Skanda Purāṇa

The Complete Vaiṣṇava-khaṇḍa

Complete Sanskrit · Roman · English edition

9 māhātmyas · 221 chapters · 11,805 detected verse markers

About this edition

This edition presents the complete Vaiṣṇava-khaṇḍa of the Skanda Purāṇa in nine māhātmyas and 221 chapters. Every chapter contains the full Sanskrit reading text, direct Roman transliteration, and the complete G. V. Tagare English translation. The web reader and this download consume the same checksum-controlled corpus.

Textual control

The Sanskrit is controlled chapter by chapter from Sanskrit Wikisource, with exact page and revision provenance. Romanization is generated directly from the displayed Devanagari.

English witness

The English is G. V. Tagare's complete translation of the Vaiṣṇava-khaṇḍa. Each chapter is controlled against its published web witness and the archival publication witness.

English translation

Note: Yajñavarāha refers to the Boar-incarnation of Viṣṇu is identified with the Vedic sacrifice. Some Vedic scholar composed a poetic description of the Divine Boar in Yajña -terminology. It was so beautiful that it was adopted by Purāṇa -writers (e.g. BdP I.i.5.9-23, VāP I.6.16-21, BmP 213.33-42, MtP 248.67-73), Smṛti writers like Viṣṇu 1.3-9 and even by Śaṅkara in his Com. on Viṣṇu-sahasranāma v. 118 on Yajñāṅga .

1. In the holy forest called Naimiṣa [1] great sages, foremost of whom was Śaunaka , performed a Satra (‘Sacrificial Session’) of twelve years’ duration for the protection of the world.

2. A sage of great intellect, named Ugraśravas , [2] a narrator of (sacred) tales, son of Romaharṣaṇa and a disciple of Vyāsa , approached them.

3. Duly honoured and adored by them, Sūta , the most excellent one among Paurāṇikas ('persons well-versed in, mythological tradition'), narrated that divine Purāṇa named Skanda .

4. He narrated in detail the account of creation, annihilation (of the universe), genealogy, histories of dynasties of kings, lineage of sages and the details of Manvantaras . [3]

5. On hearing the stories of the greatness and powers of the holy places those leading sages spoke to Sūta of perfect self-control with a desire to listen to the stories.

The sages said :

6. O omniscient son of Romaharṣaṇa, well-versed in the Purāṇic lore, we wish to hear about the greatness of the prominent mountains on the surface of the earth. O highly fortunate sage, tell us what are the important mountains.

Śrī Sūta replied :

7. Formerly on the banks of the river Jāhnavī (i.e. Gaṅgā) I asked Vyāsa, the most excellent one among great sages, this very question. He, the most excellent one of my preceptors, said to me:

Vyāsa said :

8-13. Formerly, in the divine Yuga , O Sūta, Nārada , the most excellent one among sages, went to the peak of Sumeru which is extremely resplendent on account of different kinds of gems and jewels. In its middle he saw the vast and divinely brilliant abode of Brahmā . In the region to the north of it he saw an excellent Pippala tree (holy fig tree). It was a thousand Yojanas high and twice that in extent. At its root he saw a heavenly Maṇḍapa (hall) equipped (i.e. decked) with different kinds of gems and jewels. It was adorned with thousands of ruby-columns. There were clusters of necklaces of Svastika design made of lapis lazuli , pearls and other jewels. It was rendered splendid by means of divine Toraṇas ('ornamental arched doorways'). There were many kinds of birds and animals made of splendid gems and jewels of all the nine kinds. It had a big entrance made of topaz. The Gopura (the minaret or a lofty towered gate at the gateway) had seven storeys. It was rendered splendid by means of two panels of doors made of brilliant diamonds.

14. After entering it he saw a divine pearl-set platform within. The great sage climbed on to the lofty dais set with lapis lazuli .

15. In its middle he saw an exceedingly lustrous throne that was unequalled (in workmanship) and very high. It had eight brilliant legs and was studded with pearls.

16. In its middle there was a divine lotus lovely and splendid with a thousand petals. It was white and resembled a thousand moons in beauty and splendour. It sparkled exceedingly with its pericarp and filaments.

17. In its middle he saw a beautiful being in the form of a man as huge as the Kailāsa mountain. He had a brilliance of ten thousand full moons. He was seated within the lotus.

18. He had four arms and highly magnificent limbs. He had the splendid face of a boar. The excellent Puruṣa had a conch and a discus (in two hands) and held (the other two) in gestures of granting boons and immunity from fear.

19. He wore yellow garments. The Lord with long eyes resembling lotuses had a gentle face resembling the full moon. His lotus-like face had the fragrance of incense.

20. The sound of Sāman hymns issued from him. He was an embodiment of Yajñas . 1 The wooden sacrificial ladle (Sruc) constituted his snout. The Sruva (ladle) was his nose. He resembled the [3] Milk Ocean. A crown enhanced the brilliant splendour of his face.

21. He had the Śrīvatsa mark on his chest. He shone with a splendid white sacred thread. His strong and broad chest projected forward shining brightly with the splendour of the Kaustubha jewel.

22. He was bedecked in divine ornaments of gold studded with excellent gems and jewels. He was as sparkling as the autumnal cloud overspread with clusters of lightning streaks.

23. With the sole of his left foot placed on a footstool he constantly shone brilliantly with ornaments like bangles, armlets, bracelets and ear-rings.

24. Day and night, he was attended upon by Brahmā and the leading sages, Vasiṣṭha , Atri , Mārkaṇḍeya , Bhṛgu and many others.

25-26. He was served and attended upon by Indra and other Guardians of the Quarters and groups of Gandharvas and celestial damsels. Nārada bowed down to the Lord of Devas and approached him. He eulogized Dharādhara ('the Uplifter of the Earth') with excellent passages from the Upaniṣads . Extremely delighted Nārada stood near the Lord.

27-29. In the meantime there arose the sound of the divine Dundubhi drum. Thereafter there came Goddess Earth accompanied by her friends. She was exceedingly brilliant with her robes in the form of the oceans abounding in gems and jewels. She bent under the weight of her breasts in the form of Sumeru and Mandara . She was dark in complexion like fresh leaves of Dūrvā grass. She was adorned in all ornaments.

30-33. She was accompanied by her friends Ilā and Piṅgalā . Then (Goddess) Earth scattered at the feet of Lord Śrī Varāha a (big) collection of flowers brought by them. Then she bowed down to the Lord of the Chiefs of Devas and stood there with palms joined in reverence. Śrī Varāha embraced that Goddess and placed her in his lap. With his mind exceedingly pleased the Lord enquired about the happiness and welfare of Earth.

Śrī Varāha said :

34. O Goddess Earth, I established you on the delightfully pleasing head of Śeṣa . I placed the world (people) on you with the mountains as your assistants. Thereafter I came here, O gentle lady. Why have you come here yourself?

Earth replied :

35-36. You lifted me up from the nether worlds and made me stable and steady on the (head) of Aṇanta splendid with a thousand hoods, as if on a high pedestal studded with jewels and precious stones. O Lord, you placed the mountains capable of sustaining me as my assistants. O Puruṣottama , they are holy and identical with you. Now, O mighty one, tell me about the chief ones among them, who are my supports.

[The Description of Śeṣācala 's Excellence Among all Mountains]:—

Śrī Varāha said :

37-41. O Vasundharā , the following mountains [4] are your supports: Sumeru, Himavān , Vindhya , Mandara, Gandhamādana , Sālagrāma , Citrakūṭa , Mālyavān , Pāriyātraka , Mahendra , Malaya , Sahya , Siṃhādri, Raivata and the great golden mountain named Añjana , the son of Meru . These have been served (i.e. resorted to) by me, by groups of Devas and by those of sages.

O Mādhavī , I shall describe the chief ones among these accurately. Listen:

Sālagrāma, Siṃhādri and the leading mountain Gandhamādana—these excellent mountains, O Goddess, have occupied the quarter of Himavān (i.e. the north). O Vasundharā, I shall name the mountains famous in the south.

42. Aruṇādri, [5] Hastiśaila, Gṛdhrādri and Ghaṭikācala—all these excellent mountains are near Kṣīrā river.

43. To the north of Hastiśaila, five Yojanas (i.e. 60 km) away, is the river Suvarṇamukharī , [6] the most excellent one among all the rivers.

44. On its northern bank is the excellent lake named Kamala . On its shore dwells Lord Hari who bestowed boons on Śuka .

45. Kṛṣṇa , the destroyer of the agony of devotees, (is present there) along with Balabhadra . He is always propitiated by Vaikhānasas ('recluses') and groups of sages.

46. In an excellent forest to the north of the lake named Kamala is the great abode of Vāsudeva named Śrī Veṅkaṭācala . [7] The forest was rendered splendid by Haricandana trees. It extended to two and a half Krośas (i.e. 2½ x 3 = 7½ km) (i.e. its distance from the lake was 7½ km).

47-48. The leading mountain was one Yojana high (12 km) and extended to seven Yojanas (84 km). O Goddess, it is golden and very long with ridges abounding in gems and jewels.

On that mountain the following always reside: groups of Devas beginning with Indra, leading sages beginning with Vasiṣṭha, Siddhas , Sādhyas , Maruts , Dānavas , Daityas , Rākṣasas and groups of celestial damsels beginning with Raṃbhā.

49. Nāgas , Garuḍas and Kinnaras perform penance there. The rivers there, occupied by these, yield merits on being visited. O Mādhavī, there are many divine lakes too here.

50-52. (A description of the pre-eminence of Svāmipuṣkariṇī among all the Tīrthas) Listen to the (following) most excellent ones among all the Tīrthas [8] : Cakratīrtha, Daivatīrtha , Viyadgaṅgā, Kumāradhārikātīrtha, Pāpanāśana , Pāṇḍavatīrtha and Svāmipuṣkariṇī. They say that these seven Tīrthas are the most excellent ones on the splendid Nārāyaṇagiri. The splendid Svāmipuṣkariṇī is the most excellent one among these.

53. I dwell with you on the western bank of this. On its southern bank dwells Śrīnivāsa , the Lord of the universe.

54-55. O Earth having the oceans for your robes, it is on a par with all the Tīrthas beginning with Gaṅgā.

O Earth, Svāmisarovara (i.e. Svāmipuṣkariṇī) has attained the leadership of all the Tīrthas in the three worlds including both lakes and rivers. All the Tīrthas reside on this divine mountain in order to serve the sacred Svāmipuṣkariṇī. I shall mention their number to you.

56. There are sixty-six crores of Tīrthas on this excellent sacred mountain, O Vasundharā, and among them six Tīrthas are extremely prominent.

57. Tuṃba Tīrtha [9] is a great Tīrtha and is like the embryo of five leading Tīrthas. It dispels the fear of being in the womb (again) in the case of those who take their bath here, ū excellent Earth.

Dharaṇī said :

58. O mighty one, six Tīrthas have been mentioned by you on the mountain. Tell me their greatness in proper sequence. O Uplifter of Earth, describe the merits acquired by men who take their bath therein.

Śrī Varāha said :

59-61. O Mādhavī, listen. I shall relate to you the greatness of Nārāyaṇādri (i.e. mountain Nārāyaṇa). Devas, sages, Yogins beginning with Sanaka and learned men called that mountain which is the abode of the Supreme Soul, Añjanādri in Kṛta Yuga . They called that mountain Nārāyaṇagiri in Tretā , and mount Siṃha in Dvāpara and Veṅkaṭācala in Kali .

62-63. A person who is a thousand Yojanas away, or who is in another continent, may bow down with great devotion in the direction of the pre-eminent mountain. He shall then be rid of all sins and shall go to Viṣṇu's region. I shall recount to you the greatness of the six Tīrthas on that (mountain) in a sequence.

64-67. O gentle lady, listen attentively to the destroyer of all the sins. On this prominent mountain, O Vasundharā, there is a lake named Kumāradhārikā. It sanctifies all the worlds. When the Sun is in the Zodiac Aquarius, in the month of Māgha , on the great full-moon day conjoined with the star Maghā , a devotee shall take his holy bath in that lake at midday, in the place where Kārttikeya , the son of Pārvatī , born of Fire-god , worships Śrīnivāsa along with Devasenā .

O lady devoid of impurities, listen to his meritorious benefit. He shall attain, O Dharā , the mother of all the worlds, that benefit which one gets by taking one's holy bath regularly for twelve years in all the Tīrthas beginning with Gaṅgā.

68. He who makes a gift of food in that holy spot along with monetary gifts in accordance with his capacity, attains as much benefit as is mentioned in the case of the holy bath.

69-70. The person who takes his bath in the Tumba Tīrtha in the mountain-cavern when the Sun is in the Zodiac Mīna (Pisces), when it is the full-moon day associated with the Asterism Uttarā Phālgunī and in the excellent fourth Prahara ('watch of the day')—Such a person is not born again in a womb, O Goddess.

[The Greatness of Ākāśagaṅgā]:—

71. When the Sun is in the Zodiac Mesa (Aries) in conjunction with the Citrā star and it is a full-moon day, the devotee shall take his holy bath in the waters of Ākāśagaṅgā in the morning. He shall attain salvation. [11]

[The Greatness of Pāṇḍava Tīrtha]:—

72-74. When the Sun is in the Zodiac Vṛṣabha (Taurus) in the month of Vaiśākha , the devotee should take his holy bath in the Tīrtha named Pāṇḍava at the hour of Saṅgava (i.e. three Muhūrtas after the dawn) on the following days: The Tithi should be Dvādaśī (twelfth) in conjunction with Sunday if it is the bright half or in conjunction with Tuesday if it is the dark half or, whether it be dark or bright half, on any Sunday in combination with Puṣya or Hasta star. [12] The man who takes bath thus shall not attain any misery here. He shall attain happiness in the other world.

[The Greatness of the Holy Pool of Pāpanāśana]:—

75-77. O lady of exalted fortune, the devotee should take his holy bath regularly in the Tīrtha named Pāpanāśana on the top of the prominent mountain on any of the following days: Whether it be bright half or dark half, Saptamī (i.e. seventh tithi) should be in conjunction with a Sunday or the star Puṣya or the star Hasta. [13] That excellent man shall be liberated from the sins acquired in the course of a crore of births.

[The Greatness of Devatīrtha]:—

78-83. Listen, O gentle lady, to the greatest secret. On the great mountain named Ananta , on the peak to the north-west of my divine abode, there is an exceedingly splendid lake in the cave of the mountain. It is called Devatīrtha. O gentle lady, I shall tell you the (appropriate) time of taking holy bath in that highly meritorious Tīrtha, (which is when there is) the combination of a Thursday with the Puṣya star, or of a Monday with the Śravaṇa star or on a Vyatīpāta day. [14] Listen to the merit of the person who takes holy bath on all these days. All his sins whether committed knowingly or unknowingly shall perish. This Tīrtha, i.e. Devatīrtha is exceedingly sacred. By taking his holy bath in Devatīrtha all his merits increase. He will be endowed with sons and grandsons. He will attain a long life. At the end of his life he goes to heaven and is honoured in the world of the Moon. [15] One who makes a gift of food on that day (will attain the same benefit) as one who makes a gift of food throughout his life. O Goddess Vasundharā, a great secret has been disclosed to you.

Vyāsa said :

84. On hearing (these words) Goddess Earth became highly delighted in her mind. With pleasing words she eulogized the Uplifter of Earth, Varāha, who has none equal to him.

[Eulogy of Varāha by Goddess Earth]:—

Dharaṇī said :

85. Obeisance to you, O Lord of the Chiefs of Devas, O Acyuta , with the face of a Boar, O Lord resembling the Milk Ocean, O mighty one with adamantine curved teeth.

86. At the beginning of the Kalpa I have been lifted up from the waters of the ocean, O Lord, by you with a thousand arms. O Viṣṇu, I hold up the worlds.

87. O Lord shining with the sacred thread and many divine ornaments, O Lord adorned with divine gems and jewels, the wearer of exceedingly reddish robes.

88. Obeisance, obeisance (to you, O Lord) with lotus-like feet on a par with the rising Sun, O Lord with the curved teeth resembling the Crescent Moon, O Lord of great strength and exploit.

89. O Lord with limbs smeared with sandal paste of divine origin, having ear-rings made of heated gold, O Lord bedecked in golden armlets, shining with sapphire gems.

90. O Lord who had torn up Hiraṇyākṣa with the tips of adamantine curved teeth, O Lord of great strength with eyes beautiful like lotuses, O Lord fascinating with the sounds of Sāman hymns.

91. O Lord with the Vedas as the crest jewel, O immanent soul of everyone, O Lord with enchanting exploits, O Lord, saluted by the Four-faced Lord (i.e. gcd Brahmā) and Śaṃbhu , O ūord with large eyes.

92. O Lord, the embodiment of all the lores, O Lord beyond the worlds, obeisance, obeisance. O infinite one, the embodiment of bliss, O Kālakāla (? Death unto the god of Death), repeated obeisance to you.

93-95. After eulogizing the Lord thus Goddess Earth saluted him (falling) on his feet. On seeing her saluting the eyes of the Lord beamed with delight. He lifted up Goddess Earth with his arms and embraced her. He sniffed the face of Dharaṇī and placed her on his left lap. He then rode on Lord Garuḍa and went to Vṛṣabhācala . The Lord of the Earth was eulogized by the leading sages beginning with Nārada.

96. On the western bank of Svāmipuṣkariṇī, honoured by all the worlds, remains seated the Lord having the face of Boar. He is worshipped there by the leading sages, Vaikhānasas (‘anchorites’) of great magnificence, noble souls on a par with Brahmā.

Vyāsa said :

97. After seeing him, O Sūta, Nārada related it (to the sages) formerly. I heard this there in the assembly of sages.

98. O Sūta, you had asked about the greatness of the mountains that has been duly recounted by me accurately in the manner it was originally heard from Nārada.

[The Benefit of (Listening to This) Chapter]:—

99-100. O Sūta, he who reads (recites) this holy discourse of us both on piety and devotion in front of the Lord or in front of Brāhmaṇas or in front of all castes listening to it with great devotion, shall attain pre-eminence in the company of sons and grandsons.

101. All the persons who listen shall attain what is desired.

Sūta said :

102-103. Thus said the holy lord Vyāsa to me—Vyāsa who was attended to by the sages. O leading sages, everything has been recounted by me here in the same manner as has been heard formerly from my preceptor Kṛṣṇadvaipāyana .

On hearing these words of Sūta, they became delighted in their minds.

The sages said :

104. O Sūta, the greatness of the holy mountain named after the Lord of Serpents, Śeṣa, has been told by you. This mountain is the holiest among all the holy mountains on the earth. This greatness is destructive of sins. It yields the benefit of salvation.

105. Varāha accompanied by Dharaṇī went to mountain Vṛṣa . After reaching it what did he say to Goddess Earth? O highly intelligent one, recount it to us.

[1]: [1] : Naimiṣa —Usually identified with modern Nimsar at a distance of 20 miles from Sitapur and 45 miles NW of Lucknow. But V. V. Mirashi places it on Gomatī somewhere in Sultanpur area some 40 miles from Ayodhyā (Purāṇa X-1-34). The Naimiṣāraṇya on Dṛṣadvatī mentioned in VāP I.1-12 is not intended here.

[2]: [2] : Ugraśravas is not a direct disciple of Vyāsa. His father Romaharṣaṇa. was so. The term ‘disciple’ is used loosely as a Paraṃparā Śiṣya . At the time of SkP the Sūta became dignified as he is called ‘Śrī Sūta’. He is called Paurāṇika , an office-bearer in Kauṭilīya Arthaśāstra . Probably an example of social mobility in the case of Ugraśravas.

[3]: [3] : These are regarded as the five traditional characteristics of a Purāṇa. They are also mentioned in AP 1.14, BSP 1.2.4-5, GP 1.215.14, KP 1.1.12, VP III, 6.25. Amarasiṃha (5th cent. CE) has recorded these in his Lexicon (1.6.5). Although these characteristics have been unanimously accepted by Purāṇa-writers as essential parts of a Purāṇic Text, actually the Purāṇa Texts that have come down to us hardly conform to this definition.

[5]: [5] : VV 37-41 give a list important mountains. They are identified as follows: Sumeru—Rudra Himalaya in Garhwal (De 196) Himavān—The Himalayas Mandara—A hill situated in Banka subdivision in Bhagalpur, Bihar (De 124) Gandhamādana—(I) A part of Kailāsa on the southern side (De 60); (II) he northern parapet of the Hindukush System (AGP 91) Śālagrāma—A hill in the Haimavatī region, near the source of Gaṇḍak Mālyavān—Karakorum between Nīla and Niṣadha (De 123) Pāriyātraka—The western part of the Vindhya range (De 149) Mahendra—The range of hills from Orissa to Madura in Tamil Nadu (De 119) Malaya—Southern part of the Western Ghats south of Kāverī (De 122) Siṃhādri—A part of the Himalayas Raivata—Mt. Girnar near Junagarh in Gujarat (De 165) Añjana (Giri)—The Suleiman range in West Panjab, Pakistan (De 8)

[7]: [7] : One of the most sacred rivers in South India. It rises in Agastyācala and falls into the southern sea. It flows through the North Arcot District with the sacred Śiva Kṣetra Kālahastī on its bank. It flows near Vṛṣabhācala and has Veṇā, Vāghurā and Kalyā as its tributaries.

[8]: [8] : Vide supra p. 1, fn. 1. Its other names are Vṛṣa or Vṛṣabha, Cintāmaṇi, Jñānādri, Tīrthādri and Puṣkarādri.

[9]: [9] : The following are the locations of Tīrthas vis-a-vis the Veṅkaṭeśa Temple: Svāmitīrtha or Puṣkariṇī —is a tank near the Veṅkaṭeśvara or Tirumal Temple. Cakratīrtha —This lies to the north-west of the Tirumal temple. Daiva Tīrtha —This Tīrtha is a tank in the forest to the north-west of the Tirumal Temple. Viyadgaṅgā or Ākāśagaṅgā —This lies two miles to the north of the Tirumal Temple. Kumāradhārikā or Kumāradhārā —This lies six miles to the north-west of the Tirumal Temple. Pāpanāśa Tirtha —This is a low waterfall at a distance of three miles to the north of the Tirumal Temple. Pāndava Tirtha —It lies about a mile to the north-east of Śrī Veṅkaṭeśvara Temple.

[10]: [10] : Also called Tumburu or Phālguni Tīrtha: This is situated ten miles to the north of the Tirumal Temple in a forest.

[11]: [11] : This is regarded as the birth place of Kumāra Kārttikeya, Skanda or Subrahmaṇya. Hence the Tīrtha is named after him. Cf. Varāha Purāṇa (VrP) Part II, Ch. 1, vv 61-65; MkP Ch. 4.

[14]: [14] : Cf. VrP II.1.72-73.

[15]: [15] : Cf. VrP II.1.74-80. Vyatīpāta is an astronomical Yoga when the Sun and the Moon are in the opposite Ayana and have the same declination, the sum of their declinations being 180. (MW 1030A)

[16]: [16] : V.L. After death he attains heaven and is eulogized in the region of Indra.

English translation

Śrī Sūta said :

1-3. O ye sages, listen to the ancient holy story. Formerly, in the Vaivasvata Manvantara , in the most meritorious Kṛta-yuga , the Lord of Earth, the Lord of Devas dwelt on the Nārāyaṇa mountain in the form of a Boar.

Accompanied by her friends and attendants, Dharaṇī (Goddess Earth) bowed down to the Lord whose eyes resembled red lotus and were longish. She then asked thus:

Dharaṇī asked :

4-6. O Lord of Devas, by which Mantra are you to be propitiated, whereby you will become delighted? Tell me that (Mantra), O Lord, which is a perpetual favourite of yours.

It should be the cause of all prosperity unto those who repeat it. It should bestow sons and grandsons. It should always grant imperial power and position. It should yield all desired things to those who wish for them. It should grant the attainment of your own region at the end. O Lord Varāha , the bestower of honour, with love towards me, tell (the Mantra) that is of this type (potency).

Śrī Sūta said :

7. On being asked by Earth thus the Lord said with pleasure and smile spreading over his face:

Śrī Varāha said :

8-9. Listen, O gentle lady, to the exceedingly great secret (Mantra) that causes prosperity immediately, that yields lands, sons etc. It should be kept as a great secret and should never be revealed. Further, it should be communicated to a devotee of well-controlled mind, who is willing to render service.

10. “Oṃ obeisance to Śrī Varāha who lifted up Earth. Svāhā.” This Mantra should always be repeated by one who wishes to be liberated. He should be a Fire-worshipper with his wife alive.

11-13. O Goddess Earth, this Mantra is the bestower of all Siddhis . Saṃkarṣaṇa is mentioned as its sage. I myself am the Deity. The metre mentioned is Paṅkti (‘one with ten syllables in a foot’). Śrī is the Bīja (‘seed’) cited. One who takes instruction of this Mantra from a good preceptor should repeat it four hundred thousand times. He shall perform Homa with rice cooked in milk along with honey and ghee .

Now I shall describe (the personality of Varāha for) meditation that causes mental purity.

14-16. O Earth having the oceans for your robes, the devotee shall meditate upon me accompanied by you seated on my left thigh. I shall be meditated as having the lustre of a pure crystal mountain with eyes resembling the petals of red lotus, the face of a Boar, gentle appearance, four arms and the crown. There is the mark Śrīvatsa on the chest. In the lotus-like hands a conch and a discus are held (with one making) the mystic gesture of granting immunity from fear. I wear reddish yellow robes. I am bedecked in red ornaments. I am stationed on a lotus over the body of Śeṣa lying on the middle of the back of the divine Tortoise.

17. After meditating thus the devotee shall always repeat the Mantra one hundred and eight times. He shall attain all desired objects. He will certainly attain salvation in the end.

18. O Dharaṇī free from impurities, what I was asked by you has been told by me. Henceforth, O lady of pure face, relate to me what is intended by you (in your mind).

[The Achievement of their Objectives by Dharma and others through the Varāha-mantra]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

19-21. On hearing this Earth asked him once again: “By whom, O Lord, has this (i.e. recitation) been formerly performed and what benefit has been acquired by him?”

On being asked thus again Lord Śrī Varāha spoke thus: “O Goddess, formerly in Kṛtayuga the great Manu named Dharma obtained this Mantra from Brahmā and repeated it over this (very) mountain. He saw me, obtained the boon and attained my region.

22. On account of the curse of Durvāsas Indra was formerly dislodged from heaven. He worshipped me here, O Goddess, with this (Mantra) and regained his heaven.

23-24. Other sages too, O Earth, repeated this Mantra and attained the highest state (i.e. salvation). Ananta , the Lord of serpents, obtained this Mantra from Kaśyapa . He performed the Japa in Śvetadvīpa continent and he became a support to Earth. Hence, this Mantra should always be repeated by human beings seeking lands.”

Śrī Sūta said :

25. On hearing this Goddess Earth became highly pleased. She asked the supporter of Earth (i.e. Śrī Varāha) once again:

Dharaṇī said :

26. When does Śrīnivāsa , the Lord of the universe, the pure Lord of Devas, come to the great mountain named Veṅkaṭa accompanied by Śrī and Bhūmi .

27. How does Janārdana become one who will be able to live in another Kalpa ? O Lord Varāha, relate this to me. My eagerness is great.

[1]: [1] : This is a Paurāṇika Mantra but it has been given the semblance of a Vedic Mantra by stating its seer-sage, deity etc. in vv 10-13, the total number of repetitions of this mantra and Homa (vv 12-13a) and the Dhyāna (description of the deity to be meditated on) in vv 14-16 and its benefit (phalaśrutì) in vv 20-24.

Summary: Manifestation of the Lord to the Eyes of Everyone at the Request of Agastya .

Note: This and the following chapters follow closely the story in VrP, Part II, Chapters 3 ff. The names Viyad or Ākāśa and Dharaṇī remind us of Vedic Dyāvāpṛthivī and the finding of a baby daughter from the bowels of the earth is similar to the ‘birth’ (finding) of Sītā by Janaka while ploughing the sacrificial place.

Śrī Varāha said :

1. Well, I shall relate to you an ancient incident, O lady of excellent face. Listen to the meritorious episode, O great Goddess, along with the sequel and the future.

2-3. Formerly, O Goddess, in the Vaivasvata Manvantara in the first Kṛta Yuga , O sinless lady, Śrīnivāsa accompanied by Śrī and Bhūmi saw the great penance of Vāyu and came to the bank of Svāmipuṣkariṇī.

Śrīkānta (‘the beloved of Śrī’) Hari , desirous of doing what is pleasing to Vāyu, shall stay in this southern meritorious shore in the splendid palace (‘ Vimāna ’) named Ānanda .

4. Ever since then Hṛṣīkeśa constantly propitiated by Lord Kārttikeya shall abide in this palace till the end of the Kalpa but (be) invisible.

Dharaṇī said :

5-6. How will the invisible Lord Śrīnivāsa, the Lord of Devas occupying your right side, be visible to human beings? Tell, O Lord of Suras , how he is (to be) propitiated by people?

Śrī Varāha replied :

7-10. Agastya reached this place and visited the eternal Deva (Lord). He propitiated him for twelve years, delighting him again and again. He prayed for the presence of the Lord, “May Your Lordship be visible." Hṛṣīkeśa who was accompanied by Śrī and Bhūmi (said as follows), O Dharā :

The Lord said :

O celestial sage, for your sake I shall be visible to all the embodied beings, but this Vimāna will never be visible. Till the end of the Kalpa, O great sage, I shall be undoubtedly visible in this place.

On hearing those words the sage became delighted and returned to his hermitage.

11-12. Thereafter, the Four-armed Lord became visible to human beings and others. Later on he will sit in the Vimāna worthy of being meditated upon by sages (?), being propitiated by Skanda and always served by Wind-god. Thus a great deal of time elapsed along with several sets of four Yugas .

13-20. The twenty-eighth cycle of four Yugas started, O Vasundharā . At the end of Dvāpara the Bhārata war took place and then Kali Yuga set in. Vikramārka and other kings, Śakas and Śūdras and others will pass away without knowing or realizing me, O lady of excellent face. Then the mighty warrior Mitravarman born of the Lunar race will become the king of Tuṇḍīra Maṇḍala (country round Kāñcī) and reside in the city of Nārāyaṇapura . [1] He will be supreme with great rise in good fortune. When that king rules over the earth righteously, the earth became (i.e. will become) productive of plenty of fruits without being cultivated. It was (i.e. will be) adorned with plenty of plants and vegetation. There was no natural calamity such as drought, too much of rain and the like. All the people were virtuous.

A charming daughter of the Pāṇḍya king was his wife. A son named Viyat (i.e. Ākāśa, Sky) was bora to him. He was an ornament unto the whole race. His wife named Dharaṇī was born of the family of Śakas. Entrusting the kingdom to his care, the excellent king Mitravarmā went to a meritorious penance-grove near Veṅkaṭādri .

21-23. The great king named Ākāśa became an emperor. He observed the vow of having only one wife. The king was mentally attached to Dharaṇī (his wife). He cleared the ground on the banks of the river Araṇī for the sake of a Yajña ('sacrifice'). When the surface of the ground was being ploughed by means of a golden plough, a girl was seen coming out of the ploughed land as he was scattering a handful of seeds. The girl was lying on a bed of lotuses. She was beautiful with all characteristic features.

24-25. She shone like a doll made of gold. On seeing her the king was struck with wonder. His eyes beamed like a full blown (lotus). Taking the child with him, he rejoiced in the company of his ministers saying repeatedly, "This is my daughter."

An ethereal voice then spoke to him:

26-28. "It is true. This is your own daughter. Bring up this excellent-eyed girl." Then delighted in his mind the king entered his city calling the queen Dharaṇī. He spoke thus: "Look at this girl granted by the Lord to me. She has come out of the earth. Since we are childless, this girl shall certainly be our daughter." After saying this, king Viyat (Ākāśa) handed over the child to the queen.

29-31. As soon as the child entered the abode, queen Dharaṇī conceived. King Viyat was extremely pleased on seeing the lady with beaming glossy eyes. He said: “O lady with splendid eyebrows, the creeper in the form of the continuity of my race has borne fruit.”

Then at the proper time queen Dharaṇī with lotus-like eyes gave birth to a son in a splendid Muhūrta when five Planets were in their ascendant position and the Sun was in the Zodiac Aries.

32. On the day of his birth divine drums were beaten. A shower of flowers fell on the abode (i.e. palace of the king). A gentle breeze pleasing to the touch blew.

33. To the persons who came to inform and congratulate him on the birth of the son the king gave as gift everything he had except the royal Umbrella and the Chowries. [2]

34. He made a gift of a crore of tawny-coloured cows. More than a hundred bulls were gifted. On the auspicious twelfth day he performed all the post-natal holy rites. The boy was named Vasudāna.

Śrī Varāha said :

35. O gentle lady, the charming son of Ākāśa named Vasudāna grew up everyday like the crescent moon in the bright half of a month.

36. The sacred-thread investiture was duly performed. He was educated and trained by preceptors who had mastered the Vedic lore. He learned from his father the wielding of weapons and missiles along with their Mantras .

37. He learned the science of archery consisting of four divisions along with their ancillary subjects and subsidiary activities. Thanks to that powerful son, the father became extremely invincible to enemies.

38. He was as free from mud and stain as the sky in Summer along with the Sun. He was unbearable to look at like the sky at midday during the month of Vaiśākha .

[1]: [1] : As the capital of the country Tuṇḍira or Toṇḍa Maṇḍala, it should have been identical with Kāñcī. But Nārāyaṇapura is on the bank of Araṇī—a river in Toṇḍa Maṇḍala (infra 5.46). And the path to it from Veṅkaṭādri (infra 5.38-46) confirms its being different from Veṅkaṭādri.

[2]: [2] : These are royal insignia which a ruling monarch is prohibited to gift.

English translation

Dharaṇī said :

1. The name of that son of Viyat was mentioned by the Lord (i.e. you). What name did he give to that daughter (who was) not born of a womb?

Śrī Sūta said :

2. On being asked thus, Śrī Varāha , the Lord of the universe, said again:

Śrī Varāha said :

3-6. The intelligent king Ākāśa , on seeing that girl lying on a lotus, called that daughter of the earth by the name Padminī .

She attained the prime of youth. She was once sporting about in a garden reverberating with the sounds of parrots and cuckoos. Nārada , the excellent sage, came there by chance. On seeing her who appeared like the goddess of the forest Nārada was surprised and he spoke thus:

Nārada said :

7-8. Who are you, O timid girl? Whose daughter (are you)? Show me your hand.

On being asked thus that girl of fascinating limbs introduced herself to the sage: “O Brāhmaṇa , I am the daughter of King Viyat. Tell what (good) marks I have (on my palm etc.).” On being requested thus Nārada, the excellent sage, said:

Nārada said :

9. Listen, O lady of charming face; I shall tell your distinctive features. Your feet are good; O lady of excellent eyebrows. They are like red lotuses with (soft) petals.

10. The toes of the feet are red and straight and even, having red and elevated (vault-like) nails. The ankles are uniform and concealed; the splendid shanks are devoid of hair.

11. The knees are equal and exceedingly smooth and shining. The thighs are equal and gradually thick; the buttocks are large and stout and the loins are thought-provoking.

12. The navel is circular and deep; both the sides are thick; the middle is fascinating due to the three folds of the skin shining with curly hair.

13. The breasts are plump, thick-set and protruding with the nipples sunk within. Your hands have the lustre of red lotus with the lotus-line (on the palm). They are tender with straight and even fingers with excellent red joints when placed together; there is no space left in between the fingers.

14. The nails of the hands are like the beaks of a parrot. Your hands shine thereby. Your arms are long and delicate like the stalk of a flower, O gentle lady.

15. Your back appears like the altar; the middle is tender, delicate and straight. The neck is red and long, O splendid lady, and the shoulders stoop downwards.

16. The face is always pleasant and has the lustre of the moon devoid of its black spot; the cheeks are like a golden mirror, shining brilliantly with ear-rings.

17-19. O lady of splendid face, your nose has the shape of a flower of gingelly plant.Your forehead is exceedingly charming, resembling the spotless moon on the eighth day (of a fortnight). It is rendered more splendid by the dark forelocks. Your head has the shape of a regular circle. It has smooth long glossy tresses. Your face shines with your lips like the Biṃba fruit (Momordica monadelpha). The teeth sparkle when you smile. This is my definite conclusion that your face will be befitting Viṣṇu .

20. Your navel has a turn to the right like an eddy in Gaṅgā . You look like Lakṣmī born of the Milk Ocean.

Śrī Varāha said :

21. After saying thus and after being worshipped by them Nārada vanished. On hearing this her friends and attendants, spoke to their friend Padminī:

22-24. “It is the advent of spring season. Let us go to the park for gathering flowers. Karṇikāras (Pterospermum acerifolium), Cūtas (Mango trees), Caṃpakas , Pāribhadrakas (Erythrina fulgens), Palāśas (Butea frondosa), Pāṭalas (Trumpet flowers), Kundas (Jasmine), and Raktāśokas (Red Aśoka) have blossomed. Padminīs (Lotus flowers), Sindhuvāras (Vitex negundo), Mālatīs (Jasmine), Yūthikā creepers (Jasminum auriculatum), Kahlāras (white esculent water-lily), Karavīras (Oleanders) are vying with one another in blossoming. Let us gather flowers in this park that is very pleasant and charming.”

25. After saying this, they went to the park accompanied by the daughter of Ākāśa. They wandered here and there gathering flowers.

26-27. They saw a certain lordly elephant. He shone brilliantly with his two white and sparkling tusks. He was resplendent with two streams of ichor flowing from his broad cheeks. He was lofty with dust particles (scattered all over the body). He was accompanied by herds of cow-elephants. With a hissing of the tip of his tongue he sprayed his own face with waters coming out of his trunk.

28. On seeing him they became frightened and resorted to a tree (for refuge). In the meantime they immediately espied an excellent horse.

29. The horse was as white as the spotless moon. It was well-adorned with gold trappings and outfit. It was as lofty (and bright) as the autumnal cloud with glittering streaks of lightning.

30. On the horse they saw a dark-complexioned man having the splendour and features of Madana (i.e. god of love). His eyes had the shape of lotus-petals and they extended as far as his ears.

31. A brilliant blue crest tied with a silk cloth of very fine texture (adorned his head). He was adorned with ear-rings sparkling with rubies and jewels.

32. He held a divine Śārṅga bow covered with gold and studded with gems. With his other hand he held a golden arrow.

33. His waist shone with the hips covered with a yellow silk cloth. He was resplendent with bejewelled bangles, armlets and waist-band.

34. A curl of hair with a right twist shone on his broad chest. He was charming with a golden sacred thread shining over his shoulder.

35. He had been speedily chasing a wolf. On seeing him the maidens were struck with wonder. They stood there itself.

36. On seeing him seated on a horse the lordly elephant bowed down his head, lifted his trunk, turned back and went to the forest trumpeting.

37. When the elephant had gone back, the horse-rider came there looking for the wolf to the presence of those girls plucking the flowers.

38-39. Approaching them, the rider on the horseback said: “Did an animal called wolf come this way? Was it seen by you all? Tell me, O girls”

Śrī Varāha said :

40-42. The girls replied to him: “Nothing was seen by us. Why have you come to our park wielding an excellent bow. O leader of hunters, none of the animals living here should be killed. Go away quickly from this park which is in the protective jurisdiction of King Ākāśa.”

On hearing the words of those maidens he got down from the horse.

43. “Who are you all? Who is this lotus-like maiden? She has excellent magnificence. All her limbs are fascinating. Her breasts are plump and protruding. Tell me. After hearing the same I shall go back to my abode in the mountain.”

44. On hearing these words of his the friend and attendant of Padmāvatī urged by the daughter of Dharaṇī said to the hunter, a resident of the mountain:

45. “This is the daughter of King Ākāśa. She was born out of the bowels of the earth. O hero, she is our leader and her name is Padminī.

46. Tell us, O youth of handsome features, what is your name? Whose son are you? What is your caste? Where is your residence? Why have you come here?”

On being asked thus he replied to them with a smile on his lotus-like face:

47. “Those conversant with ancient traditions say that our family is that of the Sun. Our names are innumerable. They sanctify learned men.

48. By colour and name the ascetics say that I am Kṛṣṇa . My discus instills fear in the minds of the enemies of Suras and those who hate Brāhmaṇas .

49. On hearing the sound of my conch enemies become confounded. Even among the immortal beings there is no bow equal to mine.

50-52. They call me the lord of heroes, residing in Veṅkaṭādri . It was from the ridge of that mountain that I surrounded (i.e. accompanied) by my Niṣāda followers have come for hunting, riding on a horse, to your park. A certain animal moving rapidly like the wind has been pursued by me. It went away somewhere. Unable to see it I have now seen this maiden of exalted magnificence. I have come here with love. Can this maiden be obtained by me?”

53-54. On hearing these words of Kṛṣṇa they became infuriated and said: “If King Ākāśa sees you, he will bind you with fetters and take you away. Before this happens go quickly to your own abode.”

Threatened by them thus, he mounted the swift horse. Accompanied by all his followers, he went back to the mountain quickly.

Śrī Varāha said :

1-3. On reaching the divine abode he got down from the excellent horse. Saying “You all may take rest” he dismissed all the Devas (who had assumed) the forms of hunters along with their attendants. He then entered the hall set with jewels. Climbing the flight of bejewelled stairs, he entered the five chambers one by one and after going beyond all the five chambers he reached the abode of pearls. Hari who had become exhausted and worried lay down on a swinging couch exquisitely inlaid with the nine different precious stones.

4-5. He went on recollecting that maiden of longish eyes with slender waist having the lustre of the interior of a lotus, with plump breasts and lotus-like face resplendent with smiles. He considered her the daughter of the Milk Ocean herself, the splendid lotus-born deity Lakṣmī . With his mind dwelling on her Lord Śrīnivāsa fell into a swoon.

[Bakulamālikā’s Address to Swooning Śrīnivāsa]:—

6-9. Then at midday the female attendant Bakulamālikā prepared divinely excellent meal having good flavour. It was exquisitely splendid and befitting gods. There were excellent side dishes, [1] pure rice, rice cooked in milk, rice mixed with jaggery, pudding made of green gram and rice etc. There were five different Apūpas (deep-fried pies), Pūrikās (deep-fried pancakes) and Vaṭakas (pulse-cakes fried in oil). Then she hastened to meet the Lord. She was accompanied by (three other attendants named), Padmāvatī , Padmapatrā and Citrarekhā.

She asked all those excellent maidens to wait at the entrance to the Lord’s (abode). Bakulamālikā alone went near him.

10-11. After going near the Lord she saluted him with great devotion. On seeing the Lord lying helpless on the couch inlaid with gems, she massaged his feet. Finding him lying with his eyes, closed deeply engrossed in thought about something, she smiled and spoke to him thus:

12. “Get up, O Lord of the Chiefs of Devas. Why do you lie down, O Puruṣottama ? Excellent food has been got ready, O Lord. Come to take your food, O Mādhava .

13. Why do you lie down like one agonized and distressed? You are the destroyer of the agony and distress of all the Worlds. What has been seen by you in the forest, O Lord, as you were ahunting?

14-15. Your plight, O Lord of large eyes, seems to be like that of a love-lorn man. Who was seen, a Deva maiden, a human one or a daughter of a serpent (Ahi)? O Lord of inconceivable soul, tell me about that girl who has captivated your mind.”

Śrī Varāha said :

16. On hearing these words of hers, the Lord heaved a deep-sigh. As he sighed thus, Bakulamālikā spoke to him affectionately:

17. “Who is that maiden so attractive even unto you, O Puruṣottama?” Hṛṣīkeśa spoke to her: “I shall tell all the facts. Listen.”

[The Reason for Marriage with Padmāvatī As told by Śrīnivāsa]:—

The Lord said :

18. Formerly, in the auspicious Tretā Yuga , I killed Rāvaṇa . At that time the girl Vedavatī rendered assistance to Śrī (Sītā).

19-20. Lakṣmī appeared from the land of Janaka in the form of Sītā. In the Pañcavaṭī forest, when I went away to kill Mārīca , my younger brother too followed me on being urged by Sītā. In the meantime the king of Rākṣasas came there to abduct Sītā.

21-23. Fire-god present in the (place of) Agnihotra sacrifice knew (i.e. anticipated) the attempt of Rāvaṇa. He took the real Sītā to Pātāla and entrusted her to (his wife) Svāhā . There was a splendid lady named Vedavatī. Formerly, she was touched by the same Rākṣasa (but not molested). Yet she cast off her body in fire. In order to kill Ṛāvaṇa she was created once again with a form similar to that of Sītā. It was she who was abducted by Ṛāvaṇa and kept in custody in Laṅkā .

24-26. Afterwards when Rāvaṇa was killed, she entered fire once again. Agni handed over Lakṣmī, my Jānakī , who had been kept in her protective custody by Svāhā and told me about the attendant accompanying Sītā: “O Lord, this is Vedavatī who did what was pleasing to Sītā. For the sake of Sītā she remained in the abode of the Rākṣasa as one imprisoned by him. Hence, delight her with a good boon along with Śrī.”

27-28. On hearing these words of Fire-god, the splendid (genuine) Sītā told me: “O Lord, this Vedavatī has always done everything pleasing to me. Hence she is a great devotee of the Lord. Hence, O Lord, choose her (as wife).” I replied:

29-30. “O goddess, I shall do so in the twenty-eighth Kali-yuga . Till then let her stay in the world of Brahmā and be adored by Devas. Afterwards she will become the daughter of Earth and (the adopted) daughter of (king) Viyat .”

Thus that beautiful lady had been formerly granted boons by me and by Lakṣmī.

31-32. She is born of Earth in the city of Nārāyaṇapura . The chaste lady is on a par with Lakṣmī. She has eyes like lotus. She has been granted boons by Padmā (Lakṣmī). Today that charming lady was seen by me as I was hunting at that place. She was plucking flowers along with her friends and attendants who befitted her.

33-34. It is impossible to describe her beauty by me even in a hundred years. As in the case of Lakṣmī, if my contact with her today becomes feasible, my life will be steady. Take this to be the truth.

[Departure of Bakulamālikā to the City of King Viyat]:—

35. O Bakulamālikā, you go there. After seeing that girl, O Bakulamālikā, know whether the blemishless, long-eyed girl of Iotus(-like) eyes is suitable to me on account of her beauty and gracefulness.

36-37. After saying this, he swooned once again. Bakulā said to him: “O Lord of Devas, I shall go hence to the place where that charming lady of yours lives at present. Tell me the way, O Lord of Ramā , whereby I shall have to go to her.”

On being told thus the Lord of Ramā said to Bakulamālikā:

38-46. “O highly fortunate lady, go along this way where there is the cave of Śrī Nṛsiṃha . Get down from this beautiful mountain along that way.

After reaching the hermitage of Agastya visit the Liṅga named Agastyeśa worshipped by him on the banks of Suvarṇamukharī .

Enjoying the sight of Suvarṇamukharī with (its wonderful) ripples and waves, go along its bank till you reach the forest of the Brāhmaṇa Sage Śuka .

There is a holy lotus-pond there named Padmasaras . It is full of lotuses. Take your bath there and bow down to the excellent sage Chāyā Śuka who performs penance on its banks. Bow down to Kṛṣṇa accompanied by Balarāma always propitiated by Sage Śuka, O excellent lady.

Kṛṣṇa has pure yellow robes and he is dark in complexion like the gem sapphire. Balabhadra is white in complexion and is depicted as one about to go on a pilgrimage, repeating Mantras with uplifted hands holding a pearl necklace and wearing sandals. Bow down to Balabhadra.

From this lake, O lady of excellent face, you may take a golden lotus. After crossing Suvarṇamukharī and passing through forests and gardens, you will reach the banks of Araṇī . You may take rest in the middle of the forest. You will certainly be struck with wonder on seeing Nārāyaṇapurī.

47-55. In the parks and gardens you will see many trees [2] in full bloom laden with fruits such as Panasas (Jack trees), Āmras (Mangoes), Śirīṣas (Acacia sirissa), Kundas (a variety of Jasmine), Tindukas (Diospyros embryopteris), Pāṭalas (Trumpet flower), Punnāgas (Calophyllum inophyllum), Nāgaravanas (groves of Euphorbia antiquorum), Rasālas (Bread fruit trees), Aṅkolas (Alaṅgium hexapetalum), Caṃpakas , Bakulas (Mimusops elengi), Āmalakas (Emblic myrobalan), Sālas (a variety of resin producing tree), Tālas (Palms), Hintālas , Padmakas (Cerasus puddum), Jaṃbū (Rose apple), Niṃba (Margosa), Kadaṃba (Nauclea cadamba), Elā (Cardamum), Pippalī (Long pepper), Madhukas (Bassia latifolia), Arjunas (Terminalia Arjuna), Priyaṅgus (Aglaia odorata), Hiṅgu (Asafoetida), Kharjūra (Date palms), Māyūra (Ligusticum ajwaen), Aśoka , Lodhrakas (Symplocos racemosa), Aśvattha (Holy fig tree), Uduṃbara (Ficus glomerata), Plakṣa (Ficus infectoria), Badarī (Jujube tree), Bhūrja (a kind of birch Betula bhojpatra), Kīcaka (Bamboos), Ciñcā (Tamarind), Kiṃśuka (Butea frondosa), Mandāra (Erythrina Indica), Śālmalī (Silk cotton), Bījapūraka (Citrus medica), Pūga (Betelnut tree), Nāraṅga (Orange), Likuca (Artocarpus lacucha) and Nārikela (Coconut-palms)—all these in clusters and groves.

There are the flowering plants such as Mallikā , Mālatī , Kunda , and Yūthikā (all these varieties of Jasmine) as well as Ketakī (Pandamus odoratissimus). The parks abound in Karavīra (oleander) and lotuses. They shine with royal plantain trees.

The parks and gardens are thronged with peacocks, parrots, herons, vultures and Sārasa birds.

It echoes with the humming sounds of bees. Seeing all these on the banks of the river, you will get great delight.

Thereafter, you go by the north-east path to the city on a par with Indra 's city. It is encircled by the river named Araṇī and is as if encircled by Gaṅgā . After going to the city of King Ākāśa , do the needful."

Śrī Varāha said :

56. After ordering that attendant named Bakulā thus and bidding her farewell, the Over-lord of Suras accompanied by Śrī lay down on his white splendid bed.

57-62. After bowing down to the Lord of the Chiefs of Devas, the attendant Bakulamālikā mounted on a red horse like the berry of Abrus precatorius in shape and size. She went through the path indicated before seeing various kinds of animals such as elephants in rut as huge as mountains and adorned with white tusks. They were accompanied by herds of cow-elephants. They were eager to seize even clouds.

She saw lions resembling white clouds followed by herds of lionesses, tigers, bears, rhinoceroses, eight-footed Śarabhas , Gavaya oxen, deer, antelopes, jackals, the Priyaka species of deer, rabbits etc. She saw Sārasa birds and peacocks and wild cats.

She saw wolves, parrots, boars and many birds of excellent ability to produce nice sounds.

Seeing these different things and getting thrilled frequently, she reached the western bank of Araṇī that was full of trees.

63-64. After getting down from the red horse near the deity Agastyeśa, she visited Agastyeśvara , the Liṅga that was worshipped well by Agastya. After taking bath and having had a drink (to quench the thirst) she took rest on the bank of the river.

[Words Addressed to the Attendants and Friends of Padmāvatī Present in the Divine Garden by Bakulamālikā]:—

65-66. Some maidens came there to the presence of the deity from the royal abode. Seeing those attendants and friends of Padmālayā, Bakulamālikā approached them and asked them in course of a general talk:

Bakulamālikā said :

67. O young maidens, who are you? Tell me. You have wonderful ornaments and garlands. Wherefrom have you come here? O ladies with faces devoid of impurities, what is your business here?

68. On hearing her words they said smilingly: “Listen attentively, O gentle lady. We shall recount it now.”

[2]: [2] : The list of trees is repeated whenever a forest is to be described.

[Detailed Information about Padmāvatī Reported to Bakulamālikā by the Attendants and Friends]:—

The young maidens said :

1. We are females from the inner apartment of King Ākāśa . We are the friends and attendants of Padmālayā, the daughter of that king.

2. Some time back we went inside the forest (park) with the princess at the head. We were eagerly gathering flowers for the princess.

3-6. While we were seated at the root of a tree we saw a man dark in complexion like a sapphire. His chest was (as if) a temple of the goddess of glory and fortune. A gentle smile spread on his face. He had a pair of beautiful, plump, muscular and long arms. He wore a well-washed yellow cloth. He had golden arrows and a golden bow. He wore a gold crown. He was adorned with necklaces, armlets and other ornaments. Our friend Padmālayā, a lady with lotus-like eyes and a body resembling molten gold, saw him and blurted out, “Look, look (there)”. Even as we were watching him, he vanished immediately.

7-8. Our friend swooned. She was then brought to the royal palace (while still in swoon).

[Questions put to the Astrologer by King Viyat Regarding Padmāvatī]:—

On seeing his daughter unwell the king consulted an astrologer:

“O prominent Brāhmaṇa , O sage, describe the effects of transits of various Planets on my daughter.”

9-12. The Brāhmaṇa (who was) equal to Bṛhaspati (the preceptor of gods) (in intelligence), thought within himself (the positions of) the Planets and said: “All the Planets are favourable to your daughter, O excellent king. But the stable (?total) effect of the Planets is slightly confusing, O King.”

Again the intelligent (Brāhmaṇa) pondered over the time of the question. He calculated the Chāyā (length of the shadow of a gnomon) and the Liṅga (Planetary position) and thought over the effects thereof and said: “The Moon who is the overlord of the Lagna is in the Lagna . Bṛhaspati (Jupiter) is in the Kendra (Centre). The diurnal bird is asleep. The Praśnapakṣin (the bird of astrological inquiry) is in the kingdom(?). O King, listen to its effect. There will certainly be normal health (in her case).

13. An excellent man has come towards the girl. Your daughter has swooned at his sight. She will be united with him.

14. A certain maiden deputed by himself will come. The words she will be uttering shall be conducive to your welfare and prosperity.

15-17. Carry out (her suggestion), O great King. It is the truth and nothing but the truth that I am saying. Further, I shall suggest another thing that will fulfil all her desires and is destructive of all ailments. Carry it out. It is conducive to the happiness of your daughter. Ask Brāhmaṇas to perform the holy bathing rite of Agastyaliṅga.” After saying this to the king the astrologer returned to his house.

18-22. King Ākāśa invited Brāhmaṇas well-versed in the Vedas , welcomed and honoured them and requested them thus:

“O Brāhmaṇas, go to the temple and perform the holy rite of grand ablution of Śaṃbhu with recitation of Mantras .”

After allowing them (to go), O splendid lady, he called us and said: “O girls, gather together all the essentials for the great ablution.” On being commanded thus by the king himself we went to the temple. Now tell us, O fair lady, about your sudden visit. Whence do you hail? Where do you wish to go? On whose errand? You seem to have come here from the world of Devas riding on this divine horse.”

Śrī Varāha said :

23. On being asked thus by them the delighted Bakulamālikā spoke these sweet words enhancing the delight of those girls:

Bakulamālikā replied :

24-25. I have come from Śrī Veṅkaṭādri . My name is Bakulamālikā. I have come riding on this horse with a desire to see (Queen) Dharaṇī . Will it be possible to see the gentle lady there in the palace?

On hearing these words of hers those maidens of the king said:

26-31. “O splendid lady, you will see Dharaṇī along with us.” On being told thus by them she accompanied them to the palace of the king.

[The Reply of Pulindinī to the Inquiries made by Dharaṇī]:—

While the ladies were on their way, Dharaṇī saw a Pulindinī [1] (i.e. a woman of the Pulinda tribe) coming along the street. She was adorned with the berries of Abrus precatorius (Guñjā) and shells. An infant of sucking age was kept tied to her back by means of the end of her cloth. She was heard proclaiming in the street thus: “Listen all of you; I speak the truth. I will tell past, present and future.”

With pure smile (on her face) Dharaṇī called her. She ordered for a golden winnowing basket and placed pearls in it. She made them into three heaps of three Prastha measures and placed the whole thing in front of her. Thereafter Queen Dharaṇī asked her, “O Pulinda woman, tell me the truth, future or past.” After saying this she stood by.

32-33. She told her about what she had been thinking in her mind. “O graceful lady, speak straight away if it was the middle heap that was thought of by you.” Dharaṇī, the beloved queen of the king, said, “ Oṃ (Yes).”

Dharaṇī said :

The heap has been said. Predict the effect. I shall give you a heap of money.

Pulindā said :

34-36. I shall speak the truth. O lady of excellent eyebrows, give some food to my child. [2]

On being requested thus Dharaṇī took some food in a golden vessel and handed it over to the Pulindinī and said, “Tell me the truth.” The young woman received the food along with milk and fed the child with it.

Then the lady with excellent eyebrows spoke the truth: “It was due to the arrival of a man that the body of your daughter has withered away and become emaciated, O timid lady. Since she is not able to see his face once again, her body has become scorched. She is afflicted by the arrows of Cupid.

37-42. It was the Primordial Lord of Devas himself who came from Vaikuṇṭha . Hari , the bestower of whatever is desired by devotees, sports about on the peak of Śrī Veṅkaṭādri on the banks of Svāmipuṣkariṇī. He assumes the forms and features of the god of Love. He is the Supreme Bliss. He wields Māyā . He is the Lord of Ramā . He sports about along with Śrī.

(One day) riding on his horse and roaming about in the forest, O Queen, he came to the park and saw your daughter. On seeing her as (beautiful as) Ramā he came under the control of the god of Love. The Lord will be sending his attendant Lalitā to your presence. On being united with him like Ramā she will enjoy herself for a long time. These words of mine are true. See this today itself, O Princess! Give some (more) food to my son.” After saying this, the Pulindinī kept quiet.

43-46. Once again she gave her ample food and dismissed her. When the Pulinda woman had gone away, the uncensured (i.e. praiseworthy) lady got up from the courtyard and entered the splendid inner apartment. It was there that her daughter Padmālayā was seated surrounded by her own attendants and friends.

She went near her daughter who was sick with love (and said), “What shall I do for you, daughter? O splendid girl, what is the object that is most pleasing to you?” On being asked thus by her mother, the wise and virtuous girl spoke slowly:

47-49. “O Mother, my mind is attracted towards that object alone which is comely and pleasing to the eyes and to the minds of good people in the world; which Brahmā and others are desirous of seeing; which is very great and omnipresent; which is the most resplendent among all resplendent things; which is the deity unto all the Devas; which can be attained here by good people and devotees and never by non-devotees. It bestows all desired things on devotees. O mother, let that be sought after.”

Śrī Varāha said :

50. On hearing this Dharaṇī asked her daughter once again, “Describe the characteristic marks of the devotees by whom, O girl of beautiful eyes, that can be attained.”

[The Characteristic Marks of the Lord and Devotees of the Lord as Related by Padmāvatī]:—

Padmālayā said :

51-54. Listen to the marks of the devotees attentively, O Mother. It is a secret, O Dharaṇī. They have permanent marks of conch and discus on the pair of arms. [3] Their special characteristic is Ūrdhvapuṇḍra (sectarian mark in a vertical V-like form) with a gap in the middle. Others have twelve such Puṇḍras on the forehead, heart, neck, belly, two sides, two elbows, two arms, back and back of the neck. When they apply the mark they recite the twelve names beginning with ‘ Keśava ’ and ending with ‘ Vāsudeva ’ and say ‘Obeisance to you’. When they apply it on the head, they say ‘Vāsudeva’.

55. I shall tell their observances which are really fascinating. Listen, O Mother. They engage in reciting the Vedas regularly. They perform all the Vedic rites.

56. They speak the truth, O gentle lady. They are never jealous of or malicious to others. They do not insult others. They never take away other people’s possessions.

57. Know those people to be Vaiṣṇavas (‘devotees of Viṣṇu ’) who never remember, see or touch the beautiful wives of others.

58. They are kind and merciful to all living beings. They are always engaged in what is beneficial to all living beings. They always sing about the Lord of Devas. Know these to be devotees (of the Lord).

59. They are contented with whatever they have. They are faithful to their own wives. They are devoid of attachment, fear and anger. Know them to be the devotees and followers of Viṣṇu.

60-64. One who is endowed with qualities like these must have the (indelible impressions of) five weapons made by his father or preceptor or any other honourable gentleman. The learned devotee shall kindle fire in accordance with the injunctions in his own Gṛhyasūtra . He should offer sixteen Āhutis (oblations) reciting the Mantras of the discus etc., first with the original Mantra , then with the Puruṣasūkta and one hundred and eight times with the excellent Mantra of Jātavedas . After performing the Homa with Mahāvyāhṛtis (i.e. the great utterances, viz. Oṃ Bhūḥ Bhuvaḥ Svaḥ) he should heat the discus etc. The learned devotee then shall bear the impressions when they have been heated well by the preceptor and the heat can be borne. [4] The impressions shall be received like the Mantras. The conch should be imprinted on one arm, the discus on the other, the Śārṅga bow with the arrow on the head, the mace on the forehead and the sword on the heart (chest).

65-68. These five impressions should be borne by the devotees of Viṣṇu desirous of salvation or the impressions of conch and discus shall be borne on both the arms. They must be of good shape and clear. Those who have impressions like these are known as devotees and followers of Viṣṇu. The Supreme Brahman can be realized only by them endowed with good conduct. My love is for him alone. My mind yearns to obtain him. O Mother, except Viṣṇu, I do not desire anyone else. I remember the dark-complexioned Viṣṇu. I speak about Hari, Acyuta . I sustain my life thereby alone. Let the means of being united with him be thought of.

Śrī Varāha said :

69. After saying this to her mother the lotus-faced lady became dejected and stopped speaking. On hearing her words, the mother thought, 'How should Viṣṇu be propitiated?'

[Arrival of the Friends and Attendants (of Padmā) Near Dharaṇī Along with Bakulamālikā]:—

70-73. In the meantime the girls accompanied by Bakulamālikā came to see Dharaṇī after worshipping Agastyeśa.

She fed the visiting Brāhmaṇas heartily with good food after duly worshipping them. She gave them monetary gifts in full along with garments and ornaments. She received their blessings for the purpose of achieving the desired objectives.

After bidding farewell to all those Brāhmaṇas she asked her young maidens, those high-minded attendants who had come back after worshipping Agastyeśa.

[1]: [1] : The whole episode of consultation with a woman of Pulinda (Forester) tribe is textually similar to a great extent to the one in VrP II (Uttara) 6.28 ff. The method of selecting a particular heap as the basis of the prediction is the same. Such belief in tribal women is still common to uneducated women even in Maharashtra.

[2]: [2] : Unfortunately the tragic condition, want of food etc., of these tribals, has not changed since the days of the SkP.

[3]: [3] : It is a common practice of Vaiṣṇavas (followers of Rāmānuja as well as of Madhva) to stamp their bodies with Viṣṇu's weapons. The Ūrdhvapuṇḍra is characteristic of the followers of Rāmānuja. From this mention it seems that the author probably belonged to that sect.

[4]: [4] : The practice of branding one's body with the heated metal seals with the marks of the discus, conch , mace etc. is still found among orthodox followers of Madhva. Their procedure does not include the Śārṅga-bow impression but they have the name-seal (nāma-mudrā) instead. The MS of Tapta-mudrā-vidhāna at Rāghavendra Svāmī Maṭh at Miraj (in Maharashtra) prescribes Paurāṇic verses describing the particular weapon (e.g. discus, mace) for recitation before branding, as 'mantra'.

English translation

[Information about Śrīnivāsa as Reported by Bakulamālikā to Queen Dharaṇī]:—

Dharaṇī said :

1. Tell me, who is that excellent maiden? Where did she come into contact with you? Why has she come here? She appears, to me to be worthy of veneration.

The girls replied :

2-5. O Queen, this is a divine lady. She has come to see you. She came into contact with us at the temple in the presence of Śiva . On being questioned, she said that she had come to see Your Highness. “Is it possible to see the queen conveniently at the palace by me?” When we were asked by her thus we said, “Be pleased to come with us. We are the servants of Dharaṇī. We are going to the palace.”

On being told thus, O Queen Dharaṇī, she has approached you. Let her be asked by Your Highness, “What for have you come here?”

Śrī Varāha said :

6-7. On hearing their words thus Queen Dharaṇī asked her:

Dharaṇī said :

O gentle lady, where have you come from? What can be done by me for you? Tell me the truth. I shall try to help you to achieve the purpose of your visit.

Bakulamālikā said :

8-12. I have come from the mountain Veṅkaṭādri . My name is Bakulamālikā. Our Lord Nārāyaṇa dwells on the mountain Śrīveṅkaṭācala.

Once he mounted his horse as white as a swan and as quick as the mind and went for hunting. In the splendid season of spring he was roaming about in the forests of the king near the mountain Veṅkaṭādri. He saw on his way deer, elephants, lions, a variety of ox called Gavaya , the eight-footed animal Śarabha , Ruru deer, parrots, partridges, swans and other types of birds in the forest. The excellent god pursued a lofty leader of elephants, shedding ichor profusely and accompanied by cow-elephants.

13-15. After going from forest to forest he came near King Śaṅkha who was engaged in penance on Bṛhacchaila after installing Janārdana accompanied by Śrī and Bhūmi and worshipping him constantly with great devotion.

There is an excellent and sacred lake named Śaṅkhanāgabila. When he came near the bank of that lake, he got down from his horse. Assuming the attire of a king, he went near the excellent King Śaṅkha and asked him:

16-21. “What is it that you are doing, O excellent king, at the foot of this mountain Śeṣa ?”

Śaṅkha replied :

I am the son of King Śveta . I belong to the land of Haihaya . For the propitiation of Mahāviṣṇu I performed all types of sacrifices here. I became dejected and frustrated because I could not get the vision of Mahāviṣṇu, O Prince. At that time a divine voice destructive of all worries spoke clearly:

“O king, I will not become visible to you here. Listen to my words. Go to Nārāyaṇādri and perform penance.”

So I left my land. Here, O king, I propitiate the inconceivable Lord of Śrī after installing (him). I propitiate him by means of penance. Thanks to the blessings of Agastya , I worship him daily in accordance with the injunctions.

On hearing these words of his the Lord said with a derisive laughter:

22-25. “Go to Nārāyaṇādri. Why do you stay at the foot of this (mountain). Climb the mountain along this path and bow down to Viṣvaksena stationed on the western peak in the form of a boy at the foot of a Nyagrodha tree (Indian fig tree). Go to Svāmipuṣkariṇī and take bath there. O prince, you will see a Valmīka (anthill) and an Aśvattha (holy fig tree) there on the western bank. Perform your penance in between those two. A certain white boar roams about in this anthill. But it is visible only to the meritorious, O king.”

Śrī Varāha (? Bakulamālikā) said :

26-27. After commanding him thus, the Lord mounted his horse and went for hunting. O lady of excellent eyebrows, he wandered from forest to forest and reached the river Araṇī . Getting down from his horse, he walked about on its excellent bank. The gentle breeze coming from the extremities of the forest, which was cool due to its blowing over lotuses and Kahlāra flowers, dispelled his fatigue and thus served Puruṣottama .

28-30. The trees served him by throwing showers of flowers. Thus the Lord was wandering amongst the trees heavily laden with blossoms and bending low. He was in search of a lordly tusker. He saw those well-dressed beautiful girls plucking flowers like streaks of lightning among clouds. He saw a young maiden among those girls. She had golden complexion. She was as exceedingly charming as Lakṣmī . The Lord became attached to her in his heart.

31-35. Desirous of getting her he asked those girls, “Who is this girl?” The man was told by them, “O mighty one, this is the daughter of King Viyat .”

On hearing these words of theirs he mounted the horse and returned speedily to his abode, the beautiful mountain.

After reaching his abode on the banks of Svāmipuṣkariṇī the Lord sent for me and said, “Well Bakulamālikā, go to the city of King Viyat, dear friend, and enter the inner apartment. Go to his wife Dharaṇī. After enquiring about her health and welfare request for her beautiful daughter Kamalālayā (Padmālayā). O beautiful woman, return immediately after getting the approval of the king.”

36. I have been ordered by the Lord thus, O Queen, and so I have come to your abode. What is suitable in this connection may be done (by you) along with the king accompanied by (the council of) his ministers.

37. Consult your daughter and let the reply be given.

Śrī Varāha said :

38-39. On hearing her words the queen became delighted. She called King Ākāśa and both of them went to Kamalālayā. In the midst of the assembly of ministers the queen repeated the words of Bakulamālikā. On hearing them the king became delighted and spoke to the ministers and the priests:

King Ākāśa said :

40-44. This girl is not born of a womb. Kamalālayā is divine and highly fortunate. She has been sought by the Lord of Devas residing on Veṅkaṭādri. My desire is fulfilled today. Tell me whether it (the proposal) is acceptable to you.

On hearing the excellent words of the king all the ministers became delighted. They said to King Viyat:

"We are satisfied and happy, O great King. Your family will become the highest of all. Your matchless daughter will sport about along with Śrī. Let her be given to the Śārṅga -wielding Lord of Devas, the Supreme Soul. This spring season is glorious. Let the auspicious rite be performed quickly.

45-46. Let Dhiṣaṇa (Bṛhaspati , the preceptor of gods) be called and the auspicious hour for the marriage be fixed."

[Confirmation of the Exact Auspicious Time for Marriage as per Advice of Bṛhaspati]:—

Saying "so be it" the Lord of men called Bṛhaspati from the world of Suras and asked him about (the hour) for the marriage of the girl and the bridegroom.

The King asked :

47. The native star of the girl is Mṛgaśīrṣa ; that of the Lord is Śravaṇa . Let the conjunction of these two be considered.

48-49. On hearing it Dhiṣaṇa said: "The star Uttarāphālgunī suits both of them for the increase of their happiness. It is declared so by the divine astrologers. Let their marriage be celebrated on the Uttarāphālgunī day." He said, "Let it be celebrated duly in the month of Vaiśākha ."

Śrī Varāha said

50-52. The king honoured Dhiṣaṇa duly and bade him farewell. He then said to the lady messenger, "O splendid lady, go to the abode of the Lord. Intimate to the Lord of Devas, O lady of holy rites, that the wedding shall be in the month of Vaiśākha. Let him be pleased to come here after making all arrangements for the marriage."

Thereafter, he sent Śuka , one of the favourites of the queen, as a messenger along with her. He sent his son Vāyu to bring Indra and others.

[Decoration of the City by Viśvakarmā and Others]:—

53. He called Viśvakarman and employed him in the job of decorating the city. He did it within a moment.

54. Indra discharged a shower of flowers. Groups of celestial damsels danced. Dhanada (Kubera) filled that abode with wealth, food-grains etc.

55. Yama made the men on the earth free from sickness. Varuṇa filled (the place) with clusters of jewels and precious stones such as pearls etc.

56. After making arrangements for everything Devas went to Vṛṣācala. [1]

[Bakulamālikā Accompanied by Śuka Comes to Śrīnivāsa]:—

Śrī Varāha said :

57-59. Then Bakulamālikā accompanied by Śuka mounted a horse and went ahead. She reached Śrīveṅkaṭādri and got down from the horse near the abode of the Lord. Accompanied by Śuka she went inside and met the bright-eyed Lord seated on a jewel-set throne along with Śrī.

After bowing down she said with great delight: "O Lord, the mission has been duly accomplished there. Here Śuka has along with me to announce the auspicious tidings.

[Śuka's Announcement of the Decision about the Marriage of Padmāvatī to Śrīnivāsa]:—

60-65. On being commanded by the Lord to speak out Śuka bowed down and spoke:

Śuka submitted :

The daughter of Dharaṇī says to you: "O Mādhava , accept me. I speak out (i.e. repeat) your names. I always remember your person. O Lord of Ramā , your symbols are worn on arms and other limbs (by me). I worship your devotees who have undergone the five consecratory rites. I perform every holy rite only to please you, O Slayer of Madhu . I am obedient to my parents. I carry on all my activities for ever. O Lord of Devas,, be pleased to shower your grace. Accept me, O Mādhava." So submits the daughter of Dharaṇī stationed on the lotus.

On hearing the words of Śuka pleasing to himself, Hari said:

Śrī Bhagavān said :

I shall come there along with Devas in order to celebrate the marriage. O Śuka, go and tell her that the Lord has said thus.

[Padmāvatī Wears the Garland of Śrīnivāsa Handed over to Her by Śuka]:—

66. After hearing the utterance of the Lord and taking the garland of sylvan flowers given by the Lord with him, Śuka hastened to the daughter of King Viyat.

67. He handed over the garland of basil, rendered fragrant by means of musk, to the gentle lady and told her the auspicious words of the Lord.

68. On hearing them and accepting the garland with head bowed down the daughter of Earth placed it on her head. Eagerly awaiting the arrival of the Lord she adorned herself with proper ornaments.

69-72. King Viyat joyously and eagerly invited Indu (Moon-god) and said:

"O king, let cooked rice of various tastes be prepared. Let the Paramānnam (Supreme Cooked Rice) fit to be offered to Viṣṇu , be prepared. It should be one approved by Devas, sages and the human beings. Let the four kinds of food-stuffs with good flavour be prepared by means of your nectarine rays, O Sudhākara."

After making every arrangement like this he waited for the arrival of the Lord. He seated himself in the assembly with delighted mind. The king was accompanied by Dharaṇī who had adorned her daughter adequately.

English translation

[Lakṣmī and Others Adorn Śrīnivāsa for the Marital Rites]:—

Śrī Varāha said :

1-3. Thereafter the Overlord of Devas called the beautiful lady Lakṣmī and said: “O graceful lady of beautiful eyes, tell me what should be done for the marriage. O Ramā , command your attendants. Do everything pleasing.

On hearing the words of Kṛṣṇa Śrī called her attendants and friends and directed them. On being commanded by Śrī the attendant, Prīti (‘Pleasure’), took up the sweet-scented oil. Śruti (‘ Vedas ’) took up the silk cloth and stood waiting in the presence of the Lord.

4. Smṛti (‘Code of Law’) joyously brought the ornaments. Dhṛti (‘Fortitude’) held the mirror and Śānti (‘Quiescence’) held musk.

5. Śrī (‘Bashfulness’) stood in front of Hari carrying the unguent Yakṣakardama. [1] Kīrti (‘Fame’) held the golden head-band and gem-set crown.

6. At that time Indrāṇī held the umbrella, Sarasvatī held a chowrie and Gaurī held the other chowrie. Jayā and Vijayā held the fans.

7-9. On seeing them coming Śrī got up immediately. She took the scented oil and applied it onto the Lord from head to foot. After rubbing and shampooing the body of the Lord with scented perfumes and powders Ramā performed the ablution of Hari. A hundred golden pots filled with the waters of the celestial Gaṅgā and other holy rivers were brought by elephants. The waters were rendered fragrant by means of camphor etc. Ramā took the pots one by one and performed the rite of ablution of Hari.

10-11. She fumigated the tresses of hair by means of incense and when they became dry, she tied them. After anointing the body of the Lord with gold-coloured scents Indirā (Lakṣmī) tied the blue silken robe on his waist along with the waistband. She adorned him with coronets and other ornaments.

12. Bejewelled rings were put on all the fingers. Dhṛti showed the mirror in front of the Lord.

13. Looking into the mirror the Lord of Devas applied the Ūrdhvapuṇḍra (vertical V-like sectarian mark) himself. Afterwards the Lord got on the back of Garuḍa along with Lakṣmī.

14-15. Then he proceeded towards Nārāyaṇapurī accompanied by Brahmā, Īśa, Varuṇa , Yama , Yakṣeśa, Vasiṣṭha and other eminent sages, Sanaka and other Yogins as well as devotees and loyal followers of the Lord. The chieftains of Gandharvas sang. The groups of celestial damsels danced.

16. The divine Dundubhi drums were sounded then in the presence of the Lord. Reciting the Svasti Sūktas (Hymns of Benediction) the sages followed him.

17. Accompanied by the groups of Devas and Viṣvaksena and other attendants, followed by Bakulamālikā and other attendants and chaperons seated in chariots, the Lord reached the well-decorated city of King Ākāśā.

The Place of the Wedding of Padmāvatī

18-19. On seeing that the Lord had arrived, they made the bride sit oṇ the elephant Airāvata and took her round the city. When King Ākāśa saw her come back to the entrance of ornamental gateway, the bride and the bridegroom were brought together. The King stood facing Lord Keśava along with his kinsmen.

20-22. 1 Viṣṇu took off the wreath of flowers from his neck with his hand and smilingly put it over the shoulders of Kamalā (Padmāvatī). She then took a garland of jasmine flowers and placed it round his neck. This (exchange of garlands) they repeated three times and then got down from the vehicles. They stood (or sat?) over the pedestal for a short while. Then Hari and the daughter of Earth entered the auspicious (marriage) chamber accompanied by the groups of Devas beginning with Brahmā.

23-26. The Lotus-born Lord (Brahmā) performed all the religious rites connected with the wedding beginning with the tying of Māṅgalyasūtra (ṣṭhe thread of conjugal felicity’) and ending with Lājā Homa (Homa with parched grains) along with the soaking of pulses for germination. After directing them to observe the Vratas the kinsmen took Kamalā and Had to the bedchamber. On the fourth day the Four-faced Lord concluded all the holy rites. They took leave of King Viyat and made Lord Hari sit on Garuḍa accompanied by both the goddesses. They then proceeded ahead along with Devas. The party reached Vṛṣabhācala to the accompaniment of the sounds of the divine Dundubhi drums. The groups of Devas headed by Brahmā eulogized the Lord of the Chiefs of Devas.

27-28. The groups of sages including Śuka and others eulogized Puruṣottama . Even as he was being eulogized, the Lord entered the hall studded with jewels. There he sat on a throne accompanied by Ramā and the daughter of Earth (Padmālayā).

[The Gifts and Presents made by King Viyat to the Bride and the Bridegroom]:—

29. Accompanied by Mahendra and other Suras King Ākāśa began to make the gifts and presents to delight his daughter and Viṣṇu.

30-35. Rice grains were kept in huge pots of gold. There were many vessels of green gram and hundreds of ghee pots. There were thousands of milk pots and many pots of curds. There were divine mangoes, plantains and coconut fruits. There were emblic myrobalan fruits, ash-gourds and royal plantains, jack fruits and citrons. There were jars filled with sugar.

Gold, jewels and pearls were in plenty. There were a crore of silk clothes. Thousands of men and women slaves were presented and crores of cows too.

He gave ten thousand horses white in colour like swans and the moon. There were more than a hundred elephants perpetually in their rut. He gave Viṣṇu, Śrīnivāsa, four thousand women experts in dance and music to serve in the inner apartment. After making all these gifts the king stood in front of the Lord (awaiting further instruction).

[By the Favour of Śrīnivāsa King Viyat Attains the Boon of Devotion (to the Lord)]:—

36-39. On seeing all these in the company of both the queens Hari, Veṅkaṭeśvara, became highly pleased and he said to the king, his father-in-law:

“Choose your boon, O king, my Sire, from me whatever you desire.” On hearing these words of the Lord of Śrī King Viyat said to the Lord: “O Lord, grant me (the boon of) an unswerving service and loyalty to you. Let my mind rest in your lotuslike feet. Let there be devotion to you.”

Śrī Bhagavān replied :

40-42. O eminent king, what you have said will take place fully.

[Return of Brahmā and Others who had come for Marriage Festival to their Respective Residences]:—

After granting him the boon and honouring him befittingly Hari duly honoured Brahmā, Īśa and all other Suras suitably and allowed them joyously to go back to the heavenly world. After all of them had gone the Lord sported about on the banks of Svāmipuṣkariṇī as before. He was accompanied by Śrī and the daughter of Earth. There in his divine abode he is seated, being honoured by Guha .

Dharaṇī said :

1-2. In Kali Yuga , O Lifter of Earth, O my darling, by whom are you seen? By whom is your Vimāna (Temple) made on this mountain? By whom is Śrīnivāsa of graceful and charming features seen? Relate this, O Lord, out of love for me. I am eager to hear.

Śrī Varāha said :

3-8a. I shall (fore-)tell what is going to happen. Listen, O gentle lady, to what I say.

There was a hunter named Vasu on this holy and meritorious mountain. He was a devotee of Puruṣottama . He was keeper of a forest of Śyāmāka . He used to cook Śyāmāka rice. After pouring honey into it he used to offer it as Naivedya to the Lord of Devas accompanied by Śrī and Bhūmi . The wife of that devotee was a splendid lady Citravatī . She gave birth to an excellent son named Vīra . Vasu (lived happily) in the company of his son and wife who was highly devoted to her husband. On a certain day he entrusted his son with the duty of protecting Śyāmāka and went deep into the forest along with his wife in search of honey. He moved quickly with a desire to look out for beehives.

8b-11. The boy took cooked Śyāmāka grains, fried them in fire, ground them and offered them to the Lord of Śrī at the root of a tree. This food offering Vīra consumed joyously.

In the meantime Vasu also returned with honey. On seeing that the Śyāmāka grains had already been consumed he threatened his son. He raised up his hand with a sword in it to slay him.

[The Lord's Address to Vasu who was Intent on Killing His Son]:—

12-14. Viṣṇu who was present in the tree then caught hold of the sword with his hand. In order to see by whom the sword had been seized he looked in the direction of the tree and saw the Lord holding the conch, discus and iron club with half of his body seen mounted on the tree. Vasu cast off the sword and bowing down to Keśava said to him: "Why is this act being done by you, O Lord of the Chief of Devas?"

Śrī Bhagavān replied :

15-16. O Vasu, listen to my words. Your son is devoted to me. He is a greater favourite of mine than you. So I became visible to him. I am present everywhere on the banks of lake Śvāmisaras.

On hearing the words of the Lord thus Vasu became delighted.

[Arrival of Raṅgadāsa at Śrī Śeṣācala for the Worship of Śrīnivāsa]:—

17-21. In the meantime (a devotee named Raṅgadāsa) came to this place from Pāṇḍya territory. Though he was a Śūdra , he was endowed with great devotion to Viṣṇu ever since his childhood.

He reached Nārāyaṇapurī and bowed down to Śrī Varāha . There he heard that Śrīnivāsa, the self-born Lord worshipped by the Lords of Devas, was staying on Veṅkaṭādri . On hearing about it he started from that place. He reached (river) Suvarṇamukharī and had his holy bath therein. He crossed it and took bath in the lake named Kamalā , the lake that yields merit. He bowed down to Lord Kṛṣṇa who was installed on its banks along with (Bala) Rāma . Thereafter he went to the forest abounding in herds of elephants. Gradually he came to Śeṣādri and saw the spring and the mountain-torrent.

22-26a. Having reached near it he went to Śiva worshipped by the tawny-coloured cow. The holy Tīrtha in front of it is Cakratīrtha. It is very deep and destructive of sins. After taking his bath there he went to Veṅkaṭādri slowly in order to propitiate the Lord, where he was joined by an anchorite who was proceeding to Veṅkaṭādri for performing worship. Raṅgadāsa, a boy of twelve years, climbed (the mountain), reached Svāmipuṣkariṇī and took his holy bath with great devotion. He visited the lotus-eyed Hari accompanied by Śrī and Bhūmi staying at the root of a tree in the middle of the forest on the banks of Svāmipuṣkariṇī. (There) the Lord had been worshipped by the sage and anchorite Gopīnātha .

26b-28. He saw Garuḍeśāna (Lord Garuḍa) of splendid yellowish blue colour, stationed in the sky with his wings spread over the head of the Lord like a canopy. He was attended upon by the conch, discus, iron club and sword standing nearby. Behind them he saw (the bow) Śārṅga as well as the arrow.

[Construction of a Divine Park, Pavilion etc. by Raṅgadāsa in Honour of Śrīnivāsa]:—

29-34a. On seeing Śrīnivāsa thus Raṅgadāsa was much surprised. He thought, 'I shall make a park for this Lord.' Taking this decision in his mind thus, the intelligent devotee stayed at the root of the tree. He made the Vaikhānasa prepare the Naivedya offering to Viṣṇu everyday.

After clearing the terrible forest gradually he cut off the trees at the sides. On being commanded by the Lord he avoided cutting two trees resorted to by the Lord himself, viz. the Ciñca (Tamarind) tree that was the place of residence of the Lord and the Caṃpaka tree of Ramā .Then he built a wall of stones on the ground all round the Lord.

He made flower gardens all round the wall outside. He planted all the flowering creepers and shrubs of Mallikā , Karavīra , lotus, varieties of jasmine (Mandāra , Mālatī) etc. as well as groves of basil plants and Caṃpakas .

34b-38. He got a well dug up there and made the parks and gardens flourish with its waters. He plucked and gathered flowers from the parks and wreathed them into garlands himself. After making garlands of variegated colours, he handed them to the priest worshipping there. The priest used to take those garlands and tie them round the head and shoulders of Lord Śrīnivāsa accompanied by Śrī and Bhūmi.

Thus that liberal-minded devotee remained there rendering service to the Lord. Staying thus he spent about seventy years. Raṅgadāsa, the noble-souled devotee, gathered flowers and served the Lord for such a long period.

[Raṅgadāsa Forgets his Duty of Serving the Lord on Seeing the Amorous Sports of a Gandharva]:—

39. A certain Gandharva came to that park in order to bathe in the lake in the company of youthful maidens of royal Gandharva families.

40-44. He had left his aerial chariot in the sky and carried on his amorous aquatic sports.

Observing him sporting about in the lotus-pond along with the beautiful girls this Śrīraṅgadāsa forgot his duty of wreathing the garlands. Though he had perfect control over his sense organs, he had an emission of the semen virile on seeing their sports.

Even as Raṅgadāsa was watching, that Gandharva youth rose up from the lake, smilingly covered himself with the divine robes and got into the charming aerial chariot along with those lovely ladies. Then he went back to the abode of Dhanada (i.e. Kubera).

When the king of Gandharvas departed, Raṅgadāsa who had been under delusion, felt ashamed. He left off the garlands, took bath in the lake and fetched more fresh flowers. Then he went to the temple slowly.

45-46. On seeing him arrive after the period of worship was over the Vaikhānasa asked him, “Friend, why are you late in coming? The garlands too have not been wreathed by you. What were you doing in the park?”

47. On being asked thus Raṅgadāsa did not speak anything because of his shame. As Raṅgadāsa remained ashamed, Madhusūdana spoke to Raṅgadāsa:

[Śrīnivāsa’s Words to Raṅgadāsa who was Ashamed on Recollecting his own Condition]:—

Śrī Bhagavān said :

48-52. Why are you ashamed, O Raṅgadāsa? You have been deluded by me. Indeed you are one who has conquered his lust. O highly intelligent one, have courage. You will become a king on the surface of the earth like the Gandharva king. You will always be devoted to me. After enjoying all great worldly pleasures you will construct outer walls and pavilions for me then. I will be extremely delighted and will grant you salvation. You render service unto me here itself till you cast off the mortal body. It is thus that my devotees who are desirous (of pleasures) will get salvation.

After saying this Lord Viṣṇu did not say anything else. On hearing this Raṅgadāsa made that garden more splendid.

[The Story of the King Named Toṇḍamān]:—

53-57. That intelligent (devotee) served and worshipped the Lord for more than a hundred years and then went to heaven. He was born in the great Lunar race and became well-known as Toṇḍamān. The hero was the son of Suvīra and Nandinī .

He was extremely intelligent. He had Devotion to Viṣṇu engendered in him even at the age of five. He was a mine of many good qualities such as good behaviour, heroism, boldness, virility etc. He married Padmā , the charming daughter of the Pāṇḍya (king). Afterwards the king married a hundred girls of different lands in Svayaṃvara ('Self-choice') type of marriage. He sported about like the Lord of Devas living in Nārāyaṇapura on the earth. He obtained permission from his father to go for hunting. The son of leonine valour went near Veṅkaṭādri for hunting.

[King Tondamān goes to Śrī Śesācala for Hunting]:—

58. He was moving about on foot accompanied by his attendants, when he saw the leader of a herd of elephants. He was in the rut, shedding ichor profusely.

59-62. On seeing him he was surprised and he pursued him in order to catch him. He crossed Suvarṇamukharī and bowed down to Śuka , the excellent Brahmarṣi . After being permitted by him, he went from forest to forest.

He then saw goddess Reṇukā who was stationed in the form of an anthill. She is the bestower of desired things on favourite devotees. She stayed in the divine garden always accompanied by her attendants. She was adored even by Devas. Toṇḍamān bowed to her and then went to the west.

[The Story of the Parrot of Five Colours Staying Near Śrīnivāsa]:—

63. He saw a parrot of five colours and pursued it with a desire to catch it. The parrot quickly flew towards the mountain chirping out Śrīnivāsa! Śrīnivāsa !

64. Closely following it the king too climbed the lord of the mountains, observing closely the different caves and crevasses and the peaks all round.

65. Searching for the parrot he came to the Śyāmāka field. He did not see the excellent parrot but saw the keeper of the forest.

66. Welcoming hurriedly the king who was coming towards him, he humbly bowed down to him and stood by with palms joined in reverence.

67-68. Toṇḍamān too duly honoured the forester and asked him: "Did any parrot of five colours come here? Was any such parrot seen by you? Where must have it gone chirping Śrīnivāsa! Śrīnivāsa ! O forester?"

The forester replied :

69. That five-coloured (parrot) is a permanent favourite of Śrīnivāsa and remains at his side always. It has been brought up by Śrī and Bhūmi.

70. It stays always in the presence of the Lord on the banks of Svāmipuṣkariṇī. That glorious parrot cannot be caught by anyone.

71. After sporting about as it pleases on this excellent mountain, at the end of the day it invariably comes back to the Lord and remains near him.

72-75. O Prince, I shall now go to propitiate that Lord. Be pleased to take rest at the foot of this tree till I return. You can happily play with this son of mine.

The king said :

I shall come with you in order to visit Lord Janārdana . Show me the Lord of Devas residing on Veṅkaṭādri.

On hearing the words of the king the forester took some Śyāmāka grains mixed with honey in a cup made of mango leaves-and went to Had along with the king.

[King Toṇḍamān goes near Śrīnivāsa Along with the Niṣāda]:—

76. Watching and observing the rocky surface they went a long way. In a short while they reached the splendid Svāmipuṣkariṇī.

77-82. They, the leader of the Niṣādas (foresters) along with, the king, took their holy bath in the prescribed way. To the noble-souled king he pointed out the Lord of Devas stationed on the banks of Svāmipuṣkariṇī at the root of Śrīvṛkṣa (sacred bilva tree?). The Lord shines like Atasī (Linseed) flower. His eyes are large (and longish) like lotus (petals). He has four arms, magnificent limbs, and lotus-like face with a gentle smile. He shines brilliantly with a crown and bracelets. He has worn a divine yellow garment. He is accompanied at his side by Śrī and Bhūmi of very beautiful forms. He is attended upon all round by the conch, discus, sword, iron club, Śārṅga bow and arrow. He is served by other divine weapons too as well as heavenly garlands. He is propitiated by Skanda during the three junctions (i.e. dawn, midday and dusk). The Lord Puruṣottama has his lotus-like feet hidden under an anthill up to the knees. On seeing. Lord Puruṣottama thus they joyously bowed down to him.

83. With his eyes beaming like a fall-blown (lotus) due to wonder, the king stood with palms joined in reverence. He was in a state of ecstasy and could not see or understand anything else.

84. The forester offered as Naivedya the Śyāmāka grains mixed with honey. Half of that he handed to the king and himself ate the other half.

85. Accompanied by the king, he drank the waters of Puṣkariṇī and went back to his sacred cottage in the forest of Śyāmāka plants.

86. The king spent a night there and got up early in the morning. Accompanied by his army, he returned to his city.

[Reṇukā Speaks to King Toṇḍamān]:—

87. Again he went to the forest of Devī and got down from his horse. He worshipped Reṇukā on the ninth day in the bright half of the month of Caitra .

88-89. He offered ghee and best cooked rice along with many condiments and articles for seasoning food. Sacrificial offerings of animals were also made to the accompaniment of incense and lights. A hundred pots of liquor flavoured with jasmine and saffron were also offered. The Goddess who was worshipped thus became pleased and granted boons to the king.

90-92. A certain man possessed by the deity spoke to the excellent king: “Listen, O king, to your future. Your kingdom will be rid of all thorns. O king, the capital here will be named after you alone. You will rule for a long time, O great king, in my vicinity. O sinless one, you will get the favour of the Lord of Devas.” After granting the boons to him the man possessed by the deity returned to (his) normal state.

[The Greatness of Padmasaras as Described by Śuka]:—

93-94. Then the king who received the boons went to sage Śuka once again. He made obeisance to the sage and honoured by him he joyously requested, “O sage, recount to me the greatness of the lake named Kamalā.”

Śrī Śuka said :

95. Formerly due to the curse of Durvāsas , O king, Padmā, the beloved of the lotus-eyed Lord, descended from heaven along with Viṣṇu.

96. The great Goddess Ramā reached this lake abounding in golden lotuses. She performed penance for ten thousand years according to divine reckoning.

97-98. Devas looked for Śrī accompanied by Viṣṇu. Devas in the company of Purandara saw the Goddess holding the lotus and sitting in a golden lotus along with the lotus-eyed Lord in this excellent lake, O king.

On seeing her they were delighted. After bowing down to her they stood with palms joined in reverence. Devas along with Indra eulogized the mother of the worlds.

[Eulogy of Śrī Lakṣmī by Devas and Others]:—

Devas prayed :

99. Obeisance to Śrī, the mother of the worlds. Obeisance, obeisance to the mother of Brahmā . Hail to you, to the lotus-eyed one. Obeisance, obeisance to the lotus-faced one.

100. Repeated salutes to the Goddess with delighted lotus-like face, having the lustre of lotus. Bow to the deity residing in the forest of Bilvas . Obeisance, obeisance to the consort of Viṣṇu.

101. Obeisance, obeisance to the deity wearing wonderfully variegated silk robes, to the deity with large buttocks. Obeisance, obeisance to the deity with protruding breasts as plump as the ripe Bilva fruit.

102. O splendid deity with hands and soles having the lustre of the petals of deep red lotus, O deity shining with bejewelled armlets, bracelets, waistbands (girdles) and anklets, O lady whose whole body is smeared with the fragrant Yakṣākardama ointment, O deity who shines with bangles.

103. O deity adorned with auspicious ornaments and wonderfully variegated pearl-necklaces, O lady whose lotus-like face shines with ear-rings and other ornaments.

104. O goddess with lotus-like hands (or with a lotus in your hands), obeisance to you. Be pleased, O beloved (consort) of Hari. Obeisance, obeisance to you, the (Vedic) lore in the form of Ṛk, Yajus and Sāma .

105. Be pleased, O daughter of the Ocean; look at us with your benign glances. Those who are seen by you shall attain the status of Brahmā, Rudra and Indra.

[The Words Addressed to Indra and Others by Lakṣmī Who was Pleased by the Eulogy]:—

Śrī Śuka said :

106. On being eulogized thus by the Devas, the delighted: Ramā having the chest of Viṣṇu for her abode, who should be seen only with Viṣṇu spoke to the Suras :

Śrī said :

107-109. You will immediately go back to your own regions after killing the demons. Those who do not have any position (of importance), those men on the earth who have been dislodged from their own positions, shall regain their own positions by eulogizing me with this hymn.

O Devas, those men on the earth who worship me with unbroken Bilva leaves, those who eulogize me with the hymn composed by you, shall become the receptacles of virtue, wealth, love and salvation.

110-111. Those men on the earth, O Devas, who come to this Padmasaras ('Lotus-pond') and take their holy bath (herein) and eulogize me, the beloved of Viṣṇu, shall obtain prosperity, long life, learning, brilliant sons, and all worldly pleasures. After enjoying all pleasures they shall attain salvation in the end.

112. After granting the boons thus the Goddess mounted Garuḍeśāna along with Lord Viṣṇu and went back to the abode, in Vaikuṇṭha .

Notes regarding tree worship:

Though the chapter tells the story of Vasu, a Niṣāda, Raṅgadāsa, a Śūdra and Prince Toṇḍamān, it indirectly records the Brahminization of tree worship of the simple hill tribe, Niṣādas (probably the present Kuruvas), into that of Veṅkaṭeśa . Their usual Naivedya to the tree-god was Śyāmāka (boiled) rice mixed with honey (vv 4-5). It was offered at the root of the tree (v 9). It was a Tamarind tree. The Lord had prohibited Raṅgadāsa from cutting down the Tamarind tree (v 31), for the Tamarind tree is Viṣṇu's abode and the Caṃpaka, that of Lakṣmī. The Bilva tree has a special place of honour with Śrīnivāsa as he manifested himself under a Bilva tree (vv 77-78). Bilva leaves are used in the worship of Veṅkaṭeśa (v 108). A temple was built there of Veṅkaṭeśa and of Lakṣmī by a Pallava Prince called here Toṇḍamān (which is really the name of the country around Kāñcī).

The evolution of god Viṭṭhala of Pandharpur in Maharashtra is also on similar lines.

As noted by Dr. N. Ramesan, The Tirumal Temple , Ch. 3, the age of Pallavas constitutes the first important landmark in the history of Toṇḍamaṇḍalam. (In the text the name of the region is transferred to the Prince.)

English translation

[Toṇḍamān Inherits the Kingdom from His Father]:—

Śrī Śuka said :

1. O king, this lake named Padmasaras is destructive of sins. Through glorification, recollection and holy dips it bestows fortune and prosperity on men on the earth. You too take your bath in this and then go to your father.

Śrī Varāha said :

2-5. On hearing these words of Śuka king Toṇḍamān toot his bath in the excellent lake Padmasaras, bowed to him, mounted his horse and returned to his city.

The father installed him as a crown-prince for three years. He noted the various good qualities of his son, such as the ability of pleasing aṇḍ reconciling (turbulent ones), capacity for work, heroism, courage, courteous good conduct aṇḍ devotion to Brāhmaṇas . So the king consecrated him (by sprinkling water) in accordance with the injunctions and crowned him king in his own place. After consoling his son the king went to the forest along with his wife.

[Vasu Sees Śrī Varāha in the Anthill [1]]:—

6-9. After inheriting the empire Toṇḍamān ruled over the kingdom.

In the forest of that Niṣāda the Lord assumed the form of a boar and grazed in the field of Śyāmāka grains every night. During the day time the forester used to see the imprints of the feet of the boar and followed them but failed to see him. One night with a bow (in his hand) he lay in wait. Then he saw the boar of magnificent features, having the lustre similar to that of a crore of moons. He was grazing in the middle of the Śyāmāka field. On seeing him he took up his bow and roared like a lion.

10. On hearing that roaring sound the boar came out of that Śyāmāka field hurriedly and went away. The king of Niṣādas followed the boar.

11. During the whole of the remaining part of the night the leader of the foresters pursued the boar of lunar lustre. (Ultimately) he saw it entering an anthill.

12. When the boar vanished within the anthill, it appeared as though the full moon had set behind a mountain. He became surprised as well as furious. The leader of the hunters dug up the anthill.

13-14. The boar was seen but the hunter swooned and fell down. On seeing his father fallen unconscious the son who was very devout, eulogized Lord Varāha (Boar). Thereby Hari became pleased. Possessing his father the Slayer of Madhu said:

Śrī Bhagavān said :

15. I am Varāha, the Lord of Devas . I permanently reside here. Tell the king to install me here and worship me.

16-17. The anthill should be washed with the milk of a black cow . The idol of Varāha should be taken out, placed on the ground and then installed on the rocky slab rising from the anthill by Brāhmaṇas and anchorites. Toṇḍamān, the excellent king, should worship me by means of various kinds of food offerings and other articles of enjoyment.

