad eva dhruvam unninye tasyai manam ca bahv adat

"One gopi, joining Lord Mukunda in His singing, sang pure melodious tones that rose harmoniously above His. Krsna was pleased and showed great appreciation for her performance, saying `Excellent! Excellent!' Then another gopi repeated the same melody, but in a special metrical pattern, and Krsna praised her also."

In this verse the word "svarah" means the scale of seven notes beginning with the sixth note", and jatayah" means "the raga that comes from that scale". Here "amisritah" means that because Krsna and the gopis were very expert, the melodies they sang did not become mixed. The melodies remained pure, and "unninye" means "the melodies were gloriously sung". The gopis sang together with Lord Krsna, Krsna whose melodies even Brahma, siva, Indra and all the demigods have no power to understand. The singing of Krsna and the gopis was equal. The singing of one did not dominate the singing of the other. The words "pujita tena" mean "with their treble voices the gopis worshiped Lord Krsna". Here the word "dhruvam" means "a gopi sang a melody in the dhruva rhythm, and "tasyai manam adat" means "Lord Krsna praised her". This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 285 and 286

Among the ordinary (samanya) conjugal lovers of Lord Krsna, Kubja is the most exalted. Among the queens married (svakiya) to Lord Krsna, sri Rukmini and sri Satyabhama are mosty exalted. They are described in the following words of Hari- vamsa:

kutumbasyesvari casid rukmini bhismakatmaja satyabhamottama strinam saubhagye cadhikabhavat

"Bhismaka's daughter, Rukmini, is the controller of Lord Krsna's household. Satyabhama is the most fortunate of Lord Krsna's wives."

The most exalted of the goddesslike gopis of Vraja are described in these words of the Bhavisya Purana, Uttara- khanda:

gopali palika dhanya visakha dhyana-nisthika radhanuradha somabha taraka dasami tatha

"The ten most prominent gopis are Gopali, Palika, Dhanya, Visakha, Dhyana-nisthika, Radha, Anuradha, Somabha, and Taraka."

Here the words "taraka dasami" mean "the tenth gopi is named Taraka". In ther Skanda Purana, Prahlada- samhita the four gopis Lalita, saibya, Padma, and Bhadra are included amongst the most prominent gopis. In other places in the scriptures Candravali is also included amongst the prominent gopis. The Somabha mentioned in the previous quote from the Bhavisya Purana is the same as Candravali. In the Agama- sastras it is said:

pramada-sata-kotibhir akulitah

"Lord Krsna is surrounded by hundreds and millions of beautiful gopis."

Amongst all the gopis, Radha is the most important. It is because of her great love that Lord Krsna disappeared from the rasa dance. This has already been described in the sri Krsna- sandarbha (Anuccheda 189). Radha is celebrated in all the scriptures. In the Gopala-tapani Upanisad she is known by the name Gandharvika.

Lord Krsna's beloveds are of three kinds: 1. mugdha (meek), 2. madhya (niteermediate), and 3. pragalbha (arrogant). They are also of three ages: 1. nava-yauavana (new youth), 2. spasta (clearly manifested youth), and 3. (samyag-yauvana (fully blossomed youth). According to these different ages different kinds of activities are manifested. The age of samyag-yuavana is sixteen years. It is not older than that. This is seeen in the following words of the Gautamiya Tantra:

kanyabhir dvy-asta-varsabhih

"Lord Krsna is surrounded by sixteen-year-old gopis."

The termperments of the Lord's beloveds are of three kinds: 1. dhira (peaceful), 2. adhira (agitated), and 3. misra- guna (a mixture of peace and agitation). Their love for Lord Krsna they are also of three kinds: 1. srestha (best), 2. sama (intermediate), and 3. laghu (least). In their pastimes with Lord Krsna, His beloveds are in the following eight situations: 1. abhisarika (meeting Krsna ina rendezvous), 2. vasaka-sajja (dressing in fine garments and ornaments to prepare for a rendezvous with Krsna), 3. utkanthita (yearning to meet Krsna at the rendezvous), 4. khandita (jilted by Krsna), 5. vipralabdha (separated from Krsna), 6. kalahantarita (feuding with Krsna), 7. prosita- preyasi (separated from Krsna because He has gone to a faraway place), and 8. svadhina-bhartrka (dominating Krsna). In their realtions with each other, Lord Krsna's beloveds have four kinds of natures: 1. sadrsya (alike), kincit-sadrsya (somewhat alike), 3. aspasta-sadrsya (not clearly alike), and 4. virodhi (opposed). These four natures are manifest as the following four kinds of relationships: 1. sakhi (friend), 2. suhrt (well-wisher), 3. tatastha (neutral person), and pratipaksiki (rival). In this way the Lord's beloveds have different natures. A sakhi spoke these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.30.11):

apy ena-patni. . .tanvan drsam sakhi su-nirvrtim

"O friend, wife of the deer, has Lord Acyuta been here with His beloved, bringing great joy to your eyes? Indeed, blowing this way is the fragrance of His garland of kunda flowers, which was smeared with the kunkuma from the breasts of His girlfriend when He embraced Her."

Here the words "tanvan drsam sakhi su-nirvrtim" (O friend, has Lord Acyuta been here with His beloved, bringing great joy to your eyes?) were spoken by the gopis because they yearned to see Lord Krsna. Here the word "sakhi" (O friend) shows that the gopis imagined the deer to be like them, delighted by the sight of Lord Krsna. In this way they imagined that the deer were their friends. Here the word "kanta" means "the great good fortune of Lord Krsna's girlfriend", "kula-pateh" means "of Lord Krsna", and "kantanga-sange" means "delighted by the fragrance of the two lovers' embraces". The pleasures Radha and Krsna enjoy in Their pastimes are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.12):

bahum priyamsa. . .

"O trees, we see that you are bowing down. When the younger brother of Rama walked by here, followed by intoxicated bees swarming around the tulasi manjaris decorating His garland, did He acknowledge your obeisances with His affectionate glances? He must have been resting His arm on the shoulder of His beloved and carrying a lotus flower in His free hand."

A suhrt (well-wisher) spoke these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.30.28):

anayaradhito nunam bhagavan harir isvarah yan no vihaya govindah prito yam amayad rahah

"Certainly this particular gopi has perfectly worshiped the all-powerful Personality of Godhead, Govinda, since He was so pleased with Her that He abandoned the rest of us and brought Her to a secluded place."

Because she praises sri Radha's good fortune, the gopi who speak this verse is a suhrt. After hearing a sakhi speak srimad-Bhagavatam 10.30.11, a The tatastha (neutral person) spoke these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.13):

prcchatema lata bahun apy aslista vanaspateh nunam tat-karaja-sprsta bibhraty utpulakany aho

"Let us ask these creepers about Krsna. Even though they are embracing the arms of their husband, this tree, they certainly must have been touched by Krsna's fingernails, since out of joy they are manifesting eruptions on their skin."

After hearing a suhrt speak srimad-Bhagavatam 10.30.28, a tatastha spoke these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.29):

dhanya aho ami alyah. . .

"O girls! The dust of Govinda's lotus feet is so sacred that even Brahma, siva and the goddess Rama take that dust upon their heads to dispel sinful reactions."

"These footprints of that special gopi greatly disturb us. Of all the gopis, She alone was taken away to a secluded place, where She is enjoying the lips of Krsna."

The gopi who spoke this verse clearly displayed her envy of the gopi taken away by Lord Krsna. In the pastime of capturing the parijata-tree, a pastime described in the Hari-vamsa and other scriptures, Satyabhama envied sri Rukmini in the same way the gopi who spoke srimad-Bhagavatam 10.30.30 envied the gopi taken away by Lord Krsna. Anuccheda 288

Here someone may protest: "It is not possible that the devotees of the Lord can be rivals of each other. That is a horrible idea. It is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.48):

tasam tat-saubhaga-madam. . .

" `Lord Kesava, seeing the gopis too proud of their good fortune, wanted to relieve them of this pride and show them further mercy. Thus He immediately disappeared.'

"In this way it is seen that the Supreme Personality of Godhead wishes to cast far away all envy, lust, and pride. srila sukadeva Gosvami here uses the word `dauratmya' (wickedness) to describe those vices."

To this protest I reply: If sometimes the Lord's devotees are rivals of each other that is only to nourish their love for the Lord and to nourish the Lord's pastimes. The Lord reveals His pastimes so the souls may attain love for Him. This is seen in these words of

srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.36):

bhajate tadrsih krida yah srutva tat-paro bhavet

"When the Lord assumes a humanlike body to show mercy to His devotees, He engages in such pastimes as will attract those who hear about them to become dedicated to Him."

Indeed, in srngara-rasa (the mellow of conjugal love), the rasa is noursihed by a wonderful display of spiritual envy, lust, and pride. This truth is confirmed by the great philosophers. The Supreme Lord personally accepts it in His pastimes. As the hero loved by His beloveds, the Supreme Lord manifests four features: 1. daksina (pleasing), 2. anukula (a faithful lover), 3. satha (a cheat), and 4. dhrsta (bold and dominating). The Lord's pastime potency (lila-sakti) manifests these various features in the presence of the Lord's beloveds. In this way these features are seen. However, when they are separated from the Lord, the Lord's beloveds feel great distress. In that state of calamity they all feel friendship for each other. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.40):

anvicchantyo bhagavato margam gopyo 'viduritah dadrsuh priya-vislesan mohitam duhkhitam sakhim

"WhiIe continuing to search out Krsna's path, the gopis discovered their unhappy friend close by. She was bewildered by separation from Her lover."

In this verse the gopis' feelingsof friendship for each other is manifested. Lord Krsna manifests this pastime of being separated from Him in order that the gopis' thirst to attain Him may very quickly increase. In this way the gopis' love for Lord Krsna, the crest jewel of amorous heroes, increases. That this is the true reason Lord Krsna arranges that His devotees be separated from Him is confirmed by Lord Krsna Himself in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.20):

naham tu sakhyo bhajato 'pi jantun. . .

"But the reason I do not immediately reciprocate the affection of living beings even when they worship Me, O gopis, is that I want to intensify their loving devotion. They then become like a poor man who has gained some wealth and then lost it, and who thus becomes so anxious about it that he can think of nothing else."

These pastimes are the Supreme Lord's attempt to make the gopis free offalse pride. This is seen in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.48, which was quoted above. In that verse the word prasamaya" means "to make them free of false pride", and the word "prasadaya" means "to give them mercy, mercy that took the form of making them thirst after attaining Him". In this way the gopis' good ofrtune (tat-subhaga) is seen. The word "prasadaya" may also be interpreted to mean "to satisfy the gopis' passioante desires, Lord Krsna enjoyed the rasa dance pastime", and the word prasadaya" may also be interpreted to mean "to delight the gopis, Lord Krsna enjoyed the rasa-dance pastime". The word "dauratmya" here means "separated fropm Lord Krsna, the gopis became depressed at heart". Dauratmya" here does not mean "wickedness" because this passage describes pastimes of transcendental love. srila syukadeva Gisvami, the king of sages, then gave this description in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.41):

taya kathitam akarnya. . .

"She told them how Madhava had given Her much respect, but how She then suffered dishonor because of Her misbehavior. The gopis were extremely amazed to hear this."

Actually there was nothing wrong with that gopis' pride. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.34):

reme taya svatma-rata atmaramo 'py akhanditah kaminam darsayan dainyam strinam caiva duratmatam

"Lord Krsna enjoyed with that gopi although He enjoys only within, being self-satisfied and complete in Himself. Thus by contrast He showed the wretchedness of ordinary lusty men and hardhearted women."

In this verse the word "svatma-ratah" means self-satisfied", "atmaramah" means "who enjoys pastimes", and "apy akhanditah reme" means attached to that particular gopi, He enjoyed pastimes with Her". Someone may ask: "Why was Lord Krsna so attached to that one gopi? Why did He enjoy pastimes with Her?" The answer is given here in this verse, srimad-Bhagavatam 10.30.35. It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (1.7.10):

ittham-bhuta-guno harih

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead possesses transcendental qualities."

As the Supreme Personality of Godhead possesses transcendental qualities, so does the gopi (sri Radha) mentioned in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.30.34. Her quality is that She is filled with love for Lord Krsna. Here it is specifically said that Her love is pure spiritual love. It is not material lust. Spiritual love is very powerful and glorious. Still, this gopi's spiritual love may superfically seem like material lust, and in this way it may manifest what seems to be material pride and material passion. Thus this gopi reveals a kind of love that seems to be like the wretchedness (dainyam) of lusty women, a wretchedness that is well known in this material world. Thus this gopis manifests stubbornness, willfulness, and a personality that tries to dominate Her beloved. With this beloved Lord Krsna enjoys pastimes (reme). Or, these words of srimad-Bhagavatam may be interpreted in a different way. They may be interpreted to mean "With these pastimes the Lord shows how wretched and insignificant are materialistic men who try to enjoy amorous pastimes with lusty women in the material world. Manifesting the glory of His pastimes, the Lord shows how wretched and devoid of true nectar are the activities (dainyam) of lusty men (kaminam) and how wretched is the nature (duratmatam) of materialistic women (strinam) who do not worship the Supreme Lord." The great glory of the gopis' pastimes with Lord Krsna is also seen in these words of scripture:

darsayad vidhu-parajayam rama-vaktram ullasati dhuta-lanchanam

"As the goddess of fortune enjoys pastimes with the Supreme Lord, the spotless moon of her face, a moon that defeats all other moons, shines with bliss."

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.30.34 discussed in these words was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 289

In this way the alambana of srngara-rasa has been described. Now the uddipanas will be described. Included among the uddipanas are Lord Krsna's qualities, such as His ability to charm women (nari-moahana-silatva), The handsome charm of His bodily color, sweetness, fragrance, touch, sound, auspicious qualities, and new youthfulness (avayava-varna-rasa-gandha- sparsa-sabda-sal-laksana-nava-yauvananam kamaniyata), His being always new and fresh (nitya-nutanatva), His making the gopis fall in love with Him (abhivyakta-bhavatva), His being controlled by His devotees' love (prema-vasyatva), and His genius (saubuddhya-pratibhatva). His ability to charm women is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.12):

krsnam niriksya vanitotsava-rupa-silam. . .

"Krsna's beauty and character create a festival for all women. Indeed, when the demigods' wives flying in airplanes with their husbands catch sight of Him and hear His resonant flute- song, their hearts are shaken by Cupid, and they become so bewildered that the flowers fall out of their hair and their belts loosen."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by the goddesslike gopis of Vraja.

Anucchedas 290-294

Lord Krsna's being eternally new and fresh is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.11.34):

yadyapy asau parsva-gatah. . .

"Although Lord sri Krsna was constantly by their sides, as well as exclusively alone, His feet appeared to them to be newer and newer. The goddess of fortune, although by nature always restless and moving, could not quit the Lord's feet. So what woman can be detached from those feet, having once taken shelter of them?"

Now Lord Krsna's quality of making the gopis fall in love with Him will be described. The purva-raga (first stages of that love) is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.31.2):

sarad-udasaye sadhu jata-sat- sarasijodara-sri-musa drsa surata-natha te 'sulka-dasika vara-da nighnato neha kim vadhah

"O Lord of love, in beauty Your glance excels the whorl of the finest, most perfec fly formed lotus within the autumn pond. O bestower of benedictions, You are killing the maidservants who have given themselves to You freely, without any price. Isn't this murder?"

In this verse the words "drsa surata-natha" mean "O Lord who with Your glance beg to enjoyamorous pastimes", "vara-prada" means "O Lord who at the end of our worship of Goddess Katyayani granted the boon we prayed to attain", "drsa asulka-dasika" mean without giving any money to purchase us, simply by casting Your love-filled galnce on us, You turned us into Your slavea", and "nighnato neha kim vadhah" mean "did You not murder us women?" In this way this verse shows that simply with His glance Lord Krsna enchanted the gopis. He enchanted them in two ways: 1. He enchanted them with His form and qualities (svarupa), and 2. He enchanted them with His activities others have no power to perform (duskara-kriya). In this verse these two ways of enchantement are both described. Lord Krsna's enchanting the gopis is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.31.8):

madhuraya gira valgu-vakyaya budha-manojnaya puskareksana vidhi-karir ima vira muhyatir adhara-sidhunapyayayasva nah

"O lotus-eyed one, Your sweet voice and charming words, which attract the minds of the intelligent, are bewildering us more and more. Our dear hero, please revive Your maidservants with the nectar of Your lips."

In this verse the word "madhuraya" means with the sweetness of Your form", "valgu-vakyaya" means "with the sweetness of Your words", and budha-manojnaya" means "which charm the hearts of the intelligent". In this way Lord Krsna's sweetness is manifest. Lord Krsna's enchanting the gopis is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.31.10):

prahasitam priya-prema-viksanam viharanam ca te dhyana-mangalam rahasi samvido ya hrdi sprsah kuhaka no manah ksobhayanti hi

"Your smiles, Your sweet, loving glances, the intimate pastimes and confidential talks we enjoyed with You--all these are auspicious to meditate upon, and they touch our hearts.

But at the same time, O deceiver, they very much agitate our minds."

In this verse the word "samvidah" means joking words".

Lord Krsna's enchanting the gopis is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.31.12):

dina-pariksaye nila-kuntalair vanaruhananam bibhrad avrtam ghana-rajasvalam darsayan muhur manasi nah smaram vira yacchasi

"At the end of the day You repeatedly show us Your lotus face, covered with dark blue locks of hair and thickly powdered with dust. Thus, O hero, You arouse lusty desires in our minds."

In this verse the word "muhuh" means "again and again". Lord Krsna's enchanting the gopis is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.31.16-17):

pati-sutanvaya-bhratr-bandhavan ativilanghya te 'nty acyutagatah gati-vidas tavodgita-mohitah kitava yositah kas tyajen nisi

"Dear Acyuta, You know very well why we have come here. Who but a cheater like You would abandon young women who come to see Him in the middle of the night, enchanted by the loud song of His flute? Just to see You, we have completely rejected our husbands, children, ancestors, brothers and other relatives.

rahasi samvidam hrc-chayodayam prahasitananam prema-viksanam brhad-urah sriyo viksya dhama te muhur ati-sprha muhyate manah

"Our minds are repeatedly bewildered as we think of the intimate conversations we had with You in secret, feel the rise of lust in our hearts and remember Your smiling lace, Your loving glances and Your broad chest, the resting place of the goddess of fortune. Thus we experience the most severe hankering for You."

In these verses the words "gati-vidas tavodgita- mohitah" mean "You played on Your flute, a flute that well knows how to bring us under its spell". These verses were spoken by the gopis to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who at that moment was not visible before them.

Anuccheda 295

Lord Krsna's enchanting the gopis in the stage of purva- raga (beginning of love) is described in these words of Skanda Purana, Reva-khanda, Tulasi-stava:

gavam hitaya tulasi gopinam rati-hetave vrndavane tvam vapita sevita visnuna svayam

"To bring auspiciousness to the cows, as well as to make the gopis fall in love with Him, Lord Visnu personally plants You in Vrndavana and serves you, O Goddess Tulasi."

Lord Krsna's enhcanting the gopis while directly enjoying pastimes them is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.29.42):

iti viklavitam tasam. . .

"Smiling upon hearing these despondent words from the gopis, Lord Krsna, the supreme master of all masters of mystic yoga, mercifully enjoyed with them, although He is self-satisfied."

In this verse the word "prahasya" (smiling) describes how Lord Krsna enchanted the gopis.

Lord Krsna enchanting the gopis as He enjoyed pastimes with them is again described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.43, 44, and 46):

tabhih sametabhir udara-cestitah. . . . .udara-hasa-dvija-kunda-didhatih

"Among the assembled gopis, the infallible Lord Krsna appeared just like the moon surrounded by stars. He whose activities are so magnanimous made their faces blossom with His affectionate glances, and His broad smiles revealed the effulgence of His jasmine-bud-like teeth.

upagiyamanah. . .udgayan

"As the gopis sang His praises, that leader of hundreds of women sang loudly in reply. He moved among them, wearing His Varjayanti garland, beautifying the Vrndavana forest.

bahu-prasara. . .

"Krsna threw His arms around the gopis and embraced them. He aroused Cupid in the beautiful young ladies of Vraja by touching their hands, hair, thighs, belts, and breasts, by playfully scratching them with His fingernails, and also by joking with them, glancing at them, and laughing with them. In this way the Lord enjoyed His pastimes."

In this way is described Lord Krsna's quality of making the gopis fall in love with Him.

Now will be considered Lord Krsna's quality of controlled by His devotees' love (prema-vasyatva). This quality is of two kinds: 1. being controlled by the love of devotees other than His beloveds (premantarena), and 2. being controlled by the love of His beloveds (preyasi-premna). The first of these (being controlled by the love of devotees other than His beloveds) is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.20):

narma-dah pranayinam vijahara

"O sinless Yasoda, your darling child, the son of Maharaja Nanda, has festively enhanced His attire with a jasmine garland, and He is now playing along the Yamuna in the company of the cows and cowherd boys, amusing His dear companions. The gentle breeze honors Him with its soothing fragrance of sandalwood, while the various Upadevas, standing on all sides like panegyrists, offer their music, singing and gifts of tribute."

Now the second of these (being controlled by the love of His beloveds) will be considered. This quality when manifested in the stage of purva-raga is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.53.2):

tathaham api tac-citto nidram ca na labhe nisi

"Just as Rukmini's mind is fixed on Me, My mind is fixed on her. I can't even sleep at night."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to Rukmini's messenger.

Anucchedas 296 and 297

Lord Krsna's being controlled by the love of His beloveds in the stage of purva-raga is also seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.29.1):

bhagavan api ta ratrih saradotphulla-mallikah viksya rantum manas cakre yoga-mayam upasritah

"sri Krsna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, full in all opulences, yet upon seeing those autumn nights scented with blossoming jasmine flowers, He turned His mind toward loving affairs. To fulfill His purposes He employed His internal potency."

In this verse the word "yoga-mayam upasritah" means "taking shelter of yoga-maya, which fulfills the numberless desires of numberless gopis."

Lord Krsna's being controlled by the love of His beloveds as He directly enjoys pastimes with them is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.42):

iti viklavitam tasam srutva yogesvaresvarah prahasya sa-dayam gopir atmaramo py ariramat

"Smiling upon hearing these despondent words from the gopis, Lord Krsna, the supreme master of all masters of mystic yoga, mercifully enjoyed with them, although He is self-satisfied."

In this verse the word "viklavitam" means the gs' appeals of love", "sadayam" means merciful because He was controlled by their love", atmaramo 'pi" means "even though He was self- satisfied, He could see the great virtue of their love for Him". The word "atmarama" (self-satisfied is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.7.10):

atmaramas ca munayah. . . . . .ittham-bhuta-guno harih

"All different varieties of atmaramas [those who take pleasure in atma, or spirit self], especially those established on the path of seff-realization, though freed from all kinds of material bondage, desire to render unalloyed devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead. This means that the Lord possesses transcendental qualities and therefore can attract everyone, including liberated souls."

The two verses srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.1 and 10.29.42 were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 298 and 299

Lord Krsna's being controlled by the love of His beloveds as He directly enjoys pastimes with them is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.23):

reme svayam sva-ratir atra gajendra-lilah

"My dear King, in the water Krsna found Himself being splashed on all sides by the laughing gopis, who looked at Him with love. As the demigods worshiped Him by showering flowers from their airplanes, the self-satisfied Lord took pleasure in playing like the king of the elephants."

In this verse the word "sva-ratih" means Lord Krsna who loved (rati) the gopis (sva)". Lord Krsna's being controlled by the love of His beloveds as He directly enjoys pastimes with them is also seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.33.20):

tasam rati-viharena

"Seeing that the gopis were fatigued from conjugal enjoyment, my dear King, merciful Krsna lovingly wiped their faces with His comforting hand."

This pastime is also seen in these words of Visnu Purana (5.13.54):

gopi-kapola-samslesa. . .

"Lord Krsna wiped the gopis' cheeks."

Lord Krsna's pastimes with the gopis are also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.16):

evam parisvanga-karabhimarsa- snigdheksanoddama-vilasa-hasaih reme rameso vraja-sundaribhir yatharbhakah sva-pratibimba-vibhramah

"In this way Lord Krsna, the original Lord Narayana, master of the goddess of fortune, took pleasure in the company of the young women of Vraja by embracing them, caressing them and glancing lovingly at them as He smiled His broad, playful smiles. It was just as if a child were playing with his own reflection."

Here the word "ramesa" means "the controller of Goddess Laksmi". This verse says: "by embracing them, caressing them and glancing lovingly at them, Lord Krsna enjoyed pastimes with the gopis". In this way Lord Krsna was controlled by the gopis' love. Here is given the example of a childplaying with his reflection. As a child plays with his reflection, so Lord Krsna enjoyed pastimes beginnign with singing and dancing with the gopis. In this activities it is seen that Lord Krsna and the gopis were deeply attached to each other.

Then it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.25):

evam sasankamsu-virajita nisah sa satya-kamo 'nuratabala-ganah siseva atmany avaruddha-sauratah sarvah sarat-kavya-katha-rasasrayah

"Although the gopis were firmly attached to Lord Krsna, whose desires are always fulfilled, the Lord was not internally affected by any mundane sex desire. Still, to perform His pastimes the Lord took advantage of all those moonlit autumn nights, which inspire poetic descriptions of transcendental affairs."

In this verse the word "evam" means "as was previously described", "anuratabala-ganah" means the gopis who loved Krsna eternally", "sah" means "sri Krsnacandra", "atmany avaruddha-sauratah" means "whose thoughts were filled with flirting and various amorous pastimes", "satya-kamah" means whose love is never wrong", "sarat-kavya-katha- rasasrayah" means "nectar poems in relation to autumn", "sarvah" means "them all", and "siseve" means "He utilized". The wird "sarat" here may also mean "for an entire year". The word sasankamsu-virajita" (moonlit nights) further describes this pastime. The Lord's amorous pastimes are also seen in the following owrds of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.58):

evam saurata-samlapaih. . .

"And so the self-satisfied Supreme Lord of the universe enjoyedwith the goddess of fortune, engaging her in lovers' talks and thus imitating the ways of human society."

This verse describes Lord Krsna's pastimes of joking with Rukmini. The word "saurata" here has the same meaning it had in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.25. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.33.25 was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

In the matter of His relationship with the gopis Lord Krsna Himself declares in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.22):

na paraye 'ham. . .

"I am not able to repay My debt for your spotless service, even within a lifetime of Brahma. Your connection with Me is beyond reproach. You have worshiped Me, cutting off all domestic ties, which are difficult to break. Therefore please let your own glorious deeds be your compensation."

Lord Krsna's separation from the gopis when He went to live in a faraway place is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.46.1-4):

vrsninam pravaro mantri krsnasya dayitah sakha sisyo brhaspateh saksad uddhavo buddhi-sattamah

"The supremely intelligent Uddhava was the best counselor of the Vrsni dynasty, a beloved friend of Lord sri Krsna, and a direct disciple of Brhaspati.

tam aha bhagavan prestham bhaktam ekantinam kvacit grhitva panina panim prapannarti-haro harih

"The Supreme Lord Hari, who relieves the distress of all who surrender to Him, once took the hand of His fully devoted, dearmost friend Uddhava and addressed him as follows.

gacchoddhava vrajam saumya pitror nau pritim avaha gopinam mad-viyogadhim mat-sandesair vimocaya

"Dear gentle Uddhava, go to Vraja and give pleasure to Our parents. And also relieve the gopis, suffering in separation from Me, by giving them My message.

ta man-manaska mat-prana mad-arthe tyakta-daihikah

"The minds of those gopis are always absorbed in Me, and their very lives are ever devoted to Me. For My sake they have abandoned everything related to their bodies."

This pastime is also described in the Skanda Purana, Prahlada-samhita, Dvaraka-mahatmya, where sriman Uddhava tells the gopis:

bhagavan api dasarhah kandarpa-sara-piditah na bhunkte na svapiti ca cintayan vo hy ahar-nisam

"Wounded by Kamadeva's arrow, Lord Krsna thinks of you gopis day and night. He neither eats nor sleeps."

Most of the princesses married by Lord Krsna had previously been gopis in Vraja. As time passed in separation from Krsna, they became those princesses to save themselves from committing suicide in despair. This is described in the following words of Padma Purana:

kaisora gopa-kanyas ta yauvane raja-kanyakah

"The girls who in the beginning of their youth had been gopis at the later stage of their youth became princesses."

That the Lord's beloveds are inclined to commit suicide rather than live without Lord Krsna is seen in these words spoken by Queen Rukmini in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.52.43):

yarhy ambujaksa na labheya bhavat-prasadam jahyam asun vrata-krsan sata-janmabhih syat

"O lotus-eyed one, if I cannot obtain Your mercy, I shall simply give up my vital force, which will have become weak from severe penances I will perform. Then, after hundreds of lifetimes of endeavor, I may obtain Your mercy."

"O pious mother Yasoda, your son, who is expert in all the arts of herding cows, has invented many new styles of flute- playing. When He takes His flute to His bimba-red lips and sends forth the tones of the harmonic scale in variegated melodies, Brahma, Siva, Indra and other chief demigods become confused upon hearing the sound. The Lord's beloveds are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.3):

tad vraja-striya asrutya. . .sva-sakhibhyo 'nvavarnayan

"When the young ladies in the cowherd village of Vraja heard the song of Krsna's flute, which arouses the influence of Cupid, some of them privately began describing Krsna's qualities to their intimate friends."

The Lord's personal associates (parikara) are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.1):

tam viksya krsnanucaram vraja-striyah. . .

"The young women of Vraja becamne astonished upon seeing Lord Krsna's servant, who had long arms, whose eyes resembled a newly grown lotus, who wore a yellow garment and a lotus garland, and whose lotuslike face glowed with brightly polished earrings. `Who is this handsome man?', the gopis asked. `Where has he come from, and whom does he serve? He's wearing Krsna's clothes and ornaments!' Saying this, the gs eagerly crowded around Uddhava, whose shelter was the lotus feet of Lord Uttamahsloka, sri Krsna."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 308 and 309

Lord Krsna's ornaments (mandana) are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.17):

purnah pulindya urugaya-padabja-raga-sri-kunkumena dayita. . .

"The aborigine women of the Vrndavana area become disturbed by lust when they see the grass marked with reddish kunkuma powder. Endowed with the color of Krsna's lotus feet, this powder originally decorated the breasts of His beloveds, and when the aborigine women smear it on their faces and breasts, they give up all their anxiety."

Lord Krsna's flute is described in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.21.9):

gopyah kim acarad ayam kusalam sma venuh. . .

"My dear gopis, what auspicious activities must the flute have performed to enjoy the nectar of Krsna's lips independently and leave only a taste for us gopis, for whom that nectar is actually meant! The forefathers of the flute, the bamboo trees, shed tears of pleasure. His mother, the river on whose bank the bamboo was born, feels jubilation, and therefore her blooming lotus flowers are standing like hair on her body."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by the gopis.

Anucchedas 310-312

The auspicious marks on Lord Krsna's feet are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.25):

padani vyaktam etani nanda-sunor mahatmanah

"The marks of a flag, lotus, thunderbolt, elephant goad, barleycorn and so forth on these footprints clearly distinguish them as belonging to that great soul, the son of Nanda Maharaja."

The dust from Lord Krsna's feet is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.29):

dhanya aho ami alyo govindanghry-abja-renavah yan brahmesau rama devi dadhur murdhny agha-nuttaye

"O girls! The dust of Govinda's lotus feet is so sacred that even Brahma, siva and the goddess Rama take that dust upon their heads to dispel sinful reactions."

This kind of ecstatic love (prema) for Lord Krsna is the most exalted (utkarsa) love. Love mixed with awareness of Lord Krsna's power and opulence (aisvarya-jnana) is not the most exalted. This most exalted love enables one to directly see the most exalted object (visaya) of love. Maharaja Bharata, who had fallen in love with a deer, praised the earth's good fortune for having been touched by the deer's hhofs. He said in srimad- Bhagavatam (3.8.23):

kim va are acaritam tapas tapasvinyanaya yad iyam avanih. . .

"O unfortunate Bharata, your austerities and penances are very insignificant compared to the penance and austerity undergone by this earth planet. Due to the earth's severe penances, the footprints of this deer, which are small, beautiful, most auspicious, and soft are impressed on the surface of this most fortunate planet."

In a similar way the earth is also praised in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.10):

kim te krtam ksiti tapo bata kesavanghri- sparsotsavotpulakitanga-ruhair vibhasi apy anghri-sambhava urukrama-vikramad va aho varaha-vapusah parirambhanena

"O mother earth, what austerity did you perform to attain the touch of Lord Kesava's lotus feet, which has brought you such great joy that your bodily hairs are standing on end? You appear very beautiful in this condition. Was it during the Lord's current appearance that you acquired this ecstatic symptom, or was it perhaps much earlier, when He stepped upon you in His form of the dwarf Vamanadeva, or even earlier, when He embraced you in His form of the boar Varahadeva?"

In the first half of this verse the glory of Lord Krsna's sweetness is described. In the second half of this verse the lesser nature of the sweetness present in the Lord's other forms is described. In this verse the word "api" means whether?" This verse asks: "Did you attain this ecstatic joy from the touch of the Lord's feet when the Lord stepped upon you in His form of the dwarf Varahadeva?" Here the word "aho" is used to introduce a different idea, the idea expressed in these words: "Did you attain this ecstatic joy from the touch of the Lord's feet when He embraced you in His form of the boar Vamanadeva?" The implied answer to these two rhetorical questions is: "Certainly not. Certainly not." An obscure definition of the word "api" is "butter". Interpreted in this way, the passage becomes: "filled with bliss by the touch of the Lord's feet, the earth became soft like butter". This verse was spoken by the gopis.

The marks left by the Lord's nails is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.13):

prcchatema lata bahun. . .

"Let us ask these creepers about Krsna. Even though they are embracing the arms of their husband, this tree, they certainly must have been touched by Krsna's fingernails, since out of joy they are manifesting eruptions on their skin."

Also included here are Vrndavana forest, the Yamuna, and other places of Lord Krsna's pastimes. Now the different times of Lord Krsna's rasa-dance festival and other pastimes will be considered. The tiem of the rasa-dance pastime is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.43):

tah kim nisah smarati yasu. . .

"Does He recall those nights in the Vrndavana forest, lovely with lotus, jasmine, and the bright moon? As we glorified His charming pastimes, He enjoyed with us, His beloved girlfriends, in the circle of the rasa dance, which resounded with the music of ankle bells."

The meaning of this verse is clear this verse was spoken by the gopis.

Thus the Lord's transcendental qualities and other features are indluded among the uddipanas. Because the Lord's beloveds are diligently engaged in His service, the qualities of the Lord's beloveds are also included among the uddipanas. Thus the Lord's qualities and His belovweds' qualities are both includedamong the uddipanas. Now the anubhavas will be considered. Examples of the anubhavas for Kubja and other like beloveds of the Lord are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.48.5):

"Trivakra (Kubja) prepared herself by bathing, anointing her body, and dressing in fine garments, by putting on jewelry, garlands, and perfume, and also by chewing betelnut, drinking fragrant liquor, and so on. She then approached Lord Madhava with shy, playful smiles and coquettish glances."

Examples of the anubhavas for Lord Krsna's queens are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.59.44-45):

ittham rama-patim avapya. . .

"Thus those women obtained as their husband the husband of the goddess of fortune, although even great demigods like Brahma do not know how to approach Him. With ever-increasing pleasure they experienced loving attraction for Him, exchanged smiling glances with Him and reciprocated with Him in ever-fresh intimacy, replete with joking and feminine shyness. "Although the Supreme Lord's queens each had hundreds of maidservants, they chose to personally serve the Lord by approaching Him humbly, offering Him a seat, worshipping Him with excellent paraphernalia, bathing and massaging His feet, givin Him pan to chew, fanning Him, anointing Him with fragrant sandalwood paste, adorning Him with flower garlands, dressing His hair, arranging His bed, bathing Him, and presenting Him with various gifts."

Examples of anubhavas for the goddesslike gopis of Vraja are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.61):

asam aho. . .ya dustyajam

"The gopis of Vrndavana have given up the association of their husbands, sons, and other family members, who are very difficult to give up, and they have forsaken the path of chastity to take shelter of the lotus feet of Mukunda, Krsna, which one should search for by Vedic knowledge. Oh, let me be fortunate enough to be one of the bushes, creepers, or herbs in Vrndavana, because the gopis trample them and bless them with the dust of their feet."

Examples of anubhavas for the gopis are also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.15.42-43):

tam gorajas-churita-kuntala-baddha-barha- vanya-prasuna-rucireksana-caru-hasam venum kvanantam anugair upagita-kirtim gopyo didrksita-drso 'bhyagaman sametah

"Lord Krsna's hair, powdered with the dust raised by the cows, was decorated with a peacock feather and forest flowers. The Lord glanced charmingly and smiled beautifully, playing upon His flute while His companions chanted His glories. The gopis, all together, came forward to meet Him, their eyes very eager to see Him.

pitva mukunda-mukha-saragham aksi-bhrngais tapam jahur viraha jam vraja-yosito 'hni tat sat-krtim samadhigamya vivesa gostham savrida-hasa-vinayam yad apanga-moksam

"With their beelike eyes, the women of Vrndavana drank the honey of the beautiful face of Lord Mukunda, and thus they gave up the distress they had felt during the day because of separation from Him. The young Vrndavana ladies cast sidelong glances at the Lord - glances filled with bashfulness, laughter and submission - and Sri Krsna, completely accepting these glances as a proper offering of respect, entered the cowherd village."

The meaning of these verses is clear. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 316 and 317

The anubhavas of the Lord's beloveds are of four kinds: 1. udbhasvara (bodily luster), 2. sattvika (nature), 3. alankara (ornaments), and 4. vacika (speech). The udbhasvara-anubhavas are described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, Anubhava-prakarana, Text 63:

nivy-uttariya-dhammilla- sramsanam gatra-motanam jrmbha ghranasya phullatvam nisvasadyas ca te matah

"Included amongst the udbhasvaras are: 1. loosening of the tight belt, 2. loosening of the bodice, 3. loosening of the braids, 4. crushing of the limbs, 5. yawning, 6. expansion of the notrils, and 7. sighing."

The udbhasvara-anubhavas are also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.17):

tad-anga-sanga-pramudakulendriyah kesan dukulam kuca-pattikam va nanjah prativyodhum alam vraja-striyo visrasta-malabharanah kurudvaha

"Their senses overwhelmed by the joy of having His physical association, the gopis could not prevent their hair, their dresses and the cloths covering their breasts from becoming disheveled. Their garlands and ornaments scattered, O hero of the Kuru dynasty."

The sattvika-anubhavas are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.11):

tatraikamsa-gatam bahum krsnasyotpala-saurabham candanaliptam aghraya hrsta-roma cucumba ha

"Upon the shoulder of one gopi Krsna placed His arm, whose natural blue-lotus fragrance was mixed with that of the sandalwood pulp anointing it. As the gopi relished that fragrance, her bodily hair stood on end in jubilation, and she kissed His arm."

The meaning of these verses is clear. The two srimad- Bhagavatam verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Hava is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, Anubhava-prakarana, Text 9:

griva-recaka-samyukto bhru-netradi-vikasa-krt bhavad isat-prakaso yah sa hava iti kathyate

"When there is a slight manifestation of ecstatic symptoms, when the neck becomes titled, and the eyebrows, eyes, and other bodily features blossom with happiness, that stage is called hava."

Hava is seen in the following words spoken by Queen Laksmana describing her svayamvara (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.83.29):

unniya vaktram uru-kuntala-kundala-tvid- ganda-sthalam sisira-hasa-kataksa-moksaih rajno niriksya paritah sanakair murarer amse 'nurakta-hrdaya nidadhe sva-malam

"I lifted my face, which was encircled by abundant locks and effulgent from the glow of my earrings reflected from my cheeks. Smiling cooly, I glanced about. Then, looking around at all the kings, I slowly placed the necklace on the shoulder of Murari, who had captured my heart."

Had this passage been in prose, the order of the words would have been: "vaktram unniya rajnah parito niriksya sisira-hasa-kataksa-moksair murarer amse malam sanakair nidadhe." Here the word "sanakaih" (slowly) shows that her neck was, for a moment, titled out of shyness. This is an example of tilting the neck (griva-recaka) a manifestation of hava. This verse was spoken by Queen Laksmana.

Anucchedas 320 and 321

Hela is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, Anubhava-prakarana, Text 11:

hava eva bhaved dhela vyaktah srngara-sucakah

"After hava is the stage hela, which is the harbinger of amorous pastimes."

sobha is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, Anubhava-prakarana, Text 13:

sa sobha rupa-bhogadyair yat syad anga-vibhusanam

"In the state called sobha the body is decorated with various symptoms of conjugal enjoyment."

sobha is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.20):

tasam rati-viharena. . .

"Seeing that the gopis were fatigued from conjugal enjoyment, my dear King, merciful Krsna lovingly wiped their faces with His comforting hand."

sobha is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.21-22):

gopyah sphurat-purata-kundala. . .

"The gopis honored their hero with smiling glances sweetened by the beauty of their cheeks and the effulgence of their curly locks and glittering golden earrings. Overjoyed from the touch of His fingernails, they chanted the glories of His all-auspicious transcendental pastimes. "Lord Krsna's garland had been crushed during His conjugal dalliance with the gopis and colored vermillion by the kunkuma powder on their breasts. To dispel the fatigue of the gopis, Krsna enetred the water of the Yamuna, followed siftly by bees who were singing like the best of the Gandharvas. He appeared like a lordly elephant entering the water to relax in the company of his consorts. Indeed, the Lord had transgressed all worldly and Vedic morality just as a powerful elephant might break the dikes in a paddy field."

Madhurya is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, Anubhava-prakarana, Text 17:

madhuryam nama cestanam sarvavasthasu caruta

"When all activities are naturally charming and graceful, that is called madhurya."

Madhurya is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.10):

kacid rasa-parisranta parsva-sthasya gada-bhrtah jagraha bahuna skandham slathad-valaya-mallika

"When one gopi grew tired from the rasa dance, She turned to Krsna, standing at Her side holding a baton, and grasped His shoulder with Her arm. The dancing had loosened Her bracelets and the flowers in Her hair."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Dhairya is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, Anubhava-prakarana, Text 23:

"When the mind is very steady, that state is called dhairya."

Dhairya is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.17):

mrgayur iva kapindram. . .dustyajas tat-katharthah

"Like a hunter He cruelly shot the king of the monkeys with arrows. Because He was conquered by a woman, He disfigured another woman who came to Him with lusty desires. And even after consuming the gifts of Bali Maharaja, He bound him up with ropes as if he were a crow. So let us give up all friendship with this dark-compexioned boy, even if we can't give up talking about Him."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by sri Radha Herself.

Anucchedas 324 and 325

Kanti and Dipti are described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, Anubhava-prakarana, Texts 14 and 15:

sobhaiva kantir akhyata manmathapyayanojjvala

"When beauty increases amorous desire, this stage is called kanti."

kantir eva vayo-bhoga- desa-kala-gunadibhih uddipitati-vistaram prapta ced diptir ucyate

"If beauty is greatly increased by youthfulness, amorous enjoyment, place, time, various qualities, or other things, that condition of increased beauty is called dipti."

Lila is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, Anubhava-prakarana, Text 24:

priyanukaranam lila ramyair vesa-kriyadibhih

"Lila is the imitation of the charming apperance, activities, or other things of the beloved."

Lila is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.1- 2):

antarhite bhagavati. . .

"When Lord Krsna disappeared so suddenly, the gopis felt great sorrow at losing sight of Him, like a group of female elephants who have lost their mate."

gatyanuraga-smita. . .

"As the cowherd women remembered Lord Krsna, their hearts were overwhelmed by His movements and loving smiles, His playful glances and enchanting talks, and by the many other pastimes He would enjoy with them. Thus absorbed in thoughts of Krsna, the Lord of Rama, the gopis began acting out His various transcendental pastimes."

The pastimes the gopis had enjoyed with Krsna are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.46):

bahu-prasara. . .

"Krsna threw His arms around the gopis and embraced them. He aroused Cupid in the beautiful young ladies of Vraja by touching their hands, hair, thighs, belts, and breasts, by playfully scratching them with His fingernails, and also by joking with them, glancing at them, and laughing with them. In this way the Lord enjoyed His pastimes."

As the gopis imitated Lord Krsna's pastimes in their ecstasy of lila-anubhava, they acted as if they were not different from Lord Krsna. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.3):

gati-smita-preksana-bhasanadisu. . .

"Because the beloved gopis were absorbed in thoughts of their beloved Krsna, their bodies imitated His way of moving and smiling, His way of beholding them, His speech and His other distinctive features. Deeply immersed in thinking of Him and maddened by remembering His pastimes, they declared to one another, `I am Krsna!' "

As they imitated Lord Krsna's pastimes, the gopis' original nature became concealed. This is seen in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.20):

yatanty unnidadhe 'mbaram

" `Don't be afraid of the wind and rain,' said one gopi. `I will save you.' And with that she lifted her shawl above her head."

Overcome with ecstatic love, the gopis passed the time in this way, imitating Lord Krsna's pastimes. However, they did not imitate all of Lord Krsna's pastimes. They imitated His childhood pastimes and some other pastimes, but they did not imitate His pastimes in srngara-rasa. The gs imitated Lord Krsna's pastimes with Putana and other enemies and they also imitated Lord Krsna's pastimes with His mother and His other loving associates. To increase their love for Lord Krsna, they passed the time in separation from Him by artifically acting out His pastimes. They did not believe that they were truly Lord Krsna. Here some philosophers say: "When they were remembering the pastime of killing Putana, some gopis played the role of Putana. Even though it was only play-acting, the other gopis became fearful for child Krsna's welfare. Even in the ordinary affairs of this world an expert actor playing the role of a ferocious tiger may bring a moment's fear to his audience. In this way, by feeling fear for Lord Krsna's safety in the course of this play-acting, the gopis felt their love for Lord Krsna increase. Also, the gopi playing the role of Putana did not feel hatred for Lord Krsna. In these pastimes of play-acting the gopis aways felt love for Lord Krsna. In these pastimes the gopis also assumed the role of Mother Yasoda. An example of this is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.23):

baddhanyaya sraja kacit. . .