18-19. After saying this the Lord left him (Vasu). He became normal. The son of the hunter bowed down to his father who was comfortably seated. He intimated to his father everything as said by the Lord. On hearing the whole of the splendid statement of his son he became surprised.

[Vasu Recounts to King Toṇḍamān the Story of Varāha]:—

20. The hunter hastened (to the city) along with his followers to report this to the king. Vasu, the lord of the hunters, approached the entrance to the royal palace.

21-22. Knowing that the king of hunters had come, the excellent king called him in through the gatekeepers. The king honoured Vasu and his son along with their followers and attendants in the Assembly together with his ministers. The delighted king asked Vasu, the forester, “O forester, what is the purpose of your visit? Tell me.”

Vasu said :

23-25. O king, a mysterious thing has been witnessed (by me) in my forest. Listen, O king. A certain white boar grazed the Śyāmāka rice at night. With a bow in my hand I pursued that boar, O king. On being chased that boar ran with the speed of wind and entered an anthill on the banks of Svāmipuṣkariṇī even as I was watching, O king.

26-27. I furiously dug up the anthill, but fell unconscious oṇ the ground. This, my son, came and saw me lying on the ground unconscious. Purifying himself he eulogized the Lord of Devas, the Slayer of Madhu. Thereupon Lord Varāha possessing me spoke to my son:

28-33. “O lord of hunters, immediately intimate to the king all my account. Let the king wash the anthill with the milk of a black cow sprinkled on it. A splendid rocky slab will be seen within the anthill. The king should prepare through a sculptor an idol of mine in sitting posture with the face of a Boar with Goddess Earth seated on my left lap. It shall be installed by prominent sages and anchorites. Toṇḍamān should worship the same along with the excellent sages. He should slowly wash and bathe (the idol of) Śrīnivāsa whose pair of feet are covered by the anthill. He should do so (wash) with the milk of a dark tawny-coloured cow. Everyday it should be bathed as far as the foot-pedestal. He should get built ramparts (walls) on both the northern and southern sides."

After saying this the Lord left me. O king, I became normal. It is to communicate this act of the Lord of Devas to you that I have come.

[The King's Journey to Śeṣācala Through the Sub-terranean Path as Per Instructions of the Niṣāda and those Received in His Dream]:—

Śrī Varāha said :

34-37. On hearing it Toṇḍamān became surprised and delighted very much. After consultation with Puṣkara and other ministers he came to a decision on the issue. He became desirous of going to Veṅkaṭādri . He called together all the cowherds and ordered: "Bring all my tawny-coloured and black-coloured cows along with their calves near Veṅkaṭādri."

After commanding the cowherds thus he bade farewell to the Ministers saying, "The journey shall take place tomorrow." After dismissing all the officers of administration the king of perfect self-control entered the inner apartment. After telling that story to his wives at night the king went to sleep.

38-41. In his dream Śrīnivāsa pointed out the path of the cave to the king (who saw that) Hari had strewn sprouts and tender shoots from the city to the entrance to the cave.

After seeing such a dream that king hurriedly got up in the morning. He called together all the Ministers, the officers of the government and the Brāhmaṇas and told them about the dream in the manner it had occurred. He saw the sprouts at the entrance. [2]

At the proper auspicious hour Toṇḍamān mounted his horse and proceeded slowly following the sprouts and shoots with great delight. Then he reached the cave. On seeing it the king was surprised. He built a city there.

[The King Performs the Rite of Abhiṣeka and Builds a Rampart Wall at the Instance of the Lord]:—

42-43. After making the cave come within the (precincts of the) city he got a rampart wall built. The king stayed there and conquered the whole of the earth. He performed the rite of washing (the Varāha's anthill) with milk as instructed by the Lord of Devas and then made arrangements to build the rampart wall.

44-47. At that time the king was commanded by the Lord, of Devas himself: "Guard these two excellent trees of Tintiṇī (Tamarind) and Caṃpaka . The Tamarind tree is my abode while the Caṃpaka is the abode of Lakṣmī . They are always to be bowed to by kings, sages, Devas and human beings. After retaining these two, O excellent king, cut off all the other big trees. Build the rampart wall alone for me with an ornamented gateway and doors. A king of your lineage, Nārāyaṇa by name, a great devotee of mine, will make the Vimāna (Temple). He will adorn it with gold."

Śrī Varāha said :

48-50. After saying this to King Toṇḍamān the Lord of Śri became silent.

On hearing the words of the Lord and after building the rampart wall he worshipped the Lord along with the sages born in the families (beloṅging to the group) of Vaikhānasas (anchorites). Everyday the king came by the sub-terranean path and bowed down to the Lord. The excellent king ruled the kingdom virtuously, enjoying excellent pleasures.

[The Story of the Brāhmaṇa Vīraśarman who had Returned from the Pilgrimage to Gaṅgā]:—

51-54. At that very same time an excellent Brāhmaṇa of the southern region was on his way (to Kāśī) for taking a holy bath in Gaṅgā. He had started from his city along with his wife. The Brāhmaṇa lady became pregnant on the way. On seeing that his pregnant wife would not be (physically) capable enough to follow him the Brāhmaṇa wanted to see the king. He came to the entrance to the royal palace. Informed by the gatekeeper, the king called the excellent Brāhmaṇa, honoured him duly and enquired about his health and happiness.

The king asked :

55-58. What is the purpose of your visit, O Brāhmaṇa? What shall I do for you?

The Brāhmaṇa said :

O excellent king, I am Vīraśarman belonging to Vasiṣṭha Gotra . I am a Sāmavedin. Eager to have a holy bath in Gaṅgā, I started from my place along with my wife. On the way this meritorious lady of the family of Kuśika , well-known by the name Lakṣmī, has become pregnant. She is a chaste lady of very good conduct. I wish to keep her here in your abode and proceed with (my pilgrimage and) holy observances. Hence, O king, give her food and regular cash allowance as much as she wishes for. Let Lakṣmī be looked after till my return.

Śrī Varāha said :

59-61. On hearing his words the king sanctioned food grains and cash allowance to her for six months and gave her residence in the inner apartments.

After keeping her there the Brāhmaṇa became pleased and set out for the holy bath in Gaṅgā. He went to Gaṅgā Bhāgīrathī at the excellent holy place Prayāga . After bath he proceeded to Kāśī where he stayed for three days. After that he arrived at Gayā and the excellent Brāhmaṇa performed the Śrāddha ritual uṇto his (paternal) ancestors. [3]

62. After going to the city of Ayodhyā he went to Badarīvana . From there he went to Śālagrāma [4] and then started back towards his own native place.

63-66. After a lapse of two years on an auspicious day in the month of Caitra the excellent Brāhmaṇa returned. After proceeding ahead slowly he went to the king once again on the eleventh day in the bright half of Mādhava (Vaiśākha) month.

The king had forgotten about the Brāhmaṇa lady. As the king did not remember (to sanction the allowances) the proud Brāhmaṇa lady died in the house. Her dead body became very dry.

Vīraśarman opened his box of sealed pots of Gaṅgā water and handed one of the splendid pots to the king and asked him, “Is my wife happy and well?”

67-70. The king now remembered everything. He said to the Brāhmaṇa, “Be pleased to wait.” He went into the inner apartment and found her dead.

Without telling the Brāhmaṇa anything he entered the excellent cave. He bowed down to Śrī Nṛsiṃha and then again came back to the excellent cave. He went to visit the great Lord Śrīnivāsa accompanied by Śrī and Bhūmi . On seeing him come suddenly Dharā and Ramā hid themselves. As he was bowing down, the Lord said to him, “O king, why have you come at this odd hour?”After bowing down to the Lord the frightened king told him that the lady had died.

[The Greatness of the Excellent Lake Asthisarovara]:—

71-73. On hearing that the Lord of Devas said: “O king, do not be afraid of the excellent Brāhmaṇa. Place the dead lady in a palanquin accompanied by your own womenfolk. To the east of my shrine, O king, there is a lake named Asthisaras which prevents premature death. Bathe the dead body in that lake on the Dvādaśī (twelfth) day. She will be resuscitated. She will become united with the Brāhmaṇa as well as with the other ladies. Go quickly, O excellent king. Carry out the instruction given.”

74-80. On hearing these words of the Lord the king went back to his city. He placed that lady and other womenfolk in beautiful palanquins. Keeping the Brāhmaṇa at the head, the king went to visit the Lord. After reaching the Asthikūṭasaras he made the womenfolk take their bath. That (Brāhmaṇa lady) in the form of skin and bones was thrown by them into the excellent lake. She regained her life and all her limbs became fully developed as before. That lady of great auspiciousness rose up from the lake along with the womenfolk and queens after their bath. She rejoined the Brāhmaṇa, her husband, who had returned (from the pilgrimage) and became pleased.

After worshipping Had the king gave money to the Brāhmaṇa to the tune of a thousand gold coins as well as different kinds of garments. He then bade farewell to him and allowed him to go back to his own land, showing him due respect. The Brāhmaṇa heard about the incidents that had occurred in the life of his wife as well as the power of Veṅkaṭeśa . He showered blessings on the king and went back to his native land.

After the Brāhmaṇa had gone Śrīnivāsa spoke to the king once again:

81-83. “Everyday at midday, O king, after the food offering, come here and worship me with golden lotuses as you please. Then go back to the city, O lord of men, and rule over the kingdom as required by your duty (as a king). Whatever is desired by you, O king, will undoubtedly happen. You should not come at odd time, O king, on any occasion. After regularly performing the timely worship return to your capital and stay there.”

The king said :

84-85. O Lord of Devas, I shall do so. I shall perform worship at midday too.

Thus at the behest of the Lord he performed worship everyday with golden lotuses.

[The Story of the Devotee Named Bhīma Born in a Potter’s Family in the Village Kurvagrāma]:—

Once he saw a Tulasī (Basil) flower made of clay above his golden lotuses.

86-88. On being struck with wonder the excellent king asked the Lord of the Chiefs of Devas:

The king enquired :

By whom are you worshipped with lotuses and leaves of Tulasī made of clay?

On being asked by the king the Lord of Devas recollected and said to the kiṅg: “A certain potter, a great devotee of mine, resides in Kurvagrāma. [5] He worships me in his house, O king, and that (worship) is accepted by me.”

On hearing the words of the Lord thus the king went to meet him (the potter).

89. He went to the city of Kurvapura and called at the abode of the potter. On seeing the king come he stood there in front of him bowing down.

90. The excellent king asked (the potter) named Bhīma who stood thus:

Toṇḍamān asked :

O Bhīma of excellent family, how do you worship the Lord? Tell me.

Śrī Varāha said :

91. On being asked the potter said: “I have never known any worship. By whom has this been said, O excellent king, that the potter worships?”

Toṇḍamān said :

92-94. Your worship has been mentioned to me by Lord Śrīnivāsa.

On hearing the words of the king he remembered the boon granted to him formerly by the Lord.

Bhīma said :

“When the worship (that you perform) is revealed, when king Toṇḍamān comes, when you have a conversation with him, you will attain salvation”—formerly Veṅkaṭeśvara, the Lord, had granted this boon.

[The Devotee Named Bhīma, Resident of Kurvagrāma Attains Vaikuṇṭha along with His Wife]:—

95-99. After saying thus the potter along with Ms wife (got ready for their salvation).

On seeing that the heavenly chariot had come they saw Lord Janārdana . Bowing down to the Lord along with his wife the excellent devotee cast off his life.

Even as the king of kings was watching he assumed a divine form and got into the heavenly chariot. He then went to Viṣṇu ’s region along with (his wife turned into a) goddess.

On seeing this wonderful event the king became delighted. He returned to his own city. He crowned his son named Śrīnivāsa in accordance with the injunctions. He directed his son thus: “Protect the earth and the people virtuously.” After giving him directives the intelligent king performed a great penance. As he performed the penance, Lord Hari appeared before him directly.

[King Toṇḍamān Attains Sārūpya Through the Grace of Viṣṇu]:—

100-103. Lord Hari became visible to him as seated on Garuḍa in the company of Ramā and Bhūmi.

Śrī Bhagavān asked :

O excellent king, what shall I do for you? I have been propitiated by your penance.

On being told thus by the Lord of Devas Toṇḍamān, the king of kings, became delighted. With palms joined in reverence he said in faltering words:

“I wish to reside in your world that is devoid of death and old age. Grant me this boon alone, O Mādhava. This is what is desired by me.”

Śrī Varāha said :

104-106. After saying this he prostrated on the ground before the Lord with eight limbs touching the ground. He cast off the body and climbed into a heavenly chariot. He attained Sārūpya (‘similarity of form’) with the Śārṅga -wielding Lord and was eulogized by Gandharvas . He attained that region of Viṣṇu which is devoid of grief and delusion, which is free from death and old age and from which there is no return (to worldly existence).

[The Benefit Accruing from Listening to, Reading and Reciting the Greatness of This (Episode)]:—

107-109. O goddess of Devas of excellent complexion, he who recounts or listens to this future event recounted by me, goes to the world of Viṣṇu.

Śrī Sūta said :

He who listens to or reads with devotion this narrative of the future events and the sequel, the meritorious traditional story, enjoys all desirable things (in the world) and on death goes to the region of Viṣṇu.

[1]: [1] : As stated in the note on pp. 48-49, Toṇḍamān here means the king of Toṇḍamaṇḍala. The disappearance and stay of the divine Boar Viṣṇu into an anthill has its counterpart in the pastoral god Viṭṭhala—Bīradeva (of Maharashtra and Karnatak) who is supposed to have stayed in an anthill. There is a close similarity between catapulting of a primitive god into Viṭṭhala (of Pandharpur) and Veṅkaṭeśa, the veritable Viṣṇu from. Vaikuṇṭha—Tr.

[2]: [2] : The author hereby suggests that “Pallava” is the name of the dynasty that ruled over Toṇḍamaṇḍala (Kāñcī).

[3]: [3] : This is the proper order in Tristhalī Yātrā .

[4]: [4] : A place near the source of Gandak where Bharata and sage Pulaha performed penance (De 174).

[5]: [5] : The village of Kurvas, probably a Sanskritization of ‘Kurava’, a hill-tribe living in and around the Tirupati hill.

[Kāśyapa 's Absolution of Great Sins through the Holy Bath in Svāmipuṣkariṇī]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

1. Henceforth, O excellent Brāhmaṇa , I shall tell you in details a great and sacred story concerning the splendid Svāmipuṣkariṇī.

2. Formerly a certain Brāhmaṇa named Kāśyapa had his holy bath in this auspicious and most excellent Tīrtha and he was liberated from a great sin leading to (his fall into) hell.

The sages said :

3-4. O sage, what sin did this Brāhmaṇa named Kāśyapa commit? What was the sin from which he was liberated instantaneously by taking holy bath in the excellent Tīrtha here? O Sūta , kindly narrate this to us who faithfully listen to it. No thirst can remain in the persons who are satisfied by the nectar of your words.

Śrī Sūta said :

5. I shall recount the legendary story illustrating the greatness of Śrī Svāmipuṣkariṇī. It is destructive of the sins of those who read it.

[The Anecdote of Parīkṣit [1]]:—

6-7. Formerly there was a king named Parīkṣit. He was the son of Abhimanyu . He lived at Hastināpura protecting the earth righteously. Once while that king was engaged in hunting, he roamed about in the forest. The king who was sixty years old became afflicted with hunger and thirst.

8-9. He was eagerly searching for a deer that had vanished. The excellent king saw a sage engrossed in meditation. He asked, “A certain deer has been hit by me in this forest, O sage, with an arrow just now. O learned one, it was frightened and has fled. Was it seen by you?”

10-12. The sage was engaged in meditation. Further he was observing the vow of silence. Hence he did not sayanything. With the tip of his bow the king lifted a dead serpent and placed it on the shoulders of that great sage angrily. Then he returned to the city.

The sage had a son named Śṛṅgin. He had a friend named Kṛśa , an excellent Brāhmaṇa. The friend named Kṛśa said to his companion Śṛṅgin:

13. “Friend, your father wears a dead serpent over his shoulders now. You need not be proud. You need not be angry. It is in vain.”

14-15. Śṛṅgin became furious and desired to curse the king: “The foolish and ignorant person who placed the dead serpent on my father will die within seven days on being bitten by the serpent Takṣaka .”

The son of the sage cursed Parīkṣit, the descendant of Subhadrā , thus.

16. On hearing that the king had been cursed by his son, his father, the eminent sage named Śamīka , said to his son Śṛṅgin:

17. “Why have you cursed the king, the protector of all the people? How can we live peacefully in the world full of anarchy?

18-19. Anger gives rise to sin. Happiness is attained through kindness and mercy. He who by means of patience and forbearance dispels surging anger, obtains supreme happiness in this as well as the other world. Indeed, only those persons who are endowed with forgiveness obtain the highest good.”

20-21. Then Śamīka told his disciple named Gauramukha : “O Gauramukha, go to king Parīkṣit and report to him about this curse uttered by my son, namely the biting by Takṣaka, the king (of serpents). O highly intelligent one, return to my presence quickly.”

22. On being told thus by Śamīka Gauramukha went to the king. After approaching him he said to king Parīkṣit, the descendant of Subhadrā:

23-25. “On seeing the dead serpent placed on his father’s shoulders by you, Śṛṅgin, the son of Śamīka, has angrily cursed you: ‘On the seventh day from today the son of Abhimanyu shall be bitten by Takṣaka, the great serpent, and shall immediately be burned by the fire of his poison.’ O king, Śṛṅgin, the son of that sage, has cursed you thus. It is to tell you this that bis. father has deputed me to you.”

26-27. After saying this to the king Gauramukha returned in a hurry. After the departure of Gauramukha the king who was grief-stricken, got a Maṇḍapa (hall) built in the middle of Gaṅgā . It was so high that it touched the clouds. It was supported by a single pillar.

28-29. With great concentration he prepared himself to quell the poison of Takṣaka through physicians conversant with medicinal herbs and the knowers of Mahāgāruḍa Mantra . The king endowed with great devotion to Viṣṇu sat within the lofty Maṇḍapa accompanied by the most excellent ones among many celestial sages, Brāhmaṇas , sages and saintly kings.

30. At that time, a certain Brāhmaṇa named Kāśyapa, the most excellent one among those who were experts in the use of spells (Mantras), proceeded (towards the royal abode) in order to save the king from the greatly virulent poison of Takṣaka.

31-34. The leading Brāhmaṇa who was very poor and was desirous of wealth (came to that place) on the seventh day. In the meantime Takṣaka also came there in the guise of a Brāhmaṇa. On the way he saw Kāśyapa and spoke to him, “O Brāhmaṇa, O great sage, where are you going now? Tell me.”

On being asked thus, the Brāhmaṇa Kāśyapa told Takṣaka: “Today Takṣaka will be burning the great king Parīkṣit with the fire of his poison. I am now going to him in order to quell it.” On being told thus Takṣaka spoke to that Brāhmaṇa once again:

35-37. “I am Takṣaka, O excellent Brāhmaṇa. One who is bitten by me cannot be cured even in a hundred years, even by means of ten thousand Mahā Mantras . If you are now competent to treat one who is bitten by me, I shall bite a tree several Yojanas high. You revive it. Then I shall conclude that you are adequately competent (to quell my poison), O Brāhmaṇa.”

After saying thus Takṣaka bit that tree.

38-42. That exceedingly lofty tree was reduced to ash. Before this incident a certain man had climbed that tree. He too was burnt by the fire of Takṣaka’s poison. Both of them, Kāśyapa and Takṣaka, were not aware of that man.

Kāśyapa vowed within the hearing of Takṣaka, “Let all the Brāhmaṇas and others witness the power of my Mantra now.” After saying this Kāśyapa, the most excellent one among those conversant with spells, resuscitated that tree which had been reduced to ash by the fire of poison. He brought it back to life by means of the power of his spell. That man also was revived along with the tree. Thereupon, Takṣaka spoke to Kāśyapa, that expert in the use of spells:

43-46. “O Brāhmaṇa, whatever you do, see that the words of the sage do not turn out to be false. I shall give you twice the amount that the king is likely to give you. O excellent Brāhmaṇa, return immediately.” After saying thus Takṣaka gave him the most valuable gems and made the Brāhmaṇa Kāśyapa who was well-versed in spells, return (to his own place).

With the vision born of knowledge Kāśyapa found out that the king was destined to live only for a short period. Having obtained the gems from Takṣaka Kaśyapa [Kāśyapa?] quietly went back to his hermitage.

Takṣaka called together all the serpents at that very moment and told them:

47. “Ye all assume the guise of sages and go to that king immediately. Give fruits as presents to Parīkṣit.”

48-51. Saying “So be it”, all the serpents offered fruits unto the king. Takṣaka assumed the form of a worm and hid himself in a certain jujube fruit ready to bite the king.

King Parīkṣit distributed all the fruits given by the serpents in the guise of Brāhmaṇas to the ministers and elderly gentlemen. But out of curiosity he took a big fruit in his hand. At that time the sun was about to set.

52-55. The men present there, all the Brāhmaṇas and the kings, said to one another, “May the words of the sage not be false”(?). Even as they were saying thus, a red worm was clearly seen by king Parīkṣit and by all the others. The king said, “Will this worm bite me now, O excellent Brāhmaṇas?” Saying thus he placed that fruit upon his neck along with the worm. Takṣaka who was residing in the fruit placed upon his neck suddenly came out of that fruit and coiled round the body of the king.

56-59. When the king was encircled by Takṣaka, all those who were at the sides fled out of fear. Afterwards, O Brāhmaṇas, the king was immediately burned and reduced to ash along with the palatial building by the powerful fire of the poison of Takṣaka.

Along with the priests the ministers of that king performed the obsequies of the king and crowned his son named Janamejaya in the kingdom with a desire to protect the whole world.

The Brāhmaṇa, the excellent sage named Kāśyapa who had come to save the king from Takṣaka, was censured by all the people.

60-62. He wandered over all the territories. He was rebuked and reviled by all good people. He did not get any place to stay in any village or in a hermitage. To whichever land he went he was driven out from those places by the general public. Then he sought refuge in (Sage) Śākalya . Kāśyapa who was censured by good people, bowed down to sage Śākalya. He intimated this to the noble-souled Śākalya:

Kāśyapa said :

63-67. O Śākalya, O favourite of Hari , O holy lord conversant with all types of pious activities, the sages, Brāhmaṇas, friends and others censure me. I do not know the reason why meṇ censure me. Neither Brāhmaṇa-slaughter, nor drinking of liquor, neither defiling the bed of the preceptor, nor stealing, nor the sin of associating with these (sinful) people have been committed by me. O sage, none of the other types of sins too has been committed by me. Yet, people, kinsmen and others censure me for nothing. If you know the fault committed by me, O Śākalya, tell that to me.

When this was said by Kāśyapa, the great sage named Śākalya meditated for a short while and spoke thus to Kāśyapa, O excellent Brāhmaṇas:

[Pious and Virtuous Acts Enunciated by Śākalya]:—

Śākalya said :

68-73. You went to save the great king Parīkṣit from Takṣaka. But on your way you were prevented by Takṣaka.

They call that person a Brahmaghātaka (i.e. slayer of a Brāhmaṇa) who is competent to treat a person afflicted by poison or sickness but does not save such a person in this world. Whether it is due to anger, lust, fear, covetousness, jealousy or delusion, O leading Brāhmaṇa, if a person does not save a man afflicted due to poison or other ailments (he has no way of atonement). A Brāhmaṇa-slayer, a drink-addict, a thief, a defiler of preceptor’s bed and one who is defiled by associating with these—none of these has any way of expiation.

There is some kind of atonement (from sin) for a person who sells his daughter, who sells horses as well as one who is ungrateful. Such expiation is found in scriptures. But the person who, though competent, does not save one who is afflicted by poisoṇ or ailments, has no mode of atonement. Even by means of ten thousand kinds of expiations he cannot be saved from his sins.

74-78. No righteous person should take food with him in the same row. He should not converse with him. He should not look at that man at any place. Merely by talking to him one will incur great sins.

That great king Parīkṣit was very virtuous and had spotless reputation. He was a devotee of Viṣṇu. He was a great Yogin and protector of the four castes. He had heard devoutly the story of Hari from the son of Vyāsa (i.e. Śuka). You did not protect him. At the words (i.e. request) of Takṣaka you returned. Therefore, you are blamed by leading Brāhmaṇas and kinsmen.

Although the end of the life of the great king Parīkṣit was imminent, treatment must have been administered by learned men till the death (of the patient).

79-81. “As long as the vital airs ding to the throat of a mam about to die, it is necessary that treatment should be continued. The way of Kāla (Death)is crooked.” This verse has been quoted by persons who have mastered the science of medicine. Therefore, though you were capable of treating, you did not administer medicine. You returned from half the way. Hence you are despised.

On being told by Śākalya thus Kāśyapa said:

Kāśyapa said :

82-84. O sage of holy rites, tell the means of quelling this sin of mine, so that my kinsmen and friends will accept me once again. O Śākalya, O favourite of Hari, have pity on me.

On being requested by Kāśyapa thus, Śākalya the eminent sage meditated for a short while and spoke thus to Kāśyapa out of sympathy:

Śākalya said :

85. I shall tell you the means for quelling this sin. That should be carried out by you immediately. Do not delay, O Brāhmaṇa.

86. On the banks of Suvarṇamukharī there is (a mountain) well-known as Veṅkaṭādri . It is the place of residence of the Lord of Lakṣmī . It is honoured in all the worlds.

87-88. On that meritorious holy mountain Śeṣagiri which is bowed to by Suras and Asuras and which destroys the sins of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter, drinking of liquor and stealing of gold, there is (a lake named) Svāmipuṣkariṇī, the dispeller of all sins. It is to the north of Śrīnivāsa . It yields auspiciousness.

89-92a. Go to the mountain Veṅkaṭādri. Take your holy bath in the auspicious Svāmipuṣkariṇī with due Saṅkalpa (i.e. ceremonious pronouncement of one’s resolve). Visit Hari, Lord Varāha , go along the western bank, go to Han’s temple and there, in accordance with the injunctions, visit Śrīnivāsa residing on Svarṇācala. Worship the Lord Supreme, the bestower of immunity from fear, the Lord holding the conch and the discus, the Lord adorned with the garland of sylvan flowers. On visiting him you will be rid of your sins. Do not be in any doubt, O Brāhmaṇa.

92b-94a. On being told thus by Śākalya, Kāśyapa, the eminent sage, went to the prominent mountain Veṅkaṭa Śaila , bowed down to by Suras and Asuras. He took his holy bath in the auspicious Puṣkariṇī with all requisite observances. The Brāhmaṇa Kāśyapa who was a master of medicine and medical science, regained normalcy (i.e. his previous status).

94b-96. All the kinsmen, O Brāhmaṇas, honoured Kāśyapa, the excellent Brāhmaṇa, in the way proper to him (saying) “There is no doubt. You are worthy of being honoured.”

Thus, O Brāhmaṇas, the greatness of Veṅkaṭācala has been recounted to you. One who listens to this with devotion is honoured in the world of Viṣṇu.

[1]: [1] : This story is adopted from Mbh, Ādi Chs. 40-43. The Mbh story is a Purāṇic way of telling how Takṣaka tried to take political revenge on Arjuna’s grandson for his (Arjuna’s) driving out the Nāgas from their Fatherland, the Khāṇḍava forest.

English translation

[Redemption from Tāmisra and other Hells Through Holy Bath in Svāmipuṣkariṇī]:—

The sages said :

1-2. O Sūta conversant with the essence of all things, O master of Vedas and Vedāṅgas , O holy lord, describe to us the greatness of Śrī Svāmipuṣkariṇī, merely by remembering which a man on the earth shall become liberated.

Śrī Sūta said :

3-8. Those who praise, those who take their holy bath in and those who speak about Svāmitīrtha never experience the tortures of the hells of twenty-eight types, [1] viz. Tāmisra, Andhatāmisra , Raurava , Mahāraurava , Kuṃbhīpāka, Kālasūtra , Asipatravana , Kṛmibhakṣa , Andhakūpa , Sandaṃśa , Śālmalī , Lālābhakṣa , Avīci , Sārameyādana, Vajrakaṇaka, Kṣārakardamapātana, Rakṣogaṇāśana, Śūlaprotanirodhana, Tirodhāna, Sūcīmukha , Pūyaśoṇitabhakṣa, Viṣāgniparipīḍana etc. (a few missing). O Brāhmaṇas , by taking holy dip in Svāmitīrtha a man does not fall into any of the hells numbering twenty-eight.

9-10. If anyone steals wealth, children or wives of others, he is bound with Kālapāśa (Noose of the god of Death) by the terrible messengers of Yama and he is dropped into the terrible hell Tāmisra. He is kept there for a number of years. If the person takes his holy bath in Svāmitīrtha, he is not thrown into that (hell).

11-13a. A base man who is antagonistic to his mother, father or Brāhmaṇas is thrown into the hell Kālasūtra which extends over ten thousand Yojanas . He is cast into a copper-threshing mill which is heated by fire from below and by the Sun's rays from above while the victim is afflicted with hunger. If he takes his holy bath in Puṣkariṇī , he is not thrown into that (hell).

13b-14. A man who transgresses the path laid down in the Vedas and clings to evil ways is thrown into the terrible hell Asipatravana by the servants of Yama. If he takes his bath in Svāmitīrtha, he is not cast into that (hell).

15-17. A man who (exclusively) eats sauce of ground peas etc. in a different row, a man who, due to delusion, takes food without performing the five Yajñas , O Brāhmaṇas, is thrown into the hell Kṛmibhojana by the soldiers of Yama. He will be eaten by hundreds of worms. He will be compelled to eat the worms. He himself will be turned into a worm and will stay there till the sins are exhausted. If he takes his holy bath in Svāmitīrtha, he is not thrown into that (hell).

18-20a. If any person takes away the wealth of a Brāhmaṇa with (showy) friendliness or through force, if a king or his officer takes away the wealth of others (illegally), be is tortured by means of tongs heated in fire pits full of red hot iron balls in the terrible shell Sandaṃśa by Yama's men. If he takes his holy bath in Svāmitīrtha, he is not thrown into that (hell).

20b-23a. If a base man carnally approaches a forbidden woman or if a woman carnally approaches a forbidden man, O Brāhmaṇa, they are compelled to embrace red hot iron (dummy of a) woman or man as the case may be. They will stand like this as long as the moon and the sun last. They are thrown into the terrible hell named Sūcī by the servants of Yama. If he or she takes the holy bath in Svāmitīrtha, they are not thrown into that (hell).

23b-24. A person who harasses or torments any creature in diverse ways and modes of affliction, is thrown into the terrible hell Śālmalī full of thorns. If he takes his holy bath in Svāmitīrtha, he is not thrown into that (hell).

25-26a. If a king or his servant closely follows a heretic, if anyone breaks the boundaries of piety and virtue, be is thrown into Vaitaraṇī . If he takes his holy bath in Svāmitīrtha, he is not thrown into that (hell).

26b-28. A person defiled by the contact of a Śūdra woman, a person devoid of cleanliness and good conduct, a person bereft of shame, a person who has abandoned (i.e. flouted the authority of) the Vedas, a person of perpetual brutish activities is thrown into Atibībhatsa ('extremely hideous') hell filled with putrid matter, faeces, urine, blood, phlegm, bile etc. by the servants of Yama. If he takes his holy bath in Svāmitīrtha, he is not thrown into that (hell).

29-30. If a person going on a hunt torments deer and wild animals through hounds and arrows, he will be pierced through by volleys of arrows in the other world by the servants of Yama. He is thrown into the hell named Prāṇarodha by the servants of Yama. If he takes his holy bath in Svāmitīrtha he is not thrown into that (hell).

31-32. If a hypocrite kills animals in a Yajña without the rites performed in accordance with the injunctions, O Brāhmaṇas, he is cast into the hell Vaiśasa in the other world by the servants of Yama. He is cut, shorn and chipped by the soldiers of Yama. If he takes bath in Puṣkariṇī, he is not thrown into that (hell).

33-34a. If a person compels his own wife of the same caste to drink semen virile, in the other world he is thrown into a pit of semen virile and compelled to drink it. If he takes his holy bath in Puṣkariṇī, he is not thrown into that (hell).

34b-36a. If a person waylays men and robs them, if a person administers poison, if a person burns down a whole village, or if a person steals the merchandise of a trader, O excellent Brāhmaṇas, in the other world he is thrown into the terrible hell named Vajradaṃṣṭra and kept there for a long time. If he takes his holy bath in Svāmitīrtha, he is not thrown into that (hell).

36b-37. There are many other hells in the other world, but by taking a bath into Svāmitīrtha a man does not fall into them.

By taking bath once in Puṣkariṇī one derives the benefit of a horse-sacrifice.

38. (By him) knowledge of the soul shall be attained directly as well as the four types of salvation. (His) intellect does not revel in sin nor shall there be any misery.

39. The benefit that is obtained by men through Tulāpuruṣadāna (i.e. making a gift of some stipulated articles weighed against the donor) is obtained by persons by taking holy plunge in Svāmitīrtha.

40. The benefit that is obtained by men by means of a gift of a thousand cows is obtained by men by taking holy bath in Svāmitīrtha.

41. By taking a holy dip in Svāmitīrtha a person immediately attains whatever he desires among (the objectives in life such as) virtue, wealth, pleasure and salvation.

42. Whether one has committed great sins or even has committed all sins, O Brāhmaṇas, one becomes purified immediately by taking bath in Svāmitīrtha.

43. By taking holy bath in Svāmitīrtha men shall obtain intellect, fortune, fame, wealth, knowledge, virtue, detachment and purity of mind.

44-45. Ten thousand sins of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter, ten thousand sins of imbibing liquor, ten thousand sins of carnally approaching the preceptor's wife committed by habitual sinners, ten thousand sins of theft of gold and crores of the sins of associating with these sinners—all these are quickly dissolved by taking holy plunge in Svāmitīrtha.

46-47. All the sins on a par with the sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter, the sin of drinking liquor, the sin of carnally approaching the wife of the preceptor, the sin of stealing gold and the sin of associating with these sinners—O believers in Veda , all these perish by taking holy bath in Svāmitīrtha.

[If Persons have no Faith in the Greatness of Svāmitīrtha, They will Fall into Great Hells]:—

48-49. No doubt should be entertained in the matter mentioned above. Otherwise the servants (of Yama) will place heated axe at the tip of his tongue. If anyone says that this is exaggerated praise, he shall fall into a hell. He should be known as a pig excluded from all holy rites.

50-52. Alas, the folly, alas, the silliness, the stupidity of (ordinary) people, O excellent Brāhmaṇas, who try to revel in other places and avoid this holy spot even while there is the Tīrtha named Svāmitīrtha which is destructive of all sins, which bestows the knowledge of non-duality on men, which yields worldly pleasures and salvation, which grants all desired objects always and is destructive of ignorance! Alas, the extent of (their) delusion which cannot be adequately expressed by me!

53-54. One who has taken his bath in Svāmitīrtha need not be afraid of the god of Death. Those men who visit Svāmitīrtha and take bath therein, eulogize it, praise it, touch it or bow down to it, do not drink the breast-milk of mothers (again) (i.e. get Mokṣa), O Brāhmaṇas.

55. Thus, O Brāhmaṇas, the greatness of Svāmitīrtha has been narrated to you. It yields worldly pleasures and salvation to men. It dispels all sins.

[1]: [1] : The different types of hells, the tortures therein and sins for which they are meant are detailed in different Purāṇas like MkP, PdP and others. They differ in some details from this chapter. These deterrent punishments are proclaimed in order to dissuade people from committing immoral acts.

English translation

[The Story of Dharmagupta]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

1. I shall recount the greatness of Svāmitīrtha once again out of respect for you all, O residents of Naimiṣa forest.

2. There was a great king named Nanda . He was born of the Lunar race. He ruled righteously over this oceangirt [ocean-girt?] earth.

3-4a. He had a son who is remembered by the name Dharmagupta. Nanda entrusted the burden of protection of the kingdom to his son. The old king who had controlled his sense-organs and mastered (craving for) food entered a penance grove.

4b-5. When the father had gone to the penance grove, the king named Dharmagupta protected the earth. He was conversant with virtue (Dharma). He was skilled in statesmanship. He worshipped Devas , the chief of whom is Indra , by means of many kinds of Yajñas .

6-7a. To Brāhmaṇas he gave monetary gifts and land grants. When that king was ruling, all the people were devoted to their duties. There were no depredations of thieves etc. in that kingdom.

7b-10. Once Dharmagupta mounted his excellent horse, O eminent Brāhmaṇas, eager to go ahunting. He roamed about iṇ the forest very terrible due to lions and tigers. The quarters in the forest were covered with Tamāla (Indian Cinnamon), Tāla (palm tree), Hintāla (marshy date tree) and Kurabaka (red amaranth). The spaces in between the cardinal points echoed with the humming sound of the swarms of inebriated bees. All the lakes in the forest were full of water and abounded in golden lotuses, white lotuses, blue lotuses and water lilies. There were many ascetics who graced the forest.

11. While king Dharmagupta roamed about in the forest, O Brāhmaṇas, night befell him enveloping all the surrounding quarters with darkness.

12. The king endowed with humility performed the evening prayer (Sandhyā) in the forest and repeated the Gāyatrī Mantra , the mother of the Vedas .

13-14. Afraid of lions, tigers and other (wild animals) the prince resorted to a tree. A certain bear that was frightened of a lion came near the prince. A certain lion roaming in the forest chased the bear. The bear chased by the lion came to the tree and climbed it.

15. On climbing the tree the bear saw the king of noble soul and great strength and exploit perched on the tree.

16-18. On seeing him the wild bear said to the king: “O eminent king, do not be afraid. Let us both stay here the whole of the night. A lion of very huge body with great strength aṇḍ large curved teeth has come to the foot of the tree. He is excessively terrible. During the first half of the night you may go to sleep being protected by me. I will remain awake. Thereafter, O king of great intellect, protect me as I sleep during the later half of the night.”

19. On hearing his words the son of Nanda went to sleep. Then the lion told the bear, “Let this king who is asleep be given away to me.”

20. The bear who was conversant with virtue said to the lion, O excellent Brāhmaṇas: “You do not know righteousness, O king of beasts roaming in the forest.

21. Those who are guilty of breach of trust will face great difficulties in the world. The sins of those who are treacherous to friends cannot be destroyed even by means of ten thousand Yajñas.

22. One can somehow expiate for all the sins such as that of Brāhmaṇa -slaughter etc., but the sin of the treacherous ones will not perish even after crores of rebirths.

23. O lion, I do not consider Meru too heavy to the surface of the earth. I consider a treacherous fellow burdensome and very heavy (to the earth).”

24-27. On being told thus by the bear the lion kept quiet. When Dharmagupta woke up, the bear went to sleep on the tree. Thereupon, the lion spoke to the king, “Give away this bear to me.” On being told thus by the lion the king unhesitatingly dropped to the ground that bear that had gone to sleep placing its head on his lap! While being dropped down by the king, the bear supported himself by holding on to the tree. Fortunately he did not fall on the ground from the tree. Then the bear approached the king and angrily spoke these words:

28. “O king, I am a scion of the family of Bhṛgu . My name is Dhyānakāṣṭha. I can assume any form I wish. I have assumed this form of a bear.

29. Why did you let me down while I was asleep though I am devoid of any sin, O king? By my curse you shall instantly become insane. You will be roaming about over the earth.”

30. After cursing the king thus the sage spoke to the lion: “You are not (really) a lion. You are a great Yakṣa , a minister of Kubera .

31. Out of your ignorance once you joyously sported about in the company of women in the presence of Gautama on the mountain Himavān .

32. By chance Gautama came out of his hut to fetch sacrificial twigs. On seeing you naked he pronounced a curse:

33. ‘Since you remained in my hermitage today without any clothes on, you will undoubtedly be turned into a lion today.’

34. Formerly you were a Yakṣa and a minister of Kubera named Bhadra . It was through the curse of Gautama that you obtained the form of a lion.

35. Indeed Kubera is by nature righteous. His servants too are like him. Hence why do you kill me, a sage and resident of the forest?

36-37. O lord of beasts, I know all this through the power of meditation."

On being told thus by Dhyānakāṣṭha he immediately abandoned the form of lion and resumed the form of Yakṣa, the minister of Kubera. With palms joined in reverence he bowed down to sage Dhyānakāṣṭha and said:

38-42a. "O great sage, today all those previous events have been recollected by me. At the time of cursing me Gautama had mentioned about the end of the curse as well. Gautama, the eminent sage, had said to me thus, O Brāhmaṇa: 'When you carry on a conversation with Dhyānakāṣṭha in the form of a bear, you will get rid of this form of lion and will regain the form of Yakṣa.' Since my form of lion has been destroyed now, I know you, O great sage, as the pure ascetic named Dhyānakāṣṭha who can always assume any form he likes."

After saying this, the eminent Yakṣa bowed down to Dhyānakāṣṭha, got into an excellent aerial chariot and went to Alakāpurī.

42b-43. On seeing the excellent king in the form of a mad man the ministers took him to his father's presence on the banks of Revā . To him they intimated the mental derangement of his son.

[At the Instance of Jaimini Dharmagupta Takes His Holy Bath in Svāmitīrtha whereby His Madness Disappears]:—

44-46. After knowing the account of his son, Nanda, the father, took the son immediately to the presence of Jaimini. To him he reported the story of the son from the beginning:

"O Holy Lord Jaimini, my son has become insane now. O great sage, tell me the means of curing his madness."

47. On being requested thus, Jaimini, the eminent sage, meditated for a long time. After meditating long he said to king Nanda:

48. "It was on account of the curse of Dhyānakāṣṭha that your son became mad. I shall tell you the means of getting liberated from his curse.

49-53a. On the sacred mountain Veṅkaṭādri which is destructive of all sins and consists of many kinds of minerals, on the banks of Suvarṇamukharī there is a very great Tīrtha named Svāmipuṣkariṇī. It is the holiest of holy Tīrthas ; it is the most auspicious of all auspicious places. It is mentioned in the Vedas; it is highly meritorious; it dispels the (great) sins like Brāhmaṇa-slaughter etc. O highly intelligent one, take your son there and make him bathe therein. Immediately his madness will disappear. There is no doubt about that"

On being told thus Nanda bowed down to Jaimini, the eminent sage, took his son and went to Svāmipuṣkariṇī.

53b-57. There he made his son take his bath with the requisite holy observances. Merely by taking his bath the son got rid of his madness instantaneously. King Nanda too took his holy bath in the waters of Svāmipuṣkariṇī.

Along with his son, the father stayed there for a day, worshipping Veṅkaṭeśa , Śrīnivāsa , the storehouse of mercy. Nanda took leave of his son and went to the forest for penance.

After the father had departed the son, king Dharmagupta, offered much wealth devoutly to Veṅkaṭeśa, O Brāhmaṇas. He gave money, food-grains and land to Brāhmaṇas.

58-60. Thereafter, he went to his city along with his ministers. He righteously protected the kingdom inherited from his father and grandfather and rendered it devoid of thorns (i.e. enemies and troubles). O Brāhmaṇas, Dharmagupta was highly virtuous.

Those man who are afflicted with madness, epileptic fits, evil spirits etc., O eminent Brāhmaṇas, shall be liberated from them by taking the holy bath here in Puṣkariṇī . It is the truth, truth alone that I speak.

61. He who goes to another Tīrtha abandoning Svāmipuṣkariṇī, leaves off the tasty cow's milk and requests for the juice of spurge (i.e. a kind of plant having milky juice).

62-64. All those men who take their bath in any water anywhere repeating (the name) 'Svāmitīrtha' three times, O Brāhmaṇas, will go to Brahmā 's region.

Thus, O Brāhmaṇas, the auspicious story of Dharmagupta has been related to you. Merely by listening to this the sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter perishes.

English translation

[The Story of a Brāhmaṇa Named Sumati]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

1-2. O ascetics, O ye all residents of Naimiṣa forest, I shall recount once more the greatness of Svāmitīrtha . Formerly, on account of his association with a Kirātī ('huntress') Sumati, a Brāhmaṇa, drank liquor. He took his bath in Puṣkariṇī and was liberated from the sin.

The sages asked :

3-4. Whose son was Sumati? How did he come (i.e. become addicted) to drink liquor? How was he enamoured of a Kirāta woman? O Sūta , the most excellent one among those conversant with the Purāṇas , kindly narrate this now in detail to us all.

Śrī Sūta said :

5-6. In the land named Mahārāṣṭra there was an orthodox Brāhmaṇa well-known as Yajñadeva. He was a master of the Vedas and Vedāṅgas . He was very compassionate, hospitable to guests and a regular worshipper of Śiva and Nārāyaṇa . That Yajñadeva had a son named Sumati.

7. He left his father and deserted his chaste wife. Devoted to an assembly of lecherous persons, he went to the Utkala land (Orissa).

8. In that land there lived a Kirāta woman (a Kirātī) who was young and of enchanting beauty. For a long time she tempted young men and took away all their wealth.

9. Sumati, the base Brāhmaṇa, went to her house. That huntress (Kirātī) caught hold of Sumati, (though) he was a Brāhmaṇa without wealth.

[Due to His Association with the Kirātī the Brāhmaṇa Named Sumati Incurs a Great Sin]:—

10-12. Sumati associated with her. He was solely interested in sexual union with her. From here and there he stole many things and much wealth and always handed them over to her. He sported with her for a long time. He took food in her house. He drank liquor along with her from the same goblet. Sporting about thus with her for a long time, eagerly engaged in sensual pleasures, he never remembered his parents or wife.

13. Once he went to the house of a certain Brāhmaṇa to commit theft along with the Kirātas . He too assumed the guise of a Kirāta.

14-15. He was rash and ferocious. With a sword in his hand he went to steal his wealth. With his sword he killed the master of that house, took away plenty of wealth and went to the house of the Kirātī.

The terrible, hideous, evil spirit of the sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter followed him as he proceeded ahead.

16. Clad in dark-blue clothes, the terrible spirit with extremely red hair roared boisterously shaking heaven and earth.

17-18. Chased by the ogress, he wandered over the whole of the earth. Thus roaming over the entire earth once Sumati went to his own village. The evil Brāhmaṇa of vicious soul was frightened on being chased by that evil spirit. He went into his own house.

19. The devil of the sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter pursued him and went to the house along with him. Saying “Save me, save me”, Sumati sought refuge in his father.

20. Saying to him, “Do not be afraid”, the father exerted himself to protect him. At that time Brahmahatyā spoke to his father:

Brahmahatyā said :

21-22. O Yajñadeva, O excellent Brāhmaṇa, do not accept him. He is a drink-addict. He is a thief. He is murderer of a Brāhmaṇa. He is a great sinner. He is antagonistic to his mother and father, a deserter of his wife. He is a sinner. He is defiled due to his association with a Kirātī. Leave him off. He is vicious.

23-24. If you agree to protect, O Brāhmaṇa, this son who is a great sinner, I will devour your wife, his wife, you as well as this son, O Brāhmaṇa. I will devour the whole family. Hence leave this son off. If you leave this son off, I will release all of you now.

25. It does not behove you, O highly intelligent one, to get the whole family destroyed for the sake of one member.

On being told thus by her, Yajñadeva spoke to her:

Yajñadeva said :

26. Affection for my son afflicts me. How can I forsake him?

On hearing that utterance of the Brāhmaṇa Brahmahatyā spoke to him:

Brahmahatyā said :

27-29. He has become fallen. He has been banished from the social system of castes and stages of life. Do not show any affection to this son. Even his sight is censurable.

After saying this, even as Yajñadeva was looking, that Brahmahatyā struck his son named Sumati with her palm. Crying out “O father, O father” he lamented much.

[Means of Getting Free from Brahmahatyā Suggested to Sumati by Durvāsas]:—

30-31. The father, mother and wife of Sumati lamented then.

In the meantime the great Yogī Durvāsas, the virtuous and excellent sage, a part of Śaṅkara himself, fortunately came there. On seeing that sage, the incarnation of Rudra , Yajñadeva eulogized and bowed to him. On behalf of his son he begged of him an asylum:

32-37. “O great Yogin , O Durvāsas, you are a part of Śaṅkara himself. Persons devoid of merit will never have a vision of yours. My son is slayer of a Brāhmaṇa, a drink-addict and a thief. Even the ogress of the sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter has come to strike him down. Tell me the means whereby this son of mine shall be rid of the great sins and this terrible Brahmahatyā shall cease to be (i.e. to torment him) quickly. Take pity on my son. He is the only son of mine, O sage. I have no other son. If he dies, my family will become extinct and uprooted. There will not be anyone to offer riceballs to the Manes. So, O holy lord, O sage, take pity on us."

38. On being told thus, Durvāsas, a part of Śaṅkara, meditated for a long time and said to Yajñadeva, the most excellent Brāhmaṇa:

Durvāsas said :

39. O Yajñadeva, an extremely terrible sin has been committed by your son. His sin cannot be expiated even by ten thousand modes of expiation.

40. Still I shall suggest an atonement for the suppression of that sin of your son. O Brāhmaṇa, listen (carefully) with your mind not distracted by anything else.

41. On the highly meritorious mountain Veṅkaṭādri which is destructive of all sins, there is a lake named Svāmipuṣkariṇī that bestows auspiciousness.

42-43. If your son takes his bath there he shall be rid of sins instantaneously.

[Sumati Liberated from Brahmahatyā Through Holy Bath in Svāmipuṣkariṇī]:—

On hearing these words of the sage Yajñadeva of great intellect took his son and went to Svāmipuṣkariṇī. He made his son bathe there—his son Sumati who was tormented by the evil spirit of the sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter.

44-45. A sweet-toned ethereal voice said to the Brāhmaṇa:

"O Yajñadeva of good holy rites, O Brāhmaṇa of exalted magnificence, your son has become purified by means of this holy bath. O Brāhmaṇa, do not entertain any doubt. That Tīrtha has a power of this sort. It is an axe unto the tree of sins."

46. Thus, O Brāhmaṇas , the ancient legend has been recounted to you all. It yields the benefit of a Vājapeya sacrifice to those who listen and read.

English translation

Śrī Sūta said :

1-3. Listen with great concentration (of mind) to the greatness of Kṛṣṇa Tīrtha located on the mountain named Veṅkaṭa that is highly meritorious and destructive of all sins.

By merely taking the bath here even an ungrateful person will be liberated (from sins). All those persons who insult and dishonour fathers, mothers, preceptors and elders, those who are deluded, those who are wicked in their minds, and others who are ungrateful and shameless, become purified merely by bathing in this Kṛṣṇa Tīrtha .

4-5. Formerly there lived a sage named Kṛṣṇa on the mountain named Veṅkaṭa. He was engaged in penance. He meditated on Viṣṇu with great concentration. It was he who made a Tīrtha for the purpose of bathing. It is an excellent Tīrtha. By taking bath there even once even an ungrateful man becomes liberated.

6. In this connection I shall recount the ancient legend that is destructive of sins. Merely by listening to it a man attains salvation.

7-8. Formerly there was a prominent Brāhmaṇa named Rāmakṛṣṇa . He was a great sage. He was of good conduct and habits. He was truthful and eloquent. He was endowed with kindness for all living beings. He behaved impartially towards enemies as well as friends. He had perfect control over his sense-organs. He was an ascetic who had conquered his senses. He was an expert in the knowledge of the Supreme Brahman . He resorted solely to Brahman.

9-12a. That sage of such a magnanimity performed a very severe penance. He was motionless in every limb wherever he stood on the surface of the earth. He did not move even to the extent of an atom from his position.

He stood there and performed penance for many hundreds of years. An anthill was formed over him and it covered all his body. Though the whole of his body was thus covered by the anthill, Rāmakṛṣṇa, the great sage, went on with his penance and was not aware of the anthill.

12b-15. While he was performing the penance, Vāsava (the Rain-god) let loose groups of clouds and showered heavily on the great sage. Thus he continuously showered for seven days. Though he was showered with great torrential downpour, the sage received that shower (quietly) with closed eyes. Deafening the ears with loud rattling and rumbling of the clouds, a great thunderbolt fell upon the anthill.

[The Lord Delighted by the Penance of the Great Sage Rāmakṛṣṇa Appears Before Him]:—

16-18. While the Lord of Clouds showered rain unbearable due to cool winds etc., the top of the anthill crumbled on being struck by the thunderbolt. Then the Lord holding the conch, the discus and the iron club manifested himself. He was seated on Garuḍa and was adorned with garlands of sylvan flowers. Being pleased with the penance of Rāmakṛṣṇa, he spoke these words:

19-21a. “O Rāmakṛṣṇa, O storehouse of penance, O master of the contents of the Vedas and Śāstras (scriptural texts), an excellent man who takes bath (in the Tīrtha) on the day of my manifestation (attains great merit). The benefit and merit that he gets cannot be recounted even by Śeṣa . It is laid down that the time for the holy bath, O Brāhmaṇa, is when the Sun is in the Zodiac Capricorn, on the great lunar day of Full Moon in conjunction with the constellation Puṣya .

21b-24. A man of great intellect who bathes in Kṛṣṇatīrtha on that day shall get rid of all sins. He shall obtain all desires. Devas , human beings and all the Guardians of the Quarters with great prowess arrive there in order to take their holy bath in the auspicious waters of Kṛṣṇatīrtha and for the sake of washing off their sins.

All these noble souls gain lustre similar to that of crores of suns. Indeed they all become purified through the bath in this Tīrtha.

25. This great Tīrtha shall be named after you. It will become very famous in the world."

After saying this Śrīnivāsa vanished there itself.

26-27. Of such power is that Tīrtha. It dispels great sins. It bestows purity of intellect on men. It grants all prosperity and magnificence.

Thus, O Brāhmaṇas , the greatness of Kṛṣṇatīrtha has beeṅ recounted to you. It enables those who listen to and read this (account) to attain the world of Viṣṇu.

English translation

[Praise of the Gift of Water on Śrīveṅkaṭādri]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

1. One who does not offer water particularly to the thirsty on the highly meritorious mountain named Veṅkaṭa shall be born amongst lower animals.

2. Hence on the prominent mountain Veṅkaṭa a gift of water should be made in accordance with one's capacity. It is a great thing that instils life in all.

3. In this connection they cite this ancient legendary story of an exceedingly wonderful conversation between a Brāhmaṇa and a house-lizard.

[Hemāṅga Becomes a House-Lizard for not Offering Water]:—

4. Formerly there was a king named Hemāṅga in the family of Ikṣvāku . He was hospitable to Brāhmaṇas and deeply engrossed in meditation on Brahman . He had conquered enemies and had perfect control over his sense-organs.

5. He had gifted away as many cows as there are particles of earth, drops of water or stars in the sky.

6. The earth is known as Barhiṣmatī ('abounding in Darbha grass') on account of the Darbha grass used (and strewn in) the Yajñas performed by him. Many Brāhmaṇas had been satisfied by him through the gift of cows, lands, gingelly seeds, gold etc.

7. It is heard (i.e. reported) that there are no (kinds of) gift not distributed by him. But, O Brāhmaṇas, water was not given by him because he thought that it was easily available.

8-9. When urged by Vasiṣṭha , the noble-souled son of Brahmā , he viciously argued, "It is worthless. It is available everywhere. What benefit can accrue to the donor who gifts it?"

The lord of dull understanding still did not offer water. He reasoned thus, 'There shall be merit in gifting away what is rare to get.'

10. He adored and worshipped Brāhmaṇas who were mutilated or physically handicapped in one or more limbs and who were poor and unable to sustain themselves for want of means of livelihood. He did not honour Brāhmaṇas well-versed in the Vedas , who were knowers and expounders of Brahman:

11-12. 'All people will worship renowned persons with due veneration and honour. But what about helpless persons, persons devoid of learning, persons with defective limbs and poor householders? So they are the objects of my mercy.' [1] Thus he gave whatever he possessed to (physically) defective recipients.

13-15. On account of that great sin he was born as a Cātaka bird in three births, as a vulture in one birth and as a dog in seven births. Afterwards this king became a house-lizard, O Brāhmaṇa, in the abode of Śrutakīrti , a king of Mithilā .

He lived in the street near the threshold of that king feeding himself on insects and worms. That wicked soul thus lived for eighty-eight years.

[Hemāṅga Recollects the Previous Birth as a Result of Being Sprinkled with Water with which the Feet of Śrutadeva were Washed]:—

16. Once an excellent sage well-known as Śrutadeva came to the abode of the king of Videha at midday. He was utterly tired then.

17-18. On seeing him the king was much delighted. He got up instantaneously with Madhuparka (i.e. respectable offerings to an honoured guest); he received him respectfully. The water with which his feet were washed, was sprinkled by the king over his own head. As fate had destined its timing, some of the drops of that water thus sprinkled fell on that house-lizard.

19. Immediately the lizard remembered the previous births. It was dejected on account of what had been committed. “Save me, save me”, cried it aloud to the Brāhmaṇa who had come to the house.

20-21. On hearing the sound of a lowly creature the Brāhmaṇa became surprised. (He said,) “Whence do you cry, O lizard? What was that action that has resulted in this plight of yours? Are you a god or a demi-god, or a king, or an excellent Brāhmaṇa? O highly fortunate one, who are you? Tell me. I shall redeem you today.”

22-27. On being told thus the king told Śrutadeva: “I was a great king born of the family of Ikṣvāku. I was an expert in the art of wielding weapons. I had gifted away as many cows as there are dust particles on the earth, drops of water in the ocean and stars in the sky.

I had performed all sorts of Yajñas. I had arranged for Pūrtas (i.e. works of public welfare, viz. building of rest-houses, tanks etc.) as well. Many gifts were offered by me. Pious rites were well-performed. Despite that I have fallen in a hellish condition, O holy lord; I have not attained heavenly worlds.

Three times I was born as a Cātaka bird, once as a vulture and as a dog in seven births. While this king was sprinkling the water with which your feet were washed over his head, a few drops were scattered away. I was sprinkled somehow with them. Thereby my sins were destroyed and I recollected previous births.

28-29. O Brāhmaṇa, I have yet to take twenty-eight births as a house-lizard. They are ordained by fate. I am much afraid of those (too) many births. I do not see the reason thereof. Explain to me that in detail.”

On being requested thus the Brāhmaṇa told him what was seen by him through the eye of perfect knowledge.

[Hemāṅga is Liberated from the State of House-Lizard Through the Merit Offered by Śrutadeva]:—

30-31. “Listen, O king, I shall tell the reason for your miserable plight. Water was not offered by you on the mountain named Veṅkaṭa. Thinking that water is easily available, you came to the conclusion that it had. no value. Ignorant that you were, you did not give water to Brāhmaṇas and other wayfarers even during the summer season.

32-35. You left out deserving persons and showered gifts on the undeserving. Homa is not performed on the ash after setting aside the blazing fire. Is the holy basil plant abandoned and the eggplant worshipped? The state of being helpless, mutilated or completely devoid of limbs cannot be the ground (of charitable gifts). The lame one and others who are helpless are only objects of compassion.

Those who are engaged in penance, those who possess knowledge (of the Supreme Being) and those who are devoted to Śrutis and Śāstras are persons in the form of Viṣṇu . They are always to be worshipped and never the others. There too the Jñānins (i.e. persons with spiritual knowledge) are extremely dear to and favourites of Viṣṇu always.

36. O king, even to the persons with knowledge it is Viṣṇu alone who is the most favourite. Hence a person with knowledge is always worthy of being worshipped. It is laid down in Smṛtis that he is more venerable than the most venerable ones.

37. Water was not offered nor good men were served by you. Therefore, you attained this miserable plight, O scion of the family of Ikṣvākus .

38. I shall give you the merit acquired on the Veṅkaṭa mountain for the quelling of your (sinful) Karmas , past, present and future by means of that."

39-40. After saying this, he touched water and bequeathed his excellent merit of the holy bath performed (by him) on one day. With what was given by the Brāhmaṇa all its (house-lizard's) sins were destroyed. Hence the house-lizard abandoned the terrible form befitting its action. Immediately a man was seen (there).

41-42. He was seated in a divine aerial chariot. He wore divine garlands and garments as well as ornaments. Even as good men were watching within the abode of the king of Mithilā, he joined his palms in reverence, circumambulated and bowed down (to the Brāhmaṇa). On being permitted the king (started from there) and went to heaven, eulogized by the immortal ones.

43-47. There he enjoyed great pleasures for ten thousand years without any weariness. He himself was reborn as the mighty warrior Kakutstha [2] in the family of Ikṣvāku. That great king was the protector of the seven continents. He was hospitable to Brāhmaṇas and honoured by good men. He was on a par with Deveṇḍra and was a part of Viṣṇu.

Enlightened by Vasiṣṭha he performed all the good holy rites and thereby destroyed all inauspiciousness etc. He acquired divine knowledge and attained Sāyujya (identity) with Viṣṇu.

Hence Veṅkaṭa mountain is meritorious and destructive of sins. Offering water therein bestows the world of Viṣṇu.

Thus, O Brāhmaṇa, the importance of the gift of water on the highly meritorious Veṅkaṭādri which is destructive of all sins, has been recounted by me.

[1]: [1] : The Purāṇa is advocating a strange doctrine. Instead of appreciating the humanitarian attitude of the king in helping the helpless and physically handicapped people, he is made a house-lizard. Probably scarcity of water on the Veṅkaṭa hill in summer may be the reason for inventing the story to persuade people to make arrangement of potable water on the Tirupati hill.

[2]: [2] : A famous king of the Solar race. His real name was Purañjaya. He promised to help Indra against Asuras provided he carried him on his shoulders. Indra assumed the form of a bull. Purañjaya occupied the bulī (Indra) and defeated the demons. Hence he became known as Kakutstha , 'the occupant of the hump' (Vide Raghuvaṃśa 6.71).

English translation

[A Description of the Holy Place Śrī Veṅkaṭācala]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

1. I shall once again relate the greatness of Veṅkaṭādri to you all. Listen with great concentration and mental purity.

2. All the Tīrthas on the earth as well as within the universe are present on the mountain named Veṅkaṭa .

3-6. Devas , Sages, Siddhas , Saṇaka and other Yogins , the people of the regions Aṅga , Kosala , Karṇāṭa , Kāśī , Gurjara, Cola , Kerala , Pāṇḍya and all other lands visit this place along with their families to serve every year Lord Puruṣottama living on that excellent mountain. The Lord holds the conch and discus. He wears the splendid yellow robe. His chest is adorned with Kaustubha jewel. He gives immunity from fear to the devotees. The Lord of Devas has large eyes. He is the eternal Lord who can be known only through the Vedas .

7. Those who visit the shrine in the month of Bhādrapada at the time of the great festival of Veṅkaṭeśa shall be free from sins. They will be the most excellent among excellent ones.

8-10a. Brahmā , the grandfather of the world, celebrated the great festival of hoisting the flag of Śrī Veṅkaṭeśa in the month (when the Sun was in the Zodiac) of Kanyā (Virgo). Every year for the sake of visiting the Lord at the time of Brahmotsava [1] of the Lord, all human beings, all Devas, Gandharvas , Siddhas and Sādhyas of great prowess gather there, O excellent Brāhmaṇas .

10b-11. Just as the Vedic lore is the best among all lores, Praṇava (Oṃ) among all Mantras , life (vital air) among all the dearest objects and the Wish-yielding Cow among all the cows, so the great mountain of Veṅkaṭa is the most excellent one among all sacred places.

12. The great mountain of Veṅkaṭa is the most excellent one among holy spots like Śeṣa among all serpents, Garuḍa among all birds, like Viṣṇu among Devas and Brāhmaṇa among all castes.

13-16. The prominent mountain of Veṅkaṭa is the most excellent one among holy spots. Like the divine tree among trees, like wife among intimate associates, like Gaṅgā among Tīrthas and like Ravi (Sun) among luminaries, the great mountain Veṅkaṭa is the most excellent one among holy spots.

Like Vajra (thunderbolt) among weapons, like gold among metals, like Rudra among the followers of Viṣṇu and like Kaustubha among jewels, the great mountain Veṅkaṭa is the most excellent among holy spots. There is nothing else like this which increases the pleasure of Viṣṇu.

17-20. There is no other month like the month of Mādhava . There is no other Yuga equal to Kṛta . There is no scripture like the Vedas. There is no Tīrtha equal to Gaṅgā. There is no other gift equal to that of water. There is no pleasure equal to that of wife. There is no wealth on a par with agriculture. There is no other profit greater than life. There is no penance greater than fasting. There is no happiness greater than charitable gift. There is no other virtue on a par with mercifulness. There is no other luminary equal to the eye. There is no satisfaction on a par with eating food. There is no trade on a par with agriculture. There is no friend equal to Dharma . There is no fame equal to Satya (truthfulness).

21. Just like all these cited above, there is nothing equal to the abode of the Lord (Veṅkaṭeśa).

22. The chief of mountains named Veṅkaṭa is such a great holy spot, O eminent sages, the glorification (of which) dispels all sins. Salutation to it bestows all types of happiness in the world. The pilgrimage to it is worthy of being worshipped by Suras .

23-25. I again emphatically tell its greatness: All the Tīrthas reside there. Thus among all of them the chief Tīrtha is the lake named Śrīsvāmi (i.e. Svāmipuṣkariṇī).

How is its greatness to be described by me? On its western bank shines Bhūvarāha (Boar idol), the gentle idol in the act of embracing his beloved. He helps all the people of the world.

On the southern bank of Śrīsvāmipuṣkariṇī perpetually resides Veṅkaṭeśvara, the bestower of boons, with his body embraced by Lakṣmī .

26. Thus, O Brāhmaṇas, the excellent greatness of the holy spot has been narrated to you. He who listens to this always is honoured in the world of Viṣṇu.

[1]: [1] : This is the most important festival of god Veṅkaṭeśvara. It is celebrated in the month of Śrāvaṇa (August-September). For its description cf. VrP II.50-53. It is called Brahmotsava as it is believed to have been started by god Brahmā. Historically it started in CE 966 through the donation of the Pallava Queen Samavāi. Royal dynasties of the South generously supported this celebration.

English translation

Śrī Sūta said :

1. Now I shall recount the greatness of Veṅkaṭeśvara, on hearing which one becomes liberated from all sins. There is no doubt about it.

2. One who visits even once Lord Śrī Veṅkaṭeśvara attains salvation. He shall attain Sāyujya with Viṣṇu .

3-4. The merit that is acquired in the course of ten years in Kṛtayuga , is achieved by men in Tretā in a single year, in Dvāpara in five months and in Kaliyuga in a single day. The benefit thereof to men is increased by crores moment after moment.

5. Undoubtedly this shall happen in the case of those who visit Śrīnivāsa . All the Tīrthas are present in Lord Śrī Veṅkaṭeśvara.

6-7. All Devas , sages and Manes are present there.

Those who remember the great Lord, the bestower of liberation, Lord Śrīnivāsa, once, twice or thrice a day or always, or those who glorify him, O Brāhmaṇas , are liberated from the cage of sins.

8. They go to Nārāyaṇa , the great Lord, Veṅkaṭeśa whose body consists of existence, knowledge and bliss and who was worshipped by Śaṅkharāja.

9-11. Merely by remembering him no torture by Yama will take place.

If men worship, even once, the great Lord Śrīnivāsa, of what avail are charitable gifts, holy rites, penances and sacrifices.

If a person does not contemplate upon the great Lord Veṅkaṭeśa even for a moment, he is ignorant; he is a sinner; he is dumb and deaf; he should be known as sluggish and blind. He will always have vulnerable points.

12. O eminent sages, if Śrīnivāsa, the great Lord, is visited once (only), of what avail is going on (the pilgrimage of) Kāśī , Gayā and Prayāga ?

13-16. After obtaining the rare human birth, if men on the earth visit or worship the great Lord Veṅkaṭeśa, their birth has become fruitful; they alone are blessed and not others. If Veṅkaṭeśa, the great Lord, is visited or worshipped, of what avail are Śaṃbhu , Brahmā , Śakra or all the Immortal Ones? Those men who are endowed with devotion to Veṅkaṭeśa, the great Lord, although they bow down, remember or worship those mentioned previously, do not experience miseries; they do not go to the abode of Yama.

17. Thousands of the sins of Brāhmaṇa -slaughter and ten thousands of the sins of drinking liquor dissolve entirely, if Lord Nārāyaṇa is seen.

18. If people wish for perpetual happiness and kingdom in heaven, let them joyously bow down at least once to the Lord residing on Veṅkaṭādri .

19. Whatever may be the sins committed in the course of crores of births, all of them perish by visiting Veṅkaṭeśvara.

20. If anyone remembers Veṅkaṭeśa, the great Lord, on account of his association with other people, or out of curiosity, or due to covetousness or on account of fear, he shall not be miserable here or hereafter.

21. One who glorifies and worships the Lord of Devas on Veṅkaṭācala shall certainly attain Sārūpya with Viṣṇu. There is no doubt about it.

22. Just as a well-kindled fire reduces firewood to ash in a moment, so also a visit to Veṅkaṭeśa destroys all sins.

23-27a. Devotion to Lord Veṅkaṭeśvara is said to be of eight types: [1]

O Śaunaka and other sages of great prowess, if this eight-fold devotion is present in any one, he alone will attain salvation even if he be a Mleccha (Barbarian).

27b-29. Salvation is certain through the knowledge of Brahman acquired by means of single-minded devotion and listening to the Vedānta in regard to ascetics who have sublimated their sexual urge.

O Brāhmaṇas, that very salvation can be acquired solely through visiting Lord Veṅkaṭeśvara by the people of all castes and stages in life without the knowledge arising through listening to the Upaniṣads , without being in the stage of anchorite and without even detachment (from worldly life).

30-34. Ere long one will have the salvation that bestows exemption from rebirth.

By the favour of Śrīnivāsa worms, insects, Devas, sages and ascetics are all equal (of the same status) on the prominent mountain of Veṅkaṭa .

Do not be afraid, thinking 'Many sins have been committed by me.' Let no one be proud, saying 'Meritorious deeds have been performed by me.'

When Veṅkaṭeśa, Śrīnivāsa. the great Lord, is visited, no one shall be inferior or superior. All of them are great people.

If a person devoutly visits Śrīnivāsa, the great Lord, on the exceedingly meritorious (mountain) named Veṅkaṭa which is destructive of all sins, no one will be on a par with him in the world, even if a person has mastered all the four Veḍas .

35. He who devoutly worships Veṅkaṭeśvara, the Lord of Devas, goes to Hari 's abode along with a crore of the members of his family.

36-37. Nothing is equal or superior to Śrīnivāsa in meritoriousness.

If anyone out of delusion hates the Lord residing on Veṅkaṭādri, it means that ten thousand sins of Brahmin-slaughter have been committed by him causing fall into hell. Even by merely talking to him a man will fall into hell.

38. The Vedas are devoted to Śrīnivāsa. Sacrifices pertain to Śrīnivāsa. Everything is solely devoted to Śrīnivāsa. There is nothing other than Śrīnivāsa.

39-42a. One should forsake everything else and resort to Śrīnivāsa.

By rendering service to Śrīnivāsa one attains crores of times of the benefit accruing from performing all the Yajñas , penances, charitable gifts and holy baths in all the Tīrthas.

One who meditates on Veṅkaṭādrinivāsa for two Ghaṭikās (i.e. 48 minutes) shall sustain twenty-one generations of his family and is honoured in the world of Viṣṇu.

If holy bath in Svāmipuṣkariṇī Tīrtha and visit unto the Lord is performed by people, why should they resort to the waters of Gaṅgā ?

42b-44a. If a person never visits Veṅkaṭeśa, the great Lord, he should be known as a person of mixed caste and not a person born of the seed of (his legal) father.

Hence, O Brāhmaṇas, by all efforts Veṅkaṭeśa, the storehouse of mercy, should be seen (visited) with a desire for the other world.

44b-45. Thus, O Brāhmaṇas, the greatness of Veṅkaṭeśa has been narrated to you.

He who devoutly listens to this always and reads it, shall obtain the benefit of the service unto Veṅkaṭanātha .

[1]: [1] : This list is different from the standard nine types of devotion like Śravaṇa (Listening). Kīrtana (Glorification), Smaraṇa (Remembrance) and others. There is a some overlapping here.

Note: This chapter states the procedure of the Yātrā of Veṅkaṭādri .

[Permanent Residence of Brahmā and others on Śrī Veṅkaṭācala]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

1. Henceforth 1 shall recount the greatness of Veṅkaṭācala to you all. Listen with attention and a pure mind.

2. There are thousands, lakhs and crores of lakes and rivers, oceans of great merit, forests and hermitages.

3. There are meritorious holy places like Vedāraṇya, Vasiṣṭha and other sages, Siddhas , Cāraṇas and Kinnaras .

4. Lord Madhusūdana (Viṣṇu) is present there along with Lakṣmī and Dharaṇī . The Four-faced Lord (Brahmā) (resides there) with Sāvitrī and Sarasvatī .

5. The Three-eyed Lord of Devas , the destroyer of Tripura (lives there) with Pārvatī . Heraṃba, Ṣaṇmukha and others, Devas with Indra as their leader (all these live there).

6. O Brāhmaṇas , Planets beginning with the Sun, the eight Vasus , Pitṛs and Guardians of the Worlds and other groups of Devas (reside there).

7. (All these) live day and night within Veṅkaṭācala and on its top, which is destructive of multitudes of great sins and a sanctifier of the worlds.

8-10. Merely by looking at it men can attain intelligence and happiness. The women-folk of Siddhas and Cāraṇas who have taken up residence on its top, always worship Veṅkaṭeśa , the storehouse of mercy. Crores of the sins of Brāhmaṇa -slaugh-ter and crores of the sins of cohabiting with forbidden women perish when the winds from Veṅkaṭācala touch their limbs.

[Time for Climbing Śrī Veṅkaṭācala and the Procedure of Meditating on it]:—

11-13. A devotee should request the mountain Veṅkaṭādri which enhances merit: “O golden mountain of great merits, resorted to by all the Devas, even Brahmā and other Devas attend upon you with great faith. O excellent one among mountains! I am treading upon you (of such good qualities). Forgive me this one sin kindly, though I am evil-minded. Show me Mādhava who has taken up his residence on your top.”

14. After praying thus the man (the devotee) should gently set his foot on Veṅkaṭādri, the most excellent one among mountains. He shall then gently walk over the sacred Veṅkaṭācala.

15-17. With the specific holy observances he should take bath in Svāmipuṣkariṇī Tīrtha on (mountain) Veṅkaṭādri of great merits, which destroys all sins. Thereafter, he should offer rice-balls even if they be of the size of a mustard seed. Or he should offer rice-balls equal to the leaves of Śamī tree unto the Manes. Those who are stationed in heaven will attain salvation and those who are in hells will go to heaven.

[Greatness of the Tīrtha Named Pāpavināśana]:—

18-20. On the top of the extremely sacred and pure Veṅkaṭācala there is a great and sacred Tīrtha named Pāpavināśana. It is well-known in all the worlds. It is the most excellent of all the Tīrthas , O Brāhmaṇas. Merely by remembering it one will no longer have to enter a womb (i.e. one gets salvation). One (i.e. pilgrim) should go to it which is towards the north of Svāmitīrtha , and take his holy bath. By taking the holy bath there men go to Vaikuṇṭha . There is no doubt about it.

The sages requested :

21. O Sūta , recount the greatness of the Tīrtha called Pāpavināśa. O great sage, you have been enlightened by Vyāsa . Indeed you know everything.

Śrī Sūta said :

22. I shall recount to you all, O excellent Brāhmaṇas, the auspicious story of what happened in the penance-grove of Brahmā on the auspicious ridge of Himavān .

23. That penance-grove is sacred. Brahmā's penance-grove is very auspicious. It is full of trees of various kinds. It is situated on a beautiful side of Himavān.

24. It abounds in hedges and creepers. It is frequented by deer and elephants. It is resonant with the voices (talk, conversation etc.) of Siddhas and Cāraṇas. It is made beautiful due to the whole forest being in full bloom.

25-28. Many ascetics live sparsely in it. It is rendered splendid by sages. It is full of Brāhmaṇas of exalted magnificence, as resplendent as the sun and the fire. There are many anchorites staying there and they are richly endowed with holy rites and regular observances. There are many persons there regularly performing Yāgas with requisite initiation, who practised control over their diet and were self-possessed. It is surrounded by persons conversant with the Vedas and endowed with rich experience by the study of the Vedas. There are persons of all stages of life there, viz. religious students, householders, anchorites and mendicants, all of them strictly adhering to the duties of their stages and performing (all the rites) ordained for their respective castes. It is surrounded by Vālakhilyas and other sages.

The Episode of a Śūdra Named Dṛḍhamati

29-32. Once, O Brāhmaṇas, a certain Śūdra named Dṛḍhamati, a venturesome fellow, joyously came near the Brāhmaṇas in that hermitage.

On coming to the penance-grove he was duly honoured by the ascetics. (After announcing his) name Dṛḍhamati the Śūdra prostrated (before them) with the eight limbs touching (the ground).

On seeing those groups of sages who were on a par with Devas, who had great prowess and were performing different kinds of Yajñas , the Śūdra was much delighted.

He had an inclination to perform an excellent penance. He approached the sage and ascetic, the head of the penance-grove and said:

Dṛḍhamati said :

33. O ascetic, obeisance to you. Save me, O storehouse of sympathy. With your grace I wish to perform a Yāga (sacrifice). Be pleased with me.

[The Duties of a Śūdra as Taught to Dṛḍhamati by the Sage Named Kulapati [1]]:—

(Kulapati said :)

34-40. A Śūdra is of inferior birth. He cannot be initiated for the performance of a Yāga. So it is heard (i.e. mentioned in the Vedas). If you have the inclination, be engaged in rendering service.

Instructions cannot be imparted at any cost to one devoid of (high) caste. In case he is instructed, the teacher-priest incurs a great sin.

No learned man should teach a Śūdra nor shall he preside over his Yāga. He should not teach a Śūdra any (sacred) science such as grammar etc. He should not directly teach a Śūdra poetry, drama , rhetorics, Purāṇa or Itihāsa . If any Brāhmaṇa instructs any Śūdra these subjects at any time, the other Brāhmaṇas must banish that Brāhmaṇa from the village full of Brāhmaṇas. One should abandon a Brāhmaṇa like a Cāṇḍāla if he teaches any Śūdra.

41-44. Therefore, welfare unto you. Render service to Brāhmaṇas with great faith. Rendering service to the Twice-born has been mentioned by Manu and others (as the duty) of a Śūdra. It does not behove you to forsake your natural duty.

On being told thus by the sage the Śūdra thought, 'What should be done by me now? My faith in the holy rites is very intense. I shall endeavour in such a way as to have perfect knowledge.'

After deciding thus mentally Dṛḍhamati, the Śūdra, went far away from the penance-grove and erected a splendid hut.

45-49. There he made a temple and many holy shrines, flower-garden etc. He got a big lake dug up. All these he set up for the sake of the performance of penance by himself.

He performed the rites of ablution and worshipped deities. He practised all holy observances such as fast etc.

He offered oblations and performed Homas . Regular in habits and mental resolve he sustained himself on a fruit diet. He conquered his sense organs. Everyday he honoured duly guests that approached him by means of bulbous roots, roots, flowers and fruits. Thus a great deal of time passed by.

[Procedure for the Performance of Holy Rites as Revealed (Explained) to Dṛḍhamati by the Brāhmaṇa named Sumati]:—

50. Once a Brāhmaṇa named Sumati, born in the family of Garga , arrived at his hermitage. He (the Brāhmaṇa) was truthful in speech and had his sense-organs under control.

51. (Dṛḍhamati) propitiated the sage with words of welcome, made him delighted through (offer of) fruits and other things and enquired about his health in the course of narration of holy tales.

52-54. The Brāhmaṇa who was honoured by various services thus, such as offering water for washing and the like, accepted the same and felicitated him with blessings. Delighted in his mind, he took leave of him and went back to his own hermitage. Thus day by day the Brāhmaṇa became more and more favourably disposed to the Śūdra. He paid a visit to his hermitage in order to meet the Śūdra-born (sage). This association of the Brāhmaṇa with the Śūdra-born (sage) lasted for a longtime.

55. Being won over by affection, the Brāhmaṇa could not refuse what had been requested by the Śūdra. Once that Śūdra spoke to the Brāhmaṇa whom he had won over by means of affection. He said to him thus, when the Brāhmaṇa came to him:

56. "Tell me the injunctions regarding the offer of Havyas and Kavyas . You are considered to be my preceptor." On being requested thus by the Śūdra, he taught him everything.

57. He made the Śūdra perform the holy rites etc. unto the Manes. After the holy rites of Pitṛs (Manes) had been performed, that excellent Brāhmaṇa was sent away by him (with a farewell).

[Miseries Undergone by Sumati due to His Imparting of Instructions in Vedic Rites to a Śūdra]:—

58. The Brāhmaṇa was fed and nourished thus for a long time by the Śūdra-born sage. He was therefore excommunicated by Brāhmaṇas. Later he died.

59. He was carried away by the soldiers of Yama and cast into the hells (where he had to remain) for thousands of crores of Kalpas and hundreds of crores of Kalpas.

60. After undergoing the tortures of the hells one by one he became an immobile being. Afterwards he was born as a donkey and thereafter a pig feeding on faeces.

61. He was then born as a dog and he became a crow subsequently. Then he was born as a Cāṇḍāla and thereafter as a Śūdra.

62. Then he was born as a Vaiśya and thereafter as a Kṣatriya . Though obstructed by powerful agencies, he became a Brāhmaṇa thereafter.

63. He was invested with the sacred thread in the eighth year reckoned from the day of conception. Thus the Brāhmaṇa remained in his father's house engaged in the regular practice of rules of his caste.

64-65. Once while he was going through a forest, he was haunted by a Brahmarākṣasa (i.e. a Brāhmaṇa turned into a demon). He cried, whirled, faltered in his steps, prattled foolishly and laughed. Frequently he cried out "Alas! Alas!". He forsook all Vedic rites. On seeing his son in such a plight the father was distressed with agony.

66-67. He affectionately took his son and sought refuge in Agastya who was engaged in a penance in front of Śiva on the banks of Suvarṇamukharī . He devoutly bowed down to the sage. The father of that son reported to him all the actions of the son.

[Sumati Goes to Veṅkaṭādri as per Advice of Agastya in Order to Dispel His Misery]:—

68-71. Then the Brāhmaṇa told the great Pot-born Sage (Agastya): "O Brāhmaṇa, this my son has been possessed by a Brahmarākṣasa. He is not at all happy, O Brāhmaṇa. Protect him with your benign glance. I have no other son who could relieve me of my indebtedness to the Pitṛs. O Pot-born Sage, tell me the means whereby his pain and agony will be destroyed. There is no other person in the three worlds habitually engaged in penance like you. Excepting you there is no other person to protect my son. O Sire, take pity on my son. Indeed good people are by nature compassionate."

Śrī Sūta said :

72. On being told thus by him the Pot-born Sage began to meditate. After meditating for a long time he told the Brāhmaṇa:

Agastya said :

73. In his former birth, O highly intelligent one, this son of yours was a Brāhmaṇa named Sumati. That Brāhmaṇa imparted (sacred) knowledge to a Śūdra.

74-75. He instructed him in all the Vedic rites. So he had to undergo the tortures of hells for a period of one thousand crores of Kalpas. At the end of it he was born in various species beginning with immobile things. Now your son is born as a Brāhmaṇa on account of the balance of his (good) Karmas .

76. He has been possessed by a Brahmarākṣasa sent by Yama on account of the cruel sin committed by him in the previous birth.

77. I shall tell you the means of destroying the Brahmarākṣasa. Listen with an attentive mind and great faith.

78. On the banks of Suvarṇamukharī which is resorted to by multitudes of sages, there is the sacred Veṅkaṭācala worthy of being resorted to by Devas.

79. On it there is a great Tīrtha named Pāpavināśana. It is meritorious, famous and destructive of great sins.

80. That Tīrtha is known as the destroyer of evil spirits, ghosts and vampires, goblins and Brahmarākṣasas as well as of great ailments.

81. Take your son and go to that Tīrtha in the middle of the mountain. With great mental purity make your son take his bath in that Tīrtha which is destructive of sins.

82. By means of the holy bath taken on three (consecutive) days that Brahmarākṣasa will perish. There is no other means on the earth to destroy him.

83. Hence go quickly to that mountain named Veṅkaṭa . There make your son bathe in the Tīrtha named Pāpavināśa.

84-85. Do not delay here, O Brāhmaṇa, go there quickly.

On being told thus that Brāhmaṇa bowed down to Agastya and prostrated before him like a log of wood. Permitted by him the Brāhmaṇa went to Veṅkaṭācala along with his son and reached Pāpavināśana.

[All the Miseries of Sumati Dispelled Through Holy Bath Taken in Pāpanāśana]:—

86-89. With the rite of Saṃkalpa (i.e. ceremonial pronouncement of the decision to perform a religious act) he made the son take bath on three days. The eminent Brāhmaṇa, the father himself, took his bath in Pāpavināśana. After returning he drank water at the conclusion of the daily routine of holy rites. Thereupon his son was released by the Brahmarākṣasa.

He became free from ailments. He became normal with handsome form and features. Endowed with all flourishing riches, he enjoyed many kinds of pleasures. At the end of his life he attained salvation by virtue of his holy bath in Pāpavināśana. His father too, on account of his holy bath there, attained salvation after death.

[Misery of Dṛḍhamati who Performed Vedic Rites is Dispelled]:—

90-93. The Śūdra who had been instructed by him underwent the tortures of the hells one by one. Then he was born in many despicable low species. Afterwards he became a vulture on the mountain Veṅkaṭācala. Once he came to the Tīrtha Pāpavināśana in order to drink water. He drank water and sprinkled his own body (with it). At that very time he obtained a divine personality adorned with all ornaments. He got into a celestial aerial chariot and went to heaven.

Śrī Sūta said :

94-95. This Tīrtha, Pāpavināśana, has such power. O Brāhmaṇas, it has got the name Pāpanāśana because it is destructive of sins.

Thus the secret has been told, O eminent sages, of the greatness of Pāpavināśana. It is by means of their holy bath therein that (both) the Brāhmaṇa and the Śūdra of despicable actions became liberated instantaneously.

[1]: [1] : VV 34-44 describe the inhuman constraints on Śūdras. Even the knowledge of non-Vedic subjects like poetry, drama, rhetorics is denied to them. For more disabilities vide Kane, HD II. i. pp. 154-64.

English translation

[Greatness of Pāpavināśana Tīrtha]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

1. I shall recount again the greatness of Pāpanāśana . Listen with great concentration and feelings of devotion to the Lord.

2. I shall narrate a legendary story that is destructive of all sins, on hearing which one is absolved of all sins. There is no doubt about it.

The Episode of a Poor Brāhmaṇa Called Bhadramati

3. Formerly there was an excellent Brāhmaṇa named Bhadramati. He was a master of the Vedas and Vedāṅgas , (but) he had no means of livelihood and was very poor.

4. All scriptures were learnt by that intelligent Brāhmaṇa. The Purāṇas and treatises on Dharma had been learnt by him in full.

5. He had six wives named Kṛtā , Sindhu , Yaśovatī , Kāminī , Mālinī and Śobhā .

6. Of those wives he had two hundred sons. All of them—his sons and others—were afflicted with hunger.

7. On seeing his dear sons tormented with hunger and his beloved wives ingreat distress due to hunger the penniless Bhadramati being greatly agitated in all his sense-organs, cried aloud:

8. “Fie upon a life devoid of fortune! Fie upon a life bereft of wealth! Fie upon a life wanting in fame! Fie upon a life without hospitality!

9. Fie upon a life devoid of moral conduct! Fie upon a life devoid of knowledge! Fie upon a life without exertion and industry! Fie upon a life devoid of happiness!

10. Fie upon a life bereft of kinsmen! Fie upon a life wanting in renown! Fie upon the life of a man without any wealth but with many children!

11. Alas! The good qualities such as gentleness, [1] scholarship and nobility of birth—all these do not shine in the case of one sinking in the ocean of poverty.

12. Brāhmaṇa’s sons, grandsons, kinsmen, brothers, disciples—all men forsake the man who is without wealth and glory.”

13-17. The Brāhmaṇa Bhadramati who was intelligent and self-possessed came to this conclusion: “Irrespective of one’s being a Brāhmaṇa or a Cāṇḍāla , it is the fortunate alone who is honoured. In this world a poor man is condemned by all people as though he is a corpse. Alas! A person endowed with riches may be hard-hearted but he is considered to be kind. He may not have any good qualities, but he is considered to be endowed with good qualities. Even if he is afool, he is considered to be a scholar.

A man may be hard-hearted and be devoid of good qualities and virtue but if he is endowed with the quality of possessing wealth and glory, he is undoubtedly worthy of being honoured.

Alas! Poverty is itself misery but therein false hope or expectation causes greater misery. Persons dominated by (false) hope meet with misery (despair) instantaneously.

18. Those who are slaves unto hopes and desires are slaves of the whole world. The whole world becomes the slave of those who have made hope and desire their slave.

19. Even if a person is conversant with all the contents of all the scriptures, he may still appear to be a fool if he is poor. There is no one to liberate those who have been seized by the great crocodile of poverty.

20. Alas! What a misery! Alas! What a despair! Alas! Poverty (itself) is a misery! There too if one has too many sons and wives, it inflicts more misery.”

21. Bhadramati, the master of all the contents of all the scriptures, (ceased to talk) after saying this much. He began to think about some holy rite that would yield plenty of wealth and glory. Bhadramati who was afflicted with deep pain and sorrow remained silent.

[Bhadramati is Encouraged to go to Veṅkaṭādri by Kāminī]:—

22-23. At that time one of his wives, Kāminī, who regarded her husband as a god and was endowed with good qualities spoke to her husband:

Kāminī said :

24. O holy lord conversant with all holy rites, O master of all the contents of all the scriptures, O my lord, O blessed one, O highly intelligent one, listen to my words.

25. On the banks of Suvarṇamukharī frequented by multitudes of sages there is the sacred Veṅkaṭācala worthy of being served by Devas .

26. On that great mountain Veṅkaṭa , bowed down to by Suras and Asuras , there is an auspicious sacred Tīrtha which burns all sins.

27. O highly intelligent and blessed one, go to that Tīrtha in Pāpanāśa . Take your holy bath carefully therein accompanied by your wives and sons.

28. The greatness of that Tīrtha has been heard by me from Nārada during my childhood. The sage recounted it in the presence of my father:

29-32. “On the Veṅkaṭa mountain of great merit, which is destructive of all sins and subdues all miseries and which yields all types of riches, a devotee should take bath in Pāpanāśa, the great Tīrtha, with Saṃkalpa (i.e. a solemn pronouncement of the resolve). He should think about a Dharma (holy rite) that yields enormous prosperity and glory. The devotee should decide to make a gift of land, which is the most excellent of all excellent gifts. It takes the donor to heaven (after death). It yields whatever best things one craves for. Gift of land is glorified as the most excellent of all gifts. By making that gift a man obtains whatever is most wished for.”

33. On hearing the words of Nārada my father, a Brāhmaṇa, became delighted in his mind and went to Śeṣādri .

34. After going there (my father) the blessed one made over a gift of land to an excellent Brāhmaṇa well-versed in the Vedas—a gift that bestows all prosperities and glories.

35. Thereupon my father became endowed with all fortimes, O learned one. He attained happiness in this world and after death went to Viṣṇu ’s city.

36. You too, O blessed one, go to Veṅkaṭādri, the most excellent mountain. Make the gift with determination—the gift of land that bestows all desired things.

[Kāminī glorifies the Gift of Land]:—

37. Listen with great attention to the greatness of the gift of land. [2] In the whole of the world none can describe it fully, O holy lord.

38. There had never been a greater gift than the gift of land before (i.e. in the past) nor will it be in future. There is no doubt about this that a donor of land attains the greatest salvation.

39. By giving as a gift even a smallest piece of land to a person well-versed in the Vedas, who maintains the sacred fire, one attains the world of Brahmā , from which there is no return to this world.

40. A bestower of land is said to be a bestower of everything. The person who makes a gift of land shall attain liberation. Making a gift of land on Vṛṣādri is destructive of all sins.

41. A person may have committed great sins, he may have committed all sins, but by gifting away a piece of land measuring ten hastas or cubits (a cubit = 18 inches) he becomes liberated from all sins.

42. He who donates land to a deserving person shall obtain the benefit of all gifts. In the whole of the universe consisting of the three worlds there is no one else on a par with a donor of land.

43. If anyone makes the gift of a splendid land to a Brāhmaṇa without means of livelihood, even Śeṣa will never be competent to recount his meritorious benefit.

44. He who gives even the smallest piece of land to a Brāhmaṇa of good conduct (but) without any means of sustenance is Viṣṇu himself. There is no doubt about it.

45. He by whom a meadow or a land full of sugarcane or wheat or areca-palms etc. is given as a gift is Viṣṇu. There is no doubt about it.

46. By making a gift of land, even if it be very small, to a poor Brāhmaṇa burdened with a family but devoid of a means of livelihood, one attains Sāyujya with Viṣṇu.

47. If a forest land is given to a Brāhmaṇa devoted to worship of gods, one gets the benefit of taking holy bath in Gaṅgā for three days.

48. Listen to the benefit one derives by making a gift of a land yielding one Droṇikā [3] (119 kg.) to a Brāhmaṇa of good conduct but without means of sustenance.

49. He gets that great benefit which a man obtains by performing hundreds of horse-sacrifices on the banks of Gaṅgā in accordance with the injunctions.

50. If a person gives a land yielding a Bhāra of food-grains (i.e. about 100 quintals) to a poor Brāhmaṇa, I shall speak of the merit of that person, O my lord, O holy lord.

51. He shall obtain that benefit which one derived after performing thousands of horse-sacrifices and hundreds of Vājapeyas on the banks of Gaṅgā.

52-55. A gift of land is a great gift. It is glorified as surpassing all gifts. It subdues all sins. It yields the benefit of salvation. Even a person who hears about this (land gift) with great faith shall attain the benefit of gifting away a land.

On hearing these words of his wife with citations from a legendary story the gentle Bhadramati, devoted to all holy rites, became delighted. He mentally meditated upon the Lord residing on Śeṣācala . He already began to proceed to the excellent Krīḍācala mentally. (At the outset) he went to the city named Suśāli accompanied by his wives.

[Sughoṣa Attains Heaven Through the Gift of a Land to Bhadramati]:—

56-61. The Brāhmaṇa went to an eminent Brāhmaṇa named Sughoṣa endowed with all prosperities and glories, and begged for a land-strip measuring five hands (i.e. cubits in length).

On seeing that Brāhmaṇa having a large family Sughoṣa who strictly adhered to (the path of) righteousness, became pleased in his mind. He honoured him and spoke thus:

“O Bhadramati, I am blessed. My life is fruitful. My family has become sinless since you have become one acceptable to me.

After saying thus Sughoṣa of great intellect and devoted to virtue honoured him duly and gave him the land five hands in length, reciting the Mantra : “The earth belongs to Viṣṇu and is (hence) sacred. It is protected by Viṣṇu. May Janārdana be pleased with me for making a gift of land.”

O great Brāhmaṇas , Sughoṣa worshipped that prominent Brāhmaṇa, regarding him as Viṣṇu himself, and gave him that much land.

62-63. O Brāhmaṇas, that intelligent Brāhmaṇa (Sughoṣa) donated the requested (piece of) land to Bhadramati who was a devotee of Hari and was well-versed in the Vedas and had a large family.

Accompanied by a crore members of his family, Sughoṣa attained Viṣṇu's abode, after going where no one experiences grief. It was on account of the gifting of the land that he went there.

[Bhadramati Goes to Veṅkaṭādri on the Banks of Pāpanāśana for Gifting Lands]:—

64-65. Accompanied by his sons and wives, Bhadramati went to the great mountain Veṅkaṭa that is bowed down to by Suras and Asuras, that is resorted to and served by Gandharvas , Yakṣas , presiding deities of mountains and others—Veṅkaṭācala who is the son of Meru , that is divine, that has come from Vaikuṇṭha and is called Krīḍāśaila, the excellent mountain (near Svāmipuṣkariṇī).

66-67. In the pure, sacred and splendid water of Svāmisaras he took his bath along with his wives, sons and others preceded by the rite of Saṃkalpa . He bowed down to the white Boar, the uplifter of Earth, on its western bank in accordance with the injunctions and went to the abode of Śrīnivāsa .

68. There the highly intelligent devotee of Viṣṇu had the vision of Veṅkaṭeśvara served by Brahmā and other Devas. He along with his sons and others visited the Lord.

69-71. After devoutly bowing down so Śrīnivāsa, the Lord of Devas, the storehouse of mercy, he went to Pāpanāśana accompanied by his wives, sons and others.

He took his bath in accordance with the injunctions. He performed all the requisite holy rites. The highly intelligent one made the splendid salvation-yielding gift of land to a certain Brāhmaṇa well-versed in the Vedas and a devotee of Viṣṇu as well, considering him to be Viṣṇu himself.

[Bhadramati Realises the Lord by the Power of Land Gift]:—

72-74. At that time the Lord manifested himself holding the conch, the discus and the iron club, seated on Garuḍa and adorned with garlands of sylvan flowers. The Lord appeared before him on the banks of Pāpanāśana by the power of land gift. Then the gentle Bhadramati began to eulogize (the Lord):

75. "Obeisance, obeisance to you, the cause of everything. Repeated bows to you, the protector of everything. Obeisance, obeisance to you, the leader of the immortal ones. Obeisance, obeisance to the suppressor of Daityas .

76. Obeisance, obeisance to the Lord who is fond of devotees. Repeated obeisance to the Lord dispelling sins. Obeisance, obeisance to the destroyer of vicious people. Hail to that Lord of the universe!

77. Obeisance, obeisance to the Lord who incarnated as Dwarf for the sake of a cause. Obeisance to Nārāyaṇa of unmeasured valour. Bow to the Lord holding the Śārṅga bow, the discus, the sword and the iron club. Hail to that Puruṣottama !

78. Obeisance to the Lord residing in the ocean; obeisance to the immutable Lord of Lakṣmī ; bow to the Lord of unmeasured splendour excelling the sun etc. Obeisance, obeisance to the Lord of meritorious arrival and departure.

79. Obeisance, obeisance to the Lord with the sun and the moon as his eyes. Hail to you, the bestower of the fruitof Yajñas ; obeisance to the Lord shining with Yajñāṅgas (i.e. the requisites of a sacrifice). Bow to you, the lover of good people.

80. Obeisance, obeisance to the cause of causes. Obeisance to the Lord devoid of (or beyond the objects of senses such as) sound etc. Obeisance to you, the bestower of happiness desired. Obeisance, obeisance to the Lord who is fascinating unto the devotee.

81. Obeisance, obeisance to you, the wonderful cause. Bow to you, the supporter of Mandara (i.e. the Divine Tortoise). Obeisance to you called Yajñavarāha ('Boar in the form of sacrifice'). Obeisance to the tearer of Hiraṇyakaśipu . [4]

82. Obeisance to you who assumed the form of a Dwarf (Vāmana). Bow to you, the destroyer of the dynasties of Kṣatriyas (Paraśurāma). Obeisance to you, the suppressor of Rāvaṇa (Rāma). Hail to you, the elder brother of the daughter of Nanda (i.e. Śrīkṛṣṇa)!

83. Bow to you, the lover of Kamalā (Lakṣmī). Obeisance to you, the bestower of happiness. Hail to you, the destroyer of the agony of those who resort to you! Obeisance, obeisance, again and again."

84. On being eulogized by that Brāhmaṇa Lord Śrīnivāsa, the storehouse of mercy, fond of devotees, spoke these words out of affection:

85-86. "O dear one, welfare unto you. I am delighted, O Brāhmaṇa, by this great eulogy. You will be endowed with all worldly pleasures in the company of sons, grandsons etc. After obtaining (enjoying) happiness in this world, attain salvation after death."