"One gopi tied up her slender companion with a flower garland and said, `Now I will bind this boy who has broken the butter pots and stolen the butter.' The second gopi then covered her face and beautiful eyes, pretending to be afraid."

In this way they meditated on Lord Krsna's Damodara pastimes, pastimes described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (1.8.31):

vaktram niniya bhaya-bhavanaya sthitasya. . .

"My dear Krsna, Yasoda took up a rope to bind You when You committed an offense, and Your perturbed eyes overflooded with tears, which washed the mascara from Your eyes. And You were afraid, though fear personified is afraid of You. This sight is bewildering to me."

In these words child Krsna's fear of Mother Yasoda is described. The gopis imitated this pastime and Lord Krsna's other childhood pastimes. One gopi, playing the part of Mother Yasoda, tied up another gopi, who was playing the part of child Krsna. As was said before, in the course of these pastimes of play-acting the gopis always felt love for Lord Krsna. In these pastimes the gopis always took dhelter of their natural love for Lord Krsna. Even though one gopi played the role of Mother Yasoda and another gopi played the role of child Krsna, their original love for Lord Krsna in srngara-rasa remained unchanged. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.30.3 quoted in this anuccheda was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

"Seeing how Krsna was joking with them, the gopis became fully immersed in love for Him, and as they glanced at each other they began to laugh and joke among themselves, even in their embarrassment. But still they did not come out of the water.

evam bruvati govinde. . .

"As Sri Govinda spoke to the gopis in this way, His joking words completely captivated their minds. Submerged up to their necks in the cold water, they began to shiver. Thus they addressed Him as follows.

manayam bhoh krthah. . .

"Dear Krsna, don't be unfair! We know that You are the respectable son of Nanda and that You are honored by everyone in Vraja. You are also very dear to us. Please give us back our clothes. We are shivering in the cold water.

syamasundara te dasyah. . .

"O syamasundara, we are Your maidservants and must do whatever You say. But give us back our clothing. We know what the religious principles are, and if You don't give us our clothes we will have to tell the king. Please!"

The meaning of these verses is clear. These srimad- Bhagavatam verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 332

Samlapa is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, Anubhava-prakarana, Text 77:

ukti-pratyukti-mad vakyam samlapa iti kirtyate

"Conversation is called samlapa."

Samlapa is seen in the conversation recounted in srimad- Bhagavatam 10.29.18-41.

In this conversation Lord Krsna has two purposes: 1. to request the association of the contrary gopis charmed by His flute music and other pastimes and qualities, and 2. as a joke, and also to test their love, to reject the company of the gopis, who had come to Him in the forest to attain His association. Here the words of the gopis also have two purposes: 1. To reject Lord Krsna's request that they return home, and 2. with words filled with yearning to beg His company. Because Lord Krsna and the gopis are equally expert in the art of graceful conversation, the rasa of thwir pastimes is nourshied by these talks between them. In the beginning of this conversation (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.18) Lord Krsna affirms that He and the gopis are equal. Then He tells them in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.

rajany esa. . .

"This night is quite frightening, and frightening creatures are lurking about. Return to Vraja, slender-waisted girls. This is not a proper place for women."

These words, however, have a second, a hidden meaning. By interpreting the words in a different way this verse comes to mean: "O girls, somehow you have met Me here. Please do not now return to Vraja, for this night is quite frightening. Therefore you girls should not leave this place. Instead, you should stay here with Me, your hero." By speaking the word su-madhyamah" (O slender-waisted girls) Lord Krsna hints that He would become very unhappy if the gopis left Him and returned to Vraja. Then Lord Krsna tells them: "As long as you stay with Me you need not fear your relatives. He says in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.20):

matarah. . .

"Not finding you at home, your mothers, fathers, sons, brothers and husbands are certainly searching for you. Don't cause anxiety for your family members."

The hidden meaning of this verse is: "Your mothers and other relatives did not see you tonight. Therefore they are now searching for you. However, they will not be able to come here to this place." Thn word "putrah" (sons) in this verse means either "the sons of your brothers-in-law" or "the sons of your co-wives". Then Lord Krsna tries to enliven the gopis by showing them the beauties of His personal forest-garden. He tells them in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.21-22):

drstam vanam. . .tad yata. . .

"Now you have seen this Vrndavana forest, full of flowers and resplendent with the light of the full moon. You have seen the beauty of the trees, with their leaves trembling in the gentle breeze coming from the Yamuna. So now go back to the cowherd village. Don't delay. O chaste ladies, serve your husbands and give milk to your crying babies and calves."

The hidden meaning of this verse is: "The forest is very fearful. Therefore please do not be eager to go to Vraja so soon." Or these words meay also be interpreted to mean: Please don't leave now." They may also be interpreted to mean: "Please don't faithfully serve your husbands." Here the word "satih" means "O best of girls". Vatsa ma krandanti" may mean "the calvees are not crying", "ma payayata" may mean "don't feed them milk", "ma duhyata" may mean "don't feed them with cow's milk". Here Lord Krsna hints: "If you truly love me, then please don't ignore My request." Then Lord Krsna places this logical argument before the gopis (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.23):

"On the other hand, perhaps you have come here out of your great love for Me, which has taken control of your hearts. This is of course quite commendable on your part, since all living entities possess natural affection for Me."

Here the word "mayi" is the same as mama". In this verse Lord Krsna argues: "If all living entirties naturally love Me, then beautiful girls may also love Me, thinking of Me as their beloved." Here someone may protest: But is not wrong for women to renounce the vow of faithfully serving their husbands?" To answer this proetst Lord Krsna tells the gopis (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.24):

bhartuh susrusanam. . .

"The highest religious duty for a woman is to sincerely serve her husband, behave well toward her husband's family and take good care of her children."

Here Lord Krsna declares: "The highest religious duty for a woman is to sincerely serve her husband." However, Lord Krsna implies here: "But you girls have never been married to your so-called husbands. Your marriage to them is only an imagination, a myth. Therefore you do no wrong to abandon thse mythical husbands. You may think these persons aree your husbands. Still, the words of the Smrti-sastra affrim that you may indeed abandon the vow of serving such mythical husbands." Then Lord Krsna tells the gopis (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.25):

duhsilo durbhago vrddhah. . .

"Women who desire a good desfination in the next life should never abandon a husband who has not fallen from his religious standards, even if he is obnoxious, unfortunate, old, unintelligent, sickly or poor."

Here Lord Krsna declares: "A woman should never abandon a husband is not fallen." Here the hidden meaning of fallen" is "envious". In this sense Lord Krsna considers the gopis' mythical husbands to be envious of Him, and therefore fallen. Thinking that the gopis might consider their husbands not fallen and therefore stay with them, with these tricky words changing the original meaning of the Smrti-sastra's words, Lord Krsna denies that the gopis have any responsibility to serve their so-called husbands. Then Lord Krsna tells the4 gopis (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.26):

asvargyam. . .

"For a woman from a respectable family, petty adulterous affairs are always condemned. They bar her from heaven, ruin her reputation and bring her difficulty and fear."

The hidden meaning of these words is: "A woman who stays near (upa) her husband (pati) (aupapatyam) will not enter heaven."

Thinking, "the gopis may worry that it will be very difficult to attain love for Me", Lord Krsna tells them: Please do not turn away from Me." He tells them (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.29.27):

sravanat. . .

"Transcendental love for Me arises by the devotional processes of hearing about Me, seeing My Deity form, meditating on Me and faithfully chanting My glories. The same result is not achieved by mere physical proximity. So please go back to your homes."

Here Lord Krsna says: "Transcendental love for Me arises by the devotional processes that begin with hearing about Me. The same result is not achieved by mere physical proximity. So please enter this forest grove, which is just like your own homes." That is the hidden meaning of Lord Krsna's request here. The other, original, meaning is well-known in this world. In this way, in these verses, with many joking words Lord Krsna refutes the idea that the gopis actions are in any way improper. The condition the gopis attained after hearing these words of Lord Krsna is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.28-30):

iti vipriyam akarnya. . .

"Hearing these unpleasant words spoken by Govinda, the gopis became morose. Their great hopes were frustrated and they felt insurmountable anxiety. "Their herads hanging down and their heavy, sorrowful breathing drying up their reddened lips, the gopis scratched the ground with their toes. Tears flowed from their eyes, carrying their kajjala and washing away the vermillion smeared on their breasts. Thus they stood, silently bearing the burden of their unhappiness. "Although Krsna was their beloved, and although they had abandoned all other objects of desire for His sake, He had been speaking to hem unfavorably. Nonetheless they remained unflinching in their attachment to Him. Stopping their crying, they wiped their eyes and began to speak, their voices stammering with agitation."

These verses show that thew gopis did not understand the second, hidden, meaning of Lord Krsna's previous words. Fillied with longing to associate withe Krsna, they considered His words unpleasant. Thus they became morose. Hearing Lord Krsna's statements that had two meanings, the gopis became anxious and bowed their faces and performed other like activities. There is no rasabhasa in any of these actions. They scratched the ground with their toes and they spoek to Lord Krsna. The gopis said to Lord Krsna (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.31):

"The beautiful gopis said: O all-powerful one, You should not speak in this cruel way. Do not reject us, who have renounced all material enjoyment to render devotional service to Your lotus feet. Reciprocate with us, O stubborn one, just as the primeval Lord, Sri Narayana, reciprocates with His devotees in their endeavors for liberation."

In this verse the word "ma" (don't) is used to refute Lord Krsna's request (that the gopis return to their homes). Here the gopis say: "We have completely renounced our husbands, children, and all else and become Your devotees. Please reciprocate with us." Speaking here the passage beginning with the word "pada-mulam" (the soles of Yoru feet), the gopis chant the glories of Lord Krsna. Here the wwords duravagraha ma tyajasman" may also be divided duravagraham atyajasman". Divided in the second way they mean: "You have completely rejected us". Then the gopis give an example of acting properly by accepting one's own devotees and rejecting others. They say: "Lord Narayana reciprocates with the sages who yearn after liberation and who have renounced pious deeds, sense pleasures, and all else for His sake. The Lord does not reciprocate with others." Then, quoting from scripture, the gopis speak the next verse to refute Lord Krsna's request. They say (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.32):

"Our dear Krsna, as an expert in religion You have advised us that the proper religious duty for women is to faithfuIly serve their husbands, children and other relatives. We agree that this principle is valid, but actually this service should be rendered to You. After all, O Lord, You are the dearmost friend of all embodied souls. You are their most intimate relative and indeed their very Self."

In this verse the word "sva-dharmah" may be interpreted as "sv-adharmah" which means "great impiety". If this word is interpreted in that way, then the word "dharma-vida" is employed as a joke, to mock the so- called knower of religion described here. If this interpretation is accepted, then these words are only a trick and the words faithfully serve their husbands" come to mean the opposite of what they seem. Interpreted in this way, these words reject the false religious principles described here. Here the word upadesa-pade" means "teacher" and "ise tvayy evastu" means "You are the supremely independent Lord. These words thus mean: "O Lord, you reject these false principles of religion". Someone may ask: "O Lord, what is Your nature?" Here the gopis answer with the word presthah" (dearest beloved). The gopis say: "You are the friend of all living entities. You are the dearest beloved of all living entities." This means: "O Lord, by associating with You, we will all attain great auspiciousness." Then, refuting Lord Krsna's statement in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.23, the gopis say (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.33):

"Expert transcendentalists always direct their affection toward You because they recognize You as their true Self and eternal beloved. What use do we have for these husbands, children and relatives of ours, who simply give us trouble? Therefore, O supreme controller, grant us Your mercy. O lotus-eyed one, please do not cut down our long-cherished hope to have Your association."

This verse also has a second, a hidden meaning. The hidden meaning, attained by interpeting the syntatical relationships of the words in the sentence in a different way, is: "O lotus-eyed Lord, please cut intop pieces our desire, the desire that says, `We will become happy by enjoying the pleasures of our meaterial bodies, material bodies that are alwasy so dear to us, pleasures we enjoy with our husbands and children. Why should we be attracted to Krsna as our beloved? We are not attracted to Him.' " Here the word "varadesvara (givcer of boons) is in the vocatuve case. It is used here sarcastically. Here the gopis say: "Please give this boon to us. Give us the boon that the indifference we feel in our hearts toward You, the indifference that says, `Let us not always yearn to attain You, O Krsna.', will be cut into pieces." Here the word aravidna-netra" (O lotus-eyed one) implies: "It is not right that a person with such beautiful lotus eyes will be so crooked and deceitful to us". The word "sma" here changes the present tense of the verb into the imperfect tense. The word "asam" is the object of the sentence. In the next verse the gopis criticize Lord Krsna's description of the way love for Him is attained, a description He spoke in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.27. The gopis say (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.34):

"Until today our minds were absorbed in household affairs, but You easily stole both our minds and our hands away from our housework. Now our feet won't move one step from Your lotus feet. How can we go back to Vraja? What would we do there?"

Here the gopis say: "As long as You had not stolen them away, our minds and hearts were very happy. They were happy because they stayed at home (grhesu). The symptom of their happiness was that our hands were engaged in household duties." Thinking of Krsna's addressing them as "su-madhyamah" (O slender-waisted girls) in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.28.19, the gopis say in this verse: "Now our feet won't move one step from Your lotus feet. How can we go back to Vraja?" The meaning here is: "We will not go back to Vraja. We will stay here." Then the gopis say: "What would we do there?" In reply to Lord Krsnas words "pratiyata grhan" (Please go back to your homes) in srimad-Bhagavatam srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.27, the gopis speka the next verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.35):

"Dear Krsna, please pour the nectar of Your lips upon the fire within our hearts--a fire You ignited with Your smiling glances and the sweet song of Your flute. If You do not, we will consign our bodies to the fire of separation from You, O friend, and thus like yogis attain to the abode of Your lotus feet by meditation."

In this verse the gopis say: "beloved, please pour the nectar of Your lips upon the fire within our hearts--a fire You ignited with Your smiling glances and the sweet song of Your flute." Then the gopis jokingly say: "If You will not give us that nectar, then we will only stand here and lick our own lips with desire to taste that nectar." Here the gopis hint that it is Lord Krsna's duty to protect them. That the Lord protects His devotees is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.4.10):

dhatte padam tvam avita yadi vighna-murdhni

"O Lord, because You are the direct protector of Your devotee, he is able to step over the head of whatever obstacle the demigods place before him."

Then the gopis say (in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.35): If You do not give us the nectar of Your lips, we will consign our bodies to the fire of separation from You." The gopis address Krsna as "sakhe" (O friend), in the vocative case, because in the past they had exchanged playful and affectionate glances with Him. Here Lord Krsna may ask: When We were children we played and touched. Why have you gopis now become like strangers?" To answer this question the gopis speak the next verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.36):

yarhi. . .

"O lotus-eyed one, the goddess of fortune considers it a festive occasion whenever she touches the soles of Your lotus feet. You are very dear to the residents of the forest, and therefore we will also touch those lotus feet. From that time on we will be unable even to stand in the presence of any other man, for we will have been fully satisfied by You."

This verse may also be interpreted to mean: "O lotus-eyed one, the birds, beasts, and other beings in the forest all dearly love You as You enjoy Your childhood pastimes. Beasutiful girls think the soles of Your feet are a great festival of happiness. We yearn to attain tyhe soles of Your feet. Still, somehow we remain unable to touch them. When we played as children we enjoyed Your company. But now we must stand before our elders and suepriors. No longer can we easily associate with You." In this verse the word "bata" is used in the sense of doubt or worry. These words mean: We should escape from the circle of our elders and superiors." Remembering Lord Krsna statement (in srimad- Bhagavatam 10.29.23) "priyante mayi jantavah" (all living entities possess natural affection for Me), a stamenet that hints, "beautiful girls naturally love Me as their beloved", the gopis cite

"Goddess Laksmi, whose glance is sought after by the demigods with great endeavor, has achieved the unique position of always remaining on the chest of her Lord, Narayana. Still, she desires the dust of His lotus feet, even though she has to share that dust with Tulasi-devi and indeed with the Lord's many other servants. Similarly, we have approached the dust of Your lotus feet for shelter."

In this verse the gopis say: "After attaining a place at Lord Visnu's chest, Goddess Laksmi still yearns to attain to dust of Your feet in Gokula's ofrest, dust Tulasi- devi also yearns to attain. From the moment of Your birth there, Nanda's land of Vraja has been a place of pastimes for Goddess Laksmi. To attain the dust of your feet Goddess Tulasi always resides in Vrndavana forest." Someone may ask: "Why do Laksmi and Tulasi yearn to attain the dust of Lord Krsna's feet?" The answer is given here in the words "bhrtya-justam" (served by His servants). It is natural for a maidservant to place her master's feet on her head. Someone may ask: What are the glories of Goddess Laksmi?" The answer is given here in the words "yasyah sva-viksana utanya-sura- prayasah", which mean: "the gloruy of Goddess Laksmi is such that the other divine beings who are her associates yearn to attain her glance." Their voices choked with emotion, the gopis then say the words "vayam ca", which menas "we are like them". Therse words mean: "As Laksmi and Tulasi are enchanted by You, we are also enchanted by You. That is why we have now approached the dust of Your feet. It is not otherwise." Then the gopis speak the next verse (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.29.38):

tan nah. . .

"Therefore, O vanquisher of all distress, please show us mercy. To approach Your lotus feet we abandoned our families and homes, and we have no desire other than to serve You. Our hearts are burning with intense desires generated by Your beautiful smiling glances. O jewel among men, please make us Your maidservants."

In this verse the word "vrjinardana" mreans O Lord who removes all distress", and "nah prasida" means "please be merciful to us and remove the obstacles that keep us from seeing You". Here Lord Krsna may ask: Did you gopis really come here only to touch My feet?" To this question the gopis reply with the words: "We left our homes not only to touch Your feet, but because we yearn to worship You. We did not come here to see Vrndavana forest in the moonlight." Then the gopis also say: "Our hearts are burning with intense desires generated by Your beautiful smiling glances. Please make us Your maidservants." Because the idea of a gift here is not very explicit, the word "atmanam" is in the genitive case, not the dative case. From this is may be understood that this gift of devotional service is not always given, even in Gokula. The word "purusa-bhusana" (O ornament among men", which is in the vocative case, has a double meaning. It may also mean: "O Lord who have become the ornament of Your boyfriends in Gokula". This interpretation implies: "Therefore You are never the ornament of Gokula's beautiful girls." Their hearts burning, the gopis think all these thoughts. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.21 Lord Krsna ignored the uddipanas that attracted the gs to Him. Then, in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.27, Lord Krsna revealed the great power of His own attractive handsomeness. Thinking of these statements of Lord Krsna, the gopis spoke the next verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.39):

viksya. . .

"Seeing Your face encircled by curling locks of hair, Your cheeks beautified by earrings, Your lips full of nectar, and Your smiling glance, and also seeing Your two imposing arms, which take away our fear, and Your chest, which is the only source of pleasure for the goddess of fortune, we must become Your maidservants."

The word "ca" (and) spoken near the end of this verse by voices choked with emotion, refers to the words that precede it. Here the gopis say: "Seeing You, we must become Your maidservants. It is not otherwise." Here Lord Krsna may ask: "If You are so dedicated to Me, why do you not stay here every night?" Thinking Lord Krsna may ask this question, the gopis speak the next verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.40):

ka stry anga te. . .

"Dear Krsna, what woman in all the three worlds wouldn't deviate from religious behavior when bewildered by the sweet, drawn-out melody of Your flute? Your beauty makes all three worlds auspicious. Indeed, even the cows, birds, trees and deer manifest the ecstatic symptom of bodily hair standing on end when they see Your beautiful form."

This verse means: "O beloved (anga) who sweetly plays on the flute (kala-padayata-venu-gita) and who is enchanting (sammohita) with the arrows shot by Kamadeva, what woman in all the three worlds wouldn't deviate from religious behavior for Your sake? For Your sake we throw far away all vows of pious morality." If someone were to try to find fault in the qualities of the Lord described in the two vocative words (kala-padayata- venu-gita and sammohita) mentioued above, the gopis reply by speaking the word "trailokya-saubhagam" (who makes all three worlds auspicious). The reason for the gopis deviating from religious behavior is given here in the words "arya- caritan niriksya rupam ka na calet" (upon seeing Your handsome form, what woman would not deviate from religious behavior?). The gopis then say: "Therefore (yat) even the cows, birds, trees and deer manifest the ecstatic symptom of bodily hair standing on end when they see Your beautiful form." Because they may thus easily deviate from the principles of religious behavior, beautiful girls and handsome are forbidden to associate in this way in this world. Thinking of the words Lord Krsna spoke in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.19, and thinking that in the context of those words Lord Krsna might say: I am a powerful hero. Stay with Me I I will protect You from all dangers", the gopis offer a prayer in the next verse (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.29.41):

vyaktam bhavan. . .

"Clearly You have taken birth in this world to relieve the fear and distress of the people of Vraja, just as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the primeval Lord, protects the domain of the demigods. Therefore, O friend of the distressed, kindly place Your lotus hand on Your maidservants' heads and burning breasts."

In this verse the word "arta-bandho" means O You who have taken birth in this world to protect the people of Vraja from the fearful condition of falling away from the principles of religion". Here the words kinkarinam tapta-stanesu kara-pankajam ca sirahsu no nidhehi" have a hidden possible second interpretation, which gives this meaning of the words: "Please doi not place Your lotus hand on Your maidservants' heads and breasts, breasts burning with desire from the sight of You". These words thus imply: "Evenb in Your thoughts do not do such a thing to saintly chaste girls like ourselves." This hidden meaning is hinted in this verse. Quoting the dharma-sastras, Lord Krsna had previously proved that ther gopis should always faithfully serve their husbands and relatives. Quoting the jnana-sastras, the gopis now brilliantly refute Krsna's arguments. The gopis here prove that Krsna is the Supreme Personality of Godhead (paramatma), and therefore He is the meaning and the goal of all the scriptures' teachings. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.32 the gopis hint: "O Krsna, You are the meaning and goal of all the scriptures' teachings. Devotional service to You is the final goal taught in the scriptures." Here Lord Krsna may protest: How is it possible that I am the goal of all the scriptures?" To this the gopis reply (in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.32) by speaking the word "atma", which means: "You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead." The gopis hint here: You are the goal of all the scriptures, the scriptures that affirm (Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 4.4.22):

tam etam vedanuvacanena brahmana vividisanti

"By studying the Vedas the brahmanas understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

Then Krsna may again protest: "How is it possible that I am the Supreme Personality of Godhead?" To this protest the gopis reply with the words "tanu-bhrtam presthah", which mean "for the living entities You are the object of love without limit". Here the gopis also say: "bandhur bhavan", which means "You bring limitless auspiciousness to the living entities". In these two ways Lord Krsna possesses the symptoms of being the Supreme Personality of Godhead, symptoms described in these words of the jnana-sastras (Brhad-aranyaka Upanisad 2.4.5):

atmanas tu kamaya sarvam priyam bhavati

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is loved by everyone. He fulfills everyone's desire."