After saying this Lord Viṣṇu vanished there itself.

87. Thus, O Brāhmaṇas, the greatness of Pāpanāśana has been recounted to you all. The greatness of land gift on its banks is also described.

[1]: [1] : VV 11-20 are a part of floating traditional subhāṣitas censuring poverty (vide Subhāṣita-Ratna-Bhāṇḍāgāra on poverty).

[2]: [2] : The importance of land grants is described in Mbh and Purāṇas (vide Kane, HD II.ii.862ff. and also verses quoted in Appendix pp. 1271-77), Kane, however, has noted the restrictions on such gifts.

[3]: [3] : Droṇikā also means a valley between two mountains, but a land yielding so much corn or food-grains is preferred in this context.

[4]: [4] : Here the reading: Hiraṇyākṣa-vidārakāya , is defective. If accepted it becomes an adjective of Varāha. But the author intends to give us the series of Viṣṇu's incarnations and the incarnation next to Varāha is Nṛsiṃha (Man-lion). If the readiṇg is emended as ' Hiraṇyākhya-vidārakāya ', it means Nṛsiṃha, the incarnation after Varāha and preceding Vāmana.

English translation

[The Episode of Brāhmaṇa Rāmānuja]:—

Note: This Rāmānuja is a mythological person different from the founder of Viśiṣṭādvaita school of Vedānta . The personal name Rāmānuja was popular iṇ Tamil Nadu in the 11th and 12th centuries CE, which may give some clue to the date of this Māhātmya .

Śrī Sūta said :

1. O ye ascetics, all residents of the Naimiṣa forest, I shall recount the greatness of Ākāśagaṅgā Tīrtha .

2-3. Near Ākāśagaṅgā a certain devotee of Viṣṇu , well-known as Rāmānuja, performed penance. He was a master of all the contents of all scriptures. He had conquered all his sense-organs. He was a virtuous soul closely following the advices of anchorites. During summer he seated himself in the middle of five fires and engaged himself in the meditation of Viṣṇu.

4-5. He repeated the eight-syllabled Mantra [1] (Oṃ namo Nārāyaṇāya) and meditated on Janārdana in his mind. During rainy season he stayed out under the open sky and during (early) winter he constantly remained in water. He thought of the welfare of all living beings. He had perfect control over the sense-organs. He was free from (the effect of) all the mutually opposed pairs (such as pleasure-pain). For many years he lived on old and decaying leaves.

6. For some time he took only water as his food. For many years only air was his intake.

[Pleased with Rāmānuja's Penance the Lord Manifests Himself on the Bank of Ākāśagaṅgā]:—

7-9. The Lord, affectionate to his devotees, was delighted by his penance. He appeared directly before him holding the conch, the discus and the iron dub. His eyes were like the petals of a full-blown lotus. His lustre was equal to that of a crore of suns. He rode on Garuḍa . He was rendered splendid by means of the umbrella and the chowries. He was bedecked in necklace, armlets, crown, bracelets etc. He was surrounded by Viṣvaksena , Sunanda and other attendants.

10. Nārada and others who played on flutes , lutes, Mṛdaṅga -drums and other instruments sang songs in his praise. He shone in his yellow robes.

11. On his chest Lakṣmī shone brilliantly. He had the blue lustre of a cloud. On his either side he was attended upon by Sanaka and other great Yogins .

12-13. With his gentle smile he fascinated the three worlds. Honouring (everyone) he rendered all the ten directions brilliant with his refulgence. Thus Lord Veṅkaṭeśa , the storehouse of mercy, easily accessible to good devotees, appeared before that great sage Rāmānuja.

14-15. On seeing Śrīnivāsa , the storehouse of compassion, the Lord clad in yellow robes, who appeared before him then, the great sage attained great delight. Endowed with the greatest devotion, he eulogized the Lord of the universe.

[Hymn to the Lord Composed by Brāhmaṇa Rāmānuja]:—

Rāmānuja prayed :

16. Obeisance to the over-lord of Devas holding the conch, the discus and the iron club. Bow to you, the eternal one, the purest one, the Lord of Veṅkaṭa .

17. Obeisance to the dispeller of the agony of devotees. Hail to you, having the form of Havya and Kavya ! Obeisance to you of three forms, the cause of creation, sustenance and dissolution (of the universe).

18. Obeisance to the greatest Lord, Bow to the Lord of great bounty and abundance. Obeisance to the Lord of Lakṣmī, to the creator. Hail to the Lord with the sun and the moon for his eyes! Obeisance to you respectfully bowed to by Brahmā and others.

19. Obeisance to that destroyer of Daityas who has none of these diversities, such as name and caste and other things, who is devoid of all defects and who dispels the fears of the entire universe.

20. Obeisance to the Lord who can be known only through the Upaniṣads . Obeisance to the Lord of Ramā , to the resident of Vṛṣādri, to the father of Brahmā. Obeisance, obeisance to the dispeller of the agony of all the people. Obeisance to Nārāyaṇa of unmeasured valour.

21. Obeisance to you, to Lord Vāsudeva wielding the Śārṅga bow. Repeated obeisance to you, to the resident of Veṅkaṭādri .

22. After eulogizing Śrīnivāsa, the Lord of Veṅkaṭa, the preceptor of the universe thus, sage Rāmānuja, the excellent Brāhmaṇa, remained silent.

23. On hearing this eulogy of that noble soul, pleasing to the ears, the Lord of Veṅkaṭācala who was eulogized, attained deep satisfaction.

24-25. The delighted Lord Śauri embraced the sage with his four arms and spoke to him, “Let the boon be chosen. O great sage, I am delighted at your penance, eulogy and obeisance. I am pleased. I have come here as the bestower of boons on you.”

[Brāhmaṇa Rāmānuja’s Request to the Lord]:—

Rāmānuja said :

26-27. O Nārāyaṇa, O Lord of Ramā, O Śrīnivāsa identical with the universe, O Janārdana having the universe for your abode, O Govinda , O slayer of Naraka , I am satisfied and blessed on seeing you. O crest-jewel of Veṅkaṭādri, persons of virtuous nature bow down to you because you are the protector of virtue.

28. I know you, the Supreme Soul whom neither Bhava (Śiva) nor Brahmā know, nor do the three Vedas know. What else is greater than you?

29. I see the Supreme Soul whom Yogins do not see and whom those who are exclusively devoted to the performance of religious rites do not see.

30-31. I am contented and blessed with this, O Veṅkaṭeśa, the Lord of the universe, that I perceive Janārdana, merely by recollecting whose name men of very great sins attain salvation. Let my devotion to your lotus-like feet be firm and steady.

[The Auspicious Time for Holy Bath in ākāśagaṅgā as Described by the Lord]:—

Śrī Bhagavān said :

32-36. Let your devotion to me be firm and steady, O Rāmānuja of great intellect. Listen to another statement of mine, O Brāhmaṇa. Those people who take their holy bath at the time of the transit of the Sun to the Zodiac Aries in conjunction with the Constellation Citrā or on the Full-Moon day in (Ākāśa) Gaṅgā , attain the highest region from which there is no return.

You do stay, O Brāhmaṇa Rāmānuja, near Viyadgaṅgā (i.e. Ākāśagaṅgā). When this body (of yours) that has begun (to experience the results of Karmas) perishes, you will attain my form (i.e. Sārūpya type of liberation).

Of what avail is much talk? All those people who take their holy bath in the auspicious waters of Viyadgaṅgā are excellent Bhāgavatas (‘Devotees of the Lord’). O tiger among sages, there need be no doubt in this.

Rāmānuja said :

37. What are the characteristics of Bhāgavatas? By what action are they known? I wish to hear this since I am very eager and earnest.

[The Characteristics of Bhāgavatas as Described by the Lord]:—

Śrī Veṅkaṭeśa said :

38-40. Listen to the characteristics of Bhāgavatas, [2] O excellent sage. Even in crores of years their power cannot be described.

Those who are devoid of hostility and jealousy, those who are wise, calm and free from vulgar desires and those who wish for the welfare of all living beings are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

41. They never give pain to others physically, verbally and mentally. They habitually refrain from accepting gifts and owning properties. They are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

42. Indeed those whose Sāttvika intellect is engrossed in listening to stories of saintly people and who are devoted to my lotus-like feet are excellent Bhāgavatas.

43. Those excellent men who render service to their parents, those who are engaged in worshipping gods, those men who aspire for godliness and those who rejoice on seeing worship of the deity are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

44. Those who sincerely render service to religious students and ascetics and those who never indulge in censuring others are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

45. Those who always speak words conducive to the welfare of others, those excellent men in the world who accept (and appreciate) the good qualities of others are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

46. Those excellent men who see all living beings as their own selves, those who behave equally towards enemies and friends are indeed remembered as (i.e. said to be) Bhāgavatas.

47. Those who expound Dharmaśāstras (Codes of Laws and Ethics), those who are devoted to truthful statements, and those who render service to them are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

48. Those who expound the Purāṇas , those who listen to them and those who are devoted to the expounders of Purāṇas are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

49. Those men who perpetually render service to cows and Brāhmaṇas and those who are devoted to pilgrimages are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

50. Those men who rejoice at the prosperity of others and those who are devoted to (recitation of) the names of Hari are indeed excellent Brāgavatas [Bhāgavatas?].

51. Those who are engaged in growing and developing parks and gardens, those who maintain lakes and those who build and dig wells and lakes are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

52. Those who make big water-reservoirs, those who build shrines for deities, those who are engaged in repeating the Gāyatrī Mantra are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

53. Those who rejoice on hearing the names of Hari, those who are overjoyed on hearing the names of Hari and get the hair on their body stand through thrill of joy are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

54. Those men who bend down their heads on seeing a bed of holy basil plants and those who place a small piece of holy basil on their ears are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

55. Those who are delighted in inhaling the fragrance of the holy basil and those who smear themselves with the mud taken from its root are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

56. Those who are engaged in the conduct of life ordained for their stage in life and those who worship guests and those who expound the meanings of Vedic passages are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

57. Those who explain to others the scriptures known to them and those who appreciate virtues everywhere are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

58. Those who are engaged in making gifts of water, those who are engaged in making gifts of food and those who are devoted to the holy rites of Ekādaśī (i.e. fast etc. on the eleventh lunar day) are excellent Bhāgavatas.

59. Those who are engaged in gifting cows, those who are engaged in making gifts of virgins (by way of marriage) and those who are engaged in activities for my sake are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

60. Those whose minds dwell on me, those who are my devotees, those who eagerly desire (to perform) my worship, and those who are absorbed in remembering my names are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

61. Of what avail is much talk? I shall tell you succinctly. Those who strive for virtuous deeds are indeed excellent Bhāgavatas.

62. Of those Brāhmaṇas who are Bhāgavatas a few have been glorified here. They cannot be described even by me in the course of hundreds of crores of years.

63. O Rāmānuja of exalted magnificence, O highly intelligent one, the characteristics of my devotees have been spoken out of love and affection for you, my devotee.

Śrī Sūta said :

64. Thus, O Brāhmaṇas, Śaunaka and others of great prowess, the excellent greatness of Viyadgaṅgā Tīrtha on Vṛṣādri has been spoken to you all.

[1]: [1] : This is the Pañcarātra Mantra; may be due to the influence of that system on this chapter.

[2]: [2] : VV 38-61 detail the chracteristics of a Bhāgavata or a devotee of Bhagavān or Viṣṇu.

English translation

The sages said :

1-2. O holy omniscient Sūta , expert in the Vedas and the Vedāṅgas ! To whom should charitable gifts be given? What is the proper time for making gifts? Who is eligible to receive them? It behoves you to tell everything to us.

Śrī Sūta said :

3-4. O excellent Brāhmaṇas , in the holy spot named Veṅkaṭa which bestows great merits, a Brāhmaṇa is the great preceptor unto all the castes. Charitable gifts are to be made to him. That learned man will redeem (all persons). A Brāhmaṇa can accept monetary gifts. A Brāhmaṇa can receive gifts from everyone except an avarṇaka (i.e. a disreputable person) (explained below). [1]

5-8a. What is given to (and by) [2] an impotent fellow, one devoid of sons, one of hypocritical conduct, one hating the Vedas and Brāhmaṇas, one who has forsaken his special rites and duties becomes fruitless.

What is given by a person fondly attached to another man's wife or covetous of another man's wealth becomes fruitless. If a Brāhmaṇa is a (professional) singer, what is given (to and) by him becomes fruitless. What is given by a Brāhmaṇa whose mind is filled with jealousy, who is ungrateful, deceitful and devoid of knowledge becomes fruitless.

8b-12a. What is given by one who perpetually indulges in begging, who is violent towards the weak, who sells his name and fame, Vedic passages, Smṛti texts and holy rites becomes fruitless.

If a person habitually oppresses others, what is given by him becomes fruitless. One should not accept anything from or give anything to those who are engaged in sins or who are censured by the people of good activities.

Gifts should be given only to a person regularly engaged in good activities, who is well-versed in the Vedas, who maintains the sacred fires, who is poor and devoid of means of livelihood and has a large family.

12b-15. Gifts must be given by making special efforts to a person absorbed in the worship of gods or to a person who narrates the stories of the Purāṇas . O Brāhmaṇa, charitable gifts must particularly be made to a poor man.

Of what avail is much talk? Listen, O excellent Brāhmaṇas. Gifts can always be made to all Brāhmaṇas.

If anything is given to the husband of a barren woman, the man is reborn as a donkey.

One should never make obeisance to an unbeliever, [3] a person who has transgressed the limits of decorum, a person without a son, a person who is sluggish and knavish, and (to) one who indulges in gambling and stealing.

16. One should never bow to a heretic, to a fallen man, one who has lost his caste, a person who sells the Vedas, an ungrateful person and a person engaged in sinful activities.

17. One should not make obeisance to a person engaged in bathing, a person with sacrificial twigs and flowers in his hand, a person holding a water-pot as well as a person engaged in taking food.

18. One should not bow to a person engaged in arguments, an angry and ferocious person, a person who is vomiting, one standing in the midst of people, a person holding food received as alms and a person lying down (or asleep).

19. One should never bow to a barren woman, a woman in menses, an adulteress, a woman in the lying-in-chamber, a woman who has had an abortion, a woman who spoils holy rites as well as a fierce woman.

20-23. Individual obeisance in an assembly, in a sacrificial hall and in temples destroys earlier merit.

One should not make obeisance to a person employed in the holy rites of Śrāddha , one who is engaged in the worship of a deity and one who is engaged in the performance of Yajña and Tarpaṇa .

If a person does not salute in return to a person who makes obeisance, he should be known as undeserving to be saluted like a Śūdra . Hence on all occasions an intelligent excellent Brāhmaṇa shall abstain from making obeisance to husband of a barren woman or a cruel Brāhmaṇa.

[The Greatness of Ākāśagaṅgā]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

24-27. In this connection I shall relate the legendary story of the intelligent Puṇyaśīla as recounted by Nārada to sage Sanatkumāra . I shall recount it, O excellent sages. Listen attentively.

Formerly on the banks of Godāvarī there was an excellent Brāhmaṇa (named) Puṇyaśīla. He was devoted to all holy rites. He was truthful in speech. He had conquered his sense-organs and was merciful to all living beings. He worshipped gods, Brāhmaṇas and the fire. He was pure by birth as well as by activities. He was engaged in doing service conducive to the welfare of his parents; he was devoted to preceptors and elders. He was courteous and chivalrous. He was hospitable to Brāhmaṇas and honoured by good people.

[Conversion of Puṇyaśīla's Face into that of a Donkey by Inviting a Barren Woman's Husband (to Śrāddha)]:—

28-30. A certain Brāhmaṇa who was a master of the Vedas and Vedāṅgas and who was endowed with good qualities like these came to the house of the intelligent Puṇyaśīla. Immediately he was requested to take part in the Śrāddha of the Pitṛs by Puṇyaśīla.

After employing that quiescent Brāhmaṇa well-versed in the Vedas for the holy Śrāddha of the Pitṛs, the righteous-souled (Puṇyaśīla) performed the excellent annual Śrāddha.

31. Then after some time a hideous deformity resembling the face of a donkey, came over the face of Puṇyaśīla.

32-33. Thereupon that extremely righteous Puṇyaśīla became dejected at heart. Heaving heavy sighs, the deeply depressed Puṇyaśīla came to the hermitage of Yogī Agastya . It was extremely divine and yielded all desired benefits. It was on the banks of Suvarṇamukharī and was resorted to by multitudes of sages.

34-35. In that hermitage he saw the noble-souled Agastya who wished for the welfare of all the worlds, being attended upon day and night by prominent sages. Seeing him the excessively miserable Brāhmaṇa with the face of a donkey bowed down to him.

Puṇyaśīla said :

36-38. Obeisance to you, O Agastya, storehouse of penance, who are served by sages. Save me, O storehouse of mercy, save me, a great sinner with a despicable face. By what fault has my face become hideous and ugly. O excellent sage, O blessed one speak it out of love for me.

Agastya said :

39. O excellent Brāhmaṇa of great distinction, O Puṇyaśīla of great intellect, listen attentively to (the cause) of the ugliness of your face, O Brāhmaṇa.

[Ineligibility of a Barren Woman's Husband for Invitation to a Śrāddha]:—

40-45a. You had (once) engaged a Brāhmaṇa who was a storehouse of good qualities, master of the Vedas and Vedāṅgas and conversant with sacred learning, though he was sonless. It is on account of that great sin that there is ugliness in your face, O Brāhmaṇa.

Those who employ a Brāhmaṇa, husband of a barren woman, in offering Havyas , Kavyas etc. attain donkey-facedness. One should never invite the great sinner, husband of a barren woman, in any auspicious rite or in the rites concerning the Manes, O Brāhmaṇa.

O prominent Brāhmaṇa, a person who wishes for welfare and felicity should never invite at a Śrāddha ceremony husband of a barren woman, an exceedingly cruel person and husband of a Śūdra woman.

Even if he be well-conversant with the Vedas, scriptures etc., even if he be of noble birth and even if he be engaged in the performance of religious rites, O excellent Brāhmaṇa, husband of a barren woman must be avoided in the Śrāddha rite at all costs by one desirous of welfare.

45b-50. An excellent Brāhmaṇa should avoid husband of a barren woman in the Śrāddha rite, even if he be competent to perform sacrifices such as Jyotiṣṭoma and others, in holy observances and austerities.

If a deserving Brāhmaṇa is not available, one should invite a Brāhmaṇa of good conduct having a son, though he may be sustaining himself merely on the sacred thread(?) [symbolising his Brahminhood].

In the absence of such a person, O excellent Brāhmaṇa, one should engage one's son or younger brother or oneself but should refrain (from inviting) husband of a barren woman in the Śrāddha rite. O illustrious Puṇyaśīla, it is proclaimed with arms lifted up that one should not at any cost engage a sonless person for the Śrāddha rite. [4]

If the person performing a Śrāddha engages a Brāhmaṇa who is husband of a barren woman, that Śrāddha should be known as Āsura (demoniac) and the person who performs it shall go to hell.

[The Deformity of Puṇyaśīla Dispelled by Means of Holy Bath in Ākāśagaṅgā]:—

51-54a. Of what avail is much talk? I shall mention to you the means of dispelling that defect and sin. On the auspicious banks of Svarṇamukhī there is the highly meritorious Veṅkaṭācala which is resorted to by multitudes of Devas . It is the son of Meru and it bestows all desired benefits.

There is a very great Tīrtha named Viyadgaṅgā on that prominent mountain Veṅkaṭa, bowed to by Suras and Asuras . It suppresses all sins and increases longevity and health.

54b-55. You go to the mountain Veṅkaṭa and take your holy bath in the waters of Svāmipuṣkariṇī with due performance of the holy rite of Saṃkalpa . Thereafter go to Gaṅgātīrtha. After going there, O highly intelligent one, you take your holy bath in it in accordance with the injunctions regarding Tīrthas .

56-57. Merely by having the holy bath, O highly intelligent one, the ugliness of this face will disappear instantaneously. There is no doubt about it.

On being told thus by the noble-souled Agastya Puṇyaśīla bowed down to that noble-souled (sage) and then went to Veṅkaṭādri .

58-59. After going there the blessed one took his holy bath with due observances in the waters of Svāmipuṣkariṇī. Then he went to Viyadgaṅgā. By taking his holy bath there the righteous-souled one, Puṇyaśīla, attained a face comparable to the face of Kāma (god of Love). Thanks to the greatness of the Tīrtha.

Śrī Sūta said :

60. Thus, O Śaunaka and other Brāhmaṇas of great prowess, what was told by Nārada to sage Sanatkumāra has been recounted to you.

[1]: [1] : VV 5-14 give a list of persons not eligible to receive a gift (cf. Manu 4.193-200; Mbh, Vana 200.5-9).

[2]: [2] : Lines 10b-11a show that the restrictions mentioned herein are applicable both to donor and receiver.

[3]: [3] : VV 15-23 give a list of those whom one should not pay obeisance.

[4]: [4] : Śrāddha signifies and is intended for the continuity of the family. An issueless person is naturally regarded as ineligible for it. Hence this tirade against husband of a barren woman.

English translation

Śrī Sūta said :

1-3. Now I shall narrate, O eminent Brāhmaṇas of truthful speech, the greatness of Cakratīrtha that destroys all sins.

Those who listen to the greatness of Cakratīrtha of great merit go to the abode of Viṣṇu from which there is no return into this world, i.e. Saṃsāra .

Those who are averse to the charitable gift of food as well as that of water, those who are averse to the charitable gift of cows, become pure by taking their holy bath here.

4. Hence Cakratīrtha, the excellent Tīrtha , is excessively meritorious.

Performance of Penance by Brāhmaṇa Padmanābha

Śrī Sūta said :

5. Formerly Padmanābha of Śrīvatsa Gotra , who had conquered his sense organs, performed a great penance on the banks of Cakrapuṣkariṇī,

6. He was endowed with mercifulness. He abstained from food. He was truthful in speech and had conquered his sense-organs. He looked at all living beings as his own self. He was free from desire for sensual pleasures.

7-9a. He wished (and strove) for the welfare of all living beings. He controlled his mind. He was free from the (effects of) mutually opposed pairs (such as pleasure and pain etc.). For a few years he maintained himself by eating old (fallen) leaves. For some time his sole diet was water; for a few years he subsisted on air only. Thus for twelve years the great sage Padmanābha performed a severe penance very difficult to be performed even by Devas .

[Delighted by the Penance Performed by the Brāhmaṇa Named Padmanābha at Cakratīrtha the Lord Appears Before Him]:—

9b-11. On being satisfied and pleased by his penance the Lord of Kamalā , holding the conch, the discus and the iron club became visible to him. His eyes resembled the petals of a fullblown lotus. He had the lustre similar to that of a crore of suns.

He (Padmanābha) opened his eyes and saw Śrīnivāsa , the Lord of Veṅkaṭa , the calm and quiescent storehouse of mercy, holding the conch and the discus.

On seeing the noble-souled Lord he began to eulogize.

[Hymn to Śrīnivāsa Composed by Brāhmaṇa Padmanābha]:—

12. “Obeisance to the over-lord of Devas, to the Lord of Veṅkaṭa wielding the Śārṅga bow. Bow to you, to Śrīnivāsa, resident of the Nārāyaṇa mountain.

13. Obeisance to Viṣṇu, the son of Vasudeva , the destroyer of sins. Hail to you, Śrīnivāsa, resident of the Śeṣācala mountain.

14. Obeisance to the Lord of the three worlds, the omnipresent witness. Obeisance to you, to Śrīnivāsa worthy of being saluted by Śiva , Brahmā and others.

15. Obeisance to the Lord with lotus-like eyes. Obeisance to you lying on the Milk Ocean. Hail to you, Śrīnivāsa, the slayer of wicked Rākṣasas .

16-18. Obeisance to the Lord fond of the devotees, to the Lord of Devas. Obeisance to you, to Śrīnivāsa, the destroyer of the agony of those who bow down (to you).

A bow to the Lord of Yogins , to Viṣṇu, to be always known through the Vedas . Obeisance to you, to Śrīnivāsa, the dispeller of the sins of devotees.”

19. Thus was eulogized Śrīnivāsa, the auspicious one who is immanent in the universe, by the sage named Padmanābha who was a resident of Cakratīrtha.

[The Lord Directs Padmanābha to Stay at Cakratīrtha Permanently]:—

20-21. After having attained the greatest delight Puruṣottama , the Lord of Veṅkaṭa, the storehouse of mercy, spoke these nectar-like words to Padmanābha, the excellent Brāhmaṇa, who was calm and devoted to holy rites:

Śrīnivāsa said :

22. O excellent Brāhmaṇa, O blessed one, O worshipper of my lotus-like feet, you stay on the banks of Cakratīrtha to the end of the Kalpa worshipping me.

23-24a. After saying this Lord Viṣṇu vanished there itself. When Lord Śrīnivāsa, the sire of the universe, vanished, (the Brāhmaṇa) of great intellect stayed on the banks of Cakratīrtha.

24b-25. Then after some time a certain Rākṣasa of a terrible appearance who was very cruel and was afflicted with hunger, came there to devour that sage named Padmanābha who was devoted to Nārāyaṇa.

26-30. The Rākṣasa caught hold of the Brāhmaṇa with great force. On being seized by him with great force, the Brāhmaṇa, a master of the Vedāṅgas , yelled loudly to Nārāyaṇa, the discus-bearing deity, the greatest resort of persons in distress, an ocean of mercy. He repeatedly cried: “Save me, save me. O Lord of Veṅkaṭa, O ocean of mercy, O protector of those who seek refuge in you, O tiger among men, save me. I have been overcome by a Rākṣasa. O Hari , O Viṣṇu, O Lord of Lakṣmī , O Garuḍa -emblemed Lord, O Vaikuṇṭha , protect me. I have been seized by a Rākṣasa. Save me in the manner you saved the elephant attacked by the crocodile. [1] O Dāmodara , O Lord of the universe, O suppressor of Hiraṇyāsura, save me as you saved Prahlāda (as I am) exceedingly afflicted by the Rākṣasa.”

[The Lord Despatches His Discus for Slaying the Demon about to Kill Padmanābha]:—

31-34. As Padmanābha eulogized thus, O Brāhmaṇas, Cakrapāṇi , the storehouse of mercifulness, realized the danger of his devotee. He despatched his own Discus for protecting the devotee.

On being hurled by Viṣṇu, the powerful one, that Discus of Viṣṇu, came to the banks of Cakrapuṣkariṇī speedily. It shone like infinite number of suns. It had the lustre equal to that of infinite number of fires.

On seeing Viṣṇu’s Sudarśana of great refulgence and loud sound, capable of suppressing great Asuras , the Rākṣasa fled.

[The Discus Despatched by the Lord Slays the Asura]:—

35-36. Even as the Rākṣasa fled, Sudarśana which was unapproachable on account of clusters of sparks and flames, suddenly cut off his head. On seeing the Rākṣasa fallen on the ground, the excellent Brāhmaṇa rejoiced excessively and eulogized Sudarśana.

Padmanābha said :

37-41. O Viṣṇu’s Discus, obeisance to you. You are prepared for protecting the universe. Salute to you, to the ornament of the lotus-like hand of Nārāyaṇa. O Sudarśana, of great sound, O destroyer of the agony of devotees, obeisance to you, efficient in the destruction of Asuras in the course of battles. Save me. I am extremely frightened. Save me from all sins, O Lord and Master Sudarśana! Be ever present at the Cakratīrtha for the welfare of the universe desirous of salvation.

On being prayed thus by that Brāhmaṇa that Discus of Viṣṇu, O great sages, spoke to that (Brāhmaṇa) named Padmanābha, delighting him with great friendliness:

42-47. “O Padmanābha, I shall stay here permanently with a desire for the welfare of all the worlds at this most excellent and highly meritorious Cakratīrtha.

On pondering over your distress caused by the wicked Rākṣasa, O Brāhmaṇa, I have been despatched by Viṣṇu and I hastened to this place. This wretched Rākṣasa, your tormentor, has been killed by me. You have been liberated from fear as you are a permanent devotee of Hari.

In the Cakratīrtha of great merits, destructive of all sins, O Brāhmaṇa, I shall be present near you forever for the sake of protecting the worlds.

Due to my presence here, hereafter no harassment caused by evil spirits and demons shall disturb you or other Brāhmaṇas. Since I am present here it will become famous by the name Cakratīrtha.

48-50. The sons and grandsons, indeed all the persons born in the family of those who take their holy bath in Cakratīrtha that bestows salvation, shall become rid of their sins. They will go to the greatest region of Viṣṇu.”

After saying this, O Brāhmaṇas, even as Padmanābha and all other Brāhmaṇas stood watching, that Discus of Viṣṇu suddenly entered Cakrapuṣkariṇī that is destructive of sins.

Śrī Sūta said :

51-53. O Śaunaka and other great Brāhmaṇas of great prowess, the greatness of Cakratīrtha that is destructive of sins has been completely narrated to you all.

A Tīrtha on a par with Cakratīrtha has never been (before) nor will there be any (in future). O Brāhmaṇas, by taking their bath here men shall undoubtedly be liberated.

He who narrates this chapter or listens to this with great concentration and purity of mind attains the excellent benefit of taking the holy bath in Cakratīrtha.

[1]: [1] : This refers to the episode of Viṣṇu’s saving an elephant from a crocodile given in BhP VIII, Chs. 2 and 3.

English translation

The sages said :

1. O holy lord Sūta , the most excellent one among those conversant with the Purāṇas , who was this Rākṣasa who tormented the noble-souled Brāhmaṇa , a devotee of Viṣṇu ?

Śrī Sūta said :

1. O Brāhmaṇas , I shall narrate the story of that cruel Rākṣasa and how as a result of the curse of sages he became a Rākṣasa. Listen with concentration.

3-4. Formerly in Śrīraṅga , [1] the temple of Viṣṇu on a par with Vaikuṇṭha , all the devotees of Viṣṇu, of great prowess, the chiefs of whom were Vasiṣṭha and Atri , came to reside and began to worship Śrīraṅganātha , the Lord of Devas , the bestower of immunity from fear on the devotees. They worshipped him for salvation.

5-6, Once a certain Gandharva named Sundara , powerful son of Vīrabāhu (came there), O great Brāhmaṇas. He was deeply attached to the assembly of lecherous people. Accompanied by a hundred young women, he entered the water-pond without any clothe on. He joyously sported with naked young women.

7-9. Vasiṣṭha was desirous of performing Mādhyāhnika (Mid-day) religious rites. From the temple of Śrīraṅga he went to the holy Tīrtha of the river Kāverī along with the other sages.

On seeing those sages those young women became frightened. They immediately wore their clothes but not Sundara who was over-bold and rash . Thereupon, Vasiṣṭha became angry and cursed that shameless fellow.

Vasiṣṭha said :

10-12. Since, O Sundara, O Gandharva, even after seeing us the clothes were not put on by you out of natural shame, become a Rākṣasa instantaneously.

When this was imprecated by Vasiṣṭha, the women bowed down to him with palms joined in reverence and mind humble due to devotion. They spoke to Vasiṣṭha in the midst of the multitude of sages thus:

The young women said :

13-16. O holy lord, O son of Brahmā , conversant with all holy rites, O ocean of mercy, in our presence it does not behove you to be angry. It is the husband who is mentioned to be the greatest ornament of women. A woman without a husband, even if blessed with a hundred sons, is called a widow in the world, O sage. Her life is purposeless. Hence, O sage, be pleased with our husband. One offence should be pardoned by the sages, the seers of Truth. Forgive, O ocean of mercy. Be merciful to Sundara, your disciple.

Śrī Sūta said :

17. When requested thus by the womenfolk of Sundara, Vasiṣṭha, the excellent Brāhmaṇa, became pleased once again and spoke these words:

[The Remedy for Terminating Sundara's Rākṣasa-hood as Suggested by Vasiṣṭha]:—

Vasiṣṭha said :

18. O ladies of beautiful eyebrows, my words will never be false. I will recount to you the means (to get out of the curse). Listen with attention and faith.

19-21. The curse in the case of your husband will certainly be effective for a period of sixteen years. During this period of sixteen years, Sundara will have the form and features of a Rākṣasa. O celestial ladies, once he will, by chance, go to Veṅkaṭa , the auspicious mountain that dispels all sins. He will then go to Cakratīrtha. Padmanābha , a prominent sage and a great Yogin , stays there. This Rākṣasa will rush at that sage for devouring him.

22-24. Thereafter, the excellent Discus despatched by Viṣṇu for the protection of the Brāhmaṇa, will undoubtedly sever his head from his body. Thereafter, that Sundara, your husband, will be released from the curse and will regain his own form. He will return to heaven once again. There is no doubt about it. Thereupon, after reaching heaven, O beautiful women, Sundara, your husband, will delight you all in his beautiful dress.

Śrī Sūta said :

25. After saying thus to those excellent women of Sundara, Vasiṣṭha, a devotee of Śrīraṅgeśvara, went to his hermitage immediately.

26. Then those young women who were grief-stricken and immersed in the middle of the ocean of misery, embraced their husband Sundara and lamented.

27-30. Even as they were watching thus, Sundara became a Rākṣasa with a huge body and big curved teeth. His hair and beard were red in colour. On being frightened at his sight the beautiful women went to heaven.

Then this Sundara in the form of a Rākṣasa of terrible form and features, began to eat living beings. He wandered from land to land and forest to forest with the speed of wind. He roamed over the excellent mountain Veṅkaṭādri . The great sinner entered Cakratīrtha and then went away. Thus sixteen years elapsed while he continued his wanderings.

31-33. Then, at the close of the sixteenth year, O great sages, this Rākṣasa rushed at Padmanābha, a resident of Cakratīrtha, with the velocity of wind, in order to devour him.

He (Padmanābha) then eulogized Janārdana . On being eulogized by the Yogin, Viṣṇu hurled his Discus in order to protect that Padmanābha who was terribly harassed by the Rākṣasa. Hari 's Discus came and removed the head of the Rākṣasa.

[Liberation of Sundara from Rākṣasa-hood and Restoration of His Original Form]:—

34-35. Then he abandoned the body of Rākṣasa. Sundara got back his divine body and got in an aerial chariot. He was showered with flowers. With palms joined in reverence he bowed down to and saluted that Sudarśana . With great respect he eulogized him with excellent words pleasing to the ears:

Sundara said :

36. O Sudarśana, obeisance to you, O sole ornament of Viṣṇu's hand. Obeisance to you, the destroyer of Asuras , to the (weapon) having the refulgence of a thousand suns.

37. It was by your grace that I cast off the body of Rākṣasa and regained the original form of mine. O missile Discus of Viṣṇu, salute to you.

38. O favourite of Viṣṇu, permit me to go to heaven. My wives are bewailing me due to the grief of separation.

39. O Discus, grant me such a form as to enable me to think about you as long as I live. Obeisance to you.

40. On being thus eulogized devoutly by Sundara, O great sages, the Discus of Viṣṇu at once blessed him saying, "Let it be so."

41. Permitted by the Missile Discus, Sundara, the Gandharva, bowed down to the excellent Brāhmaṇa and permitted by him went to heaven.

42-46. When Sundara had gone to heaven, the prominent sage Padmanābha prayed to the Discus:

"O missile of Viṣṇu, obeisance to you. O weapon Discus, the suppressor of great Asuras, I bow down to you. Be pleased to be present in this splendid Cakratīrtha devoid of impurities. By your presence destroy the sins of all the sinners who take their bath here. Grant them eternal salvation. Let this Tīrtha become famous by the name Cakratīrtha in the world. Henceforth let the fear of the sages living here be dispelled. O noble weapon Discus, obeisance to you. Let there be no fear from evil spirits, vampires and ghosts, O Lord."

47-49. On being prayed to in this manner by Padmanābha, the Yogin, the Discus said, "So be it" and vanished in that Tīrtha.

Śrī Sūta said :

Thus, O Brāhmaṇas, the greatness of Cakratīrtha has been recounted by me with (reference to) the origin of the Rākṣasa. It dispels all impurities. On hearing it men on the earth are liberated from all sins.

English translation

Śrī Sūta said :

1-2. O ye all ascetics, O residents of the Naimiṣa forest, I shall describe the greatness of Jābālitīrtha on the Veṅkaṭādri of great merit and destructive of all sins. O Brāhmaṇas , (a sinner) named Durācāra became liberated by bathing there.

The sages enquired :

3-4. O Sūta , knower of the exact nature of reality, who was this person named Durācāra? What sin had been committed by that Durācāra, O sage? How was he liberated from the sin, due to the greatness of the bath in this Tīrtha ? O sage, we are desirous of hearing this. Relate it to us in detail.

[The Episode of the Brāhmaṇa Named Durācāra Who Lived on the Banks of Kāverī]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

5. O sages, let the sin of that Durācāra be heard. So also (listen) how he was liberated from the sin by taking his holy bath in Jābālitīrtha.

6. There was a certain Brāhmaṇa named Durācāra who had resorted to the banks of Kāverī. This Brāhmaṇa who was a sinner, was always engaged in cruel activities.

7. O Brāhmaṇas, this sinner was defiled due to his frequent associations with Brāhmaṇa-slayers, liquor-drinkers, thieves and defilers of preceptor’s bed. He always lived with them.

8. O excellent Brāhmaṇas, the Brahminical power of this sinner was entirely destroyed on account of the evil of association with great sinners.

9-11. If a Brāhmaṇa eagerly stays with great sinners for one day, one part (i.e. one fourth) of his Brahminhood will undoubtedly be lost at that very moment. By serving them, touching them, seeing them, lying with them and taking food with them in the same row, by remaining for two days with great sinners thus, O Brāhmaṇas, a second part (i.e. one half) of his Brahminhood is undoubtedly lost.

12. If the association lasts for three days a third part (i.e. three fourths) is lost undoubtedly. If it lasts for four days, (the last) fourth part is certainly obliterated.

13. If any person associates with great sinners beyond this period by sitting, lying or taking food with them, he shall become a sinner of (their) equal grade.

14. Therefore, the Brāhmaṇa named Durācāra became completely bereft of Brahminhood. He was haunted by an evil spirit. It was as though he was swallowed by a powerful and terrible snake or beast of prey.

15-21. Excessively afflicted by that vampire, he became distressed. He wandered from country to country and from forest to forest. Due to his previous merit and his good luck, that Brāhmaṇa reached the highly meritorious Veṅkaṭādri (which was) destructive of all sins. He was pursued there by the vampire (the ghost).

[Durācāra and the Vampire Get Rid of Their Sins by Taking Holy Bath in Jābālitīrtha]:—

The Brāhmaṇa closely pursued by the evil spirit came to the mount Veṅkaṭa . The vampire immersed the Brāhmaṇa who was associated with great sinners, in Jābālitīrtha that is destructive of great sins, O great Brāhmaṇas. Within a moment he was released by the vampire and he stood up (free).

Getting out of that holy Tīrtha, O Brāhmaṇas, that Brāhmaṇa regained composure. He pondered, 'I was residing on the banks of Kāveri . How have I come to a place near Svarṇamukhī?'

With these thoughts agitating him, Durācāra bowed down to the excellent Tīrtha of Jābāli as well as Jābāli, the noble-souled excellent great Yogin . After approaching him he spoke:

22-24. "O holy lord, O Brāhmaṇa, I do not know what this mountain is- Tell me. I am a resident of the banks of Kāveri. My name is Durācāra. Kindly tell me how I happened to come here?"

On being asked thus by Durācāra that sage of good holy rites, the storehouse of mercy, meditated for a short while and spoke to Durācāra:

[Narration of the Defect of Non-Performance of Pārvaṇa Śrāddha as Described by Jābāli]:—

Jābāli told :

25-29. On account of your contact with great sinners formerly, O Durācāra, your Brahminhood got destroyed. Then a vampire seized you. Because you were possessed by him, you became helpless and deluded in your mind. In that confounded state you came here. The vampire immersed you in this extremely sacred Tīrtha. Merely by taking your bath here you became rid of the sins.

If men take their holy bath in Jābālitīrtha, all the heaps of their five types of sins perish. It is true. Merely by the bath in this holy Tīrtha which is the cause of good holy rites, your sin due to your association with great sinners has perished. The vampire that seized you was formerly a Brāhmaṇa.

30-31. He did not perform the Śrāddha rite unto the Manes on the day of death in accordance with the Pārvaṇa rite. So he was cursed by his Manes and he attained the state of vampire.

Due to the power of taking the holy bath in the waters of Jābālitīrtha, he cast off his vampire-hood and attained the world of Viṣṇu .

32. A man who does not perform the Śrāddha unto his father and mother (every year) on the day of death becomes a vampire immediately and falls into hell later.

Śrī Sūta said :

33-34. Merely by taking his holy bath in this Tīrtha, Durācāra, the great sinner, attained the world of Viṣṇu from which no one returned (to Saṃsāra). Thus the holy story of the liberation of Durācāra has been recounted to you all. Hence this Tīrtha is the most sacred (of all Tīrthas). It is auspicious and destructive of all sins.

35-39a. Durācāra was liberated merely by a bath therein. This holy Tīrtha shall destroy even those sins which have no other way of expiation. If a Brāhmaṇa bows to a Liṅga or the idol of Viṣṇu (once) worshipped by a Śūdra no means of expiation has been laid down for him in the Smṛtis by the great sages. But even that sin of his shall perish in the Tīrtha named (after) Jābāli.

There is no means of atonement for those who censure Brāhmaṇas. Similarly there is no expiation for those who commit breach of trust, those who are ungrateful and those who carnally approach the wives of their brothers. But due to their holy bath in Jābālitīrtha they will become pure.

39b-40. Thus, O Brāhmaṇas, the greatness of Jābāli's Tīrtha has been described to you all. On hearing this men on the earth become liberated from all sins.

English translation

Śrī Sūta said :

1-3. Here I shall recount the greatness of Ghoṇatīrtha that is destructive of all sins, O Śaunaka and other (sages) of great prowess.

It is the fruit of a penance of previous birth that people get the opportunity of taking bath therein. On the Full-Moon day in conjunction with the Constellation Uttarāphālgunī , when the Sun is in the Zodiac Pisces, Gaṅgā and all other Tīrthas in the three worlds come there in the afternoon. [1]

The sages asked :

4-5. O holy lord Sūta , O omniscient one, O master of all the contents of all scriptures, why do all the rivers Gaṅgā etc. take bath in the exceedingly sacred Ghoṇatīrtha when the Sun is in the Zodiac Pisces?

Śrī Sūta replied :

6-11. The Tīrthas Gaṅgā etc. think like this: ‘All men who have committed sins, scrupulously take their holy bath in us. Those people cast off their sins in us and go away with their object achieved. How is this mass of sins accumulating in us to be destroyed?’

After thinking thus they remembered the divine, fascinating words of the noble-souled son of Brahmā , Nārada (for) absolving all sins. They go to Śrī Veṅkaṭa , the mountain that dispels the sins of Brahmin-slaughter etc. They take their holy bath in the waters of Svāmipuṣkariṇī, the excellent Tīrtha . Thereafter, O Brāhmaṇas , all those Tīrthas take their bath (i.e. flow into) in the exceedingly sacred Ghoṇatīrtha on the Full-Moon day in conjunction with the Constellation Uttarāphālgunī when the Sun is in the Zodiac Pisces. Who is capable of knowing (completely) the greatness of that Tīrtha in the entire universe consisting of the three worlds?

[A Description of the Great Sins of those who are Averse to the Holy Bath in Ghoṇatīrtha]:—

12. Hence, O excellent Brāhmaṇas, Ghoṇatīrtha is the most meritorious Tīrtha.

13. They call a person who has abandoned Ghoṇasnāna ('holy bath in Ghoṇatīrtha') one who cruelly destroys parks and gardens (i.e. he incurs the sins of such acts), one who sells horses and virgins, one who slays Brāhmaṇas.

14. They call one who has discarded Ghoṇasnāna, a destroyer of the property of deities, a person who takes back what is gifted away, a person who is a Brāhmaṇa -slayer.

15. Learned men call one who has avoided Ghoṇasnāna, a destroyer of lakes, bridges and dams, one who ardently longs for sexual union with other men's wives, one who steals.

16. Learned men know the person who has abstained from Ghoṇasnāna as a base non-believer who promises a Brāhmaṇa "I shall give" and afterwards (does not give it), as a person who habitually drinks liquor.

17. Learned men call the person who has abandoned Ghoṇasnāna, a person who is worthy of being hated by preceptors, Brāhmaṇas and (other) people, one who is given to self-praise, who steals.

18. Brāhmaṇas call the person who has discarded Ghoṇasnāna, a consumer of food that has not been consecrated, a consumer of the remnants of food offered to the Manes and a thief.

19. Learned men call the person who has abandoned Ghoṇasnāna, a person who offers (to others) the remnants of food offered to the Manes, a person who is antagonistic to his mother and father, and is a thief.

20. They say that the person who has abandoned Ghoṇasnāna is one who is habitually engaged in sexual union with other men's wives, who is fond of sexual dalliance with his brother's wife and is a defiler of the preceptor's bed.

21. They say that the person who has abstained from Ghoṇasnāna is one who talks to a Cāṇḍāla , who is a Brāhmaṇa always bereft of Darbha grass in his hand and is a sinner of the fifth class (i.e. one who associates with sinners who have committed the four types of major sins).

22. They say that the person who has abandoned Ghoṇasnāna is one who takes his food after hearing the voice of a woman in her menses, of a Cāṇḍāla or of a horse, and who is a sinner of the fifth class with their association.

23. They call the person who has abandoned Ghoṇasnāna, a person who causes obstacles in the holy rites of expounding the Purāṇas , celebrating marriage, investiture with the sacred thread and other rites and who kills animals.

24. Learned men say that the person who has avoided Ghoṇasnāna is a slayer of one who has sought refuge, who is averse to all the Tīrthas and who causes abortion.

25. They call the person who has abandoned Ghoṇasnāna, a person who has abandoned Pitṛyajña (i.e. performance of śrāddha), who has deserted his wife, is the meanest in the family and who kills cows.

26. O excellent Brāhmaṇas, sins on a par with the major sins and minor sins resort to the person who has abandoned Ghoṇasnāna.

[The Power of Bath in Ghoṇa to Dispel All Sins]:—

27-36. O eminent Brāhmaṇas, the fascinating Ghoṇatīrtha sanctifies all these sinners through the holy bath, drinking (its) water etc. Wonderful indeed is the greatness of the Tīrtha!

The following are the sinners sanctified: [2] One who is engaged in committing major sins, one who cooks dog's meat, the meanest in the family, the cruel, destroyer of the family, the mischievous one, one who has not gifted anything, one who has stopped performance of holy rites, a killer of animals, a tormentor of others, one who has resorted to a backbiter, one who habitually speaks lies, a hypocrite, one who is attached to the wives of others, one who is treacherous to friends, an ungrateful one, a destroyer of foetus, a heinous sinner, a sinner cohabiting with other men's wives, an informant about the assets of other men, an untruthful person, one who is engaged in agricultural activities, a traitor to the master, a fraudulent one, a covetous one, a patricide, one who is averse to all gods, one who praises himself, a rogue who causes obstacles to pious activities, one who wastes money over undeserving persons, one who causes split among persons who receive favour and concession, one who cuts off or uproots trees laden with excellent fruits, one guilty of breach of faith, one who is bent on massacring warriors, one who does not maintain the sacred fire, one without a son, one who administers poison, a sinner who makes the preceptor hate him, one who causes estrangement between husband and wife, one who acts as a tyrant in administering a village or a temple trust, one who teaches (Vedas) for salary, a Brāhmaṇa absorbed in cruel activities, one who has made committing of sins his second nature, one who is solely devoted to commit multitudes of sins secretly, one who commits sins due to ignorance, one who commits vicious deeds knowingly and all other persons of a similar nature-.

[Story of a Gandharva Called Tuṃburu]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

37. In this connection I shall relate an ancient legend that is destructive of sins, that absolves one from sins, that yields the benefit of salvation.

38. Formerly Gārgya , an omniscient Brāhmaṇa of great refulgence, expert in all lores, who was just and master (subduer) of his sense-organs said as follows:

39. He bowed down to the noble-souled Devala and requested him with delighted mind:

"O (sage) of exalted magnificence, be merciful unto me. Recount to me the greatness of Ghoṇatīrtha that is auspicious and destructive of all sins."

Devala said :

40-41. A Gandharva named Tuṃburu cursed his chaste wife. He took his bath here and worshipped Veṅkaṭeśa , the storehouse of mercy. Thereby he attained Viṣṇu 's world from which no one can return (to Saṃsāra).

Gārgya asked :

42-43. O Sage Devala, why did the Gandharva named Tuṃburu, an expert in all lores, curse his beautiful wife? What was the fault of his wife endowed with all good qualities? O (sage) of exalted magnificence, tell me the same. I am eager to hear.

[Tuṃburu Instructs His Wife about the Procedure in Taking Holy Bath in the Month of Māgha]:—

44-45. The Gandharva named Tuṃburu told his wife lovingly: “For a period of three Māghas take the bath along with me. It dispels all impurities and sins. In the month of Māgha, when the Sun has risen, smear with cow-dung the bank that dispels all sins, for the sake of the worship of Viṣṇu.

46. In this month of Viṣṇu that bestows auspiciousness render service unto me through Raṅgavallī etc. (? colourful designs as a mark of auspiciousness), designs of white lotus, Svastika etc. drawn by means of minerals.

47. In this Māgha offer Dīpavartikā (i.e. a lamp and a wick) to Mādhava . In front of Hari offer devoutly fire with incense.

48. Cook food unto the noble-souled Mādhava, remaining pure (in mind as well as in body). In the month of Māgha perform circumambulation and obeisances along with me with great devotion.

49. Perform the religious rites and services to Viṣṇu, the Lord of Devas , everyday. Listen to the Purāṇa of Viṣṇu everyday without any lethargy.

50-51a. Take bath scrupulously everyday and drink Hari’s Pādodaka (i.e. the water with which Hari’s feet are washed). Repeat continuously (his names such as) O Kṛṣṇa , O Viṣṇu, O Mukuṇḍa , O Nārāyaṇa , O Janārdana , O Acyuta , O Ananta and O Viśvātman.

51b-52a. Abandon anger, rivalry, jealousy, greediness etc. and observe a vow. Thereby you will attain liberation and permanent residence in Viṣṇu’s world.”

[Tuṃburu Curses His Wife: The Means of Redemption Therefrom]:—

52b. On hearing what was spoken thus by her husband, the beloved wife of the Gandharva angrily spoke to her husband (words) that were unbearable and leading to hell (or misfortune):

53. “O sinless one, when the chillness increases in the morning, when the sun rises very slowly, how can one bathe in the month of Māgha that gives agony due to chillness?

54. The rites mentioned by you cannot be performed by me constantly. O husband, I will not take bath in the morning along with you.

55-56a. If my death takes place due to excessive cold, you will not come to my rescue.”

On hearing the words spoken thus, in spite of his being calm and quiet, the Gandharva, the loving husband, cursed his wife who spoke unpleasantly and offensively.

Oṇ hearing this imprecation of her husband the beloved wife of the Gandharva, the chaste woman, fell at his feet and requested Tuṃburu. Afterwards Tuṃburu, the husband, indicated the redemption too from the curse:

61-64. “ Agastya of exalted magnificence, the ascetic who has conquered his sense-organs, will take his holy bath in the excellent Ghoṇatīrtha on the great day of Full Moon. The excellent Brāhmaṇa will then relate the greatness of Ghoṇatīrtha to his disciples near the Aśvattha tree. At that time you shall be within the hollow of the holy fig tree. Listen to the greatness of Ghoṇatīrtha that bestows liberation with great attention. You shall then get rid of all your sins and sport with me.”

On being told thus the chaste and pious wife ceased (to speak).

65-69. On account of the curse of her husband she took up the terrible and hideous body of a frog. The woman slowly went to the hollow of the holy fig tree on the peak of Śeṣādri to the south of Ghoṇatīrtha. She stayed in the hollow of the holy fig tree for a period of ten thousand years.

Then after a lapse of time (on one occasion) Agastya went to the fascinating Veṅkaṭādri . With all due holy observances he took his bath in Svāmitīrtha . He bowed down to Varāha , the deity to the south of the Tīrtha. He then went to the abode of Veṅkaṭeśa and bowed down to Śrīnivāsa , the storehouse of mercy, the Lord of Devas who can be known only through the Vedas, the eternal Lord of large eyes. Thereafter, Agastya of exalted magnificence went to Ghoṇatīrtha.

70-72. The most excellent one among Yogins took his bath in the excellent Tīrtha along with his disciples. With great devotion Agastya, the most excellent one among Yogins, the holy lord and sage, described to his disciples under the shade of the holy fig tree the greatness of Ghoṇatīrtha that is destructive of the sin of Brahmin-slaughter, that is meritorious, bestower of all auspiciousness and that grants all prosperity.

[On Seeing Agastya in Ghoṇatīrtha the Wife of Tiṃburu is Liberated from the Form of a Frog]:—

73-75. On hearing it the frog fell at the feet of that Yogin after knowing the greatness of the sage through the light of knowledge. She regained her original form, the charming form of a woman. She spoke to him thus:

“O Agastya, the most excellent one among Yogins, save me, save me, O storehouse of mercy. O Brāhmaṇa, kindly protect me though I opposed the words of my husband.”

Saying thus the lady of large eyes ceased (to speak) thereafter.

Agastya asked :

76. Who are you, O lady of ample, fine buttocks? Welfare unto you. There was committed a sin in the previous birth that gave you the birth of a frog. What is that? Tell me. Do not delay.

The woman said :

77. There is a Gandharva named Tuṃburu. He is an expert in all lores. O Brāhmaṇa, O Agastya served by sages, I am his wife.

78. O excellent sage, my husband Tuṃburu who is conversant with all Dharmas said to me: “You are a charming (lady). Always perform all holy rites along with me.”

79-80. On hearing the words of my husband, which would help in the other world, I uttered unbearable and very harsh words that would lead to hell. O dear one, O excellent sage, those words were uttered by me on account of my vicious intellect.

[The Duties of a Chaste Woman as Described by Agastya]:—

Agastya said :

81. Your husband of keen intellect cursed you angrily. Such a curse is proper in regard to a woman who acts contrary to the words of her husband.

82. A woman who dishonours the utterance of her husband and does as she pleases, falls into a terrible hell (where she remains) as long as the moon and the stars shine.

83-84a. Women have no freedom; husband's words or directives should not be transgressed. Women go to the region of Viṣṇu due to chastity and the merit of serving their husbands and not through other holy rites.

84b-86a. Learned men know (and assert) that husband is everything unto women, viz. mother, Viṣṇu, Brahmā, Śiva , preceptor and the holy Tīrtha. If a woman disobeys the directive of her husband, even if she is always engaged in the performance of all other holy rites, she shall never be pure even once.

86b-87a. A woman without husband (i.e. a widow) shall perform holy rites that bestow virtuous benefits on being bidden (and permitted) by preceptors conversant with Dharma .

87b. If a woman is directed by her husband, she should devotedly engage herself in obeying the order of her husband.

88. She who takes bath in the Tīrtha of (i.e. holy water flowing from) the lotus-Iike feet of her husband is a favourite of Han. Undoubtedly, it is as good as a bath in all the Tīrthas, Gaṅgā etc.

89-91. Hence the sin committed by you yields the fruit thereof. While you were reaping the fruit of your own action, you heard the greatness of Ghoṇatīrtha. You were liberated. You regained the auspicious form of that lady. Hence this Ghoṇatīrtha has become famous as Tumbutīrtha in the world. What a (wonderful) greatness of the Tīrtha!

[Those who take Their Holy Bath in Ghoṇatīrtha Attain Different Kinds of Benefits]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

92-98. O (sages) of great prowess, O Śaunaka and others, if people take their bath on the Full-Moon day in Ghoṇatīrtha of great merit and destructive of all sins, they will attain the meritorious benefit of sacrifices. They will have the benefit of ten thousand Tīrthas.

By taking the holy bath in Tuṃburutīrtha one shall attain that benefit which is obtained by one who makes a gift of a thousand Kapilā (tawny) cows everyday.

By taking a plunge in Ghoṇatīrtha one attains that benefit which is obtained by one who makes a gift of thousands and crores of precious stones everyday or thousands of elephants in rut or ten thousand horses.

From the sacred Ghoṇatīrtha one attains that benefit which is said by sages to be the fruit of a gift of a crore of virgins.

By the greatness and power of Ghoṇatīrtha one attains that benefit which is obtained by one who makes a gift of a thousand golden robes in Kurukṣetra .

By the great power of Ghoṇatīrtha one attains that benefit which is obtained by one who casts off his body for the sake of the preceptor, or a Brāhmaṇa or his own master.

99. From the Ghoṇatīrtha that merit accrues that is obtained by those who dispel the agony of persons in extreme distress or those who are eagerly devoted to the visits of holy Tīrthas or those who forever adhere to truthfulness.

100. From the holy Ghoṇatīrtha one attains that benefit which is obtained by those who perform Śrāddhas to Pitṛs on the New-Moon day.

101. From the holy Ghoṇatīrtha one attains that benefit which is obtained by a man who takes his holy bath in all the Tīrthas, in Gaṅgā, in Narmadā , in Sarayū , in Candrabhāgā and others.

102. Hence learned men know that Ghoṇatīrtha is the most meritorious of all the Tīrthas.

103. If a person listens to this chapter which dispels all sins, he will have the benefit of Vājapeya and a permanent stay in the world of Viṣṇu.

[1]: [1] : The special day of this Tīrtha is the Full-Moon day in Phālguna when the Sun is in the Zodiac Pisces.

[2]: [2] : This list of 'sins' includes all unsocial acts detested at the time of this Purāṇa.

English translation

The sages said :

1. O Sūta , the most excellent one among those conversant with the Purāṇas , how many Tīrthas are there on Veṅkaṭādri of great merit and destructive of all calamities and distresses?

2. Tell us their number. How many of them are important? There too, O excellent sage, tell us the most important among them.

3-4. How many among them produce interest in righteousness? How many are the most important among them? Which are those that bestow knowledge? Which are those that bestow devotion and detachment? Which are those that bestow salvation? Tell us, O sage engaged in holy rites.

Śrī Sūta said :

5. Here, on this excellent mountain, there are sixty-six crores of holy Tīrthas. Among them, O (sages) of holy rites, one thousand and eight are very important.

6-7. There are one hundred and eight Tīrthas that inspire interest in righteousness. They are more important than the other thousand Tīrthas. They are separate from them. Among the one hundred and eight (Tīrthas) sixty are those that bestow devotion and detachment.

[The Time for Holy Bath in the Six Tīrthas Including Svāmipuṣkariṇī [1]]:—

8-9. There are six Tīrthas on the top of Veṅkaṭācala that bestow salvation, viz. Svāmipuṣkariṇī, Viyadgaṅgā, Pāpavināśa, Pāṇḍutīrtha, Kumāradhārikā Tīrtha and Tuṃbura Tīrtha.

10-12a. On the Full-Moon day in the month of Kuṃbha (when the Sun is in Aquarius), when the constellation Maghā comes in conjunction, O Brāhmaṇa , all the Tīrthas fall into Kumāradhārikā.

He who takes his holy bath there, O eminent Brāhmaṇas , shall acquire the benefit of Rājasūya sacrifice. He shall attain salvation too. There is no doubt about it.

O Brāhmaṇas, one should make gift of food there, along with monetary gifts.

12b-18a. On the Full-Moon day in conjunction with the constellation Uttarāphālgunī , when the Sun is in the Zodiac Pisces, all the Tīrthas come to Tuṃburutīrtha in the afternoon. One who takes the holy bath there, is not re-born (i.e. becomes liberated). Investiture with the sacred thread and marriage rite should be performed there along with a gift of money.

When the Sun is in the Zodiac Aries, on the Full-Mooṇ day in conjunction with the constellation Citrā , (all the Tīrthas) fall into Viyadgaṅgā. By taking his holy bath therein a man immediately derives the benefit of a hundred sacrifices. Gold must be given as gift there. Gift of a virgin (i.e. giving her away in marriage) is particularly (recommended).

O Brāhmaṇas, when the Sun is in Vṛṣabha (Taurus) on the eleventh or twelfth day of the lunar fortnight either in the bright half or in the dark half in conjunction with (i.e. when it is) Tuesday, all the Tīrthas in all the three worlds beginning with Gaṅgā fall into Pāṇḍutīrtha. By taking the holy bath therein and by offering a cow as gift one is liberated from obstacles.

18b-20. On a Sunday in the bright half of the month of Āśvayuj (September-October), on the seventh day (when the Moon is) in conjunction with the constellation Uttarāṣāḍhā or on the twelfth day in conjunction with Uttarābhādrapadā constellation, the devotee shall come to Pāpavināśana and take his holy bath as enjoined (in the scriptures). Thereafter he should make a gift of a Śālagrāma stone. He is liberated from all sins arising from (i.e. committed in) crores of births.

21-24. In the month of Dhanur (when the Sun is in Sagittarius), on the twelfth day in the bright half, during early dawn, all the Tīrthas fall into the waters of Svāmipuṣkariṇī. A man who takes bath therein shall undoubtedly attain salvation instantaneously. One gets the opportunity to take the holy bath only as a result of one's merit acquired in the course of thousands of births. Other persons who are not self-controlled will never have that chance. One shall make gifts there in accordance with one's capacity and in accordance with the injunctions. Particularly one should make gifts of a Śālagrāma stone and a cow.

25. Those who always listen to the story of Viṣṇu that sanctifies the universe, do indeed become devotees of Viṣṇu in this world of human beings.

26. If he is not able to listen always to the story that sanctifies the universe, the man should listen to it for a Muhūrta (48 minutes) or for half that time or even for a moment. If a man devoutly listens to the excellent story of Viṣṇu, he does not have any mishap or bad luck.

27. By listening to the Purāṇas once one obtains that merit which one derives from all the Yajñas and all types of charitable gifts.

28. Particularly in Kaliyuga excepting listening to the Purāṇas there is no greater holy rite for men nor there is any greater thing that yields salvation.

29. Listening to the Purāṇas and repeating the names of Viṣṇu—these two alone are the two great fruits of the tree of merits to human beings.

30. By drinking the nectar with great effort only one shall be rid of old age and death. But the nectar of the story of Viṣṇu shall make the entire family free from death and old age.

[An Expounder of the Purāṇas Worthy of Being Worshipped by All]:—

31. Whether he be a boy or a young man or an old man, whether he be poor or wretched, a man conversant with the Purāṇas should always be respected by meritorious persons.

32. One should never think about a person conversant with the Purāṇas to be mean or lowly, since the word that comes out from his mouth is a (veritable) wish-yielding cow (Kāmadhenu) unto all embodied beings.

33. It is he who grants the chance of never returning (to the world) to those persons who have become dejected and distressed by frequent compulsion to take thousands and crores of births. Who else can be a better, a greater preceptor?

34. When a Brāhmaṇa-expounder of the Purāṇas occupies the seat of Vyāsa , he shall not bow down to anyone till the conclusion of the story or discourse.

35. The intelligent one shall not expound the holy story (of Purāṇas) in a place infested with vicious men, Śūdras or beasts of prey, or in a gambling house.

36. The intelligent one should sermonize the (Purāṇa) story in a good village peopled by good men, a holy spot, a temple or on the sacred banks of rivers.

37. The listeners who are endowed with faith and devotion, who are not hankering after any other activity, who are restrained in their speech, are pure and are not unduly excited shall earn merit.

38. If vile and mean persons listen to the holy story without devotion, they will never have the merit. They will be miserable in every birth.

39. Those who honour and adore a Purāṇa by means of offerings of Tāṃbūla (betel leaves) etc. and then listen to the story with devotion, shall never be poor or sinners.

40. If men go out elsewhere while a Purāṇa is being expounded, their wives and wealth shall perish in the midst of their enjoyment. [3]

41. Those who listen to the holy story (Purāṇas) with a turban on their heads, will be born as foolish sinners, the meanest of men.

42. Those who listen to the sacred story even as they chew betel leaves, shall fall indeed into a hell and swallow the filthy ordure of dogs.

43. Those hypocrites who listen to the story while occupying a higher seat, shall undergo everlasting tortures in hells and then will be reborn as crows.

44. Those who sit on their hams in the posture of Vīrāsana , and those who occupy thrones and listen to the holy story shall become Arjuna trees.

45. Those who begin to listen without bowing down at the outset, shall become poisonous trees. Those who listen to the story while lying down, shall become pythons.

46. He who listens to the story while occupying a seat on a level with that of the expounder, shall incur a sin on a par with that of defiling the preceptor's bed and fall into a hell.

47. Those men who censure a person conversant with the Purāṇas or the holy story that dispels sins, shall indeed be reborn as dogs a hundred times.

48. Those who make impertinent remarks while the discourse is being held, shall be reborn as donkeys and chameleons thereafter.

49. Those men who never listen to the holy story, undergo tortures in hell and are reborn as wild pigs.

50. Those who create disturbance while the story is being told, undergo the tortures of hells for a crore of years and are reborn as village pigs.

51. Excellent men who encourage the narration of holy stories, shall attain the imperishable eternal region, even if they do not listen.

52. Those men who expound the holy story of the Purāṇas (to others), dwell in the region of Brahmā for more than hundred crores of Kalpas .

53-54. Those men who give a seat to a person conversant with the Purāṇas, or give him blankets, deerskins, clothes or a couch, shall attain heaven after enjoying all desirable pleasures. After residing in the world of Brahmā and others they go to a place devoid of ailment (i.e. salvation).

55-57. Those who offer excellent and new thread (to tie) a Purāṇa, shall enjoy pleasures in every birth and become endowed with perfect knowledge.

Those who have committed major sins, those who have committed minor sins—all these attain the highest region only through listening to the Purāṇas.

After hearing about the greatness of Veṅkaṭādri those sages worshipped and duly honoured Sūta who was richly endowed with the favour of Vyāsa and was the most excellent one among those conversant with the Purāṇas. They derived matchless delight.

[1]: [1] : There are six important Tīrthas on the Veṅkaṭa hill. Their special important days are mentioned below: Tīrtha — Important day 1. Svāmipuṣkariṇī—Bright half, 12th day of Mārgaśīrṣa; 2. Viyad (Ākāśa-) gaṅgā—Full-Moon day of Caitra (with the Sun in the Zodiac Aries); 3. Pāpavināśa—Sunday, bright half of Āśvina, 7th day when the Moon is with Uttarāṣāḍhā and 12th day when the Moon is with Uttarābhādrapadā; 4. Pāṇḍu Tīrtha—Tuesday or 11th or 12th day of Vaiśākha (both in dark and bright half with the Sun in Taurus); 5. Kumāradhārikā—Full-Moon day of Māgha (with the Sun in the Zodìac Aquarius); 6. Tuṃburu—Full-Moon day of Phālguna (with the Sun in the Zodiac Pisces).

[2]: [2] : VV 27-30 describe the benefits derived from listening to Purāṇas.

[3]: [3] : VV 40-50 describe the restriction on the listeners of Purāṇas.

English translation

Note: The Kaṭāha Tīrtha is attached to Śrī Veṅkaṭeśvara's sanctum on its northern side in the Vimāna - pradakṣiṇā (circumambulation passage around the temple). It contains the Abhiṣeka Tīrtha of Veṅkaṭeśa collected after the holy bath.

[The Greatness of Kaṭāha Tīrtha]:—

The sages said :

1-2. O Sūta conversant with the truth of all subjects and objects, O master of the Vedas and Vedāṅgas , it is heard that there is an extremely sanctifying Tīrtha named Kaṭāha on Śrī Veṅkaṭācala . Its greatness is proclaimed in all the three worlds. Recount this kindly to us, O disciple of Vyāsa .

3-5. Formerly the glorious son of Brahmā , the holy sage Nārada , the most excellent Brāhmaṇa , came to the Naimiṣa forest. On seeing that son of Brahmā all these sages duly worshipped him with splendid Arghya , Pādya etc. They offered him a seat with great devotion. They bowed to him with their necks lowered due to modesty. All those sages requested him thus:

6-8. "O glorious Nārada, excepting you there is no other instructor of Dharma to us. There is none among the great sages. On the mountain Veṅkaṭa of great merit, served by all the Devas , the divine mountain that has come from Vaikuṇṭha and is attended upon by Siddhas and Gandharvas , there is a holy spot called Kaṭāhatīrtha. Describe the greatness of Kaṭāhatīrtha to us, the forest-dwellers."

Śrī Nārada replied :

9-11. Listen ye all sages of great prowess headed by Śaunaka ! Who knows the greatness of Kaṭāhatīrtha (adequately) in all the three worlds? Only Mahādeva understands the greatness of that Tīrtha. All those sacred Tīrthas within the Cosmic Egg, Gaṅgā and all the other Tīrthas, resort to the Kaṭāha Tīrtha, O excellent Brāhmaṇas , in order to dispel their own sins.

12-13a. A foolish person may think thus: 'All people touch this water—Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas , Vaiśyas , Śūdras and people of other castes too.' Thinking thus he may not drink it. Indeed that foolish one will become a Cāṇḍāla and he will fall in Kuṃbhīpāka hell.

13b-15a. Whether he be a religious student, a householder, a forest-dweller or an eminent ascetic, by serving that Tīrtha he attains the highest state. In Śrutis , Smṛtis and Purāṇas there are many passages praising that Tīrtha which destroys the five major sins.

15b-17. It is exceedingly wonderful, O Brāhmaṇas; it is the only sanctifying thing in all the worlds. By serving and resorting to that Tīrtha ten thousand sins of Brahmin-slaughter, ten thousand sins of liquor-drinking, ten thousand sins of carnally approaching the preceptor's wife, ten thousand sins of the theft of gold and crores of the sins of associating with the great sinners, immediately become dissolved.

18. By resorting to this Tīrtha all those different kinds of sins which have no means of expiation, perish.

19-20a. This Tīrtha of great merit has issued from the feet of the Lord. If a person suffering from leprosy and other diseases drinks the water of this everyday, he shall get rid of that disease and go to the world of Viṣṇu .

[Those Who have no Faith in the Greatness of Kaṭāhatīrtha Will Fall into Great Hells]:—

20b-21. In the course of his (revelation) of secret experiences Lord Śaṅkara formerly spoke to Pārvatī about the greatness of that Tīrtha. No one should entertain any doubt about what has been said before.

22-24. It should never be uttered that it is mere laudatory statement. Those who say that this is mere eulogy are atheists in the core of their heart. The servants (of Yama) will place red-hot axe at the tips of their tongues. Hence the Tīrtha called Kaṭāha-tīrtha should be scrupulously served and resorted to. It suppresses all miseries and bestows the benefit of salvation. By drinking (its waters) devoutly a man shall realize all his desires.

25-27. O Sūta, the most excellent one among those conversant with the Purāṇas, after saying thus (to us) the glorious Nārada of exalted magnificence went to Kāśī that sanctifies all the three worlds. That holy lord spoke everything briefly in the Naimiṣa forest. Now we wish to know the greatness of Kaṭāha in great detail. Kindly tell it to us, O Sūta.

[The Procedure of Drinking the Waters of Kaṭāha Tīrtha]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

28. O ye all ascetics living in the Naimiṣa forest, O excellent Brāhmaṇas, listen to the greatness of Kaṭāha Tīrtha.

29. O Brāhmaṇas, Kaṭāha Tīrtha is well-known in all the worlds. It causes all prosperity. It is pure and destructive of all sins.

30. It annihilates (the effects of) evil dreams. It is destructive of great sins. It suppresses great obstacles and brings about great peace (of mind) to men.

31-36. Merely by being remembered it nullifies all the sins of men. One should drink its enchanting waters after repeating the eight-syllabled Mantra . [1] Or he should mutter the names of Keśava etc. and sip water after each name. Or he should drink the water that bestows auspiciousness after muttering three names (Keśava, Nārāyaṇa , Mādhava) (together). Or he shall repeat the eight-syllabled Mantra of Veṅkaṭeśa and drink (the water of) Kaṭāha Tīrtha. That yields worldly pleasures as well as salvation.

If any Brāhmaṇa wishes to drink at the excellent Tīrtha without a Mantra, he should always say “Destroy quickly all the great sins of mine committed in all the previous births” and drink the water. It is the sole means leading to salvation.

The following three are very rare in all the three worlds: bath in Svāmipuṣkariṇī, vision of Lord of Śrī in the form of Varāha and drinking of (the water of) Kaṭāha Tīrtha.

Of what avail is much talk? It is destructive of all sins like that of slaying a Brāhmaṇa etc.

[The Episode of a Brāhmaṇa Named Keśava]:—

37-38. Formerly, out of delusion, a Brāhmaṇa named Keśava viciously killed Bahuśruta and incurred the sin of Brahmin-slaughter. He drank the excellent water of this great Tīrtha. The great sinner named Keśava was liberated from the sin of Brahmin-slaughter.

The Sages asked :

39. Whose son was this (Brāhmaṇa) named Keśava? How did he incur the terrible and exceedingly formidable sin of Brahmin-slaughter? It behoves you to tell it to us.

Śrī Sūta narrated :

40. There was a great Agrahāra (i.e. village donated to Brāhmaṇas) named Vedāḍhya on the beautiful banks of Tuṅgabhadrā resorted to by Gandharvas.

41-43. In that beautiful place Vedapura all the Brāhmaṇas were masters of the Vedas. They were devoted to the Science of Words (i.e. Grammar). All of them were promotors of the Science of Astrology. They were conversant with Nyāya and Mīmāṃsā systems of Philosophy. All of them were expounders of Vedānta . They were devoted to the treatises on Ethics and Law Codes. They were always engaged in making gifts of food. All the great residents of the Agrahāra were blessed with sons. (There was a Brāhmaṇa) well-known as Padmanābha in that Agrahāra (named) Vedāḍhya.

44-48a. He had a son named Keśava who had been banished from all holy rites. He abandoned his mother, father and his wife also who was a chaste woman. He was attached to harlots and he always visited brothels. The Brāhmaṇa enjoyed the company of a prostitute for two days and handed over to her the two gold coins due to her. Then he went away happily. When he had no money he was discarded by the woman of ill fame. Since he was desirous of sexual union with her, he began to steal much money frequently. He handed over the same to her and sported with her for a long time. He took food in her house. He drank wine with her from the same goblet.

48b-50. Once that Brāhmaṇa assumed the guise of a Kirāta (hunter) and went to the house of a certain Brāhmaṇa along with other Kirātas in order to rob him of his wealth. Keśava, the unworthy Brāhmaṇa, took a sword in his hand. He rashly attacked the Brāhmaṇa who was the master of the house and killed him with his sword. He brought much wealth from there and entered the prostitute's house.

51-52. The awful and hideous Brahmahatyā followed him as he went along. She was terrible in her blue robes and very red hair. She roared with boisterous laughter shaking heaven and earth. Being pursued by her the Brāhmaṇa wandered all over the earth.

53. While wandering all over the earth the vicious, unworthy Brāhmaṇa went to his village with excessive fright, O Śaunaka and other (sages) of great prowess.

54. He was terrified on being chased by her and went to his own house. Brahmahatyā who pursued him went into the house along with him.

55. Saying, "Save me, save me" Keśava sought refuge in his father. The father said. "Do not be afraid" and attempted to save him.

56-58. As Padmanābha endeavoured to protect his son, the cruel demoness Brahmahatyā spoke to the father:

Brahmahatyā said :

O excellent Brāhmaṇa Padmanābha, do not accept him (and give him shelter). He is addicted to drinking liquor. He is a thief and Brāhmaṇa-slayer. He is a great sinner. He is treacherous to his mother and father. He is vicious in his mind. He has deserted his wife and is over-fond of harlots. Leave off this wicked one.

59-60. O Brāhmaṇa, if you shield in vain your son who is a great sinner, I will swallow your wife, this man's wife, you, your son and the entire family. Hence leave off this wicked one. If you abandon your son now, I will release you all.

61. O highly intelligent one, it does not behove you to get the whole family destroyed for the sake of one (member).

On being told by her thus Padmanābha spoke to her thus:

Padmanābha said :

62. Affection for my son torments me. How can I forsake my son?

On hearing it Brahmahatyā spoke to the Brāhmaṇa:

Brahmahatyā said :

63-64. This son of yours has become fallen. He is excommunicated from the pale of castes and stages of life. Do not love this son. His very sight is despicable.

After saying this Brahmahatyā struck his son named Keśava with her hand even as Padmabābha [Padmanābha?] was watching.

65. Calling his father frequently he lamented, "O father! O father!" The father, mother and wife of that wicked one, all lamented.

[The Means of Liberation from Brahmahatyā as Advised by Bharadvāja to Padmanābha]:—

66. At that time Bharadvāja, the great sage of exalted magnificence, the great Yogin , chanced to come there, O Śaunaka and sages of great prowess.

67. On seeing Bharadvāja the great sage Padmanābha bowed down to him and eulogized him. He sought refuge in him for the sake of his son:

68-74. "O Bharadvāja of exalted magnificence, you are a part of Viṣṇu himself. Persons without merits will never see you. My son has become murderer of a Brāhmaṇa, liquor-addict and a thief. The terrifying Brahmahatyā has come to strike my son. Advise me the means whereby my son shall become liberated from great sins and this terrible Brahmahatyā shall be destroyed quickly. Take pity on my son. O sage, I have only one son. I have no other son. If this son dies, my family will become extinct. Then there may not be anyone to offer rice-balls to the Pitṛs . Therefore, O sage, be kind to us."

On being appealed thus Bharadvāja who was a part of Nārāyaṇa himself, meditated for a long time and spoke these words to Padmanābha:

Bharadvāja said :

75-76. O Padmanābha, very formidable sins have been perpetrated by your son. Even by means of ten thousand atonements his sins will not be quelled. Still I shall recommend some expiation for absolution of the sins of your son. O Brāhmaṇa Padmanābha, listen.

77-78. O Brāhmaṇa, two hundred Yojanas (2400 kms) to the south of Gaṅgā, five Yojanas to the west of the Eastern Sea, on the northern basin of Suvarṇamukharī and only one Krośa from it, there is the mountain well-known as Veṅkaṭādri .

79-80. It is bowed to by all the worlds. It is the son of Meru . It is of great merit. It is saluted to by all the Devas. It has been brought from Vaikuṇṭha by the fast moving (vehicle) Garuḍa . It is the great mountain of sport of Viṣṇu. Now it is there on the auspicious banks of Svarṇamukhī. It is adored by groups of Devas and groups of sages.

81-83. On that prominent mountain Veṅkaṭa Nārāyaṇa himself dwells along with Goddess Lakṣmī , Goddess Bhū (the Earth) and Goddess Nīlā . Veṅkaṭeśa is the direct bestower of salvation. To the north of the temple of Veṅkaṭanātha , O great Brāhmaṇa, there is the holy spot Kaṭāhatīrtha that bestows auspiciousness. It destroys the sins like that of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter. It yields all desired objects.

84-85. O eminent Brāhmaṇa, along with your son drink the charming holy water (of that Tīrtha).

On hearing the words of Bharadvāja, which are on a par with the words of Vedas, he bowed down his head to him and went to the Veṅkaṭa mountain.

[By Drinking the Holy Water from Kaṭāhatīrtha as per Advice of Bharadvāja Keśava is Liberated from the Sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter]:—

86. After going to the mountain Veṅkaṭa the eminent Brāhmaṇa took his holy bath with due holy observances in the waters of Svāmipuṣkariṇī along with his soṇ.

87-88. He bowed down to Lord Varāha and went to the shrine of Śrīnivāsa . He circumambulated and bowed down to Vimāna (palatial Temple). Along with Keśava, his son of great wickedness, Padmanābha drank (the water of) Kaṭāhatīrtha that is destructive of the sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter.

89-91. Thereat Brahmahatyā was dissolved immediately. Thereafter the leading Brāhmaṇa Padmanābha went to Veṅkaṭeśa, the storehouse of mercy, along with his son and visited the Lord. Then Veṅkaṭeśa, the storehouse of kindness, appeared before them on being delighted by their drinking (the water of) Kaṭāhatīrtha. He spoke these words:

[The Lord Addresses Padmanābha who was Accompanied by His Son Liberated from Brahmahatyā]:—

Śrī Bhagavān said :

92-95. O Padmanābha of great wisdom, O master of Vedas and Vedāṅgas, at the instance of Bharadvāja you came to the Veṅkaṭa mountain. After drinking (the water from) Kaṭāhatīrtha you have undoubtedly become blessed with your object achieved. Your son named Keśava has been released from Brahmahatyā. Hence Kaṭāhatīrtha should be resorted to with great effort. O Brāhmaṇa of great fortune, after drinking the excellent water in that Tīrtha even sinners become blessed and contented. It is true. It is (really) true. There is no doubt. Gome to my world and be happy, O highly intelligent one.

96. After saying this Veṅkaṭeśa vanished from there.

Śrī Sūta said :

97-98. Hence, O ye all ascetics, Śaunaka and others of great prowess, the greatness of Kaṭāhatīrtha along with the legendary story has been recounted well in the manner it had been heard by me.

[1]: [1] : The mantra is: Oṃ namo Veṅkaṭeśāya .

[2]: [2] : The motif of redemption from the sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter by the water of a sacred place is previously used in the case of Sumati who, as per advice of Durvāsas, is absolved by the waters of Svāmipuṣkariṇī (vide Supra Ch. 12.5-46) and the same is used here about Keśava who through Bharadvāja's advice imbibes the water of Kaṭāha Tīrtha.

English translation

Note: From this chapter begins the sub-section of the glorification of river Suvarṇamukharī (see Supra p. 6, Fnt 2)

The sages said :

1. The power of all the holy places as also of the rivers, mountains, holy shrines and lakes has been related by you.

2. It has been described by you, O sinless one, that at the instance of Brahmā the river Suvarṇamukharī was brought to the earth by Agastya .

3. Now a desire has arisen to hear about its origin and power as well as of the groups of Tīrthas depending on it. It behoves you to recount that to us.

4. Sūta who was thus requested by the sages, bowed down to Śaṃbhu , the Lord Nandī , the six-faced Lord Skanda and Vyāsa . Then he began to recount.

Śrī Sūta said :

5-6. O blessed ones, what has been asked by you is relevant and conducive to the good. This narrative bestows the Siddhi that comes from listening to the Vedas .

Listen attentively. I shall recount to you the divine story that is destructive of sins. It had been narrated by Bharadvāja to Arjuna .

7. After getting Yājñasenī (i.e. Draupadī) from the wise king Drupada the sons of Pṛthā went to the splendid city of Hastinā-pura at the bidding of Dhṛtarāṣṭra .

8. They were honoured thereby Bhīṣma as well as by the son of Aṃbikā (i.e. Dhṛtarāṣṭra). They lived there for five years along with Duryodhana and others.

9-10. As advised by Bhīṣma and others, Dhṛtarāṣṭra of great fame, who was himself delighted in his mind on account of their services, granted to the sons of Pāṇḍu the excellent city named Khāṇḍavaprastha along with half the kingdom in the preseṇce of Vāsudeva and all the elderly members of the family.

11. After taking leave of the Kurus headed by Dhṛtarāṣṭra, the sons of Pāṇḍu went to that city of Khāṇḍavaprastha accompanied by Kṛṣṇa .

12. Residing in that city named Indraprastha which was well guarded by Viśvakarman , Dharmaputra (Yudhiṣṭhira) ruled over the kingdom in the company of his brothers.

13. After Kṛṣṇa had gone back to his city, the sons of Pṛthā, well-conversant with Dharma took a vow (i.e. made an agreement) regarding Draupadī at the advice of Nārada .

[Prelude to the Pilgrimage of Arjuna [1]]:—

14-16. The agreement was as follows: Kṛṣṇā (i.e. Draupadī) should stay with each one of them (Pāṇḍava -brothers) in due order, with great respect, for one year, with this proviso that if any one of them were to see the daughter of Pāñcāla staying in another brother's house, he would proceed on a pilgrimage for a period of one year. [2]

Having taken a vow thus, those sons of king Pāṇḍu spent their time carefully in all those activities common to everyone in the world.

17. Once a Brāhmaṇa from the rural areas came and stood in the palace courtyard and lamented loudly many times, "My cow has been taken away by thieves."

18. After consoling that Brāhmaṇa Dhanañjaya (Arjuna) hurriedly entered the arsenal to take out his weapons.

19. There he saw Pāñcālī and Dharmaputra seated (together). Though he was fully aware of the vow, he entered the apartment and took out the bow along with the quiver.

20. That Prince went to fight with the thieves, killed them in battle, retrieved the cow and gave it to the Brāhmaṇa with due respect.

21. Thereafter Phālguna intimated to Dharmaputra (Yudhiṣṭhira):

"Pilgrimage has to be undertaken by me, because I have broken the stipulations in the vow."

22. On hearing the words of his younger brother the wise king Dharmaputra, the most excellent one among those conversant with righteousness, eagerly spoke thus:

Yudhiṣṭhira said :

23. If for the sake of cows and Brāhmaṇas one were to tell a lie, it is truth itself. If for the same purpose one were to commit an evil act, it is appropriate indeed.

24. It is for the sake of a Brāhmaṇa as well as for the sake of a cow that you have done like this. How can it become a vile deed? Tell me, O (brother) of good holy rites.

25. The duty of a king is the protection of his subjects. If he is indifferent to thieves, he will incur the sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter. If he punishes the thieves, he shall enjoy the benefit of a horse sacrifice.

26. Even after knowing that they are uncontrollable enemies, if the thieves who oppress the people of his own country are not punished by the king, he will not be entitled to welfare and peace.

27. What has been done by you is an act conducive to the good and welfare of us, the kings, as well as of all the classes of the public. Therefore there is no fault on your part.

Śrī Sūta said :

28. On hearing the words of Dharmaputra, Dhanañjaya who was always virtuous, joined his palms in reverence and submitted once again:

Arjuna said :

29-30. O King, do not speak like this (to approve) a thing that involves the breaking of one's own vow.

A vow should never be broken by a person who knows everything about Dharma, who is himself the brilliant Dharma incarnate, who is conversant with what should be done and what should not be done (and especially by one) who is competent. A vow that has been proclaimed before by oneself should never be broken.

31. It is a way out for weaklings to forsake their duty on being prompted by the words of kinsmen and elders by casting off their own pledges announced by themselves previously.

32. If out of compassion my noble (brother) were to dissuade me from undertaking the pilgrimage, who can prevent the people from decrying me as one who has broken his vow?

33. My mind is extremely eager for going on a pilgrimage. My duty based on the behest of Nārada has been remembered by me.

34. Hence be pleased, O great King, in the matter of undertaking the pilgrimage. The vow of servants should be honoured by masters.

35. Arjuna was given permission by saying "So be it". Along with his brothers he delighted his elder brother by means of his humility, obeisance etc.

36. The son of Pāṇḍu took leave of his brothers Bhīmasena and others. Holy rites for his welfare during his travels were performed by excellent Brāhmaṇas.

37-38. At the bidding of Yudhiṣṭhira [3] many persons followed him, viz. Brāhmaṇas conversant with the Purāṇas , astrologers, physicians, artisans, servants, bards and heralds. Affectionate and well-behaved officers of the treasury followed him taking with them sufficient wealth for the sake of Arjuna's pleasures as well as charitable purposes.

39. At the outset the Prince went to the river Bhāgīrathī . He visited the holy places of Gaṅgādvāra , Prayāga and Kāśī .

40. Visiting various Tīrthas and travelling by the path along the banks of Gaṅgā he reached the southern ocean agitated by high waves.

41. After visiting Mahānadī of great merit, the well-known shrine of Puruṣottama (i.e. Jagannātha) and Siṃhācala he attained great contentment (and peace).

42. Thereafter the son of Kuntī saw the holy river Godāvarī whose greatness is increased on account of its power of dispelling all the masses of sins.

43. He duly took his bath in its waters. The son of Pāṇḍu delighted others by means of different kinds of charitable gifts such as lands and gold.

44. After visiting the river named Malāpahā he experienced splendid pleasure. Then he reached Kṛṣṇaveṇī , the excellent river.

45. He visited Śrīparvata , the permanent residence of Śiva . It has four entrances and there are many Tīrthas there.

46. He crossed the river Pinākinī (modem Pennar) and proceeded ahead. Then he saw Veṅkaṭācala , the favourite abode of Nārāyaṇa , frequented by celestial sages.

47-48. With great devotion he worshipped the famous Hari , the sole leader of all the worlds stationed on the lofty peak of this mountain. He worshipped the Lord for the attainment of the good. He got down from the peak of the great mountain Veṅkaṭa and saw the river named Suvarṇamukharī that had been brought by the Pot-born Sage (i.e. Agastya) and that is frequented and resorted to by groups of Siddhas and Sages.

[1]: [1] : The story here is based on Mbh, Ādi , Chs. 211 and 212. But our author being a good storyteller, wove out an interesting story out of the facts stated in Mbh without borrowing any verses from that text.

[2]: [2] : In Mbh, Ādi 204.28, the penalty for intrusion in privacy was remaining celibate for 12 years in a forest: Here the penalty is limited to one year only.

[3]: [3] : In Mbh, Ādi , Ch. 206, Brāhmaṇas and others followed Arjuna of their own accord. Here it is Yudhiṣṭhira who orders such useful artisans and artists and treasury officers to accompany Arjuna.

[4]: [4] : Arjuna's route from Indraprastha to Veṅkaṭādri is as follows: indra-prastha->Gaṅgādvāra->Prayāga->Kāśī->the sea along the banks of Gaṅgā->Coastal route->Mahānadī->Jagannātha Purī->Siṃhācala->crossed Godāvarī->Malāpahā?->Kṛṣṇā->Śrīparvata (Śriśailya)->Pennar river->Veṅkaṭācala. The author has a fairly good knowledge of Indian East Coast.

English translation

Sūta said :

1. That great river heightened the pleasure of the son of Pṛthā (Arjuna) who had come there after visiting all the Tīrthas .

2. In the bowers on the banks of that river Siddhas and their women rejoice happily, being served and attended upon by winds cool on account of water-spray.

3. With its lofty waves coming into contact with the clouds, it appeared as though the river had flung up its arms to embrace the (heavenly) Gaṅgā flowing through the sky.

4. The penance groves on its banks were marked by the columns of smoke rising up from Āhutis (offering of ghee into the Sacred Fire) and the bark garments hanging from the branches of the trees.

5. The divine Liṅgas of the Trident-bearing Lord installed all round by prominent sages and excellent Suras were seen on the banks of that river.

6. Having taken rest in their abodes among the sands on the banks of that river, swans, the most excellent ones among birds, forget the Mānasa lake, their (original) home.

7. That river increases the productivity of grain-bearing plants and is capable of protecting people by its waters flowing through canals, thereby dispelling the anguish due to drought.

8-10. This river, the beloved of the Ocean, shone like a woman of an extraordinarily wonderful form. The Cakravāka (ruddy goose) birds were her protruding breasts. They were adorned with Patravallīs (lines or figures on the body drawn by means of fragrant colourful substances). She shone with the sandy banks as her buttocks and the eddy as her navel. The full-blown lotus was her face. The moving fish were her pair of eyes. She shone with the foams as her garments. She was charming with the gait of swans. The chirping sound of the aquatic birds was her voice and talk. She caused much delight to the eyes.

11-12. On the western bank of the river that flows in between, Dhanañjaya (Arjuna) saw a lofty mountain named Kālahastī. Many lofty peaks of this mountain scraped the region of the sky. The bottom rock of this mountain is firmly fixed beneath all the seven Pātālas .

[Arjuna's Opportunity of Visiting and Worshipping Kālahastīśvara and Other Deities Stationed on the Banks of the Suvarṇamukharī]:—

13. After taking his bath in that great river Arjuna visited the deity named Kālahastīśa, [2] worshipped by all the Suras on that mountain.

14. With his mind infused with devotion, he worshipped Mahādeva accompanied by the daughter of the Lord of Mountains. Thereby he derived full contentment.

15. With a desire to see special features that had never existed before (in other places), Arjuna wandered over that great mountain, the sole abode of mysteries.

16. He saw Siddhas who accompanied by their womenfolk lived on the peaks and ridges of the mountain and sang the anecdotes of the Lord of Devas .

17. He looked at the Gandharvas with great respect as they were seated in the bowers of flowers accompanied by the Apsaras -maidens and excited and inebriated on account of the (imbibed) liquor extracted from the flowers.

18. In secluded spots he saw divine Yogins who were deeply engrossed in meditating on Śiva and full of respect and delight.

19. All around he saw quiet and peaceful hermitages and penance-groves. The son of Pāṇḍu saw the courtyard at the entrance (to the various abodes) resplendent with the Nīvāra grains offered as oblations.

20. He saw the sages abstaining from food, or taking in only air, or eating leaves, or consuming sunlight. All of them were calm with all their sense-organs perfectly controlled.

21-22. Lotus-ponds that rendered the quarters fragrant with the sweet smell of the full-blown flowers, gave delight to his eyes.

He saw Kirātas (Hunters) accompanied by their womenfolk, searching for deer, engrossed in thoughts of hunting and walking about with well-strung bows.

[Arjuna Goes to Bharadvāja 's Hermitage Situated on the Banks of Suvarṇamukharī]:—

23-28a. Walking through the charming southern portion of the mountain, the descendant of Kuru saw the holy hermitage of Bharadvāja. It was rendered splendid by trees [3] laden with fruits and flowers, such as plantains, coconut palms, mango trees, black pepper, Caṃpaka , Sandal trees, Takkola , Aśoka , Hintāla , Tāla , Ketakī , Dāḍima (Pomegranates), Jaṃbū (Rose apple), Kadaṃba , Kaṭaka , Khadira , Arjuna, Pāṭala (Trumpet flower tree), Nāga , Punnāga , Sarala , Devadāru (Cedar), Karañjaka, Lavaṅga (Clove tree), Luṅga (a kind of citron), Lavalī , Priyaṅgu , Tilaka , Vibhīta, Śrīphala (Bilva), holy fig tree, Madhūka , Plakṣa , Kesara , Pūga , Jambīra (a kind of citron), Nāraṅga (Orange), Niṃba (Margosa), Āmalaka (Embylic myrobalan) and Kauśika (coconut?) trees.

28b. It was surrounded by the creepers of Vāsantī, Kunda , Jāti etc. (varieties of Jasmine).

29-33a. Various lakes and tanks brought glory and magnificence to it. Being attracted by uncommon and unprecedented fragrance, bees hovered all round.

Birds like ruddy geese, cranes, storks, swans, Kāraṇḍava ducks etc. resorted to them. The lakes were marked with various flowers, such as red lotuses, blue lotuses, lilies etc. The lakes and ponds were full of water, sweet like nectar. The hermitage was a unique place of curious things.

It was full of animals of various kinds like lions, elephants, tigers, bears, deer, antelopes etc. All of them were friendly and helpful to one another. The gardens and parks therein far surpassed Nandana , Caitraratha and other divine parks. It was the cause of supreme bliss (to everyone). It was charming beyond the power of thinking of minds and the power of expression through words.

33b-44. Parrots of sweet voice revealed to their young ones the excellent meanings of the divine Śivāgamas .

The sky above the hermitage was rendered dark by means of the thick columns of smoke arising from the sacred fires when the offerings of ghee were poured therein. Seeing the same, peacocks had the erroneous notion of untimely clouds (spreading over the sky).

When the lions got tired after their continuous sport in the forests, the elephants approached them there of their own accord and showered water on them through their trunks to give their bodies some relief from the strain. [4]

Seeing that penance-grove, the son of Pāṇḍu got struck with wonder. He praised the power of the ascetics.

Preventing all his followers from straying here and there, he entered the hermitage along with his friends and excellent Brāhmaṇas .

[Arjuna Pays His Respects to Bharadvāja]:—

In front of him the son of Kuntī saw Sage Bharadvāja shining with the refulgence of blazing fire. He was surrounded by many excellent sages. He had smeared the whole of his body with ash. A deerskin constituted his upper garment. He was as resplendent as Kailāsa encircled by a fresh cloud. He was brilliant with his matted hair of golden splendour hanging down like the autumnal cloud with permanent streaks of lightning. He appeared as though the meanings of Śrutis , Smṛtis and Purāṇas had come collectively and adopted his form. He was (as it were) the receptacle of great auspiciousness, of divine knowledge and wisdom. He was permanently attended upon by (virtues like) fortitude, forbearance, kindness, contentment and peace, as though by loving wives. He had unimpaired Brahmanical splendour. The son of Pṛthā (Arjuna) approached him slowly and prostrated before his lotus-like feet with (his) eight limbs touching the ground.

[Bharadvāja Extends His Hospitality to Arjuna]:—

45. The eminent sage raised up the son of Pṛthā who had come (there and fallen at his feet) and blessed him with his mind extremely delighted.

46. After duly honouring him as a beloved guest with Arghya and other materials, he offered him a seat. As he sat thereon, he enquired about his welfare.

47. After getting due honour and hospitality from the sage, the middle one among the Pāṇḍava brothers entertained the eminent sage through pleasing words.

48. Then Bharadvāja remembered the Celestial Cow yielding everything one desired. She distributed various kinds of foodstuffs lavishly.

49-52. The son of Pṛthā took food along with his followers. After paying respects to the sage, he spent the remaining portion of the day discoursing on interesting stories.

Then he performed the rites connected with the evening prayer and performed Homa in the Sacred Fire.

Then he went to his abode in the hut accompaṃed by Brāhmaṇas and ministers. There he sat after being blessed by the eminent sage. He rejoiced when the cool breeze blew from the river and delighted him. Then he thought of hearing about the power of the river by asking the sage thus: “By whom was she brought here? From which mountain does she rise? How did she get superior power?”

[1]: [1] : A beautiful description of the river, esp. note the comparison of the river with a woman (vv 8-10). It speaks highly of the poetic gifts of the author.

[2]: [2] : This is in North Arcot District, one mile from Renugunta Railway Station. The deity is regarded as the Vāyu (Wind) form of god Śiva. It is reported that the lamp over the head of the Liṅga oscillates while other lamps in the temple are steady (De 84).

[3]: [3] : Standard description of the forest.

[4]: [4] : This shows how, due to the Sāttvika influence of the hermitage, natural animosity of forest animals was forgotten.

[Prompted by His Desire to Know the Power of Suvarṇamukharī Arjuna asks Bharadvāja About the Same]:—

Śrī Sūta said :

1-2. The prominent scion of the family of Bharata (Arjuna) bowed down to the leader of sages who had concluded his evening holy rites. He had a splendour like that of fire and was comfortably seated. He was pleased by his gladdening (words) of nectarine sweetness and cooling fragrance. Then he uttered the following words of decorous gravity full of humility:

Arjuna said :

3. O most excellent sage, I am the only blessed one in this world, since I have been enthusiastically honoured by you as though I am not at all different from your own son.

4. My mind, the curiosity of which has been aroused by your affection and encouragement, strongly urges me to imbibe the divine nectar of your words.

5. From which mountain has this great river originated? By whom was it brought? What is the merit obtained if the holy rites of bath, charitable gift etc. are performed there?

6. It behoves you, O good sage, to recount to me, your humble (follower), the origin and power of this (river). A devotee has to be blessed by you.

7. On hearing the words of Arjuna Bharadvāja, the excellent Brāhmaṇa , a skilled speaker, looked at his face and spoke these words:

Bharadvāja said :

8. O mighty-armed Arjuna, you are the sanctifier of the family of Kurus . You are specially worthy of my honour because you are the younger brother of Dharmaputra .

9. Many kings have been seen (by me), but, O Phālguna , they are not endowed with grace, rectitude, kindness, liberalmindedness, courage and sagacity like you.

10. Nobility (of birth), learning and affluence are (usually) the cause of haughtiness in strong men. But in the case of excellent persons like you they are the cause of (greater) modesty and courteousness.