Here the gopis may say: "In this way we have proved that You are indeed the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Because You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead we are very eager to worship and serve You." It is said in Mundaka Upanisad (1.2.12):

brahmano nirvedam ayat, nasty akrtah krtena

"Not merely by performing duties, but by renunciation a brahmana attains the company of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

In this way the jnana-sastras affirmt hat it is not wrong for a transcendentalist to renounce his prescribed duties. However, because knowledge of Lordf Krsna's sweetness (madhurya) is superior to knowledge of His power and opulence (aisvarya), the gopis do not dwell on Lord Krsna's status as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.33 the gopis describe the activities of true saintly persons. There the word "kusalah" means "saintly persons who know what is important and what is not important, and "hi" means "certainly". Here "sva atman" means "the Supreme Personality of Godhead", as has previously been explained. Or the words "sva atman nitya-priye tvayi" may also mean "You are eternally dear to every soul". Then the gopis say: "tvayy eva ratim kurvanti", which means "therefore saintly persons love You alone. They do not love the principles of religion, their homes, or anything else." Then the gopis say: "paty-adibhih kim", which means What use do we have for our husbands and relatives?" These truths the gopis futher explain in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.36 and 37. In this way the samlapa-anubhava (conversation), which is one of the vacika-anubhavas (anubhavas of speech) has been described. These verses of srimad-Bhagavatam were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

"Birds abandon a tree when its fruits are gone, guests a house after they have eaten, animals a forest that has burnt down, and a lover the woman he has enjoyed, even though she remains attached to him."

Moha is being charmed at heart. Moha is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.16-17):

nija-padabja-dalaih. . .kuja-gatim gamitah. . .

"As Krsna strolls through Vraja with His lotus- petal-like feet, marking the ground with the distinctive embIems of flag, thunderbolt, lotus and elephant goad, He relieves the distress the ground feels from the cows' hooves. As He plays His renowned flute, His body moves with the grace of an elephant. Thus we gopis, who become agitated by Cupid when Krsna playfully glances at us, stand as still as trees, unaware that our hair and garments are slackening."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by the gopis.

Anuccheda 349

Mrti is leaving the body. In this situation a devotee not situated in a spiritual body attains, at the moment of death, ecstatic love for Lord Krsna. Mrti is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.9-11):

antar-grha-gatah kascit. . .

"Some of the gopis, however, could not manage to get out of their houses, and instead they remained home with eyes closed, meditating upon Him in pure love. For those gopis who could not go to see Krsna, intolerable separation from their beloved caused an intense agony that burned away all impious karma. By meditating upon Him they realized His embrace, and the ecstasy they then felt exhausted their material piety. Although Lord Krsna is the Supreme Soul, these girls simply thought of Him as their male lover and associated with Him in that intimate mood. Thus their karmic bondage was nullified and they abandoned their gross material bodies."

Mrti was also discussed previously in Krsna-sandarbha (Anuccheda 177). Languor is described in these words:

anyatra krsna-krtyebhyo balinah klesa-sankaya alasyam acikirsayam krtrimam tesu ujjvale

"When faced with Lord Krsna's actions, the devotees in srngara-rasa sometimes manifest languor born from agitation. Sometimes the languor is only a pretense."

Languor caused by agitation that has its origin in Lord Krsna's actions is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.17):

tad-anga. . .kesan dukulam kuca-pattikam va nanjah prativyodhum alam vraja-striyah

"Their senses overwhelmed by the joy of having His physical association, the gopis could not prevent their hair, their dresses and the cloths covering their breasts from becoming disheveled. Their garlands and ornaments scattered, O hero of the Kuru dynasty."

In this verse the word "anjah" shows that the gopis became powerless because they were overwhelmed with joy. In situations like this there may be agitation. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

In the course of enjoying srngara-rasa pastimes with Lord Krsna the devotee may sometimes only pretend to be laguid. An example of this is seen in the following words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.30.37):

na paraye 'ham calitum. . .

"As the two lovers passed through one part of the Vrndavana forest, the special gopi began feeling proud of Herself. She told Lord Kesava, ``I cannot walk any further. Please carry Me wherever You want to go."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by sri Radha.

Lord siva, and the rulers of heaven, whose aspirations are all frustrated by the force of time, which is born from Your eyebrows. What interest, thene, could I have in any other suitors?" "Augrya" means "anger". Augrya is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.39.21):

kruras tvam akrura. . .

"O Providence, though you come here with the name Akrura, you are indeed cruel, for like a fool you are taking away what you once gave us - those eyes with which we have seen, even in one feature of Lord Madhudvisa's form, the perfection of your entire creation."

Augrya is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.22.15):

dehi vasamsi dharma-jna no ced rajne bruvama he

"O syamasundara, we are Your maidservants and must do whatever You say. But give us back our clothing. You know what the religious principles are, and if You don't give us our clothes we will have to tell the king."

The meaning of these verses is clear. These verses were spoken by the girls of Vraja.

"Asuya" means "envy, or hating someone because of that person's good fortune". Asuya is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.30):

tasya amuni nah ksobham. . .

"These footprints of that special gopi greatly disturb us. Of all the gopis, She alone was taken away to a secluded place, where She is enjoying the lips of Krsna. Look, we can't see Her footprints over here! It's obvious that the grass and sprouts were hurting the tender soles of Her feet, and so the lover lifted up His beloved."

"Capala" means "restlessness of the mind". Capala is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.52.41):

svo bhavini tvam ajitodvahane. . .mam raksasena vidhinodvaha virya-sulkam

"O unconquerable one, tomorrow when my marriage ceremony is about to begin, You should arrive unseen in Vidarbha and surround Yourself with the leaders of Your army. Then crush the forces of Caidya and Magadhendra and marry me in the raksasa style, winning me with Your valor."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by Princess Rukmini.

Anucchedas 261 and 362

"Nidra" means "closing the eyes and becoming rapt in thought". Nidra is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.53.26):

evam cintayati bala govinda-hrta-manasa nyamilayata kala-jna netre casru-kulakule

"As she thought in this way, ther young maiden, whsoe mind had been stolen by Krsna, closed her tear-filled eyes, remembering that there was still time."

"Nidra" also means "sleep". Interpreted in this way, Rukmini's condition is like that of a person who awakens at dawn. In this way nidra is included among the 33 vyabhicaris. In the next verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.53.27) it is said:

evam vadhvah pratiksantya govindagamanam nrpa vama urur bhujo netram asphuran priya-bhasinah

"O king, as the bride thus awaited the arrival of Govinda, she felt a twitch in her left thigh, arm, and eye. This was a sign that something desirable would happen."

Trembling in this way, Rukmini acted as if awakening from sleep. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 363 and 364

The sthayi-bhava in srngara-rasa is thinking of Lord Krsna as the beloved. This sthayi-bhava has two causes: 1. Lord Krsna's nature, and 2. the nature of the girl who loves Him. The first of these causes is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.42):

kanyam srayeta tava pada-saroja-gandham aghraya

"The aroma of Your lotus feet, which is glorified by great saints, awards people liberation and is the abode of Goddess Laksmi. What woman would take shelter of any other man after savoring that aroma? Since You are the abode of transcendental qualities, what mortal woman with the insight to distinguish her own true interest would disregard that fragrance and depend instead on someone who is always subject to terrible fear?"

The second of these causes is seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.60.47 and 48):

naivalikam aham manye vacas te madhusudana ambaya eva hi prayah kanyayah syad ratih kvacit

"Actually, I don't consider Your words false, Madhusudana. Quite often an unmarried girl is attracted to a man, as in the case of Amba.

vyudhayas capi pumscalya mano 'bhyeti navam navam

"The mind of a promiscuous woman always hankers for new lovers, even if she is married."

Queen Rukmini spoke these words in reply to this joking suggestion spoken by Lord Krsna (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.17):

athatmano 'nurupam. . .

"Now you should definitely accept a more suitable husband, a first-class man of the royal order who can help you achieve everything you want, both in this life and the next."

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.47 means: "I don't consider Your words false. Quite often an unmarried girl is attracted to a certain man, as in the case of Amba, who was attracted to salva." When an unmarried girl is attracted in this way, she cannot be restrained. The verse and the next verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.48) affirm: "An unmarried girl is attracted to only one man. In this way she is chaste. The example of Amba is given here. However, a promiscuous woman always seeks newer and newer lovers. Therefore a supremely chaste and saintly woman will be attracted only to You." These verses were spoken by sri Rukmini.

Sthayi-bhava in snrgara-rasa is of two kinds: 1. saksad-upabhogatmaka (directly enjoying amorous pastimes with Lord Krsna), and 2. tad-anumodanatmaka (being pleased that some other girl is enjoying amorous pastimes with Lord Krsna). The first of these is enjoyed by the girls (saksan-nayika) who directly enjoy amorous pastimes with Lord Krsna, and the second of these is enjoyed by the girls who are the friends (sakhi) of these girls. Both kinds of girls will be described here. The girls who directly enjoy amorous pastimes with Lord Krsna are described in a general way in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.12): .

"Krsna's beauty and character create a festival for all women. Indeed, when the demigods' wives flying in airplanes with their husbands catch sight of Him and hear His resonant flute- song, their hearts are shaken by Cupid, and they become so bewildered that the flowers fall out of their hair and their belts loosen."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by the gopis.

"O beloved, please stay here with me for a few days more and enjoy. I cannot give up Your association, O lotus-eyed one."

The desire to enjoy amorous pastimes with Lord Krsna is also seen in the Lord's queens. This is seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.61.4):

smayavaloka-lava-darsita. . .

"The arched eyeborws of these sixteen-thousand queens enchantingly expressed those ladies' secret intentions through coyly smiling sidelong glances. Thus their eyebrows boldly sent forth conjugal messages. Yet even with these arrows of Cupid, and with other means as well, they could not agitate Lord Krsna's senses."

The desire to enjoy amorous pastimes directly with Lord Krsna is also seen amongst the gopis, as described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.31.19):

yat te sujata-caranamburuham. . .

"O dearly beloved! Your lotus feet are so soft that we place them gently on our breasts, fearing that Your feet will be hurt. Our life rests only in You. Our minds, therefore, are filled with anxiety that Your tender feet might be wounded by pebbles as You roam about on the forest path."

This kind of amorous desire is natural for the gopis. When Lord Krsna left them, the gopis became very angry. This anger is not a fault on their part. They were unable to tolerate Lord Krsna's absence. This anger of the gopis is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.17):

mrgayur iva kapindram. . .dustyajas tat-katharthah

"Like a hunter He cruelly shot the king of the monkeys with arrows. Because He was conquered by a woman, He disfigured another woman who came to Him with lusty desires. And even after consuming the gifts of Bali Maharaja, He bound him up with ropes as if he were a crow. So let us give up all frindship with this dark-compexioned boy, even if we can't give up talking about Him."

Among the gopis there are many different kinds of amorous love for Lord Krsna. For some gopis their relationship with Lord Krsna is that of two lovers' mutual adoration. These gopis think, "O Krsna, I am Yours." They possess a abundance of qualities like submissiveness, humbleness, speaking sweet words, and politeness. Other gopis have a different mood. These gopis think, "Krsna is mine". They possess an abundance of qualities like independence, knowing Krsna's heart, joking with Krsna, and dealing with Krsna in a crooked way. These different qualities are manifested in different ways. Sometimes these qualities in a large degree, in a lesser degree, or mixed with other qualities. In this way there are many different ways these qualities may be manifested in the gopis. Examples of how different gopis have different kinds of qualities in their amorous pastimes with Lord Krsna are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.4-9):

kacit karambujam saurer jagrhe 'njalina muda kacid dadhara tad-bahum amse candana-bhusitam

"One gopi joyfully took Krsna's hand between her folded palms, and another placed His arm, anointed with sandalwood paste, on her shoulder.

kacid anjalinagrhnat tanvi tambula-carvitam eka tad-anghri-kamalam santapta stanayor adhat

"A slender gopi respectfully took in her joined hands the betel nut He had chewed, and another gopi, burning with desire, put His lotus feet on her breasts.

eka bhru-kutim abadhya prema-samrambha-vihvala ghnantivaiksat kataksepaih sandasta-dasana-cchada

"One gopi, beside herself with loving anger, bit her lips and stared at Him with frowning eyebrows, as if to wound Him with her harsh glances.

aparanimisad-drgbhyam jusana tan-mukhambujam apitam api natrpyat santas tac-caranam yatha

"Another gopi looked with unblinking eyes upon His lotus face, but even after deeply relishing its sweetness She did not feel satiated, just as mystic saints are never satiated when meditating upon the Lord's feet.

tam kacin netra-randhrena hrdi krtva nimilya ca pulakangy upaguhyaste yogivananda-sampluta

"One gopi took the Lord through the aperture of her eyes and placed Him within her heart. Then, with her eyes closed and her bodily hairs standing on end, she continuously embraced Him within. Thus immersed in transcendental ecstasy, she resembled a yogi meditating upon the Lord.

sarvas tah kesavaloka- paramotsava-nirvrtah jahur viraha jam tapam prajnam prapya yatha janah

"All the gopis enjoyed the greatest festivity when they saw their beloved Kesava again. They gave up the distress of separation, just as people in general forget their misery when they gain the association of a spiritually enlightened person."

In the first of these verses (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.32.4) is seen an example of a gopis whose relationshuip with Lord Krsna is based on mutual adoration. That is the first relartionship described here, therefore this gopi is considered very important. She meets Lord Krsna andHe treats Him with great respect. Here it is saif that she took Lord Krsna's hand in her folded palms. In this way she showed adoration for Him. She also showed submissiveness and other like qualities. This gopi is situation in the midst of the other gopis. She is very important, and therefore she is described first in this passage. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.32.6 is described another kind of gopi, a gopi who thinks, "Krsna is mine." This gopi is also situated in the midts of the gopis. Her position is very rare and exalted. She has a special kind of love for LLord Krsna. Thinking, Krsna is my property, she stares at Him with frowning glances and enjoys other like pastimes with Him. This particular gopi is sri Radha. Her exalted position is described in these words describing the month of Karttika in the Vraja-ratnakara-dhrta part of the Bhavisya Purana:

tasmin dine ca bhagavan ratrau radha-grham yayau sa ca kruddha tam udare kanci-damna babandha ha

"That evening Lord Krsna went to Radha's home. Angry, she bound His waist with Her own sash.

krsnas tu sarvam avedya nija-geha-mahotsavam priyam prasadayam asa tatah sa tam amocayat

"Telling Her about a great festival at His home, Lord Krsna pacified His beloved Radha and She set Him free."

The exalted position of sri Radha is also seen in these words of Padma Purana:

yatha radha priya. . .

"Just as srimati Radharani is dear to the Supreme Lord Krsna (Visnu), so Her bathing place (Radha- kunda) is equally dear to Krsna. Among all the gopis, She alone stands supreme as the Lord's most beloved."

sri Radha's great glory is also seen in these words (which refer to Her) in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.28):

anayaradhito nunam. . .

"Certainly this particular gopi has perfectly worshiped the all-powerful Personality of Godhead, Govinda, since He was so pleased with Her that He abandoned the rest of us and brought Her to a secluded place."

When She went to Dvaraka, sri Radha was known by the name Satyabhama. There She was the most glorious of Lord Krsna's queens. This is seen in the following words spoken to Her by Lord Krsna in the sri Visnu Purana (5.30.33):

yadi te tad-vacah satyam satyatyartham priyeti me mad-geha-niskutarthaya tadayam niyatam taruh

"O Satyabhama, if My words, `You are most dear to Me', are true, then I will certainly bring the parijata tree to the pleasure garden in Your palace."

In the Karttika-mahatmya of the Padma Purana, Lord Krsna tells sri Radha:

na me tvattah priyatama. . .

"No one is more dear to Me than You."

In sri Hari-vamsa, Vaisampayana Muni says of sri Radha:

saubhagye cadhikabhavat

"sri Radha is the most fortunate of Lord Krsna's beloveds."

sri Radha also has a revial. Her celebrated rival is named Candravali. This is described in the following words of sri Bilvamangala Thakura:

radha-mohana-mandirad upagatas candravalim ucivan radhe ksemam iheti tasya vacanam srutvaha candravali kamsa-ksemam aye vimugdha-hrdaye kamsah kva drstas tvaya radha kveti vilajjito nata-mukhah smero harih patu vah

"Bewildered by the ecstasy of thinking of sri Radha, and walking alone, Lord Krsna suddenly met Candravali. He said: `Radha, this is a bequtiful place.' Hearing these words, Candravali said: `This is Kamsa's place.' Then Krsna said: `O girl with the bewildered heart, where do you see Kamsa?' Then Candravali replied: `Where do You see Radha?' May Lord Krsna, who at that moment smiled and bowed His face with embarrassment, protect you all."

The gopis who are like Candravali are described in srimad- Bhagavatam 10.32.5. Candravali's dearest friends are Padma and saibya. The gopis who are like sri Radha are described in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.32.7-8. sri Radha thinks: "Krsna is My property. He follows Me. He is in My grip." sri Radha's two dearest friends are said in the scriptures to be Visakha and Anuradha. In the Bhavisya Purana, Uttara-khanda, it is said:

visakha dhyana-nisthika. . .radhanuradha

"Prominent among the gopis are Visakha, Dhyana- nisthika, Radha and Anuradha."

Radha's friend Anuradha is also known by the name Lalita. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.32.4 are described the activities of two gopis. The first gopi submissively and politely takes Lord Krsnas' arm, but the second gopi thinks, "Krsna is my property" as she takes Lord Krsna's arm. sri Radha shows Her love for Lord Krsna in that way, by insistently thinking, Krsna is My property". Another famous gopi is named syamala. She is the eighth gopi. She is described in these words of Visnu Purana:

kacid ayantam alokya govinda-mati-harsita krsna krneti krsneti praha nanyad udairayat

"When she saw Lord Krsna approasch, her heart became joyful. She called out, `Krsna! Krsna! Krsna!' She spoke no word but that."

Another famous gopi is named Bhadra. The gopis' blissful love for Lord Krsna is seen in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.32.9:

sarvah. . .

"All the gopis enjoyed the greatest festivity when they saw their beloved Kesava again. They gave up the distress of separation, just as people in general forget their misery when they gain the association of a spiritually enlightened person."

The verses of srimad-Bhagavatam 10.32.4-9 were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Now will be described the situation were a devotee is pleased (anumodana) by another devotee's attainment of love for Lord Krsna in srngara-rasa. An example of this is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.53.37-39):

asyaiva bharya bhavitum rukminy arhati napara asav apy anavadyatma bhaismyah samucitah patih

"Rukmini, and no one else, deserves to become His wife, and He also, possessing such flawless beauty, is the only suitable husband for Princess Rukmini.

kincit su-caritam yan nas tena tustas tri-loka-krt anugrhnatu grhnatu vaidarbhyah panim acyutah

"May Acyuta, the creator of the three worlds, be satisfied with whatever pious work we may have done and show His mercy by taking the hand of Vaidarbhi.

evam prema-kala-baddha vadanti sma puraukasah

"Bound by their swelling love, the city's residents spoke in this way."

In these verses it is seen that many different kinds of people, people with different thoyghts and desires, people who have not even the slightest touch of the qualification to enjoy pastimes in srngara-rasa with Lord Krsna as their beloved, still feel delight (anumodana) in their hearts when Lord Krsna enjoys the pastime of wedding Princess Rukmini. Here the word prema-kala-baddhah" means "their hearts bound with a little love, they were delighteed". Even though it was only a small particle of love, and even though the people were not refined or sophisticated, they still felt delighted at heart. At the same time the most glroious kind of love took its birth within them. The regal full moon of ecstatic love rose within them. In this way the greatest kind of delight appeared in their hearts. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

An example of the devotees who directly enjoy amorous pastimes with Lord Krsna is seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.30.11-12):

apy ena-patny upagatah priyayeha gatrais tanvan drsam sakhi su-nirvrtim acyuto vah kantanga-sanga-kuca-kunkuma-ranjitayah kunda-srajah kula-pater iha vati gandhah

"O friend, wife of the deer, has Lord Acyuta been here with His beloved, bringing great joy to your eyes? Indeed, blowing this way is the fragrance of His garland of kunda flowers, which was smeared with the kunkuma from the breasts of His girlfriend when He embraced Her.

bahum priyamsa upadhaya grhita-padmo ramanujas tulasikali-kulair madandhaih anviyamana iha vas taravah pranamam kim vabhinandati caran pranayavalokaih

"O trees, we see that you are bowing down. When the younger brother of Rama walked by here, followed by intoxicated bees swarming around the tulasi manjaris decorating His garland, did He acknowledge your obeisances with His affectionate glances? He must have been resting His arm on the shoulder of His beloved and carrying a lotus flower in His free hand."

Here the word "ena-patni" means "O beautiful-eyed wife of the deer". Here the gopis imagine that the doe is like a human being, like the gopis themselves, and thus is the wife of a deer. The word "sakhi" means you have attained my friendship because of your good fortune, which I will soon describe". "Priyaya acyutah" means sri Krsna accompanied by His beloved". "Gatraih" means "Their limbs entwined in an embrace". Vah" means "ofe persons like tyourselves", drsam" means "of the eyes", "sunirvrtim" means "the spiritual bliss born from seeing Lord Krsna", "tanvan" means "granting the best of all", and "upagatah" means "did He come near you?" Here the wives of the deer may ask: "How can you know if Lord Krsna was here?" Fearing the does might speak those words, the gopis speak the second half (beginning with the word kanta) of this verse, where, speaking words that indirectly praise the divine couple's amorous pastimes, they describe the symptoms of Lord Krsna's presence. Here the word "kula-pateh" means "the tilaka mark decorating the family of Vraja's king", "kunda-srajah gandhah" means "the fragrance of the jasmine garland", and "iha vati" means "is blown here by the breeze". What is the garland like? It is described here in the words "kantanga-sanga-kuca-kunkuma-ranjitayah", which mean "reddened with kunkuma from the limbs of His passionate and all-virtuous beloved". The gopis say: "We think that you, who perceive everything here, might have smelled this fragrance as you walked near Them." Fearing this doe is concealing the joy she feels on seeing the divine couple and the grief she feels by separation from Them, and thinking the doe must certainly have seen the divine couple, the gopis joyfully describe a specific pastime the divine couple might have enjoyed at that time. Then, seeing the bent-down trees, and thinking them servants now bowing down before them, the gopis ask the trees if they had the good fortune of seeing the divine couple. In this way the gopis spoke srimad-Bhagavatam 10.30.12. In that verse the word "anviyamanah" means "being followed", "caran pranayavalokaih" means enjoying pastimes of mutual loving glances", "vah pranamam kim vabhinandati" means "did He respectfully ackowledge your obeisances?" Here the gopis mean to say: Rapt in enjoying pastim,es with His beloved, did Lord Krsna greet you? We do not think He did." These verses were spoken by sri Radha's girlfriends.