11. In spite of the abundant pleasures and vast kingdom, O descendant of Kura , who else other than you can resist the tendency to deviate from normal decency?

12. O son of Kuntī , I am overcome by your extraordinary good qualities. What is it that should not be disclosed to you, O (noble one) with a mind full of such keen curiosity?

13. O king, listen to the divine story heard by me from a sage. On hearing this story all creatures are liberated from the afflictions born of sins.

[Story of Śaṅkara 's Marriage as Narrated by Bharadvāja]:—

14. Formerly the Goddess, the daughter of Dakṣa , was subjected to insult by her father. After forsaking that body she became the daughter of the Snow-clad Mountain (Himālaya).

15. The Mountain (Himālaya) was approached and requested by the Seven Sages. Hence he was ready to give his daughter in marriage to Mṛtyuñjaya (Śiva).

16. The Bull-emblemed Lord of the universe came to the residence of Himavān , named Oṣadhīprastha, [1] in order to marry Sarvamaṅgalā (Pārvatī).

17. At his bidding all the living beings, both mobile and immobile, came there to rejoice in the felicity and prosperity of the Lord of Bhūtas (goblins).

18. The earth in the northern region became heavily burdened with their weight and caved in to such an extent that it reached the nether worlds. [2]

19. The southern region became very light because there was no burden on it. Hence it went up, on seeing which everyone became frightened.

20. On realising this change in the position of the earth, Maheśvara turned towards Agastya and said, “Come here, O highly intelligent one.” Then he spoke these words:

21-22. “Since all the Bhūtas have come down here, the earth has become over-burdened by their weight. It has undergone a great alteration. Hence it behoves you, O highly intelligent one, to level up the earth. How can this be done by anyone other than you?

23. Indeed you are born of my splendour. You are engaged in the protection of the worlds. Hence, O my dear one, at my instance level up this earth.

24-26. You must not stay here among all those persons who have come down here eager to witness my marriage celebration. If you stay here, no one will be competent to set right the change in the level of the earth. Hence, O sinless one, you must go. Wherever you stay, I shall reveal unto you this form of mine resplendent in my marriage with the daughter of the Mountain.”

[Agastya’s Departure to the South of the Himālaya for the Levelling of the Earth]:—

27. After saying this Maheśvara embraced him and bade farewell to him. Saying “So be it”, the sage bowed down to him and went in the direction of South.

28. When Agastya, a tiger among sages, went to the southern region after crossing the Vindhya mountain, the earth became level.

29. Suras , Gandharvas and Kinnaras experienced the thrill of delight (at it) and eulogized the Pot-born Sage who stayed on there (even) after removing the imbalance of the earth.

30. He then proceeded from that place and saw a lofty mountain standing upright in front of him, sustaining the earth by means of its extensive foothills.

31. It appeared like a veritable mine of great medicinal herbs and all types of gems and jewels, all with unimpaired brilliance and created by the Self-born Lord (Brahmā).

32. By means of its lofty peaks having extensive currents of water it appeared to hold up the sky permanently (preventing it from) falling upon the earth.

33. Agastya, the eminent sage, slowly climbed up the mountain and decided to reside in the beautiful region of its summit.

34-37. He built his excellent hermitage on a charming piece of land on the northern bank of a lake on that (mountain) with water that could be compared with nectar. The lake was surrounded by many trees and had the brilliance of clusters of lilies and lotuses.

He propitiated the Pitṛs , the celestial sages and the presiding deity of architecture in accordance with the injunctions.

Accompanied by multitudes of sages, he stayed there for a long time on that mountain frequented by Devas , Siddhas , Gandharvas and celestial damsels.

As the Pot-born Sage stayed in a penance grove with his mind engrossed in penance, the mountain became possessed of excellent sublimity and therefore acquired the name Agastyaśaila. [3]

[1]: [1] : A significant name as Himālaya has been traditionally famous for medicinal plants, some luminous even by night, (vide Kumārasaṃbhava 1.10).

[2]: [2] : Imbalance of the earth is a novel reason in this Purāṇa for sending sage Agastya to the South.

[3]: [3] : The genesis of the name Agastyaśaila of the mountain where Suvarṇamukharī rises.

English translation

[An Etherial Voice Urges Agastya to Cause a River to Flow There]:—

Bharadvāja said :

1. Once that excellent sage concluded the holy rites of forenoon and entered the temple to propitiate Siva .

2. The Goddess of Speech of invisible form brilliantly revealed herself in clear syllables and it was heard by that noble-souled sage equipped with wonderful (power).

3-8. The etherial voice spoke to Agastya, the most excellent one among those who performed Japa :

“Indeed this land devoid of a river does not look nice, although it is famous. (It is) like a Brāhmaṇa who is averse to knowledge and wisdom, though he may have (Brāhmaṇical) features; (or) like the initiation (in a holy rite) without monetary gifts; (or) like the night without moonlight.

O excellent Brāhmaṇa, this piece of land without a river does not appear splendid. With a desire for the welfare of all the worlds, cause a river to flow.

It shall have power to release (everyone) from the fear arising from great sins. This is conducive to the welfare of multitude of Devas . This is what is sought by excellent sages. This is beneficial to human beings. Kindly do this, O sage of good holy rites. Cause a great river to flow—a river that is conducive to the welfare of Devas, excellent sages and people of the earth, a river that will destroy the mire of sins.” [1]

9. On hearing those words the Brāhmaṇa became engrossed in thought for a short while. After concluding the worship of the deity he came to the quadrangular spot in the courtyard and sat there.

10-12. He then brought together all those sages residing in that hermitage. To them he related the utterance made by the Divine Speech.

On hearing that wonderful utterance the sages became delighted in their minds. After saluting Maitrāvaruṇi (Agastya), the excellent sage, they spoke (these words):

[The Great Sages Request Agastya to Create Suvarṇamukharī]:—

The sages said :

13. O storehouse of mercy, your acts are divine and splendid. Your life is the greatest wonder of all wonderful mysteries. It is the most auspicious of all auspicious things.

14. Merely by your Huṃkāra (i.e. a noisy grunt of anger) Nahuṣa was brought down from the overlordship of Devas. [2] He then attained the state of a worm. There is nothing more wonderful than that.

15. Is there anything more wonderful than that (by you) the entire ocean was made a mouthful of water, the ocean that encircles the whole of the earth and strikes the sky with its waves?

16. The Vindhya mountain that attempted to obstruct the path of the Sun was subdued by you. What can be greater than this?

17. Who is competent to praise adequately your wonderful activities on the earth? It is by my (our?) good luck that you have come here in this embodied form.

18. We have become the greatest of all blessed ones in the three worlds, O great sage, that we stay here iṇ the precincts of this hermitage with you as our leader and guide.

19. (Defective Text) Though this land is worthy of being praised, it is far from being excellent, O excellent Brāhmaṇa. Though it is full of all (desired) objects, it does not shine, as it is devoid of a river.

20. Of what avail is this damned life that has not obtained the opportunity to bathe in a river? Not being born at all is far better than residing in a land without a river.

21. The time of fructification of our fortune is imminent, since you have been directed by Devas to cause the great river to flow.

22. When will we take our holy bath, and be blessed, in the great river caused to flow by you in this land, O sinless one?

23. Of what avail is much conjecturing and deliberation? Let the endeavour be made certainly to bring down the excellent river that is worthy of taking refuge in and that should be saluted by the entire universe.

Śrī Bharadvāja said :

24. That great Brāhmaṇa honoured their sincere words (of request) and made the resolve, ‘I will bring the river’.

[Agastya’s Penance for Making Suvarṇamukharī Flow Out]:—

25-26. He was (formally) accorded permission by the eminent sages. He worshipped Suras after performing a special worship of Śiva . He undertook an intensive observance of holy rites, unbearable on account of the excessive strain involved. With a great effort he performed a very severe penance (which is) not at all easy for anyone else.

27. During the hot and fierce days of summer he stayed in the midst of four fires with his eyes fixed on the Sun. Still he did not experience any strain or fatigue.

28. During rainy days he was lashed at by torrential downpours of rains accompanied by unbearable violent gusts of wind. Yet he did not feel disturbed in the heart.

29. During early winter he stood in the waters coming up to his neck and proceeded ahead with his Japa and meditation. Yet there was no change in his (steadiness or mental peace).

30. On realizing that there was delay in achieving what he desired, he adopted a procedure still more intense, that terrified all the worlds.

31. He controlled all his mental activities. He abstained from taking food. He conquered his sense organs. Without being conscious of external (world) he stood like a stone.

32. While he was thus engaged in penance, a terrible fire sprang up from all his limbs. Blazing with furious flames it scraped the sky.

33. All the quarters were covered with mysteriously wonderful clusters of flames. Greatly tormented by fear multitudes of people cried out.

34. After bowing down to him Devas informed the Lotus-born One about such a terribly great agitation of the whole universe that had taken place.

[Arrival of the Four-Faced Lord to the Hermitage of Agastya]:—

35. Brahmā reassured them. He was attended upon by Siddhas and Gandharvas . He appeared in front of the Pot-born Sage who was engaged in penance.

36. On. seeing that Brahmā the great (Lord) had come, the Brāhmaṇa bowed to him. With his mind fixed on him alone he propitiated him with different kinds of hymns and prayers.

37. Then looking at Agastya who bowed to him humbly, the Lotus-born Lord, with his countenance beaming with great delight, spoke these sacred words:

Brahmā said :

38. O sinless one, I am highly pleased with your penance (which is) very difficult to be performed. Choose your boon. O (sage) of good holy rites, I shall grant you whatever is desired by you.

Agastya said :

39. By your favour, O Lord, everything is readily accomplished by me. If you desire to give me whatever I wish, I beg for this unhesitatingly.

40. On seeing this region devoid of a river my mind is pained as (it would be) at the repetition of the Vedic passages almost without understanding the meaning.

41. O Lord of Devas, be pleased to grant a great river that has power to sanctify and protect the earth. This alone is what I desire.

[At the Request of Agastya the Four-Faced Lord Urges Gaṅgā]:—

Śrī Bharadvāja said :

42. On hearing the words of Agastya Brahmā said: “It will so happen.” He then remembered the river flowing through the celestial path (i.e. Gaṅgā).

43. Then the celestial Gaṅgā appeared and stood in front of Brahmā resplendent with her crown and palms joined in reverence.

44. Brahmā then spoke these words to that mother of all the worlds who had come to him at his bidding and (stood there) with the head bent down in humility.

Brahmā said :

45. O Gaṅgā, you have to be directed by me in a matter that is helpful to all the worlds. Like me you too invariably stand ready in all matters concerning the protection of the worlds.

46. The Pot-born Sage wishes to cause the flow of a river for the sake of the welfare of all the worlds in this land devoid of rivers.

47. Hence you descend down to the earth. Sanctify the people of the earth with a portion of yours. You go to the earth by the path pointed out to you by this (sage).

48. When the current of water begins to flow in the terrestrial world, all those who desire for spiritual achievement, the excellent Suras and the leading sages will resort to it.

49. Be the most excellent one among (all) the rivers; protect the people resorting to you; do what is pleasing to Agastya. O gentle one, go ahead happily.

Bharadvāja said :

50. After saying this, Brahmā vanished. He was specially honoured and adored by that river and that (sage) by obeisance, veneration and eulogies.

[In the Presence of Agastya Gaṅgā Accepts the Responsibility of Causing the Flow of a River as Her own Part]:—

51. Then Gaṅgā revealed in front of the eminent sage a divinely resplendent form born of her own part and spoke these words:

Gaṅgā said :

52. O dear sage, a part of mine will come to the earth after assuming the form of a river and will fulfil your desire.

Bharadvāja said :

53. After saying this the heavenly river went away. The river urged by Gaṅgā asked the sage, “Which way should we go?” The sage replied to her:

Agastya said :

54-56. O auspicious one, I shall go in front of you and show you the way to be followed. You may flow after me. [3]

On being told thus by the sage that auspicious river said delightedly: “O sinless one, I shall do as you please.”

The sage with great joy in his mind brought her who had taken the form of that river down, from the great mountain with its peaks scraping the sky. He went ahead showing her the approved path. [4]

[1]: [1] : It seems that according to old tradition the birth of the river is due to human effort. Here the credit is given to Agastya.

[2]: [2] : This refers to Agastya’s curse to Nahuṣa who made him carry his palanquin to Indra’s wife.

[3]: [3] : It seems that Agastya had detonated powerful explosives to reach the water-level.

[4]: [4] : Cf . Mbh. Vana , Ch. 109 where Bhagīratha leads the river Gaṅgā to some channel prepared for the flow of the river in advance.

English translation

[Śakra and Others Eulogize Suvarṇamukharī]:—

Bharadvāja said :

1-2. Then the Heaven-dwellers, the chief of whom was Śakra, seated in the divine aerial chariots, followed that great river which followed Agastya . With the palms joined in reverence all the great sages followed that divine river that had newly descended and attended upon her with prayers.

3-4. Siddhas , Cāraṇas and Gandharvas who had gathered together in thousands, praised that eminent sage and that river with splendid hymns.

The people of the earth eagerly said: “Fortunately this water that is free from impurities and comparable to nectar has been obtained.” They expressed their delight and enthusiasm thus.

5. At the bidding of the Lotus-born Lord, the Wind-god spoke these words within the hearing of all the Devas :

[The Derivation of the Name Suvarṇamukharī as Explained by the Wind-Goo (Vāyu)]:—

Vāyu said :

6. To the good fortune of the worlds this river was brought by Agastya to the earth like Suvarṇa (gold) making the quarters reverberate (mukharīkṛta). [1]

7. Hence it will be well-known by the name Suvarṇamukharī praised by all the worlds in the abode of the Lord who has salvation as his asset (i.e. the bestower of salvation).

8. This Suvarṇamukharī is the most excellent of all the rivers. It should be served and resorted to. This is the directive of Brahmā .

[Agastya Describes the Greatness of Suvarṇamukharī Brought by Himself]:—

Bharadvāja said :

9. On hearing these words uttered by Wind-god thus, the Pot-born Lord became delighted. He was overwhelmed with surprise within himself. He experienced thrill all over his body (making the hair stand on end).

10. Thus this divine river caused great happiness to men by providing for bathing and drinking and other purposes. It attained great renown in the world.

11. At the behest of the Lotus-born Lord it is the celestial river Suvarṇamukharī by name itself that sanctifies all those who resort solely to it.

12. This excellent river crosses many huge mountains, forest regions and diverse lands in due order. It is nourished by many great rivers arising from those mountains.

13. Its waters are the sole means of curing the seriously sick and those who are attacked by diseases and of restoring them to normal health. They dispel all the distressing sensations, internal as well as external. They cause great welfare.

14. Excellent elephants engrossed in sports strike hard with their trunks whereby columns of water sprays are raised. It appears as if the river makes flower offerings to the Sun-god thereby with great delight.

15. Its waters are excessively pure and they support (i.e. they contain) fragrant white and red lotuses and lilies that render the faces of the quarters fragrant with their sweet scent. Those flowers are the sole receptacles of the good luck of bees.

16. Heavenly damsels are enthusiastic to take a plunge sportingly into the water of this river. The saffron applied in the parting line of the hair on their head renders the waters pink in colour. The Pārijāta flowers slipping down from their braids of hair make the waters fragrant with their sweet scents.

17. The waters cause auspiciousness. They are tasty and devoid of mud. They are exceedingly free from impurities. They are comparable to nectar. They dispel the sins of even the son of Indra . [2]

18. That river rises from the Agastya Śaila (mount Agastya). It has been brought to the earth by the Pot-born Sage. It is rendered splendid with many praiseworthy holy spots. Thus she falls into the Southern Ocean.

19. The waves of the Ocean came forward [3] favourably disposed to receive the river. They welcome it scattering the auspicious raw rice grains in the form of water sprays and holy lamps in that of gems and jewels.

20. Embracing her with his hands (in the form) of billows the Lord of Rivers honoured that river. The rumbling sound of the waves constituted his speech of welcome. Thus the Ocean delighted the River.

21. When the favourably inclined (River) came near his (Ocean's) shore, the water (line) of the Storehouse of Waters increased along with the delighted waves.

22. Thus Agastya united that River with the Ocean. After eulogizing her and taking leave of her, the sage who had fulfilled his objective, went away as he pleased.

Arjuna said :

23. O holy Sir, the origin of the great river has been told by you. Now I am eager to hear about its efficacy.

[The Greatness of Suvarṇamukharī as Described by Bharadvāja]:—

Bharadvāja said :

24. It (i.e. the river) is destructive of sins. It is the sole cause of all welfare and prosperity. Listen to its greatness, O son of Pāṇḍu . I shall tell it to you.

25. When all the Karmas perish and the Jñānins (i.e. those who have acquired spiritual wisdom) come to their final birth, they get the opportunity to take their holy bath in Suvarṇamukharī. That shall bring about their identity with Brahman .

26. By remembering this Suvarṇamukharī even from hundreds of Yojanas away one shall be liberated from all sins. There is no doubt about it.

27. The bones of creatures deposited in the waters of Suvarṇamukharī become the steps for climbing up to the world of Brahmā.

28. Even when men take their bath in other waters (e.g. tanks , lakes or rivers) wherever they may be, if they remember Suvarṇamukharī at the time, they derive excellent benefit.

29. Men are assailed by crores of sins only until they get tlìe auspicious opportunity to take their holy bath in Suvarṇamukharī.

30. All the Tīrthas of heaven, firmament and the earth remember the river Suvarṇamukhari everyday in the morning for their own fulfilment.

31. Merely by being remembered Suvarṇamukharī that rises from Agastyācala and falls into the Southern Ocean, shall destroy sins.

32. With their innermost heart yearning for bath in Suvarṇamukharī Śakra and other Devas desire for birth in the human species.

33. Those who regularly consume the grains and vegetables nourished by the waters of Suvarṇamukharī are never afflicted with great sins arising from hundreds of consumptions of faulty foodstuffs.

34. The waters of Suvarṇamukharī weighing a Niṣka (about 15 grams) when drunk shall immediately destroy the sins of embodied souls, sins as huge as mountains.

35. Even after attaining human birth if people do not take their holy bath in the waters of Suvarṇamukharī, their birth is fruitless.

36. One bath taken in Suvarṇamukharī in accordance with the injunctions is on a par with crores of baths in Gaṅgā during the Parvans (Full-Moon day, New-Moon day etc.).

37-40. Among all the rivers Suvarṇamukharī is the most excellent one like Govinda among Devas, the Moon among luminaries, a king among men, Kalpaka (wish-yielding tree) among trees, like the sky among the great elements, like Māyā among all powers, like Gāyatrī among Mantras , like thunderbolt among weapons of Devas, Ātman among all the ultimate reals, like Rudrādhyāya among the Yajus Mantras, like Anant among serpents, like Himācala among mountains, like the shrine of Potrin (Varāha) among all holy spots and like mind among the organs of sensation. [4]

41. One who aspires for purity, welfare, auspiciousness etc. shall always remember, salute, glorify and mentally adore the splendid Suvarṇamukharī.

42-44. The following two Mantras should be recited: “I resort to you, O Suvarṇamukharī rising from Agastyācala, falling into the Southern Ocean and destroying all the sins. O mother of the universe, with your waters I wash my body burned and scorched by sins. Bestow on me excellent welfare.” One should recite these two Mantras perfectly after observing holy rites. By taking the holy bath then he shall become pure. He shall rejoice then.

45. Suvarṇamukharī was formerly created by Brahmā. It was brought (to the earth) by Agastya. It is the excellent embodied form of Mandākinī herself.

46. This divine (river) of such efficacy should be glorified by those who seek auspiciousness with a mind full of devotion. Those who desire splendid welfare must take their bath therein.

47. The holy rites of bath, charitable gifts etc. performed on the banks of Suvarṇamukharī during the lunar and solar eclipses shall be of unmeasurable benefit, O son of Pṛthā .

48. If the holy bath in Suvarṇamukharī is taken during the transit of the Sun from one Zodiac to another, at the time of holy Ayana (i.e. northern or southern transit of the Sun) or on the day of Vyatīpāta (a particular astronomical position), it shall redeem a crore of the members of the family.

49. By taking bath in the waters of Suvarṇamukharī during the rise of one’s birth-star or on one’s birthday in accordance with the injunctions one obtains welfare, good health, happiness and glory.

50. By taking the holy bath in the waters of Suvarṇamukharī one gets over the sin that causes evil dreams and obstacles, evil spirits, adverse Planets, Planets in maleficent positions etc.

51. By gifting a land as small as the space occupied by cow’s hoof on the banks of Suvarṇamukharī one shall obtain that benefit which is obtained by gifting away the entire earth.

52. By gifting in accordance with the injunctions a cow along with clothes and ornaments to a Brāhmaṇa on the banks of Suvarṇamukhari one attains the eternal Brahman.

53. For the sake of attaining benefits here and hereafter all types of charitable gifts should be offered on the banks of Suvarṇamukharī during auspicious occasions.

54. Japa , Homa , penance, charitable gift, rites unto the Manes and the worship of Devas performed on the banks of Suvarṇamukharī shall become hundred times more efficacious.

55. I shall tell you another excellent holy rite that should be performed every year on the banks of Suvarṇamukharī by those who seek happiness.

56-57. Daring the season of clouds after being hidden by the rays of the Sun when the sage Agastya gloriously rises once again (i.e. when the star Canopus is seen), the devotees should with great purity and concentration perform holy ablutions (and other rites) in this river. O scion of the family of Kuru . They dwell in the celestial abode for the period of a Kalpa .

58. Those who offer a gold replica of Agastya at that time in accordance with the injunctions attain the eternal Brahman, O son of Pṛthā.

Arjuna said :

59. What is that prescribed procedure whereby this holy rite should be performed, O great sage? Tell everything to me who am eager to know.

[The Prescribed Procedure Regarding Making a Gift of an Idol of Agastya]:—

Bharadvāja said :

60. A man of perfect mental control should calculate the day of the rise of Agastya (Star Canopus). In accordance with his capacity he should get gold image of that great sage prepared.

61. He should have brilliant golden appearance with matted hair tied up. In his lotus-like hands he holds a rosary of beads and a water pot.

62. He wears a soft bark garment. His form is gentle, beautifully marked and smeared with ash. Rudrākṣa beads constitute his ornament.

63. After making the replica thus the devotee should take his holy bath with perfectly controlled mind. He shall adorn the preceptor with scents, flowers etc. in accordance with the injunctions.

64. An Āḍhoka (256 handfuls) of rice grains should be formed into a heap and the gold replica of Agastya should be placed upon it along with two clothes. The devotee should worship the image.

65-67. He shall then recite the following Mantra : “Let Lord Agastya be highly pleased with this charitable gift—Agastya who paralysed Vindhya , who gracefully reduced the ocean into a mouthful of water, who became exceedingly refulgent by means of the brilliance of all the Devas beginning with Brahmā, the Pot-born Sage, my Lord who was bowed down to by all the Devas and Asuras .”

After reciting this Mantra, he should make over the gift with a stream of water poured over it. He shall be liberated from all sins and he shall attain (union with) the eternal Brahman.

68. There is no doubt about this that he will be liberated from all major and minor sins, whether committed in the previous births or in the current one.

69. All the Devas beginning with Brahmā, the great sages beginning with Sanaka , and the Jiving beings both mobile and immobile, shall become delighted undoubtedly.

70. After performing this holy rite of Agastya, the great sage, one shall feed Brāhmaṇas in accordance with one's capacity 'for the delight of the holy sage. Monetary gifts too shall be made.

71. A person who is not able to perform that rite, should devoutly propitiate Brāhmaṇas by gifts of gold, food-grains etc. according to his capacity.

72. That day shall not be allowed to pass off in vain. The devotee should celebrate it scrupulously. One should certainly perform some holy rite (on that day).

73. The river Suvarṇamukharī shall be glorified by Suras and Asuras. It is the mature fruit of the penance of the great sage Agastya.

74. Thus the origin as well as the efficacy of the great river has been fully recounted to you. Tell me, what more do you wish to hear?

[1]: [1] : A popular derivation of the name of the river.

[2]: [2] : The only sin recorded against Jayanta is that he assumed the form of a crow and pecked at Sītā for which he had to lose his eye.

[3]: [3] : VV 19-22 give a romantic description of the confluence of the river and the sea.

[4]: [4] : Cf. BG X, Vibhūti-yoga , for the list of such topmost persons and things.

English translation

Arjuna said :

1-3. Even after frequent drinking of the nectar of your statements through the ears as though in handfuls, my mind, being desirous of hearing further, does not become satiated. I am desirous of hearing more of your words. This repeated act (i.e. of requesting you for elucidation and narration) of mine shall not cause any distress in your mind, since your heart is filled with mercy. Now I wish to hear, O great sage, as to what are those holy places on this river capable of destroying sins and where are they located.

4. What are the different holy rivers that flow into this river, O sage? Where are the people to take their holy bath so that they can dispel sins and cease to be afraid of Yama ?

5. What are those meritorious and sacred shrines and holy spots of Hara , Acyuta and other Devas situated on both the banks of this river?

6. What is the benefit that is obtained by those men who duly perform auspicious rites such as holy bath, charitable gift etc. in those holy spots?

7. A great desire has cropped up, O most excellent one among those who are conversant with the Vedas , to know all these things along with the associated subsidiary tales and anecdotes. Narrate them in due order and in full details.

Bharadvāja said :

8. What is asked by you, O son of Pṛthā , is being related in due order and in its full details. The greatness of the group of sacred places is being told now beginning with Agastyatīrtha , the lord of all the Tīrthas .

9-11. The first place where the great river was brought down from the mountain to the earth by the noble-souled Agastya , worthy of being honoured by Suras as well as Asuras , who wished for the welfare of all the worlds by means of perfect knowledge, is called Agastyatīrtha. [1] By taking his holy bath there in the great river a person becomes blessed and has his objectives achieved. It is the most sacred one in all the three worlds. By taking their holy bath there even great sinners become purified.

12. People who (regularly) take their holy bath there, dispel the mass of great sins committed in the course of their many births, and they rejoice in heaven.

13-14. If ascetics and persons of perfect control over their sense-organs take their holy bath in that Tīrtha and make great charitable gifts of cows, lands, gingelly seeds, gold etc., O Arjuna , they obtain full hundred times of the benefit of the charitable gifts made by people of great purity and concentration at Gaṅgādvāra (place where Gaṅgā enters the plains).

15-16. Lord Īśa is also here. He is well-known by the name Agastyeśa. The Liṅga had been installed by sage Agastya who caused happiness to all the worlds. Those who take their holy bath in the great river and worship that Liṅga, acquire the benefit of ten horse sacrifices.

[Time Prescribed for Holy Bath in Suvarṇamukharī]:—

17-19. When the Sun leaves the sign of Zodiac Sagittarius and enters that of Capricorn, [2] that holy period is called Uttarāyaṇa (Northern Transit). People who take their holy bath in that river on that day with perfect self-control, concentration and mental purity, and visit the Lord of Pārvatī , Agastyeśa, worshipped by Suras, get the benefit of a thousand Agniṣṭomas and a hundred Vājapeyas . They rejoice in heaven and are honoured by multitudes of Devas.

20. At the time of the transit of Mṛga (i.e. when the constellation Orion is associated with the Sun) all persons seeking their welfare must certainly visit Agastyeśa.

[The Greatness of Devarṣipitṛtīrtha]:—

21. To the north-east of that Tīrtha, O Arjuna, in a place extending to a Krośa (3 kms), there are three Tīrthas named after Devas, Ṛṣis (Sages) and Pitṛs (Manes).

22. Devas, Sages and Pitṛs were worshipped there by that sage. Delighted in their minds, they granted him all the desired objects.

23. At that time it was spoken in his presence by Devas, Ṛṣis and Pitṛs: “These three Tīrthas should be honoured by our names in this order.”

24. Those who take their holy bath in those three Tīrthas and perform the Tarpaṇa rite (water libations) are liberated from the three-fold debt and they attain everlasting stay in heaven.

[The Confluence of Veṇā and Suvarṇamukharī]:—

25. In the land to the north-east of it, within 2 Yojanas , a great river named Veṇā joins Suvarṇamukharī.

26. With increased force of its current it causes the trees on the banks to fall down. It floods the forests (and fields) through the waters gushing out through its canals.

27. On its raised banks flocks of ruddy geese play about and make them noisy and full of excitement. There are the pleasant humming sounds of the swarms of bees inebriated by the fragrance of lotuses.

28. It crosses many lofty mountains and has plenty of sweet water. Thus it joins Suvarṇamukharī.

29. Those who take their holy bath in the confluence of the two rivers in accordance with the injunctions shall derive full benefit of ten horse-sacrifices.

30. The sacred river Suvarṇamukharī flows northwards after its confluence with Veṇā. It goes through the impassable mountainous track.

31. The river then flows for about 4 Yojanas (=50 kms.) through the rugged path amongst mountains and appears charming.

32-33. For about one and a half Yojanas the great river flows to the east. There is the well-known Liṅga of Śiva named Agastyeśvara on its fascinating northern bank. Its remembrance removes all the sins of Devas as well as of human beings.

34-35. Men who exercise great control over their sense organs and take their holy bath in the great river and then visit the Lord of Pārvatī installed by Agastya, dispel the mass of sins accumulated in the course of their innumerable previous births. They then rejoice in heaven for an everlasting period.

36. Thereafter Suvarṇamukharī flows northwards for about half a Yojana . That strip of land contains many Tīrthas.

[The Confluence of Suvarṇamukharī with the River named Vyāghrapadā [3]]:—

37. It is at this place which is very charming on account of Hintāla , date-palms and resin-bearing Śāla trees that the river named Vyāghrapadā joins Suvarṇamukharī.

38-41. It gracefully flows preventing many inevitable sins. On either side there is a dense growth of canes and reeds adorning the banks.

Young females of Siddha and Gandharva families plunge into its waters regularly. It sparkles with the flowers and oblations offered into it by daughters of ascetics.

Its surroundings are exciting and noisy on account of the cackling and chirping sounds of swans, Kāraṇḍava and Krauñca birds (cranes). It flows eastwards through forests and mountains.

Excellent men who take their holy bath in the confluence of the two rivers shall get the full benefit of ten horse-sacrifices.

[Śaṅkhatīrtha [4]]:—

42-46. On the banks of the river named Vyāghrapadā that dispels the dirt (sins) of all the worlds, stands the excellent Śaṅkhatīrtha that annihilates all sins.

It is a permanent abode of Brahminical Sages. It is frequented by Suras and Gandharvas . It gives immeasurable pleasure by its sight, holy ablution therein and drinking and using in various ways of its water.

Lord Īśa resides there, O Phālguna , by the name Śaṅkheśa. The Liṅga was installed by a great sage named Śaṅkha .

Those who take their excellent bath there and visit the Bull-vehicled Lord, obtain the merit accruing from ten horse-sacrifices. They then go to heaven.

After joining the river named Vyāgḥrapadā (Suvarṇamukharī) flows to a distance of about a Yojana and reaches the mountain named Vṛṣabhācala . It is resorted to by eminent sages. Its waters are splendid and free from dirt.

[1]: [1] : VV 9-16 describe the glory of Agastya Tīrtha.

[2]: [2] : This generally falls on the 14th January (or a day on either side according to some almanacs).

[3]: [3] : Vyāghrapadā is modern Vāghurā. VV 37-41 describe the confluence of Suvarṇamukharī and Vāghurā.

[4]: [4] : VV 42-46 describe Śaṅkha Tīrtha. It appears that the author has personally followed the course of Suvarṇamukharī.

English translation

Bharadvāja said :

1. Like Kālindī that joins Gaṅgā the auspicious and sacred river named Kalyā joins Suvarṇamukharī there.

2. Kalyā that rises in Vṛṣabhācala , that stands like the sovereign of ail the Tīrthas and that is the most excellent of all the rivers, is destructive of masses of sins.

3. Both of its banks are adorned by different kinds of trees and creepers. It is a pleasant abode of multitudes of sages. It is conspicuous on account of holy hermitages.

4-5. Its banks are marked with Darbha grass and raw rice-grains gracing the Arghyas (water libations etc.) offered by Brāhmaṇas . Its waters are muddy (only) because they wash the musk-unguents from the breasts of celestial damsels.

It is rendered fragrant by the liquid ichor oozing from the temples of huge elephants. It is full of hundreds of sacrificial posts fixed by Brāhmaṇas and kings.

6-11. By means of a perennial supply of water that is never turbid, it has satisfied (thoroughly) the entire mankind. Of these two rivers even one by itself is capable of dispelling sins. Who is competent to eulogize (adequately) the greatness of both of them joined together?

In the middle of the river there is a rock named Brahmaśilā . Afterwards due to the penance of Agastya it will attain the (near) equivalence to Gayā . Those who take their bath there in the holy waters of both the rivers, shall obtain the benefit of a hundred Pauṇḍarīka sacrifices. The sins of Brāhmaṇa -slaughter etc. are destroyed in the case of those who are sanctified by their holy bath in the confluence of the two rivers.

United with Kalyā then, which is destructive of Saṃsāra , [1] Suvarṇamukharī shines like the sanctifying Kṛṣṇaveṇī .

[Śrī Veṅkaṭācala Situated on the Banks of Suvarṇamukharī]:—

12. To the north of the great river (Suvarṇamukharī) about half a Yojana away stands the famous Veṅkaṭācala about a Yojana in height.

13-14a. This excellent mountain is the support of all Tīrthas. The following are the groves of this mountain: Añjana , Ananta , Vṛṣabha , Nīla , Kesari , Potrin, Nārāyaṇa and Veṅkaṭa .

14b-15a. This mountain is glorified as Varāhakṣetra by noble men, because it was formerly accepted (as a resort) by the Slayer of Madhu after he assumed the form (body) of Boar.

15b-16a. Accompanied by the daughter of the great Ocean Acyuta dwells here permanently on the well-known Veṅkaṭācala on the banks of Suvarṇamukharī.

16b-18a. Siddhas , Gandharvas , sages, Dānavas and human beings attend upon (and worship) the Lord of Veṅkaṭa residing on that mountain along with Śrī. The desires and ambitions of the devotees who have dedicated their minds to Puruṣottama are realized immediately, O Arjuna , and their miseries perish.

18b-19. Those who remember the Lord of the universe residing on Veṅkaṭādri get all their defects and blemishes dispelled. They go to the permanent and immutable region.

Arjuna said :

20-22. How did Lord Kamalāpati (Lord of Lakṣmī), the Lord who is bowed down to by Suras and Asuras , manifest himself on Veṅkaṭādri of great merit?

To which blessed (devotee) did he reveal on being pleased his own wonderful form that bestows the benefits of worldly pleasures and ultimate salvation? O great Sage, I wish to hear about the greatness of Viṣṇu , the primordial Lord of Devas . Please recount it to me accurately and in detail.

[The Greatness of the Lord Residing on Śrī Veṅkaṭācala]:—

Bharadvāja said :

23-24. Listen to the greatness of Veṅkaṭanātha with great concentration. It is not possible even for Brahmā to state it in great detail.

O dear one, O suppressor of enemies, you are blessed because you have the devout inclination to hear about the greatness of the Slayer of Madhu, of the Lord of Devas.

25. I too am meritorious, O son of Pṛthā , because the sacred activities of Hari , the Lord of all living beings, will be recounted by me now.

26-27. I shall recount to you, O son of Pṛthā, the story related by Vāmadeva formerly to the noble-souled Janaka on the banks of Gaṅgā, when that king who possessed pure and perfect knowledge, was engaged in sacrifice with due initiation. It is the story that destroys sins and is highly sanctifying because Viṣṇu is glorified therein.

28-30. Lord Nārāyaṇa is prior to all living beings. He is immanent in the universe. He is the creator of the universe. He is unsullied. He is of the form of consciousness and knowledge.

The lord is thousand (innumerable)-headed, thousand-eyed and thousand-footed. It is on account of his brilliance that this universe consisting of mobile and immobile beings shines.

There is no splendour greater than he. There is no penance greater than he. There is no knowledge greater than he. There is no other Yoga greater than he.

31. There is no Vidyā (Lore or Knowledge) greater than he, O son of Pṛthā, O leader of men. The Lord is always abiding in all the living beings.

32. All the living beings stay happily within him. He alone is Yajña , the performer of Yajña and the adjuncts of Yajña such as the ladle, the wooden spoon etc.

33. He is the fruit (of religious rites), the bestower of the benefit as well as the goal to be reached thereby. When the sacrificial fire is brought and one offers oblations with the animal sprinkled with sacred water, the animal sprinkled (with holy water) and those who resort to him, attain the goal (heaven/ salvation) granted by him.

34. Those who make the bondage resulting from Karmas the sacrificial animal and consign it to the holy fire of Jñāna (i.e. spiritual knowledge) with Him as the aim, attain Sāyujya with Him.

35. Hari, Sadāśiva , Brahmā and Mahendra , the great ruler of heaven, all these are declared as the synonyms of that selfsame Lord of all.

36. He who with concentrated mind ponders over the greatness of Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Soul, is not reborn.

37. The attributeless one, of the nature of knowledge and bliss, the witness, the Ātman without limitation or condition, and the eternal one, assumes different forms as per His will.

38. He is the most sacred one of all sacred things; he is the greatest goal of the helpless; he is the deity unto all deities; he is the most excellent good of all the good.

39. He is the only Bodhya ('that which should be known') among of all Bodhyas ; he is the most excellent Dhyeya ('that which should be meditated upon') of all Dhyeyas ; he is the superior Vinaya (humility, good bearing, polite conduct) among all Vinayas ; he is endowed with Naya (justice).

40. He is the splendour that produces other splendours and luminaries; he is the most excellent and intensive penance of all penances; he is the supporter of all living beings. Janārdana is without beginning and end-

41-42. Even Brahmā and others are at a loss to know his intrinsic nature. He is unborn yet takes incarnations. He is the soul of everyone and yet kills the enemies. Though he is independent, he functions as subservient to his devotees. That omniscient, Garuḍa -emblemed Lord is the witness of all actions (of all beings).

43-46. Sages with great concentration and mental purity seek his form. Four of his Mūrtis (forms) are famous, [2] viz. Saṅkarṣaṇa , Vāsudeva , Pradyumna and Aniruddha . Praṇava is proclaimed thereafter. His heart is refulgent. Vāsudeva is the Lord and this Mantra reveals him. He who repeats this Mantrarāja regularly, shall be the recipient of Siddhis due to the mercifulness of Viṣṇu.

[The Creation of Living Beings Evolved by the Lord [3]]:—

47-51. Listen with concentration. I shall recount everything, how at the beginning of the Kalpa , Mādhava who wards off adversities and calamities, who provides (bestows) affluence and who bestows worldly pleasures and liberation, created living beings.

As he contemplated the process of creation the great and brilliant form of Hari resorted to Rajoguṇa and became well-known as Viriñca . From the mouth (face) of the Lord Śakra , the Deva , was born along with Pāvaka (the Fire-god). Śakra became the lord of the three worlds and Pāvaka became the lord of the process of cooking.

From his mind (which is) perpetually cool due to his mercifulness, came out the Moon. He is the permanent protector of waters, of all the medicinal herbs and of Brāhmaṇas.

From his eyes was born the Sun that illuminates the universe. He is the cause of cold, heat and rain, and causes the (various units of) Time and is the storehouse of refulgences.

52. From his vital airs was born Samīra (the Wind-god), the life essence of the universe, the exceedingly powerful supporter of planets, stars, celestial Gaṅgā and aerial chariots.

53. From the region of the navel of that noble-souled one was born the Intermediate Space (Antarikṣa). From his head issued forth Ākāśa (Sky/Ether) that is the cause of the origin of all elements.

54. From his lotus-like feet came out the earth, the support of the multitudes of living beings. All the directions issued forth from the ears of the Supreme Soul.

55-56. From his activity of recollection were born the Worlds Bhūḥ , Bhuvaḥ etc. as well as the (nether) worlds beginning with Rasātala and Yakṣas , groups of Rākṣasas etc.

O scion of the family of Kuru , he created Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas , Vaiśyas , Śūdras and the others in due order from the mouth, the arms, the thighs and the feet.

57. The Vedas , Yajña, horses, cows, goats and sheep and others originated from him, which is beyond all imagination.

58. By (mere) thought or will of the Lord of Devas the entire world of living beings, both mobile and immobile, was born. So also did Time, past, present and future.

59. Assuming the form of Vaḍavānala ('submarine fire') he drinks the waters of the ocean. At the end of the Kalpa he casts off everything that he holds within himself.

60. Adopting the form of the Sun and the Moon, he makes the sustenance of the living beings go on smoothly. He dispels darkness thereby and causes Time to function properly.

61. At the close of the Kalpa he places all the worlds within his belly and adopting the form of a child sportingly he lies on the leaf of a Banyan tree in the great ocean.

62. With the Lotus-aboded (Lakṣmī) as his second (companion) he indulges in the Yogic Slumber in the extremely comfortable and exalted couch of the body of the great Serpent.

63. The Lord of all the worlds created the Four-faced Lord of creation from the lotus rising from the lake of his navel.

64. This is a mere sport of Mukunda who works as he pleases. That Lord cannot be comprehended truly by anyone.

65-68. When there is loss of virtue (Dharma), when evil prevails, when groups of Devas undergo the greatest affliction, when the enemies of Suras become uncontrollable due to their haughtiness and increase in number, when great danger and fright befall the earth and the people of the earth, when there is inevitable misfortune causing endless agony to his devotees of excellent nature, he assumes eagerly the forms befitting (the particular occasion). [4] He destroys the evil immediately and causes the welfare of the universe.

69-70. With his Rājasa form he takes up the name Vidhi and creates. Adopting the Sāttvika form and the name Hari he sustains the universe. After adopting Tāmasa activity and the name Hara he destroys (the universe). There is none who knows the greatness of the Slayer of Madhu.

With the parts of Yajña all the limbs and joints of the form of Boar are constituted. [5] The Lord of the worlds assumes that form and takes up his residence on this mountain. I shall describe how it happened in detail, O son of the overlord of the Devas.

[1]: [1] : As there is no river called Bhavanāśinī joining Kṛṣṇaveṇī bhavanāśinyā is taken as an adjective to the word Kalyayā .

[2]: [2] : This is the Pāñcarātra influence. These four manifestations are called Vyūhas in that system.

[3]: [3] : This theory of evolution of the universe is to a great extent based on the Puruṣa Sūkta (RV X.90) with Purāṇic element, e.g. Viṣṇu's yogic slumber at the end of the Kalpa and creation of god Brahmā etc.

[4]: [4] : Cf. yadā yadā hi dharmasya glānir bhavati....tadātmānaṃ sṛjāmyaham || (BG IV.7)

English translation

[The Way Varāha Lifted up the Earth]:—

Bharadvāja said :

1. Formerly at the end of the Night of the Creator the Slayer of Madhu woke up. In his mind he thought about the acts of living beings.

2. He suspected in his heart, ‘Excepting the Earth no one else will be able to bear the burden of the flood (i.e. mass) of living beings.’

3. With abstract and profound meditation he saw the Earth in the neighbourhood of Pātāla . She was extremely frightened and was flooded with a vast sheet of water.

4-8. The Lord then adopted a form fit (to accomplish the task) of lifting up the Earth. Upakarman (subsidiary holy rite) was his lip; fire was his tongue, Praṇava was his loud grunt; the four Vedas were his four legs; expiatory rites his beautiful hoofs; Prāgvaṃśa (a sacrificial chamber with the columns or beams turned to the east) was his body; the shining Darbha grass constituted the hair on his body. Pravargya (a ceremony preliminary to the Soma Sacrifice) constituted the lock of hair curling backwards; the Dakṣiṇāgni (a type of sacrificial fire) was his belly. The wooden ladle Sruk was his snout; all the complete parts (of Yajña) constituted his limbs and joints. Divine hymns constituted his manes; Supreme Brahman was his head. Havya and Kavya were his velocity; the pure sacrificial animal was his knee; Ukta , Atyukta and other metres were his pathways; Mantras constituted his strength. Thus the Lord adopted the form of divine Boar identical entirely with Yajña.

9-15. In order to find out the Earth he entered the waters of the Ocean. With the lustrous beams of his curved teeth resembling the Crescent Moon, he forcibly dispelled the dense darkness characterizing the close of the Kalpa . With the intense Ghurughuru sounds that suppressed (drowned) the rumbling sounds of the clouds he made the cavity of the Cosmic Egg reverberate with sound.

Treading with his hoofs as sharp and tough as the arrow Khurapra, he made the body of the Lord of Serpents severely shattered and tossed it here and there. With his powerful breath-winds he made the interior of the Ocean come to the surface within the range of vision. With his long snout getting immersed in water and rising up again he stirred up the waters. Thus he went into the Ocean. He saw the trembling Earth stationed beneath the bottom of the seven nether worlds. She was agitated with fear. On seeing her he was delighted in his mind. He placed her on the tip of his curved teeth and rose up to the surface of the Ocean.

16-19. He rose up from the Ocean even as he was eulogized by the Sages residing in Janaloka .

When the Lord lifted up (married) the Earth with love the (water) of the Ocean falling down (from its surface) became the auspicious marriage screen for a short while. At the time of taking her across, O Arjuna , the Ocean, through its majestic thundering sound, performed the functions of the auspicious musical instruments unto the Lord in the form of the Boar.

Pearls scattered up by the sprays of water by the curling waves gave the impression of the maṅgalākṣatas (auspicious raw rice-grains showered over the couple in marriage).

Married (lifted up) by that Lord and dripping with the water (of the Ocean), the Earth shone as if her body was rendered wet due to the perspiration arising from intense love (for the Lord).

20-26. After lifting up the Earth from beneath the nether worlds thus the Lord placed her firmly in the midst of the waters of the Ocean.

When the Earth was lifted up by him, the water that filled up the space between the Earth and the atmosphere became the inviolable line of demarcation of the boundary made by him.

After establishing the Earth thus he placed the Elephants of the Quarters, the King of Serpents and the Tortoise for giving her extra support. That receptacle of mercy (Hari) willingly applied his own Śakti (power) in an unmanifest form as a support for them all.

As Hari thus stood in the form of Boar after retrieving the Earth, the residents of Janaloka beginning with Sanaka eulogized him.

After propitiating Puruṣottama in the form of Boar and at his behest, Brahmā created the universe as before.

Arjuna enquired :

27-28. O great sage, how does this Earth stand when sunk within the watery expanse at the time of the close of the Kalpa beneath the seven nether worlds? What is her support? How long does the period of a Kalpa last? What is its function?

29. Explain all this in detail to me, O Brāhmaṇa , O sage.

[The Incarnation of Śveta Varāha and Details of the Period of Kalpa]:—

Bharadvāja explained :

30-34. Sixty Vināḍīkās [Vināḍikās ?] make one Nāḍikā . [1] Sixty Nāḍikās make a full day. Thirty days make a month which consists of two Pakṣas (fortnights). Two months make what is called a Ṛtu (season). Such six Ṛtus make one year. It is in the form of two Ayanas (transits of the Sun). It has (a cycle of) chillness, rains and heat.

Days and nights of Devas and Asuras are in opposition to each other. The two Ayanas of the Sun are the northern and the southern transits.

One Mahāyuga (a great Yuga , i.e. a set of four ordinary Yugas), O son of Pṛthā , consists of four hundred and thirty-two thousand human years. They are in the form of Kṛta etc. The period consisting of seventy-one Mahāyugas is one Manvantara . Listen to the Manus born in this Kalpa named Śveta-Varāha.

35-40. Svāyaṃbhuva was the first Manu . [2] Then Svārociṣa became Manu. Afterwards came Uttama , Tāmasa , Raivata and Cākṣuṣa .

All these six Manus along with (their special) Indras , Suras and Sages have passed away previously. It is Vaivasvata who is the Manu now, O Arjuna. He is the seventh Manu. Ādityas , Vasus , Rudras and others are the groups of Devas in his regime. After performing a hundred horse-sacrifices the most brilliant one attained the position of Indra .

The Seven Sages, O Arjuna, are Viśvāmitra , I (i.e. Bharadvāja), Atri , Jamadagni , Kāśyapa [errata: Kaśyapa], Vasiṣṭha and Gautama . The sons of Manu were extremely mighty. There were great warriors with Ikṣvāku as their Chief. They ruled over the Earth. They were always devoted to virtue. The five sons of Sūrya , Dakṣa , Brahmā, Dharma and Rudra called (respectively) Sūryasāvarṇi, Dakṣasāvarṇi , Brahmasāvarṇi , Dharmasāvarṇi and Rudrasāvarṇi together with Raucya and Bhauma are the seven future Manus.

41. In the course of a day of Brahmā there are fourteen Manus. This period is called a Kalpa . At the end of it there shall be night, the extent of it being equal to that (of the Day of Brahmā). Listen.

42. Towards the close of a day of Brahmā, O son of Pāṇḍu , a terrible drought lasting for a hundred years befalls the earth. [3]

43. In the course of that drought, when the earth becomes dry, O Dhanañjaya , the four types of living beings get perished.

44. At that time the Sun will be endowed with rays that will resemble fire. It will vomit sparks of fire and that will have hot flames like fiery tufts of hair.

45. With the villages, cities, mountains, trees, forests etc. perished, the earth then becomes comparable with the back of a tortoise. It will resemble a red-hot ball of fiery iron.

46-48. Then from the limbs of the Creator great clouds will issue forth. They will cover up the sky. They will have loud roaring, thundering sound. They will be terrible with different colours such as white, yellow, red, black and variegated colour too. They will have the forms of mountains, elephants, mansions, trees etc. They will cause a great shower for a period of one hundred years. With that water the great fire caused by the Sun will be extinguished.

49. Again for a hundred years the great clouds will cause a fierce downpour. On account of that water all the oceans will be flooded and they will undergo change in form.

50-55a. That water poured down by the clouds at the close of the Kalpa spreads to all the worlds. A dense darkness envelops the worlds of Bhūḥ , Bhuvaḥ , Svaḥ and Mahaḥ .

The earth sunk under water goes down to the bottom of the nether worlds. It does not perish. It stays there somehow supported by the Śakti of Brahmā.

Then, O Arjuna, the wind issuing forth from the breath of Brahmā drives away all those great clouds rising at the close of the Kalpa.

The wind then blows incessantly for a period of hundred years without a break. Its velocity cannot be checked.

Shunning this fierce wind the Lotus-born Lord goes into Yogic Slumber and lies hidden within the lotus coming out from the navel of Hari in the vast sheet of water.

As the Lord of the universe is thus engrossed in Yogic Slumber, O son of Pṛthā, the night of the same extent as the day befalls him.

55b-59. When the night passes off, he gets up quickly and as before creates all the creatures at the behest of Hari.

Hari protects the universe in different Kalpas adopting befitting forms. In this Kalpa he had adopted the form of white Boar consisting of the parts of Yajña. Sporting about on the earth in the form of Boar, the Lord reached Veṅkaṭācala , his own stipulated previous abode.

While wandering over the banks of Svāmipuṣkariṇī for a long time, Lord Viṣṇu saw the Lotus-based Lord endowed with great devotion.

Brahmā worshipped that sanctifier of living beings and requested:

60-62. “O Lord, resort to your own previous divine body.” Accepting his request, the Lord abandoned the form of Boar and resorted to his own cosmic body that cannot be worshipped by anyone else. He stood thus with great earnestness and enthusiasm. Even after a long time no one was able to see him.

Arjuna said :

63-65. Hari thus became imperceptible and could not even be remembered. How then, O great sage, did he become manifest to human beings? Did anyone who, due to the good luck of the worlds, propitiated the Lord, reveal him here? Tell me this story?

You are conversant with all the Āgamas . Do recount the story of Hari, the hearing of which dispels sins. O excellent one among the sages, I have now attained the foremost place among meritorious persons.

[1]: [1] : VV 29-34 give the measures of Time.

[2]: [2] : VV 35-40 give the list of Manus.

[3]: [3] : The Puranic concepts about the destruction of the world at the end of a Kalpa are given in vv 42-55.

[The Story of the King Named Śaṅkha]:—

Bharadvāja said :

1. Listen, O son of Pṛthā , I shall relate a wonderful story as to how the Lord revealed himself on this mountain.

2. There was a king named Śruta . He was a descendant of the family of Haihaya . He ruled over the splendid earth for a long time treating his subjects like his own children.

3. His son was the king named Śaṅkha. He was storehouse of good qualities. He was an expert in all the scriptural texts. He ruled over the earth.

4. He had steadfast devotion to Viṣṇu , the Lord of the universe with large eyes resembling lotuses. He had eschewed the support of everything else.

5-6. With a firm resolve he regularly meditated upon Puruṣottama , the Lord of Devas , the Lord of the universe, the infinite one of wonderful power.

He performed holy rites and gave various kinds of meritorious charitable gifts regularly for the sake of the pleasure of the Enemy of Madhu , the Lord who can be understood only through the Vedas .

7. He performed the sacrifices Vājimedha (Horse-sacrifice) etc. with him (Viṣṇu) alone as his object (of worship). By distributing monetary gifts as laid down he delighted every Brāhmaṇa .

8. With his heart permanently fixed on Keśava who is fond of his devotees, he performed all the holy rites of the nature of Iṣṭa and Pūrta.

9. He always remembered Govinda . He performed the Japa of Acyuta , the immutable one. He worshipped the Lotus-eyed Lord. He glorified the Śārṅga -wielding Lord.

10. The king used to listen to the sacred stories of Viṣṇu that redeem people from the ocean of worldly existence and that were expounded by persons well-versed in the Purāṇas .

11-13. He adored Brāhmaṇas for the sake of pleasing Hari . Though the king was tirelessly engaged in all these things wholeheartedly, he did not perceive Puruṣottama who possesses eternal prosperity and is self-determined. Unable to attain the vision of Viṣṇu identical with Yajña , he was overwhelmed with grief in his heart and immersed in great anxiety.

Śaṅkha said :

14. In the course of thousands of my previous births much sin has been committed by me and so the vision of Hṛṣīkeśa has not been obtained by me.

15-17. Indeed the vision of Viṣṇu, the slayer of Madhu, is the entire fruit of austerities performed in the course of many previous births. How will the Lord come within the range of my eyes? When will the bliss of hearing his words be obtained? Fie upon me who have committed sins, who am deprived of the fruit of holy rites, who am far removed from the grace of Nārāyaṇa and have become the victim of the sufferings of worldly existence!

Bharadvāja said :

18. When the king who was thus agitated in his mind became disinterested in life, Keśava of invisible form said thus within the hearing of everyone:

Śrī Bhagavān said :

19. Do not be grief-stricken, O king. Listen. I shall tell you what is conducive to your welfare. You have sought in me sole refuge. You are a good man. How will I forsake you?

20. This mountain named Veṅkaṭa is well-known in all the three worlds. Residence there is liked by me more than in Vaikuṇṭha .

21. Go to that excellent mountain and perform penance devoutly. When a thousand years pass off thus, I shall become visible to you.

22-23. Like you Agastya also endeavoured for the sake of acquiring my vision quickly. He asked the Four-faced Lord (Brahmā): “Where is Viṣṇu seen?” The Lotus-born Lord told, “It is possible for persons of controlled mind to get Hari on the Vṛṣabha mountain. Go there.”

24. The Pot-born Sage being directed thus by the Lotus-born Lord will come to my residence, the Añjana mountain, in order to perform penance.

25. You too should fix your residence on that meritorious mountain. You be engaged in penance and propitiate me. You shall obtain my vision.

[King Śaṅkha Goes to Śrī Veṅkaṭācala at the Suggestion of the Lord]:—

Bharadvāja said :

26. On being commanded thus by the Lord, the enemy of Dānavas , matchless Śaṅkha attained matchless pleasure in his mind thinking, ‘I am blessed’.

27. Entrusting to his son Vajra the work of protecting the subjects, he went to the Mountain Nārāyaṇa seeking the vision of Govinda.

28. On its lofty peak he saw the auspicious Svāmipuṣkariṇī full of divine waters comparable to nectar.

29-30. It was frequented by multitudes of Siddhas , Gandharvas , Devas and sages. It assuages the scorching heat of worldly existence and is the resort of all the Tīrthas . It was rendered noisy by water crows, storks, cranes, swans and Kāraṇḍava ducks. It was very charming with lilies, blue lotuses, red lotuses and white lotuses.

31 -33a. On seeing that divine (river) abounding in lotuses he put up a hut on its banks. He was delighted by his holy ablutions, drinking of water etc. His mind was free from doubts and hesitation. He surrendered (the benefits of) all the holy rites to Janārdana , the Lord of the universe. He was permanently engaged in Japa and meditation. He performed a very severe penance.

[Agastya Comes to Veṅkaṭācala for the Sake of the Vision of the Lord]:—

37b-40. By means of humble and loving conversations he was honoured by those different persons. He wandered over all those different wonderful places looking at them (with pleasure). He took bath in the different Tīrthas beginning with Skandadhārā. In the different places he worshipped Govinda, the Lord of the worlds. Thus the excellent sage wandered (for a long time). Even when a thousand years elapsed the sage could not see the Lotuseyed Lord. He became anxious and grief-stricken.

[Guru (Jupiter), Vasu and Others Address Agastya]:—

41. At that time Dhiṣaṇa (Jupiter) and Uśanas (Venus) as well as the king Uparicara -Vasu came to that great sage. (They said:)

42-43. “Our life has become fruitful, O excellent sage, since you have been seen by us like another Nārāyaṇa. We were desirous of seeing Acyuta, O sage. What we had been told then by Brahmā, the Lord of the worlds, is being communicated to you.

44. ‘There is in the southern region a mountain named Veṅkaṭa. This abode is liked by Hari more than Śveta Dvīpa .

45. On that mountain Govinda, the sire of the universe, will reveal his own form to Agastya as well as to Śaṅkha, the king.

46-49. At that time all the Devas, sages, Yakṣas, Rākṣasas and we too will have the vision of the Lord of Devas. That will take place ere long. Hence eschew all your sins and evils and go in search of Agastya on that Nārāyaṇa mountain.’

On being commanded thus by Brahmā we came to this place. It is our good fortune that we could see you of exalted magnificence and plenty of refulgence. Accompanied by you, we shall go to the banks of Svāmipuṣkariṇī and see Śaṅkha also, the excellent follower of the Lord.”

[Agastya and Others see the Various Beautiful Spots on Śrī Veṅkaṭācala]:—

Bharadvāja said :

50. On being requested thus by Gīṣpati (Jupiter) and other important persons the Pot-born Sage (Agastya) cast off his mass of grief and quickly went along with them.

51. He saw great tall trees heavily laden with flowers and fruits and so bending down (under their weight). They had spread their great shade over all the quarters with multitudes of their branches.

52. In the middle of the various paths he saw various animals such as lions, elephants, tigers, boars, buffaloes etc.

53. The ridges holding clouds were seen by them. They were as splendid as gold, silver, copper etc. (They shone like them.)

54. Hundreds of streams were seen by them. They appeared to offer oblations unto the heaven-dwellers by means of the water-sprays raised by them. With their forceful currents they had dislodged many rocks.

55-57. Gentle wind that blew over the slopes and valleys of the mountain, wafted the fragrance of lotuses and increased their delight. The chirping and the cooing sounds of parrots and cuckoos were heard. They saw Siddhas seated on broad and large rocky slabs in different places singing songs of the greatness and good qualities of Kṛṣṇa .

58-61. All of them, the leading sages, the chief of whom was Agastya, went round and saw the divine Svāmipuṣkariṇī with water free from impurities. They saw the king Śaṅkha who had put up his residence on its banks. He had consigned all his activities, physical, verbal and mental, to Hari and stood by. On seeing the eminent sages of praiseworthy, holy rites suddenly, he offered them due adoration and reverence along with obeisances and eulogies. They honoured one another enthusiastically and took their seats. Engaged in glorifying Govinda. they attained great contentment.

English translation

Bharadvāja said :

1. Three days passed off while they were engaged in worship and prayers with their minds dedicated to Hari , the Lord of the universe.

2. On the third day while they were asleep at night they saw an excellent dream at the end of the fourth watch (Yāma = period of 3 hours).

3. They saw Puruṣottama pleased and with a smiling look. He had the conch, the discus and the iron club in his hands. He had come for granting them boons.

4. They got up with joyous hearts and came out of their houses. With due reverence, they took their holy baths in the sacred waters of Svāmipuṣkariṇī in accordance with the injunctions.

5. After duly performing all those rites that had to be performed in the morning all of them returned to their abodes to propitiate Lord Acyuta .

6. Seeing the good omen indicated by the birds on the way conducive to instant welfare, they thought that the favour of the Lord was within their reach.

7. Then they worshipped Janārdana , the maker of the three worlds. They eulogized him with different holy prayers described in the Vedas .

8. At the end of the prayers, O son of Kuntī , the excellent Pot-born Sage (Agastya) repeated the eight-syllabled Mantra of Hari (Oṃ namo Nārāyaṇāya) along with Śaṅkha .

9. An extremely mysterious brilliant light manifested (itself) in front of those persons who had thus dedicated their minds to Acyuta, the Lord of the universe.

10. It was stationed in the sky like the splendour of many crores of Suns, Moons and fires unified together in one place.

11. On seeing that brilliance all of them were immensely surprised. They meditated upon divine Nārāyaṇa , the embodiment of the greatest bliss.

12. The Lord was beyond the ken of speech and mind. He was shining with well renowned prosperity and glory. He had thousand (innumerable) eyes and was equipped with a thousand arms and feet.

13. He was charming with a lustre that was as brilliant as that of molten gold. He was terrific with curved teeth. He was too dazzling to be seen properly, (as) he emitted masses of flames of fire.

14. He shone with the Kaustubha jewel. He held Śrī on his chest. He was incomprehensible, without beginning or end.

15-17a. He inspired excessive fright (in everyone). He was omnipresent. He revealed the entire Cosmic Egg within himself. On seeing the Lord all of them with Agastya and Śaṅkha as their leaders, became delighted in their minds.

Oṇ seeing the Lord of the universe they bowed to him again and again.

The weapons of Hari that were wandering for the sake of protecting the worlds, came back to serve him, equipped with their own respective splendour and strength.

17b-23a. (The weapons were) the discus that had the lustre of the Sun, the divine mace, the sword Nandaka , the Puṇḍarīka (white lotus), (the conch) Pāñcajanya of terrific sound having the lustre of the Moon. It filled the entire Cosmic Egg. The sound of Pāñcajanya was extremely terrifying unto all the Asuras .

On hearing the sound of Pāñcajanya which was extremely mysterious and terrific all the Devas came there riding on their respective vehicles.

Brahmā , Rudra , Indra , the Yogins beginning with Sanaka , the sages chief of whom was Vasiṣṭha , Gandharvas , serpents and Kinnaras , Viṣvaksena , Garuḍa , the servants of Viṣṇu beginning with Jaya and those who are permanently of the same form (as that of the Lord) and residents of the Śvetadvīpa (all these came).

A wonderful shower of flowers from the celestial (Kalpa) tree fell thick over all of them delighting everyone's mind through the excessive fragrance.

23b. The celestial damsels of beautiful eyes danced; the leading Kinnaras sang.

24-25. Suras , Gandharvas and Cāraṇas who were delighted and thrilled, eulogized. On seeing the Lotus-eyed Lord, who is fond of his devotees, pleased, they bowed down to him with eight limbs touching the ground and propitiated him with different kinds of hymns.

Brahmā and others said :

26. Be victorious, O Viṣṇu, O ocean of mercy. Be victorious, O lotus-eyed one. Be victorious, the sole bestower of boons in all the worlds. Be victorious, O suppressor of the agony of devotees.

27. Who knows you (fully), the endless one, the imperishable one, the quiescent one, one who is beyond the ken of speech and mind and is of the nature of consciousness and bliss?

28. They consider you minuter than the minutest; stouter (grosser) than the stoutest (grossest), the immanent soul. The scriptures call you Acyuta, Puruṣa and one beyond Prakṛti .

29. Among the embodied souls subject to the wiles of Māyā who is competent to describe you who are the embodiment of the essence of the Vedāntas and who are stationed within and without everything?

30. On seeing this extremely frightening form of yours all of us are shuddering with fear. Do adopt a calm and graceful form.

Bharadvāja said :

31. On being eulogized by Viriñca and others thus, the Garuḍa-emblemed Lord spoke earnestly in words and tones resembling the thunder of clouds.

[The Lord Adopts a Gentle Form at the Request of Brahmā and Others]:—

Śrī Bhagavān said :

32. I shall shed off this terrifying form. I shall assume a pleasing and quiescent form. Look at me without being agitated.

33. After saying this the Lord vanished and within the same moment he reappeared in a pleasant form, in an aerial chariot studded with gems and jewels.

34. His face resembled the disc of the Moon. He was quiet and calm. He had a lustre like that of the petals of a blue lotus. His robes were golden-coloured. He was adorned with ornaments set with gems and jewels.

35. In his four hands shone the conch, the discus, the mace and the lotus. On seeing that lover of Ramā all of them saluted him again and again.

36. The Lord made Brahmā and others satisfied by granting them what they desired. He then spoke to Agastya, the prominent sage who stood there in humility:

Śrī Bhagavān said :

37. O eminent sage, you have become strained and fatigued on account of the arduous holy rites performed now, with me as the object (of worship). I shall grant you all desired boons. Tell me.

Bharadvāja said :

38. On hearing the words of the Lord of Śrī, the Pot-born Sage bowed down to him again and again. With hair standing on end all over the body (due to thrill of joy) he spoke these words:

[At the Request of Agastya the River Suvarṇamukharī was Granted Superiority over Everything]:—

39. “The Homas that I have performed, the penances that I have practised, (the Vedic Mantras) that I have studied, whatever I have heard—everything has become fruitful, because I have been honoured by you.

40. I am the only righteous-souled person, O Lord, in all the three worlds, because even as I am in search of you, you have come in search of me.

41. Even before your (formal pronouncement of your) favour I have realized all my desires, O Mādhava . Even after thinking deeply I do not see anything that remains to be attained (by me) now.

42. Still out of fickleness this is being submitted, O Lord. May my devotion unto you be like this always.

43. Remember this that it was at the request of Suras that the river Suvarṇamukharī (was brought) by me. It destroys the mass of sins of those who take their bath therein.

44. That river has come very near the ridge of your mountain. Do make it blessed, O Lord of the worlds, by means of your blessings and favour.

45. Those who take their bath in the waters of Suvarṇamukharī and visit you stationed on the Veṅkaṭa (Hill) shall be the recipients of worldly pleasures and salvation.

46. Foolish persons of short span of life, who have slipped (dropped) down from the path of knowledge and yogic practice, are not competent to see you through holy rites, study of the Vedas and other sacred activities.

47. O Sire of the universe, be always present on this mountain. O Lord, grant your favours to everyone with beaming face. Bestow on them whatever object they may desire."

Śrī Bhagavān said :

48. O Brāhmaṇa , what has been requested by you shall certainly take place. Indeed, an act of devotion to me, that is matchless in the entire world, has been performed by you.

49. Like the river Gaṅgā , O sage, this river Suvarṇamukharī shall be worthy of being sought after. It shall cause all desired prosperity even to the Suras.

50. Svāmipuṣkariṇī shall become united with the form of the river. It shall pass over to that divine river which is the resort unto all the Tīrthas .

51. O sage, due to your request I shall take up my residence for ever from now onwards on this mountain named Vaikuṇṭha .

52-54. Those who have washed all the dirt of the mass of sins by means of holy bath in Suvarṇamukharī and then visit me on this Vaikuṇṭha mountain with great concentration, shall become richly endowed with sons and all types of prosperity and glory on the earth. After death they will enjoy the pleasures of heaven till the end of the Kalpa. Thereafter they will attain my region shining with (divine) bliss alone. From that region they will not return (to the earth). In this matter there is no doubt at all.

55. O sage, out of deference for your request I shall look after all those who come here to visit me. I shall always grant them all the auspicious things desired by them.

56-57. I shall grant many sons to those who seek sons, riches to those who seek riches, complete quelling of all ailments to those who desire good health, redemption from misery to those who are assailed by acute adversity and all rare enjoyment of pleasures (to everyone) at all times.

58. There is no doubt about this that everyone will attain all those desires seeking which he or she has come and visited me.

59. Wherever they may stay, all those excellent men who remember me shall get the fulfilment desired by them by my favour.

[The Lord Grants Boons to King Śaṅkha and then Vanishes]:—

60. After saying this to that sage, the Lord glanced at Śaṅkha, the king. He spoke these words even as Brahmā and others were listening:

Śrī Bhagavān said :

61. O Śaṅkha, I am delighted at your devotion. Choose a boon desired (by you). I shall grant it. I shall be the bestower of boons on you who have become very emaciated on account of the penance.

Śaṅkha said :

62. O mighty one, I do not request for anything other than service unto your lotus-like feet. I request for that excellent goal which your devotees attain.

Śrī Bhagavān said :

63. O Śaṅkha, what is requested by you, shall certainly be so. What is it that cannot be obtained by those people who have become very excellent and meritorious on account of their service unto me?

64. You will be in the world of Indra till the end of the Kalpa. You will be attended upon by multitudes of celestial damsels. After enjoying various kinds of pleasures you will attain my world.

65. Thus, O king, Nārāyaṇa, the origin of the universe, a wish-yielding tree unto those who worship him, granted desired boons to Śaṅkha.

66. Then the Lotus-eyed Lord bade farewell to everyone beginning with Brahmā. Being eulogized by them with devotion the Lord vanished there itself.

[Conclusion of the Description of the Greatness of Śrī Veṅkaṭācala by Bharadvāja]:—

Bharadvāja said :

67. The power of Veṅkaṭādri has been recounted to you, O Ārjuna. On hearing this sanctifying story men are liberated from sins.

68. On being requested by Brahmā Hari cast off the form of Boar. Enchanting the universe with his Māyā the Lord of wonderful features rejoiced here.

69. Afterwards on being requested by Agastya and Śaṅkha the Lord granted them (i.e. assumed before them) a physical body fit for enjoyment of pleasures, a body that was pleasing to look at, extremely graceful and calm.

70. By remembering Nārāyaṇa, Veṅkaṭādri, Svāmipuṣkariṇī and this narrative people become liberated from sins.

71. In the whole of the Cosmic Egg there is no other holy spot on a par with Veṅkaṭādri. A Lord equal to Veṅkaṭeśa has never been before nor will there ever be.

72. A holy spot equal to Veṅkaṭādri has never been before, nor will there ever be. There is nothing anywhere on a par with the Lake Svāmitīrtha .

73. If people remember Veṅkaṭeśa everyday on getting up in the morning, the glory of salvation comes within their reach. There is no doubt about it.

74-75. Those who take bath in Svāmipuṣkariṇī Tīrtha with perfect restraint and visit Hari, the immanent soul of everyone, residing on Varāhācala, obtain the full benefit of a thousand horse-sacrifices and a hundred Vājapeyas . There is no doubt about it.

76-77. The excellent men who listen to the greatness of Veṅkaṭācala will enjoy great pleasures here in this world and hereafter in the other world, and then will attain salvation.

The greatness of Veṅkaṭācala has been briefly recounted to you. Henceforth the power of the great river will be described, O Arjuna .

English translation

Śrī Sūta said :

1-2. Formerly, Añjanā who had no son became distressed and therefore engaged herself in a penance. On seeing her Mataṅga , a tiger among sages and a devotee of Viṣṇu , spoke these words to (the lady) named Añjanā who was engaged in a very severe penance.

Mataṅga said :

3. Get up, O gentle lady Añjanā. Why are you engaged in penance? Tell me, O highly fortunate gentle lady of excellent countenance, your purpose and aim (of performing penance).

Añjanā replied :

4-7. O Mataṅga, O tiger among sages, listen to my words. My father, a Rākṣasa named Kesarī , is a devotee of Śiva . He performed a severe penance to please Śiva. It was a very difficult penance for the sake of a son. Accompanied by Pārvatī and seated on his Bull, Lord Śaṃbhu appeared before him and granted him an auspicious boon.

Śaṃbhu said :

Listen, O King, sonlessness in this birth has been ordained for you by your fate. Still I grant you another thing.

8. Your daughter will be well-known in all the worlds. Her son of great intelligence wilt cause delight unto you.

9-14a. After granting this boon to him, Hara vanished there itself.

On getting me (as a daughter), O Brāhmaṇa , my father became centented [contented?]. Then, after some time, O Brāhmaṇa, the great monkey named Kesarī [1] requested my father to give me (in marriage) to him. Thereupon, my father gave me to him. As a wedding present he gave a hundred million cows and a hundred thousand elephants. (My father) of lofty mind gave a hundred million horses and an equal number of chariots. He gave garments and jewels in plenty and a thousand men and women servants. O highly intelligent one, along with me he gave many women to work in the inner apartment. They were experts in dance and music. He gave a thousand clothes too. For many years, O sage, I sported with my husband.

14b-18. I was extremely distressed, O Brāhmaṇa, because I had no son. There in the city of Kiṣkindhā many kinds of holy rites were performed by me. In the months of Māgha , Vāiśākha and Kārttika , O eminent Brāhmaṇa, holy ablutions, charitable gifts, holy rites etc. were performed. The holy observances extending over four months (in the rainy season) were performed. Prostrations as well as excellent circumambulations were performed, O Brāhmaṇa. Various kinds of charitable gifts were given, viz. gift of Śālagrāma , of food, lights, cows, gingelly-seeds, garments, O great sage, gift of land, water, flower etc. All the important holy rites pertaining to Viṣṇu were performed by me * with a desire for the benefit of (begetting) a good son.

19-23. The holy rites suggested by the noble-souled Brāhmaṇas to be performed in Śrāvaṇa and other months have been performed by me, O great Brāhmaṇa, for the propitiation of the Slayer of Madhu .

All the chief varieties of fruits of various kinds have been gifted by me with a desire for having a good son. Innumerable holy rites (observances) of various kinds have been performed by me. Still I did not get a son. I am distressed thereby. So I am engaged in a penance.

How will a son famous in the three worlds be born, O Brāhmaṇa, after bowing down in front of you. O excellent Sage, I request you. Do tell me, O tiger among sages, distressed that I am and engaged in the penance.

Śrī Sūta said :

24-28. As she said thus, Mataṅga the excellent sage spoke:

“Listen to my words, O gentle lady. (They are) conducive to the attainment of sons and grandsons. Ten Yojanas (i.e. 10 x 12 = 120 kilometres) to the southern side from here there is the residential abode (shrine) of Nṛsiṃha well-known as Ghanācala. There is the charming Brahmatīrtha in it, O lady of good fortune. Ten Yojanas to the east of the same is the most excellent river named Suvarṇamukharī . To the north of it there is a mountain named Vṛṣabhācala . On its summit there is a splendid lake called Svāmipuṣkariṇī After going there and seeing the auspicious waters your mind will become purified.

29-35. Take your holy bath there in accordance with the injunctions. Bow down to the deity Varāha (Boar). Then go ahead, O lady of excellent countenance, after bowing down to Veṅkaṭeśa . A Tīrtha well-known as Viyadgaṅgā shines on the northern side of Svāmitīrtha . It is a place full of lions and tigers. Different kinds of splendid trees of great merit are found there, such as mango, Punnāga , jack tree, Mimusops elengi, Embylic myrobalan, Sandal, Agallochum, margosa , palm trees, Hintāla trees, Butea frondosa, Feronia elephantum, holy fig tree, Marmelos and Iṅgudas (Terrainalia catappa).

O gentle lady Añjanā, take your holy bath there with all requisite preliminary rites of Saṅkalpa etc. After the bath drink the (water of the) auspicious Tīrtha. Standing facing the Tīrtha, O gentle lady of excellent countenance, perform a penance with the Wind-god as your object of worship. As a result of your penance, your son will be one who cannot be killed by Devas , Rākṣasas , Brāhmaṇas, human beings, excellent sages, black bees, birds, missiles and weapons of many splendid varieties.”

Śrī Sūta said :

36. On being told thus, the gentle lady Añjanā bowed down to him again and again- Accompanied by her husband she quickly went to (the mountain) named Veṅkaṭācala .

37. After reaching the Kapila Tīrtha and taking her holy bath with the mind free from impurities, she climbed the mountain Veṅkaṭa and went to Svāmipuṣkariṇī.

38. After bathing there and bowing down to the deities Varāha and Veṅkaṭeśa, she remembered frequently the words of Sage Mataṅga.

39. The sweet-voiced Añjanā hastened to Viyadgaṅgā. She took her bath and drank the holy water. She then performed penance by standing on its banks and facing it.

40. With the Vital Breath (Prāṇavāyu) as her object of worship the lady of holy observances began the penance. First she subsisted on fruits, then on water and then she abstained from taking any thing.

41. With her eyes fixed on the tip of her nose she performed penance for a thousand years. Her splendid friend named Vipulā rendered service to her.

42-44. At the end of a thousand years the Wind-god of great intelligence appeared before her. The highly intelligent one spoke to her, O excellent sages, when the Sun had his transit to the Zodiac Aries on the meritorious Full-Moon day in conjunction with the constellation Citrā :

Vāyu said :

I shall grant you what you desire, O lady of holy rites; choose your boon.

On hearing his words thus the chaste lady Añjanā said:

45. “O Lord, Wind-god of exalted magnificence, of great intelligence, grant me a son.”

On hearing her words the Wind-god said:

46. “I shall become your son. O lady of splendid countenance, I shall grant (bring to) you good reputation.”

After granting her the boon thus, the mighty one remained there itself.

47-49. Then all these came to see her engaged in penance; Brahmā and other Devas, the Guardians of the Quarters, Indra and others, noble-souled (sages) like Vasiṣṭha and others, Yogins like Sanaka , eminent Brāhmaṇas Vyāsa etc,, the Lord of the universe along with Lakṣmī , the wives of Devas and the wives of sages. Those noble-souled ones came there riding on their respective vehicles accompanied by wives, servants, sons and others.

50. Saying “Oh (How) wonderful! Oh wonderful!” all the groups of Devas, Brahmā and others stood far away in the firmament looking at her. All those (gods), the chiefs of whom were Brahmā and Maheśa , stood there looking from a distance.

[1]: [1] : Keasarī is the name of Añjanā’s Rākṣasa father and monkey husband.

English translation

Śrī Sūta said :

1-3. After receiving the boon Añjanā rejoiced in the company of her husband. On seeing Brahmā and others come she became wonder-struck. But in the company of her husband the sweet-voiced Añjanā retained normalcy.

Permitted by Brahmā and others, Vyāsa , the most excellent one among those conversant with the Vedas , spoke to Añjanā in a voice as majestic in tone as the rumbling sound of clouds:

Vyāsa said :

4-7. O Añjanā, listen to my words which are beneficial unto the worlds.

On listening to the words of Sage Mataṅga you had gone to Veṅkaṭa with a mind free from impurities. You performed a very difficult penance. A heroic son with the greatest exploits in all the three worlds will be born to you.

Hence on the day of your perception (delivery) all the Tīrthas of the three worlds beginning with Gaṅgā will come into this excellent Tīrtha .

In the whole of this Cosmic Egg there is no other Tīrtha equal to Veṅkaṭādri . There too the splendid Svāmipuṣkariṇī is exceedingly meritorious.

8-11. Better still is this Tīrtha on the day of your perception (of your child?).

Listen, O gentle lady, of good holy rites. I shall recount to you the benefit of those who come for the sake of their holy bath to this Tīrtha on the auspicious Full-Moon day in conjuction with the constellation Citrā when the Sun has his transit into the Zodiac Aries. O lady of excellent countenance, they will have definitely that benefit which one derives by taking holy bath in all the Tīrthas beginning with Gaṅgā for a period of twelve years.

Listen to the height of benefit of those persons who make charitable gifts. O gentle lady of excellent countenance, know that their benefit will be what is mentioned in the appropriate place (sthāne [sthāna ?]).

Añjanā said :

12. O eminent Brāhmaṇa , most excellent among those conversant with the Vedas, tell me about all those charitable gifts that should be given on Veṅkaṭādri, the most excellent one among all the mountains.

In Praise of the Charitable Gifts [1] to be made on Śrī Veṅkaṭācala as Explained by Vyāsa

Vyāsa said :

13. The two gifts, viz. of foodstuffs and garments and the Śrāddha unto the Manes in particular (offered) on Veṅkaṭādri, the most excellent one among mountains, are praiseworthy.

14. Those who give gold for the pleasure of the Slayer of Madhu attain all the worlds and rejoice, O excellent sages(?)

15. He who makes the gift of a Śālagrāma stone on the excellent mountain is not reborn. He obtains perfect knowledge.

16. He who makes a gift of cow to aa eminent Brāhmaṇa with a large family, shines in the world of Viṣṇu for as many (years) as there is hair on its (the cow's) body.

17. Who in heaven or on the earth is competent to recount the meritorious fruit of that person, O gentle lady, who gives land to a Brāhmaṇa with a large family?

18. He who gives a girl (in marriage) to a Brāhmaṇa well-versed in the Vedas, attains the world of Viṣṇu and rejoices along with the Pitṛs .

19. It is impossible even for Śeṣa to recount the meritorious benefit of those persons who construct free-water booths, O gentle lady, storing cool water (for travellers).

20. He who gives gingelly seeds to a Brāhmaṇa well-versed in the Vedas and having a large family, shall be rid of all sins and he goes to the world of Viṣṇu.

21. The Brāhmaṇas , the most excellent ones among those conversant with the Vedas, praise the charitable gift of food-grains. Those who make gifts of foodgraiṇs will have many sons.

22-25. He who gives to a Brāhmaṇa sweet scents, Caṃpaka flowers etc., an umbrella, a fan, chowries, betel-leaves, camphor etc. enjoys worldly pleasures for a long time and then goes to heaven. For a thousand years according to the reckoning of gods he enjoys many pleasures there. Then he is born as an Emperor and enjoys the earth for a long time. Then he becomes a Brāhmaṇa and master of the Vedas and Vedāntas . Thereafter, by the grace of the Discus-bearing Lord he attains liberation. Thus, O gentle lady, the greatness of Veṅkaṭācala has been described.

26-28. He who always listens to this, he who glorifies it, shall be rid of all sins and he goes to the world of Viṣṇu.

He who listens to or reads this, originally spoken by the noble-souled Vyāsa, shall become contented and blessed. All the persons born in his family attain salvation. There is no doubt about it.

English translation

Obeisance to Śrī Gaṇeśa . Here begins (description of) greatness of the holy place of Puruṣottama (Jagannātha).

1. After bowing down to Nārāyaṇa and then to Nara , the most excellent one among men, to goddess Sarasvatī as well as to Vyāsa , one shall utter “ Jaya ” [1] (the Purāṇa).

The sages said :

2-6. O holy Lord, conversant with all the scriptural texts, the knower of the greatness of all the Tīrthas , formerly, when the glorification of the Tīrthas was taken up, it was mentioned by you that a great Tīrtha named Puruṣottama [2] was extremely sanctifying. It is there that the Lord of Śrī abides as a wooden idol in the course of his sports as a human being. On one paying a visit to him he bestows salvation. He directly grants the benefits of all the Tīrthas.

Do recount it in detail to us. By whom was that sacred place created?

Lord Nārāyaṇa is refulgent and self-luminous. He is the Supreme Puruṣa . How does he stay there in a form made of wood? [3] Do narrate it, O most excellent one among eloquent speakers, O Sage, O Sire of all the worlds. O Brāhmaṇa , we wish to hear it as we have great eagerness and interest in (listening to) it.

Jaimini [4] said :

Listen ye all, O sages. It is a great secret.

7. Those who are not the followers of Viṣṇu will not have any devotion to him. By glorifying him the entire darkness disappears.

8-9. Formerly, having heard it from the lotus-like mouth of Śaṃbhu , it has been said by Skanda that the Lord of the universe is omnipresent and sanctifier of all. There are other shrines and holy places which dispel all sins, but this holy place is the very physical body of that great soul. He himself stays here in his (actual) physical form. It is well-known by his own name.

10. All those who wish to stay there, have their sins destroyed. What to say of those who actually stay there and visit Gadādhara (i.e. Viṣṇu)!

11-12. Oh, it is indeed a great holy spot extending over ten Yojanas (i.e. 120 Kms). It has emerged out of the waters of Tīrtharāja (‘Chief of Tīrthas’ i.e. the Ocean). It is full of sands. In the middle the great mountain Nīlācala shines like a single breast of the Earth. It can be contemplated upon from very far-off places.

13. Formerly the Earth was lifted up (by the Lord) in the form of a Boar; he levelled it up everywhere and rendered it stable by means of mountains.

14-15a. Formerly Brahmā created the entire (universe) of mobile and immobile beings, all the Tīrthas, rivers and oceans. As before he fixed up all the holy spots and thought thus as he had been overburdened with the function of creation:

15b-17a. ‘How can I avoid the great task of creation once more? How can the creatures afflicted with Tāpatraya (‘the three types of miseries [5] ’) be liberated?’

Even as Prajāpati (Brahmā) was musing thus an idea occurred to him: ‘I shall eulogize the great Lord Viṣṇu, the sole cause of salvation.’

Brahmā said :

17b-21. Obeisance to you, O Lord holding the conch, the discus and the iron club. O support of the universe, it is from the lotus coming out of your navel that I, the creator of the universe, was born. But,

O Lord immanent in the universe, you alone know your own real form.

It is by your Māyā that the entire universe beginning with Mahat has been created. Śabda-Brahman (i.e. the Vedas which are considered the revealed word of Brahman and hence identical with Supreme Brahman) arose from your breath and became threefold (viz. Ṛg, Yajus and Sāman Vedas). Depending on that only as my source I created the world.

(Defective Text) You do not possess any attribute such as grossness, subtleness, longness, shortness etc. Just as the bangles and other (gold ornaments) are identical with gold, so also this universe of mobile and immobile beings is identical with you, [6] O Lord, in spite of different forms on account of the three different Guṇas (Sattva etc.)

22. O great Lord, O Lord of the universe, you are the creator and that which is to be created. You alone are the nourisher and what is to be nourished. You are the support and what is being supported as well as the upholder.

23. With a mind urged by you everyone performs auspicious as well as inauspicious acts. Thereby he attains the suitable goal ordained by you alone.

24. You are the goal, the Lord (the supporter) and the witness, O Supreme Lord. O sire of the mobile and immobile beings, O Lord, the immanent soul of everyone, O merciful one, O Lord of the universe, be pleased with me now (because) I have (submitted to) you as my refuge.

Jaimini said :

25-26. On being eulogized thus by Brahmā the Garuḍa -emblemed Lord, resembling a dark cloud, having the conch, the discus etc. as his symbols, appeared before him seated on the Lord of birds. O excellent Brāhmaṇas , his lotus-like face gleamed. His lips throbbed as he was desirous of speaking (something).

Śrī Bhagavān said :

27-30. O Brahmā, it appears that the purpose for which you eulogize me cannot be achieved. The beginningless Avidyā is firmly rooted. It cannot be severed by the bonds of Karmas . How can birth and death cease to be when it (i.e. Avidyā) predominates! Still, O sinless one, if you strive in regard to this, I shall tell you the means whereby it shall occur gradually. O Brahmā, I am you; you are I. The entire universe is identical with me. Think that your interest lies where my interest also lies and not otherwise.

31. There is a region on the northern shore of the sea and the southern bank of Mahānadī . That region bestows the benefit of all the Tīrthas on the earth.

32. O Brahmā, those men of good intellect who reside there enjoy the fruits of the merits earned in the previous births.

33-36. Men deficient in merits, or those who are not my devotees are not born there, O Lotus-born one. From the forest of Ekāmra (modern Bhuvaneshwar in Orissa) and up to the shore of the Southern Sea (the Bay of Bengal) every step is better than the previous one. It is gradually (one step after another) sanctifying. The Nīla [7] mountain that shines on the seashore, is a well-guarded holy spot on the earth, very difficult of access even unto you. It is difficult to be comprehended by Suras and Asuras . It is enveloped by my Māyā. Eschewing all (external) contacts, I dwell there in physical form. I dwell in Puruṣottama after going beyond the perishable and the imperishable.

37-40a. My shrine and the holy place of Puruṣottama is not at all affected by creation or dissolution. [8] After going there, O Pitāmaha , you will see me like this in the form in which you see me now, O Brahmā, the form that is marked by discus etc. Within the Nīla mountain, at the root of the holy fig tree, on the western side there is a pool well-known as Rauhiṇa [9] . I dwell on its bank. Those who see me there with the mortal eye and those whose sins are washed off by its water shall attain Sāyujya with me.

40b-44. Go there, O Lord of exalted magnificence. After seeing me if you go on meditating, another greatness of that sacred place shall become manifest to you. It will appear very strange even to you. It is not revealed by Śrutis , Smṛtis and Itihāsa and Purāṇa. On account of my Māyā it is not visible to anyone. Since you have eulogized me now, everything will be visible and manifest to you by my favour.

By staying there for a day (only) one attains that benefit which is mentioned as the merit acquired by pure souls (by visiting) all the holy Tīrthas, (by performing) rites, Yajñas and charitable gifts. (Defective text) By residing permanently there one attains the benefit of a horse-sacrifice.

After directing Brahmā thus, O Brāhmaṇas, Lord Puruṣottama vanished there itself, even as he was looking on.

[1]: [1] : Jaya : Originally it was the name of Vyāsa's composition on Kaurava-Pāṇḍava War. In course of time it came to be used for all Purāṇas and even the Rāmāyaṇa.

[2]: [2] : Puruṣottama Kṣetra : (Jagannātha) Puri, Orissa. It is also known as Śrī Kṣetra, Bhauma Kṣetra, Divya Kṣetra. The Purāṇa regards this region conchshaped and it is hence called Śaṅkha Kṣetra. Our Purāṇa states that it was originally the area of Śabaras (aboriginals) who worshipped Nīlamādhava.

[3]: [3] : The whole Purāṇa defends the wooden material used for god Jagannātha as 'Dāru-Brahman' (Wooden-Brahman, the Brahman of wooden material).

[4]: [4] : Jaimini : Jamini is said to be the author of a section of the Sāmaveda, of (Jaminīya) Brāhmaṇa and Upaniṣad, of the (Pūrva) Mīmāṃsā, of a Gṛhyasūtra and of a late version of Aśvamedha part of Mbh. Most probably there were more than one Jaimini. Mbh, Ādi 67.89 regards him as a disciple of Vyāsa and he was the Brahmā (Superintendent) of King Janamejaya's Serpent-Sacrifice (Ādi 53.6). The present narrator may be a different person, a namesake of that ancient sage.

[5]: [5] : The miseries are classified as Ādhyātmika , Ādhibhautika and Ādhidaivika .

[6]: [6] : Brahman or Viṣṇu is also the material cause of the universe.

[7]: [7] : The low range of sand-hills on which the temple of Jagannātha is situated (De 141). The epithet 'mountain' (- giri , -acala , - parvata) applied to this low sandhill is a Puranic glorification.

[8]: [8] : Every Sthala-Purāṇa claims this eternity to its Kṣetra, be it Purī or Karavīra.

[9]: [9] : Rauhiṇa Kuṇḍa: The tank in the compound of Jagannātha Temple. But the kuṇḍa mentioned here is probably lost. Another tank was actually built when the great Jagannātha Temple came up in the 12th cent. CE.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1. Then Brahmā hastened to the place where the Lord was present. He then saw the Lord in the same form as was seen at the end of the prayer.

2. On seeing the great Lord, he recognized him and became extremely delighted. Then, O excellent Brāhmaṇas , he became the storehouse of excessively wonderful knowledge.

3-7. With his eyes beaming with delight, he began to eulogize when an excellent crow arrived there from somewhere. It plunged into that holy pit full of merciful waters. On seeing Mādhava , the receptacle of mercy, having the lustre of blue gems and jewels, [1] it cast off its physical body of a crow and rolled on the ground. The Lord with the conch, the discus and the iron club stood at his side. [2] On seeing that achievement of a creature of lower order, not easily accessible even to eminent Yogins , O sages, Brahmā thought that the creation would gradually wear away. He then began to doubt the truth of the Upaniṣaḍic statement that only humans beings are entitled to salvation. There is nothing in this world which is difficult for a devotee of Viṣṇu to get.

8-11. He was able to see directly the truth of what had been said by the ancient Lord, O excellent Brāhmaṇas. By pronouncing his name a man is liberated from all sins. Is salvation difficult to get, O Brāhmaṇas, on his direct perception? If one casts off one's life mentally meditating on Viṣṇu, one is liberated. What wonder is there that anyone having the direct perception of the Lord attains salvation?

Wonderful indeed is the greatness of the sacred place named Puruṣottama , where, O Brāhmaṇas, even a crow perceived Hari directly.

Rare indeed is this holy spot that releases even ignorant ones. Wonderful is the greatness of this holy spot bestowing liberation on even a crow. What then in regard to those who are always endowed with calmness, detachment and perfect knowledge!

The sages said :

12-17. What did Brahmā do on seeing Mādhava called Nīla , as well as the crow that destroyed all physical bondage within a moment after seeing him?

Jaimini said :

On seeing that wonderful event, Brahmā began to meditate on Mādhava. By that time Pitṛpati (god of Death, Yama) came hurriedly to that place. He was agitated in the matter of retaining his authority. His face indicated distress. He heaved sighs. On seeing Mādhava on the Nīla mountain, he prostrated before him with eight limbs (touching the ground). He eulogized the Lord for the stabilization of his authority.

Yama said :

Obeisance to you, O Lord of the chiefs of Devas , O cause of creation, sustenance and dissolution. All the worlds are fixed and fastened to you like groups of beads strung into a garland. The universe is supported by you, created by you and nourished by you.

18-24a. You always illuminate everything in the form of the Moon and the Sun; I bow down to the Lord of the universe, the source of origin of ail the worlds, the abode of the whole Cosmos, the sire of the worlds, the witness of the entire universe, the Lord devoid of beginning and end. Obeisance to the origin of the universe, to the ocean full of the waters in the form of the highest mercifulness, to the Lord whose power transcends the highest, the lowest and what is beyond the highest.

Obeisance to the Lord who is like the Sun unto the frost of the distress of worldly existence. Hail to the kinsman of the wretched ones, to the Lord who has created all other powerful Lords by means of his own Māyā . Obeisance to Him whose ropes (controlling powers) are Guṇas (like Sattva etc.). I bow to the Lord whose robes are yellow and devoid of impurities like the filaments of a lotus flower; to the discus-bearing Lord whose discus cuts off the shoulders of the enemies in great battles.

Obeisance to the Lord who held the Earth uplifted by means of his curved teeṃ. Obeisance to the Lord, the embodiment of the three Vedas . Obeisance to the Varāha form of Yajña ; salute to the Lord whose eyes are the Moon, the Sun and the Fire. Obeisance to the Lord Narasiṃha (Man-Lion), who has driven away the enemies through his fierce form with curved teeth.

24b-30. The creation, sustenance and annihilation of the universe is a graceful sport of his side glance and thereby the creation of the variegated world consisting of beings of higher and lower order takes place frequently. I bow unto that Lord of the lustre of the blue clouds, whose appearance is like that of the precious stone sapphire, whose abode is a cave within the Nīla mountain and who is the storehouse of mercy.

I bow down to the enemy of Mura , the Lord who holds the conch, the discus, the iron club and the lotus, who grants auspiciousness and who dispels the entire mass of sins of those who bow down (to him).

Hail to you whose eyes are consecrated by contact with the outer corners of the eyes of Kamalā , to you whose chest is broad, fascinating to the minds and shining on account of the Śrīvatsa [3] and the gem Kaustubha .

Śrī possesses prosperity and glory by resorting to the pair of lotus-like feet of the Lord. On being resorted to by the people, Śrī grants them separately prosperity and perpetual glory.

Lakṣmī is Prakṛti and is of two different forms, viz. the Parā (superior) and the Aparā (inferior). Because of your desire to create, the Supreme Brahman without any modification or change has been immediately created (transformed) into one characterized by changes. I bow down unto that Lakṣmī who is full of all good characteristics, who is marked with auspicious features and who is permanently stationed on the chest of Viṣṇu.

Jaimini said :

31. Śrīkānta (Lord Viṣṇu) who was thus propitiated by Dharmarāja (Yama) directed Śrī who was at his side with the lute in her hands. The Lord gave the directive by means of the outer corner of his eyes.

32. Honoured by him, Lakṣmī, the destroyer of the misery of worlds, sportingly said to Yama for the sake of the welfare of all the people:

Lakṣmī said :

33. The object with which you eulogize us both in this holy place is indeed difficult to be acquired. This sacred spot of Śrīpuruṣottama cannot be abandoned by us.

34-39a. Even at the close of the Kalpa this abode is sustained by Parameṣṭhin. Brahma , the Lords of the Quarters etc. have no jurisdiction over this place.

Fruition of Karmas cannot take place here. (Sins) of men staying here, even if they be wicked, as well as of the creatures of lower order are burned like a heap of cotton in a blazing fire. Formerly you were created as the restrainer of those who, day and night, are fettered by the shackles of sin and merit. But (now) one is liberated from the bondage of Karma by seeing Lord Nārāyaṇa here, who has taken up a physical form and is as beautiful as sapphire. O son of Sun, your authority is restricted to the land of Karma (which is) other than this place. O Yama, do not be disheartened by this restriction being imposed on your jurisdiction so far as this holy spot is concerned.

39b-42. Brahmā, the grandfather (of the universe), is a Lord superior to you. He watches out of curiosity the lower animals attaining identity with Viṣṇu. This Lotus-born Lord knows the ripening of Karmas of everyone. After knowing the greatness of this holy place, he eulogizes Lord Gadādhara . Creatures which come under your jurisdiction do not remain here. O son of Sun, those who are liberated while living and those who are desirous of liberation reside here.

On being addressed thus by her, by Viṣṇu in female form, Yama who was devoid of pride and shyness (?) spoke these words:

Yama said :

43-46. O Mother, what has been ordered by you now has never before been heard by me. I am overwhelmed by ignorance. How can I know the excellent secret? I am deluded by egotism. How can I understand the greatness of that Lord whose form neither Brahmā nor the Vedas know? O Goddess of Suras , it has been commanded by you that this holy spot is the bestower of salvation due to the presence of Vāsudeva . God's will cannot be resisted. Viṣṇu who causes bondage elsewhere grants salvation here.

47-49. He is the creator of hells under my control as well as of heaven. If all those who die here attain salvation, O Mother, tell me in detail all these things: e.g. the area of the holy land; the situation; the benefit of residing there; what are the various Tīrthas that are present here; if there is any thing by way of secret etc.; who is the presiding deity of this (particular) holy spot? Recount all these, so that I can move about fearlessly avoiding (what should be avoided).

[1]: [1] : Nila-mādhava: The ancient form of Jagannātha as originally worshipped by Śabaras was an idol of azure blue stone and not the present wooden form.

[2]: [2] : This crow was named Bhuṣaṇḍa [Bhuṣuṇḍa?] Kāka and is installed near the Rohiṇa Kuṇḍa inside Jagannātha Temple. The crow image has four hands holding a disc, a conch-shell, a club and a lotus-like Lord Viṣṇu. In view of this, the line may be interpreted “The crow as transfigured as holder of a conch-shell, discus and iron-club.”

[3]: [3] : Śrīvatsa is the curl of hair on the chest of Viṣṇu.

English translation

Note: The story of Mārkaṇḍeya , the ageless sage, and his vision of Pralaya and the existence of the universe within the belly of the young babe lying on a leaf of Nyagrodha tree in the cosmic flood is described in Mbh, Vana 188, BhP XII.8.10, BmP chs 52-56 and elsewhere. But here as in NP chs 54-61 and BmP the main object is the glorification of Puruṣottama Kṣetra . The Kṣetra is unaffected by the Deluge; the Nyagrodha on the leaf of which Viṣṇu lies as a babe stands eternally at this sacred place.