Beginning with alambana and ending with sthayi-bhava, srngara- rasa has thus been described. Srngara-rasa has two divisions: 1. vipralambha (separation), and 2. sambhoga (enjoyment). Vipralambha means "attainment (lambha) of distance (vipra)". Vipralambha is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, srngara-prakarana, Texts 1-2:

yunor ayuktayor bhavo yuktayor vatha yo mithah abhistalinganadinam anavaptau prakrsyate sa vipralambho vijneyah sambhogonnati-karakah

"Vipralambha (love-in-separation) is of two kinds: 1. yunor ayuktayor bhava (love-in-separation of the youthful couple who have not yet directly met each other), and 2. yunor yuktayor bhava (love-in-separation of the youthful couple who have already met each other). "The yearning to embrace and enjoy amorous pastimes on the part of the couple who have not yet met becomes the source of their intense pleasure."

The exalted nature of vipralambha is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, srngara-prakarana, Text 3:

na vina vipralambhena sambhogah pustim asnute kasayite hi vastradau bhuyan rago vivardhate

"Just as one cannot redden cloth or some other object without the use of red dye, in the same way the happiness of conjugal love cannot reach its fullness without there having been separation of the lovers."

This truth is confirmed by Lord Krsna Himself in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.20):

naham tu sakhyo bhajato 'pi jantun. . .

"But the reason I do not immediately reciprocate the affection of living beings even when they worship Me, O gopis, is that I want to intensify their loving devotion. They then become like a poor man who has gained some wealth and then lost it, and who thus becomes so anxious about it that he can think of nothing else."

Lord Krsna also confirms this truth in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.34-35):

yat tv aham bhavatinam vai dure varte priyo drsam manasah sannikarsartham mad-anudhyana-kamyaya

"But the actual reason why I, the beloved object of your sight, have stayed far away from you is that I wanted to intensify your meditation upon Me and thus draw your minds closer to Me.

yatha dura-care presthe mana avisya vartate strinam ca na tatha cetah sannikrste 'ksi-gocare

"When her lover is far away, a woman thinks of him more than when he is present before her."

Vipralambha has four divisions: 1. purva-raga (before the lovers have met), 2. mana (jealous anger), 3. prema-vaicittya (sorrow), and 4. pravasa (the beloved lives in a faraway place). Sambhoga is defined as the love when the two lovers enjoy (sambhoga) together. Sambhoga is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, Sambhoga-prakarana, Text 1:

darsanalinganadinam anukulyan nisevaya yunor ullasam arohan bhavah sambhoga iryate

"That state which, by glances, embraces, and other activities brings pleasure to the youthful divine couple is called sambhoga."

As was described before, vipralambha is divided into four parts, which begin with purva-raga. purva-raga is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, srngara-prakarana, Text 5:

ratir ya sangamat purvam darsana-sravanadi-ja tayor unmilati prajnaih purva-ragah sa ucyate

"That love born from seeing, hearing, or other kinds of contact before the couple have actually met is called purva- raga by the wise."

Purva-raga is seen in the following description of Queen Rukmini in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.52.23):

sopasrutya mukundasya rupa-virya-guna-sriyah grhagatair giyamanas tam mene sadrsam patim

"Hearing of the beauty, prowess, transcendental character, and opulencer of Mukunda from visitors to the palace who sang His praises, Rukmini decided that He would be the perfect husband for her."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 371

Now the purva-raga of the vraja-gopis will be considered. Although in some special circumstances sambhoga is manifest even in Lord Krsna's early childhood (balya), in general the pastimes where Lord Krsna is the gopis' paramour arwe manifested in Lord Krsna's kaisora (11-15 years) age. This is seen in the following words of Bhavisya Purana's description of Karttika-vrata:

balye 'pi bhagavan krsnah kaisoram rupam asritah

"Even in His early childhood Lord Krsna manifested the same enchanting handsome form He later manifested as a teenager (kaisora)."

This means that the form manifest in Lord Krsna's kaisora's age is also manifest, although hidden, in His other ages as well. Therefore the manifestation of sambhoga in these other ages is not inappropriate. By the Lord's great power His kaisora form may be manifested even in His childhood, even when He was only six-years old. In trhis way even at that young age purva- raga was manifest. Purva-raga is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.20.45):

aslisya sama-sitosnam prasuna-vana-marutam janas tapam jahur gopyo na krsna-hrta-cetasah

"Except for the gopis, whose hearts had been stolen by Krsna, the people could forget their suffering by embracing the wind coming from the flower-filled forest. This wind was neither hot nor cold."

Here the words "gopyo na jahuh" mean "the gopis did not leave". They did not leave because their hearts were stolen by Krsna (krsna-hrta-cetasah). In this way it is seen that they were tormented by separation from Krsna. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 372 and 373

The gopis' purva-raga love for Lord Krsna is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.1-19):

ittham sarat-svaccha-jalam padmakara-su-gandhina nyavisad vayuna vatam sa-go-gopalako vanam

"Thus the Vrndavana forest was filled with transparent autumnal waters and cooled by breezes perfumed with the fragrance of lotus flowers growing in the clear lakes. The infallible Lord, accompanied by His cows and cowherd boyfriends, entered that Vrndavana forest.

"Wearing a peacock-feather ornament upon His head, blue karnikara flowers on His ears, a yellow garment as brilliant as gold, and the Vaijayanti garland, Lord Krsna exhibited His transcendental form as the greatest of dancers as He entered the forest of Vrndavana, beautifying it with the marks of His footprints. He filled the holes of His flute with the nectar of His lips, and the cowherd boys sang His glories.

"The aborigine women of the Vrndavana area become disturbed by lust when they see the grass marked with reddish kunkuma powder. Endowed with the color of Krsna's lotus feet, this powder originally decorated the breasts of His beloveds, and when the aborigine women smear it on their faces and breasts, they give up all their anxiety.

"Of all the devotees, this Govardhana Hill is the best! O my friends, this hill supplies Krsna and Balarama, along with Their calves, cows and cowherd friends, with all kinds of necessities-water for drinking, very soft grass, caves, fruits, flowers and vegetables. In this way the hill offers respects to the Lord. Being touched by the lotus feet of Krsna and Balarama, Govardhana Hill appears very jubilant.

"My dear friends, as Krsna and Balarama pass through the forest with Their cowherd friends, leading Their cows, They carry ropes to bind the cows' rear legs at the time of milking. When Lord Krsna plays on His flute, the sweet music causes the moving living entities to become stunned and the nonmoving trees to tremble with ecstasy. These things are certainly very wonderful."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.21.1-19 the word "ittham" (thus) means "as was described in the previous chapter", and the words "kusumitam" (filled with flowers) and vanam" (forest) also mean "as was described in the previous chapter". The word "vanam" means "the forest in that place", "susmi" means "wild", "tad-vraja. . .venu-gitam asrutya" means

"hearing the music of Lord Krsna's flute", "paeroksam anvavarnayan" means "in a secluded place they shyly described their love for Lord Krsna. It was not appropriate to describe these feelings in the presence of their elders. The gopis concealed all this from their elders' knowledge."We may note that here it is said they described their love for Lord Krsna, but they did not say that He had yet become their lover. The words "tad varnayitum nasakan" mean "they had no power to describe those confidential topics". The reason they had no power to describe them is given in the words smarantyah" (remembering) and "smara-vegena" (by the power of Cupid). Then, in the next verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.21.5) the gopis describe the previously revealed activities of Lord Krsna. Here the words "adhara-sudhaya" (with the nectar of His lips) refers to Lord Krsna's playing the flute. By directly seeing Lord Krsna in this way the gopis became enchanted. Thus they had no power to speak (nasakan). They wildly embraced each other (abhirebhire). Although they had no power to describe their love for Lord Krsna, the gopis still spoke (sri-gopya ucuh). There weretwo reasons they could not remain silent. The first reason is, even they did not understand that they were overcome by the great power of their ecstatic love for Lord Krsna. The second reason is they did understand how they were overcome by their ecstatic love for Lord Krsna. The first of these reasons is seen in srimad- Bhagavatam 10.21.7. This verse has a second interpretation. Here the words It may also be interpreted to mean "The gopas drink the nectar of the face of Lord Krsna, the younger (anu) of the two princes of Vraja (vrajesa-sutayoh), a face where the flute is placed". The second reason is seen in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.21.8-9. Thus in the first part (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.21.7) of the gopis' explanation they attaempted to keep their real feelings hidden, and in the second part (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.21.8-9) of their statement they found that they had no power to conceal their true feelings. In the passage begionning with srimad-Bhagavatam 10.21.13 the gopis desrcibed their feelings in a more circumspect, a hidden way. Concluding this chapter of srimad-Bhagavatam, srila sukadeva Gosvami says (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.21.20):

evam-vidha bhagavato ya vrndavana-carinah varnayantyo mitho gopyah kridas tan-mayatam yayuh

"Thus narrating to one another the playful pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as He wandered about in the Vrndavana forest, the gopis became fully absorbed in thoughts of Him."

Here the word "tan-mayatam" means "they became rapt in thinking of Lord Krsna". This means they became like a rake who always thinks of women. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Sending a love-letter (kama-lekha) is one of the activities of purva-raga. An example of a love-letter is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.52.37):

srutva gunan bhuvana-sundara srnvatam te. . .

"sri Rukmini said (in her letter read by the brahmana): O beauty of the worlds, having heard of Your qualities, which enter the ears of those who hear and remove their bodily distress, and havong alos heard of Your beauty, which fulfills all the visual desires of those who see, I have fixed my shameless mind upon You, O Krsna."

After purva-raga comes sambhoga. Sambhoga has four parts: 1. sandarsana (gazing), 2. sanjalpa (conversation), 3. samsparsa (touching), and 4. samprayoga (union). Sandarsana means "gazing". An example of sambhoga characterized by gazing and touching is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.52.54-55):

saivam sanais calayati cala-padma-kosau praptim tada bhagavatah prasamiksamana utsarya vama-karajair alakan apangaih praptan hriyaiksata nrpan dadrse 'cyutam ca tam raja-kanyam ratham aruruksatim jahara krsno dvisatam samiksatam

"On the pretext of the procession, Rukmini displayed her beauty for Krsna alone. Slowly she advanced the two moving lotus-whorls of her feet, awaiting the arrival of the Supreme Lord. With the fingernails of her left had she pushed some strands of hair away from her facw and shyly looked from the corners of her eyes at the kings standing before her. At that moment she saw Krsna. Then, while His enemies looked on, the Lord seized the princess, who was eager to mount His chariot."

Srila Jiva Gosvami's

These verses mean: "She shyly waited for the arrival of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. She looked at the kings standing before her. Then, with an agitated heart, she saw the infallible Supreme Lord." These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 376-378

An example in sambhoga of gazing and conversation in relation to the unmarried girls of Vraja is seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.52.55):

tasam vasamsy upadaya nipam aruhya satvarah hasadbhih prahasan balaih parihasam uvaca ha

"Taking the girls' garments, He (Krsna) quickly climbed to the top of the kadamba tree. Then, as He laughed loudly and His companions also laughed, He addressed the girts jokingly."

Here it may be said that although the gopis already had very exalted love for Lord Krsna, Lord Krsna still manifested this joking pastime to openly display that love and to enjoy a certain kind of loving pastime with them. Scholars learned in rasa-sastra yearn to relish this display of the gopis' love. In this pastime Lord Krsna does not touch the gopis or enjoy other kinds of sambhoga pastimes with them. This kind of purva-rasa is called "lajja-ccheda" (breaking the shyness). It is one of the different kinds of sambhoga. These different kinds of sambhoga are described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, srngara-bheda- prakarana, Text 66:

nayana-pritih prathamam cinta-sangas tato 'tha sankalpah nidra-cchedas tanuta visaya-nivrttis trapa-nasah unmado murcha mrtir ity etah smara-dasa dasaiva syuh

"Some other authorities list the stage of sambhoga in this way: 1. nayana-priti (falling in love by seeing the beloved), 2. cinta (thinking of the beloved), 3. sankalpa (deciding to pursue the beloved), 4. nidra-ccheda (loss of sleep), 5. tanuta (becoming emaciated), visaya-nivrtti (becoming oblivious to everything except the beloved), 7. trapa-nasa (destroying shyness), 8. unmada (becoming wild), 9. murcha (fainting), and 10. mrti (death)."

This condition of breaking shyness is the most exalted state in anuraga. Even when they accept death, the last of these ten states, the gopis do not abandon their shyness. To relish this kind of anuraga (breaking the gopis' shyness), Lord Krsna arranged these joking pastimes. In these pastimes Lord Krsna said to the gopis (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.22.11):

na mayodita-purvam va anrtam tad ime viduh

"I have never before spoken a lie, and these boys know it. Therefore, O slender-waisted girls, please come forward, either one by one or all together, and pick out your clothes."

That the gopis' love for Lord Krsna is never broken and remained unchanged in every situation (even when Lord Krsna laughed at them) is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (01.229):

hasadbhih. . .

"Lord Krsna laughed loudly and His companions also laughed,"

Here the word "bala" indicated Lord Krsna's friends. Only persons who are Lord Krsna's friends may touch His body. Other's cannot. Lord Krsna friends are described in these words of Gautamiya Tantra, Prathamavarana-puja:

dama-sudama-vasudama- kinkinir gandha-puspakaih antahkarana-rupas te krsnasya parikirtitah atmabhedena te pujya yatha krsnas tathaiva te

"With fragrant flowers Dama, Sudama, Vasudama, and Kinkini worshiped Lord Krsna. These boys were all praised by Lord Krsna Himself. These boys all know Lord Krsna's heart. Their hearts are not different from Lord Krsna's heart. As Lord Krsna is worthy of worship, so are they."

Because these pastimes of Lord Krsna's relishing the gopis' anuraga love for Him are confidential, Lord Krsna pretended these activities were all a joke. This joking pretense is not incompatible with these pastimes. On the contrary, Lord Krsna joking enhances the bliss of the pastimes. The great sage Sukadeva Gosvami describes Lord Krsna's purpose in performing these activities. The sage explains (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.22.18):

bhagavan ahata viksya suddha-bhava-prasaditah skandhe nidhaya vasamsi pritah provaca sa-smitam

"When the Supreme Lord saw how the gopis were struck with embarrassment, He was satisfied by their pure loving affection. Putting their clothes on His shoulder, the Lord smiled and spoke to them with affection."

In this verse the word "ahatah" means approached". Or, "ahatah" may also mean Although they had renounced almost all shyness, because of their feminine nature a small fragment of shyness remained. Because of this remaining shyness they gently bent their bodies." The word "suddha-bhava-prasaditah" means "pleased at heart by relishing the gopis' splendid love, love that showed their longing to be with Him and their being enchanted by Him". The next verse explains (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.22.19):

yuyam vivastra yad apo dhrta-vratah. . .

"(Lord Krsna said:) You girls bathed naked while executing your vow, and that is certainly an offense against the demigods. To counteract Your sin you should offer obeisances while placing your joined palms above your heads. Then you should take back your lower garments."

In order to see the last remnants of the gopis' shyness come to their final end Lord Krsna spoke these joking words. The next verse explains (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.22.20):

ity acyutena. . .

"Thus the young girls of Vrndavana, considering what Lord Acyuta had told them, accepted that they had suffered a falldown from their vow by bathing naked in the river. But they still desired to successfully complete their vow, and since Lord Krsna is Himself the ultimate result of all pious activities, they offered their obeisances to Him to cleanse away all their sins."

In this way srila sukadeva Gosvami, the king of sages, reveals first the gopis'being enchanted by Lord Krsna and their longing to associatte with Him, and then their obedience to His command. In the next verse srila sukadeva Gosvami explains (srimad-Bhagavatam (10.22.22):

drdham pralabdhas trapaya ca hapitah prastobhitah kridana-vac ca karitah vastrani caivapahrtany athapy amum- ta nabhyasuyan priya-sanga-nirvrtah

"Although the gopis had been thoroughly cheated, deprived of their modesty, ridiculed and made to act just like toy dolls, ana although their clothing had been stolen, they did not feel at all inimical toward Sri Krsna. Hather, they were simply joyful to have this opportunity to associate with their beloved."

In the verse the word "drdham" means greatly", and "pralabdhah" means "cheated". The cheating of the gopis is described here in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.22.19. "Trapaya hapitah" means "deprived of their modesty". This is descibed in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.22.10. "Prastobhitah' here means "mocked". Lord Krsna mocked the gopis in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.22.10. Lord Krsna's making the gopis act like toy dolls is desscribed in His making them stand with folded palms on the pretext of performing atonement. Even though Lord Krsna cheated them and teased them in many ways, the gopis did not find fault with Lord Krsna. On the contrary. It is said here that even though He had stolen their garments, the gopis did not feel eneimical toward Lord Krsna. On the contrary. They were plunged into bliss because they had an opportunity to associate with their beloved. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 379-382

Because they were brahmanis, the yajna-patnis were not qualified to associate with with Lord Krsna as the gopis did. Still, the yajna-patnis did have an ecstatic sentiment that was something like purva-raga. Gazing at Lord Krsna and conversing with Him, they experienced something in some ways like sambhoga. They experienced sambhogabhasa (the reflection of sambhoga). After the winter season had ended and summer had come, Lord Krsna's pastimes with the yajna-patnis became visible. The beginning of these pastimes is desacribed in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.22.29):

atha gopaih parivrto bhagavan devaki-sutah vrndavanad gato duram carayan gah sahagrajah

"Some time later Lord Krsna, the son of Devaki, surrounded by His cowherd friends and accompanied by His elder brother, Balarama, went a good distance away from Vrndavana, herding the cows."

This verse means: "After Lord Krsna had given His mercy to the unmarried girls of Vraja, a summer day came". That the day was a summer day distinguishes this pastime from the previous pastime (which occurred in the winter). On this day Lord Krsna was accompanied by Lord Balarama. That is indicated here by the word "sagrajah" (with His elder brother). Here the phrase "a good distance away from Vrndavana" indicates that Krsna and the boys were in the hilly part of Kamyavana. That they were in the hills is seen by the fact that they decorated their bodies with mineral pigments from the hills. That place is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.22.36):

tarunam namra-sakhanam madhyato yamunam gatah

"Thus moving among the trees, whose branches were bent low by their abundance of twigs, fruits, flowers and leaves, Lord Krsna came to the Yamuna River."

With Vraja to their south and the Yamuna to the west, they entered a clearing to enjoy pastimes. To the south was Mathura City, and to the north was the place where some yajnika- brahmanas lived. The home of these brahmana's was near King Kamsa's palace. That is seen in these words describing the thoughts of these brahmanas (srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.52):

kamsad bhita na cacalan

"Thus reflecting on the sin they had committed by neglecting Lord Krsna, they (the yajnika-brahmanas) became very eager to see Him. But being afraid of King Kamsa, they did not dare go to Vraja."

In this way it is seen that those brahmanas did not go to meet Lord Krsna. The summer qualities of that day are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.22.30):

nidagharkatape tigme chayabhih svabhir atmanah atapatrayitan viksya druman aha vrajaukasah

"When the sun's heat became intense, Lord Krsna saw that the trees were acting as umbrellas by shading Him, and thus He spoke as follows to His boyfriends."

In this verse the phrase "nidagharkatape tigme" is a locative absolute. The yajna-patnis' sambhogabhasa (reflection of sambhoga) is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.21-23):

yamunopavane 'soka- nava-pallava-mandite vicarantam vrtam gopaih sagrajam dadrsuh striyah

"Along the river Yamuna, within a garden decorated with buds of asoka trees, they caught sight of Him strolling along in the company of the cowherd boys and His elder brother, Balarama.

syamam hiranya-paridhim vanamalya-barha- dhatu-pravala-nata-vesam anuvratamse vinyasta-hastam itarena dhunanam abjam karnotpalalaka-kapola-mukhabja-hasam

"His complexion was dark blue and His garment golden. Wearing a peacock feather, colored minerals, sprigs of Mower buds, and a garland of forest flowers and leaves, He was dressed just like a dramatic dancer. He rested one hand upon the shoulder of a friend and with the other twirled a lotus. Lilies graced His ears, His hair hung down over His cheeks, and His lotuslike face was smiling."

prayah-sruta-priyatamodaya-karna-purair yasmin nimagna-manasas tam athaksi-randhraih antah pravesya su-ciram parirabhya tapam prajnam yathabhimatayo vijahur narendra

"O ruler of men, for a long time those brahmana ladies had heard about Krsna, their beloved, and His glories had become the constant ornaments of their ears. Indeed, their minds were always absorbed in Him. Through the apertures of their eyes they now forced Him to enter within their hearts, and then they embraced Him within for a long time. In this way they fionally gave up the pain of separation from Him, just as sagesa give up the anxiety of false ego by embracing their innermost consciousness."

In this verse (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.23.23) the word abhimatayah" means: "false ego", and the phrase prajnam tapam vijahuh" means "as the sages, situated in spiritual trace, become free of all sufferings, so these women also became free of all sufferings".

One of those brahmanis, becoming free of their previous disqualifications, attained in her heart purva-raga love for Lord Krsna and then enjoyed sambhoga pastimes with Him, pastimes that begin with touching Him. This attainment of hers is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.35):

tatraika vidhrta bhartra bhagavantam yatha-srutam hrdopaguhya vijahau deham karmanubandhanam

"One of ther ladies had been forcibly kept back by her husband. When she heard the others describe the Supreme Lord Krsna, she embraced him within her heart and gave up her material body, the basis of bondage to material activity."

When she gave up the brahmana body she had attained by past karma, then he disqualification was destroyed and she was able to embrace Lord Krsna in her heart. In that way she attained Lord Krsna's association. This is described in these words of Bhagavad-gita (8.6):

yam yam vapi smana bhavam. . .

"Whatever state of being one remembers when he quits this body, O son of Kunti, that state he will attain without fail."

The statement that she attained Lord Krsna's association means that she attained the form of a gopi. She did not attain the form of a brahmani and in that form associate with Lord Krsna. That Lord Krsna's close associates were all cowherd people is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.23.37):

evam lila-nara-vapuh. . .

"Thus the Supreme Lord, appearing like a human being to perform His pastimes, imitated the ways of human society. He enjoyed pleasing His cows, cowherd boyfriends and cowherd girlfriends with His beauty, words, and actions."

In this verse it is said that Lord Krsna enjoyed pleasing the cows and cowherd people. He did not enjoy pastimes with others, at least not in the land of Vraja. In Vraja that yajna-patni could not enjoy pastimes with Lord Krsna without becoming a gopi. She thus entered the Vraja that is not manifested in the material world. In that unmanifested Vraja Lord Krsna enjoys many different pastimes, pastimes without limit. This is explained in the Krsna-sandarbha. Therefore there is nothing wrong in her death. She yearned to attain

Lord Krsna. With a great effort she struggled to attain Him. In that way she attained a very exalted relationship (rasa) with Him. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.23.35 quoted above was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 383

In the autumn after (Lord sri Krsna's pastime of stealing the gopis' garments) all the vraja-gopis enjoyed sambhoga pastime with Lord Krsna, pastimes born of the gopis' purva-raga love for Him, pastimes that begin with gazing at Lord Krsna. These sambhoga pastimes are described (in the scriptures). Although the unmarried girls of Vraja had already attained Lord Krsna's association, theydid not feel fulfilled. Their purva-raga love for Him had still not attained its full nature. Still, at least one gopis had enjoyed pastimes with Lord Krsna, as is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.21.17):

purnah pulindyah. . .

"The aborigine women of the Vrndavana area become disturbed by lust when they see the grass marked with reddish kunkuma powder. Endowed with the color of Krsna's lotus feet, this powder originally decorated the breasts of His beloveds, and when the aborigine women smear it on their faces and breasts, they give up all their anxiety."

Still, many other gopis had not yet even touched Lord Krsna. This is seen in these words spoken by the gopis in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.29.36):

yarhy ambujaksa. . .

"O lotus-eyed one, the goddess of fortune considers it a festive occasion whenever she touches the soles of Your lotus feet. You are very dear to the residents of the forest, and therefore we will also touch those lotus feet. From that time on we will be unable even to stand in the presence of any other man, for we will have been fully satisfied by You."

When the gopis first heard Lord Krsna's flute-music they at first tried to supress the ecstatic emotions that came to overwhelm them. From this it may be seen that they had not yet directly enjoyed sambhoga pastimes with Him. Also, because they had not yet enjoyed sambhoga pastimes with Him, Lord Krsna at first rejected them, and they then appealed to Him. These pastimes are seen in srimad-Bhagavatam, Canto 10, Chapter 29, in the passage that begins with these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.4):

nisamya gitam tad ananga-vardhanam vraja-striyah krsna-grhita-manasah ajagmur anyonyam alaksitodyamah sa yatra kanto java-lola-kundalah

"When the young women of Vrndavana heard Krsna's flute song, which arouses romantic feelings, their minds were captivated by the Lord. They went to where their lover waited, each unknown to the others, moving so quickly that their earrings swung back and forth."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 384

Jealous anger (mana) may bring separation (vipralambha) of Lord Krsna and His beloved. This is seen in the following words of Ujjvala-nilamani, srngara-bheda-prakarana (Text 93):

aher iva gatih premna sva-bhava-kutila bhavet ato hetor ahetos ca yunor mana udancati

"The progress of loving affairs between young couples is by nature crooked, like the movement of a snake. Becuase of this, two types of nager arise between young couples - anger with cause and anger without cause."

Jealous anger without a cause is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, srngara-bheda-prakarana (Text 70):

ahetur neti nety ukter hetor yan mana ucyate asya pranaya eva syan manasya padam uttamam

"When without any cause the beloved says `No. No.' and rejects the lover, this is called jealous anger (mana). This is the highest state of loving jealous anger."

Jealous anger is thus with a cause and without a ccause. Jealous anger with a cause is described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, srngara-bheda-prakarana (Text 71):

hetur irsya-vipaksader visistye preyasa krte bhavah pranaya-mukhyo 'yam irsya-manatvam rcchati

"When the lover gives special attention to a certain beloved, then all the rivals of the beloved become jealous. In this way what was once love becomes jealous anger. This is anger with cause."

Jealous anger is also described in these words of Ujjvala- nilamani, srngara-bheda-prakarana (Text 72):

sneham vina bhayam na syan nersya ca pranayam vina tasman mana-prakaro 'yam dvayoh prema-prakasakah

"Without love there cannot be fear (for the loss of the beloved), and without love there cannot be jealousy. For this reason fear and jealousy may be manifestations of love."

Jealous anger is seen in the following words of Hari- vamsa, Visnu-parva (66.4 and 65.50):

rusitam iva tam devim snehat sankalpayann iva bhita-bhito 'ti-sanakair vivesa yadu-nandanah rupa-yauvana-sampanna sva-saubhagyena garvita abhimanavati devi srutvaiversya-vasam gata

"As He slowly entered the palace, Lord Krsna, who is feared by fear itself, and who is the descendent of Maharaja Yadu, lovingly meditated on His angry queen Satyabhama." "Meanwhile, hearing (how her rival Rukmini had attained a parijata flower from Indraloka), Queen Satyabhama, who was very proud of her opulent beauty and youthfulness, bexcame overwhelmed with jealous anger."

When the beloved suspects the lover no longer loves her, then jealous anger with cause is manifest. Lord Krsna enjoys teasing His beloved in this way (to make her angry because she suspects He no longer loves her). An example of such teasing is seen in these words Lord Krsna spoke to Queen Rukmini (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.60.29):

tvad-vacah srotu-kamena ksvelyacaritam angane

"I only spoke in jest, dear lady, because I wanted to hear what you would say."

srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.30):

mukham ca prema-samrambha- sphuritadharam iksitum. . .

"I wanted to see your face with lips trembling in loving anger, the reddish corners of your eyes throwing sidelong glances and the line of your beautiful eyebrows knit in a frown."

Queen Rukmini refuted Lord Krsna's teasing arguments by speaking these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.60.40):

jadyam vacas tava gadagraja. . .

"My Lord, as a lion drives away lesser animals to claim his proper tribute, You drove off the assembled kings with the resounding twang of Your sarnga bow and then claimed me, Your fair share. Thus it is sheer foolishness, my dear Gadagraja, for You to say You took shelter in the ocean out of fear of those kings."

Lord Krsna's teasing words in the pastime were proper, for they were meant only to increase His beloved's love for Him. Such words are approved by ancient and modern poets and philosophers. Now jealous anger in the mood of worship, which is called adaraniya-mana", will be considered. When, during the rasa dance, at the time of their first intimate meeting, Lord Krsna abandoned all the gopis and remained hidden from their sight, the gopis became slightly angry with Him. This is seen in the passage beginning with these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.32.15):

sabhajayitva tam ananga-dipanam sahasa-lileksana-vibhrama-bhruva samsparsanenanka-krtanghri-hastayoh samstutya isat kupita babhasire

"Sri Krsna had awakened romantic desires within the gopis, and they honored Him by glancing at Him with playful smiles, gesturing amorously with their eyebrows, and massaging His hands and feet as they held them in their laps. Even while worshiping Him, however, they felt somewhat angry, and thus they addressed Him as follows."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadwva Gosvami.

By speaking words of praise the lover may pacify the beloved's anger. An example of this may be seen in these words of praise spoken by Lord Krsna to the gopis (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.32.21-22):

evam mad-arthojjhita-loka-veda- svanam hi vo mayy anuvrttaye 'balah mayaparoksam bhajata tirohitam masuyitum marhatha tat priyam priyah

"My dear girls, understanding that simply for My sake you had rejected the authority of worldly opinion, of the Vedas and of your relatives, I acted as I did only to increase your attachment to Me. Even when I removed Myself from your sight by suddenly disappearing, I never stopped loving you. Therefore, My beloved gopis, please do not harbor any bad feelings toward Me, your beloved.

na paraye 'ham niravadya-samyujam. . .

"I am not able to repay My debt for your spotless service, even within a lifetime of Brahma. Your connection with Me is beyond reproach. You have worshiped Me, cutting off all domestic ties, which are difficult to break. Therefore please let your own glorious deeds be your compensation."

The meaning of these verses is clear. These verses were spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Anuccheda 386

Jealous anger or pride without a cause is called pranaya-mana" (anger or pride caused by love). Such anger or pride has no external cause. Its only cause is the pastimes of love. The hero (Lord Krsna) also manifests this kind of pride or anger. In the rasa of love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead this kind of anger or pride is one of the uddipanas. An example of causeless anger or pride, pride born of love, is seen in the passage that begins with these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.48):

tasam tat-saubhaga-madam viksya manam ca kesavah

"Lord Kesava, seeing the gopis too proud of their good fortune, wanted to relieve them of this pride and show them further mercy. Thus He immediately disappeared."

Here the gopis had pride born from love (pranaya-mana). There was a cause of their pride. They were proud of their own good fortune. Therefore, to curb this pride and give them His mercy, Lord Krsna suddenly disappeared from the gopis' sight. Then it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.36):

yam gopim anayat krsno vihayanyah striyo vane. . .

"The particular gopi whom Krsna had led to a secluded forest when He had abandoned all the other girls began to think Herself the best of women. `My beloved has rejected all the other gopis', She thought, `even though they are driven by Cupid himself. He has chosen to reciprocate with Me alone.' "

Tbis gopi also became proud with love (pranaya-mana). Filled with pride, She spoke these words to Lord Krsna (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.30.37):

na paraye 'ham calitum naya mam yatra te manah

"I cannot walk any further. Please carry Me wherever You want to go."

As the other gopis were previously, this gopi also became proud with love. Then, with anger also born of love, Lord Krsna spoke to Her the following words (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.30.38):

skandha aruhyatam. . .

"Lord Krsna replied: `Just climb on My shoulder.' "

After speaking these words, Lord Krsna suddenly disappeared. The gopis have pride without cause (ahetu) and Lord Krsna has pride with a faint reflection of a cause (hetv-abhasa). Flowing through the great whirlpool of deceitful crookedness, the gopis' loving pride and anger become very intense.When they are separated from Lord Krsna, their anger becomes sublimely pure. Lord Krsna's other beloveds (other than the gopis) manifest grief, fear, and worry when they become angry with a cause. As example of this is seen in the srimad-Bhagavatam chapter when Lord Krsna teased Queen Rukmini with loving joking words. There Lord Krsna's intention was to make a playful joke. Queen Rukmini was very deep and her love very sincere. There Lord Krsna thought: "My wish is to enjoy pastimes of making My beloved angry. Her throat will be filled with emotional words that reveal her great love for Me. However, she may not clearly understand My intention. She will either become playfully angry, or she will say she does not understand My words. In this way I will try to joke with her. Even when I made her brother very ugly-looking she still did not become angry. It is not appropriate to continue in that direction. However, the happiness she feels by associating with Me is the be-all-and-end-all of her life. It is everything for her. Perhaps by mocking the pride she feels by being able to associate with Me I will make her angry. If she does not become angry in that way, then perhaps by making her afraid that she will be separated from Me she will speak many words revealing her love for Me." Thinking in this way, Lord Krsna spoke the loving joking words that begin in this verse of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.10):

raja-putripsita bhupaih. . .

"My dwear princess, you were sought after by many kings as powerful as the rulers of planets. They were all abundantly endowed with polituical influence, wealth, beauty, generosity, and physical strength."

That Lord Krsna was joking is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.9):

tam rupinim. . .pritah smayan

"As He contemplated her, the goddess of fortune herself, who desires only Him, Lord Krsna smiled."

In this way it is seen that Lord Krsna was only joking. The sincerity of Queen Rukmini's love is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.25):

tad drstva bhagavan krsnah priyayah prema-bandhanam hasya-praudhim ajanantyah karunah so 'nvakampata. . .

"Seeing that His beloved was so bound to Him in love that she could not understand the full meaning of His teasing, merciful Lord Krsna felt compassion for her. "The Lord quickly got down from the bed. Manifesting four arms, He picked her up, gathered her hair, and caressed her face with His lotus hand."

In these verses the word "hasya-praudhim" means "the meaning of His joking words". Here Lord Krsna proudly thought: "Even though she is very wise and profound, and even though her love is very sincere, I will agitate her." The word "ajanantyah" means "because there was no crookedness or deceit in her sweet and sincere love, she did not understand the meaning of Lord Krsna's words". This is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.28):

hasya-praudhi-bhramac-cittam

"Rukmini's mind was bewildered by Lord Krsna's clever joking."

As a joke Lord Krsna had wished to see her playful anger. Thus He said to her in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.29-31):

ma ma vaidarbhy asuyetha jane tvam mat-parayanam tvad-vacah srotu-kamena ksvelyacaritam angane

"O Vaidarbhi, do not be displeased with Me. I know that you are fully devoted to Me. I only spoke in jest, dear lady, because I wanted to hear what you would say.

mukham ca prema-samrambha- sphuritadharam iksitum kata-kseparunapangam sundara-bhru-kuti-tatam

"I also wanted to see your face with lips trembling in loving anger, the reddish corners of your eyes throwing sidelong glances, and the line of your beautiful eyebrows knit in a frown.

ayam hi paramo labho grhesu grha-medhinam yan narmair iyate yamah priyaya bhiru bhamini

"The greatest pleasure worldly householders can enjoy at home is to spend time joking with their beloved wives, My dear timid and tempermental one."

Although at first she was frightened, now Rukmini may be displeased. That is why Lord Krsna now throws away the idea that Rukmini is meekly submissive to Him. Here the woprd bhamini" is in the vocative case.

Lord Krsna, who had yearned to see Rukmini reveal Her love for Him, says in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.49):

sadhvy etac-chrotu-kamais tvam raja-putri pralambhita

"O saintly lady, O princess, We deceived you only because We wanted to hear you speak like this. Indeed, everything you said in reply to My words is most certainly true." Wishing to refute Lord Krsna's assertyion of srimad- Bhagavatam 10.60.49 and also wishing to reveal the truth about Lord Krsna, Queen Rukmini spoke these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.38):

tvam vai samasta-purusartha-mayah phalatma. . .

"You are the embodiment of all human goals and You are Yourself the final aim of life. Desiring to attain You, O all-powerful Lord, intelligent persons abandon everything else. It is they who are worthy of Your association, not men and women absorbed in the pleasure and grief resulting from their mutual lust."

After understanding that Lord Krsna was only joking, Queen Rukmini manifested a little of the anger that He had yearned to see. She said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.40):

jadyam vacas tava gadagraja. . .

"My Lord, as a lion drives away lesser animals to claim his proper tribute, You drove off the assembled kings with the resounding twang of Your sarnga bow and then claimed me, Your fair share. Thus it is sheer foolishness, my dear Gadagraja, for You to say You took shelter in the ocean out of fear of those kings."

Here the word "jadyam" means "great foolishness" just as "madhuryam" means "great sweetness" in these words of srila Bilvamangala Thakura's sri Krsna-karnamrta (Text 68):

madhuryam eva nu mano-nayanamrtam nu

"Lord Krsna is the great nectar sweetness that fills the eyes and the heart."

In speaking these joking words, Lord Krsna's purpose was to agitate Queen Rukmini and destroy the pride she felt in always having His association. This is seen in these words spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.21):

etavad uktva bhagavan atmanam vallabham iva manyamanam avislesat tad-darpa-ghna uparamat

"Rukmini had thought herself especially beloved by the Lord because He never left her company. By saying these things to her He vanquished her pride, and then He stopped speaking."

Lord Krsna had another purpose also, a purpose seen in these words He personally spoke in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.60.56):

bhratur virupa-karanam yudhi nirjitasya prodvaha-parvani ca tad-vadham aksa-gosthyam duhkham samuttham asaho 'smad-ayoga-bhitya naivabravih kim api tena vayam jitas te

"When your brother, who had been defeated in battle and then disfigured, was later killed during a gambling match on Aniruddha's wedding day, you felt unbearable grief, yet out of fear of losing Me you spoke not a word. By this silence you have conquered Me."

In this chapter of srimad-Bhagavatam are seen Queen Rukmini's great love for Lord Krsna and her natural absence of anger. From this it is seen that it certainly truthfully said that Lord Krsna's beloveds love Him very dearly. When the manifestation of pride and anger is concluded, then sambhoga is manifest. This is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.1):

ittham bhagavato gopyah srutva vacah su-pesalah jahur viraha jam tapam-tad-angopacitasisah

"When the cowherd girls heard the Supreme Personality of Godhead speak these most charming words, they forgot their distress caused by separation from Him. Touching His transcendental limbs, they felt all their desires fulfilled."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 387 and 388

Now prema-vaicittyam will be considered. Its qualities are described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, srngara-bheda- prakarana (Text 134):

priyasya sannikarse 'pi premotkarsa-svabhavatah ya vislesa-dhiyartis tat prema-vaicittyam ucyate

"When, even in the beloved's presence, the lover, out of intense love, is aggrieved with fears of separation in the future, such a state is called prema-vaicittyam."

Prema-vaicittyam is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.90.13-24):

krsnasyaivam viharato gaty-alapeksita-smitaih narma-ksveli-parisvangaih strinam kila hrta dhiyah

"In this way Lord Krsna would sport with His queens, totally captivating their hearts with His gestures, talks, glances, and smiles, and also with His jokes, playful exchanges, and embraces.

"The queens would become stunned in ecstatic trance, their minds absorbed in Krsna alone. Then, thinking of their lotus-eyed Lord, they would speak as if insane. Please hear these words from me as I relate them.

Your heart is distraught with great eagerness, as our hearts are, and as you remember Him again and again you shed a torrent of tears. Association with Krsna brings such misery!

"O magnanimous mountain, you neither move nor speak. You must be pondering some matter of great importance. Or do you, like us, desire to hold on your breasts the feet of Vasudeva's darling son?

susyad-dhradah. . .

"O rivers, wives of the ocean, your pools have now dried up. Alas, you have shriveled to nothing, and your wealth of lotuses has vanished. Are you, then, like us, who are withering away because of not receiving the affectionate glance of our dear husband, the Lord of Madhu, who has cheated our hearts?

"Welcome, swan. Please sit here and drink some milk. Give us some news of the descendent of sura, dear one. We know that you are His messenger. Is that invincible Lord doing well, and does that unreliable friend of ours still remember the words He spoke to us long ago? Why should we go and worship Him? O servant of a petty master, go tell Him who fulfills our desires to come here without the goddess of fortune. Is she the only woman exclusively devoted to Him?"

srimad-Bhagavatam 10.90.13 means: "With His gestures and other activities Lord captivated the hearts of His queens as He enjoyed pastimes with them." srimad-Bhagavatam 10.90.14 means: "Rapt in meditation on Lord Krsna and thus momentarily speechless (agirah), and again and again maddened by their anuraga love, and meditating on playful lotus-eyed Krsna as if He were not present before them, the gopis spoke words devoid of common sense. Please hear these words as I relate them." Maddened by the touchof separation from Lord Krsna, the queens speak srimad-Bhagavatam 10.90.15-24. srimad-Bhagavatam 10.90.15 means: "O Kurari bird, all alone, you lament at night somewhere in this world. Therefore you do not sleep. In some hidden place our master sleeps. Thinking, "Because of the similar sweetness of your lament and our lament, we think. . . ", the queens spoke the second half of srimad-Bhagavatam 10.90.15. In the following verses the queens think similar ideas in otber ways. Then, thinking that, sent by the Lord, a swan has come as a messenger before them, the queens speak srimad-Bhagavatam 10.90.24. In that verse they say: Does Krsna remember what He spoke to us in private? or does He not remember it?" In that verse the word "ksaudra" means "O messenger of our fickle friend", kamadam" means "who agitates young girls", and alapaya" means "please call". Then the queens say: "We leave everything for Him. He should comw without the goddess of fortune (sriyam rte). Here the queens sarcastically pretend to glorify the goddess of fortune. They say: "Of all women the goddess of fortune alone has true devotion to Lord Krsna. Therefore how is it possible that Lord Krsna will nto be devoted to her." Speaking these words with voices choked with emotion, the queens sarcastically speak of the goddess of fortune and also reveal their own love and devotion for Lord Krsna. That is seen in this verse. After this manifestation of love-in-separation, the queens enjoy eternal sambhoga pastimes with Lord Krsna. It is said of these queens (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.90.25):

itidrsena bhavena krsne yogesvaresvare kriyamanena madhavyo lebhire paramam gatim

"By thus speaking and acting with such ecstatic love for Lord Krsna, the master of all masters of mystic yoga, His loving wives attained the ultimate goal of life."

In this verse the words "gatim lebhire" mean they attained an eternal relationship with Lord Visnu- Krsna." The reason they attained this relationship is given here in the word "madhavyah", which means "the eternal beloveds of Lord Krsna, who is called Madhava because He was born in the Madhu dynasty". This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 389 and 390

Now pravasa (separation when the belovedhas gone to a faraway place) will be considered. Pravasa is of many kinds. In the pravasa separation felt by the vraja-gopis, the gopis did meet Lord Krsna again. The qualities of pravasa are described in these words of Ujjvala-nilamani, srngara-bheda-prakarana (Text 139-140):

purva-sangatayor yunor bhaved desantaradibhih vyavadhanam tu yat prajnaih sa pravasa itiryate taj-janya-vipralambho 'yam pravasatvena kathyate

"When ther young couple, after meeting and establishing Their relationship become again separated by one of them moving to a foreign country or a distant place, such separation is called pravasa by the wise."

Pravasa is also described in these words of Ujjvala- nilamani, srngara-bheda-prakarana (Text 153):

cintatra jagarodvegau tanavam malinangata pralapo vyadhir unmado moha-mrtyur dasa dasa

"In Pravasa ten conditions are manifest: 1. cinta (meditation), 2. jagara (insomnia), 3. udvega (agitation), 4. tanavam (becoming thin and emaciated), 5. malinangata (withering of the body), 5. pralapa (abundant talking), 7. vyadhi (disease), 8. unmada (madness), 9. moha (bwilderment), and 10. mrtyu (death."

Pravasa is of two kinds: 1. kincid-dura-gamana-maya (where the beloved is separated by a short distance) and 2. su-dura- gamana-maya (where the beloved isseparated by a great distance). The first of these is also of two kinds: 1. eka-lila-gata (in one pastime), and 2. paramparantarala-gata (within a series of pastimes). The first of these (kincid-dura-gamana-maya pravasa) is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.1):

antarhite bhagavati sahasaiva vrajanganah atapyams tam acaksanah karinya iva yuthapam

"When Lord Krsna disappeared so suddenly, the gopis felt great sorrow at losing sight of Him, like a group of female elephants who have lost their mate."

This kind of pravasa is also seen in these owrds of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.30.38):

tatas cantardadhe krsnah sa vadhur anvatapyata

"But as soon as He said this, Lord Krsna disappeared. His beloved consort then immediately felt great remorse."

The meaning of this verse is cleear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.3 the gopis say: "As in the past You rescued everyone in Gokula, please now rescue us." The meaning is: "As You rescued the people from the bull's son Vatsasura, and from Maya Danava's son Vyomasura, please rescue us." In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.4-5 the gopis humbly pray: "You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead. As in the past with a single glance You protected all the worlds, in the same way please protect us now." In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.4 the words "satvatam kule" mean "You descended to this world in the family of Nanda Maharaja and other devotees". In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.5 the word vrsni-dhurye" also refers to Nanda and the people of Gokula, for they were all born in the Yadu dynasty". This is seen in the following words of Skanda Purana, Mathura-mahatmya:

"In that place Lord Krsna lifted Govardhaana Hill and thus rescued all the Yadavas from the torrential rains sent by Indra."

That the people of Gokula were members of the Yadu dynasty is also seen in these words of Skanda Purana, sri Govinda- kunda-prastava:

yatrabhisikto bhagavan maghono yadu-varinah

"In that place Lord Krsna was bathed by the demigod Indra, who had attempted to harm the Yadu dynasty.