Śrī said :

1. A good understanding due to the proximity of Viṣṇu has been engendered in you. I shall recount to you the wonderful story of this holy spot, O son of Sun.

2-5. Formerly stationed on the broad chest of the Lord, O Yama , I looked out as this universe consisting of mobile and immobile beings, got dissolved in Pralaya. At that time only two (survivors) were there, viz. this holy spot as well as I. At that time the son of Mṛkaṇḍu , the sage who had a span of life extending to seven Kalpas , did not get any place (shelter) to stand, as everything mobile and immobile had perished. He was not happy anywhere. Roving around on that vast sheet of water of dissolution he saw a Banyan tree at a spot resembling Puruṣottama.

6-11. Floating and wading (gradually) he reached the foot of the Banyan tree. Near it he heard the words of a boy, “O Mārkaṇḍeya, come near me. Entering (unto me) cast off your immense misery. Do not be aggrieved.”

On hearing those unimaginably wonderful words the sage experienced great surprise. He did not even think of his personal misery.

(The holy spot) was not Shattered by the waters of the Deluge; it was not burned by the Kālavahni (the Fire of Destruction), nor was it dried up or carried away by Saṃvartaka (i.e. Cloud of Universal Destruction etc.) in that extremely terrible, vast sheet of water. The holy spot looked like a boat. There a great Banyan tree appeared standing like a sacrificial post.

The Banyan tree was the body of the Lord. This holy spot held on to it. Its branch was not moved by the violent gusts of wind at the time of dissolution. The sage stood beneath it and thought thus:

12-16. ‘How does this piece of land appear stabler while all the mobile and immobile beings have perished in the vast sheet of water of dissolution (of the universe). This excellent tree appears to be very tender. Whence is this humble utterance “O Mārkaṇḍeya, come” repeatedly coming without any (visible) source?’ Thinking thus he floated on and saw Nārāyaṇa with the conch, discus and iron club in his hands.

O son of Vivasvān (i.e. Yama), he saw me also seated on the lotus of his body. He was helpless on account of water and gusts of wind, but then he regained composure and steadiness.

Delighted in his mind, that sage prostrated before us with eight limbs touching the ground. In order to propitiate the Lord he uttered this prayer:

Mārkaṇḍeya prayed :

17. O ocean of mercy, save me. I have close association with those who follow your lotus-like feet. I possess the wealth of Rudra , Indra and the Lotus-seated Lord. But I am devoid of your devotion and am wretched. I am scorched from all around.

18. O ocean of mercy, save me. I am wretched. Your lotus-like pair of feet served by Brahmā and others have unimaginable power. It is the real primary cause of the acquisition of (future) happiness and prosperity.

19. As a part of your person, this Cosmic Egg appears to be many crores of times (smaller). I have become distressed as this universe has become merged (in you) after having been sustained by you with your graceful charms.

20. The same gold appears different in the forms of bangles etc. The same Sun shining in the sky appears different in the waters contained in different (types of vessels) supporting them. [1] In the same way though you are one and devoid of attributes (yet) you appear in different forms.

21. Though you have no particular and exclusive interest (in any thing), though you are devoid of the will of taking up (any particular form), O Lord of boundless power, you take up physical bodies in every Yuga , conforming to your sympathy with the distressed.

22. Formerly, O Lord of the universe, your lotus-like feet were served by me, not with the understanding of the Ātman , and so I have become victim of the terrible consequences of that action. O ocean of mercy, save me. I am wretched.

23. O great souḥ your body of the three Guṇas , that is the agent of the sportive actions of creation, sustenance and annihilation of all the worlds is the cause of Mahat etc. Obeisance unto you who are greater than Prakṛti .

24. The form of Brahman is omnipresent. It is very large and immeasurable. It goes on increasing in you. It has assumed the full-grown form. It is the cause of transformation. I resort to it that is my own soul and the soul of the universe.

25. In this extremely terrible, vast sheet of water there is no piece of land for standing, O Lord of Lakṣmī , on account of the showers of the cloud and the violent agitation caused by winds.

26. Save me who have become immersed in the ocean of worldly existence, O Viṣṇu, O Lord of the universe. Redeem me from this, O Govinda , by means of your benign glance from a corner of your eyes.

Śrī said :

27. As the Brahmanical sage was eulogizing thus, Lord Nārāyaṇa directly looked at him with benign eyes and spoke these words:

Śrī Bhagavān said :

28-29. O Mārkaṇḍeya, O excellent Brāhmaṇa , you are extremely distressed because without knowing me a very severe penance has been performed by you. Only a long span of life has been the result thereof. See me lying on a leafy cup above this Kalpavaṭa (divine Banyan tree). I am in the form of a baby, O great sage. I am Kāla (Time) and the Ātman of everyone. Enter the widened mouth. It behoves you to remain there.

Śrī said :

30-39. On being told thus by the Lord, the sage had expressions of wonder on his face. He climbed (the tree) and saw the form of the baby. He entered his mouth. Through the throat he entered the huge belly of great extent. There the Brāhmaṇa saw the fourteen worlds, Brahmā and others, the Guardians of the Quarters, Suras , Siddhas , Gandharvas , Rākṣasas , sages, celestial sages, the Earth marked by the oceans, different kinds of Tīrthas , rivers, mountains and forests. Cities and towns were seen along with villages and market-towns. The Seven Pātālas [2] were seen and thousands of Serpent-girls too.

He saw Śeṣa holding up all the worlds. He was attended upon by serpents brilliant with exceedingly valuable gems. There were highly praiseworthy mansions set with gems and vessels of nectar. Śeṣa was exceedingly wonderful. He was adorned with a thousand hoods. He was expounding and analysing all the scriptural texts. He was in the midst of his disciples. That great sage saw within the Lord's belly everything that was created by Brahmā and everything that was within the bowels of the Cosmic Egg.

Moving about here and there he never saw the extremity of the belly. He came out of the belly and saw once again Puruṣottama seated as before, when he saw him along with me. With his eyes full of surprise, he bowed down and spoke these words:

Mārkaṇḍeya said :

40-41. O Lord, O Lord of chiefs of Devas , what a wonderful thing is this, O Lord? Within the confines free from the Mahāpralaya , creation too is seen. Your Māyā cannot be comprehended. How can it be known by me?

Śrī Bhagavān said :

42-44. O sage, know that this wonderful holy spot of mine is eternal. [3] There is neither creation nor dissolution here. There is no worldly existence (with transmigration from body to body).

Know that this holy spot is always of the same form. To those who realize me it gives salvation. This is the holy spot named Puruṣottama. One who has entered this does not go back to stay in a womb (i.e. he gets liberation). He becomes the embodiment of perfect happiness as his form.

On being advised thus by the Lord, the great sage Mārkaṇḍeya became averse to other Tīrthas and said, 'I will stay here". He bowed down to the Sire of the world and said with great delight visible on his face:

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke to Viṣṇu with great devotion and faith :

45. O Lord, bless me in this holy spot Puruṣottama. By staying here, O Puruṣottama, I will not be subjected to the control of (the god of) Death.

Śrī Bhagavān said :

46-48. I shall make your stay here, O Brāhmaṇa sage, in the holy spot that is conducive to the achievement of salvation till the annihilation of all living beings. There is no doubt about it. At the end of the Pralaya I shall create (another) eternal Tīrtha for you. On the banks of that Tīrtha you shall perform penance and propitiate my second body Śiva . [4] With my compassion you will certainly conquer Death.

Jaimini said :

49-51. Thus Mārkaṇḍeya, the great sage, was formerly granted boons (by the Lord). He resorted to a holy pit dug by the discus of Hari in the north-western quarter of the Banyan tree. [5] He worshipped Maheśvara with great penance. The Brāhmaṇa thus conquered Death immediately. This excellent pit became famous by the name of that sage. By taking the holy bath there and by visiting Śiva one shall derive the benefit of a horse-sacrifice.

Śrī said :

52-55. This holy spot extends to five Krośas [6] (i.e. 5x3 = 15 Kms) inside the sea. Two Krośas of the great holy spot fall within the shore. It is devoid of impurities. It is scattered with golden sands. It is splendid with the Nīla mountain. The Lord of Viśva (Śiva) is directly identical with Nārāyaṇa. One should restrain sensual feelings and avoid sensual objects and stay on the seashore for worshipping the Lord of the universe. The sixty-fourth Lord (?) is well known as Yameśvara. He destroys the control of Yama. By visiting this Lord and worshipping him, one shall attain the benefit of (the worship of) a crore of Liṅgas .

[1]: [1] : Such illustrations and the repeated references to Māyāvāda show the influence of Śaṅkara. Such portions belong to post-Śaṅkara period.

[2]: [2] : The seven nether worlds (Pātālas) are: Atala, Vitala, Sutala, Nitala, Talātala, Mahātala and Pātāla.

[3]: [3] : This eternality is a special feature of this Kṣetra. All Sthala-Purāṇas lay the same claim for their specific areas (e.g. Vārāṇasī, Karavīra).

[4]: [4] : As in the Māheśvara Khaṇḍa, this (Vaiṣṇava) Khaṇḍa also affirms the identity of Śiva and Viṣṇu.

[5]: [5] : This is the Mārkaṇḍa (Mārkaṇḍeya) Tīrtha, one of the five important Tīrthas (Pañcatīrthī) at Puri. Mārkaṇḍeśvara (Śiva) is on its bank.

[6]: [6] : VV 52-55 give the usual dimension of this sacred place. But it does not indicate its conch-shell shape mentioned in the next chapter vv 1-5.

English translation

Note: This chapter gives inter alia the locations of important sacred spots (deities, tanks) in the conch-shaped Puruṣottama Kṣetra .

Śrī said :

1. The Bull-emblemed Lord who bestows everything dwells on the tip of the holy spot of the shape of a conch on the western border.

2. Nīlakaṇṭha is at the tip of the conch. This spot extending to a Krośa (3 Kms) is the very rare, excellent and sanctifying holy spot of Nārāyaṇa himself.

3. The interior of the conch is flooded with the waters: of the ocean, the Lord of rivers, up to the root of the Banyan tree.

4-10. The ocean at this place attained the status of the chief of all the Tīrthas because of its contact with the Banyan tree.

Just as the Lord, when perceived, is the bestower of salvation, so also this holy spot is conducive to salvation if a person dies here, and the ocean bestows salvation if a person takes his holy bath here.

Formerly out of anger Rudra cut off the fifth head of Brahmā . He could not get rid of that head (which clung to him). Holding it he wandered over all the regions of the Cosmic Egg. It was only after coming here that he could get rid of the skull.

The Liṅga named Kapālamocana is situated in the second Āvarta (turning) of the conch-shaped region (?). One who visits Kapālamocana, [1] worships it and bows down to it, gets rid of the sins of Brāhmaṇa -murder etc. One who dies in the region on the right side of it, is liberated from worldly existence.

My primordial Śakti named Vimalā [2] is in the third (turning) of the conch-shaped Kṣetra. O Dharmarāja , know that it bestows the benefits of worldly pleasures and salvation. He who devoutly worships, bows down to and glorifies it, attains everything desired and on death attains salvation.

11-14. These three are stationed in the naval region, viz. the holy pit, the Banyan tree and the Lord. From the (Tīrtha named) Kapālamocana and as far as the place where Ardhāśinī is installed, should be known as the central region of the conch. It is well-protected by the Discus-bearing Lord.

O Dharmarāja, at the beginning of creation, this Śakti of mine drinks up half of the water that was increasingly accumulated at the time of the Great Deluge. So she is known as Ardhāśinī. [3] He who visits her and bows down to her, enjoys perpetual worldly pleasures.

From the water-front of the seashore to the root on the Banyan tree the region is considered to be the bestower of salvation on insects, birds and human beings on dying here.

15-21. The interior of this sacred place is highly meritorious. It is desired even by Devas . People see all persons dwelling here as holding discus and lotus.

All the Tīrthas together on the earth, in the firmament and in heaven are three and a half crores in number. They bestow heavenly pleasures and liberation.

This holy spot Puruṣottama is glorified as the king of all those Tīrthas. Among all the sacred places that bestow salvation this one is considered to be one which bestows (liberation called) Sāyujya . Those who dwell here do not become afflicted with sorrow due to old age, birth and death.

This holy tank named Rohiṇa [4] is full of water called mercifulness. It exists permanently. Merely by its contact it bestows liberation from bondage. The water within this increases during the period of dissolution and afterwards it dissolves here itself. Hence it is called Rohiṇa.

So do not feel aggrieved due to the loss to your authority here. O king of the dead, you are not the Lord of those who are entitled for liberation.

After instructing Dharmarāja thus Lakṣmī , the mother of the worlds, spoke courteously to Brahmā who was seated in front:

22-26. “O Lord of the worlds, O Brahmā, everything is known (to you). Declare that this holy spot bestows salvation on all creatures. Perform penance with Kāmākhya (‘one whose name is Kāma ’) and Kṣetrapāla (the Guardian of the holy spot) or Vimala in view (Defective Text).

Nṛsiṃha (Man-Lion) to the right of the Lord is the embodiment of Brahman itself. He is refulgent after tearing off the chest of Hiraṇyakaśipu .

By simply seeing this deity all the sins will be destroyed. There is no doubt about it. The devotee will be worthy of enjoyment of worldly pleasures as well as salvation. There is no doubt about it.

A person who forsakes his life in front of this deity, shall attain Sāyujya with Brahman. Whatever holy rite he performs here, shall have crores and crores of times the merit thereof.

27. This is the shade of the Kalpa tree. It is illuminated by the Sun Nṛsiṃha. On death therein Avidyā (Nescience) perishes with or without perfect knowledge.

28. Without the perfect knowledge resulting from Śravaṇa (listening) and other things prescribed by the Vedānta texts, which is very difficult for the ignorant people to acquire, O Brāhmaṇa, liberation is possible (to them) here.

29. In Avimukta (Vārāṇasī) the great Lord Śiva , the storehouse of mercy, whispers the knowledge of Brahman into the ears of the person who is desirous of salvation. He imparts the means of enlightenment also.

30. By means of that, by practising it intelligently, one shall attain salvation gradually (by degress). Thanks to the greatness of the instructor, his knowledge does not become deficient.

31. Those who give up their lives here shall instantaneously attain liberation from their own forms. O Yama , you need not entertain any doubt in this regard.

32. Those persons of confused minds who are bound by Karmas and those who are subject to coming into and departing from (this world), O son of Vivasvān , never get any faith in this matter.

33. They are as much confounded in their minds as a thirsty person who forsakes the sweet, cool water of Gaṅgā free from impurities and goes to a puddle.

34. (Defective Text) Those who leave this excellent holy place and wander over to Other holy spots are like those who are satisfied with the sweet smell of a Palāśa flower (merely). The only result they get is weariness.

35. This ocean bestows salvation through holy bath. The Lord bestows salvation through his vision; the Kalpa-tree bestows salvation through its shade and the holy spot bestows salvation on men on their death anywhere (in it).

36. A man is liberated by means of that in which he has devout faith. There is no other Tīrtha like this.

37. He who abandons this Tīrtha and entertains interest in another Tīrtha is certainly deceived by the Māyā of Viṣṇu because he is too greedy and covetous.

38-41. There is no need of giving you more advice. You have directly, experienced thus (when) the crow assumed the form of Viṣṇu.

Eight Śaktis have been glorified for the protection of the interior [5] of the shrine and the sacred spot. Formerly for the sake of a wife I was meditated upon by Rudra by (undertaking) a severe penance. Gaurī who is going to he his wife has been created by me. She is the abode of all beauty and she came out from my body. At the titne she was commanded by me: ‘O gentle lady, do something pleasing to me in accordance with my suggestion. Protect the interior of the body shrine all round me by means of your Mūrtis (different forms).’

42-45. Out of love for me she stands in the quarters in eight forms: Maṅgalā stands at the root of the Banyan tree. In West stands Vimalā. Sarvamaṅgalā stands in the posterior of the conch (Kṣetra). In North Ardhāśinī and Laṃbā are stationed. Kālarātri stands in South and Marīcikā is in East. Caṇḍarūpā is well established behind Kālarātri. This holy spot is guarded by these Śaktis of very fierce forms. This is indeed very difficult of access to a man deficient in merits.

46-50. By visiting and glorifying these eight Śaktis all the sins will perish. One shall obtain the benefit of a horse-sacrifice.

On seeing the eight different forms of Rudrāṇī Rudra, Śaṅkara , split himself into eight forms and began worshipping the great Lord.

After propitiating Viṣṇu by means of penance he requested for an excellent boon: ‘I shall stay very happily and comfortably wherever you stay, O Lord. Excepting you, O Lord of Kamalā , there is no other cause of bliss and salvation. O Lord, you are my immanent soul. Without you whence is a physical body? Those foolish persons who do not know you, take delight in unclean worldly pleasures,.1 have sought refuge in you who are like pure (cloudless) sky.'"

Jaimini said :

51-57. The Lord stationed himself in the middle and established Rudra as Kṣetrapāla all round. There are eight Liṅgas of Māheśvara (around), viz. Kapālamocana, Kṣetrapāla, Yameśvara, Mārkaṇḍeya , Īśāna , Bilveśa, Nīlakaṇṭha and Vaṭeśa at the root of the Banyan tree. By visiting, touching and worshipping these Liṅgas one becomes liberated.

Yama has no jurisdiction over those persons who die here in the holy spot. Achieve that object elsewhere, the object for which you came here. Yet the Lord of the universe is willing to dedicate himself to a devotee.

On being devoutly propitiated by Yama the Lord who dispels the distress of those who seek refuge in him, will cover up his Māyā by means of his discus Sudarśana .

In this excellent holy spot covered with golden sands, which could not be abandoned, she deceived Yama and made him proceed to his own abode. She considered it good and thereafter spoke to Brahma who was present in front.

Śrī said :

58. There will be a king named Indradyumna in Satya Yuga . He will be a follower of Viṣṇu and a knower of sacred texts. He will perform all (types of) Yajñas .

59-62. That excellent king will come here and perform great worship. For the propitiation of the Lord he will perform a thousand horse-sacrifices. The Lord of the subjects will do everything for the sake of his blessings.

One tree will split into four. Viśvakarmā will make the idols out of the wooden pieces. Propitiated by Indradyumna you will be the person who will install them. O grandfather, there will be the installation of idols resembling us.

63. On hearing these words of Śrī the Four-faced Lord and Yama went back to their respective cities with great joy.

64. Remembering the greatness of the holy spot repeatedly they had their hair standing on end all over the body on account of amazement and delight.

65-66. Now, O sages, the Lord still dwells there for the sake of helping the world. He is accompanied by Bala and Subhadrā . It is the same Lord who was propitiated by Indradyumna, the glorious Lord holding the conch and the discus, who resembles a dark-blue cloud and resides in a cave of mount Nīla and has wooden physical body.

67-74. The Lord who destroys the distresses of those who bow down to him, the ocean of mercifulness, is equipped with the discus Sudarśana made of wood.

By visiting him one will be relieved from the strong bondage of sins.

O excellent sages, it is as though all the good and meritorious actions of those who see the Lord (who dispels) the threefold distress like the Moon that dispels heat, have come to fruition simultaneously.

Indeed there are many incarnations of Viṣṇu, both divine and human. (His) wonderful deeds and greatness have been described. On account of great familiarity Suras do not honour human beings (?).

O Brāhmaṇas , the minds of Devas, Asuras , human beings, Gandharvas , Serpents, Rākṣasas and lower orders of beings dwell on Hari in that wooden idol. He is the soul of everyone and he causes happiness unto everyone.

They sustain themselves by this happiness of the Lord having a unique form. One experiences there what the Vedic words of Brahman have said, viz. “It dispels all the miseries of worldly existence and gives imperishable happiness. Therefore Brahman is sung about in the Upaniṣads as ‘Dārumaya’ (Brahman made of wood). Indeed the idol of wood will never bestow salvation anywhere.

75. O Brāhmaṇas, a natural state cannot be obtained through an artificial one. Salvation is not an artificial one. How can it be the effect of an artificial wood?

76. The blessedness and prosperity of Brahman cannot be achieved without any basis. This excellent abode of Viṣṇu is a great mystery.

77. That idol is supramundane. It was revealed as though it was a worldly one. Where has it been heard or seen that an idol speaks?

78-82. At that time the Lord with wooden idol granted boon to Indradyumna. O sages, seek refuge in Han, the Lord, without (seeking) anyone else as your shelter. He is the sole asylum for the wretched and helpless ones. He takes us across the ocean of worldly existence.

His feet always deserve to be saluted by the mobile and immobile beings. He is the ultimate resort. Nārāyaṇa is the source of origin of the universe. He is the cause of creation and annihilation. He liberates (us) from all sins. He dispels all miseries. He enhances prosperity and glory. He is the protector of all Yogins . He nourishes all the creatures. He holds up and sustains ail the worlds. He is the speech of all the languages. He condemns all the wicked ones. He dries up all marshes (i.e. sins). He resorts to the Nīla Mountain, O sages, seek refuge in the all-pervading Lord, the only support of all.

83. Though he is motionless and wooden-formed, he indulges in graceful divine sports. Even if there is only very little of devotion, he forgives a hundred offences of men.

84. In this connection I shall narrate to you a story of the Supreme Soul abiding in a wooden body out of sport, O sages. That story absolves (one) of sins.

85. There was a Brāhmaṇa and a Kṣatriya who hailed from Kurukṣetra . [6] They became loving friends who moved about taking food together and playing together.

86-88. They deviated from decent behaviour. They ate forbidden things and got deluded. They did not study the Vedas , nor ever uttered Vaṣaṭ (i.e . never performed holy rites). They were devoid of Svāhā and Svadhā (i.e. they gave up sacrificial rites and Śrāddha to Pitṛs). They became ineligible for the practice of religious rites. They were defiled by great sins. They imbibed liquor and rejoiced in the company of harlots. Thought about the next world never occurred to them even in dreams. Behaving in this way they spent half of their life.

89-90. Once in the course of their wanderings they came to a place enclosed for sacrifice. Hearing from afar the hymns and the fascinating words of the scriptures and seeing all those holy rites prescribed in the Śrutis , O Brāhmaṇas, those two irreligious ones developed some faith in the path of piety.

91. They remembered their caste. Puṇḍarīka and Aṃbarīṣa censured their own evil deeds and spoke to each other:

92-93. “How will we cross this vast ocean of our sins inclined by us in this very birth and that too knowingly. It cannot fade away. Even the sacred treatises do not know what extremely rare expiation for the terrible sins that we two have heaped up is available.

94. Still let us ask these Brāhmaṇas in the sacrificial assembly about the redemption. They are well-versed in the Vedas and they have realized Brahman. They will accept us on our prostrating (in front of them).”

95. After deciding thus, they paid their respects to those Brāhmaṇas. They repeatedly confessed their sinful crimes and asked them (about the modes of atonement).

96-99. On hearing their words, those excellent Brāhmaṇas kept their eyes closed. They did not say anything. With great surprise visible on their faces they looked at one another (as though they wanted to say), “Alas, extremely terrible sins have been accumulated by these vicious ones. The sacred texts cannot step in to suggest a suitable atonement. Therefore we are not competent to redeem them.”

Among them there was a prominent devotee of Viṣṇu who was the chief of the Assembly. He had destroyed all sins due to the greatness of his devotion to the Lord. He was the most excellent one among those conversant with apt utterances. He laughingly spoke to them:

The Vaiṣṇava said :

100. O Brāhmaṇa, O Kṣatriya, if you desire liberation from the terrible heap of sins, go immediately to Puruṣottama.

101-107. It is the most excellent one among holy spots. It is there that Puruṣottama of wooden idol is present. The Lord had blessed the saintly king Indradyumna on account of his devotion. By propitiating that Lord of the universe, the wielder of conch, discus and iron club you will certainly attain the destruction of your sins or you will get liberation as you please.

He is like a forest-fire unto the mass of cotton (in the form) of the terrible evil deeds. This (mass of sins) cannot be wiped off by means of penance even in the course of crores of births. On seeing that Lord all the sins will be instantaneously destroyed. So do not delay. Go there quickly. Seek refuge in the Lord whose abode is on the peak of the Nīla mountain in the holy land of Utkala (Orissa) on the shores of the southern sea. That Lord, the storehouse of mercy, will grant you the accomplishment of what you desire.

On being directed thus, the Brāhmaṇa and the Kṣatriya became delighted. O Brāhmaṇas, they started towards Puruṣottama by that very path.

[1]: [1] : A Tīrtha called Kapālamocana with a similar legend of dropping of a sticking skull is found in many other sacred places in India.

[2]: [2] : This deity existed before the composition of MtP as it refers to its existence as ‘ vimalāpuruṣottame ’ (MtP 13.35). Its temple was built circa CE 740-940 during the reign of Kara dynasty (H.K. Mahtab, Odisā Itihāsā).

[3]: [3] : A popular etymology of the name of the goddess.

[4]: [4] : In Oriya language ‘Rohiṇa’ means a banyan tree (Vaṭa). Its association with the Banyan tree called ‘Kalpa Vṛkṣa’ gave it the name Rohiṇa. This tank is in the compound of the Jagannātha Temple.

[5]: [5] : Antarvedī is the area between the sea and the Banyan tree. It is the sacred-most spot in Puruṣottama Kṣetra.

[6]: [6] : As stated in v 91 below, their names were Puṇḍarīka and Ambarīṣa. These are imaginary. They are in no way connected with the great royal sage and the Brahmin ascetic of the same name mentioned in the old Purāṇas. As described in the next chapter, these confirmed sinners were liberated at the sight of Jagannātha. Such is the great merit of merely seeing the Lord.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1. They were disgusted in their minds. They gave up their association with harlots and others. They mentally meditated on Viṣṇu . They took to pure diet and holy rites.

2. After some time, they reached Hari 's abode in the Nīla mountain. They took their holy bath in accordance with the directions and injunctions (in the scriptures) in the water of the Tīrtharāja . [1]

3. They stood at the entrance to the palace (i.e the shrine of Jagannātha). They prostrated with eight limbs (touching the ground), O Brāhmaṇas . They looked at the Lord but could not see him.

4. Not being able to see the Lord, their face became pale. They were agitated and anxious. They began the observance of a fast till the Lord could be perceived.

5. They began to recite the name of the Lord that is conducive to the destruction of sins. On the third night they saw a mass of refulgence.

6. Again for three days they steadfastly continued their fast. In the middle of the seventh night they saw the Lord.

7. By hearing the eulogies of the Devas they became endowed with divine knowledge. After shedding off the slough of sins they saw the Lord directly.

8-13. He had the conch, the discus and the iron club in his hands. He was adorned with divine ornaments. He had placed his lotus-like feet on the back of (i.e. had put on) gem-set sandals. His eyes resembled full-blown lotuses. The Lord had a smiling face. With his left arm he had embraced Lakṣmī who stood on his left. He was seen accepting a folded betel leaf offered by Lakṣmī.

Some of his lady attendants had bejewelled canes in their hands. Others had chowries in their hands. Some held lamps with fragrant oil. Some held lamps with gems and jewels for their wicks in their hands. All of them were well-adorned and were in the prime of their youth. There stood a certain bright-looking (lady) behind him holding a gem-studded umbrella. A certain lady who scorned at (i.e. surpassed) Pramlocā (an Apsaras) by means of her resplendent bodily lustre, held the vessel of incense near his face. It was kept fumigated with Agallochum. The Lord was seen blessing the Devas in front (of him) by means of his eyes over which a lock of hair gracefully swung.

14-20. The Lord blessed with his smiles Siddhas , groups of sages and divine sages, Sanaka and others, who kept their palms joined in reverence, with shoulders lowered in humility. They eulogized the Lord separately. Gandharvas beginning with Nārada were engaged in singing sweet and fascinating divine songs. The Lord attentively listened to them and gracefully blessed them with compassion.

In front of the Lord eminent Vaiṣṇavas , Prahlāda [2] and others, were meditating on his form. The Lord kept their minds attracted towards his person.

The Lord revealed his Cosmic form by means of the Devas and others who were reflected in the Kaustubha jewel that adorned his chest.

From above a shower of divine flowers was falling and the Lord stood below. He looked at the group of celestial damsels whose splendour faded on account of the proximity of Lakṣmī. The Lord had many graceful movements of his body and he looked fascinating. On seeing the Lord with such divine grace and charm the Brāhmaṇa and the Kṣatriya became masters of all lores in a moment, O Brāhmaṇas. They circumambulated the Lord of Devas three times. They joyously prostrated (at his feet). With palms joined in reverence they eulogized him with great joy.

Puṇḍarīka said :

21. Obeisance to you, O supporter of the universe, O Nārāyaṇa , the cause of creation, sustenance and annihilation. Salute to you, O supreme soul, O ultimate resort.

22. You alone are the greatest truth, free from origin and destruction. Those who have the vision born of meditation know you as of the nature of eternal bliss.

23. How can those with confounded hearts know you who are pure consciousness, who are the Lord of the worlds, the basis (of the universe), greater than the greatest and absolutely free from impurities?

24. Those whose minds are perturbed on account of their desire to acquire sensual objects are excessively miserable. They are exhausted in the path of coming and going (transmigration of the soul in Saṃsāra). Are they ever happy?

25. Be compassionate and merciful towards me, O Lord. I have sought refuge in you. I am extremely wretched. I am confounded and foolish. I have committed misdeeds. I have fallen into the ocean of worldly existence.

26. In the whole of this world, O Lord, who else is our kinsman? Who is that person showing kindness to the wretched and the helpless even after neglecting his (more urgent) duties?

27. O ocean of mercy, do save me who am perpetually moving up and down like a machine for drawing water, undergoing the torture of high and low movements.

28. You are the person who bestows salvation gracefully and sportingly. Those foolish persons who worship you with Yogakṣema (acquisition of what is not acquired and preservation of what is acquired) as their motive are deluded by your Māyā .

29. If your name Nārāyaṇa is pronounced even by chance, O Lord of the worlds, it becomes superior even to you. [3] It is the sole means for achieving the fourfold aim (of life).

30. But you grant different Siddhis through several Yajñas (performed by men). You are the only refuge, O Lord, to those who have fallen into the ocean of worldly existence.

31. In order to take a senseless person to the other shore of the ocean of worldly existence, you are seated in the boat of knowledge with your hands on the oar of mercifulness.

32-33. You alone are powerful enough to grant salvation on being moved by exclusive devotion. Other Devas who have been mentioned in the scriptural texts as bestower of salvation lead (persons) to devotion unto you who like the Pot-born Sage (Agastya) [4] dries up the ocean of misery.

34. Hence, O Lord, be pleased. Grant me a firm devotion unto your lotus-like feet, whereby I can cross the sea of frightful worldly existence that is very difficult to cross (otherwise). I could then spare myself the strain of seeking the help of the Yogic path of eight ancillaries. [5]

35. I have nothing to do with the three things (aims in life) viz. virtue, wealth and love. They are sought after by persons of bad intellect. They are worthless. They give little happiness but great disadvantage. Command me to immerse myself in the ocean of happiness that surges up by meditating upon the pair of your lotus-like feet.

36. After eulogizing thus, the Brāhmaṇa fell at the lotus-like feet of the Lord of the universe saying “Save me, O Kṛṣṇa ”. His words were drenched (and choked) with tears. He got up again and remained praying with palms joined in reverence.

Ambarīṣa said :

37. Be pleased, O Lord, O soul immanent in everyone, You have innumerable heads and arms. Obeisance to you, O Lord with countless noses, eyes, hands and feet.

38. You are beyond the thirty-six principles. [6] Though devoid of extension, you display and manifest the illusory phenomena of the universe. You are the abode of the four types of living beings. O Lord with Cosmic Form, obeisance to you.

39-40. You are single-footed, three-footed and firmament-footed: Your feet are Tīrthas . Obeisance to that splendid soul from whose feet Gaṅgā rises and sanctifies the three worlds, whose name is glorified as purifying the sins including Brāhmaṇa-slaughter, and who is the bestower of all auspiciousness.

41. O Lord, all Siddhis are achieved even by glorifying your name, yet out of curiosity the learned men of great intellect seek you.

42. If we resort to it, O Lord, the sacred water from your feet dispels all distresses. Make my devotion to your feet firm and steady. I have been assailed by the three kinds of distress.

43-44. I have no other Lord. Today I have nothing else to request you, prostrating myself before you. O Lord of the universe, I request a thousand times that my devotion to your lotus-like feet may be steadfast as long as I am alive. It is the seed, as it were, of all Puruṣārthas (aims of human life).

45. It is due to that devotion that Brahmā accomplished the creation of the universe, that Rudra annihilates everything and that Lakṣmī bestows prosperity.

46-47. O Lord merciful unto the wretched, with my mind dwelling exclusively on you, I request you for that devotion. I am sinking in the mire of the primordial Avidyā (nescience) which is very difficult to cross and is very dense. O Lord of the universe, I perish in the absence of a support. There is no other ultimate resort for me than devotion unto you of exalted majesty.

48. The different paths opened up by Śrutis , Smṛtis etc. are causes of delusion. These are incompetent to function if they exclude devotion to you.

49-52a. O Lord, I have no other refuge. Be merciful unto me.

After eulogizing thus joyously he fell down like a rod on the ground near the lotus-like feet of the Lord of the universe, repeatedly uttering “Be pleased”.

Then all those Devas duly eulogized and worshipped Keśava . They went back to heaven fully satisfied by his graceful, benign glances (fallen on them).

Puṇḍarīka and Aṃbarīṣa then opened their eyes. Since they were deluded by the Māyā of Viṣṇu, they thought that what they had seen was only a dream.

52b-58. After seeing the divine grace and charm with the mortal eye directly, now they reverted to human feelings and emotions. Then they saw the Lord (in the shrine) seated on the divine throne. He resembled a dark cloud. His eyes were large like full-blown lotus. His lips were red and the nose charming. He was adorned with divine earrings. He held the conch, the discus, the iron-club and the lotus. He wore a garland of sylvan flowers. His chest was stout (and muscular). He had a charming necklace. He was brilliant with a valuable crown. He had on his chest the Śrīvatsa mark and the jewel Kaustubha. He was adorned with divine armlets. He had long arms. He was in complete readiness for saving the wretched and the distressed. He had a golden thread (round his neck) with a big jewel set in the middle. He wore divine yellow garment and had divine garlands and sweet-smelling unguents. He was seated on a golden lotus-like seat. He was closely embraced by Śrī. He dispelled the distress of those who resorted to him. He was an ocean of nectar that had surged up. He was like the Kalpa tree in full bloom bestowing the fruits of all desires.

59-63a. They saw the wielder of plough as a weapon (Balabhadra) seated on his right side. It is he with whom the Lord supports the universe with great strength. [7] He was the king of Serpents adorned with seven hoods. He was as lofty as the peak of Kailāsa . He was white in complexion and resplendent with gold ear-rings. He had a garland of variegated forest-flowers. He wore a divine, dark-coloured, silken robe. Inebriated with liquor, his lotus-like eyes rolled always. His back was slightly bent and the chest projected forward. His body was coiled up. His four arms were brilliant with the conch, the discus, the iron-club and the lotus. He was handsome with different kinds of ornaments. He was a destroyer of the sins of those who bowed down (to him).

63b-68. They saw the gentle lady Subhadrā in between them. She was as pink as saffron.

They saw Lakṣmī who was the abode of all beauty, who was bowed down to by all the Devas. She was stationed in the lotus-like heart of the Lord of Lakṣmī. She was sitting separately. The goddess held an excellent lotus. Her garments and ornaments were of divine nature. She was the destroyer of all sins. She redeemed those who were immersed in the ocean of worldly existence. She was the source of origin of deities.

They saw the excellent discus of Viṣṇu stationed on his left side. O Brāhmaṇas, it was made out of wood. It was brilliantly embellished in gold.

On seeing Viṣṇu stationed in four forms, [8] that Brāhmaṇa and the Kṣatriya considered their exertion in the early dawn fruitful. Recollecting that charming dream of sport, they were surprised.

69. “This is not a mere wooden idol. It is Brahman itself that shines here.” They believed in this utterance of the Brāhmaṇas in the sacrificial assembly.

70-72. ‘Where are we (what great difference there is), the great sinners who deserve only tortures; where is this manifestation of Viṣṇu in the assembly of the Suras ! We had been fools. Now we have mastered the eighteen lores. [9] Hence this is not an error on our part. It is real knowledge unto us. That has been proved. They had said that the Brahman of wooden form stood at the root of the Banyan tree on the shore of the Tīrtharāja. On seeing it directly, a creature is liberated.

73-75. This Lord of the worlds is that very same (Brahman). He has four forms when he incarnates on the earth. He shines in four forms.

Therefore let us retain our life and stay in his presence. We shall not go elsewhere. We shall be averse to worthless pursuits of lust.’

After deciding thus, O sages, those two became engrossed in devotion to Viṣṇu. Always repeating the names of Nārāyaṇa, they attained salvation.

Jaimini said :

76-77. It is just incidentally that this secret conducive to the destruction of sins has been told. Those who listen to this story of Puṇḍarīka and Aṃbarīṣa and those who recite it always with great joy, go to the abode of Viṣṇu with great joy. They will go to the abode of Viṣṇu with all sins dispelled.

[1]: [1] : Tīrtharāja : sea, as all sacred rivers join the sea. Here it means the Bay of Bengal on the shore of which stands Puruṣottama Kṣetra.

[2]: [2] : Son of demon Hiraṇyakaśipu. He was a very great devotee of Viṣṇu. It was to save him that Viṣṇu incarnated as Nṛsirhha and killed Hiraṇyakaśipu. BhP regards him as a great Vaiṣṇava.

[3]: [3] : A reference to Ajāmila, a sinner who was liberated by pronouncing the name Nārāyaṇa (BhP VI, Chs 2 and 3). It illustrates the efficacy of God's name.

[4]: [4] : This exploit of Agastya (drinking-up of all the waters of the sea) is mentioned in Mbh, Vana 105.3-6.

[5]: [5] : The eight aṅgas (ancillaries) of Yoga are: Yama, Niyama, Āsana, Prāṇāyāma, Dhyāna, Dhāraṇā and Samādhi.

[6]: [6] : Śaivas and Śāktas add twelve intangible principles to the list of twenty-four principles of Sāṅkhya. The cult of Jagannātha synthesises both Vaiṣṇavism and Śaivism. Hence Jagannātha's transcendence of 36 principles.

[7]: [7] : Balabhadra is an incarnation of Śeṣa, the serpent who supports the Earth. Hence his (Śeṣa's) attributes are applied to Balabhadra. Our Purāṇa, like Harivaṃśa, describes him as a liquor-addict but, strangely enough, he proclaimed total prohibition at Dvārakā at a late stage (Mbh, Mausala 1.29).

[8]: [8] : In Jagannātha Temple at Puri the four images, viz. Jagannātha, Balabhadra, Subhadrā and Sudarśana are worshipped. They as if constitute one object of worship, viz. Jagannātha and are called caturdhā-mūrti . Hence the epithet caturdhāvasthita .

[9]: [9] : Eighteen Lores: Normally four Vedas, six Aṅgas of Vedas (such as Śikṣā, Kalpa etc.), Mīmāṃsā, Nyāya, Dharmaśāstra and Purāṇa constitute 14 lores. To these are added Āyurveda (Science of Medicine), Dhanurveda (Military Science), Gāndharva Veda (Science of Music) and Arthaśāstra (Political Economy) totalling to eighteen Lores.

English translation

Note: Utkala is a part of modem Orissa . According to our text (vv 27-28 in this Chapter) the country Utkala was situated between the Southern Sea (The Bay of Bengal) and the river Ṛṣikulyā ; on the other side it extended from Mahānadī to the river Suvarṇarekhā . According to BmP 47.7 Utkala and Kaliṅga were separate. In Purāṇic age the names Utkala or Oḍra were mostly used for Puri region. Strangely enough, Utkala and Oḍra are not included in the 72 countries of Kaumārikā Khaṇḍa of the SkP unless we presume Oḍḍiānā [Oḍḍiyāṇa] in the list is Oḍra.—This chapter depicts Utkala as heaven on the earth (Bhūsvarga).

The sages enquired :

1. In which land is that holy spot Puruṣottama , O excellent Brāhmaṇa , where Nārāyaṇa reveals himself directly in the form of a wooden idol?

Jaimini said :

2. There is a land named Utkala. It is famous and is very sacred. There are many Tīrthas and holy shrines there.

3. The land is situated on the shore of the Southern Sea. The persons living there are models of good conduct.

4-6, The Brāhmaṇas there are given to good behaviour and the study of the Vedas . They perform Yajñas . Ever since the beginning of the creation there have been Vedas and expounders of Vedas and Śāstras (sacred literature). This land is glorified as the home of eighteen Vidyās (lores). At the behest of Nārāyaṇa Lakṣmī dwells in every house (there). The people are by nature shy and humble. They are free from mental agony and physical ailments. They are devoted to their parents. They are truthful in speech and are followers of Viṣṇu .

7. There is no one here who is not a devotee of Viṣṇu. There is no atheist here. All the people are ever ready to bring about the welfare of others. No one is greedy, knavish or wicked.

8. All the people are long-lived. Women consider their husbands gods. They are well-behaved and righteous and they are well-adorned with bashfulness and charity.

9. They have pride in their beauty and youthfulness. They adorn themselves with all kinds of ornaments. They are great experts in the conduct of life, befitting their nobility, chastity, age and decency.

10. The Kṣatriyas there are devoted to their duties. They are scrupulously engaged in protecting the subjects. They are liberal in charitable gifts. They are well-versed in the use of weapons and learning sacred treatises.

11-13. All of them always perform Yajñas with plenty of monetary gifts. Their sacrificial altars have the sacred posts decorated with gold. In their homes guests are worshipped far beyond their expectations. The Vaiśyas are engaged in such activities as agriculture, trade and breeding cattle. They please and propitiate with devotion and also plenty of wealth Devas , preceptors and Brāhmaṇas. If any suppliant goes to any house, he has no need to go to any other house.

14. They are experts in music, poetry, arts and crafts. They are pleasing in speech. The Śūdras there are virtuous and engaged in holy baths, charitable gifts and other pious activities.

15. They serve Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas and Vaiśyas, physically, mentally, verbally and by means of wealth. Persons of mixed castes too are well-established in their respective duties.

16. The seasons do not have any vagaries; the clouds do not shower untimely. There is no damage to plants and vegetation. There is no desert land. Hunger does not afflict the subjects.

17. There is neither famine nor any epidemic (in the land). There is no split or division in the realm. There is no object not available there, if at all it exists on the earth.

18-26. This land is full of all good qualities and different kinds of trees and creepers, viz. Arjuna , Aśoka , Punnāga (Calophyllum inophyllum), Tāla (Palmyra), Hintāla (Phoenix tree), Śāla (Sal tree), Prācīnāmalaka (Flacourtia cataphracta), Lodhra (Svamplocos racemosa), Bakulas , Nāgakesaras , Coconut Palms, Priyālas , Saralas , Himālayan cedars, Dhavas , Calectu, Marmelos, Jack-fruits, Wood Apples, Caṃpakas , Karṇikāras , Kovidāras , Pāṭalas , Kadambas , Margosa , Niculas , Mangoes, Embylic myrobalans, Oranges, Citrons, Nīpakas, Pomegranates, flowering plants of various varieties such as Mandāra , Pārijāta etc., Holy Fig Trees, Agallochum, Sandal trees, Kharjūras (Date Palms), Āmrātakas , Siddhas , Mucakundas (Pterospermunt acerifolium), Kiṃśukas , Tindukas , Saptaparṇas , Aśvatthas , Bibhītakas and various other trees of very charming nature.

There are Mālatīs , Kundas , Bāṇas , Black Karavīras , Ketakīs , Atimuktas , Kubjas , Cardamom, Lavaṅga (cloves), Kaṃkolas , Dāḍimas , Bījapūrakas etc. There are rows of areca-palms and many hundreds of parks and gardens. The land is surrounded by mountains and rivers. This excellent land, O brilliant Brāhmaṇas, is named Utkala.

27-28. This land is situated between Svarṇarekhā and Mahānadī reaching as far as Ṛṣikulyā that falls into the Southern Sea. In this holy spot there are many excellent shrines and sacred temples. Formerly they have been described to you, O Brāhmaṇas, in the course of the pilgrimage by me. This land of Puruṣottama is said to be now Bhūsvarga (‘Heaven on the Earth’).

English translation

Note: This king (Indradyumna) is different from the Indradyumna who was expelled from heaven for becoming obliterated from public memory (Mbh, Vana , Ch. 199). This Indradyumna is a legendary king of Avantī who built the temple of Jagannātha at Puri . His life story forms an essential part of this Purāṇa .

The sages asked :

1-3. O sage, in which Yuga did Indradyumna live? In which land was his (capital) city? How did he go to Puruṣottama and how did he cause the idol to be made? Describe all these truthfully and in detail, O great sage, O omniscient one. We have great eagerness (to hear).

Jaimini said :

4-5. Very well, O excellent Brāhmaṇas , what you ask for is relevant. His (Indradyumna's) ancient anecdote helps to dispel all sins. It is meritorious and splendid. It yields worldly pleasures and salvation. I shall recount it as it happened in Kṛtayuga . Listen ye all, O sages, with great attention and with all the sense-organs under control.

6. There was a great king in Kṛtayuga, O Brāhmaṇas, (named) Indradyumna. That righteous-souled one belonged to the Solar race and was the fifth person (i.e. descendant) from the creator (Brahmā).

7. He was truthful in speech and of good conduct. He was of spotless fame and was the most prominent among sāttvika persons. He protected his subjects like his own children with justice.

8. He was expert in the Science of Spirit (i.e. perfect knowledge of Brahman). He was a hero with increasing (interest) in war. He was always active with devotion to his parents. He always worshipped Brāhmaṇas.

9. He had mastered the eighteen branches of learning and was like another Bṛhaspati (i.e. Preceptor of gods). In prosperity and glory he was another Indra and in the accumulation of wealth in the treasury he was (another) Kubera .

10. He was handsome with charming features and excellent grace. He was of good behaviour. He was charitable, an enjoyer of pleasures and one of sweet speech. He performed all Yajñas . He was friendly with Brāhmaṇas. He truthfully kept his promises.

11. He was the beloved of men and women like the moon on the full-moon day. (At the same time) he, being the exterminator of his enemies, was too dazzling to look at.

12-14. He was a devotee of Viṣṇu and very truthful. He had subdued anger and the sense-organs. He performed Rājasūya , the most excellent Yajña , and a thousand horse-sacrifices. He was highly glorious, desirous of salvation and devoted to virtue and piety. Thus endowed with all good qualities the king ruled over the earth at the (capital) city named Avantī situated in Mālava [1] country and well known all over the earth. He lived in that city which was rich in all kinds of precious stones and like another Amarāvatī (the capital of Indra).

15. Living there, the king carried on excellent and exceedingly wonderful devotional activities in regard to Viṣṇu mentally, verbally and physically.

16-18. While he was thus (devotionally) active, once, at the time of the worship of the Lord, the consort of Lakṣmī , within the sanctum sanctorum , he respectfully addressed his priest who was seated along with learned men, poets, Brāhmaṇas well-versed in the Vedas as well as Astrologers of great fame, "Let that excellent holy spot be known where we can see Jagannātha ('Lord of the worlds') with these (mortal) eyes."

19. On being asked thus by the excellent king, a follower of Viṣṇu, the priest faced the assembly of pilgrims and spoke these words with humility.

20. "O, O ye virtuous ones, experts in the knowledge of holy spots, eager to undertake pilgrimages, what our Lord intends has been heard by you all indeed."

21. After knowing his intention, a certain eloquent person who had visited a number of holy spots said to the king joyously, as he stood there with palms joined in reverence:

22. “O Lord, O king, I have travelled through many holy places on the earth ever since my childhood. These (Tīrthas) have only been heard of by others.

23. There is a land in the subcontinent of Bharata , famous as Oḍhra Deśa (i.e. Utkala , Orissa). It is on the shore of the Southern Ocean. The holy spot is Śrī Puruṣottama.

24-25. There is a mountain named Nīlagiri there. It is surrounded by forests all round. In the middle thereof is a Kalpa tree (i.e. a Banyan tree) extending to a Krośa (3 Kms.). If one enters its shade one dispels the sin of the slaughter of a Brāhmaṇa . To the west thereof is the famous holy pool named Rauhiṇa .

26-28. It is filled with primordial waters (kāraṇāṃbhobhiḥ). By means of its mere contact it bestows salvation. On its eastern bank is the body (i.e. idol) of Śrīvāsudeva made out of sapphires. [2] It is directly the bestower of salvation. He who takes his holy bath in the Kuṇḍa (holy pool) there and visits Puruṣottama acquires the benefit of a thousand horse-sacrifices and then becomes liberated.

There is an excellent hermitage there, famous as Śabara Dīpaka . [3]

29-30. It is on the western side of the Lord and is encircled by the abodes of Śabaras (hunters). There is a footpath leading to the temple of Viṣṇu. It is there that Jagannātha himself is present holding the conch, the discus and the iron club. The storehouse of mercifulness grants salvation to all living creatures who visit (the Lord).

31. O king, I spent a year there in Śrīpuruṣottama observing holy rites and staying in the forest for the propitiation of the Lord of Devas .

32-33. The divine scent, O great king, of the heaven-dwellers who came there every night for visiting the Lord, is superhuman. Different kinds of prayerful words are heard. Showers of the flowers of Kalpa tree are seen. This greatness is not revealed in any other shrine of Viṣṇu.

34-39. An ancient legend too is heard there, O king. After seeing Mādhava a crow, a being of lower species, became liberated, though it is not authorized to perform any meritorious deed and though it was devoid of knowledge, O king. Being thirsty it came to the Rauhiṇa Kuṇḍa in order to drink water. As the time had come, it gave up its life and attained Sārupya with Viṣṇu.

Formerly I had been stupid and ignorant. But thanks to his favour, now perhaps Śeṣa is second to me in the knowledge of the eighteen branches of learning. My mind has become free from impurities.

I do not see any Lord other than Viṣṇu. Since you are a devotee of Viṣṇu and are always steadfast in holy rites, I have come to you for the sake of instructing you. Neither wealth nor a plot of land is being requested from you now. This is understood by me as useless. Worship Śrīdhara dwelling there.”

40-41. After saying thus that man with matted hair vanished immediately even as everyone was looking on. The king was struck with great wonder. He became excited thinking, ‘How can I carry this on?’ He spoke to the priest in regard to the accomplishment thereof:

Indradyumna said :

42. This incident is superhuman. After hearing this from a superhuman person my intellect prompts me (to go) to the place where that Gadādhara is present.

43. O excellent Brāhmaṇa, my virtue, wealth and love are under your control. The three aims in life have been accomplished through your grace which was not against me (i.e. you were favourable to me).

44. If now, O excellent Brāhmaṇa, you go on this errand, all the four aims of my life shall be achieved by me.

The priest said :

45. Of course, I shall do this so that you will be able to see with your eyes covered with skin (i.e. your physical, human eyes) Keśava , the Lord who directly confers liberation (from Saṃsāra).

46. I shall endeavour in this matter (so carefully) that we all shall reside in the holy spot (called) Śrī Puruṣottama along with our associates and assistants.

47. What can be a better success than this, O king, in the birth of a human being, if you can directly perceive Mādhava, the Puruṣa beyond Tamas .

48. My younger brother named Vidyāpati will also go now along with your spies who frequently tour many lands.

49-50. He will go there and after visiting the Lord of the universe there on the mountain, he will make a piece of land fit for the residence of your camp. He will soon bring the news (that everything) has been fully arranged. It will be for our welfare.

On hearing his words the king said again:

Indradyumna said :

51-54a. Good, O Brāhmaṇa! Excellent arrangement has been thought of after due contemplation. Even at the outset, on hearing about this, I have decided that I will reside in that holy place in the presence of the Lord. So let your brother go. He will accomplish everything as desired.

After saying this the king entered the inner apartment joyously. At the behest of the king the priest honoured all of them duly and made them go to their respective hermitages.

54b-56. An auspicious hour was fixed by the astrologers. After performing the holy rites (called Svastyayana [4]) for his safe journey, the Brāhmaṇa bade him farewell. He got into a flower-bedecked chariot along with trustworthy emissaries.

Then, O Brāhmaṇas, seated in the middle of the chariot that Brāhmaṇa Vidyāpati thought thus in his mind:

57. ‘Oh! my life is fruitful. My night has dawned into a fine morning since I will be viewing the lotus-like face of the Lord that dispels sins.

58-59. Ascetics strive day and night through various means beginning with Śravaṇa (listening) etc. and then see the Lord dwelling in (their) lotus-like heart. i will now see that Discus-bearing Lord directly, the Lord who is residing on the peak of the Nīla mountain, who holds a physical form but who dispels all connections with physical bodies.

60. It is not possible to fix and visualize the form of the Lord through the words of Śruti , Smṛti , Itihāsas and Purāṇas . I will now see that extraordinary form of the Storehouse of Fortune and cross the ocean of worldly existence.

61. To-day I will directly visualize that Lord of the universe who is incomprehensible and immeasurable, who dwells on the mountain and by glorifying whose names the three groups of sins 2 of those who remember him perish. [5]

62. In the case of one who does not meditate on the lotus-like feet of the Lord, the abundant darkness that has settled in his soul does not perish through his Karmas . At every step he will be acquiring more and more misery.

63. The Vedāntic passages say that one may propitiate the subtle spirit dwelling in the soul encased in five sheaths (i.e. those of Anna , Prāṇa etc.) and enclosed in its own cavity, but one may not realize it. I salute that Primordial Being that can be realized only by its own Vidyā (knowledge).

64. I seek refuge in that Lord of the entire universe, each of whose bodily hair supports a Cosmic Egg, who has a thousand (innumerable) heads, feet and eyes, who is ancient and eternal and from whose breath the mass of the Vedas has come out.

65-66. I seek refuge in that Lord who has Praṇava (Oṃkāra) for his body, who is devoid of all despicable forms fashioned or superimposed and through whose Māyā this illusory visible world has been created with creation, sustenance and annihilation as its nature. I will directly view that Lord near whom a being of the lower order came casually for the sake of quenching its thirst and attained the Sārūpya type of salvation with that very body.

67. Ah! How wonderful it is that one merit of mine acquired in the course of a crore of lives has cropped up indicating my good luck! With these mortal eyes I will see the bulbous root (i.e. cause) of the universe.'

68. Thinking thus, with a delighted mind, the Brāhmaṇa did not notice that a long distance had been covered, thanks to the speed of the chariot.

69-70. After midday had passed and a greater part of the day yet remained, the land named Oḍhra was seen ahead on the way itself. O Brāhmaṇas, this land is an ornament unto the universe. [6] It sanctifies the sphere of the earth.

Thus observing forest regions, mountains, forts etc. on the way he reached the banks of Mahānadī [7] at the time of sunset.

71. The Brāhmaṇa got down from the chariot and performed the daily religious rites with sincerity. After performing the evening Sandhyā prayer he meditated on the Slayer of Madhu .

72-75. He spent the night within the chariot itself Early in the morning, he concluded his daily religious rites and hurriedly crossed Mahānadī.

Contemplating on Govinda as he was seated in the chariot, he set out. On the way he saw, O Brāhmaṇas, the villages of those well-versed in Vedas, who performed Yajñas and were of fiery splendour. The villages were adorned with areca palms. After passing through the Ekāmraka forest [8] the Brāhmaṇa saw the people holding a conch, a discus, an iron-club and a lotus. He thought as though he had taken a new birth and had adopted a divine form.

76. He immediately got down from the chariot and prostrated with eight limbs touching the ground. His eyes became filled with tears of joy. He did not see anything else.

77-78. O Brāhmaṇas, he saw Viṣṇu mentally and externally. He proceeded thus seeing, meditating on and eulogizing Hari . He saw the Nīla mountain covered with forests and adorned with Kalpa and banyan trees. It scraped the sky and destroyed the sins of those who visit it.

79-80. It is the extremely wonderful abode of Hari in embodied form. Climbing on to the top of the mountain, the Brāhmaṇa who was eager to see Mukunda , sought the path all round but could not see one. Therefore he spread Darbha grass on the ground, and controlling his speech slept there.

81. For the vision of the Lord, he sought refuge in him alone. Thereupon he heard a superhuman speech behind the mountain.

82-84. It was the voice of those who were talking together on the subject of devotion to the Lord. Therefore, Vidyāpati became delighted and followed the voice, O Brāhmaṇas. He saw the seat of lighting of the holy shrine? [9] It was known as Śabaradīpaka. All round, it was surrounded by the houses of Śabaras (hunters). The Brāhmaṇa went there slowly and entered the premises with great humility. (There) he saw those devotees of Viṣṇu holding conch, discus and iron-club.

85-88. The Brāhmaṇa bowed down his head and stood there with palms joined in reverence. Then a Śabara called Viśvāvasu , whose body was covered with grey hair and who had completed the worship of Hari, came out from the middle of the mountain that very moment. He appeared splendid with the remnants of the worship (in his hand). On seeing him the Brāhmaṇa was delighted. He thought thus: 'This leading devotee of Viṣṇu has come here from the abode of Hari. He is tired. He is bedecked with the remnants of the worship. From him I shall get the rare details of Viṣṇu.'

Even as the Brāhmaṇa was thinking thus, he was addressed by the Śabara:

The Śabara said :

89-90. From where have you come to this impassable forest region? You are extremely tired with hunger and thirst. Be pleased to sit here comfortably for a long time.

He gave him Pādya and a seat as well as Arghya . Viśvāvasu then said to the Brāhmaṇa with humility in his speech, explaining the thing under reference:

91-92. "How do you wish to sustain your life (i.e. satisfy your hunger)? O Brāhmaṇa, with fruits or with cooked food? Whatever is liked by you will be given to you by me, O Brāhmaṇa. It is my good luck, O holy lord. My life has become fruitful since you have come to my house like another Viṣṇu himself."

93-99. As the Śabara said this, the eminent Brāhmaṇa said to him: "O great devotee of Viṣṇu, I have nothing to do with fruits or cooked food. O good Sir, see that the purpose for which I have come from a great distance is fulfilled. I am the priest of king Indradyumna, a resident of the city of Avantī. I have come here desirous of seeing Viṣṇu,

In front of the king there was an assemblage of pilgrims. At that time this was heard. In the context of Tirthas and holy spots, this was referred to by someone. This holy spot was mentioned in front of the king by a person with matted hair. That Brāhmaṇa mentioned everything in the proper order. It is for this purpose, O gentle Sir, that I have been sent by the anxious king, i.e. to see Hari Nīlamādhava dwelling here. Until I see the Lord and take the news to the king, I shall be observing fast surely. Hence, O gentle Sir, show Viṣṇu unto me."

[1]: [1] : Modern Ujjain. Old Purāṇas used it as the name of a country up to circa 200 CE. Avantī came to be known as Mālava after 700-800 CE (AGP 158-59). The mention of Mālava as a country here shows that this portion of the Purāṇa was composed after 700-800.

[2]: [2] : The idol of Vāsudeva may as well be of black stone as ‘ nīla ’ means ‘black’ also.

[3]: [3] : Jagannātha appears to be originally a god of a hill-people called Śabaras.

[4]: [4] : An expiatory rite to avert evil. Benedictory mantras are used therein.

[5]: [5] : Sins committed by thought, word and deed.

[6]: [6] : Such complimentary references to Oḍhra or Utkala (a part of Orissa) throughout the work and a eulogy of that land in one complete chapter (Ch. 6) calling it ‘a Bhūsvarga ’ (Heaven on earth), the ornament of the universe show that the author was a resident of Oḍhra.

[7]: [7] : A famous river in Orissa. Formerly it marked the border of Kaliṅga.

[8]: [8] : Forest area round modern Bhuvaneshvar.

[9]: [9] : Probably ‘the kṣetra shaped like a lamp’ (kṣetrasya dīpasaṃsthānam).

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-4. On being told thus by the Brāhmaṇa , the Śabara became worried. He thought thus: ‘ Janārdana who is kept secret is our means of sustenance. Our bad luck appears impending due to which he is to become known to all people. [1] If I do not show (Lord) to this Brāhmaṇa, he will curse me. A Brāhmaṇa is to be honoured by everyone, particularly when he is a guest. If his desires are not fulfilled, both the worlds of mine will be fruitless.

5-10. When this Lord vanishes, when Mādhava becomes invisible beneath the ground, King Indradyumna of exploits comparable to Indra , who is to go to the world of Brahmā along with his physical body, will come here along with his subjects and perform a hundred horse-sacrifices. He will install the four forms of Viṣṇu in wood. If the Brāhmaṇa-guest be highly fortunate, the disappearance of the Lord will be imminent. Hence I will show him Acyuta of Nīlendramaṇi (having the colour of blue sapphire). When a duty has been ordained by fate, no manly effort to avert it is advisable.’

(Pondering over this repeatedly) in his mind the Śabara said to the Brāhmaṇa who was meditating on the immutableViṣṇu in front:

The Śabara said :

11. The news that King Indradyumna will come and reside here has already been (traditionally) heard by us before.

12. You are more fortunate than he, because, O Brāhmaṇa, you will be seeing Nīlamādhava (directly) even prior to him. Come. Let us go to the ridge.

13-16. After saying this, he grasped him by the hand and went to the forest along the path. He climbed up and up along the rugged and rocky path full of difficulties. Only one man could walk along that path at a time. The way was even more difficult to traverse on account of thorns. As the path was neatly enveloped in darkness he guided the Brāhmaṇa by oral directions.

Within two Muhūrtas they reached the bank of the holy tank Rauhiṇa . On seeing it he said to the Brāhmaṇa, “O excellent Brāhmaṇa, this tank is a great Tīrtha named Rauhiṇa. It is the source of all waters. By taking holy bath here one goes to the abode of Lord Viṣṇu, O Brāhmaṇa.

17. To the east of it there is the great Banyan tree like the Kalpa tree with plenty of shade. One who comes within the shade of this tree dispels the sin of Brāhmaṇa-slaughter.

18. Between these two, inside the bushy growth of trees, see directly the Lord of the universe expounded in the Vedāntas .

19. By having a view of him you shall shed off the mass of your sins. After this you will have no grief of falling into the ocean of worldly existence.”

Jaimini said :

20-21. The Brāhmaṇa took his holy bath in the Kuṇḍa . Highly delighted in his mind, the extremely intelligent one bent down and lowered his head from a distance. Mentally and verbally he eulogized Hari with concentration and words choked with delight.

Vidyāpati said :

22. O Puruṣa beyond Pradhāna , O all-pervading one, O Lord greater than the greatest, O Lord transforming yourself into the mobile and immobile beings, O highest reality, obeisance to you.

23. O Lord of the universe, you are the only person worthy of being propitiated by means of all holy rites laid down in Śrutis , Smṛtis , Purāṇas and Itihāsas .

24-25. O Supreme Lord, it is from you that the whole of this universe is evolved at the time of creation. O God, it has you as its support and it is protected by you alone. At the end of the Kalpa everything is withdrawn in the space in your belly and it stays there comfortably. [2] O Soul of all, O Immanent Soul, obeisance to you.

26. Salute to you, the Lord of Devas ; obeisance to you in the form of the Trayī (three Vedas). Hail to you who always illuminate the universe (assuming) the forms of the Sun, the Moon etc!

27. Obeisance to that sanctifier due to the contact with whose lotus-like feet Gaṅgā becomes filled with all the Tīrthas and purifies all the worlds.

28. Hail to you who enliven the universe and transform the Havis (ghee offerings in sacrifices) that have been sanctified by Mantras and been duly poured in the (sacred) fires!

29. Obeisance to that Ātman (Soul) identical with Brahman , who is devoid of all blemishes and is an embodiment of bliss, on a part of whom all the worlds subsist.

30. Hail to you, the witness unto the universe, to the form free from impurities, to the Lord of auspicious forms, who are the master of Māyā and devoid of all attachments!

31. Obeisance to you who have all forms, have many (innumerable) feet, eyes, heads, mouths and arms, who conquer everything and who have the forms of all Jīvas .

32. Obeisance to you, O lover of Kamalā (Lakṣmī). Bow to you, O lotus-seated one; obeisance, O Lord with eyes like petals of lotus; save me, O Puruṣottama .

33. Redeem me from this multitude of miseries of worldly existence. I am suffering by transmigrating in this worthless world. I am harassed by ailments and griefs. I have sought refuge in your lotus-like feet.

Jaimini said :

34-35. After thus eulogizing the Lord of Suras , who has Praṇava (Oṃ) for his form, the Brāhmaṇa bowed down in front of Hari and repeated the Praṇava Mantra . At the end of his Japa he became calm in his mind. With palms joined in reverence he approached the Lord and stood thinking his objects as being achieved and blessed. Then the Śabara spoke to the Brāhmaṇa:

Viśvāvasu said :

36. O eminent Brāhmaṇa, you are satisfied on seeing the Lord now. It is the close of the day. We shall go home. You are hungry and tired.

37. Residence in the forest suits wild animals. It is not proper for us to stay here. While there is yet sunlight, let us go home.

38. After saying thus, the Śabara caught hold of the hand of the Brāhmaṇa and returned to his hermitage hurriedly, O excellent Brāhmaṇas .

39. Meditating upon the Lord of the universe, the ocean of bliss, the Brāhmaṇa was not at all aware of the pain of hunger, thirst and exhaustion.

40. On account of his joy and indifference to (his) physical body, he did not feel pain when he walked on the uneven and rugged rocky path, very difficult to tread upon on account of a great deal of thorns as well.

41. Going thus, the Brāhmaṇa and the Śabara, both great devotees of Viṣṇu, reached the abode of Śabaras in the evening.

42. There the excellent Śabara duly honoured the Brāhmaṇa who had come as a guest by means of different kinds of dishes.

43. He became satisfied with the royal welcome, honour and services offered by him. He became surprised very much at the rare hospitality of the Śabara.

44-46. ‘This Śabara lives in the heart of the forest full of difficulties and inconveniences. He sustains himself with the products of the forest. How then did these dishes befitting kings become available within his house? It is a great mystery.’

As the Brāhmaṇa was wondering thus, the Śabara spoke to him with great humility.

The Śabara said :

47-50. O Brāhmaṇa, have you been relieved of your weariness? Have you got rid of your hunger and thirst? How can city-dwellers get comfort and happiness in the house of forest-dwellers? The customs and manners of city-dwellers are not known to others, especially to Śabaras. Among the persons who live in a royal palace the minister and the priest of a king are the most superior ones. Between these two, the priest should be revered like the king himself. This is approved by the scriptural texts. King Indradyumna is a powerful Emperor. If you are satisfied, O Brāhmaṇa, he will certainly be satisfied.

When the forest-dweller said thus, the Brāhmaṇa became more pleased. He lovingly spoke these words to the Śabara who spoke with wonderful humility:

Vidyāpati said :

51-52. O gentle one, for serving me you have brought superhuman and divine objects not seen even by kings. It is surprising that these divine objects could be in store in the abode of a Śabara. I have increasing curiosity to know this, O gentle one.

The Śabara replied :

53. My mind is not very enthusiastic to reveal this, O Brāhmaṇa. Still because of our devotion to you as guest, O excellent Brāhmaṇa, I shall tell you.

54-59a. Every day, O Brāhmaṇa, multitudes of Devas including Śakra come here taking divine articles of worship and services with them, for worshipping the Lord of the universe. After worshipping the Lord of the universe, after eulogizing and bowing down to him with devotion, they propitiate Puruṣottama by means of vocal songs, instrumental music and dances. Then the excellent Suras return to heaven. These divine articles given to you are the Nirmālyas (i.e. remnants of the worship) of the Lord of the universe. You are a learned man. How is it that you are surprised? It is because we have been subsisting on the Nirmālyas of Viṣṇu that we are devoid of ailments and old age. All of us are staying here along with our sons and kinsmen with our life span extending to ten thousand years. By consuming the Nirmālya of Viṣṇu the mass of sins perishes. It is not surprising, O excellent Brāhmaṇa, that one shall attain liberation thereby.

59b-63a. On hearing about this rare achievement the Brāhmaṇa experienced a thrill. His eyes became full of tears of joy. He considered himself blessed: 'Ah, this person born as Śabara (can) sees the immutable Lord. Day and night he enjoys the divine pleasures by (subsisting on) the leavings (remnants of offerings) of the Lord. There is none else in the world consisting of the mobile and immobile beings, who can be considered equal to him. There is no other devotee of Viṣṇu on a par with this Śabara of the Nīla mountain. Of what avail is going back home now? Family is a cause of unpleasantness. I shall become an intimate friend of this (Śabara) and shall stay here in the forest region.'

63b-67a. The Brāhmaṇa whose mind was devotedly attached to Śrīkṛṣṇa spoke once more to the Śabara: "If you wish to bless me, O gentle one, my great resolve is that I should form a close friendship with you. Of what use is returning and carrying on the service of the king, which is the cause of unhappiness in the other world? I shall stay here and worship the Slayer of Madhu . Thereby, I shall strive to prevent a subsequent embodiment (i.e. birth) of my soul. Very well, friend! It is my good luck that I have come into contact with you. Thanks to your favour, I shall cross the ocean of worldly existence that is very difficult to cross.

67b-72. They praise this as an essential thing in this ocean of worldly existence, viz. the friendship with a devotee of Viṣṇu, which takes one across the ocean of misery. By association with the friend, Lord Puṇḍarīkākṣa (Lotus-eyed Lord Viṣṇu) holding the conch, discus and iron club becomes visible once again. When I return, O friend, King Indradyumna will reside here itself in order to propitiate the Lord. He is desirous of building a big Mansion (temple) there pleasing to the Lord. It has been a great vow of the king that he would do a thousand (kinds of) services for the worship of the Lord. This has been promised in his presence. Hence grant me lovingly this permission."

The Śabara said :

73-79. O friend, a traditional legend like that is well-known here. You have said, Indradyumna will come here. But the king will not see Mādhava. Ere long the Lord will be covered with golden sands. The Lord has promised this to Yama that he will vanish. It is a great luck that you are able to perceive the Lord. If the arrival of Indradyumna is imminent, the Lord shall certainly vanish. But, O friend, this fact should not be mentioned by you in front of the king.

After coming here if the king does not see the great Lord, he will undertake a fast unto death. He will then see Gadādhara in a dream. At his behest he will install four wooden idols of the Lord. He will then worship them. As long as the idol is present here our family shall also be present, thanks to the blessings of the Lord. There is no doubt about this.

80-82. Hence, my friend, do not feel sorry in this respect. Everything will be carried out quickly. Now, friend, sleep soundly. In the morning we shall see the Lord in the form (of an idol of) blue sapphire after taking bath in the ocean. We shall find out a place fit for the stay of the king on its shore as you desire, O my friend.

83-86. After discussing this and other things and narrating splendid stories to each other, they slept on a bed of tender leaves and sprouts in a splendid place.

When the day dawned, they took bath in the Tīrtharāja 's waters in accordance with the injunctions, bowed down to Mādhava and found out a place for the residence of the king. He took leave of his friend. In accordance with the directions of the king, the Brāhmaṇa got into the chariot and returned to the city of Avantī .

[1]: [1] : The Śabara correctly and helplessly anticipates the danger that a new advanced culture is going to swallow up the simple primitive culture of the aboriginal Śabaras.

[2]: [2] : It is believed that when at the end of the Kalpa the universe is destroyed externally, actually it is taken in the belly of the Lord where with its mobile and immobile beings it remains intact.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-8a. When the Brāhmaṇa returned in the evening and when (the place) was crowded with Suras , at the time of the worship of Mādhava , a violent gust of wind blew. It scattered the golden sand everywhere. Thereby the eyes of the Devas became afflicted and they were unable to see Śrīkānta . Then, O Brāhmaṇas , they meditated on Puruṣottama . Those heaven-dwellers remained steady for a Muhūrta in meditation. At the conclusion of their meditation they saw the heap of sand particles and not Mādhava, Nor did they see even Rauhiṇa Kuṇḍa . [1] Then they became agitated. They became extremely anxious and lamented much: “Alas! Alas! What a great misfortune has befallen us all of a sudden! Śrīśa (the Lord of Śrī) who is charming unto the eyes became invisible within a moment. O Puruṣottama, what is the fault that has been seen in us? You have abandoned all your servants simultaneously. You are not to be seen. It is for our sake, O Lord of the universe, that you adopted a physical body. Why do you then leave us helpless in the forest?

8b-16. O Lotus-eyed One, you have abandoned us who are only the glorious powers of your own person. Why do you render us, the heaven-dwellers, as good as dead all of a sudden?

It is because we constitute your own parts that all those who perform Yajñas worship us for propitiating you, O Yajñapuruṣa (Lord, the personification of Yajña). We grant the benefits as directed by you. Your own (Cosmic) Ego forms our body. We sustain ourselves by means of your blessings.

(We are afraid) where are we to flee now that you have become indifferent to us. Of what avail are our abodes in the firmament without being able to see you, O Mādhava?

Without you we shall be unsuccessful and unhappy, roaming about in wilderness. Your face is like the full moon without the spot. It exudes exquisite beauty and happiness. If we are not going to see your face, we shall not go to the heavenly abode. We shall undertake a great penance and stay here itself, observing all holy rites. We shall subsist on the products of the forest. We will grow matted hair and put on bark garments until we can see you, O Lotus-eyed One.

O ocean of natural sympathy and mercy, it behoves you to save us, the wretched ones. We are helpless and in a dejected state of mind. We have resorted to you alone as our refuge.

Being unable to see you, we are sinking in the ocean consisting of grief only. O Lord of the universe, redeem us by means of your auspicious, benign glance acting like a boat.”

17. Even as all the heaven-dwellers were talking thus (incoherently) an unembodied speech issued forth:

18-19. “In this matter, O Suras, it does not behove you to engage yourselves in futile efforts. From now onwards the vision of the Lord will be very difficult to get on the earth. One shall attain the same benefit of direct vision by bowing down to this place (where the Lord was originally). Go to Brahmā and know the exact reason.”

20-25. On hearing it all the Devas approached Brahmā. When they heard the details of the blessings of Yama and the incarnation of the wooden form, all of them were satisfied in their mind and returned to heaven.

The Brāhmaṇa Vidyāpati who got into the chariot thought thus: ‘My purpose has been achieved, since Nīlamādhava was seen. I shall go all round this holy spot and observe. I shall circumambulate this excellent holy spot named Śrīpuruṣottama which has not been visited before. It is exceedingly meritorious and its glorification dispels sins and impurities. I shall then go away quickly.

My friend has advised me that this holy spot on the shore of the sea is adorned by the Nīla Mountain. Those who circumambulate the forest that dispels all sins acquire hundred times the benefit that one gets by circumambulating the earth.'

After thinking thus, the excellent Brāhmaṇa wandered all over the holy spot observing the forest full of different kinds of trees.

26. It was resounded with the chirping of the different kinds of birds. The humming bees hovered there. The sun's rays did not penetrate it. It was full of groves of shady trees.

27. It was full of the flowers of all the seasons. It had been rendered splendid by creepers, bowers and hedges. It was noisy with the quacking of ducks and the cackling of geese in their different watery resorts.

28. It shone with red lotuses, white lotuses, lilies and full-blown blue lotuses. Neither the water nor the creepers etc. were without flowers.

29. After circumambulating the holy spot quickly, the excellent Brāhmaṇa proceeded ahead observing fast and meditating. The intelligent one reached Avantī by the close of the day.

30. Even while he was far off, the messengers had informed the king about his arrival, O Brāhmaṇas. On hearing it King Indradyumna became exceedingly pleased.

31. After worshipping Janārdana he sat there with a delighted mind along with the learned Brāhmaṇas eagerly waiting for his arrival.

32-34. In the meantime, O Brāhmaṇas, that Vidyāpati hurriedly entered and came in front of the king. The pathway was ceremoniously shown to him by the ushers with canes in their hands, while the gatekeepers went ahead (of him). He was followed by the curious and enthusiastic citizens. He had kept the excellent Nirmālya of the deity called Nīla Mādhava in his hand.

On seeing him the king got up from his excellent seat. Saying "O Lord of the universe, be pleased", he approached him.

35-41. "Today my life has become fruitful by realizing the Karma of this birth, because I see Mādhava here in the form of this Nirmālya garland.

I bow down to the garland that has surpassed the fine fragrance of the celestial trees through the acquisition of a matchless perfume from the head of Mukunda . It (the garland) has made the swarm of bees blind and has destroyed the sins of all the worlds by means of its sweet scent wafted by the wind.

I bow down to the garland consisting of the flowers that have come into contact with the brilliant unguent on the body of Viṣṇu , by coming into contact with the dust issuing from whose lotus-like feet Brahmā and others have attained great wealth.

(I bow down to that garland) which laughs at her co-wife Padmā (Lakṣmī) whose abode is (also) the lotus-like heart (of Viṣṇu) and which is proud of having stayed in the lap of Viṣṇu. (It appears to laugh) by means of the opening flowers.

Where did this brilliant garland stay and acquire greatness (as a result of which) it stayed on the body of the Lord, the storehouse of fortune and prosperity, for a long time pervading (encircling) all his limbs?

Be victorious (O Lord), an ornament unto the peak of the Nīla Mountain, O glorious (Lord) who dispels sins and agony of those who bow down. Save me. I have sought refuge in you."

Saying thus in words choked with tears, the king bowed down his head (till it touched) the ground. He experienced a thrill.

42-47. The Brāhmaṇa Vidyāpati who had destroyed all his sins, stood in front of the king in a divine body meditating on Mādhava.

With his refulgence the highly intelligent one (seemed) to wash off the sins of all the worlds. He spoke thus: “May the Lord whose abode is on the summit of Nīla Mountain bless you. This is the command of the Lord of Śrī, revealed in the form of this garland. You are to visit him who is abiding in the excellent holy spot. He is the bestower of salvation directly.”

Having spoken thus, he put the garland round the neck of the king. The king got up and on seeing the garland suspended over his chest, considered that the Lover of Śrī had directly come to his heart. He placed both the hands on his own head with half-closed eyes. With his face wet with tears of joy he eulogized Han.

Indradyumna prayed :

48. Be victorious, O Lord who are skilled in the art of creation, sustenance and annihilation of all the worlds, who have sportingly assumed the Cosmic Body and who bear the burden of as many Cosmic Eggs as there are hairs (on your body).

49-51. O Immanent Soul of all, O Lord, the dispeller of the agony of those who bow down (to you), O Lord whose lotus-like feet have become variegated due to the crowns of Brahmā, Indra and Rudra , O Lord, always interested in saving the wretched, the helpless and those who have fallen into adversity, O ocean of the waters of sympathy that is genuine (never pretended), O Lord greater than the greatest, O Lord of the universe, O Lord ever affectionate to your devotees, save me, the miserable one. I have you alone as my refuge. I am completely overpowered by the primordial Nescience (Avidyā).”

52-56. After eulogizing thus, the king sat on his throne. He was surrounded by householders, religious students, ascetics and forest-dwellers.

He honoured and revered Vidyāpati in the company of Brāhmaṇas who had performed Yajñas and were well-versed in the eighteen Vidyās (lores) and who were in the company of many old servants whose leaders were the ministers and (who sat there) silent.

The king made Vidyāpati sit on a high pedestal of honour and asked him the full details beginning with enquiry about his welfare.

With joy and very great attention he enquired about the greatness and features of the holy spot Puruṣottama and of Viṣṇu with blue sapphire for his body.

On being asked about his own experience by the Kṣatriya , the Brāhmaṇa narrated in detail (all his activities) beginning with the entry into the island of Bhillas and ending with the plunge into the ocean. He gave full report about the excellent holy spot.

57-59. He mentioned everything in due order such as the climbing of the Nīla Mountain, the viewing of Nīlamādhava, the holy bath in the Rauhiṇa Kuṇḍa, the greatness of the Banyan tree, the eight beneficent deities such as Nṛsiṃha , the situation of the eight Śaktis and the length and extent of the holy spot as noticed (by him) while driving in the chariot.

60. On hearing that matchlessly wonderful story previously mentioned by that pilgrim, the king became extremely pleased. Delighted in his mind he spoke to him once again:

Indradyumna said :

61-62a. O holy lord, I heard from you what has been already heard. O excellent Brāhmaṇa, now describe unto me the form of Viṣṇu idol of blue sapphire. Describe it as it actually is.

Vidyāpati said :

62b-65. Verily, I shall describe to you the divine idol of the Lord of the universe. By seeing this idol with the ordinary mortal eye one becomes a person deserving salvation. This idol of blue sapphire is very ancient. It is worshipped everyday by Suras, the leaders among whom are Brahmā, Rudra and Indra.

This divine garland is put (on the idol) by Devas in the course of their worship. It never fades, nor is it devoid of its fragrance. Even when many days have passed, this garland is still like this. This garland has originated from the earth.

66. I have destroyed all my sins by eating the divine presents and offerings as well as the Nirmālya, O king. Don't you notice that I have a superhuman splendour?

67. Even if it is swallowed once, hunger, thirst and weakness never harass one. The unseen can be inferred by means of what is seen.

68-69. O king, both worldly pleasures and salvation are present there simultaneously. Old age, ailment, grief and other miseries have no place there. It is the place where the Lord of the universe is directly present. The Lord has a delightful, beaming face. His eyes resemble petals of a full-blown blue lotus. He bestows immortality and salvation on those who resort to him.

[1]: [1] : This might be factually correct. The Coromandal Coast (including the coast of Orissa) is devastated with stormy winds every few years. The small stone idol of those primitive people must have disappeared under some sand-dune. The total disappearance of Rauhiṇa pond shows that the storm was very powerful.

English translation

Indradyumna said :

1. Ever since your birth, O excellent Brāhmaṇa , you have never been there. How did you come to know of the divine information (visit of gods etc.) in Puruṣottama ?

Vidyāpati said :

2. There I stood in the evening after approaching the Lord. At that time a cool wind of divine fragrance blew there.

3. A confused noise rose up and was heard from the sky. Gradually it turned out to be a meaningful sound in the form of letters such as “Go, proceed ahead”.

4-9a. In the vicinity of Vaikuṇṭha (i.e. Viṣṇu), the assemblage (of Devas) took place, O king, after the mountain had been covered with a shower of flowers by the heavenly beings.

There was an unprecedented sound of lutes, flutes , Mṛdaṅga drums and clapping of hands marking time in music. It got mixed with divine songs.

A thousand presents and offerings were made by the Devas for the propitiation of the Supreme Lord. None of them had ever been visible to men before.

The Devas who could be known only by their hands (i.e. only the hands were seen) duly worshipped the Lord. They delighted the Slayer of Madhu by means of eulogies along with shouts of “Be victorious”. Then they (gods) returned to heaven in the same way as they came from it.

After they had departed, my Śabara friend Viśvāvasu gave me the divine food offerings and this garland.

9b-18a. It is invaluable. It never fades. It bestows prosperity, kingship and happiness. It dispels misfortunes, sins and evil spirits. As it is befitting (to you), it has been brought by me.

Listen to the situation of the excellent holy spot of Viṣṇu. Unprecedented skill in workmanship is evident in this pleasing form. It cannot be (adequately) described by a person born on this earth. It has been seen because of your good fortune and manliness. I shall describe it.

This holy spot has the Nīla mountain as its chief centre. All round it is overspread with forests. It is well-known that its extent is five Krośas (i.e. 5 x 3 = 15 Kms.). It is on the shore of the Tīrtharāja (the ocean) there. It is covered with golden sands.

On the peak of the mountain, there is a large, lofty Banyan tree that is destined to be there for the period of a Kalpa . It extends to three Kilometers. It is devoid of fruits and flowers but is brilliant with sprouts. When the sun moves, its shade does not move.

To the west of it is the Kuṇḍa named Rohiṇa . From the surface of water it is adorned with a flight of steps of blue stone. All the four sides outside it there are paved with crystals. It is very charming and is filled with waters that dispel masses of sins.

In the middle of the eastern platform, in the cool shade of the holy fig tree, there is the Lord holding the discus and the iron club made of blue sapphire-gems.

18b-25a. (The idol) measures eighty-one Aṅgulas (about 2 metres) and is stationed on a golden lotus.

The region of his forehead surpassed the beauty of the crescent moon of the eighth lunar day. His eyes (as if) attempt to censure (denigrate) the splendour of a pair of smiling blue lotuses. He dispels the three types of ever increasing distresses by means of the nectar-rayed moon of his face. He appears very splendid with his nostrils which are like a shining flower of gingelly plant.

Though his body is made of stone, excellent smile bathes his lips. The chin along with the jawbone appears exceedingly charming on account of the cheeks beaming with laughter.

The two corners of the mouth have an unprecedented setup. Dimples are formed in the cheeks due to laughter. The chin and the splendid corners of the mouth are held as models for such (heavenly) artisans as Viśvakarman and others by the Lord.

On either of his ears there is an ear-ring shaped like Makara (crocodile). The face in between these two ear-rings laughs at (i.e. surpasses) the full moon in between Jupiter and Venus (i.e. with these planets on either side).

Through his neck that increases the beauty of his neck ornament, he gives those who look at it, the suspicion that the conch with right-handed curls has given birth to pearls.

25b-30. His shoulders are thick and large. He has four long arms stretching as far as the knees. The region of the chest of the Lord sparkles with white spotless necklaces. There he holds the fourteen worlds reflected in his divine Kaustubha gem.

He is handsome with a small hair line entering the depressed navel as though it were a deep pool. He renders the necklace immovable by the waist having three folds of skin above the navel.

With the waistband studded with jewels and having small bells suspended along with the pearl necklace the buttocks of the Lord shine like leafy cups of beauty of all the worlds.

The pair of pillar-like calves, rendered splendid by means of the pearl necklace hanging down as far as the loins and the yellow robes, supports the auspicious festoons of salvation.

The two feet of the Lord shine on account of the circular and symmetrical knees, the gem-set anklets as well as the garland extending to the forepart of the feet.

31-36. (Defective text) The Lord is adorned with necklaces, bracelets, armlets, crown etc. Lord Keśava wields the discus, the lotus, the iron mace and the conch which are the products of perfect knowledge, Cosmic Ego, Supreme majesty and Śabda-brahman (Vedas or Oṃkāra or verbal expression of Supreme Knowledge). He illuminates all the cardinal points. Thus he is installed on the Nīla mountain.

By devoutly bowing down to him and seeing him one is liberated from the bondage of the physical body.

Lakṣmī who occupies his left side is embraced by the Lord holding a lotus in his hand. She is engaged in playing on the lute with her eyes fixed to the face of the Lord. She is the abode of all beauty and is adorned with all ornaments.

I saw those two, the parents of the universe, stationed on the mountain. They are silent. With their smiling eyes they bless all those who view them. As they bless all living beings, I thought them to be alive. Śeṣa with his many hoods forming an umbrella is stationed behind them.

37. In front (the Discus) Sudarśana was seen assuming an embodied form. Behind him I saw Garuḍa stationed with palms joined in reverence.

38. Having seen directly that Lord of Śrī, of wonderful form and features like this, my mind runs back to that place as though dragged with ropes.

39. Only that man who has acquired excellent Karmas in the course of many thousands of births and has all of them ripened simultaneously, sees the Lord.

40. No man is competent to have the vision of Puruṣottama of this nature even by means of holy baths in Tīrthas , austerities, charitable gifts, sacrifices to gods and other holy rites.

41. Those who meditate upon Viṣṇu abiding in the holy place of Puruṣottama, whose form is dark-complexioned and who resembles the sky free from impurities (like clouds etc.) get their bonds cut. They (then) enter the city of Viṣṇu, after attaining which no one feels any grief.

42. If the different kinds of benefits of a man's Karmas brought about by all the eighteen lores are concentrated together, they can come up to a hundredth part (of the bliss) of the vision of Viṣṇu.

43. What more needs to be spoken in this matter, O king? Such is the greatness of the ground of that holy place that whatever be the extent of things coveted by a man's mind, he will acquire all of them and even more, if he merely bows down to the Lord of the Nīla mountain.

44. Only he by whom the Lord of the Nīla mountain has been seen is a donor, performer of sacrifices, speaker of truth, one of pious and righteous conduct—he is the most excellent one in all good qualities and all births.

45. O king, this greatness has been known by me from those attendants of Mādhava , the Lord of the universe, who are present there.

46. In this context the ancient (yet) well known ancedote of the primordial creation coming down by tradition has been heard by me. It is only after that I have come here.

47. At your behest I went there and visited Śrī Puruṣottama. (Everything) has been reported to you. Do whatever you desire to do now.

Indradyumna said :

48-53. I am satisfied (and feel my objects accomplished) on hearing about the Lord's form that dispels sins, from you whose words are trustworthy. O holy Lord, due to my contact with the divine Nirmālya my sins acquired in the course of many births have been destroyed. Now I have become a person desiring the vision of the Lord of Śrī. I shall whole-heartedly go there along with the flourishing kingdom. I shall make residence there and build cities and forts.

In order to propitiate the Enemy of Mura I shall perform a horse-sacrifice. Everyday I will worship Śrīnātha (Viṣṇu) with a hundred presents and offerings. I shall propitiate the Sire of the universe by means of holy rites, fasts and other pious observances.

When the Lord will be eulogized by me thus with faithful devotion, the omnipresent Lord Nārāyaṇa who is merciful and considerate towards the wretched will shower with nectarine words me who have become distressed.

54-58. Nārada who is (ever) curious to survey the worlds came there. On seeing that sage, the son of Brahmā , the foremost among the followers of Viṣṇu, coming, the king then hoped that his purpose would be realised.

He got up promptly and received him with the formalities of offering Pādya (water to wash the feet), Arghya (materials of worship) and Ācamanīya (water for formal sipping). With palms joined in reverence he spoke to the sage who was seated in an excellent seat the following words:

Indradyumna said :

Today my Yajñas , charitable gifts, study of the Vedas and penance have become fruitful, since the alter ego of Brahmā has come to my abode.

O sage, even though I am satisfied with your blessing in the form of a visit, what behest of yours shall I carry out for pleading you? What is the purpose for which my abode has been sanctified by you?

Jaimini said :

59. On hearing the words of the king which were tender and full of devotion and humility, the son of Brahmā spoke to the king smilingly:

Nārada said :

60. O Indradyumna , the most excellent one among kings, Devas, Siddhas and sages along with Brahmā have become pleased with the mass of your flawless qualities.

61. Each of your good qualities is well-founded and makes you worthy enough to remain in the abode of Brahmā. They severally qualify you for it and are desirable ones.

62. I got down (to the earth) to see Nara residing in the hermitage of Badarikāśrama . At the time of meditation of him your endeavour like this has become known.

63-64a. O king, your endeavour is excellent, whereby your mind has been of such a (devotional) nature. O king, devotion unto Mādhava, the Lord of the world, whose abode is in a cave of mountain Nīla, is engendered by practice (of devotion) in a thousand births.

64b-65. By propitiating the Lord of the universe Brahmā of great intelligence created this universe and attained the position of grandfather. As you are born in his lineage, it is proper that your devotion should be such (intense).

66-67a. The devotion to Viṣṇu, the benefit of which is the accomplishment of the four major goals of life, is the result of no small austerity.

The beginningless primordial Nescience (Avidyā) which greatly heightens the five kinds of troubles, is firmly rooted (in man). The only remedy to annihilate (it) is devotion to Viṣṇu.

67b-69a. Devotion to Viṣṇu alone is the bestower of happiness on men who wander in the forest of worldly existence which is full of thorns in the form of miseries at every step.

To those who are sinking without support in the ocean of worldly existence where the Dvandvas (mutually opposite pairs) rise up like a violent storm and which is difficult to cross, devotion to Viṣṇu is proclaimed (in scriptures) as a boat.

69b-74. By resorting solely to the devotion to Viṣṇu, (which is like) a mother of exalted magnificence, good people are contented in their minds. They never grieve over (anything).

To those noble souls who are exceedingly delighted by drinking the nectar of devotion to Viṣṇu, attainment of the region of Brahmā is only a small benefit.

O king, the great mass of sins of living beings is of three types. In the great forest fire of devotion to Viṣṇu it is burnt like locusts.

Prayāga , Gaṅgā and other important Tīrthas, austerities, Aśvamedha (i.e. horse-sacrifice), the most excellent one among all sacrifices, great charitable gifts, observance of holy rites, fasts etc. even in thousands—if all these are gathered together and multiplied by crores and crores, that will not be equal to, it is proclaimed, a thousandth part of devotion to Viṣṇu.

Jaimini said :

75-76. On hearing about the greatness of devotion to Viṣṇu as explained by the Brahminical sage, the king became desirous of knowing the special nature of devotion to Viṣṇu. The king endowed with (the knowledge of) the use of means of hospitality, spoke these words to Nārada:

Indradyumna said :

77. The greatness of devotion to Viṣṇu has been excellently described (by you), O great sage. A desire to know its form and nature has been in my heart for a long time.

78. Describe the characteristic of Bhakti (Devotion), O eminent Vaiṣṇava (follower of Viṣṇu). In the whole of the earth there can be no one else who will explain it. This is known to me.

Nārada said :

79. What has been asked by you, O king, is perfectly sound. I shall recount to you the real characteristics of excellent devotion. You are the most excellent one of all persons eligible (to hear about) Bhakti .

80. This should never be spoken to an undeserving person, a blind one, an internally impure one. It is being recounted by me, O sinless one.

81. Listen to it attentively, O king. Listen to the eternal Bhakti in general and Bhakti to Viṣṇu in particular. [1]

82. ‘He (Viṣṇu) alone is the giver of absolute happiness and the breaker of the series of miseries.’ If any one thinks thus and resorts to him (the Lord), it is called Bhakti . It is of three types according to three Guṇas and (that which transcends these Guṇas and is thus) attributeless (Nirguṇa) is considered to be the fourth one.

83. The devotion of those who are overpowered by lust and anger and who do not see any other means shall be the Bhakti of Tāmasa variety, O king. It is conducive to the acquisition (of what they desire) as well as magical powers. 876

84. The devotion that is resorted to for gaining extraordinary fame or overpowering a rival or incidentally for enjoyment in the other worlds is known as the Bhakti of Rājasa variety.

85-86a. The devotion is of the Sāttvika variety when it is pursued by one who knows the transitoriness of the worldly objects of pleasure and the comparative permanence of those of the other world and who, without giving up the (religious) duties prescribed for one’s own caste and stage in life, resorts to devotion only for the sake of self-realization.

86b-90. 'The Lord of the universe himself (is identical with) this universe. There is no other cause (of this universe). I am not different from him. He does not abide separately from me. He is devoid of external attributes and adjuncts. He should be realized through an abundance of love.' This form of Bhakti is very difficult to attain. It is conducive to salvation. It is called Advaita (non-dualistic) devotion.

Devotees go to the abode of Brahman by means of Sāttvikī Bhakti ; to the world of Śakra (heaven) through the Rājasī Bhakti . After enjoying the pleasures (of the earth) the devotees of the Tāmasī Bhakti go to the world of Pitṛs . They return to Bhūrloka (Earth) and adopt a Bhakti other than the previous one. The devotee of Tāmasa variety adopts devotion of the Rājasa variety; and one of the Rājasa type adopts the Sāttvika variety. The devotee of Sāttvika type attains liberation after non-dualistic contemplation.

91-96. By resorting to any one of these the devotee should go to the path of salvation gradually.

To a person devoid of devotion to Viṣṇu all the holy rites ordained by the Śrutis and Smṛtis : the rites of atonement etc., pilgrimage to Tīrthas, Kṛcchra and other forms of penance, nobility of birth, skill in arts etc. are just like a worldly ornament. The only result thereof is pain and strain to the body as in the case of the infidelity of an adulteress.

Even if he is devoid of noble birth and traditional course of conduct, a person of steady devotion who has controlled the sense-organs, is worthy of being praised by the people of all worlds. But not so in the case of a person who possesses eighteen lores but is devoid of devotion, O excellent king. The same holds good in the case of a man of a good caste and holy rites.

Bhakti unto Viṣṇu is not engendered in a man of very little fortune. By acquiring Bhakti unto Viṣṇu with great effort, one has his objects achieved and he becomes blessed. He does not perish (spiritually).

That through which one knows the Lord of the universe is glorified as Vidyā (learning). That holy rite (Karma) which delights the Lord is destructive of inauspiciousness.

97-99 [2] . A man of steadfast holy rites possessing these two (i.e. Vidyā and Karma) is called a devotee of Viṣṇu. By the dust of his feet the whole universe including the mobile and immobile beings, is sanctified. He is competent to create, sustain and annihilate as he pleases. How insignificant then are the simple desires of worldly prosperity or heaven etc.!

There is no difference between these two, viz. Vāsudeva and his devotee. I shall tell you the characteristics of those who are devotees of Viṣṇu.

100-106a. They have calm minds. They are gentle towards all. They have conquered lust and the sense-organs. Mentally, verbally or physically they never desire to harass others. Their minds always melt with pity. They are averse to stealing and inflicting violence. Towards the good qualities of others they are favourably disposed. In activities for the sake of others they rejoice. They are refined and cultured with good conduct. Other's festivities are their own festivities. Without jealousy and rivalry (towards anyone) they see Vāsudeva abiding in all living beings. They are sympathetic with the wretched ones forever. They wish for other people's welfare very much. In the lavish presents and worship of kings they take as much interest as in fondling own sons.

They are afraid of external things (objects of pleasure etc.) as if of cobras. They have for Hari as much love as hundred crores of times the love for sensual objects entertained by persons lacking in discrimination.

They worship Śaṅkara and others with a sense of perpetual duty and they meditate upon them as on Viṣṇu and treat the Manes like forms of Viṣṇu.

106b-110. They do not see anyone as different from Viṣṇu, nor do they see Viṣṇu as being separate from other things. There is separateness in the individual form but there is no separateness in the collective form.

They think thus: 'O Lord of the universe, I am your servant and you are mine. We are not separate. Since the Lord is the immanent soul stationed in the heart of everyone, there is no one other than you as the served or the server.'

With this feeling of devotion, they attentively bow down to and always glorify Hari whose lotus-like feet are worthy of being saluted by the Lotus-born Lord (Brahmā). They consider worldly-minded persons as insignificant as blades of grass.

They are clever in rendering help to others always in all the worlds. They consider other people's welfare as their own. If others are afflicted, they are kind and compassionate to them. Vaiṣṇavas are indeed famous as persons with auspicious minds.

111. Vaiṣṇavas are reputed to have the same attitude towards all these: a piece of stone, other men's wealth or a lump of clay; other men's wives or Śālmalī trees with sharp thorns all over them; friends, enemies, brothers and kinsmen.

112. Vaiṣṇavas are famous as having pleasant faces on account of their numerous good qualities. They are ready to cover the weak and vulnerable points of others. They bestow ultimate happiness (on everyone). Their minds always dwell on the Lord. They speak sweet words.

113. Vaiṣṇavas consider the auspicious names of the Slayer of Kaṃsa as destructive of sins. They repeat them with clear and sweet tones. They repeatedly say, "Be victorious, be victorious". They are well known to be negligent of worldly wealth as useless.

114. Vaiṣṇavas are noted for their minds being fixed on the lotus-like pair of feet of Hari. Their intellects are apathetic (towards worldly affairs). They have the same appearance in happiness as well as in misery. They are clever in showing reverence to Hari in their own minds.

115. Vaiṣṇavas have their (limbs such as) shoulders, arms marked with (Viṣṇu's) discus, mace, lotus, conch. They wear as armour the dust particles taken from the feet of Viṣṇu after bowing down to Him. Such Vaiṣṇavas are victorious.

116. Vaiṣṇavas are victorious. They are beautiful with the requisite ornaments and forms through the exceedingly fragrant basil leaf, garland and sandal paste taken from the limb of the Conqueror of Mura in order to woo Mukti (salvation) as it were.

117. Vaiṣṇavas are victorious with false prestige and pride dropped from their pure minds; they are calm with Ahaṃkāra (egotism) perishing quickly; they have destroyed their griefs by worshipping Narahari (Man-Lion), the trustworthy kinsman of Devas.

118. The auspicious conduct and characteristics of those who have continuous devotion to the Lord have been spoken to you by us. By being listened to these will dispel the impurity of men acquired in the course of a very long time.

119. Wealth is never sought. Nor an antidote against a pain arising in the body. O mind, I shall give you only this, viz. the glorification of the name (of the Lord) in light and soft words and the worship thereof.

120. (As opposed to these) Avaiṣṇavas ('non-devotees of Viṣṇu') hate auspicious conduct of (other) men. They themselves indulge in evil conduct and evil thoughts in the minds. They are undisturbed even if great misfortune befalls them. They take delight in sexual enjoyment.

121. Those Avaiṣṇavas are inebriated. They do not resort to the Lord even for a moment, although he is the cause of supreme happiness and is present in the lotus of the heart. They always cover up the names of Hari by means of aimless, worthless and futile network of words.

122. They are always covetous of other men's young wives and wealṃ. They are miserly and always think of filling up their bellies. They invariably think (enviously?) of the greatness of others. Indeed those devoid of devotion to Viṣṇu are human brutes.

123. They are always attached to the company of ignoble persons. They are hideous and highly awful. They assail and hurt others violently. They are not inclined to remember the feet of Narahari. These dirty men are to be shunned from a great distance.

[1]: [1] : VV 81-96 give an exposition of Bhakti.

[2]: [2] : VV 97 onwards describe Vaiṣṇavas and their characteristics and the contrasts with non-Vaiṣṇavas.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1. On hearing about the excellent devotion to the Lord from Nārada , the son of Brahmā , thus, Indradyumna became highly pleased and spoke to him:

Indradyumna said :

2. Learned men have taught me that association with saintly people is destructive of the ailment of worldly existence. O holy Lord, that has happened to me just now.

3. Viṣṇu , the Supreme Soul, greater than the greatest, has been directly visualized by you. Who else can be a better saintly person than you? And you have come to my abode.

4. By your presence, O holy Lord, my darkness of ignorance has been dispelled. Therefore, my mind prompts me to worship Nīlamādhava.

5-6. Wandering over all the worlds you know the whole of the universe. Therefore, let us get into the chariot and visit Nīlamādhava, the splendid ornament unto the holy spot named Puruṣottama . Many have told me that there are many Tīrthas there. If I know them directly from your words, they will be fruitful to me.

Nārada said :

7. Well, I shall show you the holy place and the Tīrthas present in that sacred place. I shall point out Śakti - Śaṃbhus [1] and tell you about the greatness of the holy place.

8. You will directly see the Lord of Devas who bestows his own self on the devotee. You will see him quickly as he will be in fourfold form in order to bless you.

9-10. By visiting him a man becomes a worthy receptacle of devotion.

After concluding their dialogue thus, both of them became pleased and carried out their daily routine of duties. As an auspicious time favourable to the departure, they fixed the fifth day in the bright half of the lunar month Jyeṣṭha , which happened to be a Wednesday. During the night the king and Nārada slept in the same place.

11-16. Then, when the day dawned clearly, Indradyumna, the excellent king, made the following proclamation for the entire kingdom to set out for Nīlādri along with kinsmen and armies and their assets:

“It has been decided that all of us will stay there for the whole of our life. Everyone will continue the same work for livelihood as has been allotted to him here. Let the kings proceed along with their women, ministers and retinue, together with chariots, elephants, horses, foot-soldiers and treasury. Let them be fully equipped and ready. Let the Brāhmaṇas go there along with their sacrificial fires. Let the merchants and traders proceed with their utensils, wares and merchandise. (The following shall proceed:) Those who are experts in politics and statecraft; experts in (the maintenance of) royal highways; astrologers; astronomers; experts in dances; persons well conversant with administrative work and polity;

17-23. those who are experts in dancing, singing and four types of musical instruments; those who are very clever in the excellent science of medicine for treating elephants, horses and human beings; those who have practical experience in the eighteen Vidyās and ancillary subjects; those who have excellence in magic and allied arts; highway robbers; adventurous thieves; those who knock away things even as the victim stands and stares; those who maintain themselves by narrating strange and wonderful tales: those who specially speak agreeably; panegyrists; bards; those who maintain themselves by means of sacred treatises; those who give relief from pain; gamblers; harlots; courtesans; pimps, lechers (lecherous persons); husbandmen; those who breed cows, sheep, goats, camels and mules; those who keep birds; fowlers; those who keep monkeys, tigers, and panthers; snake-charmers; cowherds; hunters; barbarians of various tribes and all others born in the Mālava land who obey my commands. Let them all proceed to their abode on the Nīla mountain with their respective assets. Let them be ready to build their own houses”.

24. The king who waited impatiently for the time of the journey, commanded thus. Thereafter he joined Nārada and spoke these words to the astrologer:

25-30. “O astrologer, you have already fixed up the auspicious hour. Whatever is required at the moment in the opinion of the priest, bring all those auspicious articles readily.”

O excellent Brāhmaṇas, on being commanded by him that astrologer brought all the required auspicious articles with the assistance of the priest. In the meantime that saintly king sat on his divine throne.

At the outset, the sacred rite of ablution for the sake of (a safe) journey was conducted by the Brāhmaṇas. Separate ablutions were performed repeating the different Sūktas [2] (hymns), viz. Śrī Sūkta , Vahni Sūkta , Varuṇa Sūkta , Pavamānya Sūkta and Abdhi Sūkta . All of them are contributory to increased auspiciousness. The waters of the different Tīrthas were used. Medicinal herbs and all types of sweet scents were used separately. After the ablution the water was wiped off by a silk cloth. With his brilliant body the king shone like smokeless fire.

31-35. The king wore a white cloth. He performed the rite of Ācamana . Then he wore the Pavitra of Darbha grass. He worshipped the groups of Manes called Nāndīmukhas in accordance with the injunctions. He performed the Homas by repeating Jaya and Rāṣṭrabhṛt hymns, and then the Gaṇahomas were performed scrupulously. Śaṅkhas (conchs) were blown; sweet perfumes spread everywhere. He performed the circumambulation of the holy fire that appeared white in colour without any smoke. The flame of the fire curled to the right side. Thereby it appeared to grant directly victory to the king who sought victory.

In order to destroy the vicious influence of Planets and to increase well-being, the king was served with the Grahakuṃbha (water pot consecrated to the Planets) at the end of the sacrifice unto the nine Planets.

The Mantras mentioned in the astrological treatises were repeated in the manner urged by the astrologer.

Thereafter, the auspicious embellishment and dressing rite was begun.

36-42. The silk cloths covered his body like an armour. The (white?) turban was splendid and brilliant with gem-set crown. The ears were adorned with the ring-shaped ear-ornaments (Avataṃsas) and gem-set Kuṇḍalas (varieties of ear-rings and ornaments). The excellent king wore a neck-ornament of great value and a Hāra embellished with a central gem. Then he put on shoulderlets, armlets and rings. He wore round his waist three (fine) gold wires twisted into one waistband and touching the folds of skin above the navel. Then he wore an excellent girdle well set with different kinds of precious stones and having festoon-like clusters of pearls along with golden tinkling bells. He fastened very valuable anklets round his feet. In the mirror held in front of him, he saw his reflection as a well (dressed and) ornamented one.

He remembered Lord Śrīdhara , the slayer of Madhu , Viṣṇu, the abode of auspiciousness and the cause of glorious happiness, as by remembering him sins though multitudinous, perish. He sat facing East on a golden pedestal for the sake of auspicious decorations.

43. At the outset the king wore a garland of seasonal flowers with bright colours and sweet scent after it had been consecrated with Mantras by his own priest.

44. Then he (touched) clay, lamp, fruit, Dūrvā grass, curds and Gorocanā (i.e. a blight yellow pigment) after all of them had been sanctified by Mantras. Then he was given (the ceremonious) protection by means of (protective) white mustard.

45. The king then looked at himself (reflected) in the ghee prepared from cow milk. The lion-like king then looked at the reflection in the mirror consecrated by Mantras.

46. Good prospects were wished by the singing of Vedic hymns and loud chanting of Śānti (propitiatory) Mantras. [3]

He was accorded protection while proceeding along the path by means of Pathisūkta and Yajur Mantras.

47. The king was filled with heroism and fortitude through the auspicious verses of Purāṇas . His valour was revealed by the bards and heralds through panegyrics.

48. Within his lotus-like heart the king meditated upon the Garuḍa -emblemed Lord who, accompanied by Satyabhāmā , took away the heavenly Pārijāta tree. Then he took (the first) step with his right foot.

49. After circumambulating Sage Nārada who was standing in front, the king went up to the central main door guarded by cane-bearing attendants.

50-51. (As required in royal formalities) the attendants showed him the path. He proceeded with the family sacred Fire (Agnihotra) taken ahead (by the priests). There he saw to his right the Brāhmaṇas, standing ready reciting the Māṅgalya Sūkta (hymn for auspiciousness). They were brilliant in appearance and wore white silk clothes. They threw fried grains and com in front of the king along with flowers repeating words of blessings for his welfare.

52. The courtesans stood on the left side busily holding and waving the chowries. They wore shining, gorgeous costumes and bright ornaments. With smiling lotus-like faces they (appeared) exceedingly splendid.

53. O excellent Brāhmaṇas, the king was devout and humble. He honoured Brāhmaṇas with garments, ornaments, garlands, sweet scents and unguents.

54. With the faith that Brāhmaṇas were the Lord Himself, he made those Brāhmaṇas delighted by (thus) honouring them,

55. With the permission of the king the minister gave suitable presents of cash , white doves, swans, a white horse and a white elephant to the courtesans, the bards as well as to the indigent helpless people.

56. The king then (intently) looked at the auspicious pitcher filled with water and kept beneath an arch of the stems (with leaves) of plantain tree—the pitcher embellished with mango-sprouts, garlands of white flowers and fruit. He viewed many other auspicious things also. A white umbrella was held above his head to ward off the heat of the sun.

57-58. He heard many musical instruments played, mixed with the sounds of hundreds of conch-shells blown simultaneously. Similarly the king heard auspicious songs and shouts of “Be victorious”.

Then he entered the palace to see Nṛsiṃha .

59-63. By remembering that Lord a man becomes recipient of all auspiciousness. Seeing that Lord Nṛhari from a distance, the Lord seated on a divine throne, he (the king) prostrated (in front of him) with the eight limbs touching the ground. With the words of the Upaniṣads he propitiated the Lord. He made obeisance to Durgā who stood on his right side—Durgā who liberates (devotees) from all adversities, looks (at the devotees) compassionately. He paid obeisance to the Goddess just near her feet.

Then the priest took off the auspicious garland from the idol of the Lord and put it round the neck (of the king) and applied sweet scents on his body. He joyously performed the Nīrājana rite (i.e. ceremonious waving of the lights) to the king and covered the head of the king (with a turban?).

The excellent king then circumambulated once again the two deities and placed them in the palanquin. They were kept ahead and he started (on his journey).

64-65a. He came out and saw at the external gate the chariot kept ready. Ten horses with the speed of wind had been yoked to it. The king circumambulated the chariot and got into it along with Nārada.

65b-66a. Various kinds of drums, viz. Ḍhakkā , Mṛdaṅga , Niḥsāṇa, Bherī , Paṇava and Gomukha were sounded. The musical instruments Mādhurī and Carcarī were played. Thousands of conch-shells were blown.

66b-68. There were crores of chariots belonging to the vassal kings. They were kept in rows and rows all round the chariot of Indradyumna. They were equipped with various kinds of weapons. They were adorned with flags and banners. The flag posts were tall. They were fitted with strings of bells made of gold and silver. There wre [were?] mirrors too attached to them. They were equipped with various mechanical devices. They had pleasing and majestic rumbling sounds.

69-70. The sounds of the infantry, the horses with the speed of wind and the elephants (were heard). The rumbling sounds of the chariots were mixed with the sounds of the marching of the foot-soldiers, the trumpeting of the elephants and the neighing of the horses. The sounds of the musical instruments too mingled with these. All these were heard by people like sounds of oceans at the time of the close of Yuga .

71. At that same moment the citizens too started equipped with their own requisites along with horses, donkeys, camels and porters.

72. In that tumultuous confusion when the whole nation had set out, swings, palanquins, ponies etc. were seen (proceeding ahead) in rows and rows.

73-76. Hundreds of members of inner apartments of the kings set out from the place. They were surrounded by eunuchs and guarded by officials and great armies. They roḍe in different kinds of vehicles.

The Yajvans (‘sacrificial priests’) started with their wives after placing the Agnihotra (sacrificial) fires and materials in the Śamyā vessels in different groups and carrying them in carts.

Bundles of books, utensils for the worship of deities, sacrificial twigs, Darbha grass, pots and pitchers, and the materials for Homa —all these they made other Brāhmaṇas to carry by means of other carts and vehicles.

77-81a. The vassal kings, ministers, servants, priests, Ṛtviks , the king’s administrative officials, slaves, those who had been employed in various kinds of services—all these set out with their belongings gathered together. Others went ahead. Those who had been employed in the treasuries took with them the entire treasure (cash etc.) and hastened ahead. The persons who attended upon the king on different occasions, gardeners and others, merchants and traders—all these took with them their respective merchandise and proceeded forth at the behest of the king. Excellent artisans and craftsmen with their guilds started along with the residents of cities, hamlets and rural parts. They had with them all the necessary implements for the practice of their professions or trades.

81b-84. On hearing the sounds of the drums, Bherīs , Paṭahas and Mṛdaṅgas beaten at the time of the journey of King Indradyumna, that pervaded all the cardinal points, all the people staying in rural outskirts became excited. They obeyed the commands of the king and started towards Nīla mountain.

Everyone went along the direct path most suitable to him. At the behest of the king they did not seek the main highway on account of haste. They went along the difficult path leading to Nīla mountain.

85-91. The eminent King Indradyumna, surrounded by residents of the whole city and the four army divisions, who were extremely delighted, shone in his chariot that was in the centre of the series of chariots proceeding ahead in a line of kings. The saintly king had the paraphernalia similar to that of Śakra .

His mind was pleased with the auspicious activities of the ladies of the city, their songs of welcome and good wishes and their showerings of flowers and fried grains—everything increasing the grandeur of the auspicious rite.

He joyously went ahead in the chariot to which horses having the speed of gusts of wind had been yoked, along the dustless path on the surface of the ground that had been levelled as though in quadrangles, and that was very cool under the shade of clouds raised by favourable winds. The way was shown to the king by those persons who had travelled through various lands and who knew thoroughly the ins and outs of the forests.

He went on observing the lands and territories as well as the forest regions on either side of the pathway. He was delighted and his pleasure was evident in his eyes. He reached the shrine of Carcikā [4] (Goddess Durgā) that marked the boundary of Utkaladeśa and was on their way. The deity was decorated with a garland of skulls.

92. The king got out of the chariot at Nārada's behest. With great humility he bowed down to her with the eight limbs touching the ground and with great delight in his mind he eulogized her.

Indradyumna said :

93-97. Obeisance to you, O Goddess, O dispeller of all miseries and adversities. You are glorified through eulogies by Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Śiva and others. You are the cause of all the worlds. O primordial Goddess, O supreme deity, be pleased. O Śivā , without you this universe cannot have any power (or endure) even for a monent. The accomplishment of all undertakings in the mortal world and all auspiciousness is the result of propitiating your feet, O eternal Goddess, and not otherwise. O supreme deity, you are the Śakti (power) of Viṣṇu, the Lord of mobile and immobile beings. It is through this Śakti that the Lord creates, protects and annihilates the universe. O Goddess, bless me so that with my own eyes I shall see the Lord residing in the Nīla mountain, the sire of mobile and immobile beings.

Jaimini said :

98-105. After eulogizing the Goddess as per advice of Nārada, the king got into the chariot quickly like the Sun climbing the Udaya mountain. Then he started quickly.

(Later on) when his vehicles (horses) became tired, the king halted the army on the banks of the great river Citrotpalā (modem Mahānadī). It was a famous region on account of the caves abounding in minerals. The forest was not at all thick there.

With the intention of performing the requisite rites of the late afternoon, the king entered the bathing Ghat along with his priest after it had been searched thoroughly and found to be devoid of poisonous thorns. The Lord of the subjects took his bath, performed the Tarpaṇa rites for Devas and Pitṛs and duly worshipped Viṣṇu.

Thereafter, the king honoured the vassal kings and the ministers and other officers by providing them with seats, resting places etc. Then the glorious king entered the inner apartment along with Nārada and with a delighted mind partook of his food as tasty and juicy as nectar.

When the sun set, the king concluded his evening rites quickly. As the moon rose, the king sat in the middle of the assembly of his subjects and vassal kings.

106. There in that assembly the king shone with all the characteristics of an emperor like the autumnal moon with the full disc in the middle of the luminaries.

107. The poets recited verses describing his fame as pure as nectar. Musicians of sweet and excellent voice sang well-composed songs of praise.

108. Thereafter, the courtesans who were proud of their beauty, youth and graceful charms danced in front (of them) keeping the perfectly correct musical timing, keynote and the proper gesticulations and movements of the body.

109. By means of poetical and prose compositions full of figures of speech and imagery and wonderful groupings of words, the bards and heralds eulogized him whose form and features were the most splendid and perfect in the world.

110. Thereafter the king honoured the prominent Vaiṣṇavas seated in the assembly with sweet scents, garlands and betel leaves which were well-approved and splendid in appearance.

111-112. At the bidding of the king many (vassal) kings had occupied their seats comfortably. King Indradyumna honoured hundreds of them befittingly with those articles which kings deserved.

Then in order to hear the story of the Lord that is destructive of all sins, the king respectfully requested Nārada, a favourite of the Lord, and the most excellent one among sages, who was comfortably seated on a throne he deserved:

Indradyumna said :

113-116. O holy lord, O abode of the Vedas and Vedāṅgas , O beloved one of the Lord, you alone know the life story of Viṣṇu with the vision of knowledge. If you are kind and considerate towards me, O sage, wash my heart with the nectar of the story of Hari as it has become very dirty with mud (sins, ignorance).

While the discourse between the sage and the king thus got mingled with dialogues like these, the doorkeeper, a servant of the Lord of Utkala , entered and reported to the king: “O Lord, the king of Utkala stands near the entrance. He is accompanied by his chief (ministers, officers etc.). He is waiting with presents (in his hands) and wishes to see the lotus-like feet of Your Highness.”

117-120. When the saintly king was informed thus by the doorkeeper, he became agitated. O Brāhmaṇas, he had been hearing about the holy spot of Śrīpuruṣottama. Since that holy spot was an ornament to his land, he was eager to listen to what he had to convey. So the king told the gatekeeper: “Without delay usher in the glorious king of Oḍhra land. Indeed, he is devoid of all impurities (sins) by having propitiated Viṣṇu on Nīla mountain. By seeing him all of us shall get our sins destroyed.”

On hearing his words the doorkeeper immediately ushered the king (of Utkala) into the assembly of King Indradyumna.

121-124. Immediately the king of Oḍhra entered along with his ministers, followers of Viṣṇu. He bowed down to the venerable pair of feet of Indradyumna with great respect.

The great king (Indradyumna) lifted him up and honoured that Vaiṣṇava by placing him in his own seat. Then he humbly spoke these words:

"O king, O Lord of Oḍhra, Are you happy and well in every respect? I hope the Lord whose abode is on the summit of Nīla mountain is victorious and your pure intellect is fixed on the lotus-like feet of the Lord. You are equal-minded towards all living beings. I hope your mind is devoted to Hari".

125. On hearing his words, the overlord of Oḍhra became extremely delighted and surprised. With palms joined in reverence he spoke these words full of humility:

126. "O Lord, by your blessings I am happy in every respect. How will darkness prevail when the Sun blazes?

127. By the contact of your natural good qualities all the (other) kings have been won over by you. The Earth is blessed with you as her Lord like Amarāvatī with Indra .

128. While you rule over the earth, Dharma (Virtue) is always four-footed. (The words) 'committing forbidden act' can be heard of only in the Vedas, O king.

129. Various qualities of statesmanship and perfection in administration that abide in you, O Lord, serve severally as models to the (other) kings.

130. Even this much of your empire is inaccessible (to others), O most excellent king. The whole earth consisting of eighteen islands (being under your rule) is comparable to a single house.

131. You are fond of all living beings. If Brahmā had not created you, how could people get rid of grief when their sons and kinsmen died?

132. The Śruti says that ordinary kings are parts of Viṣṇu. You are the Lord himself. Who else is a mine of good qualities like you?

133-137. Nīla mountain is on the shore of the Southern Sea. It is surrounded by forests. It is not frequented by ordinary common people. It is there that the deity is present.

Now, it is heard that a storm has scattered sands over the Deity. As a result of it, there is famine, death, pestilence etc. in my kingdom too. Since you have come, there will be welfare all around in my case."

When the king of Utkala concluded his speech thus, O excellent Brāhmaṇas, king (Indradyumna) honoured him duly and sent him off to take rest.

With great dejection he looked at Nārada and said: "O sage, what is this? I begin to doubt that everything for which I had endeavoured has become futile." As he said this, Nārada who is a knower of all the three times, spoke to him:

138. "You should not be astonished at this. The most excellent one among Vaiṣṇavas, you are very fortunate. Indeed the desire of Vaiṣṇavas never goes unfulfilled.

139. You will certainly see Nārāyaṇa who is free from ailments—Nārāyaṇa the primordial deity, who is the cause of all the worlds and has adopted human form.

140-141. For the sake of blessing you he will incarnate on the earth. The entire universe consisting of mobile and immobile beings is under the control of Viṣṇu. He is not under the control of anyone. He is the supreme soul, the eternal one. The Lord can be won over only by means of devotion. He is affectionate to his devotees.

142. It is his Māyā whereby everything beginning with Brahmā and ending with an insect is well protected. How can he, O king, be dependent on others, except devout people?

143-144. The root cause of virtue, wealth, love and salvation is devotion to Viṣṇu. That alone is the means of knowing him. Withoṇt it there is no other way. Viṣṇu is really one, but he takes many forms by means of his Māyā. There is no source of happiness except that great soul.

145. There are other deities such as Śiva, Durgā and others. They are engaged in various Karmas . When worshipped, they grant what is desired. They too are dependent on Viṣṇu.

146. That Lord is the immanent soul. He is stationed in the hearts of Devas too. They grant benefits only as much as he directs.

147. O great king, you too are a Vaiṣṇava. You are in the fifth generation from the Lotus-born Lord. You are a master of the eighteen Vidyās (lores). You strictly adhere to good conduct.

148. The earth has been protected by you with justice. You are especially a worshipper of Brāhmaṇas. You will certainly see Viṣṇu in the holy spot by means of your physical eye.

149. In this matter Brahmā too has employed me, O king. When the excellent holy spot is reached, I will tell you everything.

150. Now the night is about to reach the third Yāma (period of 3 hours). Command the (vassal) kings now to go back to their respective apartments.

151. You too should go to the inner apartment and have a sound sleep.”

English translation

Note: Vide Brahma Purāṇa , Ch. 39. It gives a more detailed and beautiful description of Ekāmra Kṣetra from a Śaivite point of view.

Jaimini said :

1. When this was said by the son of Brahmā , king Indradyumna , after listening to the words of the sage, pondered with a delighted mind upon them with deep comprehension, and thought that his efforts had borne fruit:

2. ‘What a great fortune was acquired in the course of many births! The grandfather of all the worlds is actively participating in my enterprise.

3-4a. He has deputed his son, a living-liberated soul, to assist me. The fulfilment of the tasks of persons conforms to the type of assistance they receive—this old teaching is heard in all assemblies.’

4b-6a. Thinking thus the king dispersed those members of the assembly. Then, O Brāhmaṇas , he grasped the hand of the sage and entered the inner apartment. After duly honouring him, the king spent the remaining part of the night along with him, in the same couch, engaged in mutual conversation.

6b-7. When the day dawned clearly, he concluded the daily routine of religious duties, worshipped the Lord of the universe and crossed Mahānadī . The path was shown by the overlord of the land of Oḍhra who went ahead.

8-10. Accompanied by his army he started towards the holy place Ekāmravanaka (modern Bhuvaneśvara).

After going a short distance he reached the river named Gandhavahā [1] of rapid currents and cool waters.

While he hurriedly crossed the river the king heard from a great distance, the sounds of various drums and musical instruments such as Mṛdaṅga , Muraja , Kāhāla , Carcarī and conch-shell. The sound was produced at the time of the forenoon worship of Koṭiliṅgeśvara. [2] It spread everywhere in the great forest.

11-13. The king thought that it was (from the shrine) of the Lord residing on Nīla mountain. With great pleasure he enquired of Nārada : “Whence is this sound coming, O great sage? Has (the shrine of) the great Lord residing on the summit of Nīla mountain been reached? It is at the time of his worship that this tumultuous sound is heard. Or, O sage, is there any other deity nearby?” On being asked thus by the king the eminent sage replied:

14-17. “O king, highly inaccessible is the holy spot. It is kept concealed by Viṣṇu . That there is the Lord there, is not known to any man.

You are the most excellent one among lucky people. It is due to your good fortune that the Lord was with great difficulty seen by your priest who has controlled all his sense-organs.

O excellent king, you are equipped with armies having six divisions. Hence, O king, I have begun to suspect that you have undertaken an adventure in a big way.

Nīla mountain is in the third Yojana (i.e. 3x 12 Kms). This is the holy spot of the Lord of Gaurī named Ekāmrakavana. Not far off, O king, is the place where, being afraid, he sought refuge.” [3]

Indradyumna said :

18-20. Why was the Lord of Gaurī (Śiva) frightened? With whom did he seek refuge?

Why was the Lord who had burned the terrible three Puras (cities of Asuras) formerly by means of a single arrow, frightened? This is very much amazing and I wish to hear about this rare (event).

Bhava is the protector of those who are afraid of worldly existence (bhava). He is extremely sacred. Why was he frightened? Who is powerful enough to conquer (him)?

Nārada said :

21-23. In this connection, O king, I shall tell you an ancient legend. Lord Nīlalohita was won over by Gaurī previously by means of penance. He was under the vow of celibacy. On being afflicted with the arrows of the god of Love, he gave up that vow. He married Gaurī on the Himālaya mountain and sported with that beautiful lady proud of her youthfulness, O king. In the realm of her father he enjoyed all the pleasures desired by Devas (too).

24-30. Once the chaste lady was coming out of her apartment along with (some) noble ladies. She was then gently and smilingly addressed with these words by her mother:

“O noble lady, for the sake of a brideroom a great penance was performed by you in the dense forest. But, O lady of excellent countenance, an old brideroom of unknown parentage and unknown qualities has been acquired by you.

You never leave his presence in day or at night, though he is of such a nature. What is his special excellence, dear girl? Let it be mentioned. What is the return of your husband's favour? You get your clothes and ornaments from me. You stay in my house. O gentle lady; you have been staying here for a long time. You are fondled by your father. You enjoy all your pleasures in your father's house.

We have heard that all the girls in the three worlds go away from their father's house after marriage. They are adorned by their husband and they stay in their husband's house.

I am a mind-born daughter of the Manes. I came from the world of the Manes, O highly fortunate lady. I was married to Himādri.

O lady of roving eyes, you have been spoken ṃus only jocularly and not out of anger. This should not be mentioned to the Son-in-law. He is considered equal to Viṣṇu."

Nārada said :

31. On hearing these words uttered by her mother, she was deeply pained by the censure of her husband. Though her lips were throbbing with anger, she did not utter a single word.

32. She approached her husband. Though she did not disclose the (actual) words of her mother, she reported lovingly a few harsh words briefly (spoken about him).

33-34. "O Lord, this is not proper for one to stay in one's own father-in-law's house even in the case of the lowliest of men. How can it be otherwise in the case of yours, the sire of the three worlds. Hence I do not like, O Lord, that we should stay here. It is not befitting (to us). Are there no other places proper for you to settle down?"

35. On being told thus by Śivā the Bull-emblemed Lord got on the back of his Bull along with her and hurriedly went to the central land (i.e. land between Himālaya and Vindhya).

36-41 a. He crossed all the Tīrthas and went beyond the great sacred place Prayāga , and on the northern bank of Gaṅgā that flows into the Eastern Ocean, he built the city named Vārāṇasī [4] for Gaurī's residence. It is a beautiful city extending to five Krośas (15 Kms).

It is splendid with excellent Mansions. It has hundreds of palatial buildings and numerous gardens and parks. There are many Tīrthas there and it is full of people of different kinds. This splendid city had been built by Viśvakarmā at the behest of Dhūrjaṭi (Śiva). It dispels sins by means of holy and cool waves of Gaṅgā.

There in the middle of that city which was rendered splendid by means of golden ramparts and Mansions, which was perfectly built with gemset columns and which fulfilled all wishes and ambitions, Paśupati sported with her like the Slayer of Madhu (Viṣṇu) with Śrī.

41b-43. That city is never left by Viśvanātha (Śiva). So it is well known by the name Avimuktā. It bestows salvation on men. Formerly, O overlord of men, it was resorted to by persons who were afraid of the worldly existence. Gaurī stayed there along with her husband who adorned her in an excellent manner. O king, she did not remember even her mother and father.

44. When many Yugas passed like this, the Lord installed a crore of his Liṅgas there and went to Kailāsa mountain.

45-48. O king, many kings ruled over that city. Formerly in Dvāpara Yuga , there was a king there (commonly) called Kāśirāja . By means of severe penance he propitiated Lord Śaṃbhu with this aim in his mind: 'I will excel in war Acyuta (Kṛṣṇa), the conqueror of kings, the chief of whom is Jarāsandha .'

The Pināka -bearing Lord (Śiva) who was propitiated, granted him that boon: "O suppressor of enemies, you will conquer the Slayer of Kaṃsa in battle. For your sake I shall fight seated on my Bull, along with (my attendants) Pramathas ."

49. After securing a boon like this that madly insolent king who (boasted of his) heroism, challenged the Lord (Kṛṣṇa), wielder of the conch and the discus, for a fight.

50. That Lord (Kṛṣṇa) who is the immanent soul (of all), knew the incident of that sort, and sent his Discus for killing Kāśirāja.

51-57. The infuriated Discus that was very fierce in appearance, had the refulgence of a thousand suns. It knew the power of the mind of Viṣṇu. It cut off the head of Kāśirāja and burned to ash his army as well as that city.

On seeing that extremely violent action Paśupati (Śiva) became furious. Surrounded by his Gaṇas and seated on his Bull, the Pināka-bearing Lord rushed at it. Then Śaṃbhu looked at the Sudarśana Discus at the outset and discharged his Pāśupata missile in front of it, like an ominous calamity.

Formerly Śaṃbhu had secured a boon from Viṣṇu who had been pleased by his devotion: "On being remembered by you I shall invigorate your missile. But if you go against me, it will become lustreless (and ineffective)."

When this Pāśupata missile which was (usually) terrible, became futile and when Vārāṇasī was burned, the Bull-bannered Lord became afraid.

Then he eulogized the Primordial Puruṣottama , the cause of all the worlds.

Mahādeva prayed :

58. O Nārāyaṇa , obeisance to you, the highest abode, O Supreme Soul, O one greater than the greatest, O Lord possessing the properties of existence, knowledge and bliss, O blemishless one!

59. O cause of the universe, O Lord performing the acts of creation etc. by means of the different Guṇas , O Lord concealed by your own Māyā , O self-luminous one, obeisance to you.

60. You are neither within nor without. You are without as well as within. You are far off as well as quite near. You are both heavy and light. You aṛe firm. You are minute as well as very massive. Obeisance to you.

61. O matchless one, obeisance to that Lord in the form of Kāla (Time), the graceful charm of whose sideglance creates crores of Four-faced Lords (Brahmās) and a Parārdha of mine.

62. Obeisance to that Lord, the soul of the universe, whose body is beyond measurement, and each one of whose hair supports a number of Cosmic Eggs.

63. O Lord, in accordance with your own measurement of time you cause the origin and dissolution (birth and death) of Brahmā and also mark out the periods of Manvantara etc. Obeisance to you.

64. I have been created out of Tamoguṇa, O Lord. I am ignorant of your power. Hence forgive my offence. Save me. I have sought refuge in you.

65. When (the Lord) who burned down the Tripuras eulogized thus, Adhokṣaja (Viṣṇu) manifested himself after casting off the form of the Discus.

66-68. His face (indicated that he was) delighted. The glorious Lord held the conch, the discus and the iron club. He was seated on Garuḍa as if on a lotus seat. He was adorned with a garland of sylvan flowers. He looked brilliant with necklaces, ear-rings, shoulderlets, crown and other ornaments. Lakṣmī was seated on his left lap. Satyabhāmā [5] was on the right side. His body was as lustrous as a black cloud. Though he was an ocean of mercy, he spoke to the husband of Girijā (who was) frightened, as if he was angry with him.

Śrī Bhagavān said :

69. How has such an evil-mindedness beset you at this time? O Śaṃbhu, for the sake of an insect of a (i.e. an insignificant) king, you have come to fight with me!

70-77. How many examples of my power have not been known to you, O Dhūrjaṭi (Śiva). It is true that your Pāśupata missile cannot be vanquished by Suras and Asuras. The Discus is a form of my anger. It cannot spare even you. Excepting you, who will wander in the world after disregarding me? By performing several austerities formerly you have acquired much strength as a form of mine from my body? Now if you wish to sport about with Gaurī here for a long time, if you wish that this city of Vārāṇasī should stay for a long time (do as follows).

On the shore of the Southern Sea there is a holy spot well known after my name, viz. Śrīpuruṣottama. It is adorned by Nīla mountain. It extends to ten Yojanas (i.e. 10 x 12=120 Kms.) up to Virajā Maṇḍala (modern Yājpur). The holy spot is gradually holier till the river Citrotpalā . The region beyond that as far as the Southern Sea is more and more excellent (sacred) step by step. Nīla mountain is a bestower of salvation. There (my idol) is made of blue sapphire gems. I am stationed there in four bodies (i.e. Jagannātha , Balabhadra , Subhadrā and Sudarśana). To the north of it is the forest named Ekāmraka . O annihilates of Tripuras, stay there fearlessly along with Pārvatī .

78. There you will be crowned as the king of a crore of Liṅgas [6] at my bidding by the Self-born Lord, the creator of all the worlds.

79. This Tīrtha Maṇikarṇika consists of all Tīrthas. Cast off your Ahaṃkāra (ego, pride) here and proceed along with all your followers.

Nārada said :

80. On being told thus by Vāsudeva the Three-eyed Lord bent down his head. With palms joined in reverence he spoke to the Slayer of Madhu:

Mahādeva said :

81. O Lord of Devas, O Lord of the universe, O Lord, O dispeller of the agony of those who bow down (to you), carrying out your behest will be the cause of my welfare, O Lord of the worlds.

82. On account of my stupidity, O Lord, I had been arrogant. There, O Lord, your own blessing is the cause of my fickleness.

83. Since you command me, O Lord of Devas, to proceed to Puruṣottama, I shall carry out your behest reverently and proceed to the auspicious holy place that bestows salvation.

84-85a. Do a favour to me and promise that you alone will protect and sustain my sacred region Puruṣottama. Protect it so that it will never perish hereafter.

85b-86. Thus this sacred place has been established formerly by Mahādeva after duly worshipping Lord Puruṣottama accompanied by Balarāma and Śrī. Here the Lord of Umā has been installed by Brahmā.

87-88. We shall go there and view the destroyer of Puras, the Lord of the Daughter of the Mountain, the Lord who like the sun dispels all the dense internal darkness.

Since this holy place of Śaṃbhu is completely destructive of Tamas , it grants welfare. Since it washes off Rajoguṇa, it is well known as Viraja Maṇḍala.

89-91. Since Sattvaguṇa prevails, Puruṣottama is well known as the bestower of salvation. Whatever other salvation-yielding holy spots there are and heard of by you, O great king, they all bestow liberation here itself. This holy spot, O great king, cannot produce faith in those whose minds are defiled by misdeeds and sins. This is the secret of the Discus-bearing Lord.

Jaimini said :

92-93. On hearing the words of Nārada the king became delighted in his mind. With his eyes beaming and dilated due to surprise, he spoke to the tiger among sages:

“O Brāhmaṇa , the highly sanctifying holy spot has been properly described to me. It is the place where Umāpati (Śiva) is present and Puruṣottama is the protector. Even if the route is circuitous, we shall certainly go there because this is the right means for the accomplishment of our desired objective.”

Jaimini said :

94. Thereafter, O Brāhmaṇas, the sage and the king along with the army reached the holy spot named Ekāmravana at midday.

95. The king took his holy bath in Bindu Tīrtha and worshipped Puruṣottama installed on the bank in accordance with the injunctions. Then he went to the great temple of Koṭīśvara .

96-100. At the entrance, the king duly performed the rite of Ācamana (i.e. ceremonious sipping of water) and as he took pleasure (in it he) gifted numerous excellent horses, elephants, gems, garments, ornaments and wealth to Brāhmaṇas, since he was engaged in Sāttvika form of piety.

After taking the holy bath, he worshipped Tribhuvaneśa [7] (Lord of the three worlds) Liṅga (modern Liṅgarāja at Bhuvaneśvara) and derived matchless pleasure as he saw the identity of the Lord with Viṣṇu. He eulogized and bowed down to the Lord with devotion. He sang songs of devotion and played on the Vīṇā .

With palms joined in reverence he sought to propitiate the Lord with his mind exclusively directed towards him. He stood there meditating on the Bull-bannered Lord.

Then the Three-eyed Lord Parameśvara became pleased, O Brāhmaṇas. With each syllable of every word distinctly expressed the Lord spoke to the king directly:

Koṭiliṅgeśa said :

101-103. O great king Indradyumna, a Vaiṣṇava like you is very rare on the earth. Your desire will be perfectly realized after some time.

After saying this Śaṃbhu vanished in the very presence of the king. Then he said to Nārada: “O highly fortunate one, carry out what has been commanded by the Self-born Lord along with a horse-sacrifice in that holy spot Śrī Puruṣottama which is the body of Viṣṇu.

104. The interior altar (antar- vedī) is highly meritorious. It is like the heart of Viṣṇu. I have been installed in eight forms for the sake of protecting it.

105. I, Nīlakaṇṭha , have been established at the tip of the conch-like [8] (holy-spot) along with Durgā . O eminent Brāhmaṇa. Take this king to that place.

106. Now Hari with the blue sapphire body has vanished. At my bidding build the shrine of Śrī Narasiṃha there.

107-108. There in our presence let the excellent king perform a thousand horse-sacrifices. At the end of those (sacrifices), O excellent Brāhmaṇa, show him that wonderful tree devoid of blemishes and having the form of Brahman . Viśvakarmā will carve four statues therefrom.

109-112a. At the time of their installation Brahmā himself will come so that this king shall get rid of his sins by worshipping Hari by means of horse-sacrifices. Let him go on continuously worshipping Hari for a thousand years. At one end thereof he will see (the Lord) who is the support of all the worlds and destroyer of all sins. On those who visit him the Lord-with-wooden-form will bestow salvation. Neither Brahmā nor you nor I shall know his deeds. He will be pleased only by devoutly carrying out his commands.”

112b-113. Nārada bowed down to Mahādeva, the sire of the universe. With palms joined in reverence he said: “(I shall carry out) what has been commanded by you, O Lord. Brahmā too has directed me to carry it out in this manner. Brahmā and you, O Lord, are not different from the Supreme Sout.

114-115. The fortune of this king (is really great). The blessings of you three cannot be even mentally conceived. This Lord, the sanctifier of all living beings, is one whose greatness cannot be even thought of. By his association even the vicious ones can cross the ocean of worldly existence.

116. By how much devotion the Lord is pleased, is beyond the reach of the intellect. By repeating the Vedic passages and other activities people continue to strive for it for a long time. But even an insignificant person attains salvation effortlessly.

117-120. The cowherdesses who maintained themselves by (selling) milk and milk products, who spent their days either within the house or wandering about in the forests and who sustained themselves through the forest produces, attained liberation through the enjoyment of love sports.

Śiśupāla who always hated and fought with him attained salvation (even) in the middle of the assembly hall. The hunter pierced the heart (of Kṛṣṇa?) and attained the goal very difficult to be attained.

Formerly a hunch-backed maiden dragged him to her house by his clothes and enjoyed herself with him whereas the celestial damsels who meditate upon him do not get him at all.

Formerly the Lord granted salvation to a Cāṇḍāla who was very far off but not to a Brāhmaṇa who was well-versed in the Vedas , who was close (to him) and was a great devotee.

121-128. By means of his Māyā the Lord may deceive you as well as Brahmā. Many persons beginning with Gautama still remain in the bondage of physical bodies, suffering from much misery while performing austerities. They cling to their vow of celibacy and they stay till the end of the Kalpa . His acts cannot be comprehended or expressed by saying 'It is like this, it is like that'.

It is not possible to delineate the conduct of this highly intelligent one even by much effort or in the course of a long time.

Many means have been recommended in the scriptural texts for the sake of liberation in the case of learned men. Many of them do worship (by sacrifice). But the most excellent means of all is the residence in (the holy place) Puruṣottama which is certainly conducive to attain Sāyujya with the Lord like an excellent companion. That means of attaining this Lord capable of wielding Māyā is invariably connected (with the residence there). The place where Hari placed himself and where he fixed his residence shall become universally known due to the association with Indradyumna. Hence allow me, O Lord of Devas. I shall take this king along with his army to the land at the foot of the mountain and establish him there. I shall then initiate him in the act of the great sacrifice (i.e. horse-sacrifice). Thereafter, O Bull-emblemed Lord, I shall come near your lotus-like feet."

Jaimini said :

129. Saying "So be it", the Lord vanished. The sage drove in the chariot of the king to the excellent holy spot.

130-133. The second day the king reached Kapoteśa. [9] Its length and breadth are the same. It is full of ponds of water and trees. In the eastern boundary was Bilveśa who was stationed on the seashore. His minister indicated that the place was suitable for encamping the army. The excellent king encamped the army in their befitting places. He bowed down to Bilveśvara [10] and Kapoteśa and worshipped them. Accompanied by Nārada the intelligent king got into the chariot. Mentally and verbally, thinking and glorifying Viṣṇu, the resident of Nīla mountain, O Brāhmaṇa, he went to the presence of Hari.

[1]: [1] : Gandhavahā is the Gandhavatī (modern Gangua) at present flowing in Bhuvaneśvara, It is considered as a sacred river.

[2]: [2] : Koṭiliṅgeśvara is a famous temple at Bhuvaneśvara.

[3]: [3] : A Vaiṣṇavite twist to show the inferiority of Śiva to Viṣṇu. The fight between Śiva and Viṣṇu for one King of Kāśi (Kāśirāja) and the subsequent defeat of Śiva and his praise of Viṣṇu and Śiva's departure from Vārāṇasī to Ekāmra Vana (vv 50-79)—all this is invented to show Viṣṇu's superiority.

[4]: [4] : Skandapurāṇa euphemistically gives the credit of building Vārāṇasī to Śiva. As a matter of fact, he usurped this capital city of Divodāsa through Nikuṃbha (vide BdP 2.3.67.31-58).

[5]: [5] : The author regards Viṣṇu and Kṛṣna as identical and brings in Satyabhāmā as Viṣṇu's consort along with Lakṣmī.

[6]: [6] : This explains the epithet of Koṭiliṅgeśvara.

[7]: [7] : Ekāmra Purāṇa and other sources state that Tribhuvaneśvara (Liṅgarāja) was worshipped as Hari-hara (a synthesis of Vaiṣṇavism and Śaivism).

[8]: [8] : Puruṣottama Kṣetra is regarded as conch-like in shape.

[9]: [9] : Kapoteśa temple is now situated at Candanapura at the bifurcation of the rivers Bhārgavī and Mittlānī (on Kāṭhapola Nadī).

[10]: [10] : The temple of Bilveśa is on the eastern side of Puri.

English translation

Note: Kapoteśa is at Chandanpur (Puri) and Bilveśa on the seashore to the east of Gundicā house.

The sages enquired :

1. It behoves you to recount to us why this site of Kapoteśa became famous, O great sage. Who Kapota was and who was the Lord, O great sage?

Jaimini replied :

2. Formerly Kuśasthalī became inhospitable for habitation of creatures because it was fully overgrown with Kuśa grass having keen edges and thorns.

3-4. It was devoid of trees. It had no water-reservoirs. It was like an abode of Piśācas (ghosts). Formerly no Deva other than the Lord (Viṣṇu) was worshipped. A desire to compete with (Viṣṇu) and a feeling of rivalry arose in Dhūrjaṭi (Śiva) who thought, 'Let me too be worshipped'. Thinking thus he turned his mind to the devotion of the same Viṣṇu.

5-8. ‘I shall propitiate Hari by resorting to a very great penance, staying in a place devoid of all objects. I shall have no personal possessions. What is it that I should speak to the Lord of Ramā ? What can be the eulogy for Śāradāpati(?)? What else can give satisfaction to the deity who is the lord of the whole universe? Hence no external thing can be of any use to him. Therefore, I shall adopt Antaryāga (‘Internal sacrifice’ i.e. Mātṛkā Nyāsa etc.) with a pure mind. I shall propitiate Hari, the sire of mobile and immobile beings, the Lord who offers his own soul unto the devotees. By his grace I shall be worthy of being worshipped by all.’

9-10. Thinking thus in his mind, he went to the holy spot Kuśasthalī. He performed a very severe penance near Nīla mountain. Maheśvara avoided all Dvandvas (i.e. pairs of opposites e.g. heat-cold, pleasure-pain). He took in only air. Eight-formed [1] though he was, the Lord was reduced to the size of a dove.

11. The delighted Lord granted him supremacy, so that he became equal (to Viṣṇu) in respect of worship, reverence etc.

12. By the power of his penance that holy spot became one comparable to Vṛndāvana , the forest near Gokula . Its interior was rendered splendid by lakes, ponds, reservoirs and rivers.

13. It was full of different kinds of trees and creepers (laden) with fruits and flowers of all seasons. It was resonant with the humming sounds of bees inebriated with honey.

14-15. It was full of different kinds of flocks of birds. It was a comfortable place of resort for all creatures. Since by means of his penance Śiva became (small) like a dove, he came to be called Kapoteśvara [2] at the behest of Murāri (Viṣṇu). It is at his bidding that the Three-eyed Lord always stays here along with Mṛḍānī (Pārvatī).

16. Those who worship, eulogize and bow down to Kapoteśa shall get rid of all their sins and attain Puruṣottama .

17-22. Henceforth I shall narrate the greatness of Bilveśa, O Brāhmaṇas .

Formerly Daityas who were the residents of Pātāla pierced through the surface of the earth and began to harass Bhūrloka . They used to devour people.

When the Lord incarnated as the son of Devakī in order to reduce the burden on the earth, and protected the earth along with the Yādavas and the Pāṇḍavas , he once came to that spot.

He took his bath in the water of the Tīrtharāja (the ocean) and paid obeisance to Nīla Mādhava from a great distance mentally. Then he came to the entrance (of the abode of) Daityas.

He found that the underground passage was awful and impenetrable for human beings. He deluded the worlds with wrong notions (?) and desirous of spreading (the idea of) the venerability of Śiva, he took up a fruit of a Bilva tree and invoked the Three-eyed Lord there. After worshipping the Destroyer of the Puras , Śrīkṛṣṇa eulogized him.

Śrī Bhagavān prayed :

23. Obeisance to you, O Lord beyond the three Guṇas , O Lord who divides the three Guṇas, O Lord, embodiment of the three Vedas , O Lord beyond the three (Vedas). Obeisance to the knower of the three divisions of time (viz. Past, Present and Future).

24. To the Lord with the Moon, the Sun and Fire as eyes, obeisance to the excellent Ātman favourable to Brāhmaṇas. Salute to you, the storehouse of eightfold prosperity, to the eight-formed Lord.

25. Obeisance to the Lord devoid of Tamas , the Lord whose form is beyond darkness, who is immutable and is destructive of darkness and who dispels the darkness of ignorance.

26. After eulogizing his own Ātman by means of his own Ātman, the Lord saw that the passage had become easily penetrable by his favour.

27-29a. Through that passage the Lord went to Pātāla along with his army. There he slew the Daityas who were fierce and powerful and removed the burden (of the earth).

He then came back to the same place. There the Lord worshipped the Bull-emblemed Lord. Desirous of establishing Śiva there in order to block the passage, the highly intelligent Gadādhara (Kṛṣṇa), the Lord who can be won over by devotion, said thus:

29b-33. “O Dhūrjaṭi (Śiva), stay here in the place preventing Asuras from coming out. Who else, O Śaṃbhu , is competent to destroy the army of Rākṣasas ?”

After establishing Mahādeva he returned to Dvārakā . Since then Bilveśa became famous on the earth.

O Brāhmaṇas, that Bilveśa is the first creator of the prominent sacred place. By visiting that immutable Lord of Mṛḍānī, the Lord who destroys sins, one shall derive all the desired results. One shall surmount adversity very difficult to cross.

The greatness of Kapoteśa and Bilveśvara has been recounted to you, O sages. Henceforth, what else do you wish to hear?

[1]: [1] : The following are the eight forms of Śiva: (The special name of that form is given in the bracket) 1. Earth (Śarva); 2. Water (Bhava); 3. Fire (Rudra); 4. Wind (Ugra); 5. Ether (Bhīma); 6. The sacrificer i.e. Yajamāna (Paśupati); 7. The Moon (Mahādeva); 8. The Sun (Īśāna).

[2]: [2] : The above is an explanatory legend to support the derivation of the name Kapoteśvara.

English translation

Summary: Nārada Consoles Indradyumna and Urges Him to Perform Horse-sacrifices.

The sages asked :

1. When they got into the chariot and proceeded ahead, where did Nārada and the king go? What did they do? Describe it to us, O great sage.

Jaimini said :

2. Along with Vidyāpati , the younger brother of the priest, they came near the boundary of the holy place of Nīlakaṇṭha .

3-4. There appeared bad omens on the way. The left eye and the left arm of the king who was going ahead, began to throb and tremble frequently. On seeing them the tiger among kings became dejected. He asked the sage who was a storehouse of all knowledge, the reason thereof

5-7. “My empire is unassailed. This excellent holy spot has been reached. Our pilgrimage to Mādhava is conducive to auspiciousness. What ominous thing can happen to me today? O sage, tell me truthfully. My left eye throbs and the left arm trembles frequently.”

On hearing it Nārada spoke indicating the future task and telling the king the words of welfare and happiness uttered by the Lotus-born Lord.

Nārada said :

8-10. O king, do not get dejected. Generally all auspicious things are impeded by obstacles. When the obstacles are removed, O king, everything shall be splendid in the case of fortunate persons. It is true that you are an emperor. This holy spot is verily the physical body of Viṣṇu . But the deity for whom you have undertaken this pilgrimage has vanished. It was covered up with golden sands in the evening on the day next to that when this Brāhmaṇa Vidyāpati visited it. The deity has gone to his abode in Pātāla and has become very difficult of access in the human world."

Jaimini said :

11. On hearing this dreadful utterance that was as bad as the fall of the thunderbolt, the king fell on the ground unconscious, O excellent Brāhmaṇas .

12. On seeing him fallen thus all the friendly assistants and comrades with the priest as their leader rushed towards him crying out "Alas! Alas!"

13. They frequently sprinkled on his face cold water mixed with camphor. They smeared all his body with sandal paste, agallochum and camphor.

14-15. They quickly fanned him with chowries and fans. Nārada too became bewildered. Performing the yogic process of Dhāraṇā ('Retention') he saved the life of the king knowing that the future good lay therein. After a long time the king regained consciousness by their excellent efforts.

16-19. He got up and fell down at the feet of Nārada, O Brāhmaṇas (and said): "What sin have I committed in a previous birth? It is certainly on account of its ripening that this terrible misery has befallen. O great sage, even in dream no offence has been committed by me mentally, physically or verbally against Brāhmaṇas and cows. O tiger among sages, no holy rite, whether Nitya , Naimittika or Kāmya , prescribed for kings has been omitted by me. O great sage, no insult has been perpetrated by me towards deities, guests, servants, manes, dependents and kinsmen.

20-24. There are fifty (possible) offences against Viṣṇu, O leading Vaiṣṇava ; all of them have been avoided by me like huge, furious serpents.

What lucky (and meritorious) act has been done by that younger brother of my priest? He has been able to see Lord Nīlamādhava with the physical eye.

What for did you cause the loss of the kingdom deliberately, even when you knew about this? How is that this was not declared at the time when we set out on the journey?

Why was the abode of Brāhmaṇas well-versed in the Vedas uprooted by me? Why were the lands excellently maintained for a long time abandoned by these people? Ever since the inception of their families the subjects had pursued certain vocations for their livelihood. For my sake they have (now) abandoned them. How will they maintain themselves now?

25. If I do not see Hari , I will put an end to my life. This is my resolve, O Brāhmaṇa. If I die what will be of the subjects?

26. O sage, you are always kind. You advise me as regards the auspicious and inauspicious. Take my son to Mālava and crown him there.

27-29. Let him protect the land with justice. Let not these subjects be subjected to grief. Let all those kings who have come here at my behest return and carry out the directions of my son. I will remain in this holy spot contemplating on Nīlamādhava, I will observe a fast unto death and make the remaining part of my life fruitful."

Jaimini said :

30. As King Indradyumna was lamenting thus, the son of Brahmā made him rise up. Consoling him with kind and gentle words he spoke thus:

Nārada said :

31-35. O king, you are at the head of learned men. You are a Vaiṣṇava and an ocean of courage. How is it that you do not realize that (spiritual) welfare is always attended with obstacles?

This is the greatest good of man that can be acquired only in the course of a hundred births, that one can see with his physical eye the Club-bearing Lord in physical form.

Hari's sportive activity is unrestrained. By whom can it be understood completely? Though I am a living-liberated soul, O king, I do not go beyond his Līlā (sportive activity).

I am a staunch devotee. I stay near the Lord. Still have I not been deceived by him many times? Even by many hundreds of births one cannot resist his Māyā . This endless Māyā of his cannot be comprehended even by the Lotus-born Lord who occupies the lotus coming out of the navel (of the Lord), even though he is in the habit of eulogizing him always.

36. The nature of the master of Māyā has been spoken to you thus, O king. Now I shall tell you especially that you are the most excellent one among fortunate persons.

37-41. All the three forms of his are inclined to bless you.

The creator of the mobile and immobile beings (god Brahmā), the grandfather himself of all the worlds told me thus: "You do go quickly near Indradyumna. He will go to Nīla mountain desirous of seeing Nīlamādhava. After being requested by Yama the Lord has vanished. He must not grieve over it. This (disappearance) cannot be made otherwise. That king, the fifth one in my line, should be spoken to in my words (i.e. conveyed my message) that for his sake I will propitiate Puruṣottama , the Supreme Soul, and will bring him from Śveta island [1] at the end of the thousandth horse-sacrifice. Let that king Indradyumna worship Viṣṇu by means of a thousand horse-sacrifices and stay now in the holy spot of Śrī Puruṣottama.

42-45. At the end, he will see with his (physical) eye Lord Viṣṇu of wooden form. That incarnation of Hari will become famous through him. At that time the bodies (i.e. idols) of Viṣṇu are to be certainly installed by me.

Formerly Lord Hari of bejewelled idol had been in four different forms. The king's priest had seen the Lord and informed the king directly.

The Lord of divine wooden form will incarnate in four forms. Hence, O leading king, do not be grieved. Your desire will certainly be fruitful. There is no doubt about it. Stay here without any worry."

Jaimini said :

46. Thus, O Brāhmaṇas, Nārada consoled the king and restored his confidence. Thereafter he spoke to him once again.

Nārada said :

47. Accompanied by Durgā the Blue-throated Lord (Śiva) is present at the tip of the excellent holy spot having the form of a conch-shell. [2] We shall go there. That is a flat land suitable for horse-sacrifice.

48. In it we shall build a very good structure that will stay firm for a thousand years, for the purpose of the horse-sacrifice. By visiting the Nṛsiṃha idol of the Lord residing on Nīla mountain we shall make our life contented and blessed.

49. At the end of the sacrifice we shall, for the purpose of destroying all obstacles and for increasing the benefit, install an idol worthy of being worshipped by you always.

50. Through excellent sages we shall begin the excellent sacrifice in a suitable manner. Delaying is not conducive to welfare. Such is the advice of Brahmā.

[1]: [1] : Śvetadvīpa: The abode of Viṣṇu. It is supposed to be in the Milk Ocean.

[2]: [2] : Śaṅkha-Kṣetra: Puruṣottama Kṣetra is conceived to be conch-shaped.

English translation

Summary: Indradyumna 's Grief Dispelled: Manifestation of Four-formed Visnu .

Jaimini said :

1-2. Then those Brāhmaṇas left the excellent chariot and walked on foot along with their followers. They approached Nīlakaṇṭha joyously. After worshipping Mahādeva and bowing down to Śrīdurgā they started climbing Nīla mountain [1] with the senses under perfect control.

3. It was overgrown with different kinds of trees and creepers and full of various types of birds. Rugged rocks prevented free passage therein. There was a halo round the mountain.

4. The huge rocks that were tossed about (on the mountain) were hovered around by humming bees causing a confusion of sounds. The waves and waters of the Southern Sea came as far as the ridge of this mountain.

5. It was beyond human imagination and always impenetrable due to the presence of huge serpents. The interior of the mountain was extremely terrible on account of the trumpeting sounds of elephants in their rut.

6. It was always infested with beasts of prey. They never knew an attack (by human beings) with weapons. Many herds of deer moved all around fearlessly.

7. They (i.e. the Brāhmaṇas) were desirous of entering it, but could not see the path leading into it. But due to Nārada 's presence they came to know the top of the mountain.

8. They reached the place where the Lord is present in the form of the divine lion beneath the black aloe-wood tree, dispelling the fear of all adversities.

9. On seeing that Lord crores of the sins of Brāhmaṇa -slaughter incurred by men perish. The Lord has a huge open mouth with terrible teeth and tawny-coloured dishevelled manes.

10. He looked fierce with three eyes. The body of the Daitya is kept on his thighs in a supine position. With his claws as frightful as thunderbolt the Lord is (depicted as) tearing the chest of the demon.

11. He has pink lustre with blazing (v.l. lolling) tongue. The Lord bursts into a thunderous laughter. In his arms the conch and the discus were shining. The coronet and the crown dazzled brilliantly.

12. Sparks of fire emit from his eyes, frightening all the quarters. His lotus-like feet have gone deep down into the earth as he has stamped on the ground with great force.

13. Viewing the primordial idol of Hari in the presence of Nārada they looked at the Lord without fear. Free from ailments they bowed down to him from a distance.

14. On seeing the Lord Indradyumna began to believe the words of Nārada. With steady confidence in the future task he said to the great sage:

15. “I am contented (as I have almost fulfilled my task), O great sage; you are the greatest storehouse of knowledge. This Nṛsiṃha is very difficult to be propitiated. He is frightful even to look at.

16. He should be worshipped well by people like you. He should be worshipped from a distance by people like me. I am contented and blessed merely by viewing him. All my sins have been destroyed.

17-19. Since you are nearby, O sage, we stand here fearlessly. The Lord has an excessively terrible form. How can he be propitiated by people deficient in vigour and power? He is excessively frightening in the act of tearing up the king of Daityas , the lord of the three worlds.

Where is that place in which the blue sapphire form of the ocean of mercy had stood originally, O excellent sage, and which bestows salvation by mere sight? Show me that (place) which I consider as the bestower of salvation, O eminent Brāhmaṇa.”

20. Thus requested Nārada pointed out to him the sacred place where the Lord stood covered with golden sands.

21. “See this Nyagrodha (Banyan) tree, O king. Its girth is one Yojana and its height is two Yojanas . It will stand till the end of the Kalpa . It bestows salvation on men.

22. One is liberated from the shackles of sins by coming under the shade of the tree. A man who gives up his life at the root of this tree, shall attain salvation.

23. Even by seeing the sinless Nārāyaṇa in the form of the Nyagrodha tree a man becomes sinless. Then what to say if he worships and eulogizes?

24. It was to the west of the root of this (tree) and to the north of Nṛsiṃha, O king, that Mādhava , the Lord, stood in four different forms.

25-26. He will manifest here once again to bless you. Viṣṇu has his own abode in the Śveta island which is the land of enjoyment of pleasures. Similarly this is known as his own abode in Jaṃbūdvīpa which is the land of holy rites. Since it is a very great secret, its revelation is not approved of.

27. Only one who is eligible to be liberated knows this place, O king. It cannot be believed by (ordinary) men and by vicious people in particular.

28. Another idol of Viṣṇu which was installed here by the citizens, O king, is also a bestower of salvation. What doubt can there be then in the case of an idol installed by the Self-born Lord (Brahmā)?

29. (Manifestation) and vanishing of the Lord of the universe has a purpose behind it. He incarnates in different forms in different Yugas for the sake of blessing the good and pious people.

30. The Lord takes the forms of fish, tortoise etc. When the purpose is served the great Lord vanishes.

31-32. The ocean of kindness is stationed here permanently without any reason. Just as Lord Viṣṇu incarnates elsewhere from the Śveta island, so also stationed here the Lord manifests himself mercifully in places like Dvārakā , Kāñcī , Puṣkara etc. like sprouts from the roots of (mother) tree.

33. Incarnations in the different lands, holy spots, Tīrthas and shrines are (his) partial incarnations. Let there be no doubt in you about it, O king.

34. Īśāna (Śiva) does not forsake this holy spot even for a moment as he does not leave off his own sphere (land). There will be another manifestation, O king, known by you."

35. After saying this, Nārada, the noble soul, pointed out the exact spot. There Indradyumna prostrated himself with eight limbs (touching the ground).

36. Thinking that the Lord was present there personally, he began to eulogize:

Indradyumna prayed :

37. O Lord of Devas , O Lord of the worlds, O destroyer of the agony of those who bow down (to you), save me, O lotus-eyed Lord. I have fallen into the ocean of worldly existence.

38. You are the only great Lord capable of destroying the mass of miseries. Only worthless, insignificant persons serve worthless and insignificant (deities) with a desire to get a small measure of happiness and comfort.

39. (I pray to you to destroy) the heap of my great sins of three kinds (accumulated) since very early times without a beginning, which cannot be annihilated and which goes on increasing in the course of different births.

40-41a. You are the bestower of salvation on men who see you directly. What of those who are prompted with the feelings of devotion? (They will certainly be liberated.) Those are fools who aver that you who are a storehouse of mercy, are subject to Karma . They do not know that Karma itself has been directed by you.

41b-42. What sins were not committed by the Brāhmaṇa Ajāmila [2] who had neglected everything prescribed for the people of different castes and stages of life? O Lord, he too was liberated by uttering your name. Merely by remembering (you) he was released from those (servants of Yama) with nooses in their hands.

43-44a. All the means of viewing you, O Lord of Devas, have been glorified. Indeed, when you are seen, all the doubts lurking in the heart are dispelled.

When one is free from doubts, certainly all sins and merits disappear.

44b-45. Bless me, O Lord. I am wretched and I seek refuge in you alone.

Even as I was within the womb, all my future events were decided by you. Let my life pass on with them. I beg you only for this.

46. Formerly your idol was stationed here and it has bestowed liberation on even a being of low order. Let me see that form with this mortal eye. I have no other aim in view.

47. After eulogizing the Slayer of Madhu thus with palms joined in reverence, the king bowed down again and lay prostrated on the ground with tears in his eyes.

48. Thereafter an ethereal voice with gentle and clear tone uttered as follows, from the middle of the sky, even as Indradyumna stood listening:

49. “Do not be worried, O king. I shall come within the range of your vision. Carry out the direction of Brahmā as mentioned by Nārada.”

50. On hearing that divine utterance as well as what had been spoken by Nārada before, the king gained conviction that the horse-sacrifice must be performed. He decided to do what was pleasing to th Lord.

51-52. With words choked with tears of joy, he spoke to Nārada again: “O sage, what has been commanded by you at the instance of Brahmā, the four-faced Lord, has been approved by this unembodied voice. There is no difference between Brahmā and Viṣṇu, the Lord of the worlds.

53. Indeed you are the son of the Lotus-born Lord. Your words are the words of the Lord. Hence it should be performed because it is conducive to welfare.”

[1]: [1] : Purāṇic descriptions are to be cautiously accepted. For example: Svarṇādri in Ekāmra Kṣetra is regarded as the site of Liṅgarāja temple but actually there is no hill there at all. So is the case here.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1. On seeing that the king was cheerful in his mind believing in (the efficacy of) the great sacrifice, Nārada , the delighter of the worlds, spoke to him with great pleasure:

2. " Devas lend a helping hand in the enterprises of meritorious ones. An example thereof is you yourself, as you have the assistance of the Four-faced Lord (Brahmā).

3-4a. Therefore come on. Let us go there to the presence of Nīlakaṇṭha . In front of him, O king, I shall install Nṛsiṃha , the destroyer of all Rākṣasas , the dispeller of all obstacles. The idol shall be facing the West.

4b-5a. The Lord has vanished, but this Nṛsiṃha is visible. The sacrifice in his presence shall yield excellent fruit.

5b-6. You go ahead quickly and get a palace built there. On my remembering (him) the son of Viśvakarman will come there and build the West-facing Mansion rapidly.

7-8. To the south of Nīlakaṇṭha, a hundred Bows' length away (i.e. 400 Hastas or about 100 Metres), there is a pretty old huge sandal tree. The land to the west of it shall be the requisite site (for sacrifice), O king. There you do perform a thousand horse-sacrifices.

9-10. You go. I shall stay here for five days and propitiate this divine lion of infinite form of fiery nature. In the return worship, in the idol, I shall install the Lord along with vital breath, sense-organs and mind. Just as one lights a lamp from another lamp, so also (I shall infuse the new idol with the power of the old one) and I shall bring the idol of splendid form."

11. On hearing these words of Nārada the excellent king hurriedly went near the sandal tree.

12-13a. There he saw the son of the Celestial Architect, who had come at the bidding of Nārada. He stood there assuming human form with the necessary implements.

13b-14. On seeing the king desirous of building a shrine, he spoke to him with palms joined in reverence: "O lord, I am conversant with the Science of Architecture. I shall build a temple of Narasiṃha with splendid features." O Brāhmaṇas , the king replied to him laughingly.

Indradyumna said :

15-17. You are no ordinary architect. You are an expounder of the Science of Architecture. This has been spoken by Nārada himself. You are the extremely reputed son of Tvaṣṭṛ .

In this tenantless big forest there was no human habitation before. O Architect, we have come only today; how can we have contacts with architects? You alone can be the architect (of the temple) of Viṣṇu of unmeasured refulgence. You always meditate upon him. You strictly abide by his behest.

18. The sage by whom you have been remembered, will himself come here in a couple of days taking the idol of Narasiṃha with him.

19. Therefore, build a palatial temple of Narasiṃha along with the rampart walls, ornamental gateways etc. It should be a splendid structure facing the West.

20. The king honoured him duly and engaged him in the work of construction. By spending a great deal of money he engaged a number of servants for collecting stones.

21. Thanks to the greatness of the celestial architect, O Brāhmaṇas, the excellent Mansion-like shrine was complete on the fourth day, though (ordinarily) it could have been accomplished only after a long time.

22-24. When the day dawned clear, the king concluded his daily round of holy rites. Accompanied by his followers he took with him the requisite materials for the installation. While he awaited the arrival of Nārada, presently (mixed) sounds were heard in the sky, viz. those of conch-shells, Mṛdaṅga drums, Muraja drums, auspicious songs and instruments of music, the sounds of bells, the trumpeting of elephants and shouts of "Be victorious, be victorious".

25-31. On hearing them Indradyumna and other kings, Brāhmaṇas well-versed in the Vedas and thousands of Vaiṣṇavas stood surprised. While they were thinking like 'These sounds have risen without any (visible) source. No doubt it is a mysterious phenomenon,' a wind blew from the South. There were showers of flowers with great fragrance accompanied by the humming sounds of bees. O Brāhmaṇas, they were drenched with the waters of Gaṅgā .

Immediately after this, Nārada, the son of Brahmā, came with the idol of Narasiṃha, which had been made by Viśvakarman. It had a halo around it. It was highly delightful. It was embellished with many kinds of gems and decorative features. It had divine garlands and robes. Divine scents and unguents had been smeared upon it. It was very beautiful. The holy rite of infusing Prāṇa (vital airs) had been completed herein. It was rendered splendid by celestial women with diamond-studded chowries in their hands. The idol was kept in an excellent Vimāna (a decorated carriage, or palanquin) created by the power of penance.

32-37. On seeing the idol, all the kings and the followers of the kings became greatly pleased. The Lord had vanished. Has he been brought back by Nārada?' thought all those delighted souls. They praised the sage too. On carefully observing the form of Narasiṃha that was near them, they thought that it was a replica of the earlier idol of Nṛsiṃha. With delighted mind the king stood up in honour thereof. He circumambulated Had and bent down his head so as to touch the ground. At the behest of the king the sage furnished the palace of splendid characteristics with all the requisites befitting the faithful devotion and affluence (of the king). The idol of the Lord of Devas along with Dharā (Earth) and Ramā (Lakṣmī) was installed on a gem-set altar in an auspicious hour. The idol was infused with Yogic power.

In the company of Vaiṣṇava Brāhmaṇas, the kings and the intelligent Nārada King Indradyumna eulogized it with secret Upaniṣad Mantras , Smṛti Texts, eulogies, and passages from scriptures with great joy.

Indradyumna said :

38-39. O Lord, possessing single, multiple, gross, subtle and minute forms, O Lord beyond the firmament, O Lord with a single form of the firmament, O Lord with the shape of the sky, O pervading one, O Lord stationed in the sky, O Lord mounted on the firmament, O Lord with the sky for the tresses, O Lord with a lotus for womb! O Divine Lion, save me from the ocean of misery. O Lord having the combined splendour of many crores of suns coming out (together), O Lord who are always near at hand and yet stationed far away, O Lord who are neither away nor close by, O Lord with the states of Bodhya (i.e. that which should be known) and Bodha (i.e. knowledge)!

40. You are both comprehensible and incomprehensible. You can be realised through knowledge, yet you cannot be so realized. You are beyond Māyā . You can be measured, comprehended through inference; you are the cause of everything. You are the maker of everything. You are the knower, protector and annihilator (of all things). O Witness of the universe, obeisance to you!

41-42. (We know) you are the sole cause of the destruction of misery, and not merely the cause; you are born ahead in order to dispel doubts. O Lord with fiery form, (O Lord) with knowledge as form; O light! O Lord, the source of the collection of Stoma sacrifices; O cause of creation! Grant me the excellent perpetual devotion unto your lotuslike feet, the devotion which is the source of the four Puruṣārthas . There are persons who are perpetually engaged in the rites etc. laid down in Śrutis and Smṛtis but are bound within the ocean of worldly existence. They stay here in a wretched condition.

43-45. I seek refuge in you, the Lord with infinite number of feet, [1] hands, eyes and ears, whose garments are the quarters, whose excellent ear-rings are the Sun and the Moon, who have an excellent necklace made of the clusters of stars, who have the wonderfully divine form of Nṛsiṃha (Man-Lion) and who fulfil the desires of devotees.

I bow down to the Lord whose lotus-like feet bloom by the light of the gems of the crown of Brahmā; on the ground of the extremity of the pair of whose lotus-like feet his (Brahmā's) head which is evolved out of the five elements, rolls, and which divine feet the women of the king of Suras bear on their heads.

46. I bow down to that fierce divine lion who destroys the mass of sins of those who resort to his feet—the lion who is an ocean of mercy and by the stroke of whose lotus-like feet all the Cosmic Eggs are shattered.

47. I bow down to Nṛhari who has the three worlds in his belly, who drowns the sound of the thundering clouds by means of his fierce and boisterous laughter, and who routes away the mass of sins by means of the groups of clouds that are scattered when he shakes his thick cluster of manes.

48. Obeisance to you, salute to you, bow to you, O Viṣṇu, O Lord merciful to the poor and the wretched; save me the helpless one. O enemy of Mura , may there be no bondage of physical bodies for me in the prison of worldly existence after attaining you.

49. O Lord, have compassion for me so that at the end of the thousand horse-sacrifices I shall be able to see you of divine form with these pḥysical eyes.

50. O Lord of Yajñas , show me your favour and let me have your proximity, so that my thousand sacrifices may conclude without obstacles.

51. Crores of the heaps of sins of those who eulogize you perish. So it is no wonder that virtue, wealth and love are within their reach. O Viṣṇu, those men who resort to you are the enjoyers of salvation.

52. After eulogizing that Divine Lion thus, the king became delighted in his mind. He fell down on the ground frequently by way of prostrating in front of him.

Jaimini said :

53. That shrine and holy spot of Narasiṃha was built by Brahmā formerly for blessing Indradyumna and for the welfare of all the worlds.

54. There is no doubt about this that those who visit that Nṛsiṃha installed along with Śaṃbhu , do not get involved in the bondage of physical bodies, O Brāhmaṇas.

55. Those who eulogize that Lord in the form of Divine Lion by means of this prayer, obtain whatever is desired by them mentally and even more than that.

56-61. The Lord who gives all desired things grants him salvation.

The Divine Lion was installed in that holy spot by the great sage, the son of Brahmā, on the twelfth day in the bright half of the lunar month of Jyeṣṭha (while it was) in conjunction with the Svātī constellation. Those who visit the Lord on that day obtain more than the benefit of a thousand horse-sacrifices.

Men who bathe the idol with Pañcāmṛta , milk, coconut-water or scented water after offering worship, shall attain the world of Brahmā. They should worship the great Lion with all offerings including milk pudding. Garlands of China -rose flowers as well as splendid garlands of other sweet-smelling flowers should be offered. Incenses, lights, camphor, very fine betel leaves etc. should be offered. Prayers should be recited with excellent words and nice tone. With loud shouts of “Be victorious”, be should be circumambulated and bowed down to. Charitable gifts should be made and Brāhmaṇas should be propitiated. By propitiating Narasiṃha thus one shall obtain the world of Brahmā.

62. The first incarnation of the Lion, O Brāhmaṇas, appeared on the fourteenth day of the month of Vaiśākha on a Saturday at the time of dusk in conjunction with Kṭttikā star.

63. If one worships Narasiṃha duly with mental concentration and purity on that day, the heap of sins accumulated in the course of crores of births is burned at the very same instant like a heap of cotton by fire.

64. By visiting, touching, bowing down, falling down (at the feet) and devoutly eulogizing the Lord one is liberated from sins just as a serpent gets rid of slough.

65. He shall not be afflicted with sickness, grief or worries. He shall obtain all desired objects and the benefit of a horse-sacrifice.

66. O Brāhmaṇas, if Yajñas, charitable gifts or other holy rites are performed near him once, they shall have crores and crores of times the benefit by the favour of Narasiṃha.

English translation

The sages enquired :

1. After the idol had been installed in that holy spot of Narasiṃha , O sage, what did the king do? Relate it as we are very eager.

Jaimini said :

2-8. At the outset he invited all the Devas beginning with Indra . Then he invited thousands of sages and Brāhmaṇas , persons who had studied the four Vedas along with their six ancillaries, those who could recite the four Vedas by Padapāṭha and Kramapāṭha , those persons who were experts in the performance of Yajñas , persons who had mastered Mīmāṃsā system of philosophy, those who had very good practical experience in the various holy rites along with the knowledge of Kalpasūtra texts and their glosses, those who were experts in the eighteen lores, those who were proficient in religious texts, those who were spotlessly pure on account of their good conduct, men of noble families, truthful persons. He particularly invited Vaiṣṇavas respectfully. All the kings, Siddhas , Seven Sages, Brāhmaṇas, good Śūdras and the lords of the continents were invited.

The Assembly Hall of the king extended to two Krośas . It had been constructed with stones and plastered with lime and mortar.

In some places the ground was set with precious stones. In some places it was covered with gold plates. In different places the surfaces of the ground were suitably paved with crystals or silver plates.

9-14. There were huge columns of gems covered with silk cloths. The Assembly Hall had a beautiful awning. Garlands of sweet smelling flowers and chowries (were kept there for decoration) with pearl necklaces in between. There were splendid and beautiful windows. The Hall was sprinkled with oil scented with black aloe-wood and water with sandal paste.

Flowers of all the seasons were scattered everywhere. There were gardens on either side of the chamber with flowers of all the seasons available therein. The tanks had crystalline steps leading into the water adorned with red and white lotuses. Different kinds of aquatic birds such as Cakravākas (ruddy geese), Plavas (a variety of ducks), swans, Sārasas (cranes) etc. moved about here and there in the lakes chirping sweetly. There was cool, sweet, pure, clean and fragrant water in the lakes. There were hundreds of such lakes all round, O Brāhmaṇas. They (had steps etc.) so that people could comfortably get into them and come up. They were splendid in design and pattern. They had plenty of shade. This sacrificial hall of king Indradyumna was exactly like that of Marutta [1] , O excellent Brāhmaṇas. It was beautifully planned and constructed by Viśvakarman .

15-23. On an auspicious day in conjunction with an auspicious constellation the king accommodated the members of the assembly in different places. The kings were seated on thrones. The sages, Siddhas and groups of Brahminical sages were seated on very valuable carpets. The Devas were seated on golden pedestals. The (ordinary) Brāhmaṇas were seated on their befitting seats. Others were seated on excellent seats in accordance with their status very comfortably. Śacīpati (Indra, the husband of Śacī) was seated on his own throne set with diamonds and the insignia of his imperial majesty. He was seated in the middle of Devas, kings and sages.

King (Indradyumna) adored and honoured them at the outset by means of divine garlands, scents, clothes, seats etc. along with the priest for the sake of prosperity.

Like an humble and wretched person, the king worshipped him so that even the Lord of the three worlds considered it surprising.

By worshipping the Siddhas, Devas and sages he, like Indra, caused surprise even to Kubera of great affluence. Then he worshipped the Devas who too had much of wealth themselves by means of various services and offerings of presents. The king of the earth was not at all excited in his mind. He adored and honoured the kings with royal dress befitting kings, and they thought, ‘Now we shall be kings. It is true that a realm had been acquired by succession but not so lavish a dress as these.’

24. Again he honoured the Vaiṣṇavas by means of presents and offerings as a result of which, though quiescent themselves, they thought that the acquisition of objects was surprising.

25-27. Then, the king in whom Sattvaguṇa predominated, duly worshipped the Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas and Vaiśyas along with the sages. With great excitement he made the ministers worship the others too. He was then delighted. Accompanied by Nārada and his own priest, he humbly approached Mahendra . With palms joined in reverence he spoke to him loudly:

Indradyumna said :

28-33. I seek your favour. This is my wish, O Lord of Devas. Be pleased with me. I wish to worship the Yajñapuruṣa (i.e. Viṣṇu) by means of horse-sacrifice.

Permit me, O Lord. You are the overlord of sacrifices. All those who live in the three worlds obediently carry out your orders. Until the thousand sacrifices are concluded you stay here and be in the middle of the assembly along with the Devas.

O Lord of Devas, I do not wish to perform Yajñas with a desire for your position. O Lord of Devas, you always know the attitude of everyone.

Lord Mādhava was seen by you all here before in physical form during your worship. Now he has vanished beneath the sands.

I will perform a thousand horse-sacrifices in order to get him manifested once again, O Indra, at the bidding of the Four-faced Lord. If the Lord becomes manifested once again, it will be conducive to your welfare too.

34-42. When this was announced by the king, Suras , the chief of whom was Mahendra, remembered the ethereal utterance that was heard immediately after the Lord had vanished and then spoke thus with great delight:

“O Indradyumna, you are a great soul on the earth. Really you are truthful. Your activities now have already been foreseen by us as future occurrences. We shall assist you in this task of sanctifying all the three worlds, in which the creator of the worlds himself has become engaged. While the Lord was entering the inner bowels of the earth here itself, he had sympathetically told us, ‘I shall create a wooden body once again’.

Now this is settled. There is nothing displeasing, disagreeable to us or to Indra in this matter. Your endeavour for our good luck is pleasurable to us. Comfortably worship Viṣṇu who is fond of his devotees, O eminent king, by means of the horse-sacrifice to be repeated a thousand times. Though the Lord is fond of his devotees, it is very difficult for us to propitiate him. We shall forsake Deva -hood and with great devotion propitiate the Lord in this holy spot humbly in the form of human beings. A pleasing act performed in the human world brings prosperity

Jaimini said :

43. When this was spoken by the Devas along with Indra, the king worshipped the Lord with a delighted mind for the sake of beginning the sacrifice.

44-46. He worshipped the Lord and made a thousand offerings in the manner prescribed. Then with great reverence, the king looked at the groups of Pitṛs (Manes), the Brāmaṇas present in the assembly and the performers of the Yajña who had been duly adorned. He kept the tutelary deity Viṣṇu in front along with the sacred fire. He waited thus for the auspicious hour stipulated. When the rite of Svastivācana (ceremonial rite preparatory to a sacrifice or any religious observance) was concluded, he stood nearby along with his wife with pure and auspicious apparel.

47. After making the pure Brāhmaṇas perform all the holy rites of Svastivācana , Puṇyāha and Vṛddhikarman , [2] the king who had got ready all the requisite things, formally nominated the Ṛtviks .

48-50. On being chosen they initiated the excellent king along with his wife. When they were urged by the members of the assembly they worshipped the desired objects separately for the sake of initiation (?)

The blazing sacred fire named Āhavanīya was brought to the altar. It appeared like the refulgence of Viṣṇu himself, which is the cause of auspiciousness unto all the three worlds.

They then sprinkled the sanctified water charged with holy spells on the chief horse which had all the splendid characteristics in its limbs. After taking the ceremonial permission of the Lords of the Quarters, they released the horse.

51. The king who had been properly initiated, observed the vow of silence. He sat on the skin of a Ruru deer in the middle of the Assembly Hall like Lord Mṛtyuñjaya (Śiva) himself.

55-57. With a meaningful glance the king ordered that the invitees be fed. At the bidding of the king the minister had got ready all types of vessels for the purpose of their meals. Very valuable vessels studded with gems and jewels were made ready for the Suras to take their sumptuous food.

Vessels of pure gold were brought afresh everyday for the sages, Brāhmaṇas and kings to take their food, O Brāhmaṇas. For ordinary Kṣatriyas and Vaiśyas splendid silver vessels were brought, O Brāhmaṇas. For Śūdras, to take their food, vessels of pure bell-metal were brought.

Everyday after taking their food the people dropped those vessels in pits as though they were the leaves on which food had been served and taken in.

Not only those who had been invited to take their food in that Yajña festival but also their sons, grandsons and great-grandsons, nay, everyone in the line, were respectfully fed with cooked food of five flavours at the behest of King Indradyumna.

58-63. All those persons stayed there as though they belonged to one family till the great sacrifice was concluded. The officer-in-charge (for the supervision of all arrangements regarding reception etc.) of the people from a territory was the king of that land. The person to look into the requirements of the kings was Nārada who was impartial in his outlook, was eager to help others and had been particularly requested for that purpose by Indradyumna.

The person to look into the requirements of the leading Suras beginning with Indra and the celestial sages was the excellent king himself.

The king himself ran about here and there to see that the sacrifices were duly completed.

Six different kinds of foodstuffs and beverages were prepared in two ways by men.

In the case of Devas, it was done by men who were experts in the use of magic and spells. In the case of men it was done by those who were well-versed in the culinary art.

Indeed the heaven-dwellers are never aware of hunger or thirst. Their diet is nectar. Even to them that food (served at the festival of Indradyumna) was a wonderful thing because they had not tasted it before.

64. In the mortal world such a food as was distributed in the abode of Indradyumna was rare for men (elsewhere). The only difference between Indradyumna and Indra was that the former's residence was in the mortal world.

65-70. This extremely wonderful show recurred everyday with ever new features. The foodstuffs, their honour and the eagerness for them increased everyday, O excellent Brāhmaṇas.

The different things mentioned below increased as though they competed with one another: sweet scents, flower garlands, musk and other unguents, silk garments and cloths of fine texture and variegated colour, pillows, seats, cushions, bejewelled palanquins and couches, beds, fly-laps with gem-set rods, betel leaves along with nutmeg, cloves and comphor, sweet charming songs, different kinds of dances produced by experts of the school of Sage Bharata [3] etc., hundreds of panegyrists and bards fully conversant with the fame and pedigree of their respective royal families. These and other rare objects were eagerly enjoyed by Devas and human beings.

71-78. Things in one place were more wonderful than elsewhere. There were no inferior things anywhere.

The foodstuff served to the residents of the nether worlds was superior to nectar. After consuming it they never desired to go back to Pātāla (nether worlds).

The cities in Pātāla are illuminated by clusters of gems. They have no necessity for the light of the sun. (They are devoid of sunlight.) The king, therefore, lodged them in cities of that sort for their residence, so that they thought that they were still in Pātāla. They comfortably seated themselves. They ate, played and lay down joyously.

As for Devas, they do not touch the earth elsewhere but in the city of Indradyumna, which was more fascinating than even heaven. They were eagerly engaged in happy sports as they pleased. There they never left the ground.

They say that in Svarga one gets happiness after eagerly desiring for it. But here (in the city of Indradyumna) there was happiness everywhere even without wishing for it.

Men were respectfully and earnestly honoured and fed there. No person was entreated or begged of. How could anyone have been turned back?

The abodes provided by the Emperor were like their own houses for the people. Only in their houses everything that was always available here was not so (readily available) there.

79-80. Whatever object was beyond (even) their expectations there (in their houses) was easily available here in plenty.

When the Yajñas were thus joyously performed for the propitiation of the Lord of Yajñas, every (valuable) thing that the earth had was taken away in the horse-sacrifice of the king. Whatever there was originally was replenished when the earth was adorned with a shower of gold.

81-85a.Thus charitable gifts, honouring and feeding of all the people staying in the three worlds went on everyday in accordance with the injunctions. The people commended the horse-sacrifice and repeated the following verses of praise to one another:

“There has never been such a collection of the materials of a sacrifice like this before. This is exactly in accordance with the injunctions of Brahmā as well as the scriptural texts.

There was never a sacrifice like that of King Indradyumna before. There will never be one like this. There are neither suppliants nor unwilling donors. They have not been invited there.”

O Brāhmaṇas, no desire remained unfulfilled even in the case of Devas. The excellent sacrifice of the king with such abundance of supply went on thus. Each of the subsequent sacrifices was better furnished and performed with more ardent faith than the previous one.

85b-90. Those who had written Smṛtis , those who had composed the liturgical texts, those who had expounded the sacred treatises, those who were experts in the performance of Yajñas and those who were adorned with (i.e. possessed) good conduct celebrated everything beginning with fetching the sacred fire and ending with the valedictory bath in the proper order.

The sacrifice performed with the permission of the members of the assembly, O Brāhmaṇas, was conducive to the delight of the king.

There was neither a fault of omission nor of commission in regard to the accent or syllables of the Mantras . Indeed those who had laid down the injunctions were themselves performers of the rites.

The atonement has been mentioned in those cases where there is reasonable cause for the same. But there (in the king's sacrifice) there was no mistake in the holy rites, because the Yogins and Karmayogins (those who are well conversant with holy rites) performed the same. The divine Seven Sages were the Sadasyas (Members of the Assembly) watching the proceedings of the sacrifice. They could discriminate between merits and demerits and they conducted the holy rites properly. Yājñavalkya and other sages were chosen and nominated as Ṛtviks.

91-94. Those sages were present in the sacred assembly. In the course of their mutual discourse they recited, recounted and related Nyāya Texts, secret Upaniṣadic Mantras, folk-tales and songs with devotion to Viṣṇu as their main theme and anecdotes of Hari 's (exploits) that dispel all sins. They expounded them in the assembly of the king.

The joyous Devas, O Brāhmaṇas, the leader of whom was Mahendra, imbibed the Havis in that Yajña personally standing in the middle of the sacrificial fire. They forgot Amarāvatī . They had been away from it for a long time.

95. It is Amṛta (Nectar) that Brahmā had formerly allotted to them as Havis. The Devas were joyous, vigorous and long-lived after consuming it.

96. In other places, apart from the site of the performance of sacrifice, many other objects of pleasure were furnished by Indtadyumna. Devas enjoyed all of them.

97. Kings of serpents, the residents of the bottom of Pātāla, enjoyed more worldly pleasures in the human world than in their own place.

98. They too never desired to go back to Pātāla even mentally. Thus the Yajña proceeded affording great pleasure to everyone in the three worlds.

99-100.In this holy place Puruṣottama at the behest of Brahmā King Indradyumna performed Yajñas in order to propitiate the Lord of the universe. In due order the king concluded a thousand sacrifices short by one. All of them were duly performed in accordance with the injunctions.

101-103. Then the king began his thousandth horse-sacrifice. Day by day, the king acquired more and more spiritual merit. On the night of the sixth day from that of the extraction of Soma juice during the fourth prahara (prahara = period of 3 hrs.) he meditated on the immutable Viṣṇu.

Very fortunately in the course of his meditation the king saw, as if in direct perception, the island of Śvetadvīpa made of bright crystals.

104-106. He saw the Milk Ocean that stood encircling the island all round. There were great Kalpa trees (all round) that had rendered all the quarters fragrant by the sweet scent of the flowers.

Everywhere within and without those trees, on their fruits, sprouts and barks, there were the bright red-coloured idols of the Lord which were marked with conch and discus and which were brilliantly adorned with all the ornaments. In the middle he saw an excellent Pandal (Maṇḍapa) made of divine jewels.

107. The Pavilion was refulgent with a throne in the centre that shone like the sun and that was studded with gems. It was very fascinating as a gentle, cool breeze blew over the waves of the Milk Ocean.

108-109. In its centre he saw Lord Viṣṇu holding conch, discus and iron club. He resembled a blue cloud. He was adorned with garlands of sylvan flowers. Divine ornaments were worn by him. He seemed to surpass and put to shame all the abodes of loveliness and the houses of beauty and splendour by means of his body.

110-113. To his right he saw Ananta standing, supporting the earth. He had the splendour of a crore of moons. He had the lustre resembling that of the mountain Himālaya . He was charming with the crowned hoods spreading over him like an umbrella. He had a pair of jewel-set ear-rings. He had put on a beautiful blue upper garment. In his four hands shone palm tree (lāṅgala ?), plough, conch and discus. He was adorned with necklaces, armlets, bangles and rings. He had a waist-band and a girdle. He had decorated himself with divine jewels. His physical body was inebriated due to divine liquor called Hālā . He had pleasing smiles and brilliant eyes.

114-115. He saw Lakṣmī of splendid features stationed on his right side. She had a lotus in her hand and held her fingers in the position of granting of boons as well as freedom from fear. She had the lustre of saffron. She had bright eyes. Her wonderful body was a model for all the young women in the three worlds. He saw her seated in a lotus. She was a pet daughter of the Salt Ocean.

116. He saw Pitāmaha (Brahmā) standing in front of him with palms joined in reverence. He saw the discus of the Lord full of gems stationed on the left side of the Lord.

117. On seeing the Lord of the universe eulogized by Sanaka and other prominent sages in his dream, O excellent Brāhmaṇas, the king became extremely delighted.

118. Standing there in contemplation, he eulogized in words choked with (tears) of joy, the infinite Lord of a fiery form never seen before.

Indradyumna said :

119. Obeisance to you, O support of the universe. Obeisance to you, O soul of the universe. O (cause of) salvation transcending the three Guṇas , O Lord shining with good qualities, obeisance to you.

120. Salute to you with the form of very splendid perfect knowledge devoid of impurities. Obeisance to you having the appellation Śabdabrahman (Brahman in the form of sound), O Lord with the universe as your form.

121. Hail to you, O destroyer of the miseries of those who have fallen into (the ocean of) worldly existence and therefore are weary. Obeisance to you who cuts the knot in the heart very difficult to be untied.

122. Obeisance to you, the main pillar of the structure of the fourteen worlds. Salute to the discus-bearing Lord, the architect who fashioned crores of Cosmic Eggs.

123. Obeisance, obeisance, to the Moon rising from the ocean of the nectar of kindness. Obeisance to the ocean of compassion, the sole secret uplifter of the poor.

124. Obeisance to the illuminator of the Sun and other luminous bodies. Hail to the Lord who blazes with a loud report within every heart and burns the sins within.

125. Repeated obeisance to the purifier, to the purest of all pure ones. Obeisance, obeisance to the weightiest one, to the most excellent one, to the longest one.

126. Obeisance, obeisance to the nearest one, to the most distant one, to the minutest one. Obeisance to you, O Nārāyaṇa , the most excellent one, the holiest one.

127. Save me, O Lord of the universe. Obeisance to you, O kinsman of the poor. After obtaining you as a comfortable boat, I have crossed the ocean of worldly existence.

128-131. When you are seen, O Lord of Ramā , all my distress has disappeared. O Lord, it is certain indeed that those who have attained you having consciousness and bliss for your form, will get their miseries destroyed. It shall be the cause of the outcome of supreme delight.

Save, save me who have sunk in the ocean of worldly existence, whose mind is in a wretched state. When the midday sun blazes in the sky, how can there be darkness!

Still in contemplation, he bowed down to the Lord of the universe eulogizing thus.

At the end of the meditation he woke up and understood everything. At the end of the dream Indradyumna remembered the Supreme Soul by means of his own soul.

132-135a. After seeing this extremely mysterious dream the eminent king considered himself to be one who has fulfilled his task. He thought that all his thousand horse-sacrifices had become fruitful and his good luck was imminent. He thought thus: 'Indeed the words of the Celestial Sage can never be in vain. Now how will the Lord be directly perceptible to me?' In this anxious state the king spent the remaining part of the night. Then he told Nārada the details of the dream experienced by him.

135b-136. Nārada told him: "O king, your grief has come to an end, since you saw the Lord at the time of dawn. A dream at that time, O excellent king, yields the benefit within ten days.

137 139. At the end of the sacrifice the Lord will be visible to you here as Brahmā, the sire of the mobile and immobile beings, conveyed to you through my words.

That Creator of the universe also was seen by you in this dream. Therefore, let the Yajña be performed. Do not divulge this to anyone else.

O tiger among kings, this dream has been brought about by Hari in an inscrutable manner. But only to a fortunate one shall a dream like this occur.

[1]: [1] : Marutta, son of Avikṣit: His richly performed sacrifice was personally attended by god Indra and others. God Siva gave him a Himalayan peak of gold. In his sacrifice all utensils, beds etc. were of gold. His sacrifice became an ideal for successive generations. (vide Mbh Droṇa 55.37-49.)

[2]: [2] : According to Āpastaṃba Dh.S.I.4.13.8 the three Svastivācana etc. mentioned here are a part of Puṇyāhavācana and not separate rites. The performer of an auspicious rite worships Brāhmaṇas and requests them to declare the day to be auspicious (Puṇyāha) for the performance of the rite. The performer of the rite requests Brāhmaṇas to announce Svasti , Puṇyāha and ṛddhi and they declare ' Oṃ svasti ', ' Oṃ puṇyāham ' and ' Oṃ (karma) ṛdhyatām '. But the elaborateness and separateness of the performance of these shows the late nature of the Text leaning to Saṃskāra-ratnamālā .

[3]: [3] : This refers to Bharata's Nāṭya Śastra (circa 400 CE).

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-2. Then began the holy rite of Sutyā [1] (i.e. extraction of the Soma juice) as a part of the horse-sacrifice of the king. In that activity, O Brāhmaṇas , all the three worlds came to be like one family. All other sounds were drowned by the sounds of the scriptural passages and hymns that touched the vaults of heaven. The Mantras had the prescribed order (without any deviation). Proper accents were given to all the words.

3. Everything desired was given to the poor people without any restriction. That came to be comparable to the Kalpa tree for actors, dancers and bards.

4-9. In the middle (of the sacrificial site) on the southern seashore near Bilveśvara the royal camp was made for the purpose of taking the valedictory bath. The servants who had been appointed there by the king, O Brāhmaṇas, approached the king with great excitement. They reported to the king with palms joined in reverence:

"O Lord, a great tree was seen on the shore of the great ocean. Its top has sunk deep into the sea waves and the roots continue to float above on the waves. It has the colour of madder throughout. It is marked with conch and discus symbols. It was seen by us floating near the bathing house. It is exceedingly wonderful, it is a tree that has never been seen before. It resembles the sun rising with all his rays. It has rendered the entire foreshore fragrant with its sweet scent. It is not an ordinary tree. It seems to be a celestial tree. Certainly it appears that some god has come in the guise of this tree."

10. On hearing the words of the employees the king spoke to Nārada : "They say, an excellent tree has been seen. What does it indicate?"

11-13. Nārada laughingly said to the excellent king: "Let the Pūrṇāhuti (final offering of ghee at the end of a sacrifice) be concluded so that the sacrifice may be fruitful. Your good fortune is imminent as you have already seen in the dream. The hair that has dropped down from the body of the cosmic-formed, imperishable Viṣṇu who has been formerly seen in the Śvetadvīpa has assumed the form of a tree. This partial incarnation of the Supreme Lord shall remain (forever) on the earth.

14-17. The Lord, fond of his devotees, has incarnated in that form. Indeed this tree is not man-made. Except you, O excellent king, O tiger among men, no one on the earth can be fortunate enough to have sight of this holy tree. Thanks to your good fortune, O great king, that it will be the guest of the eyes of the people of all the worlds. It is destructive of all sins. Conclude your valedictory bath near the shore of the sea. Celebrate a very great festival with the auspicious thread (tied round your wrist). Install the Lord of Yajñas in the form of the tree on the great Altar here."

18. After discussing thus both of them, the king as well as Nārada, joyously equipped themselves with all necessary things and went to that place where the lordly tree (was seen).

19-21. On seeing it everyone was extremely delighted. They thought that Brahman itself had come to them. They considered their life fruitful and themselves living-liberated souls of great prosperity.

King Indradyumna too sank in the ocean of nectar. This king, a beloved of the Lord, saw the tree in the same manner as the Lord of the universe whom he saw in the dream, with four branches as four arms. The excellent king thought that his exertion had become fruitful. O Brāhmaṇas, he got rid of his grief caused by the disappearance of the Blue-sapphire Mādhava .

22-27. With tears of joy welling in his eyes the king bowed down again and again to the tree. He brought it up through the Brāhmaṇas as it was tossed about by the waves.

Conch-shells were blown. Kāhāla trumpets were sounded to the accompaniment of Muraja , Dhakkā and Paṭaha drums. Songs were sung. Musical instruments were played. Thousands of people shouted "Victory to you". Handfuls of sweet-smelling flowers were repeatedly showered from the sky. Vessels of incense fumigated with black aloe-wood were taken round. The tree was fanned with chowries having rods studded with gems and jewels, held and waved by courtesans of great beauty in the prime of their youth. It was rendered splendid by means of flags and banners made of divine silk cloths. It was surrounded by a number of saintly kings, vassal kings, the cavalry and the infantry. It was saluted (and panegyrized) by the bards and eulogized by great sages.

28. The Brāhmaṇas, priests, learned men and scholars well-versed in the Vedas prayed to it. It was attended upon by kings, persons born in the families of Vaiśyas as well as good Śūdras .

29-32. It was eulogized with various hymns from the Vedas, Smṛtis and Purāṇas .

They took that heavenly tree of Viṣṇu that was eulogized, that had been beautified with garlands and sweet scents and that had come to the terrestrial world surrounded (by various things) to the great Altar that had been wonderfully and tastefully decorated with canopies and completely covered without leaving any space in between. At the bidding of Indradyumna they installed it on the Altar. At the instance of Nārada the king worshipped it. The excellent king worshipped it with thousands of offerings and services of divine nature.