After speaking srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.3, the gopis, with a mixture of love and anger, say in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.4: You are not a true son of the gopi who is Vraja's queen, a gopi who always protected us when we were in distress. Rather, You are the Supersoul, the witness of the pure souls' actions, a witness who remains always untouched by the souls' sufferings and joys. Is it not so that on the demigod Brahma's request You descended to this world to protect all living beings? Therefore You should not ignore us." This the gopis humbly request in the second half of srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.4. Then the gopis speak a similar prayer in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.5. Then in srimad- Bhagavatam 10.31.7 the gopis say: "Your feet are the abode of the goddess of fortune. They destroy the sins of the surrendered souls. Please very mercifully place Your feet on our breasts and tear away the lust in our hearts." Then the gopis say in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.8: "Is it not true that the sweetness of Your words, sweetness anointed with a very charming fragrance, has enchanted out hearts? The nectar of Your lips is the medicine that will revive us. How can we girls who have performed no pious deeds attain the nectar of Your lips? Even the nectar of Your words is very far way for us. Our elders and superiors stop us and imprison us in our homes. Therefore the nectar of Your pastimes is very difficult for us to attain." Thinking in this way, the gopis speak srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.9, where they say: "Persons who chant Your glories give a great gift to us." Then Lord Krsna might ask: "Why have you fallen in love (anuraga) with Me?" To answer this question the gopis speak srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.10. Lord Krsna may then ask: "How is it possible that My smiles and other actions and features could do such a thing to you?" To answer this question the gopis say: "kuhaka", (You are a great cheater). This word means: "You know that within You lies a great power to cheat and deceive others." The gopis then speak many other reasons also. Describing Lord Krsna's great, great attractiveness, the gopis then speak srimad-Bhagavatam 10.31.19. These verses were spoken by the gopis.

After these verses an example of sambhoga is given in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.3):

tam vilokyagatam prestham. . .

"When the gopis saw that their dearmost Krsna had returned to them, they all stood up at once, and out of their affection for Him their eyes bloomed wide. It was as if the air of life had reentered their bodies."

In this way the gopis' distress at being separated from Lord Krsna is gradually relieved. The first stage of this process is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.9):

sarvas tah kesavaloka- paramotsava-nirvrtah jahur viraha jam tapam prajnam prapya yatha janah

"All the gopis enjoyed the greatest festivity when they saw their beloved Kesava again. They gave up the distress of separation, just as people in general forget their misery when they gain the association of a spiritually enlightened person."

The second stage of this process is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.32.13):

tad-darsanahlada-vidhuta-hrd-rujah. . .

"Their heartache vanquished by the ecstasy of seeing Krsna, the gopis, like the personified Vedas before them, felt their desires completely fulfilled. For their dear friend Krsna they arranged a seat with their shawls, which were smeared with the kunkuma powder from their breasts."

The gopis relief from distress is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.1):

ittham bhagavato gopyah srutva vacah su-pesalah jahur viraha jam tapam-tad-angopacitasisah

"When the cowherd girls heard the Supreme Personality of Godhead speak these most charming words, they forgot their distress caused by separation from Him. Touching His transcendental limbs, they felt all their desires fulfilled."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 394-397

The second kind of pravasa, where the beloved is a short distance away (kincid-dura-pravasa) is also described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.1):

gopyah krsne vanam yate tam anudruta-cetasah krsna-lilah pragayantyo ninyur duhkhena vasaran

"Whenever Krsna went to the forest, the minds of the gopis would run after Him, and thus the young girls sadly spent their days singing of His pastimes."

The gopis' conditioon of pralapa is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.2-21):

sri-gopya ucuh

vama-bahu-krta-vama-kapolo valgita-bhrur adhararpita-venum komalangulibhir asrita-margam gopya irayati yatra mukundah

vyoma-yana-vanitah saha siddhair vismitas tad upadharya sa-lajjah kama-margana-samarpita-cittah kasmalam yayur apasmrta-nivyah

"The gopis said: When Mukunda vibrates the flute He has placed to His lips, stopping its holes with His tender fingers, He rests His left cheek on His left arm and makes His eyebrows dance. At that time the demigoddesses traveling in the sky with their husbands, the Siddhas, become amazed. As those ladies listen, they are embarrassed to find their minds yielding to the pursuit of lusty desires, and in their distress they are unaware that the belts of their garments are loosening."

hanta citram abalah srnutedam. . . vrndaso vraja-vrsa. . .

"O girls! This son of Nanda, who gives joy to the distressed, bears steady lightning on His chest and has a smile like a jeweled necklace. Now please hear something wonderful. When He vibrates His flute, Vraja's buHs, deer and cows, standing in groups at a great distance, are all captivated by the sound, and they stop chewing the food in their mouths and cock their ears. Stunned, they appear as if asleep, or like figures in a painting."

barhina-stabaka. . . tarhi bhagna-gatayah. . .

"My dear gopi, sometimes Mukunda imitates the appearance of a wrestler by decorating Himself with leaves, peacock feathers and colored minerals. Then, in the company of Balarama and the cowherd boys, He plays His flute to call the cows. At that time the rivers stop flowing, their water stunned by the ecstasy they feel as they eagerly wait for the wind to bring them the dust of His lotus feet. But like us, the rivers are not very pious, and thus they merely wait with their arms trembling out of love."

anucaraih. . . vana-latah. . . darsaniya-tilakah. . . sarasi sarasa. . .

"Krsna moves about the forest in the company of His friends, who vividly chant the glories of His magnificent deeds. He thus appears just like the Supreme Personality of Godhead exhibiting His inexhaustible opulences. When the cows wander onto the mountainsides and Krsna calls out to them with the sound of His flute, the trees and creepers in the lorest respond by becoming so luxuriant with fruits and flowers that they seem to be manifesting Lord Visnu within their hearts. As their branches bend low with the weight, the filaments on their trunks and vines stand erect out of the ecstasy of love of God, and both the trees and the creepers pour down a rain of sweet sap." "Maddened by the divine, honeylike aroma of the tulasi flowers on the garland Krsna wears, swarms of bees sing loudly for Him, and that most beautiful of all persons thankfully acknowledges and acclaims their song by taking His flute to His lips and playing it. The charming flute song then steals away the minds of the cranes, swans and other lake-dwelling birds. Indeed, they approach Krsna, close their eyes and, maintaining strict silence, worship Him by fixing their consciousness upon Him in deep meditation."

saha-balah. . . mahad-atikramana. . .

"O goddesses of Vraja, when Krsna is enjoying Himself with Balarama on the mountain slopes, playfully wearing a flower garland on the top of His head, He engladdens all with the resonant vibrations of His flute. Thus He delights the entire world. At that time the nearby cloud, afraid of offending a great personality, thunders very gently in accompaniment. The cloud showers flowers onto his dear friend Krsna and shades Him from the sun like an umbrella."

vividha-gopa-caranesu. . . savanasah. . .

"O pious mother Yasoda, your son, who is expert in all the arts of herding cows, has invented many new styles of flute- playing. When He takes His flute to His bimba-red lips and sends forth the tones of the harmonic scale in variegated melodies, Brahma, Siva, Indra and other chief demigods become confused upon hearing the sound. Although they are the most learned authorities, they cannot ascertain the essence of that music, and thus they bow down their heads and hearts."

nija-padabja-dalaih. . . vrajati tena vayam. . .

"As Krsna strolls through Vraja with His lotus- petal-like feet, marking the ground with the distinctive embIems of flag, thunderbolt, lotus and elephant goad, He relieves the distress the ground feels from the cows' hooves. As He plays His renowned flute, His body moves with the grace of an elephant. Thus we gopis, who become agitated by Cupid when Krsna playfully glances at us, stand as still as trees, unaware that our hair and garments are slackening."

mani-dharah. . . kvanita-venu-rava. . .

"Now Krsna is standing somewhere counting His cows on a string of gems. He wears a garland of tulasi flowers that bear the fragrance of His beloved, and He has thrown His arm over the shoulder of an affectionate cowherd boyfriend. As Krsna plays His flute and sings, the music attracts the black deer's wives, who approach that ocean of transcendental qualities and sit down beside Him. Just like us cowherd girls, they have given up all hope for happiness in family life.

kunda-dama. . . manda-vayuh. . .

"O sinless Yasoda, your darling child, the son of Maharaja Nanda, has festively enhanced His attire with a jasmine garland, and He is now playing along the Yamuna in the company of the cows and cowherd boys, amusing His dear companions. The gentle breeze honors Him with its soothing fragrance of sandalwood, while the various Upadevas, standing on all sides like panegyrists, offer their music, singing and gifts of tribute."

These verses are written in pairs (yugala). In srimad- Bhagavatam 10.35.3 the word "saha-siddhaih" means the goddesses and their husbands, the demigods, chanted the glories of Lord Krsna's flute music. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.35.8, in the words "adi-purusah ivacala- bhutih", the gopis, impelled by love, speculate: Perhaps Krsna is the all-powerful and all-opulent Supreme Personality of Godhead, the greatest of all." This statement is like that of srimad-Bhagavatam 10.29.32. In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.35.9 "Perhaps Krsna is Lord Visnu, who is manifest everywhere". In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.35.16 the word vraja-bhuvah" indicates the grass and other living entities manifest in the land of Vraja. Here the words "sayaman khura-todam" mean "the touch of Lord Krsna's feet is glorious because that touch relieves the distress of the ground. The newly sprouted grasses on the ground suffer when they are trampled by the cows' sets of four hooves." Gazing at Lord Krsna in sambhoga is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.22-23):

vatsalo vraja-gavam yad aga-dhro vandyamana-caranah pathi vrddhaih krtsna-go-dhanam upohya dinante gita-venur anugedita-kirtih utsavam srama-rucapi drsinam unnayan khura-rajas-churita-srak ditsayaiti suhrd-asisa esa devaki-jathara-bhur udu-rajah

"Out of great affection for the cows of Vraja, Krsna became the lifter of Govardhana Hill. At the end of the day, having rounded up all His own cows, He plays a song on His flute, while exalted demigods standing along the path worship His lotus feet and the cowherd boys accompanying Him chant His glories. His garland is powdered by the dust raised by the cows hooves, and His beauty, enhanced by His fatigue, creates an ecstatic festival for everyone's eyes. Eager to fulfill His friends' desires, Krsna is the moon arisen from the womb of mother Yasoda."

In this verse the word "devaki-jathara-bhuh" hints at Lord Krsna's name. The root of that hint of Lord Krsna's name is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.8.14):

prag ayam vasudevasya kvacij jatas tavatmajah

"For many reasons, this beautiful son of yours sometimes appeared previously as the son of Vasudeva. Therefore, those who are learned sometimes call this child Vasudeva."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.35.23 the word "devaki" should be understood to mean "yasoda". Yasoda was also known by the name Devaki. That Lord Krsna's mother sometimes has more than one name is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (2.7.10):

nabher asav rsabha asa sudevi-sunuh

"The Lord appeared as the son of Sudevi, the wife of King Nabhi, and was known as Rsabhadeva."

In this verse it is seen that Sudevi is another name for Queen Meru-devi. That Devaki is another name of Yasoda is seen in these words of Adi Purana:

dve namni nanda-bharyaya yaaoda devakiti ca

"Maharaja Nanda's wife had two names: Yasoda and Devaki."

Gazing at Lord Krsna in sambhoga is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.24-25):

mada-vighurnita-locana isat. . . yadu-patir dvirada-raja-viharah. . .

"As Krsna respectfully greets His well-wishing friends, His eyes roll slightly as if from intoxication. He wears a flower garland, and the beauty of His soft cheeks is accentuated by the brilliance of His golden earrings and the whiteness of His face, which has the color of a badara berry. With His cheerful face resembling the moon, lord of the night, the Lord of the Yadus moves with the grace of a regal elephant. Thus He returns in the evening, delivering the cows of Vraja from the heat of the day."

In this verse the word "vraja-gavam" refers to both the calves and the adult cows. It is then said in the next verse of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.35.26):

evam vraja-striyo rajan krsna-lilanugayatih remire 'hahsu tac-cittas tan-manaska mahodayah

"O King, thus during the daytime the women of Vrndavana took pleasure in continuously singing about the pastimes of Krsna, and those ladies' minds and hearts, absorbed in Him, were filled with great festivity."

Here the words "mahodayah remire" mean Joyful at Lord Krsna's return in the afternoon, they always celebrated a great festival". This verse was spoken by srila sukadwva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 398-400

Now dura-pravasa (separation when the beloved is far away) will be considered. This kind of separation is of three kinds: 1. bhavi (in the future), 2. bhavan (in the present), and 3. bhuta (in the past). This kind of separation in the future is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.39.13):

gopyas tas tad upasrutya babhuvur vyathita bhrsam rama-krsnau purim netum akruram vrajam agatam

"When the young gopis heard that Akrura had come to Vraja to take Krsna and Balarama to the city, they became extremely distressed."

In this situation the gopis lamented in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.39.19-30):

aho vidhatas tava na kvacid daya samyojya maitrya pranayena dehinah tams cakrtarthan viyunanksy aparthakam vikriditam te 'rbhaka-cestitam yatha

"O Providence, you have no mercy! You bring embodied creatures together in friendship and love and then senselessly separate them before they fulfill their desires. This whimsical play of yours is like a child's game."

yas tvam pradarsyasita-kuntalavrtam. . .

"Having shown us Mukunda's face, framed by dark locks and beautified by His fine cheeks, raised nose and gentle smiles, which eradicate all misery, you are now making that face invisible. This behavior of yours is not at all good."

kruras tvam akrura. . .

"O Providence, though you come here with the name Akrura, you are indeed cruel, for like a fool you are taking away what you once gave us--those eyes with which we have seen, even in one feature of Lord Madhudvisa's form, the perfection of your entire creation."

na nanda-sunuh ksana-bhanga-sauhrdah. . .

"Alas, Nanda's son, who breaks loving friendships in a second, will not even look directly at us. Forcibly brought under His control, we abandoned our homes, relatives, children and husbands just to serve Him, but He is always looking for new lovers."

sukham prabhata rajaniyam. . .

"The dawn following this night will certainly be auspicious for the women of Mathura. All their hopes will now be fulfilled, for as the Lord of Vraja enters their city, they will be able to drink from His lace the nectar of the smile emanating from the corners of His eyes."

tasam mukundah. . .

"O gopis, although our Mukunda is intelligent and very obedient to His parents, once He has fallen under the spell of the honeysweet words of the women of Mathura and been enchanted by their alluring, shy smiles, how will He ever return to us unsophisticated village girls?"

adya dhruvam tatra drso bhavisyate. . .

"When the Dasarhas, Bhojas, Andhakas, Vrsnis and Satvatas see the son of Devaki in Mathura, they will certainly enjoy a great festival for their eyes, as w ill all those who see Him traveling along the road to the city. After all, He is the darling of the goddess of fortune and the reservoir of all transcendental qualities."

maitad-vidhasyakarunasya. . .

"He who is doing this merciless deed should not be called Akrura. He is so extremely cruel that without even trying to console the sorrowful residents of Vraja, he is taking away Krsna, who is more dear to us than life itself."

anardra-dhir esah. . .

"Hard-hearted Krsna has already mounted the chariot, and now the foolish cowherds are hurrying after Him in their bullock carts. Even the elders are saying nothing to stop Him. Today fate is working against us."

nivarayamah. . .

"Let us directly approach Madhava and stop Him from going. What can our family elders and other relatives do to us? Now that fate is separating us from Mukunda, our hearts are already wretched, for we cannot bear to give up His association even for a fraction of a second."

yasyanuraga. . .

"When He brought us to the assembly of the rasa dance, where we enjoyed His affectionate and charming smiles, His delightful secret talks, His playful glances and His embraces, we passed many nights as if they were a single moment. O gopis, how can we possibly cross over the insurmountable darkness of His absence?"

yo 'hnah ksaye vrajam ananta-sakhah. . .

"How can we exist without Ananta's friend Krsna, who in the evening would return to Vraja in the company of the cowherd boys, His hair and garland powdered with the dust raised by the cows' hooves? As He played His flute, He would captivate our minds with His smiling sidelong glances."

Then it is said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.39.34 and 37):

gopyas ca dayitam krsnam anuvrajyanu ranjitah pratyadesam bhagavatah kanksantyas cavatasthire

"[With His glances] Lord Krsna somewhat pacified the gopis, and they also followed behind for some time. Then, hoping He would give them some instruction, they stood still."

ta nirasa nivavrtur govinda-vinivartane visoka ahani ninyur gayantyah priya-cestitam

"The gopis then turned back, without hope that Govinda would ever return to them. Full of sorrow, they began to spend their days and nights chanting about the pastimes of their beloved."

In this verse the word "visokah" means various kinds of sorrow". As they sang of Lord Krsna's pastimes, it was as if those pastimes were directly manifest before them and they saw those pastimes with their own eyes. Here the words "ahani ninyuh" means "in this way they passed the day and the night". These two verses were spoken by srila sukadeva

Gosvami.

Dura-pravasa manifested in the past is seen in these words spoken by Lord Krsna in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.46.4):

ta man-manaska mat-prana mad-arthe tyakta-daihikah. . .

"The minds of those gopis are always absorbed in Me, and their very lives are veer devoted to Me. For My sake they have abandoned everything related to their bodies."

In this kind of pravasa there are written letters between the lover and beloved and there are also messages orally repeated by a messnger. The messengers here may be Lord

Balarama, Uddhava, or other friends of Lord Krsna. An example of such a messenger is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.3):

tam prasrayenavanatah su-sat-krtam sa-vrida-haseksana-sunrtadibhih

"Bowing their herads in humility, the gopis duly honored Uddhava with their shy, smiling glances and pleasing words. They took him to a quiet place, seated him, and comfortably began to question him, for they recognized him to be a messenger from Krsna, the master of the goddess of fortune."

Although in the past they had kept everything secret, when Uddhava arrived, the distraught gopis abandoned all shyness. This is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.40.9):

iti gopyo hi govinde gata-vak-kaya-manasah krsna-dute samayate uddhave tyakta-laukikah

"Thus speaking, the gopis, whose words, bodies, and minds were fully dedicated to Lord Govinda, put aside all their regular work now that Krsna's messenger, Uddhava, had arrived among them."

This is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.3):

aprcchann

"Bowing their herads in humility, the gopis duly honored Uddhava with their shy, smiling glances and pleasing words. They took him to a quiet place, seated him, and comfortably began to question him, for they recognized him to be a messenger from Krsna, the master of the goddess of fortune."

In the sequence of verses in srimad-Bhagavatam this verse precedes srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.9 quoted above. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 402

Another example of the gopis greeting a messenger from Lord Krsna is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.65.9):

gopyo hasantyah papracchu rama-sandarsanadrtah kaccid aste sukham krsnah pura-stri-jana-vallabhah

"Honored to have the personal audience of Lord Balarama, the young gopis smiled and asked Him: `Is Krsna, the darling of city women, living happily."

In this verse the word "hasantyah" means with smiles mixed with love and anger, smiles that mock Lord Krsna". This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 403-413

In Uddhava's presence the gopis spoke wildly. This is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.11):

kacin madhukaram drstva dhyayanti krsna-sangamam priya-prasthapitam dutam kalpayitvedam abravit

"One of the gopis, while meditating on Her previous association with Krsna, saw a honeybee before Her and imagined it to be a messenger sent by Her beloved. Thus She spoke as follows."

In this verse the word "kacit" (a certain gopi) refers to sri Radha". This is explained in the Vasana-bhasya commentary. This truth is also seen in the Dasama-tippani commentary of srila Sanatana Gosvami. In the following eigth verses (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.12-19), angry sri Radha speaks wildly. She says (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.12):

madhupa kitava-bandho. . .

"O honeybee, O friend of a cheater, don't touch My feet with your whiskers, which are smeared with the kunkuma that rubbed onto Krsna's garland when it was crushed hy the breasts of a rival lover! Let Krsna satisfy the women of Mathura. One who sends a messenger like you will certainly be ridiculed in the Yadus' assembly."

Then She explains the reason for Her anger in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.13):

sakrd adhara-sudham. . .

"After making us drink the enchanting nectar of His lips only once, Krsna suddenly abandoned us, just as you might quickly abandon some flowers. How is, then, that Goddess Padma willingly serves His lotus feet? Alas! The answer must certainly be that her mind has been stolen away by His deceitful words."

In this verse sri Radha criticizes Her rival, Goddess Padma. In the next verse She rejects the words of praise brought by the messenger. She says (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.14):

kim iha. . .

"O bee, why do you sing here so much about the Lord of the Yadus, in front of us homeless people? These topics are old news to us. Better you sing about that friend of Arjuna in front of His new girlfriends, the burning desire in whose breasts He has now relieved. Those ladies will surely give you the charity you are begging."

In this verse the word "vijaya" means "Lord Krsna, who brings all others under His control", "sakha" means "your friend", "sakhinam" means of the women of Mathura", and "prasangah" means "songs that bring one under their control". The gopis here say: "These songs are faulty because they make us attached to Krsna. Even if you take that fault away, these topics still make us wretched and miserable. This proves that Krsna is completely merciless." The gopis say in the next verse (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.47.15):

divi bhuvi. . .

"In heaven, on earth, or in the subterranean sphere, what woman is unavailable to Him? He simply arches His eyebrows and smiles with deceptive charm, and they all become His. The supreme goddess herself worships the dust of His feet, so what is our position in comparison? But at least those who are wretched can chant His name, Uttamahsloka."

In this verse the word "api ca" means nevertheless", "krpana-pakse" means "wretched persons like us", "and "uttama-sloka-sabdah" means the sound of Lord Krsna's name may be present". Here the gopis hint: "Because He will not allow us to see Him, He is not merciful, and because He is not merciful, He should not be called by the name Uttamasloka". Thinking the bee's gentle humming to be a host of flattering words from Lord Krsna, sri Radha says in the next verse (srimad- Bhagavatam 10.47.16):

visrja sirasi. . .

"Keep your head off My feet! I know what you're doing. You expertly learned diplomacy from Mukunda, and now you come as His messenger with flattering words. But he abandoned those who fro His sake alone gave up their children, husbands, and all other relations. He's simply ungrateful. Why should I make up with Him now?"

With love and anger criticizing Lord Krsna, sri Radha admitShe cannot stop talking of Him. Then She finds fault with Him. She says (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.17):

mrgayur iva. . .

"Like a hunter He cruelly shot the king of the monkeys with arrows. Because He was conquered by a woman, He disfigured another woman who came to Him with lusty desires. And even after consuming the gifts of Bali Maharaja, He bound him up with ropes as if he were a crow. So let us give up all frindship with this dark-compexioned boy, even if we can't give up talking about Him."

Here the word "asita" means "Krsna, who is black because of all these misdeeds" and "sakhyaih" means with loving friendship". Again and again She affirms that Krsna should be rejected. She again finds fault with Krsna when She speaks the next verse of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.18):

yad-anucarita. . .

"To hear about the pastimes that Krsna regularly performs is nectar fro the ears. For those who relish just a single drop of that nectar, even once, their dedication to material duality is ruined. Many such persons have suddenly given up their wretched homes and families and, themselves becoming wretched, traveled here to Vrndavana to wander about like birds, begging for their living."

In this verse the word "karna-piyusa" means these topics may be nectar for the ears, but they are not nectar for the heart". They are sweet only in the beginning. The words "vidhuta-dvandva-dharma vinastah" mean at the end these topics make one almost unconscious". Iha" means "in Vrndavana", "vihangah" means "parrots and other birds", "bhiksu- caryam caranti" means "they follow the activities of the sannyasis, which means they ignore their material bodies and other material things. It is seen that they act in this way". That is the meaning here.

Then sri Radha laments in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.19):

vayam rtam iva. . .

"Faithfully taking His deceitful words as true, we became just like the black deer's foolish wives, who trust the cruel hunter's song. Thus we repeatedly felt the sharp pain of lust cause by the touch of His nails. O messenger, please talk about something besides Krsna."