At the end of the worship he asked Nārada, the excellent sage:

33-35. "Of what sort shall the idols of Viṣṇu be? Who will carve it?" On hearing that the sage said: "The size is of unimaginable greatness. Who knows his extraordinary activity? Even the creator of all the worlds is in doubt regarding it."

While Nārada and the king were discussing thus, an unembodied divine speech was heard from the firmament.

36-43a. The speech was heard by all those who were present there with great surprise:

"The Lord is not under the influence of any person. He is beyond the path of discourse and contemplation. He will directly incarnate in the great Altar which shall be kept well-concealed. Let that be covered for the next fifteen days. Let this old carpenter who is present here with weapons (and instruments) in his hands be allowed to go in and let the doors be closed carefully thereafter.

Let there be instrumental music as long as the carving work goes on. If the sound of chiselling or carving is heard it will result in deafness and blindness. He who hears it will go to hell and his line may become extinct.

No one shall enter the place nor peep in. If anyone other than the employee looks in, there is great danger to the king, the realm and the person who looks in. Both of his eyes will become blind.

Hence as long as the idol is completely carved and chiselled no one shall look into the premises. If the work is concluded, the Lord himself shall announce it. Whatever is to be done for the sake of the happiness of all the worlds the Lord himself will announce."

43b-46. On hearing these words Nārada and others desired to do what had been mentioned by Viṣṇu himself. By that time the carpenter too came there. He said to the king, "With the wood of divine form I shall fashion all those things seen by you in the dream."

After saying this Lord Nārāyaṇa who himself took the form of the old carpenter for the sake of deceiving (ordinary) men, vanished behind the Altar.

[1]: [1] : Sutyā: This pressing out of Soma is generally done on the last day of the sacrifice and the day therefore came to be called Sutyā .

English translation

Jaimini said :

1. Thereafter the king did what the goddess (the ethereal voice) had said: He attended to everything.

2-8. As days passed on, a divine fragrance was experienced. There was a shower of the flowers of Pārijāta that was very rare in the world of human beings. There was the sound of divine music. The songs were very sweet. There was a shower of (tiny drops of) waters of the celestial Gaṅgā , very beautiful and splendid in the form of small drops. The sweet aroma of the ichor of Airāvata and other elephants was experienced. It was unbearable to wild elephants but very pleasing to (other) living beings. All those Devas who had come for the sake of the Yajñas were free from ailments, O Brāhmaṇas . On seeing Hari becoming visible they worshipped him. Just as they worshipped Mādhava before, so also they worshipped the tree of Viṣṇu . In the course of the worship of Devas divine symbols appeared. On the fifteenth day the Lord completed the work. In the manner explained by me before the Lord manifested himself in four forms. It has been described to you before. He was seated in the divine throne along with Bala , Subhadrā and Sudarśana .

Janārdana has conch, discus, iron club and lotus shining in his hands.

9-15. Balabhadra has the shape of a serpent. He holds iron club, mace, discus and lotus. He has seven hoods in the form of an umbrella shining with crowns and also ear-rings.

Subhadrā of charming face, granting boons and immunity from fear (through the positions of her fingers) holds a lotus (in her hand). This is the manifestation of Lakṣmī who has been the embodiment of the consciousness of everyone. Indeed in the course of the incarnation as Kṛṣṇa she was born of the womb of Rohiṇī (?) [1] and had the forms pf Bala and Bhadrā (i.e. Subhadrā) since she contemplated on the form of Bala. She could not bear even for a moment separation from the Lord of sportful incarnation. There is no difference at all between Kṛṣṇa and Bala.

Since they were born of the same womb, the story in the Purāṇa says that she is the sister of Baladeva . So is the way in which ordinary people also mention it.

This is the case when she has the male form (?). In the female form as Lakṣmī she stays everywhere. By a male name she is Lord Viṣṇu and by a female name she is Kamalālayā ('lotus-aboded one'). Among Devas, lower animals, human beings etc. there is none greater than they.

16. Who else other than the lotus-eyed Lord can bear the fourteen worlds? Ananta bears them with the tips of his hoods. He is called Bala.

17. His sister Śrī is glorified in the form of his Śakti . The discus Suḍarśana is always present in the hand of Viṣṇu.

18. It is at the tip of the branch and stationed in the middle of the pillar (?). That is the fourth form (of the Lord). Thus the four forms were revealed by him.

19. When the fourfold divine form of the Lord was completed, the ethereal voice said once again for helping the worlds:

20. "Cover these idols completely. Through paints give appropriate colour to everyone of them in an agreeable way.

21-24. Viṣṇu must be dark-coloured like a blue cloud. Bala should be white like a conch or the Moon. The discus Sudarśana should be red. Subhadrā should be tawny-coloured like saffron. She should be beautifully adorned with different ornaments and the curves and contours should be properly depicted.

If these idols are seen as wooden pieces, they are conducive to sin. They should be carefully concealed with cloths, resin-like exudations or bark garments. Hence at the very outset get all these covered with the barks of this very tree by craftsmen who are experts in their respective jobs. Every, year they must be adorned and embellished after removing the previous ones.

25-28. Without the bark-garments and the unguents it is divine and eternal (?)

If anyone were to remove the unguent inadvertently, there will be famine and pestilence in the kingdom. His line of progeny will become extinct. O king, they should not be ever seen by you without a covering. O great king, if they are seen so by ordinary men, they will cause fear. Hence they should be seen in agreeable colours and smeared with many unguents.

By seeing the lotus-eyed Lord in agreeable colour with beauty, grace and elegance, one is liberated from sins accumulated in the course of crores of Kalpas .

29-34. Make them variegated and agreeable, O great king. You will get wonderful objects desired by you. The Lord has manifested himself with a desire to bless you. Since he is pleased with you, he will grant all the four aims of life to all living beings.

On Nīla mountain, about a hundred Hastas (i.e. about 45 Metres) to the north-west of the Kalpa tree (Banyan tree), and on the northern side of Narasiṃha in a large piece of land get a Mansion built. It should be large and firm. It should be a thousand Hastas high (i.e. 450 Metres). There install the Lord.

Formerly when the Lord was on that mountain, a Śabara named Viśvāvasu , an excellent devotee of Viṣṇu, used to worship Mādhava. Your priest became an intimate friend of his on that occasion. Only the descendants of these two should be employed, O great king, in the job of smearing the unguents or adorning the Lord in future festivals."

35-41a. After speaking this the divine speech ceased.

On hearing what was instructed by it the excellent king became extremely delighted within himself. He unveiled the great Altar. At that time all of them saw Lord Kṛṣṇa, son of Vasudeva , Rāma , Subhadrā and Sudarśana. The Lord was seated on a gem-set throne. All the idols were charming in their features with the unguents smeared and the limbs duly adorned. He saw Lord Kṛṣṇa with a kind and beaming face. The chest was broad and projecting forward. He had long brawny arms capable of uplifting the poor. His eyes resembled full-blown lotuses. There was a gentle smile on the broad lips. By his mere glance he could dispel the mass of sins of those who view him. He was seated in the lotus-posture. He was embellished with divine ornaments. He was surrounded by his own refulgence. Even in that wooden form he was free from impurities. He resembled a blue cloud. He was the destroyer of all distresses.

41b-44. He saw Baladeva with a face giving boisterous laughter. He had extensive circular hoods and eyes rolling on account of (the intake of) liquor. He was the rising king of serpents with a thick and muscular chest. He had a slight depression on his back. He had his body coiled up. He appeared like the peak of Kailāsa with an Arjuna tree in full bloom on its top. He held plough, discus, lotus and iron club. He had a garland of sylvan flowers. He was remarkably resplendent with necklaces, ear-rings, armlets, coronets and crowns.

45-47. He saw in between them Lakṣmī (who was) Subhadrā of gentle form, [2] the source of origin of all the Devas, the goddess who took the (devotee) across the ocean of sins, whose face was like a full-blown lotus, who held a lotus and gesticulated granting of boons and immunity from fear (by means of her fingers), who was the abode of beauty, grace and charm, who shone splendidly with ornaments and whose body was tawny-coloured like saffron. She appeared like another Lakṣmī in person. She was installed on the left side of Viṣṇu.

48-50. He saw the discus (Sudarśana) that had been made out of tips of the branches. It resembled the rising Sun. It had sharp edges. It was excessively refulgent, O Brāhmaṇas.

On seeing all of them the king became immersed in the ocean of bliss. He was confused as to what he should do. He was not capable of sustaining his own body.

The excellent king stood just like a stump with palms joined in reverence. With the eyes slightly closed he simply shed tears (of joy).

51. The excellent sage spoke to the lord of the earth, with a smile on his face: "That for which you exerted yourself has taken effect now.

52-53. It is evident now, O tiger among kings, that you are the only person fortunate on the earth. See this Lord of the universe with large eyes resembling lotus, Hari, the ocean of blessings unto the devotees, the storehouse of all knowledge. The Yogins of restrained minds strive forever to see him.

54-56. Men see him for a moment with great concentration. That Janārdana has taken up a wooden body and has become directly perceptible, O king, in order to bless you.

Worship this Lord of the earth. Eulogize the ocean of kindness. On being eulogized, O king he will grant you everything that you desire in your mind."

[1]: [1] : But in Mbh, Ādi. 217 she is Devakī's daughter.

[2]: [2] : It is not known why the Purāṇa confuses Subhadrā with Lakṣmī. Subhadrā's sister-wife relation with Kṛṣṇa reminds one of the Rāma-Sītā (sister-wife) relation in the Pali Dasaratha Jātaka .

English translation

Jaimini said :

1. On being enlightened and urged by Nārada thus, the king eulogized in the following words, the compassionate Lord of the worlds.

Indradyumna said :

2. O Enemy of Mura , your lotus-like feet have not been worshipped (by me) in the course of previous lives. Therefore, I am subjected to the terrible effects of Karmas . O ocean of mercy, save me; I have become wretched.

3. How great are your lotus-like feet free from impurities, sunk beneath the crowns of Brahmā , Rudra and Indra and how small am I, a despicable and wretched fellow encompassed by masses of faeces, blood, flesh, urine and bones and everything (outward) covered by skin!

4. How can I know you, O Lord, because I am sick and wearied by wandering through worthless worldly affairs! Indeed, O Lord of Devas , only they do know you, they whose birth is illuminated by the light (of knowledge) born of misery.

5. O Lord, much misery has been experienced by me as a result of the sins committed in the course of many births. I have experienced many types of emotions too. The small happiness that has resulted from (a small quantity of) merit acquired is like (a little of) honey mixed with a mass of bitter things.

6. For the sake of happiness I performed holy rites, as a result of which I experienced worldly pleasures which have ultimately turned into misery. There is no other person as miserable as I.

7. O Lord, if only I had mentally worshipped you before, though my eyes had been directed towards other worldly objects, I could not have had the numerous births with all sorts of miseries to be experienced again and again.

8-9. I was born as a master as well as a slave; I have enjoyed various statuses and states such as a father, son, lover, mother, rich man, one worthy of being killed, one taking to violent means, husband, wife, lower animal, Sura etc. Ups and downs of diverse nature have been experienced on many occasions by me rolling in the courtyards of various worlds. O Enemy of Mura, this is not a desirable thing, because it involves keeping away from your lotus-like feet.

10-11. My treasury, this army surrounded by the entire wealth of the earth, amiable women in hundreds in their prime of youth with great charm and beauty, my royal circle rid of all thorns (i.e. troublesome elements) and my Empire—all these are extremely burdensome to me because I am deprived of your knowledge like a brute. O ocean of compassion, remove this burden forever, as it is always attended by distress.

12. O Lord merciful towards the wretched one, an elephant was liberated because it had remembered you. [1] It behoves you to save me with an attitude of compassion, O Lord, because I whirl and whirl like a waterwheel here.

13. In this situation which is similar to one in which a log of wood has got caught up in a rapid current, I do not have any kinsman (to help) other than you. The sinful intellect that has been fettered by feelings of affection and that has become emotionally fixated on worldly objects, should be broken away (by you).

14-17a. By day or night let not my (mind) move away from your lotus-like feet. This alone is my pressing request.

Fortunately during thousands of births, some have attained you, the ocean full of existence, knowledge and bliss. Do they find even an iota of happiness in the jugglery of mundane affairs, the source of many miseries?

Where is the bondage of Karmas, which cannot be broken on account of hundreds of knots causing much misery but very little of pleasure? Where is your lotus-like foot which is infinite, which has neither beginning nor end and which is the sole thing that grants pleasure?

Your Māyā is like an ocean. Mamatā (sense of possession, my-ness) is a whirlpool therein. Evil actions are like crocodiles in the middle of (the dangerous) pits. I have fallen into that ocean. I have no support. Take me to the shore by your benign, graceful side-glance.

17b-21a. I have abandoned what is conducive to my welfare. I am ever wandering to accomplish what is desired by others who have resorted to me to achieve their own ends. So I have become confused and stupid. O Lord who are compassionate by nature, save me.

Save me, O Viṣṇu , who are the only person worthy of being saluted to in the whole universe. I am running after insignificant things too much without attaining you, the root cause (of all), the great Lord. I am subjected to great stress and strain. I am extremely wretched.

O Lord of the universe, to be known only through Vedānta , O immutable one, you are competent to destroy masses of sins. Hence you are the sole cause of happiness. Still I have abandoned you (to seek happiness elsewhere), O Viṣṇu. Save me, a mean-minded fellow that I am.

The entire group of four kinds of living beings is asleep in the night of delusion created by you. In the end it is enlightened when the Sun of your knowledge rises. I seek refuge in you.

21b-25. You alone are the creator of all the worlds by successive turns. Your form is encircled by thousand of hoods. O most excellent one among Balins (powerful ones), I seek refuge in you, the Lord and master.

O Lord, you create and annihilate the worlds through your own Śakti seated in your lotus-like heart (chest). I bow down to the pair of feet of that support of the worlds in the form of Bhadrā (Subhadrā), the source of origin of Devas.

The group of these Cosmic Eggs is evolved out of the clusters of the rays of your discus, O Lord. It is in contact with your hand. It is pleasing to view. The name of that discus is Sudarśana . It is destructive of Daityas ' army. I bow down to you.

After eulogizing thus, the excellent king prostrated with eight limbs (touching the ground). He continued: "Save me, O Lord of the universe. O kinsman of the helpless ones, save me mercifully. I am sinking in the ocean of worldly existence. I am wretched. I am overcome with Tamoguṇa (darkness)."

Nārada said :

26. Be victorious, be victorious, O Nārāyaṇa , O Lord engaged in taking (devotees) across the boundless ocean of worldly existence; O Lord whose divinity is being contemplated upon by Sanaka , Sanandana , Sanātana and other excellent Yogins ; O Lord, in the activities of whose Māyā all the elements and living beings are superimposed (or transformed); O Lord of three principles; O Lord who hold three staffs (powers), whose divine knowledge is being praised by the Vedic Mantras , viz. Triṇāciketa , [2] Trimadhu [3] and Trisuparṇa , [4] who are identical with the Vedas , who are fond of Garuḍa on whom you are seated, who are fond of your devotees, who are the sole favourite of your devotees, whose form is hidden (and separated) by your own cluster of Māyās , who are Cosmic-formed, who are the illuminator of the universe, who have faces all round, [5] who have eyes all round, who have ears all round who have feet, heads and necks all round, who have hands, noses, tongues, skin, hair tresses and penises all round, who are identical with all the worlds, who are conducive to the happiness of all the worlds, who render help to all the worlds, who are bowed down to by all the worlds, who have graceful elegance, who are bowed down to by crores of Brahmās , Rudras , Indras , Maruts , Aśvins , Sādhyas , and groups of Siddhas ; O sire of the three worlds including the entire Suras and Asuras ; O Lord not know-able to anyone, repeated obeisance to you, obeisance to you.

Jaimini said :

27-28. Other kings who were there, learned priests well-versed in the Vedas, sages, Brāhmaṇas , Kṣatriyas , scholars, Vaiśya classes—all these eulogized the lotus-eyed Lord and Bala along with Subhadrā by means of hymns, prayers, Purāṇa passages, and ordinary poems.

29. Then Indradyumna said to the sinless priest that he should (make arrangements) for the worship of Vāsudeva duly accompanied by offerings.

30. That excellent king himself worshipped them in due order in accordance with the injunctions (and reciting) the proper Mantras following the instructions of Nārada.

31. With the twelve-syllabled Mantra [6] he worshipped Balabhadra , by worshipping whom Dhruva obtained the most excellent abode.

32. With the great and sacred Puruṣa Sūkta famous in the Vedas, the king worshipped Nārāyaṇa in accordance with his ability.

33-36. He worshipped Subhadrā with the Devī Sūkta [7] and discus Sudarśana with the Sudarśanī Sūkta .

After worshipping them devoutly in accordance with his affluence the excellent king gave charitable gifts with great devotion to eminent Brāhmaṇas in order to get the full favour (of those deities).

The king gave Tulāpuruṣa gift (things weighed against himself) and other great gifts. As a part of the horse-sacrifice, he gave crores of cows then. He gave cows with and without ornaments. O excellent Brāhmaṇas, a great pit was formed as they dug up with their hoofs. That pit was filled with the waters poured when charitable gifts were made. That became a Tīrtha of great merit.

37-40. If a man takes his holy bath there and offers libations to Pitṛs and Devas in accordance with the injunctions, he will undoubtedly get the merit of a thousand horse-sacrifices.

That lake was named after King Indradyumna. [8] It became very famous. If a man offers rice-balls here to his Pitṛs, he uplifts twenty-one generations of his family, and is honoured in the world of Brahmā. There is no Tīrtha greater than this because this has originated from part of the horse-sacrifice. Perhaps Gaṅgā may be equal to the lake Indradyumna. Thereafter the king began the construction of the Palatial Temple.

41-46. In an auspicious season, in a splendid, auspicious hour as proclaimed by astrologers, on a day in conjuction with a good constellation, he worshipped Nārada and other eminent Brāhmaṇas. The excellent king made them recite the Mantras connected with the holy rites of Svastivācana and Karmardhi , [9] and remembering the Lord of the universe he offered Arghya on the site of the palatial temple. He requested the Earth to give him a piece of land for the duration of the life of the Stars and the Moon. Along with the Vāstuyāga (i.e. sacrifice for the building site) he worshipped the artisans and masons .

With plenty of songs and instrumental music great celebrations were held. To the poor, the helpless and the disabled people, he gave everything they desired.

With due honour he bade farewell to the kings whose sins had been destroyed by viewing the incarnation of Hari and who were contented and blessed.

Then the excellent king presented sums in crores and crores to the stonecutters for bringing stones from many different countries.

47-51. The king joyously said this in the Assembly. “Everything that I had acquired by my heroic exertions from the eighteen continents has now been dedicated to the grace of the Lord of the universe. In the context of the campaign of victory, whatever strain I might have undergone shall become fruitful by supplying the necessary funds for the Mansion of Viṣṇu.

What shall be more fortunate unto me than this that I am propitiating Hari, the sire of mobile and immobile beings, with my wealth and glory acquired with my own pair of arms?

Śrī is always present in the lotus-eyed Lord. But I have many Śrīs originating from his blessings. What can the Lord do with it? (?)

The glory of that person who is a recipient of the benign glance of the Discus-bearing Lord of Devas is multifaced.

52-53. The eighteenfold goddess dances at the tip of the tongue of the Lord of the universe, by propitiating whom Vidhi attained the status of Brahmā (the Creator), Rudra that of Maheśvara (Great Lord) and Śakra that of the Lord of Heaven. I shall worship that eternal deity worthy of being worshipped by all the worlds.

54. The sin that had accumulated in three heaps has been vanquished by that noble soul by whom Kṛṣṇa was duly worshipped along with ancillary and subsidiary rites.

55. (Defective Text) This holy spot is the body where the Lord resides as the Cosmic Ego. His appearance and disappearance and continuous existence all are eternal.

56-59. One who worships the sire of the worlds who is directly embodied here shall achieve everything directly. He will be the recipient of the fourfold aim of life.

The prosperity of the kingdom has been acquired by me after spending much and undergoing a great deal of strain. That was solely due to the blessings of this Lord. Let that be fruitful at his lotus-like feet.

By means of the wealth taken from the ocean-girt earth I shall worship the Lord with all offerings. Until the effects of Karmas come to an end, let my imperialistic campaign be fruitful.

Of what avail is my wealth if I do not dedicate it to Viṣṇu along with my body and become rid of sins? Of what avail is my exertion if the necessary adjuncts for Vāsudeva are not secured by me?

[1]: [1] : Reference to Gajendra-mokṣa in BhP VIII, Ch. 3.

[2]: [2] : One who has kindled the Nāciketa fire thrice.

[3]: [3] : The 3 Ṛcs— madbu vātā ṛtāyante etc. in RV 1.90.6-8.

[4]: [4] : Two groups of three mantras are given this name: (i) Ekaḥ suparṇaḥ etc. RV X. 114.4-6. (ii) brahmametumām etc. Tait. Āraṇyaka X. 48-50.

[5]: [5] : Cf. Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 3.16; also BG 13.13.

[6]: [6] : The twelve-syllabled Mantra is Oṃ namo bhagavate vāsudevāya . But Dhruva, according to BhP IV, Chs. 8-12, got his pre-eminent position by devotion to Viṣṇu, and not to Balabhadra.

[7]: [7] : Devī Sūkta is Vāgāṃbhṛṇī Sūkta (RV X. 125) and not Śrī Sūkta .

[8]: [8] : Indradyumna ‘lake’ is not a naturally formed reservoir of water like Cilikā but only a tank at Puri.

[9]: [9] : Svastivācana and Karmardhi are the same as Puṇyāhavācana .

English translation

Jaimini said :

1. As the saintly king said thus, a certain Brāhmaṇa who had mastered Ṛgveda and acquired the knowledge of Vedanta , gladly spoke to the king these words:

2. “Wonderful indeed is the mass (greatness) of your fortune, whereby the Lord has manifested on the earth in a wooden body. Śruti says that his sincere and regular worship bestows salvation on those who are deluded because of the ignorance of Ātman .

3-11a. The tree had been floating on the other side of the ocean. By worshipping (the idols made out of it) and adoring the super-human Lord very difficult to be propitiated, people attain liberation which is difficult to attain.

Nārada himself, who is a storehouse of the knowledge of Brahman , has told you that the knowledge of this (Lord) cannot be had from anything other than the words of Vedanta. Indeed the activity of Viṣṇu cannot go on without the Vedas . Whether it is the creation of others or manifestation of himself, the Lord honours the authority of the Vedas.

If he were to act without Śruti, who will accept it as authoritative? Hence, O king, this incarnation is also noted in the Vedas.

Do not think that it is an (ordinary) statue. It is the Puruṣa comprehensible through the Vedānta and sung about in the Sāman songs. It is the cause of spiritual welfare (Mokṣa) unto men.

Merely by its sight our dense darkness has subsided. There are Śrutis shedding light on the worship of this (idol).

The worship of this is praiseworthy, if it is employed for a good cause. Oh! the men living in the sub-continent of Bhārata have got their sins reduced and destroyed because Janārdana , the bestower of salvation, has appeared before them. There too this Oḍhra-land (Orissa State) is the most excellent one, because people living there see the Lord in the form of Brahman with their physical eyes.

11b-17a. The mysterious path of Śrutis and Smṛtis has become perplexing through rituals. Those who go by that path whirl in great agitation like a waterwheel. The Lord, the embodiment of knowledge and consciousness, is the cause of attainment of the true status (i.e. salvation). Even without such means as Śruti etc. he is the bestower of the greatest bliss and salvation.

To the vicious people who undergo great distress on account of the continuous departures and arrivals (i.e deaths and births), this wooden idol of Viṣṇu is the bestower of happiness, and a good kinsman.

The rules and regultaions mentioned in Śrutis and Smṛtis are not binding here, O king. He is the bestower of salvation on even Cāṇḍālas , should they happen to come within the range of (his) vision.

Even if a man is no devotee but views him as a blind follower, he shall obtain full merit of thousands of horse-sacrifices.

If a person strictly adheres to holy observances and worships devoutly with steady mind, he will undoubtedly attain Sāyujya with Brahman.

17b-22. How ineffective is the means (ritual act) which is full of exertion, easily perishable, temporary in nature, yielding only insignificant results and characterized by return (i.e. rebirth); and how great is this Brahman constituted of wood which burns heaps of sins like a forest fire burning out trees! It is merely by its sight that it bestows salvation—the state of aloofness characterised by existence, knowledge and bliss!

Repetition of the Vedic passages and other rites are very difficult to be performed by vicious souls. What can be achieved through them by noble souls, is granted by this (Lord) coolly without any excitement.

In the other holy spots the Lord is far away from the residents of the mortal world. But (here) the Lord is always present in his own holy spot as the bestower of salvation.

Hence, O illustrious king, stay here with your army and men. You are the most learned and a great devotee. Worship him along with all ancillary and subsidiary rites."

Jaimini said :

23-28. On hearing those words of the Brāhmaṇa Nārada became delighted in his mind. (He said:) "What is said by the excellent Brāhmaṇa, a follower of the Vedic path, is relevant. The collection of the Vedas issued forth at the beginning of creation from the breath of Brahmā . There the purport of the Upaniṣads has become revealed now.

The meaning of the same, only Prajāpati , the lotus-born lord, knows. Now I have understood it, O king, directly from him. Everything has been performed at his bidding. Propitiate this (Lord) as much as you desire and stay here. I am going to Brahmā; I shall inform him that the manifestation of the Enemy of Mura has been brought about.

By spending a big sum get the (Lord's) Mansion built, O king, After installing Narasiṃha in the Temple, you will be liberated."

Jaimini said :

29-33. On hearing it the king replied to the sage: "O great sage, I am desirous of going to Brahmā along with you.

It is by his grace that the Lord of the universe has been made the guest of our eyes. I shall tell him about the Palatial Shrine for the installation of Viṣṇu. I shall request him that the festival of the installation within the Mansion should be celebrated in (his) presence. Then the Grandfather (i.e. Brahmā) shall come from Brahmaloka and celebrate the great festival of the Lord here in the Mansion (Temple). Hence, O sage, take me also to the presence of Brahmā. We shall conclude the rite of installation in the inner sanctuary in the Mansion. O sage, stay here and complete it. We shall proceed thereafter. Kindly wait for some time."

34-41a. Then the king engaged several experts in sculpture in cutting stones as well as in construction activities. He honoured them with gifts and respectfully requested them to attend to every aspect of the job.

O Brāhmaṇas , the neatly constructed Mansion rose up everyday like the moon during Śuklapakṣa (bright fortnight), growing bigger and bigger. The Mansion rose up very tall in a short time. It was impossible to count the number of stones used in the construction.

The money was spent in crores. There also it was impossible to calculate the expense. All the people in the subcontinent of Bhārata who owned allegiance to King Indradyumna were engaged in this. All those who were engaged worked jointly with mutual co-operation. The great delight of those engaged in the work gave rise to a loud clamour filling the vaults of heaven and the quarters.

41b-46. The Goddess of prosperity and fortune was pleased with the sincerity, faith, devotion, and the Sattva quality of the king. Along with the fame of the king the glory increased, O Brāhmaṇas.

The Mansion of Viṣṇu was excessively refulgent. In some places it was covered with gold and inlaid with different kinds of gems. In some places where crystals were used in the construction it had the lustre of the antumnal sky. The walls in some places were built of blue stones and the Mansion appeared like the sky covered with black clouds. As the beautiful Mansion of Viṣṇu was thus perfectly finished, the excellent king duly performed the rite of Garbhapratiṣṭhā (installation of the idol in the inner sanctuary of the temple). In order to ward off stroke of lightning, cracks in the structure and other calamities, gems etc. were suitably fitted in the manner prescribed in the treatises on architecture. The king then suitably utilized many other costly articles acquired by his heroic exertions in the construction of the Mansion.

47-54. The Mansion that was being constructed was such as could not be even mentally imagined by kings in the three worlds . It increased the fame (of Indradyumna), O Brāhmaṇas. Even Devas who live till the end of the Kalpa could not visualize it. Ādityas spoke to one another thus:

“A Mansion like this has never been constructed anywhere on the earth or in heaven. His excellent intellect is wonderful. It has taken this lofty form. It craves for the lotus-like feet of the Lord with faith and sincerity. Who are such wise kings on the earth who see such supra-mundane activities or perform them? Emperors may defeat all the enemies and establish their suzerainty. They may have hoarded much wealth in crores and crores, but is it possible for those kings to perform a thousand horse-sacrifices as performed by this king unto the Lord of heaven. Before this it has not been performed. A thousand horse-sacrifices have not been seen or heard of, but they have been performed by this king. In the course of those sacrifices the residents of all the three worlds stayed on the earth along with this king and enjoyed the pleasures.

55-59. As he performed the sacrifices, his assembly appeared like the world of Brahmā. The three Vedas were present there in embodied form. Dharma had all the four feet. Suras who can realize their desires by merely thinking of them have become struck with wonder there in regard to this excellent Mansion. The king has intelligently planned this (and got it constructed) but no other person resident in all the three worlds could even imagine this. What can be inaccessible to this king who has the help (and guidance of) Nārada and Brahmā, the creator of all the worlds, the Lord of all the Devas!

Or to a devotee of Viṣṇu what is desired to be done cannot be far off (inaccessible). O Brāhmaṇas, there is no difference between Viṣṇu and his devotees.”

At the conclusion of the construction of the Mansion the king, said to Nārada, the eminent sage:

60-66. “Everything which was impossible for Suras and Asuras has been accomplished by me, because I have been meditating on Viṣṇu directly in an exclusive way. The Lord said to me formerly, ‘The palatial building is ever in me’” (?) After saying this he fell at the feet of Nārada and bowed down to him.

Nārada raised the excellent king and honoured him: “O king, there is no difference between you and me really. For your sake the Lord of the universe has directly manifested himself. Do worship him. Now you are a living-liberated soul. Your mind is attached to his lotus-like feet. What more than this has to be acquired by a person with single-minded devotion?

O king, what cannot be achieved through Tīrthas , Mantras , Japas , charitable gifts, sacrifices with plenty of monetary gifts, holy rites, study of Vedas and austerities, O great king, has been acquired by you through devotion. Henceforth you need not grieve. Let your mind remain in the path of devotion.

67. After staying in this world for a long time, O great king, propitiate the Lord of the universe by means of offerings and great festivities.

68. If you are desirous of seeing Brahmā, if you wish to go to the Lord, he will instruct you in the various festivals and processions.

69-71. The Lord himself will grant you boons. After the Palatial Shrine has been inaugurated by the Self-born Lord I shall also come along with the Seven Sages. Then we can go to the sinless world of Brahmā. Except you who is fit for going to the world of Brahmā?"

After saying this to the king Nārada rose into the sky.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-4. The king told him:

“O sage, why should the journey be a secret one? Here we have the flower-chariot that has a velocity more than that of the mind. We shall get into it and go. Kindly wait for a short while, when I shall instruct the officers in-charge of the Palace after circumambulating the Lord and then come back, O excellent sage.”

Nārada heard his words and believing in the utterance of the king held him by the hand and entered the great Altar. They repeatedly bowed down to Kṛṣṇa along with Balarāma and Subhadrā . Nārada then requested for permission to go to the world of Brahmā .

5. Indradyumna too circumambulated Had after praying to him mentally, verbally and physically. With great eagerness he bowed down to him with the eight limbs (touching the ground). O Brāhmaṇas , with palms folded in reverence, he requested for permission to go to the world of Brahmā.

6-10. Both of them, the sage and the king, went in the divine vehicle. After circumambulating the Sun that was in the centre of the sky, they went up and up crossing the zone of the Pole Star. They were looked at by Siddhas residing in Janaloka with bent and immediately uplifted faces. They were very joyously conversing mutually.

The conduct of the Lord is conducive to the removal of dirt and purification of the mind. Just as the excellent sage, a living-liberated soul, wandered over all the worlds without his movement obstructed anywhere, so also this resident of the mortal world. Thanks to the favour of Viṣṇu , the king proceeded ahead quickly.

In the whole of the Cosmic Egg there was nothing which could not be attained by him if it could be attained by a devotee of Viṣṇu. Or he would attain salvation. Both of them were honoured and adored by the Siddhas residing in Maharloka .

11-17. Indradyumna did not remember his earthly residence while gradually rising up and seeing (the liberated souls), the sole receptacles of happiness, devoid of Dvandvas (mutually opposed pairs like heat-cold etc.) and having many types of human aims realized at the very time when the desires arose. The only thing that he remembered was the Mansion he built in the land of Karmas on the earth for the propitiation of the Lord. He thought about it as follows: ‘Will it be completed or not? Now that I have come to the world of Brahmā I wonder whether it has been attacked by the enemies. The servants and attendants may have lost interest or respect because of their covetousness of wealth. The artisans and masons may be slow in their jobs even after taking the full amount of wages. As I have come to the abode of Brahmā, they may not complete the construction. Until I return to the earth with the four-faced Lord Brahmā, the Mansion will not be complete, as I am far off. Those who had come here before had not returned to the earth once again. Perhaps the vassal kings of wicked minds are thinking thus. Will the enemies seize my realm?'

While the king was thinking thus with a worried mind, the sage, the storehouse of the past and future knowledge, spoke to him:

18-21. "What do you think, O great king, thus with a distressed mind? The place where we have come to is not one where one should be worried. Agonies and ailments never prevail here; neither death nor old age find a place here. What else then is the cause of misery? O highly fortunate one, you are blessed. You have achieved your objectives because you have come to the world of Brahmā here in your human body itself. You have seen Hari directly. Those who have come here do not worry about various worldly affairs that are fit to be discarded."

As the eminent sage spoke thus, the king spoke to him:

22-24. "O Brāhmaṇa , I do not worry about the kinsmen and the members of the family of the king. I have started construction of the Mansion of the Lord. Knowing that I have come away here, it is possible that the servants and the attendants do not carry out their tasks further. What has been started by me should be completed certainly, O sage. Thinking of a possibility of obstacles coining in the way, O holy Lord, my mind has become unhappy." On hearing his words the sage said laughingly:

25-31. "You are on a par with Brahmā. You are not an ordinary king. You have never been offended or assailed by anyone on the earth. What is that which has been performed by your predecessors or by yourself which can cause any loss to creation or sustenance? You have come to the world of Brahmā. Your exploits and reputation spread in the three worlds like the Sun and the Moon. In your affairs the Four-faced Lord renders you assistance. Why should there be any suspicion of obstacles in those affairs, O tiger among king?

(Defective Text) He who is a direct enemy of yours is far off (?) O great king, Śakra who is the lord of the three worlds is seated in the middle of the assembly. Particularly in regard to the Mansion of the Lord of the worlds, O king, which man will even mentally desire (to harm the temple). Let there not be any doubt in you in regard to that.

Look ahead, O king, there is a mass of refulgence with the lustre of a crore of the moons. It generates delight all round like a crore of the oceans of nectar. Know that this mass of refulgence belongs to the abode of Brahmā."

32-43. Conversing thus they reached the world of Brahmā. Even from afar they heard the sound of recitation of the Vedas issuing from the mouths of Brahminical Sages. The words, the letters and their sequences were clearly audible. Itihāsas , Purāṇas , metres, liturgical texts and songs—all were audible without any mix-up of the sounds or words. They were brilliant and they were heard distinctly. "O tiger among kings, know this as the city of Brahmā. The assembly is seen yonder wheré the Four-faced Grandfather of the worlds is comfortably seated along with the leading Brāhmaṇa Sages. He is attended upon by many living-liberated souls of variegated nature and sound consciousness. Those who come here do not return to the turmoils of the ocean of worldly existence. The word sat is another name of Brahmā. This is his excellent world. Hence it is famous as Satyaloka . There is nothing above it.

Slightly above this and beneath the hemispheroidal lid of the Cosmic Egg is the world of Vaikuṇṭha , O king. It is there that the liberated ones dwell. It is there that Janārdana , the Lord of Yogins , worthy of being contemplated upon by Yogins, himself dwells. Consciousness is his body. The Lord is of the nature of highest bliss. After attaining him they do not return to the path of worldly existence where death prevails. For the sake of his own salvation Brahmā always attends upon him along with the living-liberated ones.

At the end of the tenure of life allotted to him he too resorts to him along with these. He is the creator of the worlds. He assumes the forms of fish, tortoise etc. He is the creator of the worlds, the protector and the annihilator in the form of Rudra ."

Saying thus to Indradyumna he reached the abode of Brahmā. Within a moment he went to the entrance and the Prakoṣṭha (a room near the gate) where Śakra and other Guardians of Quarters stood waiting.

44-48. They were standing there engaged in meditation for a long time. The overlords of Manvantaras were denied entry by the gatekeeper as though they were ordinary people.

On seeing Nārada accompanied by Indradyumna that gatekeeper humbly bowed down to him, bending down his neck: "O holy lord who takes pleasure in wandering over all the fourteen worlds, O master, your father's assembly does not look nice without you.

Of course, there are Gautama and other excellent sages, Brāhmaṇas, well-versed in the Vedas; still the assembly of Brahmā is not delightful. Though the night may have many stars, yet it is through the Moon that it shines well."

Praising him thus, he humbly granted him permission to enter.

English translation

Nārada said :

1-6. O gatekeeper, this is a saintly king of great fame (named) Indradyumna . He is an emperor and the foremost among devotees of Viṣṇu . He has come to see Brahmā . Let him go ahead if you give him permission.

On being told thus Maṇikodara said to Nārada : “O holy lord, he who has accompanied you, does not seem to be an ordinary person. Let this resident of the mortal world wait for a short while over there where you see the Guardians of Quarters, Pitṛs and overlords of the Manvantaras . You will kindly go in and inform the Lotus-born Lord and then admit him in. After going near the entrance to the Assembly Hall, he will go in along with the Guardians of Quarters.

The Four-faced Lord is now listening to singing with concentrated mind. It is necessary for us employed as doorkeepers to wait for the proper opportunities. I am only a slave to you and to your father. Be pleased. Do not be angry with me.”

7-12. On being told thus Nārada went in and bowed down to Brahmā, the Lord of the worlds, and prostrated with the eight limbs (touching the ground). Then the king’s (arrival) was reported to him.

With a side-glance he commanded him to fetch Indradyumna. The Lord did not say anything because he was attentively listening to the song. His mind had been attracted by the divine songs and music. After understanding the gesture Nārada brought the excellent king in.

Thereupon he was closely observed by Śakra and others. Seeing Pitāmaha , the creator of the worlds, from a distance, O excellent Brāhmaṇas , the king thought him to be Hari himself of the wooden idol.

The king went ahead slowly bowing down, with palms joined in reverence, eulogizing him, falling down (by way of prostrating) and going on with faltering steps due to fright and awe of the place. At the bidding of Nārada the king stood a little away.

Listening to the meritorious holy anecdotes of the Lord of the Daughter of the Ocean that were being sung, O great Brāhmaṇas, the Four-faced Lord remained seated for a short while.

13-16. He was fanned by Sāvitrī and Śāradā (who stood) on either side. The Self-born Lord was eulogized by the Vedas assuming pure bodies.

He began calculating the units of time such as Kalā , Kāṣṭhā , Nimeṣa etc. up to the cycle of Yugas .

In the case of persons who have gone to his (Brahmā’s) world, there is no old age, birth or death; there is no change of form, colour, feature etc. There is neither mental affliction nor physical ailment; there are no divisions such as Manvantara etc., cycles of Yugas etc. There is nothing like the close of a Kalpa etc. He is the Supreme Lord himself.

At the close of the song, he spoke to the king laughingly:

17-20. “O noble Indradyumna, you are the beloved of the Lord himself. This world named Satya which is inaccessible to others has been known by you (i.e. reached by you).

Sages who have destroyed their sins and are desirous of coming here, stand engaged in penance till the ultimate annihilation of all living beings.

This is the abode of the wonderful qualities of sentience etc. of all the living beings created in the fourteen worlds."

Thereafter he honoured the excellent king. The extremely delighted Grandfather knew his object; still he asked him:

21. "Why have you come here? What is in your heart? Tell me. When I am seen, there is nothing which cannot be obtained. Is it nectar that is desired by you?"

Indradyumna replied :

22-29. You are the Immanent Soul, O Lord. How can there be anything not known to you? Still the question put by you, O Lord, indicates your compassion for me.

Obeying your behest humbly as conveyed by your son (Nārada), I performed a thousand horse-sacrifices. At their close the Lord of everything past, present and future appeared before me in wooden form.

It is on account of your plentiful blessings that I am able to see such a Lord, the lotus-eyed one. That is why I came to your world.

O Lord, construction of a palatial shrine unto that Lord has been begun by me. If you yourself were to go over there and install the Lord of the universe. O creator of the worlds, your blessings to me shall be fruitful.

It is for this purpose, O Lord of the universe, that I have come to your world to see your lotus-like feet in the company of Nārada.

Be pleased with me. Do this. You alone are the Lord of the worlds. You alone are that Lord of the worlds (viz. Jagannātha). There is no difference between you two, O Lord. You are the installer and the installed. You are the knower and what is to be known.

Jaimini said :

30-37. At the end of his entreaty thus the great sage Durvāsas bowed down to him and fell (at his feet) with eight limbs (touching the ground). Then he stood near with palms joined in reverence. Stooping low down due to humility, he spoke to Brahmā, the Sire of the worlds:

"O Lord, O creator of the worlds, the Guardians of Quarters along with Pitṛs and overlords of the Manvantaras have been standing at the gate for a long time like wretched people, as they have been prevented by the gatekeeper. Hence command (the gatekeeper). Let them see your lotus-like feet."

On hearing the words of Durvāsas then the Lord of Devas laughed and spoke these words: "Indeed there is no occasion for these people, but since they are deluded, they are jealous of Indradyumna. This king is a living-liberated soul. He has destroyed all Karmas and masses of sins. He is the fifth one in my line of progeny. He is a Vaiṣṇava eagerly devoted to Viṣṇu.

But these people have attained their life aims of enjoyment of pleasures by the performance of holy rites. Indeed Devas seek an entry here only by performing penances. By my blessings, these have come here for attending upon me. Still, permitted by you, let them come to see me."

Thereupon, by the words of Durvāsas those Devas entered.

38-45. They bowed down to Brahmā from a distance, near the singers (and saw) Indradyumna, the king, conversing with palms joined in reverence.

As the Guardians of Quarters bowed down to him, the Lord of the universe blessed them with his benign glance and respectfully continued to speak to Indradyumna:

“It is true that a Mansion was built by you for the installation of the Lord. But this is not that time. O king, neither your kingdom nor your successors exist now.

In the course of the time when the songs were sung, much of your time has passed. Indeed a Manvantara consists of seventy-one divine Yugas (i.e. cycles of four Yugas according to human reckoning). Your dynasty has become extinct. Crores and crores of kings have passed away. The Lord and the ultimate Mansion—these two alone remain. Now it is the first Yuga of the Second Manu Svārociṣa . Since you have stayed near me, there is neither death nor old age (to you). There is no change of seasons nor the flow of time.

Hence, O great king, go to the earth. Make the Lord and the Mansion your own and come here quickly. Or I shall go over there immediately after you.

46-49. You first go to the earth. By the time you gather together the essential things in plenty, O highly fortunate one, I too shall come.”

After commanding Indradyumna thus, the Lord, the Grandfather (of the world), spoke to the Devas who stood in front of him stooping down their necks in humility with palms joined in reverence. They were awe-struck and their eyes were fixed to the feet of the Lord. The Lord then spoke with affectionate but grave words, O Brāhmaṇas: “Why have you all heaven-dwellers come here simultaneously? What is your task that has to be carried out by me? Tell me without delay.”

Jaimini said :

50. On hearing these words of Brahmā the Devas became rid of their fever (i.e. worry). All of them became delighted. They spoke to Lord Brahmā thus:

The Devas said :

51-54. How did that Lord of Blue Sapphire (body) who had been formerly worshipped by us on Nīla mountain vanish? How did he assume the wooden body now and manifest himself at the close of the sacrifice of King Indradyumna? It is to know the reason for this that we have come here to propitiate your lotus-like feet. Be pleased. Kindly tell us.

When this was requested by the Devas, the Lotus-seated Lord (said): “O Devas, this is a great secret. Previously it was never disclosed to anyone. All of you have come together. You have been waiting for a long time. So I shall tell you this excellent secret of the Suras .

55-62. In the previous Parārdha (half of a full day of god Brahmā) Janārdana of blue sapphire body occupied the holy spot of Śrī Puruṣottama and did not leave it. Now this is my second Parārdha. Manu, the son of the Self-born Lord (Svāyaṃbhuva), was functioning in the Śvetavārāha Kalpa. That was the time of morning of the first day. In the middle one of all the worlds (i.e. on the earth), the Lord of wooden body will stay on for the duration of my whole life honouring (us).

The Lord is my Ātman , O Suras, and I am identical with him. In this universe consisting of mobile and immobile beings, there is nothing apart (outside) from us both.

Resorting to Yoga Nidrā (Yogic Slumber) the Lord Puruṣottama lies down on his couch in the Śveta island in the middle of the Milk Ocean. He is the root of all the worlds, the primordial cause. His hair (on the body) are called Kalpadrumas . They are marked with conch and discus.

This tree is stationed in their middle. O Suras, it is presided over by the Super-sentience. It is the Satyapuruṣa (the Real Person) arising from the waters of the ocean.

63-68. In order to enjoy the pleasures of the three worlds , Janārdana of the wooden body was meditated upon (and worshipped) by pursuing the path of devotion in the course of many thousands of births.

I have been distressed much on account of the repeated creation, sustenance and annihilation. Therefore, the Lord was requested by me formerly for the destruction of the terrible worldly existence, for the annulment of all Karmas, for the liberation of all in all the worlds.

The various activities connected with the practice of Yoga such as Dhāraṇā (Retention), Dhyāna (Meditation) etc. are very difficult. Lord Puruṣottama manifested himself for the sake of granting salvation without all these difficult practices.

This holy spot is the mysterious body of this Lord. This cannot be discussed (specially) or thought of by means of the testimonies that apply to ordinary holy rites (?)

The Lord is the bestower of the fourfold aim of life in accordance with how one conceives him. He can be meditated and worshipped in the manner (the devotee chooses).

Persons who have destroyed the masses of their sins gradually by visiting him on the earth, become purified souls and they deserve salvation."

Jaimini said :

69. On hearing these nectar-like words of the Lotus-born Lord, the Devas were delighted. They thought thus within their contented minds:

70. 'Our Deva -hood is not permanent. We shall cast it off and go to the earth. In this holy and most excellent shrine, we shall worship the Lord with great self-control.'

71-73. On seeing the Suras with faces beaming with pleasure, Brahmā (said): "The Lord has manifested in order to bless Indradyumna. His idol has already gone there. It will speak of itself (everything). The Lord favourably inclined towards his devotees will grant many boons.

I will go to the Mansion of Indradyumna in order to install the Lord. You will also go there.

74-77. Let Indradyumna go first in order to gather together the requisite things for the installation. All of you shall be divested of your official duties. You shall assist him there.

Now the first Manvantara has passed, O Suras. Accompanied by Indradyumna, O excellent Suras, you shall all go there. He is the maker of the palace and the idols. Hence he is the owner. So let him gather together all the necessary articles along with his assistants.

If his progeny or any one connected with him remembers, Padmanidhi will go at my behest to the earth.

78-80. He will go there for the sake of gathering together all the articles for the installation."

On seeing the Śrī (glory, splendour, prosperity) of Brahmā, Indradyumna was delighted in his mind and struck with great wonder. He bowed down to the Sire of the universe. Obeying his behest with a low bow, he came down to the earth along with the Devas whose tenure of duties had come to an end. Brāhmaṇas were duly encouraged (for performing the holy rites).

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-5. After coming (to the earth) with an anxious mind on account of the delay (in returning), he prostrated before the Lord like a long staff. Hair standing on end through excessive joy covered his body as though it was an upper garment. (He said:)

Indradyumna said :

Obeisance to the Lord friendly to Brāhmaṇas ; to the Lord conducive to the welfare of cows and Brāhmaṇas; to the Lord who destroys the miseries of his suppliants; to the Lord who is the sole cause for the acquisition of the fourfold aim of life.

Oṃ, Obeisance to Vāsudeva who is in the form of Hiraṇyagarbha , Puruṣa and Pradhāna ; to the Lord, the embodiment of pure knowledge.

Uttering the prayer thus, the king had his eyes filled with tears of joy. Circumambulating the Lord, he bowed to him again and again.

Then the Devas who had gone there, joyously bowed down to the Lord and eulogized him with palms joined in reverence.

The Devas said :

6. The Puruṣa has a thousand (innumerable) heads, a thousand eyes and a thousand feet. He pervades the entire earth and stands ten Aṅgulas above [1] .

7. He is being sung as the Puruṣa, the Supreme Brahman and the great Ātman . The past, present and the future everything is Puruṣa himself

8. His greatness is this much. This Puruṣa, the Lord, is very great. The collection of all living beings constitutes his one pāda (i.e. one-fourth part). His (remaining) three pādas (parts) are immortals in heaven.

9. The Vedas were born of you. From you was born the Yajña-Puruṣa . Horses were born of you, cows and sheep too.

10. Brāhmaṇas were born of your mouth; Kṣatriyas were born of your arms. Vaiśyas were born of your thighs. Śūdras issued forth from your feet.

11. From your mind the Moon was born and from your eyes, the Sun. The Wind flowed from (was born of) your ears along with the vital airs and the Carrier of Havya (i.e. Fire) from tongues.

12. Ether emerged forth from your navel; Firmament from your head; the Earth was born from your feet and the eight Quarters came out from your ears.

13. The Seven Paridhis (sacrificial sticks laid round the sacred fire) issued from you and so also the twenty-one Samits (sacrificial twigs). The mobile and immobile beings of all species came forth from you alone.

14. You alone are the lord of all the worlds; you alone are the protector. In a fierce form, O great Lord, you alone are the annihilator.

15. You alone are Yajña and part of Yajña. You are the lord of Yajña, greater than the greatest. You are the great Śabda Brahman (Sound as the Supreme Being or the Vedas).

16. You are the independent king, Emperor. O Lord of the worlds, O ruler of the universe, you are Virāṭ (of Cosmic form). You are beneath. You are above. You are at the sides. O Lord identical with the universe, everything in the world has been pervaded by you.

17. Yājñikas (performers of Yajñas) who worship you, obtain the highest abode. You alone are the consumer and what is consumed. You are the Havis offering, the Hotṛ (oblator of Havis) and the Havana (the act of offering havis into the fire); you are the bestower of benefits.

18. You are the enjoyer of the benefit of all holy rites, O Lord; you are identical with all holy rites. You are the implements of all holy rites; you are the bestower of the benefit of all holy rites.

19. You are the inspirer to perform Karmas . You are the bestower of perfection in Virtue, Love and Wealth. Excepting you, who else is the bestower of salvation? O Hṛṣīkeśa , obeisance to you.

20. Obeisance to the infinite one having a thousand (innumerable) forms; to the lord having a thousand feet, eyes, head, thighs and arms; to the eternal Puruṣa having a thousand names. Hail to the Lord, the sustainer of thousands of crores of Yugas !

21. We have fallen off from the posts of authority; we have resorted to you as our refuge. O Lord, save us, O lotus-eyed one. Be the asylum unto the helpless ones.

22. O Lord, you are the sole refuge to the creature fallen into the ocean of worldly existence. There is none equal to you in your creation, who can protect the distressed ones.

23. O Lord, you are the father of the universe, the sole refuge to the distressed one, to the helpless one. You are the protector, the nourisher; O Lord, you alone are the person to prevent all calamities.

24. Save us, O Viṣṇu , O Lord of the universe, save us, O Supreme Lord. O lover of Kamalā , excepting you who else is competent to protect us?

25. O immanent soul, obeisance to you. O storehouse of all splendour, obeisance to you.

26. Eulogizing thus, those Devas bowed down again and again, O excellent Brāhmaṇas, and came out along with Indradyumna .

27. They then went to the Shrine of Śrī Narasiṃha , fell (at his feet), bowed down with great devotion and worshipped Nṛkesarī (the Man-Lion).

28. Then, along with Padmanidhi they went to the summit of the mountain Nīla where the excellent Mansion (had been built). They went there for the purpose of getting all the requisites together.

29. There they saw the excessively lofty (Mansion) pervading the entire sky. (It caused the suspicion) whether it was the rising Viṇḍhya mountain getting ready to obstruct the movement of the Sun.

30. It pervaded all the quarters. It sparkled with its wonderful structure. Although much time had elapsed, it retained its grace and wonderful outline.

31-32. Then Indradyumna, the devotee of Viṣṇu, thought thus: ‘From here I went to the Satyaloka formerly while it was being constructed. After a long time the completed Mansion, the perfect palace, has come into my view. It is only due to the grace of the Lord and not to human endeavour.

33. There is the end of a Manvantara when even the Sun, Moon and Indra are annihilated? Still this rare Mansion continues to stand (perfectly).

34. These Mansions built by human beings are like anthills. They crumble down and they are overgrown with trees. In a short while, their life expires (and they crumble down).

35. It is on account of the compassion for me of the Lord that Hari 's abode has been preserved.' Then he spoke threse humble words to his assistants:

36-39. "Know that the Mansion of the Lord has been constructed by me. The Lord himself manifested there with a wooden body. At that time an unembodied ethereal voice spoke to me: 'Get the Mansion for the stay of the Lord of the universe constructed on the peak of Nīla mountain. It shall be a thousand Hastas high. For the ceremony of the installation of this, the Lotus-born Lord himself will come here along with Siddhas , Brahminical sages and Devas.' How can it be known what requisites are to be gathered together?"

When (Indradyumna) said thus, those Devas, divested of their authority, spoke to him:

Devas said :

40. We too do not know that. Our preceptor Guru (Bṛhaspati) is not within our power now. He is engaged in the welfare of heaven.

Padmanidhi said :

41. O Lord, according to the behest of Brahmā , I have come here along with you. What is to be done by me here? What is the object expected (by you all)?

Jaimini said :

42. While they were conversing thus, Nārada , who had been previously sent by Brahmā and who was an expert in all sacred treatises, stood in front of them.

43. (Brahmā had said to him) "O sage, collect together all the requisite things in accordance with the injunctions of the scriptures. At your bidding Padmanidhi will fetch everything."

44. On seeing the son of Brahmā all of them joyously stood up. The excellent king adored him by means of Ṣaḍarghya Pūjā (worship in which the Arghya is offered six times) too.

45. Those Devas who were having human forms, bowed down. Indradyumna told him about the articles necessary for the rite of installation:

46. "O excellent sage, I do not know what specific things should be collected together, as I have been abandoned by my priest for a long time. Hence, O Brāhmaṇa , command whatever is to be done and the sequence thereof."

[1]: [1] : Cf the Puruṣa Sūkta (RV X.90). The eulogy is a Purāṇic version of RV.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-7. On this being said, Nārada thought over everything in the light of the injunctions of the scriptures. He wrote everything in the proper order on a leaf and informed the king.

After hearing the contents of the leaf and pondering over it again and again, the king handed it over to Padmanidhi saying: “O Padmanidhi, whatever is written here, you collect together. Make the hall full of gold; embellish it with gold. Let there be the following abodes: the divine abode of Brahmā , the abode of Brahminical sages free from impurities, and abodes for the residence of Indra and other Suras , of Siddhas , of the residents of the mortal world, of the prominent sages, of the kings, of the residents of the nether worlds, of the serpent kings, O Padmanidhi, of the residents of the three worlds . Every house should be furnished with suitable seating arrangement.

O Padmanidhi, carry it out with great promptness. Till the time of gathering the materials together Viśvakarman also will assist you.”

As Indradyumna was ordering thus, the sage said to him; “This must be done apart from the collection of the requisites with spaces apart (in different places).

8. Three excellent chariots [1] , perfectly fitted with gold and adorned with silken cloths, jewel-studded necklaces etc. of great value, should be made. They must be big and strong.

9. The chariot of Śrī Vāsudeva should be marked with Garuḍa emblem. Let a lotus-emblem be placed on the top of the chariot of Subhadrā .

10. The chariot of Viṣṇu should be carefully fitted with sixteen wheels, that of Bala with fourteen, and that of Subhadrā with twelve.

11. The width of the chariot of the Discus-bearing Lord shall be sixteen Hastas (i.e. 16 x 45=720Cms); that of Bala fourteen and that of Subhadrā twelve.

12. (Defective text) He is the place of rest of all the worlds. His idol is made in a sitting posture. If he were to move, the worlds will perish. Hence there is no movement (? vehicle).

13. Let him see the universe consisting of the mobile and immobile beings in the mirror of knowledge. Hence there is a clean mirror always in his hand which is free from impurities.

14-15. The Palm-tree is called Tāla because it is stationed in Tala (surface of the earth). The Lord is always marked with it. Hence that alone should be made the emblem devoid of impurities, of the incarnation of Śeṣa as Balabhadra . So he is known as Tāladhvaja (having palm tree as the emblem). Or the plough alone shall be made the excellent emblem of the Lord with one in his hand.

16. O king, the Lord should not be made to stay in an uninstalled chariot, Mansion, pavilion or city. That shall be fruitless.

17. Hence at the outset, the installation of the chariot of Hari should be made. Let the requisites thereof be collected together. It should be carried out by me.

18. This is the command of my father. I have come here immediately after receiving this command".

On hearing these words of his, three chariots were made.

19-22. The three chariots were made by Viśvakarmā in a single day through the money and articles acquired by Padmanidhi.

The axles, wheels, pillars, flags-taffs, emblems etc. were very splendid. The chariots were spacious and fitted with ornamental festoons.

They were beautiful with different kinds of wonderful features. There were carvings of couples in wonderful combinations and there were small images placed in different parts.

Half of them was completed with gold coverings. They were comparable to the chariot of the Sun-god himself. They had a loud rumbling sound like that of clouds. They had the qualities of attracting the eyes. They were yoked with hundreds of white horses having the speed of wind.

They were installed by Nārada in accordance with the injunctions of scriptures in an auspicious Lagna (Sun's entrance into a Zodiacal sign), in a Muhūrta (good time of the day) on a good Tithi (Lunar day) as instructed by Astrologers.

The sages said :

23-24. O holy lord Jaimini , speak out. You are omniscient. You are honoured by us. What is the procedure whereby the chariot of Hari should be installed? Tell us as it should be, so that we may know the details of the procedure.

Jaimini said :

25. I shall tell you the procedure whereby it was installed by the noble-souled Nārada and which was seen by me formerly.

26-29. A splendid hall shall be made to the north-east of the chariot. A pavilion shall be made in its middle. A square altar shall be made there, O Brāhmaṇas . It shall be free from impurities. The sides shall measure four Hastas (4 x 45=180 Cms.) and the height shall be one Hasta . On the night previous to the installation, in an auspicious hour, the auspicious rite of Svastivācana shall be performed after which the sprouts shall be fixed (ṃe rite of Aṅkurārpaṇa) after offering oblations to the thirty-two Devas in accordance with the injunctions.

In the morning, a holy mystic picture of circle, lotus or Svastika should be made on the Altar. A water-pot shall be placed thereon.

30-36. A decoction of five trees (i.e. exudation from the barks) shall be poured into it. The intelligent devotee shall pour into it the holy waters of Gaṅgā etc. along with clay and tender shoots, all types of scents, five precious stones, all medicinal herbs. After filling it thus in accordance with the injunctions the preceptor shall sit facing the East. He should be pure (in mind and body). Remembering Viṣṇu he should thereafter fill it with Pañcagavya . [2] The pot shall be covered with a silk cloth. There shall be splendid and sweet-smelling garlands round its neck. Fruits and tender leaves must be placed upon it. The auspicious thread must be tied. There the idol of Narasiṃha , free from ailments, the Lord of Devas, should be put. The devotee shall then recite the Mantrarāja (Oṃ etc.) and pray duly with offerings etc. for the sake of favour after invoking Hari therein. Then, O Brāhmaṇas, he should worship duly with external offerings of various kinds. To the north-west of that water-pot one thousand and eight Homas shall be performed by the preceptor by means of sacrificial twigs, ghee and Carus . The residue of the offerings shall be put in the middle of the pot at the end.

37. The chariot should be decorated beautifully by means of banners, garlands of sweet-smelling flowers etc. All the parts of the chariot should be sprinkled with water mixed with sandal paste and sweet scents.

38-39. Black aloe-wood should be fumigated. Conch-shells and Kāhāla trumpets should be sounded. Samīraṇa (Wind-god) shall be installed in the flag of Nṛsiṃha . Then after duly worshipping with red garlands having sweet-smelling flowers the following Mantra should be recited and Suparṇa (Garuḍa) be prayed to:

40. “I salute Suparṇa, the golden-coloured lord of birds, who is the cause of the life of the universe, who is a body of Viṣṇu, who is the vehicle as well as the emblem of Viṣṇu, on thinking about whom the foetuses in the wombs of the multitudes of Serpent females are aborted immediately, whose face is marked with the red dirt and the fat of serpents severed by means of his fierce, moving beak, who is of the nature of the Vedas and who is free from impurities.”

41. Reciting the Vedic Mantras in chorus, blowing conch-shells and playing on various musical instruments and uttering the excellent Sūkta (along with oṃers), the priest should place Suparṇa on the top of the chariot.

42. Then a water-pot should be waved about it and on all the sides of the chariot. Accompanied by a Brāhmaṇa , the Mantrarāja should be recited three times and the chariot should be sprinkled with water.

43. Then the Pūrṇāhuti (final oblation into fire) should be offered. Monetary gifts should be given to Brāhmaṇas and the preceptor. Thereby, that preceptor will become pleased.

44-47. At the end, the devotee should feed Brāhmaṇas with milk puddings, honey and ghee.

The installation of the chariot of Balabhadra shall be done while reciting the twelve-syllabled Mantra. The Mantra for the ploughshare emblem shall be the one beginning with “The plough is thunderbolt. It protects" etc. Or the twelve-syllabled Mantra is also glorified.

The chariot of Subhadrā shall be installed with Lakṣmīsūkta. The lotus-emblem shall be raised and unfurled after reciting this Mantra: "O seat of residence of Śrī, You have originated from the whirlpool of the navel of the Enemy of Mura . You have assumed the form of the group of Cosmic Eggs. You are the seat of the Four-faced Lord. Be steady."

48-53a. There is this much of difference. The Havis should be offered five times for each of the three separately. Everything connected with one should be completely performed separately. After installing the chariots the devotee should offer as gifts gold, cows, clothes, grains and money with great devotion to the Lord.

The Lord should be placed in the installed and well-decorated chariot in accordance with the injunctions along with the singing of Vedic Mantras.

There should be auspicious utterance of "Be victorious" to the accompaniment of various musical instruments. Chowries should be waved. Incenses should be burnt. Flowers should be showered.

The deity should be taken towards the chariot by Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas or Vaiśyas . The chariot should be carefully drawn by tamed horses of good features, or by bullocks or by men of great devotion to Viṣṇu.

53b-60a. All the people should be fed to their heart's content, pleased with different kinds of food, unguents etc. Offerings should be made above the chariot to the Devas, O Brāhmaṇas, while reciting Balimantras :

"May you all accept the offerings, O Devas, Ādityas , Vasus , Maruts , Aśvins , Rudras , Suparṇas , serpents, evil spirits, Planets, Asuras , Yātudhānas , all the deities present in the chariot, Guardians of Quarters, protectors of the worlds and Vināyakas causing obstacles. May the great divine sages grant welfare to the universe. Let these prevent all obstacles. Let them not be inimical. Let Daityas and groups of goblins be satisfied and gentle."

Thereafter, the Lord is taken along the level ground which reciting the following Mantras: Gāyatrī pertaining to Viṣṇu, [3] the sacred Sūkta (hymn) of Viṣṇu and the Mantras Vāmadevya , holy Mānastokya (RV 1.114.8) etc. and Rathantaras .

Then there shall be the loud utterance of Puṇyāhavācana along with the sound of musical instruments.

The chariot of the Discus-bearing Lord should be taken very slowly and affectionately.

60b-65. O excellent Brāhmaṇas, I shall now describe the evil portents in regard to the chariot:

If the shaft breaks there is danger to Brāhmaṇas; if the axle is broken there is destruction of Kṣatriyas; if the beam of the balance breaks there is destruction of Vaiśyas; if the pin of yoke breaks there is danger to Śūdras . If the axle pin breaks there shall be drought; if the pedestal breaks there is danger to the subjects. If the wheel of the chariot breaks it forewarns that the army of enemies shall invade. If the flagstaff falls, O Brāhmaṇas, another person shall certainly become the king. If the idol breaks one can predict that the king will die. If the chariot is shattered there shall be destruction in the whole of the realm.

If these and other inauspicious portents occur the offering to the deities should be made once again; so also the Śānti Homa should be performed. The Brāhmaṇas should be fed once again or food-grain should be given to them.

66-69. The sacred fire should be kindled in the north-eastern quarter of the chariot. Homa should be performed by means of sacrificial twigs with ghee, honey, Ājya (i.e solid ghee, or any substitute such as oil etc.) smeared at the roots and the tips.

The sacrificial twigs should be from Palāśa tree, O excellent Brāhmaṇas. The devotee should be initiated by means of the Mantrarāja. The devotee should perform the Homa by means of the Mantra of initiation. There should be special result from everything. At the end of the Homa he should perform Śāntivācana rite:

70. “Hail to the Brāhmaṇas; let there be the welfare of the king always. Hail to the cows; let there be welfare unto the subjects. Let there be peace to the whole universe.

71-74. May there be welfare unto the bipeds; let there always be peace unto the quadrupeds. Welfare unto the subjects; so also let there be welfare unto our soul.

Let there be calmness unto the Lord, Bhūḥ, Bhuvaḥ , Svaḥ (names of the three worlds) and auspiciousness. Let there be peace, let there be auspiciousness; let there be welfare all round us.

O Lord, you are the creator of the universe; you alone are the nourisher; O Lord of Devas, protect the subjects. O Lord of the universe, create peace.”

O king (?), one should perform the rite of Grahaśānti (pacifying the Planets) etc. after knowing the evil Planets of the person undertaking the journey.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1. The deities were brought near the Mansion without any untoward incident via the level ground in accordance with the proper procedure in an auspicious hour.

2. Then a very great chamber, the biggest among all the chambers, was built with various colours and studded with gems at the behest of Indradyumna by Viśvakarman .

3. In that chamber all the things required for the installation and worship, viz. Havis , sacrificial twigs, Darbha grass, different kinds of foodstuffs were acquired and provision for different kinds of music and dances was made.

4. At the time of the installation, O Brāhmaṇas , there was greater prosperity and affluence than what was there before in his empire.

5-9a. At the time there was a king on the earth named Gāla . He had made a stone image called Mādhava and installed it in the Mansion and he had been worshipping it deriving prosperity thereby.

The excellent king (Indradyumna) got a smaller Mansion built. After removing the stone idol from there with great respect, he got it installed in the smaller palace (shrine).

The king (Gāla) heard about this through messengers (and spies) and became furious. He came to Nīla mountain along with his army.

On seeing the materials required for the installation gathered together, which could not be obtained by human beings even in dream, King Gāla became wonder-struck in his mind. He remained (thinking thus in his mind):

9b-13a. ‘What is this? What is the news? Who is making all these?’ He carefully gathered the following information: Indradyumna had divine powers. That king was the original builder of the Mansion of the Lord. He had then come from the world of Brahmā along with the Devas , Padmanidhi and the preceptor Nārada in order to install (the Lord). It was he who had gathered all the requisite materials. Brahmā, the excellent Sura , would be coming (presently) for the purpose of the installation.

After getting all the details and knowing the divine activities, (King Gāla) considered himself blessed and one who had fulfilled the tasks. He knew that it was an extremely wonderful thing in his kingdom.

13b-20a. (He thought thus:) ‘A holy rite more conducive to welfare, has never been performed before, nor will it ever be. So I shall stay near him and follow the details or procedure. I shall celebrate festivals every year after knowing the mode of these.

On account of the increase of my ill luck so long I did not know about Janārdana of this wooden body, the form of Brahman itself. So I have not served him (till now): thereby my very birth has become fruitless.

I should bow down to this Indradyumna, the Sire of the universe. He is the most excellent one among the great devotees of the Lord. He has come here from the world of Brahmā.

I should seek refuge in him. By seeing the Lord Nārāyaṇa directly after the installation in the Mansion I should certainly attain salvation. After installing Lord Viṣṇu he will transfer him to me. Why does one who has gone to the world of Brahmā, stay (long) on the earth? He will instruct me about the offerings and services. He will gather together the treasure of the Lord (entrust it to me) and will certainly go to the abode of Brahmā along with him.’

20b-27. Then Gāla, a devotee of Viṣṇu, had deliberation with his ministers. He joyously and humbly went near Indradyumna. Even after seeing him from afar he fell (on the ground) by way of prostration.

With palms joined in reverence King Gāla gazed at the head of Indradyumna with awe and went near him slowly. (Then he said:)

“O lord, you are the king of kings. You are the man who has gone to the world of Brahmā. You are a living-liberated soul (and hence) an Īśvara (Lord). How can I (adequately) eulogize you? I am only an insect of a king. I did not know your greatness. I had repeated consultations with my ministers and came to fight with you. O lord, I have now seen your great superhuman manliness and a wonderful position (equal to that) of Indra .

After seeing this I have come to the conclusion that a great task like this can be accomplished by only one who has returned from the world of Brahmā and whose behest is carried out by the great treasurer Padmanidhi. O excellent one among Suras , all the Devas staying in the three worlds are under the control of your command, Let your mind be favourably inclined towards me.”

Jaimini said :

28-33. As Gāla, the great king, pleaded thus (King Indradyumna) said thus smilingly: “O king, why do you expatiate? You too are a devotee of Hari . You are an Emperor. The ownership of the earth is common to all kings living on the earth. Now you are the sole ruler of the earth. All the rites of men and Maruts (i.e. Devas) are subject to the king’s approval.

A king is constituted by Brahmā with parts of the eight Guardians of Quarters. A king deficient in merit cannot be eagerly devoted to the protection of the subjects. But you, O tiger among kings, particularly follow the excellent path and obtain fame and virtue here. You are a (real) Vaiṣṇava . One who installs the idol of Hari in accordance with the injunctions in the Mansion does not get involved in the bondage of physical bodies. He goes to the great region of Viṣṇu.

34-39. You yourself have installed this idol of Mādhava made of wood, [1] O king. It has all splendid features and it is directly the bestower of salvation.

Your holy rite has become accomplished without any obstacle. A Manvantara has passed in my case. I have no doubt in regard to this. The self-willed Four-faced Lord has been requested for the purpose of installation. How can one other than he install it? O excellent king, it is the direct incarnation of the Lord in the wooden form. How can another install it in the Palatial Shrine? If Brahmā blesses me with his presence, I shall install Janārdana in fourfold form and entrust him to you and go. You will serve (and worship) him. Whatever the Lord himself or Brahmā directs in regard to the daily offerings and services, processions and festivals of the Lord of the universe, the king, the righteous protector of virtue, shall carefully carry it out."

40-42. On hearing what had been earlier thought of by himself, King Gāla obtained great delight to know that it had been ordered by Indradyumna himself.

Like an obedient servant King Gāla stood near him. Whatever Indradyumna ordered, he immediately carried out.

Thus Lord Indradyumna who had gathered together all the requisites, who sat on the throne and was surrounded by Devas, shone like Indra.

43-48. Then various auspicious sounds arising from the divine Dundubhi drums were heard. The sounds of Mṛdaṅga drums, flutes , lutes etc., bell-metal cymbals and trumpets were heard.

There were the trumpeting sounds of Airāvata and other elephants in the sky. All round, the shouts of "Be victorious" were heard mixed with showers of flowers.

Drops of the waters of the celestial Gaṅgā mixed with Mandāra flowers (fell down). The fragrance of divine garlands, unguent and incense spread in every direction. There were the sounds of the clusters of tinkling bells from the aerial chariots of Devas.

Then, O Brāhmaṇas, a mass of refulgence appeared filling the space between heaven and earth. It dazzled the eyes of everyone present on the earth.

It was seen in front by the subjects with rows of eyes lifted up. Then gradually the excellent aerial chariot of Brahmā came into view.

It was carried on the shoulders by hundreds of golden swans. It was attended upon in front by the Guardians of Quarters with their hands busily engaged in waving chowries.

49-51. The rivers Jāhnavī and Yamunā held the fly-flaps which they waved all round with their hands. The umbrella was held by the Moon and the Sun standing on either side.

Thanks to the slow movement of the wind, the garment was moving slightly. In the midst there was the Lord of the Subjects (Brahmā) who was eulogized by Gautama and other Brahminical sages who knew the esoteric things.

He was seen being eulogized by Indradyumna and others. He was eulogized by multitudes of Devas with shouts of "Be victorious".

52-56. Raṃbhā and other heavenly courtesans danced with great awe. The songsters Hāhā and Hūhū and others continued to sing.

Groups of Siddhas and Vidyādharas sang the songs of his praise respectfully on their lutes. He was attended upon by ascetics who stood a little away with palms joined in reverence.

By their wonderfully variegated talks Sāvitrī and Śāradā delighted him very much. Who else is competent to delight him?

The waters of Jāhnavī and Yamunā were sprinkled on his body.

Gandharvas , Siddhas and others, the chief of whom was Nārada, O Brāhmaṇas, had a staff in their hands. They were seen standing humbly in the flight of stairs in the divine chariot. There was a great rush of Devas moving about in the sky.

57. Nobody cared which Deva went where and by which path. The Heaven-dwellers vied with one another in going about here and there.

58-62. Due to their great rush many fell down from their vehicles. The creator, protector and annihilator of all the worlds, the Lord himself who was identical with the universe, proceeded ahead. Who cared for the greatness of these Suras therein?

On seeing him, the king stood humbly with devotion and awe. He had his palms joined in reverence. Along with those Devas, King Gāla and others, the chief of whom was Nārada, he fell on the ground in prostration with the eight limbs touching the ground.

Then he stood up with great devotion and delighted mind. Owing to thrill (of joy of devotion) his hair stood on end all over the body. He considered himself one whose task was accomplished.

Gazing at Brahmā, the pure Lord, the king stood in front of the Lord of the universe with palms joined in reverence. He was immersed in the ocean of bliss.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-8a. A ladder made of gold and set with gems was suspended from the sky. The top of it was fixed to the footrest of the Lotus-born Lord in the aerial chariot.

The bottom of it touched the earth for facilitating the descent of Brahmā . Each one of the rungs was four Vyāmas (the distance between the tips of the middle fingers when both the arms are extended on either side) long and thick.

The Lord appeared at once between the aerial chariot and the Mansion like a rainbow giving out rays (of light) (and was) looked at with wonder by the people.

With gem-set staffs in their hands the kings of Gandharvas ceremonially pointed out the path to him saying, “This is the path, O Lord, come.”

The Lord extended his hands to those of Durvāsas and Nārada (on either side) and descended down the steps sanctifying the universe with his eyes.

He smilingly looked at the chariots and well-adorned Mansion and the sacrificial chamber that extended from horizon to horizon, was rendered splendid by gem-set pillars, caused wonder even to Śakra and that was filled with all the requisites gathered together. He got down from the aerial chariot, being eulogized all round by Devas , kings and Brahminical sages with their palms joined together and kept over their crowns.

8b-11. The quarter blessed by the benign side-glance of the Lord was filled with crores of Añjalis (palms joined together in reverence) held over the heads. On seeing Indradyumna bowing down at his lotuslike feet, Brahmā said in courteous words, a gentle smile slightly separating his lips, pointing with his finger to the Devas, Pitṛs , ascetics, Brahminical sages, Siddhas , Vidyādharas , Yakṣas , Gandharvas and celestial damsels who had all gathered together in one place and we?? simultaneously filled with joy.

12-14. “See how your good luck, O Indradyumna, has captivated all the worlds! For your sake all of them have joined once together keeping me at the head.”

After saying this he hastened to the chariot of Nārāyaṇa . Bowing down to the Lord of the worlds and circumambulating three times, Brahmā sank into the ocean of bliss with hair standing on end all over his body. With faltering notes he eulogized his own perceptible soul himself.

Brahmā said :

15-17. Obeisance to you. Obeisance to me. [1] Repeated obeisance to you and to me. I am you. You are me. You are this entire universe consisting of mobile and immobile beings.

The entire universe beginning with Mahat (the ‘Great Principle’) is the sport of your Māyā . It is superimposed on you, O Soul of the universe. [2] It has been transformed by you alone.

All this apparent world originated because of the absence of your knowledge. When you are realized everything will perish as in the case of the illusion of serpent in a piece of rope.

18. This (visible) world cannot be described in terms of the distinct categories of Sattva and Asattva (existent and non-existent). O Lord without a second, O self-luminous one appearing as the universe, obeisance to you.

19. The entire joy (derived) from objects of pleasure is just a part of yours who are the embodiment of natural (genuine) delight. All beings sustain their lives on a part (of that delight of yours).

20. O Lord devoid of the extensive manifestation of the worlds, O Lord without form or shape, O Lord without aberrations, O Lord without another support, O Lord who are gross and subtle, huge and minute, O Lord devoid of grossness and subtlety!

21. O Lord transcendental to the Guṇas (yet) the support of the Guṇas, O Lord the soul (the source) of the three Guṇas, obeisance to you.

22. I am deluded by your Māyā. I am devotedly engaged in creation only. Even today I do not get perpetual bliss. Obeisance to you, O immanent Soul.

23. I am born of the lotus in your navel. I remain there itself permanently eulogizing (you). I am incompetent to transgress your Māyā; who else can be (so) competent?

24-25. Just as in the middle of this Cosmic Egg I have been created (and engaged) in the activity of creation, so also there are crores of Cosmic Eggs and Crores of Brahmas created in succession. Not a single Brahmā among these numbering three and a half crores knows you in reality just as I standing in front of you.

26. Obeisance to you whose greatness is beyond contemplation, Obeisance, obeisance to you in the form of Cit (Knowledge, Consciousness); obeisance to the overlord of Devas. Obeisance to you, the Lord of Devas.

27. Obeisance to you with divine and non-divine forms; obeisance to you with divine form; obeisance to you devoid of old age and death; obeisance to you, the embodiment of (god of) Death.

28. Obeisance to you of the form of blazing fire; to the Death unto the (god of) Death; to the lord who destroy the death of those who resort to you; to the lord of the form of innate bliss; to the lord fond of devotion; repeated bows to the mother, to the father, of all the worlds.

29. Obeisance to the lord dispelling the agony of those who bow down (to you); obeisance to the lord, perpetually endeavouring (for the same). Obeisance, obeisance to you the ocean of natural sympathy in regard to the poor and the wretched.

30. Obeisance to you the transcendental one; to the lord in the form of the greatest; obeisance to you who are the shore beyond; obeisance to the shoreless one (taking the others) to the other shore; obeisance to you in the form of Brahman .

31. Obeisance to you of the truthful form; to the greatest cause. Obeisance to you devoted to the greatest reality pervaded by an uninterrupted series.

32-33. Obeisance to the annihilator of the distress of those who bow down; to the only Sun of your own Soul. O Lord, O Lord of the worlds, do that for which you had been prayed to formerly at the time of your acceptance of the responsibility of creation (?), O embodiment of innate bliss. What is inaccessible to me, if you are pleased, O Lord?

34-35. I have been rendered different from you in a sportive way, O ocean of mercy.

One who wanders within the prison of the universe enveloped by the darkness of ignorance, does not find any way out for the sake of liberation other than you.

36. Obeisance, obeisance to you, the only one worthy of being saluted in the world, O Lord whose lotus-like feet are worshipped by Suras and Asuras ; obeisance, obeisance, O Lord, the only moon dispelling distress. Obeisance, obeisance, O Lord with abundance of welfare and excellent knowledge.

37. Obeisance, obeisance, O Lord transcending speculation, O Kalpa Tree bestowing even the unattainable desires; O Lord who are always ready to remove the mass of misery of the distressed and helpless ones who bow down.

38. Be pleased, O lord of worlds, to those immersed in the ocean of misery. O merciful one, save (us) by means of the graceful charm of your benign side-glance.

39. After eulogizing the glorious Lord of the worlds thus by means of words full of the meanings of Vedic passages, Brahmā went to see the Plough-wielding Lord, who held up the earth and had incarnated (as Balabhadra).

40-41. After bowing down with great devotion he eulogized Balarāma joyously:

“O Lord of Devas, the sky is your head; O Lord, water is your physical body, the earth constitutes your feet, fire is your mouth and wind is your breath, the lord of herbs (i.e. Moon) is your mind, the Sun is your eye.

42. O Lord, the quarters are your arms. Obeisance to you, the mirror of knowledge. Obeisance to the plough-wielding lord, the original pillar of all the fourteen worlds.

43. Obeisance to the dispeller of the mass of sins of those who seek refuge in your lotus-like feet. Obeisance to the lord with innumerable faces (mouths), eyes, ears, feet (?), eyes and arms.

44-45. Obeisance to the Sun for the mass of darkness that is firmly rooted and that has no beginning, O lord identical with the three Vedas ; obeisance to the destroyer of the threefold defect; to the lord with three incarnations; to the lord holding up the sphere of the earth which is like a cluster of gems in the hoods; obeisance to the lord in the form of Kāla , fire and Rudra ; obeisance to you, the great Rudra.

46a. Obeisance to you, asleep in the middle of the umbrella of the hoods with the body as the bed (?)

46b-47. When the water of the great ocean gets increased (during Pralaya), when the three worlds become one, you alone lie there as Śeṣa , O lord, adorned with a thousand hoods. Under the pretext of having clusters of gems on the hoods, you have gathered together all the living beings.

48. You alone are the lord of everything; you are the creator, protector, devourer and supporter of everything always. Myself and others are only a means unto you.

49. It is spoken in the Vedāntas that Lord Nārāyaṇa is not different from you, O lord. You resort to difference for some reason.

50. You are the bed; he is the person lying on; you are the person covering and he is the person covered. He who is Viṣṇu is Rāma and he who is Rāma is Kṛṣṇa alone.

51. There is no difference between you two; be pleased. You are identical with the worlds.”

At the end of this prayer he bowed down to the great Lord Balarāma.

52a. Then he went over to the chariot of Subhadrā in order to see the goddess of the worlds.

(He prayed:)

52b-57. “Be victorious, O mother of the universe, be pleased, O great goddess.

You are the maker of the effect and the cause; obeisance to you, the omnipotent one.

O goddess, you have entered the hearts of all who are of the nature of knowledge and delusion!

O Bhadrā , you are always the bestower of the Kaivalya type of liberation. I bow down to you, the source of origin of Suras. O goddess, you are the Māyā of Viṣṇu enchanting the mobile and immobile beings.

You are seated in the lotus of the heart. You follow the feelings and inclination of Viṣṇu. You alone are Lakṣmī , Gaurī , Śacī and Kātyāyanī .

O goddess identical with everything, whatever object there is at any place whatsoever, whether it is real or unreal, you are the Śakti thereof. Who is competent to eulogize you?

Be victorious, O Subhadrā, O gentle lady, you are the bestower of welfare on all. You are Bhadrakālī of auspicious and inauspicious forms. Obeisance to you.

58-62. O goddess, you are the mother of all the worlds. Indeed Nārāyaṇa is the father. You are everything (in the universe) in the female form. Lord of the universe is everything in the male form. There is no difference between you two. There is nothing greater. We have been engaged by you, the Māyā of Viṣṇu. We always wander about, O goddess, carrying out your behest. You are the profession, the predilection and the great hunger. You alone are the sleep.

You are the hope. You fill in all quarters. You are the fulfiller of the hopes and ambitions of everyone, O goddess, you alone are the cause of bondage and of salvation.

O goddess bestowing every knowledge, O eternal one, you are the wish-yielding Kalpa-creeper to all devotees. Save me by means of the benign glances of the comer of your eyes. I bow down to your lotus-like feet.”

63-67. After eulogizing that deity in the form of Bhadrā he went over to the discus of Viṣṇu, Sudarśana , stationed in the chariot nearby. He bowed down to the discus that is (i.e. assumed) the fourth form of Viṣṇu.

After bowing, down with great devotion, he recited the following prayer:

“O Sudarśana of great flames, (O lord) having the lustre equal to that of a crore of Suns, (O lord) pointing out the path to Vaikuṇṭha to those who are blind due to the darkness of ignorance, obeisance to you. O eternally charming one, O abode of the wealth of Vaiṣṇavas , I bow down to that form of Viṣṇu, the vigour of which cannot be checked or restrained.”

After bowing down and eulogizing the deities (thus) the Lord turned away from the chariots.

By the way pointed out by Indradyumna and Nārada he climbed Nīla mountain because he was desirous of seeing the Mansion.

68. He went near the Mansion along with the Devas, O Brāhmaṇas . He saw the beautiful hall mentally approved by him.

69. In its middle he seated the Devas, serpents, kings, Brahminical sages, Yogins , Brāhmaṇas, Vaiṣṇavas and ascetics.

70. The Lord himself sat on an excellent divine throne having a footstool offered by the king.

71. At the bidding of Brahmā, the king chose Bhāradvāja (?), the great sage, in order to perform the prosperity-yielding holy rites: Śāntika (peace-giving) and Pauṣṭika (nourishing).

72-73. Those Devas who were required to be present at the time of the installation, in the holy rites of offering oblations and worship, in the Homas and those who were to be meditated upon occupied the four quarters at the bidding of the Lotus-born Lord. They were excellently adored with sweet scents, flower garlands, embellishments and ornaments.

74. Then the holy rite was begun by the intelligent Bhāradvāja(?) in the presence of the Lord of Devas and all the heaven-dwellers.

75. After worshipping the creator of the worlds at the very outset along with all ancillary and subsidiary rites, the king joyously performed the worship of all the residents of the three worlds.

76-77. Thereupon all the residents of the three worlds who were worshipped by him looked at the immutable Brahmā himself seated in the middle and also the Lord of the worlds visible in the form of Brahman. By the favour of Indradyumna they attained the state of living-liberated souls.

78-83. After performing the inauguration of the Mansion which was very fascinating, wherein a great flag was unfurled on a lofty flagstaff and which was (as though) the body of the Lord, Bharadvāja requested Brahmā to infuse life (into it). Then Brahmā stood up. He performed the holy rite of Svastyayana himself -accompanied by Nārada and other sages, learned Brāhmaṇas, kings, Kṣatriyas , Nāgas (serpents) and great ascetics.

Divine songs were sung in sweet voice by Gandharvas in tunes befitting the auspicious occasion. Celestial damsels began to dance. The hymns of good omen [4] (Śākunas) were recited by the Brāhmaṇas. The sound prevailed everywhere when conch-shells were blown, Kāhāla trumpets, Muraja and Bherī drums and various other musical instruments were played. Then all of them went into the chariot and lowered (the idols) from the chariot down the flight of stairs.

84-85. They lowered (the idol of) Nārāyaṇa, free from ailments, very slowly and gracefully. They were very alert and attentive. They had good concentration. They had perfect self-control along with great devotion. They held (the idol) placing their hands (gently) at the sides, arms, head and feet. They placed it on cotton -beds and took it near the Mansion.

86-89. From above the flowers of the divine Santāna tree were showered. The following prayer was sung:

“Be victorious, O Kṛṣṇa, O Lord of the universe. Be victorious, O destroyer of all sins. Be victorious, O Lord who adopted the wooden body sportively. Be victorious, O bestower of the desired benefit. Be victorious, O Lord, the graceful uplifter of those who sink in the ocean of worldly existence; Be victorious, O immutable one.

Be victorious, O ocean of mercy. Be victorious, O Lord, the ultimate resort of the distressed ones.

Be victorious, O Acyuta ; be victorious, O Ananta ; be victorious, O īśāna ; obeisance to you.”

The Lord was eulogized with these prayers by the Self-born Lord Brahmā. Nārada too eulogized, playing on his lute.

90-92. Two gem-set umbrellas were held (one) above the head (and the other) behind the back by the Moon and by the Sun with great devotion. Divine incense was burnt. (Celestial damsels) embellished by their youthful charms stood on either side in rows with chowries (in their hands). They were eager to wave them gracefully. All of them joined together with great enthusiasm and took (the idols of) Sudarśana, Subhadrā and Balabhadra.

93-94. A pavilion had been constructed with gem-set pillars at the entrance to the Mansion. The idols were placed there with a circular mirror in front for ablution. Gem-embellished water-pots were filled with holy waters from the Tīrthas scented with perfumes.

Reciting Śrī Sūkta [5] and Puruṣa Sūkta , (RV.X.90), O excellent Brāhmaṇas, Lord Brahmā performed the rite of ablution of the idols for the benefit of all the worlds.

95. Then the deities were adorned and rendered splendid with sweet scents and garlands. The creator of the world himself performed the rite of Nīrājana (waving of the lights). Then the Lord repeated the Mantras and placed them on a gem-set throne.

Brahmā said :

96. O Lord, the support of the entire universe, established in all the worlds. O Lord with good reputation, O omnipresent one, be settled in the Mansion.

97-102. When you are installed, O Lord, all of us are also stabilized. Let this installation rite be fulfilled at your bidding and thanks to your grace.

After installing the Lord of the worlds, and touching his lotus-like heart, he repeated the Mantrarāja (Leading Mantra) in the Anuṣṭup metre a thousand times.

O Brāhmaṇas, the rite of installation was performed on the eighth day in the bright half of the month of Vaiśākha on a splendid Thursday in conjunction with the Puṣya Star.

That day is very auspicious. It is destructive of all sins. The holy bath, charitable gifts, penance and Homa —all these yield everlasting benefit.

Those who see Kṛṣṇa, Rāma and Subhadrā on that day, sanctified by devotional feelings, will certainly become liberated.

When the eighth day in the bright half of the month of Vaiśākha is in conjunction with Thursday and Puṣya constellation, Viṣṇu should be worshipped. This worship is conducive to the destruction of the sins of a crore of births.

[1]: [1] : The prayer shows identity or oneness between the devotee and the god, here Brahmā and Visnu.

[2]: [2] : The influence of Śaṅkara's Advaitism—his Māyāvāda, the theory of adhyāsa (superimposition) etc. is found not only in the prayer but elsewhere also in this Purāna.

[3]: [3] : In vv 52-62 Subhadrā is regarded as Viṣṇu's Śakti or Māyā and hence her identification with different goddesses like Lakṣmī, Gaurī etc. and her oneness with Viṣṇu in this prayer.

[4]: [4] : This is a Khila (supplementary) Sūkta after RV 11.42. It begins with: kanikradaj januṣam prabruvāṇa etc. RV 11.43. is also recited to remove the evil due to the cries of certain birds.

[5]: [5] : It is a very popular Khila Sūkta after RV V. 87 but it is separately recited as an independent Sūkta.

Summary: The Lord Adopts the Form of Nṛsiṃha : Dialogue between Brahmā and Indradyumna .

Jaimini said :

1-8. By the power of the Mantra Indradyumna and others saw Lord Narasiṃha as having a mysteriously wonderful appearance.

He appeared to lick up the entire universe all round by means of his blazing tongue. He was like Kāla (god of death), fire and Rudra [1] rising up as if to swallow everything.

He pervaded the entire space between heaven and earth with his intensely blazing refulgence. The Lord had innumerable eyes, mouths, necks, hands, feet and ears.

Everything is mysterious and wonderful with the Lord. He was the only storehouse of splendour. They were frightened and excessively bewildered. They could not even eulogize the Lord.

On seeing him (the Lord) like this, then, Nārada asked his father:

Nārada said :

O holy Lord, how does this (Lord) shine like this? It was for blessing (the world) that he took the incarnation. But on the contrary, he has become terrifying. All have become inert due to fear. They are apprehending universal annihilation now.

O Lord of the worlds, you alone know the graceful sports of the Lord.

On hearing those words of Nārada, the Lotus-born Lord's face beamed with smiles. He spoke these interesting words rendering comfort unto all:

Brahmā said :

9-13. Foolish persons who do not know the reality are likely to disregard or to be indifferent to the Lord after seeing the Lord incarnated with wooden body, though he is directly Brahman itself. Hence, the Lord was consecrated with the Mantrarāja (king of Mantras) by Brahmā (Parameṣṭhin) so that they too may understand. This Mantra was the same as was formerly used by Parameṣṭhin so that the Lord could tear the demon (i.e. Hiraṇyakaśipu).

(Therefore) this idol attains such a form as is very difficult to view and terrifies. This idol is the highest point of perfection of Viṣṇu of unmeasured splendour.

By worshipping this idol people will attain the goal from which a return is impossible.

Facing Nṛsiṃha, he joyously recited this prayer:

14. "Obeisance to you, O sole Lion-God, O excellent one among Devas . Obeisance to you, O Lord, the sole lion for the elephants of the mass of sins. Obeisance to you, O Lord, the Lion that takes (the devotees) across the ocean of misery. Obeisance to you, O highly refulgent Lord, O divine Lion!

15. Salute to you, O wonderful Lion, of all forms. Obeisance to you, O lion (capable of) liberating from pain. Obeisance to you, O Nṛsiṃha, of divine form and body. Hail to you, O most excellent one among heroes, O unique Lion!

16. Obeisance to you, O Lion capable of tearing the Daitya ; obeisance to you, O Lion, the overlord of all the Devas; obeisance to you, O Sole Lion in the forest of the Vedāntas . Obeisance to you, the Sole Lion in the cave (heart) of Yogins .

17. Obeisance to you, O Lion, O sole Lion of piety and virtue, Obeisance to you, the Lion on the summit of Nīla mountain."

Jaimini said :

18-21. (Partially defective Text) After eulogizing the Divine Lion thus Brahmā began to initiate Indradyumna in the Mantrarāja. [2] He made a Talisman (Amulet) of the Divine Lion and placed it on him (the king). This Mantra has been directly mentioned in the Atharvaṇa (Veda). Those who are devoted to the Vedāntas call this Vaiṣṇava Nirvāṇa (salvation to the followers of Viṣṇu). All the four Vedas are always established in it. It is by learning this Mahāmantra ('Great Mantra') from this Four-faced Lord himself that Lord Svāyaṃbhuva Manu carried on creation formerly. The qualities (super-natural powers like) Aṇimā (Minuteness) etc. are its secondary benefits.

22. In order to acquire all the four aims of human life this great Mantra alone is enough. What to speak of insignificant petty desires!

23. This great Mantra alone bestows the benefit of all Yajñas ; it is the bestower of all the Tīrthas ; it is the bestower of the benefits of all charitable gifts and holy rites.

24. Just as this Lord in the form of the Divine Lion destroys all the groups of sins, as the forest fire burns up a heap of cotton , so also (does) the great Mantra.

25-26. It is by practising this that ascetics dispel the ailment of worldly existence. The moment one receives this and masters this, evil spirits, adverse Planets, epileptic fits, Demons, Ḍākinīs (witches), goblins, vampires, ghosts, serpents etc. flee away. They are not capable of even to look at him.

27-30. Then Indradyumna received the King of Mantras (the most important Mantra) from the Four-faced Lord and viewed the Lord thus: Nṛsiṃha has quiescent body. Lakṣmī has resorted to his chest. He holds the discus and the Pināka bow [3] (?) The Moon and the Sun constitute his eyes. The pair of lotus-like hands extend up to the knees. The nose is prominent. He is comfortably seated in a thirty-two-petalled lotus full of Mantra syllables, which shines with OṂ in the middle for its pericarp and which has been placed above the seat of Yogic tablet (slab). He has a boisterously loud laughter. He is looking towards the lotus-like face of Śrī. His lotus-like face is adorned with manes.

31. Behind the Lord, he saw Balabhadra in the form of an umbrella as he had extended his thousand hoods of shining features with divine gems. He held the plough and the palm tree.

32. On seeing Puruṣottama of such a form the king was delighted. With his mind struck with wonder, he asked the Lotus-seated Lord:

33. “O holy Lord, wonderful indeed is the act of the Slayer of Madhu . O Creator of the worlds, how is it possible for us to understand him?

34. At the end of the sacrifice he adopted that form made of wood. You alone, O Lord, placed him within the Mansion, the Lord who had been in the chariot.

35-37. Formerly that ethereal voice told me that the Lord would have a fourfold form from the tree of superhuman origin [4] (apauruṣeya taru).

Now only one is seen. He has been well-installed. Is this Māyā or reality? O Lord, tell me exactly if you consider me worthy of hearing about it, O Creator of all the worlds.”

On hearing this, (Brahmā) replied to the excellent king who was in doubts.

Brahmā said :

38. The first idol of the Lord, O king, was in the form of Narasiṃha. It was proclaimed by Nārāyaṇa to you on account of my blessings.

39. O tiger among kings, do not consider this an ordinary statue, an idol of wood. This is indeed the form of the Supreme Brahman. [5]

40. Since it is naturally capable of dispelling all the miseries and bestowing unending bliss, this idol of wood itself is called Supreme Brahman.

41. Thus as the Lord of wooden body is the creator of all the worlds, he created (revealed) his own self in accordance with the four Vedas.

42. There is no difference between these two, viz. the Brahman of sound (Vedas) and the Supreme Brahman. At the time of universal dissolution this is one. Difference comes at (the time of) creation.

43-45. Indeed, O king, Śabda (sound, words) and Artha (meaning) are interdependent. If there is no meaning (object), there is no word. If there is no word, nothing is known.

Hence the four Vedas constitute the object. The words and the meanings are like this. The wielder of plough (i.e. Balarāma) is in the form of Ṛgveda . Nṛsiṃha is in the form of Sāma Veda ; this Bhadrā is in the form of Yajus and the discus is known as Atharvaṇa. The Vedas are four when different, but constitute one entity when they do not differ.

46. Hence, let there not be any doubt in you. The Lord is one as well as manifold. In the other incarnations too this happens like this. This is the rule.

47. The difference and non-difference of the Lord of the universe have been explained to you, O king. Wherever (i.e. in whatever way) your mind feels contented, follow it up with devotion.

48. This Lord has all the forms. The Lord is identical with all the Mantras. He bestows benefit in accordance with the manner in which he is worshipped.

49-50. Just as a piece of gold can be turned into any (ornament) as one wishes and calling it by a particular name (of the ornament) yields the pleasure and contentment thereof, so also, O king, the Lord has manifested himself here along with his greatness. One attains Siḍdhi as much as one has faith.

51. Mentally, verbally and physically and with a pure conscience propitiate Govinda here, the Lord assuming the wooden body.

52. For the sake of the acquisition of the benefit in the form of the four aims of life, worship this Lord Viṣṇu as you desire by means of this prominent Mantra.

53-56. There has never been a greater Mantra nor will there ever be one. The Lord is so fond of his devotees that Viṣṇu worshipped by means of this becomes pleased instantaneously and gives even his own city. Of what avail are Yajñas, Tīrthas, holy rites, charitable gifts and penances unto him who adores Viṣṇu of wooden body stationed on Nīla mountain?

I shall tell you the truth, O king. Listen to this attentively. By seeing the immortal Brahman stationed on Nīla mountain in the guise of a wooden statue, at the root of the banyan tree, on the shore of the sea, one shall certainly be liberated.

[1]: [1] : Or like fire at the destruction of the universe (Kālāgni) and Rudra.

[2]: [2] : VV 18-26 describe the power of Nṛsiṃha Mantra.

[3]: [3] : ‘ cakraṃ pināka̱ṃ dadhatam ’ may be emended as follows: ‘ cakraṃ śārṅgaṃ ca dadhatam ’, as Śārṅga is the name of Viṣṇu’s bow and Pināka that of god Śiva.

[4]: [4] : This is the tree which was seen floating on the sea and it was out of this tree that the idols of Jagannātha etc. were carved.

[5]: [5] : In vv 38-56 god Brahmā emphasizes the greatness of the wooden images of Jagannātha etc. The wooden images are the Supreme Brahman. Brahmā advises Indradyumna to propitiate that Wooden-Brahman (Dāru-Brahman).