Then, fearing that Her harsh and angry words spoken in these eight verses will chase the messenger away, sri Radha tries to end Her quarrel with Lord Krsna. She says in the next verse of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.20):

priya-sakha. . .

"O friend of My dear one, has My beloved sent you here again? I should honor you, friend, so please choose whatever boon you wish. But why have you came back to take us to Him, whose conjugal love is so difficult to give up? After all, gentle bee, His consort is the goddess sri, as she is always with Him, staying upon His chest."

With words of crooked irony sri Radha speaks the second half of this verse. Here the word "dvandva" means amorous pastimes"". The reason amorous pastimes with Krsna are difficult to give up is given in the word "satatam" (Goddess Laksmi always on Lord Krsna's chest). Here, speaking words of love and anger, sri Radha imagines that the srivatsa line on Lord Krsna's chest is actually Goddess Laksmi. At the end of this passage sri Radha humbly speaks these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.21):

api bata. . .

"O Uddhava! It is indeed regrettable that Krsna resides in Mathura. Does He remember His father's household affairs and His friends, the cowherd boys? O great soul! Does He ever talk about us, His maidservants? When will He lay on our heads His aguru-scented hand? "

The messenger (Uddhava) sent by Lord Krsna consoled the gopis in two ways: 1. by praising them, and 2. by speaking Lord Krsna's message to them. He praised them in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.23):

aho yuyam sma purnarthah. . .

"Certainly you gopis are all-successful and are universally worshiped because you have dedicated your minds in this way to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vasudeva."

Uddhava's repeating Lord Krsna's message is discussed in Krsna-sandarbha (Anuccheda 155)> That message is given in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.29):

bhavatinam viyogo me. . .

"The Supreme Lord said: You are never actually separated from Me, for I am the soul of all creation. Just as the elements of nature - ether, air, fire, water, and earth - are present in every created thing, so I am present within everyuone's mind, life-air, and senses, and also within the physical elements and the modes of material nature."

These words describe Lord Krsna's eternal pastimes with the people of Vraja in the eternal Vrndavana in another manifestation (in the spiritual sky). These words also describe the meditational process of jnana-yoga, by which the people of this world may obtain relief from material sufferings. However, the teaching of jnana-yoga do not bring peace to the gopis. Lord Krsna then explains in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.34):

yat tv aham bhavatinam vai. . .

"But the actual reason why I, the beloved object of your sight, have stayed far away from you is that I wanted to intensify your meditation upon Me and thus draw your minds closer to Me."

Lord Krsna also explains in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.37):

ya maya kridata ratryam. . .

"Although some gopis had to remain in the cowherd village and so could not join the rasa dance to sport with Me at night in the forest, they were nonetheless fortunate. Indeed, they attained Me by thinking of My glorious pastimes."

Further explaining the meaning of the words He spoke in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.34, Lord Krsna says in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.41):

api smaratha nah sakhyah svanam artha-cikirsaya gatan. . .

"My dear girlfriends, do you still remember Me? It was for My relatives' sake that I stayed away so long, intent on destroying my enemies."

By describing his purpose (in staying way) Lord Krsna's intention to increase the gopis' feelings of happiness and love for Him. This is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.47.53):

tatas tah krsna-sandesair vyapeta-viraha-jvarah uddhavam pujayam cakrur jnatvatmanam adhoksajam

"Lord Krsna's messages having relieved their fever of separation, the gopis then worshipped Uddhava, recognizing him as nondifferent from their Lord, Krsna."

In this verse the word "vyapeta-viraha-jvarah" means "by hearing of Lord Krsna's return and by hearing of other topics also, the gopis became pacified". In this context the gopis asked (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.40):

kaccid gadagrajah saumya. . .

"Gentle Uddhava, is the elder brother of Gada now bestowing on the city women the pleasure that actually belongs to us? We suppose those ladies worship Him with generous glances full of affectionate, shy smiles."

In srimad-Bhagavatam 10.47.53 the word "atmanam" means "because he was a messenger sent by Krsna, Uddhava was able to know what was in Lord Krsna's heart", and adhoksajam" means "the gopis thought Uddhava was Lord Krsna Himself". Because they thought he was Lord Krsna, the gopis worshiped Uddhava (uddhavam pujayam cakruh). The idea that Uddhava was Lorrd Krsna Himself is also seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.46.14):

tam agatam samagamya krsnasyanucaram priyam nandah pritah parisvajya vasudeva-dhiyarcayat

"As sson as Uddhava arrived in Nanda Maharaja's home, Nanda came forward to meet him. The cowherd king embraced him in great happiness and worshipped him as nondifferent from Lorrd Vasudeva."

This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvnamni.

Anucchedas 414-421

Lord Balarama's carrying a message from Lord Krsna in Dvaraka is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.65.16):

sankarsanas tah krsnasya sandesair hrdayangamaih santvayam asa bhagavan nananunaya-kovidah

"The Supreme Loord Balarama, the attractoir of all, being expert at various kinds of conciliation, consoled the gopis by relaying to them the confidential messages Lord Krsna had sent with Him. These messages deeply touched the gopis' hearts."

After this message the gopis enjoyed sambhoga pastimes with Lord Krsna, directlyseeing Him at Kuruksetra. Those pastimes are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.39):

gopyas ca krsnam upalabhya cirad abhistam yat-preksane drsisu paksma-krtam sapanti drgbhir hrdi-krtam alam parirabhya sarvas tad-bhavam apur api nitya-yujam durapam

"While gazing at their beloved Krsna, the young gopis used to condemn the creator of their eyelids (which would momentarily block their vison of Him). Now, seeing Krsna again after such a long separation, with their eyes they took Him into their hearts, and there they embraced Him to their full satisfaction. In this way they became totally absorbed in ecstatic meditation on Him, although those who constantly practice mystic yoga find such absorption difficult to achieve."

After in this way describing the condition of the gopis' hearts, srimad-Bhagavatam explains the gopis' ecstatic love for Lord Krsna in these words (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.82.40):

bhagavams tas tatha-bhuta vivikta upasangatah aslisyanamayam prstva prahasann idam abravit

"The Supreme Lord approached the gopis in a secluded place as they stood in their ecstatic trance. After embracing each of them and inquiring about their well-being, He laughed and spoke as follows."

Agitating the gopis' hearts, Lord Krsna made the gopis forgive his offenses. His smile was glorious. Then He consoled the gopi with these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.41):

api smaratha nah sakhyah svanam artha-cikirsaya gatams cirayatan chatru-paksa-ksapana-cetasah

"My dear girlfriends, do you still remember Me? It was for My relatives' sake that I stayed away so long, intent on destroying my enemies."

In this verse Lord Krsna says: "Please do not remember Me with anger. Then, to show that He is indeed faultless, Lord Krsna says: "It was for My relatives' sake that I stayed away so long, intent on destroying my enemies." Here the word "svanam" means "of My father, the king of Vraja, and also of My kinsmen, the Yadavas". Thess words may also hint: "These two sides of the family (Krsna's kinsmen in Vraja and Dvaraka) were both part of the Yadava dynasty". Then Lord Krsna explains why He was so long in returning to Vraja. He says: "I was intent on destroying my enemies". These words hint: "From now only you will enjoyMy company (sambhoga) without interruption".

Fearing the gopis may remain dissatisfied at heart, Lord Krsna comforted them by explaining that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the ultimate independent controller of everyone. He said (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.82.42):

apy avadhyayathasman svid akrta-jnavisankaya nunam bhutani bhagavan yunakti vinuyakti ca

"Do you perhaps think I'm ungrateful and thus hold Me in contempt? After all, it is the Supreme Lord who brings living beings together and then separates them."

Fearing that the gopis might reply: "You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead", Lord Krsna explains: Your separation from Me gave birth to great love for Me in your hearts. This is not against your actual desire." Lord Krsna told them in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.44):

mayi bhaktir hi bhutanam amrtatvaya kalpate distya yad asin mat-sneho bhavatinam mad-apanah

"Rendering devotional service to Me qualifies any living being for eternal life. But by your good fortune you have developed a special loving attitude toward Me, by which you have attained Me."

sridhara Svami comments on this verse:

"This verse means: `Rendering devotional service to Me qualifies any living being for eternal life. But by your good fortune you have developed a special loving attitude toward Me." The question may be asked: `Why is this so?' The answer is given here in the words: `You have attained Me'."

Then, in order to console the gopis and reassure them they they indeed have attained His association, Lord Krsna explains to them that because He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead manifest in a humanlike form. He explains to the gopis that He is present everywhere and He is the shelter in which everything rests. He tells them in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.45-46):

aham hi sarva-bhutanam. . .

"Dear ladies, I am the beginning and end of all created beings and exist both within and without them, just as the elements ether, water, earth, air, and fire are the beginning and end of all material objects and exist both within and without them." "In this way all created beings reside within the basic elements of creation, while the spirit souls pervade the creation, remaining in their own true identity. You should see both of these - the material creation and the self - as manifest within Me, the imperishable Supreme Truth."

In the description of the Lord's Damodara pastimes it is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.9.13-14):

na cantar na bahir yasya. . .

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead has no beginning and no end, no exterior and no interior, no front and no rear. In other words, He is all-pervading. Because He is not under the influence of the element of time, for Him there is no difference between past, present and future. He exists in His own transcendental form at all times. Being absolute, beyond relativity, He is free from distinctions between cause and effect, although He is the cause and effect of everything. That unmanifested person, who is beyond the perception of the senses, had now appeared as a human child, and mother Yasoda, considering Him her own ordinary child, bound Him to the wooden mortar with a rope."

In these two verses are described some of Lord Krsna's eternal pastimes in Vrndavana with the people of Vraja, pastimes also revealed in the Krsna-sandarbha, Anucchedas 174-175. Those pastimes are also considered here. The gopis were able to see Lord Krsna as the Supreme. That is described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.47):

adhyatma-siksaya. . .

"Having thus been instructed by Krsna in spiritual matters, the gopis were freed from all tinges of false ego because of their incessant meditation upon Him. And with their deepening absorption in Him, they came to understand Him fully." In this verse the word "atma" refers to Lord Krsna, and the word "siksaya" means "by His instruction". Their bodies old and worn by meditating on Lord Krsna in the mood of separation, the gopis then could see Lord Krsna in that way. Some thinkers interpret srimad-Bhagavatam 10.82.45 in this way: "According to ordinary perception it seems that Lord Krsna is here preaching the philosophy of Brahman, but that philosophy is not the true meaning of His words here. When Rukmi was disfigured Lord Balarama preached to sri Rukmini what also seemed to be the philosophy of Brahman. However, because Rukmini was directly enjoying pastimes with Lord Krsna, that preaching of Lord Balarama's was only a specific pastime meant to look like the activities of an ordinary person in this world. In the same way Lord Krsna's preaching of this philosophy to the gopis is also only a pastime. Actually the gopis yearned to enjoy pastimes with Lord Krsna directly in His spiritual form. This is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.82.48):

ahus ca te nalina-nabha padaravindam

"Dear Lord whose navel is just like a lotus flower, Your lotus feet are the only dhelter for those who have fallen into the deep well of material existence. Your feet are worshiped and meditated upon by great mystic yogis and highly learned philosophers. We wish that these lotus feet may also be awakened within our hearts, although we are ordinary persons engaged in household affairs."

In this verse the gopis say: "Dear Lord whose navel is just like a lotus flower, may Your lotus feet be awakened within the hearts of us, who are overcome by always meditating on You. Following Your instructions, the peaceful-hearted kings of yoga meditate on Your feet in their hearts." An explanation of this verse may be seen in the Krsna-sandarbha, Anuccheda 170. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 422

In this way the truth of sambhoga, which consists of seeing, touching, and conversing with Lord Krsna, is revealed. Lord Krsna stayed at Kuruksetra for three months. Then He and the gopis were again separated. After that there were not again separatyion between them. After that they enjoyed sambhoga pastimes together. The conclusion of these pastimes is described in the following words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.83.1):

tathanugrhya bhagavan gopinam sa gurur gatih

"Thus Lord Krsna, the spiritual master of the gopis and the very purpose of their life, showed them His mercy. He then met with Yudhisthira and all His other relatives and inquired from them about their welfare."

This verse explains that the gopis attained the desire they expressed in srimad-Bhagavatam 10.82.48. This is seen in this verse, which explains that Lord Krsna gave His mercy (anugrhya) to them. This verse also affirms that they attained Lord Krsna, who is their eternal destination (gatih). This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anuccheda 423

All of this is revealed in a passage from the Padma Purana, Uttara-khanda, a passage quoted in Krsna-sandarbha, Anuccheda 176. In that pasasage it is said that Lord Krsna left Dvaraka and returned to Vrndavana. There, visible to everyone, even the ordinary people of this world, He enjoyed pastimes for two months. After that Lord Krsna gave the people of Vrndavana eternal samyoga pastimes with Him, although those pastimes were not visible to ordinary people. Lord Krsna clearly exlained all this to Uddhava in srimad-Bhagavatam's Eleventh Canto. There Lord Krsna sais (srimad-Bhagavatam 11.12.10-11):

ramena sardham mathuram pranite. . .

"The residents of Vrndavana, headed by the gopis, were always completely attached to Me with deepest love. Therefore, when My uncle Akrura brought My brother Balarama and Me to the city of Mathura, the residents of Vrndavana suffered extreme mental distress because of separation from Me and could not find any other source of happiness."

tas tah ksapah. . .

"Dear Uddhava, all of those nights that the gopis spent with Me, their most dearly beloved, in the land of Vrndavana seemed to them to pass in less than a moment. Bereft of My association, however, the gopis felt that those same nights dragged on forever, as if each night were equal to a day of Brahma."

After that time there was no further separation of Lord Krsna and the people of Vrndavana. After that time the people of Vrndavana always enjoyed the bliss of Lord Krsna's association. Lord Krsna described this truth in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (11.12.12-13):

ta navidan mayy anusanga-baddha-dhiyah. . .

"My dear Uddhava, just as great sages in yoga trance merge into self realization like rivers merging into the ocean, and are thus not aware of material names and forms, similarly the gopis were so completely attached to Me within their minds that they could not think of their own bodies, or of this world, or of their future lives. Their entire consciousness was simply bound up in Me. "All those hundreds of thousands of gopis, understanding Me to be their most charming lover and ardently desiring Me in that way, were unaware of my actual position. Yet by intimately associating with Me, the gopis attained Me, the Supreme Absolute Truth."

In these verses the word "anu" means "after the great separation", and "sanga-baddha-dhiyah" means "their hearts were overcome with bliss", and navidan" means "they were bewildered with joy". In that state it was as if they had become onbe with Lord Krsna. An example to explain that state is given here in the phrase beginning with the words "just as great sages in yoga trance". A different interpretation of srimad-Bhagavatam 11.12.13 has already been given in Krsna-sandarbha, Anuccheda 177. What the gopis attained (prapuh) is described in this verse. It is briefly described there. There it is said: "The gopis attained Me, the Supreme Brahman, who am named Krsna." Here Lord Krsna hints: "Unaware of My true nature, that I am eternally the object of their love, the gopis attained Me as their paramour (jaram). Then, desiring Me as their husband, they eventually attained Me as their husband (ramanam)." In this way it is seen that the gopis' relationship with Lord Krsna after some time becomes parakiyabhasa (the faint reflection of the love a girl has for her paramour). All this is explained in that passage of Krsna-sandarbha, Anuccheda 177. My glorious master, srila Rupa Gosvami explains in Ujjvala-nilamani (Nayika- bheda-prakarana, Text 3):

nesta yad angini rase kavibhih parodha tad gokulambuja-drsam kulam antarena asamsaya rasa-vidher avitaritanam kamsarina rasika-mandala-sekharena

"The lotus-eyed gopis of Gokula descended to this material world to enjoy amorous pastimes with Krsna, the crest jewel of those expert at relishing transcendental mellows, and the enemy of King Kamsa. Except for those gopis, learned scholars and philosophers do not consider amorous affairs between a married woman and a paramour to be good or auspicious."

The scriptures explain that this was the activity at the time of Lord Krsna's descent to this world. The conclusion of all this is found in srila Rupa Gosvami's Lalita-Madhava (7.18), where it is said:

dagdham hanta dadhanaya vapuh. . .

"O moon-faced one, My dear friend ahs again come to Me. My desire to see Him scorched My body and wounded My heart with a monsoohn of pain. My life-breeath yearns to meet Him in Vrndavana and enjoy pastimes with Him in a cottage by the Yamuna's shore."

When the mistaken idea that He is their paramour is destroyed, then the gopis enjoy the full bliss of perfect sambhoga pastimes with Lord Krsna. In this way vipralam,bha is divided into four parts and sambhoga is also divided into four parts. In sambhoga are many different pastimes, such as lila- cauryam (playful theft), sanganam (singing and music), rasa (the rasa dance), jala-krida (water pastimes), and vrndavana- vihara (pastimes in Vrndavana forest). An example of playful theft is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.22.9):

tasam vasamsy upadaya nipam aruhya satvarah. . .

"Taking the girls' garments, He quickly climbed to the top of a kadamba tree. Then, as He laughed loudly and His companions also laughed, He addressed the girls jokingly."

The meaning of this verse is clear. This verse was spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

An example of singing and music is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.9):

kacit samam mukundena. . .

"One gopi, joining Lord Mukunda in His singing, sang pure melodious tones that rose harmoniously above His. Krsna was pleased and showed great appreciation for her performance, saying `Excellent! Excellent!' Then another gopi repeated the same melody, but in a special metrical pattern, and Krsna praised her also."

Another example of singing and music is seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.34.20-21):

kadacid atha govindo ramas cadbhuta-vikramah vijahratur vraje ratryam madhya-gau vraja-yositam

"Once Lord Govinda and Lord Rama, the performers of wonderful feats, were playing in the forest at night with the young girls of Vraja.

upagiyamanau lalitam stri janair baddha-sauhrdaih sv-alankrtanuliptangau sragvinau virajo-'mbarau

"Krsna and Balarama wore flower garlands and spotless garments, and Their limbs were beautifully decorated and anointed. The women sang Their glories in a charming way, bound to Them by affection."

In general the Holi festival is celebrated in this way. Thus, to celebrate the Holi festival, Lord Krsna and His brother, Lord Balarama, enjoyed singing and many other pastimes with a host of girls in Vraja. This pastime is also described in the Bhavisya Purana, Uttara-khanda. Even today, the people of India celebrate the Holi festival in this way. It is said in that passage of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.34.22):

nisa-mukham manayantav uditodupa-tarakam. . .

"The two Lords praised the nightfall, signaled by the rising of the moon and the appearance of stars, a lotus-scented breeze and bees intoxicated by the fragrance of jasmine flowers."

The bliss of this festival, which occurs on the full-moon day of the month of Phalguna, after the winter has ended, is described in this verse. Lord Krsna enjoyed this festival with His joyful friend Lord Balarama. In some texts of srimad- Bhagavatam 10.34.20 the passage reads "vane ratryam" instead of "vraje ratryam". In this reading the forest is described as the forest of Vraja. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

Anucchedas 425-427

The rasa dance pastime is seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.33.2):

tatrarabhata govindo rasa-kridam anuvrataih. . .

"There on the Yamuna's banks Lord Govinda then began the pastime of the rasa dance in the company of those jewels among women, the faithful gopis, who joyfully linked their arms together."

The Lord's water-pastimes are seen in these words of srimad- Bhagavatam (10.33.23):

so 'mbhasy alam yuvatibhih parisicyamanah. . .

"My dear King, in the water Krsna found Himself being splashed on all sides by the laughing gopis, who looked at Him with love. As the demigods worshiped Him by showering flowers from their airplanes, the self-satisfied Lord took pleasure in playing like the king of the elephants."

Lord Krsna's pastimes in Vrndavana forest are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.33.24):

tatas ca krsnopavane jala-sthala- prasuna-gandhanila justa-dik-tate. . .

"Then the Lord strolled through a small forest on the bank of the Yamuna. This forest was filled to its limits with breezes carrying the fragrances of all the flowers growing on the land and in the water. Followed by His entourage of bees and beautiful women, Lord Krsna appeared like an intoxicated elephant with his she-elephants."

The meaning of these verses is clear. These verses were spoken by srila sukadeva Gosvami.

The Lord's amorous pastimes with the gopis are seen in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.29.46):

bahu-prasara-parirambha-karalakoru-nivi. . .

"There Krsna threw His arms around the gopis and embraced them. He aroused Cupid in the beautiful young ladies of Vraja by touching their hands, hair, thighs, belts, and breasts, by playfully scratching them with His fingernails, and also by joking with them, glancing at them, and laughing with them. In this way the Lord enjoyed pastimes."

At the conclusion of the descriptioon of Lord Krsna's amorous pastimes in the rasa dance it is said in srimad- Bhagavatam (10.33.25):

evam sasankamsu-virajita nisah. . .

"Although the gopis were firmly attached to Lord Krsna, whose desires are always fulfilled, the Lord was not internally affected by any mundane sex desire. Still, to perform His pastimes the Lord took advantage of all those moonlit autumn nights, which inspire poetic descriptions of transcendental affairs."

Lord Krsna's pastimes with sri Radha, who is thhe crest jewel of all fortunate girls, are described in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.27-34):

kasyah padani caitani yataya nanda-sununa amsa-nyasta-prakosthayah karenoh karina yatha

"Here we see the footprints of some gopi who must have been walking along with the son of Nanda Maharaja. He must have put His arm on Her shoulder, just as an elephant rests His trunk on the shoulder of an accompanying she-elephant."

Look, we can't see Her footprints over here! It's obvious that the grass and sprouts were hurting the tender soles of Her feet, and so the lover lifted up His beloved."

"Just see how in this place dear Krsna collected flowers for His beloved. Here He has left the impression of only the front part of His feet because He was standing on His toes to reach the flowers."

"Certainly Krsna sat down here with His girlfriend to arrange Her hair. The lusty boy must have made a crown for that Iusty girI out of the flowers He had collected."

In this way sri Radha's friends and rivals describe the pastimes of sri sri Radha-Krsna. It is also said in srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.26):

vilokyartah samabruvan

"The gopis began following Krsna's path, as shown by His many footprints, but when they saw that these prints were thoroughly intermixed with those of His dearmost consort, they became perturbed and spoke as follows."

All the gopis spoke these words. Filled with lonmgings, all the gopis wandered (in the forest). The passage quoted above (srimad-Bhagavatam 10.30.27-34) was spoken by the vraja-gopis.

The pastimes of sri Radha had already been hinted at in these words of srimad-Bhagavatam (10.30.11-12):

apy ena-patni. . .

"O friend, wife of the deer, has Lord Acyuta been here with His beloved, bringing great joy to your eyes? Indeed, blowing this way is the fragrance of His garland of kunda flowers, which was smeared with the kunkuma from the breasts of His girlfriend when He embraced Her. "O trees, we see that you are bowing down. When the younger brother of Rama walked by here, followed by the intoxicated bees swarming around the tulasi manjaris decorating His garland, did He acknowledge your obeisances with His affectionate glances? He must have been resting His arm on the shoulder of His beloved and carrying a lotus flower in His free hand."