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-4. After saying this to the tiger among kings, the Lotus-seated Lord took away the lion form of Viṣṇu that had formerly manifested in the form of light and touched the heart for the sake of the welfare of the worlds.

The four idols that were seen before at the time of placing them down from the chariot were seen again seated on thrones. Brahmā then worshipped Balabhadra with the twelve-syllabled Mantra . He worshipped Nārāyaṇa , free from ailments, with the Puruṣa Sūkta , (Subhadrā) with the Devī Sūkta and the discus with the twelve-syllabled Mantra. After worshipping he submitted the request (to the Lord) to bless the king.

Brahmā said :

5-8. O Lord, O Lord of the chiefs of Devas , O bestower of blessings on devotees, Indradyumna has been a devotee of yours in the course of a thousand births. At the end he saw you.

Indeed, O Lord, seeing you is the cause of Sāyujya with you, although he wishes to worship you through the yoga of devotion. So command him to meditate on you through the yoga of devotion, through holy rites, different kinds of offerings and services to be performed in different places on different occasions.

Desirous of imbibing the nectarine juice of your command issuing from your lotus-like mouth, O Lord of the universe, the king looks at you without winking.

Jaimini said :

9. On being requested thus directly by the Lotus-born Lord, the Lord, though he had only the wooden body, laughingly said thus in a majestic tone:

The holy idol said :

10. O Indradyumna, I am delighted with your devotion and holy rites performed without selfish motive. So much of wealth has never been spent by any person other than you.

11-12a. I shall grant you this boon, O king, that your devotion to me shall be steady. You have spent crores and crores and built my shrine, O great king. Even if it cracks and crumbles, this spot will not be abandoned by me.

12b-18. Even if any other person later, on another occasion, were to build the Mansion, the credit surely shall go to you only. It is due to my love for you that I will stay there. I affirm repeatedly that it is true. I am speaking the truth to you. Even when the Mansion crumbles, I will never abandon this spot. With this wooden body I shall stay here for the period till the second Parārdhaka (the later half of the life) of Brahmā comes to a close.

In the second set of four Yugas of Svāyaṃbhuva Manu , in the first Jyeṣṭha month of the Kṛta Yuga , [1] I was born in the Jyaiṣṭhī (i.e. on the full-moon day in Jyeṣṭha). That is the auspicious birthday of the incarnation.

On that day the sacred ablution should be performed on my idol in accordance with the injunctions for great ablutions. O great king, it should be done profusely with the waters (of the Tīrthas) scented with perfumes. [2] This holy rite will destroy the sins acquired in the course of a crore of births. The benefit of all the Tīrthas and sacrifices and the benefit of all charitable gifts (shall be acquired).

19-21. Benefit is acquired, O great king, even by those who view this.

There is a well to the north of the Banyan tree. [3] Indeed it is filled with all the Tīrthas. It was originally dug up for the purpose of bathing. It has been covered a little by the (falling) earth. I incarnated afterwards. Clear it and bring it to light. It should be consecrated on the fourteenth lunar day after offering oblation in accordance with the injunctions to the Kṣetrapāla (Protector of the holy spot) who protects it and to the Guardians of the Quarters.

22. Brāhmaṇas should take water therefrom with golden pots to the accompaniment of the sweet sounds of conch-shells, Kāhāla trumpets, Muraja drums etc.

23. On the morning of the full-moon day, in the month of Jyeṣṭha, the devotee should perform the ablution of Rāma , Subhadrā and me along with Brahmā. Thereby he will obtain my world.

24. The man who sees me being bathed then, O excellent king, does not become bound with bodies thereafter.

25-29. In the north-eastern corner a sturdy stage [raised platform] be made and placed. It should be well-adorned. A canopy should be put up above it. It should be sprinkled with sandal-paste water. Along with Rāma and Subhadrā I should be bathed and taken there. He who sees me proceeding ahead facing South with great devotion, shall certainly obtain whatever he wishes for.

O king, after placing me (installing me), for fifteen days one should never see ugly or beautiful things (?) By performing this holy ablution of Jyeṣṭha one is liberated from all sins.

30. O lord of the earth, you should celebrate 'the great procession named Guṇḍicā. [4] The very glorification of this liberates a man from sins.

31. The fifth day of the lunar month of Māgha and the eighth day in the bright half of Caitra —these are the best days for the great festival named Guṇḍicā.

32. Particularly the second day in the month of Āṣāḍha in conjunction with Puṣya constellation is conducive to salvation. The festival shall be celebrated on the specified lunar day even if the constellation does not coincide. It is pleasing to me always.

33. On the second day, in the bright half of the lunar month of Āṣāḍha, in conjunction with Puṣya constellation, the devotees should place Rāma and me along with Bhadrā on the chariot.

34. For the performance of the great festival, many Brāhmaṇas should be propitiated. The Guṇḍicā pavilion should be where I was born before.

35. At that time the great Altar of your thousand horse-sacrifices was there. There is no spot here on the earth more meritorious than that.

36. There is no other place on the earth more pleasing to me than that place where you performed Homas for five hundred years to propitiate me.

37-38. Just as this Nīla mountain is highly pleasing to me now on account of your Mansion (built) at the instance of the Four-faced Lord, so also in the Nṛsiṃhakṣetra the great altar of your sacrifice, the place of my birth, is eternally pleasing to me.

39. I have stayed there for a great deal of time. I have great pleasure therein. This Lotus-born Lord is my Ātman . My Ātman has been installed by him in the Mansion.

40. Due to his request and your devotion I shall stay here permanently. I shall go (there) for nine days. Then I will come here.

41-42a. There, O great king, is your lake consisting of all the Tīrthas. On its shore I shall stay for seven days with a desire to bless (people). Men who see me stationed there go to my abode.

42b-44a. There are three and half crores of Tīrthas in all the three worlds together. Due to my presence near the lake all those Tīrthas flow into that lake. By taking holy bath there and by seeing me duly with devotional feelings they do not undergo any longer the pain in the womb of a mother.

44b-45. When I return on the ninth day facing the South, the devotees shall see me. Those who see me then, shall attain the benefit of a horse-sacrifice for every step. They being on a par with Indra enjoy the pleasures and in the end enter me (i.e. become one with me).

46. My getting up, my going to sleep, turning on the sides, covering of my path and meritorious bath—all these are occasions for great festivals.

47-50. On the full-moon day in the month of Phālguna , O king, the festival of my sport in the swing (dolā) should be celebrated. Those who see me worshipped facing the South and sporting in the swing shall be liberated from Brāhmaṇa 's slaughter and other sins. There is no doubt about it. Worshipping me in these two (festivals), seeing me and bowing down to me, the devotee shall obtain the benefit of eight thousand horse-sacrifices for each.

On the thirteenth day in the bright half of Caitra, the festival of Karmaprapūraṇam (filling in the Karmas) shall be celebrated. I shall be worshipped with Damana (Artemisia Indica) flowers on the fourteenth day in the bright half of the month of Caitra. All the sins of those people shall be destroyed.

51-52. The third day in the bright half of the month of Vaiśākha is called Akṣayatṛtīyā . On that day I shall be smeared with excessively splendid unguents. It shall please me. Those who celebrate my festivals regularly shall attain all the four aims in life. Each of these is glorified as the bestower of the fourfold aim of life.

Jaimini said :

53. After granting boons to Indradyumna, O Brāhmaṇas, the Lord said to Brahmā with smiles on his lotus-like face:

54. “O Four-faced One, everything has been accomplished for your delight. Your wish is my wish. Certainly there is no difference between us.

55. This incarnation has been taken by me as a result of your former request to me while I was in the form of Mādhava .

56. By seeing me here, by worshipping me and by casting off their life here, all of them are gradually liberated along with you. Again they will attain Sāyujya :

57. If a man wishes something and serves me here, he will certainly obtain it.

58. Let the king in (your) company go now to Satyaloka . Let the Devas go to heaven. I stay on here as long as you live.”

59. Then those excellent Brahminical Sages and Suras became delighted. After bowing down their heads to the Lord they went to their respective abodes.

60. The Lord, the Lord of the universe having the form of the idol remained silent, delighting all the men.

61. The righteous-souled Indradyumna, the devotee of Viṣṇu, steadfast in his holy rites, followed the Lotus-born Lord. At his behest he returned.

(Brahmā said :)

62. Celebrate well all the processions and festivals commanded by the Lord. Whe this Lord of the universe is pleased, all the mobile and immobile beings are pleased.

63. The lord of the earth received this behest of the Lotus-born Lord with bent head. Accompanied by Nārada and Padmanidhi he celebrated all the festivals beginning with Jyeṣṭhasnāna (taking the holy bath in the month of Jyeṣṭha) gorgeously.

[1]: [1] : Two words ‘ daśeti kratusaṃsthitiḥ ’ in the original appear to be irrelevant.

[2]: [2] : sādhivāsam : ‘ adhivāsa ’ is also interpreted as ‘the necessary arrangement for festive religious duties performed on the previous day’. Then the translation will be... “on that day...for great ablution along with the Adhivāsa ritual”.

[3]: [3] : The Kalpa tree which stands in the compound of Jagannātha Temple.

[4]: [4] : Another name for Ratha-yātrā .

English translation

The sages enquired :

1. What was the manner in which he (Indradyumna) performed the rite of ablution of the Lord of Śrī on his birthday? O sage, describe all the other festivals too duly.

2-3a. Everything had been spoken to you formerly by Nārada , O excellent sage. Indeed that sage, the son of Brahmā , knows Brahman that is beyond Tamas (darkness of ignorance). Restate all those things of Indradyumna accurately, O sage. We are eager.

3b-5. Wonderful indeed is the luck of Indradyumna, the king, O sage. At the end of that much of the holy rite this great miraculous event happened to him.

It has never been seen or heard that a wooden idol could grant boons directly like a human being, as though it had an animate body. The more we remember the story of the Lord, the more it is destructive of sins.

6. Rare indeed among the residents of the mortal world is such a life as that of that king. To us who listen to it, O great sage, there is not satiety at all.

7. Therefore, O holy lord, recount to us in due order the various processions and festivals that are destructive of all sins. It is certain that one will (go to) and stay in Vaikuṇṭha by seeing them.

8. Since the persons who (originally) spoke about the greatness of the processions was the Slayer of Madhu himself, therefore recount it to us, O highly fortunate one, with the desire for the welfare of all the worlds.

Jaimini said :

9-11. I shall recount the (mode of) the holy bath in the month of Jyeṣṭha , O sages. Listen to it now.

On the tenth day in the bright half of the month of Jyeṣṭha, the devotee should get up early in the morning with perfect control over his speech. He should perform the holy rite of Saṅkalpa (i.e. ceremonial pronouncement of the pious resolve of the religious act to be performed) in accordance with the injunctions regarding the Pañcatīrtha .{GL_NOTE::}

With great purity the man should go to Mārkaṇḍeyāvaṭa (‘holy Pond of Mārkaṇḍeya ’) and perform the rite of Ācamana . After bowing down to Śaṅkara he should stand in front of the Lord with palms joined in reverence (and pray:).

12. “O excessively fiery one of a huge body, O Lord comparable to the fire at the close of the Kalpa , it behoves you to grant me permission. Obeisance to you, to Bhairava .”

13. He should then enter the holy waters and bathe, O Brāhmaṇas , repeating the five Vedic Mantras pertaining to Varuṇa , [2] or the Aghamarṣaṇa Sūkta [3] three times. After (the preliminary) bath, he should recite the following Mantra at the end and take his bath duly.

14-15. “Obeisance to the quiescent Śiva , the dispeller of all sins. O Lord of Devas , I am taking my bath. Let my sin perish. O Enemy of Tripura , obeisance to you. O Lord, O destroyer of the eyes of Bhaga , [4] save me. I have been swallowed by sins and hence I am insentient. I have sunk in the ocean of worldly existence.”

16-18. After taking the bath thus, he should come out and wear washed cloth and apply Puṇḍraka (the parallel marks with sacred ash). He should duly perform the Tarpaṇa rite to Devas, sages and Pitṛs .

He should then enter the temple of Śiva and touch the scrotum of the Bull, O Brāhmaṇas, with the following Mantra. He shall get the benefit of all the sacrifices.

“You are Dharma on its four legs. You are Yajña ; your horns are golden. Your body is the set of the three Vedas . O Lord of cows, you are the vehicle of the Trident-bearing Lord. I bow down to you.”

19. Thereafter the devotee should worship the Bull-vehicled Lord with Aghora Mantra (Maitrayaṇī Saṃhitā 2.9.10). Then he should touch the excellent Liṅga with the Ṛks called Pañca Brahman .

20-23a. He shall touch the Liṅga with the thumb and Śakti with the fist. By worshipping in accordance with the injunctions and by eulogizing the Lord, the enemy of Tripura, one gets the excellent benefit of ten Aśvamedhas (Horse-sacrifices).

By taking the holy bath in Mārkaṇḍeyāvaṭa and by seeing Lord Śaṅkara one obtains the complete benefits of Rājasūya as well of Horse-sacrifices. After death the man obtains Sālokya (i.e. residence in the same world as that of Śiva) with Śiva. Thereafter he acquires knowledge and by the favour of the Lord of the universe he obtains salvation gradually.

23b-28. Then the devotee should silently go towards Nārāyaṇa , the destroyer of pain, as well as to the excellent Nyagrodha tree which is (another) form of Viṣṇu and which is situated to the south (of Nārāyaṇa). It is destructive of the mass of sins of sinners by a mere sight of it.

After seeing it the devotee should bow down meditating on Puru -ṣottama. Thereafter he should circumambulate it reciting this Mantra:

“O Kalpa (i.e. Banyan tree [5] living till the end of the Kalpa), you are immortal. You are always the great abode of Viṣṇu. Destroy my sins. Obeisance to you. Obeisance to the Kalpa tree of unmanifest form existing even during the great deluge, and the sole support of all the worlds. Obeisance to you.”

At its root the devotee should eulogize and repeat the names of Janārdana with great devotion to him. He is liberated from the sins arising from hundreds and crores of births.

29-35. Merely by passing through its shade a man becomes free from sins. Thereafter, the devotee should bow down to Suparṇa in the form of the vehicle of Hari . He should stand in front of Hari, bowing down with devotion to Viṣṇu with great joy and with palms joined together in reverence (and pray):

“O Lord in the form of the vehicle, O embodiment of the Vedas, O abode of the universe, O Lord with a body consisting of three parts, O Lord in the form of Yajña, the pervader of the universe, obeisance to you who are to be pleased."

By eulogizing Garuḍa thus he becomes liberated from the sins incurred in the course of many births.

He should be restrained in mind, words and body and proceed ahead thinking about the Lord. After entering the temple he should circumambulate the Lord three times. He should worship him with Mantrarāja, Puruṣasūkta or the twelve-syllabled Mantra, whichever he is interested in.

Kṣatriyas and Vaiśyas all are authorized to worship. To the others seeing the Lords with devotion and repeating the names of both of them (? of Rāma and Kṛṣṇa) will suffice.

The devotee should worship the great Lord in the manner laid down in the case of Pañcopacāras [6] (five offerings and services). With palms joined in reverence he should recite this prayer:

36-40. "O Lord of Devas, O Lord of the worlds, O Lord taking (the devotees) across the ocean of worldly existence, O Lord blessing the devotees, protect me always, as I bow down at your feet.

Be victorious, O Kṛṣṇa. O Lord of the universe, be victorious. O destroyer of all sins, be victorious, O Lord whose lotus-like feet are worthy of being worshipped by the entire universe. Be victorious, O Lord of crores of Brahmāṇḍas , O Lord whose breath constitute the Vedas, O supporter of the entire universe. O Supreme Soul, obeisance to you. Be victorious, O Lord bowed down to by the multitudes of Devas beginning with Brahmā, Indra and Rudra , O dispeller of agony. Be victorious, O abode of the entire universe. O Immanent Soul, obeisance to you. Be victorious, O ocean of genuine mercy, O lover of the distressed and the poor. O sole refuge of the wretched and the helpless, O witness unto the universe, obeisance to you.

41-43. O Lord of Devas, I am fettered by the Guṇas (i.e. Sattva etc. as well as ropes) of your Māyā . I am helpless. I have fallen into the waters of the ocean of worldly existence, which cannot be crossed, which has whirlpools of delusion, which cannot be crossed on account of the Ṣaḍūrmis or six waves (viz. grief, delusion, death, old age, hunger and thirst), which is terrible with evil actions as crocodiles, in which there is no place of refuge nor any support, which is devoid of intrinsic essence and which has miseries for its foams. Redeem me, O Lord of Devas, with the benign glance of the corners of your eyes. I am sunk therein, O excellent one among Suras , O doer of excellent favour.

44-48a. You are the only kinsman, O Lord of the universe, to those who are afraid of the worldly existence. Hunger and thirst are (the tormentors) of Prāṇa (vital airs); grief and delusion (are the tormentors) of the mind and old age and death (those of) the body. Among your creation, there is none who protects the poor people like you. You have incarnated, O Lord, with the intention to bless the worlds. Since all your desires are fully realized, O Lord, what else can be the reason (for the incarnation) on the earth? After attaining your lotus-like feet, O Lord of the universe, there is no worry at all, since your lotus-like feet are the sole means for the acquisition of the fourfold aim of life. By seeing them all the worlds obtain all they desire."

48b-49. Then the devotee should worship the Plough-emblemed Lord by the Mantra of Śeṣa , twelve-syllabled Mantra, or the name, or the Praṇava etc. He should concentrate his mind, fall down (at his feet) and propitiate him:

50. "Be victorious, O Rāma, delight unto the good, having a body consisting of existence, knowledge and bliss. O Lord devoid of the mud of Avidyā , obeisance to you of pure form.

51. Be victorious, O Lord devoid of any strain or weariness through supporting the burden of the entire universe. You hold the plough always for dragging the three types of distress.

52. O Lord with clean lotus-like eyes for the protection of the wretched who seek refuge in you, O Lord, you alone are competent to wash off the entire sins of others.

53. O delighted one, O ocean of mercy, O kinsman of the poor and the downtrodden, obeisance to you. O Lord by whom the earth consisting of the mobile and immobile beings is held up on the tip of hood.

54. Redeem me from the boundless ocean of worldly existence, very difficult to cross. O supreme one among the greatest and the smallest ones, O greatest Lord, obeisance to you."

55. After thus eulogizing Bala , the king of Serpents, holding the threshing rod, the devotee should worship the primordial cause of all the worlds (Subhadrā) of splendid eyes.

56. After eulogizing that Jayā (i.e. Subhadrā), O Brāhmaṇas, the devotee should fall at her feet and propitiate her (with the prayer): "Be victorious, O Goddess. O great Goddess, be propitious, be pleased, O Goddess taking (devotees) across the ocean of worldly existence.

57. O source of origin of happiness of those who resort to you, be victorious, O cause of satisfaction. You are the effect of those which are in the form of effects, the cause of all causes.

58. You are the supporter of all who are being supported; I bow down to you, the primordial one, stationed in the region of the chest of Viṣṇu, the sharer of half the body of Śaṃbhu .

59. You are stationed in the lotus-like face of the Lotus-born Lord, I bow down to the favourite one of all the worlds.

You alone are the matchless Śakti of the Supreme Ātman in regard to the activities of creation, sustenance, destruction etc.

60. Without you even he is not competent (to do anything). You are the mother of all the worlds, the Māyā of Viṣṇu, the ascetic lady.

61a. I bow down to that Subhadrā of gentle form, the Goddess who has been the original cause."

61b. Thereafter, the devotee should pray to Puruṣottama for sea-bath:

62. "Obeisance to you, O Lord Viṣṇu who pervade the universe consisting of the mobile and immobile beings. O Lord, let the rite of my taking the holy bath in the sea achieve the result without obstacles.

63. Obeisance to you, the Lord of all the worlds, holding conch, discus and iron club. Grant me, O Lord, the permission to resort to your Tīrtha ."

64. Thereafter he should go towards the sea silently thinking about Viṣṇu. With great concentration and mental purity, he should request for and receive the permission of Ugrasena stationed on the path:

65-66. "O Ugrasena of great might, O strong one of fierce exploits, you have resorted to the seashore after receiving the boon from (the Lord) who is extremely delighted. O Lord, the bestower of complete benefit on those who take their holy bath in the Tīrtharāja (i.e. the Sea), I shall take the holy bath in the sea. It behoves you to grant me permission."

67-68. Thereafter, O excellent Brāhmaṇas, he should go to Svargadvāra (Gateway to Heaven) [7] whereby Devas come into the holy spot Puruṣottama which is heaven on the earth, for the purpose of seeing the Lord of the earth day by day. (The gatekeepers should be prayed to.) "I bow down to you both stationed on the path of descent from heaven.

69. Take me too up above, O witness unto the rites of good people; you two are born of the waters of the ocean. You are the most excellent ones. You are endowed with all good qualities.

70. I shall go between you both. Do open the gate unto heaven." 938

After praying thus the devotee should go to the sea, the Tīrtharāja (King of Tīrthas).

71-74. By seeing the sea even from afar the devotee is certainly liberated from a great sin.

After washing the hands and feet the devotee should perform the rite of Ācamana (ceremonial sipping of water). He should sit facing the East on a clean seat and draw the mystic diagram in front of him. It shall be a square with four entrances. There shall be Svastika designs in the four corners. In its middle he should draw the diagram of a splendid eight-petalled lotus. Then the eight-syllabled Mantra should be fitted (i.e. spiritually deposited) in the-hands and on the body. The Nyāsa (symbolic assignment of the part of the body to the deity) of six parts of the body with six syllables has been proclaimed by the wise (experts), and the remaining two should be assigned in the belly and on the back.

75-78a. The thirty-two syllables of the Mantra should be fixed in due order in the pair of feet, pair of calves, pair of thighs, pair of buttocks, pair of sides, navel, back, pair of arms, heart, neck, armpits, lips, ears, eyes, cheeks, nostrils, eyebrows, forehead and head.

After performing the several Nyāsas individually the devotee should with mental concentration and purity perform a Vyāpaka (pervasive, collective) Nyāsa with all the syllables.

Reciting the Mūla Mantra he should perform twenty-five Prāṇāyāmas each consisting of the three units (i.e. Pūraka , Kuṃbhaka and Recaka). Then he should put on the mystical symbols regarded as protective Kavaca , the coat of mail (i.e. ceremonial and imagined by means of the Mantras). It is divine and destructive of all sins.

78b-82. "Let Govinda protect me in the East; Vārijākṣa (the Lotuseyed) in the South; let Pradyumna protect me in the West; Hṛṣīkeśa in the North; Narasiṃha in the South-East; Madhusūdana in the South-West; let Śrīdhara protect in the North-West and Gadādhara in the North-East. Let Trivikrama protect me from above and the Lord having the form of Boar protect me from below. Let the Lord holding conch, discus and iron club protect me in all directions everywhere.

Let Nārāyaṇa protect my mind and Garuḍadhvaja the consciousness. Let Janārdana in the form of the three Guṇas protect my intellect and ego. Let the destroyer of the groups of Daityas always protect the sense-organs."

83-87. After binding the armour thus the man becomes devoid of sins.

With the sixteen types of offerings and services mentally conceived the man should worship Puruṣottama in accordance with the injunctions, O Brāhmaṇas. The Lord should be invoked in the mystic diagram. The Lord of Devas, remover of suffering, should be worshipped in accordance with the injunctions with the offerings increased in accordance with his capacity.

The devotee should meditate upon the Ātman of the Tīrtharāja and the Lord of Devas. Then with palms joined in reverence, he shall recite this Mantra:

"Obeisance to you, O Sudarśana , having the lustre of a crore of Suns. Point out the path to Viṣṇu, to me who am blind with the darkness of ignorance."

After praying thus, O Brāhmaṇas, the devotee should kneel near the waters of the sea and with great devotional feelings, he should bow down (and pray):

88-93. “O Lord of all Tīrthas, obeisance to you, to Viṣṇu in the form of water, the life of all creatures, the greatest cause of salvation. Agni (fire) is your source of origin as well as Ilā (earth). The navel of the immortal Viṣṇu impregnates your body (?) I approach your form having no other cause, and richly endowed with bliss, after entering the waters.”

He should enter the waters reciting this Mantra, O Brāhmaṇas. Meditating on the Lord of the worlds, he should invoke the Tīrtharāja, the Lord of waters standing in front in order to grant the benefit unto those who take the holy bath. He should invoke with the Aghamarṣaṇa Sūkta along with that of Nārāyaṇa, repeating them three times or by means of the five Varuṇa Sūktas . The invocation etc. is conducted only once. They are the six ancillaries in the rite of ablution.

94-97. The rite of invocation has been mentioned before. Now Sannidhāna (bringing near) is being mentioned. The rite of bringing near is for the acquisition of the benefit desired by the bather: For purity within he should perform the rite of Ācamana drinking the Mantra-charged (water). For the sake of purity of external limbs he should cleanse by means of Kuśa -water. For purity both within and without he should sprinkle his head thrice with water filled in the cavity of folded palms sanctified by means of water sanctified with Mantras. In the ocean, there is no Japa (i.e. repetition of holy names) within the waters.

He should take holy dips three times with the conviction that his sins committed in crores of births have been washed away in that water. He should meditate on the Lord, the destroyer of sins. He should (then) come up, perform the Ācamana rite and duly request for the destruction of sins reciting this Mantra:

98-102. “You are Agni, O Lord of the worlds. You are the depositor of semen virile. You are the kindler of love. You are the chief one of all elements, the Lord of living beings, O immutable one. You are the source of origin of nectar, O Lord of waters, the source of origin of Devas. Dispel all my sins, O Lord of all Tīrthas. Obeisance to you. Let all the sins formerly committed by me in the course of thousands and crores of births perish. Give me the eternal Brahman.”

After taking the holy bath, he should come to the shore, perform the Ācamana rite with restraint on speech and wear two white clothes. He should apply brilliant Puṇḍraka marks or the markings of conch, discus, iron club and lotus with devotion.

103. The devotee should propitiate Devas and Pitṛs duly meditating upon them with the belief that they are the Lord himself, O Brāhmaṇas, perfectly without the least excitement in the mind.

104-105. Thereafter the devotee should draw the mystic diagram as before, facing the North. With the Mūla Mantra as well as the following Mantra, he should worship devoutly Nārāyaṇa, the Four-armed Lord holding conch, discus and iron club either in the company of Dharā and Ramā or alone, O excellent Brāhmaṇas. After meditating on the Lord contented with the Yāga , within his mind, he should invoke the Lord externally:

106. “O Supreme Bliss! Come. O Lord pervading the universe and identical with the universe, be present in the mystic diagram for blessing (us).

107. This universe consisting of the mobile and immobile beings is established here. You alone, O Lord, are stationed within it. I shall conceive it as a seat unto you.

108. Your lotus-like feet were washed by Dharma in the form of Brahmā. Gaṅgā arising therefrom sanctifies the universe. I shall give (that) Pādya unto you.

109. With their hands raised up and placed against their crest jewel set with highly precious stones, Brahmā and others meditate upon your lotus-like feet. To you, the invaluable one, the abode of the universe, I offer this Arghya .

110. The Tīrtharāja (Sea) was drunk up (by you) in the form of Agastya . To you I give the sweet-scented water as Ācamanīyaka (i.e. water for the rite of Ācamana).

111. He who coming in contact with (demon) Madhu dragged him in order to take out all his sins—to him I offer Madhuparka [8] in the form of water.

112. With water I bathe that Lord who assumed the form of Boar and redeemed this Earth that had been submerged in the waters of the great deluge.

113. To cover up everyone I offer two splendid clothes to the Lord who in his cosmic form has crores of Cosmic Eggs as a covering.

114. I allot this sacred thread to that Lord of Yajñas without whom even a Yajña that has been performed is certainly (no better than what is) not performed.

115. I assign ornaments unto that ornament of the universe by coming into contact with whose body the ornaments themselves shine splendidly.

116. Sweet scents and unguents (are offered) to that Lord, by coming into contact with the air from whose body sandal trees become richly endowed with scented juice.

117. I assign the garland of flowers to that Lord, by thinking about whom people get their sins destroyed and acquire fair-mindedness and gentleness.

118. I offer sweet-scented excellent incense to that Lord, by keeping whom steady in the mind one stops getting scorched by the fire of worldly existence.

119. I offer this light unto that Lord who is brilliantly lit and by whose lustre the entire universe is illuminated.

120. I offer this food to that Lord who eats up the entire universe consisting of mobile and immobile beings and who creates it again after being nourished with this.

121. Excellent betel-leaf (is offered) to that Lord, the red lustre of whose mouth that emits natural sweet fragrance, enchants the celestial beauties.

122. I bow down to that Sire of the universe, [9] the ocean of mercy, who destroys the frequent movement in the courtyard of (or arena of) worldly existence, of one who performed circumambulations."

123. All these Mantras with the services and offerings have been stated separately. The devotee should meditate upon the Lord stationed outside oneself after invoking him (duly).

124-127. After offering a gem-set throne, the devotee should meditate on the Lord as seated thereon. The Pādya shall be offered at the pair of feet resembling lotuses. By reciting the Mūlamantra the water for Pādya should be consecrated with Śyāmāka rice-grains, lotuses, Dūrvā grass and Aparājitā (a plant used as an amulet).

The water for Arghya should be taken in a gold, silver or copper vessel or in a conch-shell and consecrated duly with water, sandal-paste, flowers, barley grains, Dūrvā and Kuśa, fruits, white mustard and gingelly seeds. The water should be sprinkled on the head of the Lord with the tips of Dūrvā and Kuśa leaves. If there is anything remaining, it should be poured on the ground. (So) the injunction regarding Arghya has been recounted.

128. For the sake of Ācamana , the devotee should give water consecrated with nutmeg, cloves and Kaṅkolas . Thereafter he should give Madhuparka.

129. The water for bathing should be mixed with honey, ghee and curds of cow's milk. It should be placed in a pure bell-metal vessel. It should be covered with another similar vessel. It should be well consecrated and fruits should be added.

130. The two splendid clothes should be made of machine-made silk or homespun silk or of cotton . They should be given in accordance with one's capacity. There should be no dishonesty or fraud involved in the purchase of the same.

131. He should place according to his capacity such ornaments as necklace, armlets, crown, garlands etc. in the proper places on the body of the Lord.

132. The sacred thread offered to Had should be of silk or cotton, O Brāhmaṇas, and it should be consecrated with sweet scents and sandal-paste.

133-135. The anointing shall be done with camphor, sandal, musk and saffron.

The garland or wreath of the Lord should be of Tulasī (holy basil) leaves or the flowers of jasmine, lotus, Caṃpaka , Aśoka , Chura, Punnāga , Nāga Keśara , Keśara and other sweet-smelling flowers. Loose flowers not wreathed into a garland should be offered on the head of the Lord.

136. The garland that reaches the forepart of the feet is called Mālā . Mālya (wreath) extends from the neck to the thighs. Garbhaka (nosegay) is placed in between the tresses and the devotee should shower flowers in handfuls on the head of the Lord.

137. Dhūpa (incense) should be sweet-scented containing Guggulu (fragrant gum-resin), Uśīra (a fragrant grass), ghee, honey and sandal powder. The light offered with ghee from cow's milk is the most splendid one. It should also be offered with a camphor tablet or gingelly oil.

138-140. The Naivedya should consist of well-cooked rice. It should be unbroken, swollen and puffed up. It should be made fragrant with ghee. Cow milk and curd should be added. It should be accompanied by ripe plantains and sugar. There should be different kinds of side dishes, pickles and pies. Many varieties of fruit should be used. They should be sweet-smelling Juicy and fresh. The Naivedya unto the Lord of Devas should not be less than a Prastha . Less than a Prastha is not recommended.

141. Ācamanīyaka should be offered with Dhūpa , light, Naivedya, Snāna (water for bath), Arghya, Madhuparka, clothes, and sacred threads.

142-143. On other occasions only water well-consecrated, should be offered by way of formality. At the end of Naivedya too Ācamanīyaka should be offered. O Brāhmaṇas, the sweet-smelling sandal should be ground with one's own hands. Thereafter betel leaves shall be offered along with camphor, cloves, nutmeg, cardamon and Areca nuts.

144. After repeating the Mūlamantra one hundred and eight times with the mind not dwelling elsewhere, the devotee should eulogize, circumambulate and pray to Puruṣottama.

145. "O Lord of Devas, O Lord of the universe, O Lord making all the Tīrthas function, you are identical with all the Tīrthas, O Lord identical with all the Devas.

146. By your grace I have taken the holy dip in the Tīrtharāja. Let that be successful, O Lord, be the bestower of the benefit as mentioned.

147. The Lord of the rivers and you, O Lord, are undoubtedly in the liquid form. Save me. I have sunk in the abode of sins. Obeisance to you."

148. One who worships the Lord of Devas, Nārāyaṇa, remover of all suffering, thus and takes the holy dip in the Tīrtharāja shall obtain the benefit of all the Tīrthas.

149. The benefit that is acquired by gifting away crores of cows, by performing crores of sacrifices, by feeding crores of Brāhmaṇas and by making crores of charitable gifts by men of holy rite, is obtained by means of this.

150. Meditation, charitable gifts, penance, Japas , Śrāddhas and worship of deities—everything performed on seashore shall have crores and crores of times the benefit.

151. (Pitṛs think like this) Would that in our family there were one who took holy dip in the sea. He will propitiate Devas and Pitṛs by offering water libation with gingelly seeds.

152. Even if a person attempts to take the holy dip in the sea, all his evils cry aloud, all his sins become excited and bewildered and all undesirable things flee.

153. The sin committed in other Tīrthas perishes on the seashore. The sin committed on the seashore perishes when sea bath is taken.

154. On seeing a person always engaged in taking sea bath, the servants of Yama flee to all the ten directions like deer on seeing a lion.

155. Even Yama (the god of death) is frightened on seeing him. He bows down to and worships him. He is not competent enough to stand in front of him then, in front of that man of meritorious rites.

156. Devas always desire thus: 'May we obtain human life. We shall then have our bodies purified by having the holy dip in the sea.'

157. The heap of sinful activities may well-nigh be as big as Meru and Mandara . It shall be burned by the holy dip in the sea like a heap of cotton by fire.

158. At the time of holy bath one should always remember Lord Nārāyaṇa in the waters, particularly so in the sea which is directly the form of Viṣṇu.

159. A slayer of a Brāhmaṇa , a drink-addict, a slayer of cows or a person who has committed the five sins—all these undoubtedly get redemption on account of the holy dip in the sea.

160. The holy bath in the sea excels the charitable gifts of crores of tawny-coloured cows. By taking a plunge into the sea once one should redeem a crore of the members of one's family.

161. There is no doubt about this that one obtains all those benefits and merits which accrue from all the Tīrthas and all the shrines if one takes the holy bath in the sea.

162. He who wishes for a successful birth, life and learning should proceed towards the sea and propitiate Pitṛs as well as Devas.

163-166. It is easy to learn all the four Vedas, ancillary subjects and their different modes of recitation such as Pada , Krama etc.; it is easy to make different kinds of charitable gifts in Kurukṣetra ; the holy expiations of Cāndrāyaṇas , Kṛcchras etc. and the penances are also easy; Yajñas beginning with Agniṣṭoma and involving many monetary gifts are easy to perform; but offering libations to Pitṛs with the waters of sea is very rare.

If the libation is offered for a month and the rice-balls are dedicated at seashore, all the Pitṛs become contented with the libation in the sea and propitiated by the rice-balls of Śrāddha rite. They get into aerial chariots resplendent like the Sun and immediately go to the eternal world of Brahman.

167-168. In the beginning and in the end one should worship the Lord of the universe in accordance With the injunctions. The man should then take ablution in the Tīrtharāja. He will be one who deserves salvation. Thereafter he should perform the rite of Tīrtha Visarga (dismissal of the Tīrtha). The person should be pure in mind. He should bow down to Rāma, Kṛṣṇa and Subhadrā and meditate on their forms.

[1]: [1] : Pañcatīrtha : According to our text the five Tīrthas in Puruṣottama Kṣetra are: (1) Mārkaṇḍa Tank, (2) Mārkaṇḍeśvara, (3) Jagannātha, (4) Indradyumna Tank and (5) the Sea (Bay of Bengal). These are supposed to grant salvation. But according to present-day belief, Mārkaṇḍa Tank, Śvetagaṅgā Tank, Maṇikarṇikā, the Sea and Indradyumna Tank collectively make the Pañcatīrtha.

[2]: [2] : According to Kātyāyana, the Varuṇa Mantras for recitation at the time of bath is “ imaṃ me varuṇa ”. etc. (Vāj. Saṃhitā 21.1-4).

[3]: [3] : Aghamarṣaṇa Sūkta is RV X.190.1-3.

[4]: [4] : This refers to the occasion of destruction of Dakṣa’s sacrifice. But it was Vīrabhadra and not Śiva who blinded Bhaga (BhP IV.5.20).

[5]: [5] : This banyan tree is in the compound of the great Jagannātha temple.

[6]: [6] : Pañcopacāra Pūjā : The Upacāras (ways of serving the deity) are normally sixteen (Ṣoḍaśopacāra Pūjā). But if one can’t afford these, the Pañcopacāras (five Upacāras), viz. Gandha (applying sandalpastè), Puṣpa (offering flowers), dhūpa (incense-burning), Dīpa (waving a light before the deity) and Naivedya (offering food etc.) are essential.

[7]: [7] : A place on the seashore at Jagganātha Purī.

[8]: [8] : It is strange that Madhuparka (a respectful offering of a mixture of honey to a respectable guest) is connected with the demon Madhu! Is it the identity of the first word in Madhu-parka and of the name of the demon Madhu that led the author to connect them together?

[9]: [9] : VV 122-143 give the complete procedure of Lord’s worship with the prescribed Upacāras .

Summary: The Procedure for the Sacred Ablution of the Lord in the Wooden Body.

Jaimini said :

1-2. Feeling contented that he has accomplished what has to be accomplished, the devotee should thereafter go towards the lake Indradyumna which originated as a part of the horse-sacrifices. It is on its bank that Hari dwells in the form of Narasiṃha (Man-Lion). After praying to Narasiṃha, he should take his bath therein in accordance with the (prescribed) injunctions.

3-7. “Obeisance to you, O Narasiṃha. In your excellent holy place, by your favour, the excellent king Indradyumna performed a thousand horse-sacrifices. I have come to take my holy bath in the lake that originated as a part of the horse-sacrifice. Grant me permission (to do so), O Lord.”

After performing Śauca (bodily cleanliness), Ācamana and other routine rites, he should go to the bank of the Tīrtha , stand with palms joined in reverence and pray reciting this Mantra :

“The surface of the ground was dug up by the hoofs of a crore of cows that formed part of the horse-sacrifices. It was filled with their froth and urine as well as the waters (used in the rite) of charitable gifts. You sanctify everything. I have come to take bath in your sacred waters filled with (the waters of) all the Tīrthas . Remove all the sins by this bath, that had arisen in the thousands of my previous births.”

8. Entering the waters, O Brāhmaṇas , he should repeat the five Vāruṇa Mantras and bathe. Within the waters, the Aghamarṣaṇa Mantra should be repeated three times.

9-10. The devotee should then repeat the following Mantra three times and take three dips in that water, O Brāhmaṇas:

“O Tīrtha born of the limbs of the horse-sacrifice, O destroyer of all sins! May the sins incurred in crores of births perish by taking a bath in you.”

He should then remember Had in the form of Narasiṃha by (uttering) Viṣṇu Gāyatrī .

11-15. Waters are called Nārā because they are sons of Nara . This is the first resort of his. Hence the devotee should remember Hari in the waters. [1]

Then the man should propitiate Devas , sages and Pitṛs in accordance with injunctions. He should then go to Narasiṃha seated facing the West.

By seeing Saṃbhu whether already in existence or artificially prepared as well as Hari facing the West, one is rid of sins originating from crores of births.

The devotee should worship Narasiṃha by means of Atharvaṇa Mantra. Indeed this Mantra- Rāja ('King of Mantras ') was established formerly by Nārada .

This has been used for worship for a long time by him as well as by Indradyumna. In regard to the Lord in the form of Narasiṃha, O Brāhmaṇas, there is no other Mantra like that.

16. Lord Narasiṃha becomes delighted merely by the utterance of this (Mantra). It is by means of this Mantra that the Lord with wooden body (idol) was installed by Brahmā .

17-22. The devotee should worship Lord Narasiṃha with all the offerings and services mentioned before. Japā (China rose) flowers of tawny colour and other sweet-smelling flowers also should be used. The devotee should smear Narasiṃha with (fragrant ointments of) sandal paste, Agallochum and camphor. The following should be the Naivedya :

Milk pudding along with sugar and cow's ghee , sweetmeats fried in ghee with pieces of camphor, Saṃyāvas (cakes prepared from wheat-flour), pies prepared in ghee, different kinds of fruits and cooked rice along with sugar and curds.

By seeing, touching, bowing down and worshipping Narasiṃha a man obtains his own desires. There is no doubt about it. Whatever he mentally desires, such as Deva -hood, Lordship of immortal beings, Gandharvahood, power and mastery over others, ability to win over others and becoming an Emperor, he obtains the same undoubtedly.

23-26. The procedure of Pañca-Tīrtha has been recounted to you, O Brāhmaṇas, as you had asked (for it). After performing (such worship) for five days, the man of holy rites engaged in devotion to Viṣṇu will not subsequently enter the body consisting of the five elements (i.e. he is liberated).

On the full-moon day, early in the morning, the devotee should take his holy bath in accordance with the injunctions mentioned before. He should take in only pure food, should control his sense-organs and observe the holy fast of taking food once a day only. Thus he observes the vow for the pleasure of the Deity. He should continue this for five days. Thereafter, he should enter the Mansion and see Puruṣottama reclining on the couch. By seeing Rāma (Balabhadra) and Subhadrā too he is liberated from all sins.

27-28. If a person sees Hari on the full-moon day in the month of Jyeṣṭha , as he is being bathed by sweet-smelling water taken from the well consisting of all the Tīrthas, no contact with any sin or sinner can have any adverse effect on his soul.

Now, I shall describe the procedure for those who want to take out processions (of the Lord). O sages, listen to it.

29-34. On the fourteenth day itself, a sturdy and splendid cot made of wood and straw should be got ready. Or it may be made of stone and smeared completely with lime and mortar. It must be durable, O excellent Brāhmaṇas. It is intended for the ablution of the Lord. The devotee should not use trickery in spending for this. The place must have different kinds of trees all around. It must be cool with gentle wind blowing from the South. It must be consecrated on the open grassy land where the waves of the sea lash gently. There must be a lofty canopy rendered splendid by means of costly clothes. But the covering should be so fine that Devas can have a clear view.

Devas, sages etc. come there along with Brahmā for bathing the Lord of the universe. They take with them the waters from the celestial Gaṅgā adorned with Pārijāta flowers. Brahminical sages and Devas accompanied by Brahmā bathe the Lord seated on the couch. They bathe him at the behest of Parameṣṭhin.

35-38. This Lord should be adored by Heaven-dwellers with the words 'Be victorious' and eulogies. Hence the couch should be embellished with wreaths and chowries as well as gem-set necklaces of various sorts. Festoons must be made with attractive silk cloths. It must be sprinkled with sanḍal-water rendered fragrant with sweet scents and incense. After installing the couch the devotee should place pots made of gold to the south of it. They should be filled with water taken out from the well. In the hall it should be duly consecrated and perfumed.

39. The devotee should fill the pots with excellently scented water repeating Pavamāna Suktas . [2] This rite shall be performed at midnight on the fourteenth day. It has been so prescribed.

40-42. Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas , Vaiśyas and others who are honoured and respected by the king should slowly carry (or take in a palanquin) Hari along with Balarāma as they are continuously fanned with chowries and hand-fans. While bathing Lord Vīṣṇu, the unguents applied previously should not be removed from the body of the Lord. By applying the sweet-smelling unguents, the idol should be made stronger in the limbs everyday. Indeed one with weak limbs cannot make others strong.

43-51a. The devotees carrying the Lord should be careful. They must not commit any mistake. If they are careless and if the Lord, the enemy of Mura , or Bala or Subhadrā were to fall down, it indicates danger to the king or to the realm. There will be harm to those who let the idol fall down. Their children will be extremely miserable.

Those wicked souls will have certainly to go to hell. Those who are deluded and do not have any faith or belief and say, "How can a wooden idol remain for a long time", are inimical to the Lord. They will be excluded from all holy rites and will fall into hell. A number of arguments to create disbelief in regard to righteous and pious activities can be advanced by deluded persons, atheists, ungrateful persons and damned souls. Everything depends on the invisible merit of the person concerned. The idol appears to be made of different things in accordance with the merit of these persons. At the end, the Mansion (Temple), the idol etc. perish.

This is not made by anyone. Nor has that tree been grown by anyone. That which grants boons is certainly not considered to be this idol.

In the Manvantaras that have gone by, when the idol was made, the devotional feelings of the people and of the Devas used to increase. Such were the divine devout feelings of all the kings too, O Brāhmaṇas.

51b-55a. The Lord, the receptacle of mercy, manifested himself in the Svārociṣa Manvantara . In the Vaivasvata Manvantara , in the twenty-seventh cycle of the sets of four Yugas , at the close of the Dvāpara Yuga , both Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna came here. Performing the holy rites, they stayed here for three days. With great devotion they worshipped the Slayer of Madhu (Jagannātha), eulogized him and then returned to Dvārakā . [3] No one who has adopted human body, knows the reality. The incarnations of Viṣṇu take place in every Yuga and after establishing piety and righteousness, they merge into the original region (of the Lord).

55b-59. He was formerly requested by Brahmā who was told by the Lord that he, Lord Viṣṇu, would be staying for the period of a Parārdha in wooden form. Viṣṇu, on being meditated upon with pure Sattva qualities, is a bestower of boons forever.

The achievement of one will be in accordance with one's faith. Even if he errs in his belief, a person who is a devotee of steadfast mind, derives the rare benefit befitting his endeavour from him. Formerly, everything in regard to the liberation of Aṃbarīṣa was narrated to you.

Therefore, have very firm devotion towards the Lord of the universe in the form of the supreme Brahman and stay in the holy place of Puruṣottama.

60-66. Hence this excellent couch of Śrīkṛṣṇa should be carried with great devotion. The devotees should serve Subhadrā and Balabhadra with royal honour.

The umbrellas should be lifted up. The chowries are used for fanning. The incense from Agallochum spreads everywhere. Different kinds of musical instruments resound majestically in all the directions. When the triple symphony of songs, dances and musical instruments fills the abode, when the darkness is dispelled by means of rows and rows of lamps, and when the great festivities increase, anticipating some negligence (on the part of those who carry the Deity) the Lord is kept covered by means of excellent silk cloth of fine fabric while being taken over a long distance. Due to the speed of the movement, the sire of the worlds comes to a supine position. The Devas who observe repeatedly, begin to suspect if the Lord is about to ascend to heaven. They chant (loudly), "Be victorious, O Rāma. Be victorious, O Kṛṣṇa. Be victorious, O Bhadrā ."

Thus the Lord is gracefully taken to the place of the couch by Brāhmaṇas and others at midnight in the course of the holy ablution on his birthday, on the full-moon day in the month of Jyeṣṭha.

67-70. The sound of the Devas vying with one another is heard in the firmament. The sounds of the divine Dundubhi drums mixed with the shouts of 'Be victorious' are heard. Then the embodiment of Brahman placed on the couch, is covered along with the idol intended to be worshipped. All the limbs except the face are covered with excellent cloths. The Lord is worshipped as per the formalities and services mentioned before, excepting the offer of Naivedya .

With the proclamation of Śānti (Mantras) the devotee should bathe the leading Suras (deities) by means of the pots kept ready with perfumed water duly consecrated by repetition of the Mantra Samudrajyeṣṭhāḥ (RV.VII. 19-1) to the satisfaction of those who bathe (the deity) and watch.

71. Those men who stand there and watch (the Lord) being bathed, shall not take bath in the waters of the womb any longer (i.e. will not be reborn but attain liberation).

72. Those who are eager in their mind to witness the procession, those who joyously witness the ablution of the Lord in the month of Jyeṣṭha, do not sink in the ocean of worldly existence.

73. The beginningless mass of sins whether committed intentionally or unwittingly, of those persons who witness the ablution of Hari, perishes instantaneously.

74-78. It is true. It is (definitely) true, O eminent Brāhmaṇas. I am speaking the truth. It subdues all distresses. It is destructive of all sins and impurities, if the ablution of Śrīpati is devoutly witnessed on the full-moon day in the month of Jyeṣṭha.

All those sins which necessitate expiation, of those persons who witness the ablution of Hari, perish. There is no other holy rite greater than this which liberates one without exertion, viz. the ablution of Hari that is witnessed on the birthday of Hari in the month of Jyeṣṭha.

Holy baths, charitable gifts, penance, Śrāddha , Japa , Yajña etc.—all these performed regularly in crores of births and multiplied by a crore, do not equal the merit of witnessing the ablution of Han.

19. If a person witnesses with great devotion, the ablution of Viṣṇu even once a year, O Brāhmaṇas, he does not come to grief in getting liberation from saṃsāra .

80-82. O Brāhmaṇas, if a person witnesses the ablution of Hari, it is as meritorious as the performance of meritorious sacrifices with sincerity, offering sumptuous monetary gifts, as offering great charitable gifts (Mahādānas), as the feeding of crores of Brāhmaṇas, as the performance of crores of Śrāddhas at Gayaśīrṣa and other holy spots, as the performance of penances in Tīrthas etc. at the auspicious hours and as the holy ablutions taken crores of times in crores of Tīrthas in the Yogas (auspicious hours) such as Ardhodaya [4] etc.

83. It is true. It is (nothing but) the truth. I am speaking the truth, O prominent Brāhmaṇas. There is no other holy rite more conducive to welfare as this in the view of śāstras .

84. He who sees Puruṣottama being bathed while stationed on the couch, gets hundred times the benefit of taking holy bath. There is no doubt about it.

85. He who witnesses the Lord of the universe stationed on the couch and getting wet after the bath, becomes one whose mind is wet with thick mass of bliss. He does not incur any sin.

86. By seeing Acyuta stationed on the couch one obtains that benefit which has been mentioned in regard to the rite of witnessing the ablution.

87. The only Lord of the universe is stationed there in three forms, O Brāhmaṇas. The witnessing of the ablution of each of these yields worldly pleasures and salvation.

88-91. He who joyously proclaims “Be victorious, O Rāmabhadra ”, “Be victorious, O Bhadrā”, “Be victorious, O Kṛṣṇa, the Lord of the universe”, at the time of the holy ablution, attains salvation, O excellent Brāhmaṇas.

The devotee should joyously and sincerely distribute monetary gifts separately to those persons who have consecrated and added scents and perfumes to the waters intended for the rite of ablution. With great faith, the devotee should give sumptuous food, garments and ornaments to the Brāhmaṇas. He should satisfy the poor and helpless ones. Those who arrive to witness the rite of ablution are certainly liberated souls while alive.

92-96. For the delight of Hari the king should honour them according to his capacity. If a man or a woman occupies a good seat and takes a bath with the water left over after the ablution, he or she gets great merits, which I shall describe.

One who is afflicted with a chronic malady becomes strong and vigorous. He shall conquer premature death. A woman who has no son or whose son is dead or who is barren, shall get a son. A poor man shall become rich and the most handsome of all the people in the world. A pregnant woman will deliver a son of great merits and longevity. A righteous-souled man certainly gets the merit of witnessing the ablution, which is said to be the merit of taking holy bath in Gaṅgā and all the other Tīrthas.

[1]: [1] : Cf. the explanation of the term ‘Nārāyaṇa:

[2]: [2] : Sūktas in RV IX.

[3]: [3] : This incident is unsupported in the Mbh and BhP. If Jagannātha is Kṛṣṇa, this reference is a bit confusing.

[4]: [4] : Ardhodaya : When in the month of Pauṣa or Māgha there is Amāvāsyā (new-moon day) with Śravaṇa Nakṣatra and Vyatīpāta Yoga, it is called Ardhodaya . (Mbh quoted in History of Daharmaśāstra vol. I, p.261).

English translation

Jaimini said :

1. Henceforth I shall describe (the procedure) of visiting the deities facing South. [1] In this the benefit of a horse-sacrifice is obtained at every step.

2. Therefore, the devotee should worship (the Lord) with different kinds of divine foodstuffs and offerings and services in accordance with his capacity as well as with scents and wreaths.

3-6. The devotee should worship Rāma , Kṛṣṇa and Subhadrā with various offerings and services such as songs, dances etc., and shows of various kinds accompanied by faith.

Excellent Brāhmaṇas should be honoured with garments, sandal-paste, wreaths, etc. Similarly the Brāhmaṇas, devotees and great Bhāgavatas (followers and devotees of the Lord) should be honoured.

Thereafter, those deities should be taken (in procession) facing the South. As in the previous case of Hari , a great festival should be celebrated. One who sees Hari proceeding ahead facing the South along with Subhadrā, is not an ordinary man.

7. Devas who come for (seeing) the ablution, remain in the sky crowding together even after the ablution of the Sire of the universe is over, in order to see Hari, the destroyer of worldly existence, facing the South and proceeding ahead.

8. A person who sees (the Lord) facing the South and proceeding ahead, attains (the benefit of) all those rites prescribed in treatises on Dharma .

9. He who sees the Lord, the enemy of Mura , proceeding ahead, facing the South after the ablution, obtains the entire merit accruing from seeing the ablution (itself).

10-11. After performing the rite of Nīrājana (i.e. waving of lights in front of the idol of God) to the Lord of Ramā along with Rāma and Bhadrā and making them enter the Mansion, no one shall see (the deities) at all. This has already been said in detail by me, O Brāhmaṇas.

The sages asked :

12. O holy Lord, O most excellent one among those who know, speak to us what you said (before) that one invariably attains the benefit by seeing the Jyeṣṭhāsnāna.

Jaimini said :

13. I shall narrate to you that holy rite called Jyeṣṭhapañcaka. [2] Nothing greater than this has been spoken by sages who have mastered the scriptural texts.

14. This is the most excellent one among the Vratas mentioned in Śrutis , Smṛtis and Purāṇas . This has been proclaimed at the outset by Parameṣṭhin Brahmā .

15-17. Since it is the greatest of all important Vratas , it is well-known as Jyeṣṭhapañcaka.The ocean is the bestower of great benefit. The Lord is the bestower of great benefit.

The merit of seeing (the Lord) for a year is obtained from Mañcaka (Couch) alone. What is to be obtained from Mañcaka, one gets in Mahājyaiṣṭhi. [3] What has been mentioned by me before, O Brāhmaṇas, as the benefit accruing from witnessing the holy ablution, one gets it entirely in Mahājyaiṣṭhī. There is no doubt about it.

The sages said :

18. Recount (to us) Mahājyaiṣṭhī where the holy bath yields great benefit. O holy Brāhmaṇa , our eagerness in regard to that is very great.

Jaimini said :

19-22. On the fifteenth day in the bright half (i.e. on the full-moon day) of the month of Jyeṣṭha , in conjunction with a Thursday as well as when the Moon and Jupiter occupy the same part of the constellation Jyeṣṭhā , when all these astronomical combinations are present, it is called Mahājyaiṣṭhī. It is destructive of all sins.

All the holy places, all the Tīrthas , the seven oceans, sacrifices, the group of great charitable gifts (Mahādānas), penances, the eighteen types of Vidyās (Lores), different kinds of holy rites, pious rites of Śānti (propitiatory rite to avert evil) and Pauṣṭika (a rite promoting welfare) and the Sāṃkhya and Yoga (systems of philosophy)—all these collectively go to the holy place Śrīpuruṣottama.

23-24. They as a group say to everyone of those who go to the holy spot: “To which one fortunate enough to witness the holy ablution in the month of Jyeṣṭha (shall we render services)? We shall enter the holy spot in the Mahājyaiṣṭhī, vying with one another.” During that great period of astronomical combination they go to the excellent holy place of the Lord.

25. Mahājyaiṣṭhī is extremely meritorious. It increases the pleasure of the Lord. By worshipping the Lord of Devas, the ocean of mercy, on that day and by seeing him bathed, one is liberated from the mass of sins (or the sheath of sins).

26. Henceforth, I shall recount to you the holy rite of Jyeṣṭha Pañcaka . So also I shall tell you the different benefits that can be obtained by observing this Vrata .

27. The devotee should perform austerities on the tenth day after taking his bath in accordance with the injunctions early in the morning. He should then choose a Vaiṣṇava , a leading Brāhmaṇa, as his preceptor.

28-31. In this excellent Vrata he should take a pure Saṃkalpa thus: “O Lord of Devas, O Lord of the universe, O Lord taking (the devotee) across the ocean of worldly existence, beginning from today and until that great Mahājyaiṣṭhī day, I shall observe the holy rites, O Keśava , for propitiating you.

The holy ablution shall be performed in all the Tīrthas. There shall be Vratas and feeding everyday. At least one of your five forms shall be worshipped each day, O Lord, in all the three Sandhyā -periods (i.e. morning, noon and dusk), O Holy Lord, let this holy observance successfully conclude by your favour.”

32. Thereafter, he should take his bath in the five Tīrthas and return home. On the ground he should draw the mystic diagram of an eight-petalled lotus along with the pericarp.

33-34. In its middle (of the pericarp) he should place a pot filled with waters from the Tīrthas. It must have fruits and sandal-paste in it. A copper vessel must be kept above it. There must be a pot filled with raw rice-grains. Round it a cloth should be wrapped. Place into it (the idol) of Lord Madhusūdana made of gold.

35-38. The limbs of the Lord should be auspicious and splendid. It must be calm and quiescent (in appearance). It should be accompanied by (the idol of) Śrī on the left. On the right, it must be accompanied by Garuḍa touching the Lord from behind. He holds in his hand the conch and the discus is held aloft. The Lord occupies a lotus-seat.

The devotee or his preceptor should worship the Lord with all offerings and services, O Brāhmaṇas. He should devoutly offer a garland of blue lotuses to the Lord. If the worship is performed thus on the tenth day, it is conducive to the destruction of ten crores of sins. With palms joined in reverence he should pray repeating this Mantra :

39. “O Lord of Devas, O slayer of Madhu , obeisance to you, O lover of Mādhavī . Protect me, O ocean of mercy, I have fallen into the ocean of worldly existence.”

40-41. On the eleventh day the devotee should worship Nārāyaṇa who has four arms, who holds the conch, the discus and the iron club, who is stationed in the lotus and is made of five gold coins or half thereof. He should worship the Lord with a garland of lotuses.

The Naivedya offered should consist of milk pudding, sugar and plantain fruit. After offering different kinds of Naivedya , the devotee should joyously pray:

42-43. “O Nārayaṇa, obeisance to you. O Lord taking (the devotees) across the ocean of worldly existence, save me, O lotus-eyed one, affectionate to those who seek refuge in you.”

The Lord who is worshipped shall destroy all that worst heap of sins committed with the eleven organs (mind and ten conative and cognitive organs) and accumulated in the course of births without any beginning.

44-47. On the twelfth day, the devotee should worship the Yajñavarāha made of gold. Sandal-paste, agallochum and camphor should be applied as unguent and a garland of Caṃpaka flowers should be offered.

After offering as Naivedya different types of sweet pies with cream, fresh butter and various other kinds of foodstuffs accompanied with fruits, the devotee should recite this verse of prayer:

“You lifted and held up the Earth sunk in the ocean of Deluge. Are you not powerful enough to lift me up? I have fallen at your lotus-like feet. Therefore, O Govinda , redeem me; I have sunk in the ocean of grief.”

A year consists of twelve months. The Lord who is worshipped on the twelfth day, destroys greater and lesser sins committed in the whole of the year as well as in the births prior to this.

48-51. On the thirteenth day the man should devoutly worship Pradyumna holding the conch, the discus and granting boons and immunity from fear (by the positions of the fingers) on the mystic diagram of the lotus. The replica shall be made of four gold coins. The offering and services should be as mentioned before. The garland should be brilliant, consisting of Aśoka and Pāṭalī flowers and fixed with pearls.

The Naivedya offered should consist of cooked rice and pleasant ripe fruits. After the Naivedya has been offered, the devotee should bow down and pray with palms joined in reverence. He should remain pure (in body and mind).

“O Lord Pradyumna, assuming the form of Kāma , O fulfiller of all desires, let our desires be fruitful, obeisance to you, O protector of desires”.

52-57. On the fourteenth day the devotee should worship Narasiṃha of golden features. He is brilliant with manes and is delighted by Lakṣmī stationed in the region of his chest. He has kept his mouth wide open and laughs boisterously. He is stationed on the mystic diagram of a lotus on the Yogic silk cloth [4] (?). The Lord has sharp claws. He is the dispeller of all calamities. He has splendid characteristics and is made of four gold coins. As before, the devotee should, with great devotion, worship the Lord with all the offerings and services. Garlands of Japā flowers (China rose) and jasmine flowers should be offered and handfuls of flowers be strewn on the feet. The Lord shall then be prayed to as follows, after circumambulation and obeisance:

“Just as with a desire for the welfare of all the worlds you tore up Hiraṇyakaśipu , so also, on being worshipped, destroy the mass of my sins.”

After requesting Lord Narasiṃha thus and after prostrating on the ground like a staff, the devotee should conclude his Vrata lasting for five days. He should offer five lamps during the day and five during the night.

58-59. At the end of feeding, he should, with great sincerity and faith, give the Brāhmaṇas five pairs of clothes, five umbrellas, five pairs of footwear, along with sacred threads and five pots each with five fruits.

60-64. He shall propitiate Vāsudeva by keeping awake at night, singing songs and making various offerings or by reading the Purāṇas. In the morning of the full-moon day he should take his bath and go to Śrīkṛṣṇa .

The priest should worship Rāma, Kṛṣṇa and Subhadrā in accordance with the injunctions. He should get the ablution (of the Lord) duly performed and see the same. Then he should take his bath once again in the sea as prescribed in the scriptural texts and return home. He shall kindle the sacred fire in a place to the west of the spot where the images of Viṣṇu were worshipped within the pots with due recitation of the Mantras . He should kindle the fire there in accordance with the injunctions and then perform all the rites in that sacred fire with the respective Mantras.

65-69. The names should be uttered with Praṇava (Oṃ) prefixed and the dative case terminations suffixed and followed by the word namaḥ (obeisance) [5] . The Mūlamantra of the deities shall be used with the word svāhā at the end during the rite of Homa . Keeping each of the deities in view, Homas should be performed with Caru , ghee , twigs of a banyan tree and of a Palāśa tree, separately. Afterwards, a hundred flowers should be used for Homa (to each of the deities the flower pertaining to it should be offered). After offering the Pūrṇāhuti the devotee should give monetary gifts to Brahmā (the Brāhmaṇa presiding over the sacrificial and other rites).

To the preceptor he should give gold and a cow. The horns (of the cow) should be covered with gold, the hoofs with silver and various other subsidiary things also should be given. Charitable gifts of very valuable clothes should be made, so that the preceptor is pleased. The devotee should give the idols with all the adjuncts.

70. The devotee should feed the Brāhmaṇas with milk puddings along with sugar- candy and ghee. This excellent Vrata is called Jyeṣṭhapañcaka .

71-74. By devoutly performing this holy rite a man obtains the benefit of witnessing the ablution. He obtains the same entirely, O Brāhmaṇas. There is no doubt about this. The Ekādaśī (Eleventh day) that falls in between is proclaimed as Nirjalā ('Devoid of water' i.e. even water is not drunk on that day). The fast observed on that day alone in accordance with the injunctions and with great devotion, is as good as fasts observed on all the Ekādaśīs during the whole of one's life. By performing this great holy rite one shall obtain the benefit of all the Vratas . Whatever he may desire he shall attain certainly.

[1]: [1] : 'Dakṣiṇāmūrti' are the three deities, viz. Jagannātha, Balabhadra and Subhādrā when they proceed to the South. See vv 5 ff. below.

[2]: [2] : Jyeṣṭha Pañcaka : Name of a Vrata extending for five days from the 10th day in the bright half of Jyeṣṭha up to the full-moon day of Jyeṣṭha. The pun on Jyeṣṭha (in v 15) meaning 'The Senior-most' and the month of the same name is used for the glorification of the Vrata, The Vrata extends over five days and hence is called ' Pañcaka '.

[3]: [3] : Mahājyaiṣṭhī : See vv 19-22 below for the description of the Vrata . Also vv 26-70.

[4]: [4] : Yoga Paṭṭa generally means 'a cloth thrown over the back and knees of an ascetic during abstract meditation' Here it is used in relation to Narasiṃha.

[5]: [5] : It plainly means: oṃ (jagannāthāya , balabhadrāya or subhadrāyai) namaḥ and at the time of Homa 'oṃ (Jagannāthāya etc.) svāhā "—these are to be uttered.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1. Henceforth I shall describe the great festival of the Great Altar, [1] whereby even a person blind with ignorance, shall go to the resplendent region.

2-8. The third day in the bright half of the lunar month of Vaiśākha is destructive of sins. If it is in conjunction with the constellation Rohiṇī , the king should perform the Saṃkalpa -rite (for the following Vrata):

Remaining pure (in body and mind), he should choose a preceptor as well as one or three carpenters whose work has been seen (and found all right). He should choose the carpenter with great respect, offering garments, ornaments etc. for the purpose of Vanayāga (sacrifice in the forest).

Along with the carpenter he should go to the forest full of excellent trees. (The preceptor) who is conversant with Mantras should repeat Mantrarāja and kindle the fire in the middle of the forest. He should then offer one hundred and eight Āhutis . He should (then) smear the roots of the trees severally with ghee mixed with the residue of ghee from the Homa .

He should offer oblation to the Guardians of Quarters, and animals unto the Kṣetrapāla . Then he should offer a hundred Āhutis to the larger forest-tree in the form of cooked rice mixed with milk.

Thereafter, the preceptor should take up the axe. Repeating the Mantra and meditating upon Garuḍa -emblemed Lord (Viṣṇu), he should cut off small bits from the roots of the trees and the places where the sacred ghee was smeared.

9. In the midst of sounds of musical instruments and auspicious songs the preceptor, after engaging the carpenter there, should return home.

10. Or (he should stay there) and when the logs of wood are (hewn) and kept in their places ready for the work of making the chariot, he should consecrate them in accordance with the injunctions for the consecration mentioned (in the scriptural texts). He should perform the rite in the fire assigned (for it).

11-17. After making the chariot, he should celebrate the great festival of Vighnarāja (Gaṇeśa). [2] He should make the chariot of Viṣṇu equipped with sixteen iron wheels, very strong and durable. Each of the wheels should have sixteen spokes. The axles and the pole-shafts should be sturdy. It shall have wonderfully carved images all round, with separate cabin-like apartments.

There should be various wonderful features marked by great craftsmanship. It should be embellished with pieces of sugarcane. There shall be four ornamental arched gateways. The four door panels should be splendid. The chariot should be twenty-two Hastas high (22 x 45 Cms). It should be adorned with flags. It should be decorated with different golden plates marked by great craftsmanship. The emblem in the form of Garuḍa should be made of red sandalwood. The beak should be long. The body should be stout. He should be adorned with ear-rings. He should be depicted as biting a serpent with the tip of the beak. He should be adorned with all types of ornaments. He keeps his wings spread and is (as if) ready to fly up in the sky. He is (strong enough) to suppress the arrogance born of power of the multitudes of Daityas and Dānavas . The entire body should be rendered splendid by covering it with gold plates.

18a. Thus, he should make the chariot of Hari well-decorated with splendid seating arrangement.

18b-20. He should make the chariot of Balarāma with fourteen wheels. The excellent chariot of Subhadrā should be made with twelve wheels.

The Palm-tree emblem of Balarāma should have seven leaves. The lotus emblem of the Goddess should be made of Padmakāṣṭha (wood of Cerasus puddum). After getting the chariots made, the king should install them as before.

21-27. The king should perform every rite in accordance with the scriptural prescriptions with suitable Mantras. He should have faith in Brāhmaṇas . Brāhmaṇas are declared (in Smṛtis) as the mobile (living) bodies of the Lord of the universe.

These well-built three chariots of the three deities should be installed on the day of Viṣṇu (i.e. eleventh day) in the bright half of Āṣāḍha that yields auspicious results.

After installing them in a luxurious manner as before, O Brāhmaṇas, they should be well-guarded so that no unclean person, a bird, a human being, a cat, or a mongoose etc. should climb it.

Within three days therefrom the rite of Aṅkurārpaṇa should be performed in the pavilion made to the north of the chariots, as a part of the festival. If unusual events occur, the rite of Śānti (pacification for averting evils) mentioned before should be performed.

The street should be cleaned and kept neat so that it will be (easy) to go to the Great Altar. The zone on either side of the path should be decorated with hedges etc., fruits, bunches of flowers, wreaths, silk -cloths and chowries, so that it would appear as though there is a forest region in full bloom there.

28. The ground should be made level facilitating a smooth walk. It should be free from mud. Cleaned of all impurities, it should be rendered fragrant. Rubbish from places even away from the path, should be removed.

29-34. The king of pure holy rites should gather together all the requisite items. There should be placed containers of incense at every step rendering the quarters sweet-smelling. Sandalwood-water should be sprinkled. Water should be sprayed by means of mechanical devices. Many kinds of seasonal flowers should be collected there for showering. Important actors, dancers and songsters, courtesans proud of their prime of youth and of beautiful features adorned with ornaments (and similar persons) should be engaged. There must be various kinds of drums such as Mṛdaṅgas , Paṇavas , Bherīs , Ḍhakkās etc. There must be many flags, festoons, banners etc. of diverse kinds and picturesque designs. There must be many flag-staffs made of gold and silver. There must be different kinds of ensigns and vehicles for transport on the surface. Well-caparisoned elephants and horses must be ready at hand. Thus equipped with every essential thing, the king should celebrate the grand festival with great joy and earnest devotion.

35. He should worship the Lord at the time of early dawn on the second day in the bright half of the month of Āṣāḍha in conjunction with Puṣya constellation.

36. Accompanied by Brāhmaṇas, Vaiṣṇavas , ascetics and saints, he should beseech the Lord of Devas with palms joined in reverence, to be ready for the procession.

37-39. “O Lord Just as you had done in the case of king Indradyumna formerly, be pleased to proceed towards the Guṇḍicā Pavilion victoriously in the chariot.

Let the ten quarters be sanctified by the benign glance of the corner of your eye. Let the mobile and immobile beings attain the abode of highest good.

Indeed, O Lord, this incarnation has been taken (by you) with a desire for blessing all the worlds. Therefore, O Lord, set foot on the ground and come joyfully.”

40. Then he should scatter camphor powder and flowers (over the chariot). Brāhmaṇas shall recite Śākuna Sūktas (Ṛgveda II.42, 43) on the way.

41. Some should sing songs of auspiciousness. Some should shout “Be victorious”, “Be victorious”. Some should loudly recite the Mantra beginning with jitam te (you have won).

42-44. The chief of panegyrists, bards and heralds should joyously sing the meritorious praise (of the Lord). On either side there should be a row of chowries with golden handles. (Young ladies) should gracefully wave them, while their bangles produce sweet enchanting sounds. Black Agallochum is put in gold vessels and fumigated. The entire environment and all the quarters are rendered fragrant.

In the course of that victorious procession of Govinda the sweet sounds of flutes , lutes and other musical instruments such as Carcarī, Jharjharī, Mādhurikā etc. are heard.

45. At this time, when all these go on, Brāhmaṇas take away Kṛṣṇa along with Rāma . Kṣatriyas and Vaiśyas take away Subhadrā.

46. A series of umbrellas is held aloft adorned with pearl strings and silk festoons. Flags with staffs covered with gold and set with gems are held on either side of the Enemy of Mura (Kṛṣṇa).

47. The king, the people of the four castes, other ordinary persons, the poor, the great ones etc. all appear as equal to one another.

48. If they are tired anywhere on the way, they should place the deities on cotton mattresses placing the feet gently down and go towards (follow) the chariot.

49-53. In the midst of great festivities and loud sounds of music the people should hold the Lord of the universe in the hands, turn the excellent chariot and place Rāma, Kṛṣṇa and Subhadrā in the middle of the chariot.

It (the chariot) should be decorated with a pavilion lighted with excellent moonlight. It should be decorated with clusters of strings with tinkling bells. It should be adorned with wreaths and chowries. The space within should be fumigated fully with the incense from the essence of black Agallochum. The excellent deities should be kept on cotton beds. They should then be adorned with different kinds of garments, ornaments and wreaths.

Prompted by devotional feelings, they should then be worshipped with due offerings and services luxuriously provided. No other procession of Viṣṇu is seen to be greater than this.

54. Here the Lord of the three worlds himself goes ahead in the chariot every year, honouring the earlier command (i.e. commitment).

55. Those who joyously and devoutly witness the Lord stationed in the chariot and proceeding ahead in the course of the great festival of Mahāvedī shall dwell in the region (of the feet) of Hari.

56. It is true. It is true. 1 promise, O excellent Brāhmaṇas, that it is the truth. There is no other festival honoured by the scriptural texts and yielding greater good than this.

57. Just as this is a sportful procession of Viṣṇu by means of chariots, so also it is a great festival of the Great Altar. Devas come down here from heaven and go back as possessed of power (?)

58. What more can I say about the greatness of that festival of the Enemy of Mura? Merely by glorifying him the sins incurred in the course of hundreds of births perish.

59-60. By witnessing Puruṣottama , Subhadrā and Balabhadra seated in the chariot and proceeding towards the Great Altar, the devotee dispels the sin committed in crores of births. No doubt need be entertained in this regard. By crossing the shadow of the chariot the sin of Brāhmaṇa -slaughter perishes.

61. He whose body comes into contact with its dust, shall get rid of the three types of collections of sins. He shall attain the benefit accruing from the holy bath in the celestial Gaṅgā .

62-63. If the path of the chariot becomes muddy due to the shower of waters from clouds, it becomes capable of removing all impurities and sins, thanks to the divine vision of Kṛṣṇa(?)

Those excellent Vaiṣṇavas who prostrate there, get rid of all the dirt (sins) amassed in the course of the beginningless time and shall attain salvation.

64. Undoubtedly he (such a Vaiṣṇava) derives the benefit of gifting away a crore of cows, or (giving away in marriage) ten thousand virgins and that of performing a thousand horse-sacrifices.

65. Devas, the chief of whom is Śakra , follow those persons who follow Kṛṣṇa even out of curiosity (to witness) the procession.

66. It is proclaimed that they will obtain the benefit of a horse-sacrifice for every step, if they witness the eternal Dārubrahman (i.e. the Brahman in wooden form, viz. Jagannātha) and the chariot proceeding ahead.

67-68. Expounders of the Vedas eulogize the Lord, the bestower of salvation, by means of the Vedic mantras. Others eulogize the Lotuseyed One by means of prayers composed by themselves or through passages from the Itihāsas , Purāṇas etc.

Those who eulogize thus become rid of sins. By adopting the Yogic path of the followers of Viṣṇu they rejoice along with Nārada and others.

69. Those who eulogize the Lord with shouts of Victory in front of Vāsudeva , conquer different kinds of sins. There is no doubt about it.

70. Even if a person is devoid of sweetness of voice and cannot sing, even if a person is ignorant of the proper pause in music and beating of the time and rhythm—but if that excellent man dances and sings (before the Lord), he shall undoubtedly attain salvation by his contact with excellent Vaiṣṇavas.

71. He who goes along with the Lord glorifying (and repeating) the names or follows the Lord, shall undoubtedly derive the benefit thereof.

72. He who devoutly and repeatedly says, “Be victorious, O Kṛṣṇa”, “Be victorious, O Kṛṣṇa” as Lord Kṛṣṇa proceeds towards the city of Guṇḍicā, shall never again attain the misery of staying in the womb of a mother.

73-75. If a person stands in front of the chariot and fans Puruṣottama with flyflaps, fans, bunches of flowers and blue bodices, he will be fanned by celestial damsels and adorned by Gandharvas (and eulogized) by the Devas who follow him. He will be seated in the throne of Mahendra . He will then enjoy all types of matchless pleasures till the annihilation of all living beings. At the end of it he will attain the world of Brahmā and (finally) attain salvation.

76. Those who shower flowers in front of Kṛṣṇa will attain all the desires and ambitions entertained by them.

77. Devas shall bow down their heads before them and circumambulate those persons who accompany the chariot and repeat the thousand holy names (of the Lord).

78-85. Those who are as valiant as Viṣṇu, will go to the abode of the Lord.

At that time which is highly meritorious and resorted to even by Devas, sages and Pitṛs , the one and only Brahman attended by his own Māyā becomes three.

The Lord of the universe himself in his wooden form gets into the chariot eagerly and proceeds ahead during the great festival of the Great Altar. Wherever the Lord of the universe goes riding in the chariot sportfully, there the people of the earth should celebrate the great festival at the same time.

Casting off their prestige, Devas, the leader of whom is Indra , will form lines on either side and carry on the procession with their respective divine retinue and attendants.

Lord Brahmā too will go ahead of them. Lord Brahmā, the maker of the fourteen worlds, who is a great Lord, returns from (his own) world of Brahmā and eulogizes the Lord of the universe who goes in the chariot during the great festival. He eulogizes with Vedic prayers and hymns. At every step he bows down to the eternal Lord.

86. Although there is no difference between the Lotus-born Lord and Kṛṣṇa, this is the greatness of the great festival that all of them become followers.

87. In the world there is no greater Yoga than the great festival of the Great Altar, the Yoga that dispels all the sins and bestows the benefit of all the Tīrthas .

88. Keeping Kṛṣṇa in view, if a man makes the gift of anything there, it will have everlasting benefit. It will be equal to Merudāna . [3]

89. Whatever holy rite is performed in front of the Lord of Devas, who proceeds towards the abode of Guṇḍicā, shall become inexhaustible (in benefit).

90. If different kinds of presents or varieties of foodstuffs are dedicated to the Lord or to Brāhmaṇas for the delight of the Lord, those offerings will have inexhaustible merits. They will yield all desires.

91-92. Those who go ahead in front of Hari and witness his lotuslike face (repeatedly) and bow down at every step as well as get themselves dust-ridden and muddy, will get rid of their unbreakable armour of sins acquired in the course of crores of births and attain the benefit of salvation in a trice. They then go to the splendid abode of Viṣṇu.

93. They derive the benefit of all the sacrifices, Tīrthas and charitable gifts. There is no other festival more meritorious than this in regard to those persons who have devotional feelings towards the Lord.

94-95. Thus Lord Kṛṣṇa in the company of Subhadrā and Rāma goes ahead riding in the excellent chariot and illuminating the four quarters. He destroys the sins of all embodied beings through the wind that comes into contact with his glorious limbs. The glorious Lord is merciful and he sanctifies the devotees.

96. Though he is a natural bestower of salvation, he carries on the activities of processions for the sake of inspiring faith in ignorant persons who have no faith.

97-103. The procession goes ahead with multitudes of Devas and human beings (accompanying the Lord). On the way, at midday, the sun is excessively hot, scorching foreheads. With all the followers tired, he stands in the middle of the road. He is covered with dust and looks exhausted. There, in order to suppress the (effect of) sunlight, the people should sprinkle the glasses with Pañcāmṛtas and cool waters perfumed with flowers and camphor. They should fan the Lotus-eyed Lord, Subhadrā and Rāma with chowries and cool fans, the tips of which are drenched in water.

They must worship Puruṣottama and offer these things: cool drinks, pleasant and juicy sugar candies, date fruits, coconuts, different kinds of plantain fruits, various milk-products, jack fruits, palmyra fruits, sugarcane juice, tasty and sweet fruits of different kinds, perfumed cool water, betel-leaves with ripe fruits, camphor, cloves etc.

104-108. O excellent Brāhmaṇas, those who see Janārdana at that time and worship him in accordance with their capacity, do not get the weariness arising from worldly existence. They become the residents of the world of Brahmā, O excellent Brāhmaṇas.

Excellent men shall circumambulate the three deities stationed in the three chariots three, four or seven times. Then, they should bow down ten times. At the end, they should stand with palms joined in reverence. They should eulogize the great Lord, the Lord of Devas, with those prayers with which the lotus-born Lord Brahmā eulogized the Lord and the other deities stationed in the chariots. Those men who do thus, definitely go to the world of Brahmā, O Brāhmaṇas.

109. Then in the afternoon, they should take the Lord of Devas fanned by the southern wind, slowly to the accompaniment of vocal music as well as the sweet sounds of flutes, lutes etc.

110-113. The bards and panegyrists should sing sweet songs. There must be continuous showers of flowers and waving of flyflaps and chowries. When the Lord proceeds ahead thus, the sun may set. At that time thousands of lamps should be lit. The remaining part of the path shall be traversed in the light of these lamps. There will be great rush and crowd of people eager to see the Lord at the time of getting down from the chariot and going up the pavilion. The people should keep the Lord in the charming pavilion named Guṇḍicā.

114-116. The pavilion should be well-lit with the charming moonlight. It should be adorned with charming wreaths and chowries. It must have gem-set pillars. The middle should be raised into an Altar paved with gold. There must be an enclosure all round. It should be brilliant with fresh whitewash and plastering. There must be good flight of steps. It must have four splendid doors. It must have all the grandeur of the three worlds. It was here that the great Lord appeared on the Great Altar of the great sacrifice, in the wooden form.

Notes regarding Guṇḍicā:

Guṇḍicā-House is at a distance of a mile and half from the Jagannātha temple. It is called Mahāvedī as Indradyumna performed one thousand horse-sacrifices here. It is regarded as the birthplace of the Trinity —Jagannātha, Balabhadra and Subhadrā—as their images were carved out by the divine carpenter within the Mahāvedī. Jagannātha promised Indradyumna that he would annually stay for seven days here near Indradyumna Lake (vide Supra Ch. 29.40-41).

As our text shows, Jagannātha worship was originally current among Śabaras , the aboriginals of that Orissan region. In their language, Kun= He and Dījā = 'The stem of a tree'. So Kuṇḍījā > Guṇḍijā > Guṇḍicā shows the Śabara origin of the festival.

[1]: [1] : Mahāvedī i.e. the Gundicā-House.

[2]: [2] : Gaṇeśa is the controller of all obstacles. So he is worshipped at the beginning of every auspicious rile or act.

[3]: [3] : Dāna or religious gifts of the heaps (of any one) of the following: dhānya (corn), lavaṇa (salt), guḍa (jaggery), hema (gold), tila (sesame), kārpāsa (cotton), ghṛta (ghee), ratna (precious stones), rajata (silver), śarkarā (sugar).

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-4. The Lord is seated to the south of the lake that formed part of the horse-sacrifices as well as to that of Nṛsiṃha . It appears as if the Lord incarnates once again. He shines in his divine form. He is too dazzling to be gazed at by Suras and Asuras . At that time the Lord of the universe should be worshipped by means of various offerings and pleased with songs and dances. One should propitiate the Lord by offering different kinds of flowers, sweet scents and unguents, fumigation of black Agallochum and lamps with scented oil. Thus the devotee should please the Lord of the worlds by means of many offerings and services.

5. Janārdana shall stay on the shore of the Bindutīrtha [1] for seven days. Formerly the Lord himself had granted this boon to the king:

6. “Every year I shall stay on the shore of your Tīrtha , O great king. While I stay there, all the Tīrthas will be present therein too.

7-11. Devotees should take their holy bath in accordance with the injunctions in that Tīrtha which sanctifies all the groups of Tīrthas. He who (then) sees me along with Rāma and Subhadrā for seven days while I am housed in the Guṇḍicā pavilion, shall attain Sāyujya (absorption) with me.”

Therefore the devotee, whether a man or a woman, should take the holy bath in the auspicious and extremely meritorious Tīrtha which is destructive of all the sins. It, (the Tīrtha) is the sole bestower of the benefits of all the Tīrthas and causes delight unto Viṣṇu .

After the bath he should offer libations to Pitṭs and Devas carefully in accordance with the injunctions. Then he should worship and bow down to Narasiṃha installed on the shore. After completing the rites of purification and Ācamana he should go to the Great Altar, worship as before or bow down with great devotion. The devotee who does this for seven days is not an ordinary man or woman (but becomes superhuman).

12. At the bidding of the Enemy of Mura (Kṛṣṇa) he attains Sāyujya with Viṣṇu. Seeing him during day is meritorious (but doing so) at night will give ten times the merit.

13. Whatever holy rite is performed in the presence of the Lord of the universe on a modest or large scale, shall become (multiplied) crores and crores of times more.

14. The devotees may give charitable gifts of Tulāpuruṣa [2] or other great gifts. But even if one (thing) is given, O Brāhmaṇas , it is as good as the gift of everything.

15. When Kṛṣṇa goes to the Great Altar, all charitable gifts are on a par with Meru ; all people are equal to Vyāsa , O Brāhmaṇas. This Yoga is rare indeed (Yoga = an astronomical combination).

16. Ardhodaya and other Yogas expounded by Skanda do not deserve even a sixteenth part of the Yoga called Mahāvedī .

17. Henceforth I shall describe the excellent holy (Śrāddha) rite of Pitṛs . Even if one performs Gayāśrāddha throughout one’s life, one shall not get a benefit (as from this).

18-19. All the Manes, all the grandfathers whether stationed in heaven or in hell or re-born as animals or human beings, about one hundred famous members (of the family) desire that their scions should perform this. That procedure I shall recount to you. Listen to that excellent one, O sages.

20-26. Maghā is the constellation (specially favourite) of the Pitṛs. It is highly pleasant and delightful (to them). If the Śrāddha is offered by the sons joyously in this constellation, it delights (Pitṛs). The fifth lunar day is also excellent. (If available) in Śrāddha, it is conducive to prosperity. If both of these coincide, the day is extremely meritorious. If the Śrāddha rite is performed on that day by the sons, the Pitṛs will be uplifted.

If at the Tīrtha inclusive of (i.e. comprising) all Tīrthas the Śrāddha is devoutly performed in the presence of the Enemy of Mura, in the most sacred area between Nīlakaṇṭha and Nṛsiṃha and on the extremely rare Yoga (specific astrological time), he redeems a hundred men (ancestors) of his family and is honoured in the world of Brahmā .

The period of Kutapa [3] (early afternoon), when the sun is gentle, is extremely praiseworthy. One should offer a gold piece keeping the Manes in view. If he cannot afford it, he should remain pure and duly perform the rites of libation with gingelly seeds. Thereby he gives excellent satisfaction to Pitṛs.

Or he should feed Brāhmaṇas or give them the cost of the foodstuffs. Or he should feed one meritorious person and give him a thousand (cost of the foodstuffs of a thousand Brāhmaṇas?).

27. At this particular Yoga no discrimination regarding merit (eligibility) and non-merit (ineligibility of the Brāhmaṇa to be invited to Śrāddha) be made. O Brāhmaṇas, on that extremely rare Yoga, all Brāhmaṇas are on a par with sages.

28-30. The fifth day in the bright half of the month of Āṣāḍha , the constellation Maghā and the contact (installation) of the Lord of the universe with the Great Altar—when all these three come together and at the excellent lake of Indradyumna —this Yoga is known as Catuṣpāda (four-footed). It bestows everlasting benefit unto the Pitṛs.

By performing a Śrāddha then no one gets despondent in regard to the holy rites of Pitṛs.

Listen to another thing, O Brāhmaṇas. I tell it to you on this occasion.

31-32. On the new-moon day in the month of Nabhasya [4] (or Bhādrapada i.e. August-September) or on the four Yugādi (i.e. anniversary of the beginning of the Yugas) days, the devotee should perform Śrāddha of the Pitṛs at the lake formed as part of the horse-sacrifice (i.e. Indradyumna Lake). It will then have the same benefit as that of a thousand Gayā Śrāddhas faithfully performed. In this matter there need be no doubt at all.

33-36. A charitable gift offered and Homa and Japa performed during the seven days when Kṛṣṇa stays here in the Pavilion is destructive of all sins. The subsequent day is superior to the previous one.

The third ḍay in the bright half of Āṣāḍha is the most excellent day. On that day the devotee should take the holy bath early in the morning, on the bank of Indradyumna Lake, in the excellent holy spot of Nṛsiṃha. After the due performance of the rite of Saṃkalpa , the man should take up this Vrata called Vanajāgaraṇa . It increases the pleasure of the Lord. It suppresses all the sins and yields the benefit of all Vratas .

37-39. On all these seven days, the devotee should take three baths per day. He should light lamps fed with cow's ghee or sesamum oil. He should observe the vow of silence. He should place these lamps in front of Hari and keep them lighted day and night. During the day time he should observe silence and during the nights he should keep a vigil. He should repeat the Mantra of the Lord at intervals between the daily routine of duties while observing this Vrata .

40. He should observe fast also during the seven days. After the seven days have passed, on the eighth day he should get up early in the morning and perform the installation.

41. After taking the holy bath in the same excellent Tīrtha, he should return home. In the previous mystic diagram of Sarvatobhadra he should place the pot.

42-44. He should invoke Hṛṣīkeśa there and worship by means of the offerings. To the west of it, on the ground duly consecrated, he should kindle the sacred fire in accordance with the injunctions mentioned in the Gṛhyasūtras .

He, surrounded by Brāhmaṇas, should perform the rites of fire-worship. He should offer sacrificial twigs, ghee and the Caru into the fire a thousand times by way of Homa or each of them a hundred times. It is laid down that the Homa should be performed with the Vaiṣṇava Gāyatrī .

45. After feeding (the Ācārya), he should offer monetary gifts and give a cow, garments and gold (to him). At the end he should feed the Brāhmaṇas for the satisfaction of the Witness of the universe.

46. By performing this important Vrata in accordance with these injunctions, O Brāhmaṇas, he obtains all the four aims of life. Whatever one desires shall be obtained.

47. If a woman possessing sincere faith performs this rite of the great festival of the Altar, she will also obtain the benefit thereof.

48. The merit acquired by a person observing the vow is the same as that of the person who participates in the festival of the chariot-procession.

O excellent Brāhmaṇas, everything has been said to you. Be happy.

[1]: [1] : The same as Indradyumna Lake.

[2]: [2] : The donor is to be weighed in a balance with gold or other valuable articles in the other pan and the articles equal in weight with the donor are to be given to Brahmins. This is called Tulāpuruṣa .

[3]: [3] : This is the eighth Muhūrta of the day (MtP 22.84). Kutapa and the following four Muhūrtas form the proper period for Śrāddha.

[4]: [4] : The text reads nabhasyadarśe i.e. the new-moon day of Nabhasya (Bhādrapada). The new-moon day of Bhādrapada is specially meant for offering Śrāddha to Pitṛs and is hence called ‘ Sarvapitrī amāvāsyā ’.

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-3. Henceforth I shall describe the procedure of protecting the chariot, whereby terrible goblins, ghosts and others as well as hideous supernatural beings do not harm the chariots. O sages, (I shall tell you) what will be approved by you all.

Everyday the devotee should worship Kṛṣṇa and other deities stationed on the flags with sweet-smelling flowers, raw rice-grains, wreaths, excellent offerings and services, songs, dances etc. as well as incense, lamps and food-offerings.

4. Oblation should be offered to the Guardians of the Quarters everyday with rice cooked in milk. Excellent oblations should be offered to goblins, ghosts and evil spirits.

5. With great efforts (and care) those chariots should be kept in a condition fit for the riding (of the deities). It should be seen that no man or domestic animal climbs on them. Particularly birds whose habitation is inauspicious should not be allowed to occupy them.

6-11. On the eighth day the chariots should be kept facing the South. The devotee should adorn (the deities and the chariots) with cloths, wreaths, flags, chowries etc. On the morning of the ninth day the Devas should be installed in them luxuriously.

This South-facing journey of Viṣṇu is very difficult to be accomplished. That journey (procession) should be carried out with great effort, devotion and faith.

Just as the previous (procession), so also this—both of these yield salvation. Both these—the journey (procession) and re-entry of the Lord, are considered to constitute one festival alone.

Those who are conversant with tradition and mythology say that this journey is of nine days' duration. This three-limbed (three-staged) journey (procession) [1] should be attended to in full. To those who do so, the great festival of the Great Altar will yield complete benefit.

12. Those who watch Kṭṣṇa while returning from the Guṇḍicā Pavilion with face to the South and seated in the chariot along with Balarāma and Subhadrā , attain liberation.

13. That kind of benefit derived by those who witness the splendid Lords Rāma and others seated in the chariot with their faces to the North, is also obtained by those who see them (Rāma and others) facing the South.

14. If anyone sees (the Lord) going on foot or in the chariot facing the South, his birth is blessed, for at every step he obtains the merit of a horse-sacrifice.

15. The devotee should attend to the Lord in front with eulogies, prostrations, showers of flowers, different kinds of dances, offerings and services with fans, umbrellas, chowries and presents of various kinds.

16-17. Those who see Hṛṣīkeśa , the Lord who is like the wish-yielding Kalpa tree, who grants salvation to men merely by his sight, along with Subhadrā and Balarāma coming to Nīla mountain seated in the chariot and facing the South, are noble souls. They go to Hari 's abode, Vaikuṇṭha .

18-20. While Hari returns to his palace on Mount Nīla with his face to the South, those devout believers who eulogize him and prostrate themselves before him who is the abode of all the Tīrthas and is like a wish-yielding tree donating (anything and) everything, do not return to this world (after death). They get established in Brahmā 's region.

21. O sages, this great festival of the Great Altar has been described to you. By glorifying this a man becomes free from impurities (and sins).

22. The man who gets up early in the morning and recites this or listens to this or retains this in his memory, shall go to the world of Śakra .

23-24. If anyone makes a replica or a picture of Hari, places it on the chariot and carries out this procession with faith and devotion, that man shall obtain the merit of the festival of Guṇḍicā by the favour of Viṣṇu. He then goes to the abode of Vaikuṇṭha. There is no doubt about this.

25-26. A person should perform this Yātrā (procession) in accordance with his affluence, devotion and faith. By sponsoring or witnessing this one ceases to be afflicted and worried. This holy and great secret has been revealed by Brahma .

[1]: [1] : Tryavayavā Yātrā : The procession of three limbs i.e. stages, viz. (1) Journey from the temple of Guṇḍicā; (2) Return journey from Guṇḍicā to Nīlācala; (3) The visit of Dakṣiṇāmūrti (i.e. turning the chariots to the South).

English translation

Note: Anthropomorphism and anthropopathism are a special characteristic of Saguṇa Bhakti . The Lord is treated as a human being and he wants sleep, turns his side during sleep, suffers from colds and requires medicine—all this is sincerely done in the spirit of Saguṇa Bhakti to the Lord. This is amply illustrated in our Text.

Jaimini said :

1-2. Henceforth I shall describe the excellent festival of (the Deity's) going to bed. [1] With Āṣāḍhī as the starting point, Hari 's sleep covers the four months of the rainy season from Āṣāḍhī (eleventh day in the bright half of Āṣāḍha) when the sun goes to the Zodiac of Cancer to Kārttikī (eleventh day in the bright half of Kārttika). This is the most meritorious period for the propitiation of Hari.

3-5. If a person stays in the holy place Śrī Puruṣottama even for a single day during the period of these four moths in the presence of Hari, know that his merit is what has been mentioned for the stay in Kāśī for many Yugas performing pious observance and holy rites. If a person passes all the days of those rainy months in the meritorious holy spot in the presence of the Lord of the universe devoid of impurities within, he will directly obtain the merit of a thousand horse-sacrifices.

6. A person who bathes in the holy waters of the ocean, sees Śrī Puruṣottama and devoutly performs holy rites during the four months (of the rainy season), never has any grief from anywhere.

7. Stay in the holy place Śrī Puruṣottama during the four months, and direct view of the Lord—these two are the means of salvation.

8. Hence a man should give up all the rites ordained in the Śrutis or Smṛtis and make efforts to stay in the meritorious holy spot Śrī Puruṣottama.

9. The Lord remains asleep on the couch of the serpent's (Śeṣa 's) body during these four months. The Sire of the universe is not present then in any of the other sacred places.

10. But he stays here visibly as though in his abode of Vaikuṇṭha . During all the twelve months the Lord is in his embodied form here. If he is seen with one's eye especially during these four months, he is the bestower of salvation.

11. By seeing the Lord on a single day during these four months (Cāturmāsya) one obtains that merit which is acquired by seeing Viṣṇu everyday while staying here all through the other eight months.

12-17. By staying in the holy spot of Śrī Puruṣottama for the whole period of four months one acquired the merit of staying in all holy places on everyone of those days. The Lord grants (befitting) benefit for staying in the holy place for a whole year.

A man may be engaged in all kinds of evil actions. He may be fallen from all kinds of decent conduct and behaviour. He may be excluded from all pious and devout rites. But if that sinful man stays in Puruṣottama during one set of (these) four months, he dispels all the sins. He becomes free from impurities both within and without. By the favour of Narasiṃha he shall go to the abode of Vaikuṇṭha.

Hence with all his devout feelings a man should stay in Puruṣottama during those four rainy months sanctified by Viṣṇu's sleep. He may or may not do anything else, notwithstanding that his life becomes fruitful.

18. The devotee should celebrate the great festival of (the Lord's) sleep on the eleventh day in the bright half of the month of Āṣāḍha. A pavilion should be made and an excellent bedchamber should be built there.

19-26. In front of the Lord, the bed must be spread over a gem-set couch along with a pillow and a bedsheet of soft China silk . Camphor-powder should be scattered over the bed and splendid awning should be made. The enclosure all around should have no holes. It shall be sprinkled with sandal-paste. There must be a good doorway. The bed should be even. It should be decorated with various pictures and paintings.

There should be only one bedchamber. The devotee must have ready with him three images (of the three deities). They should be made of gold, silver, brass or stone according to one's faith. The succeeding is better than the preceding one. During midnight the images (specially made ones) should be placed at the foot of the respective deity. They should then be worshipped. The remnants (of worship) must be deposited on them. At the the end of the worship the devotee should meditate on the identity of those images with Kṛṣṇa and others.

"Come, come, O Lord, the sole life of all the worlds, for sleep during these four months for the increase of prosperity of everyone."

After praying thus to the deities the devotee should take the three garlands from the deities and place them on the special movable images of the three deities. To the accompaniment of auspicious prayers and songs, they should be taken to the door of the bedchamber and kept there for three Ghaṭikās .

27-33. The images should be bathed with Pañcāmṛta separately, weighing more than 100 Palas for each. They should be smeared with fragrant sandal-paste and adorned with robes, ornaments etc. After duly worshipping them, the devotee should repeat this Mantra with palms joined in reverence:

"O Lord of the universe, worthy of being saluted by all the worlds, engaged in protecting the universe! O Lord, sleep during these four months of the advent of clouds, for the sake of the welfare of the worlds. Worshipped along with Śakra , suppress all evils and calamities. Come, come to the bedchamber. O Lord sleep here comfortably."

After praying thus to the Lord of Devas , the devotee should make Puruṣottama go to sleep. He should firmly close the door of the bedchamber of Viṣṇu. After making the Lord of the worlds sleep one obtains excellent happiness.

When Janārdana is asleep during the four rainy months, the devotee should pass those four months in performing many holy rites and pious observances. The man with devotion shall dwell in the world of Viṣṇu for the period of a Kalpa .

Even as I recount the holy rites and vows to be observed during Cāturmāsya , listen to them, O sages.

34-37. The man of devotion should give up resting on bedsteads and couches. Except in the stipulated period after the monthly menstural discharge (of his wife) he should not carnally approach even his wife. He should give up meat, liquor, food of another person, Paṭolas (a kind cucumber) [2] , Mūlaka (radish) and brinjal. He should keep away from all forbidden foodstuffs. He should avoid Masūra (a kind of pulse), white mustard, Rājamāṣa , Kulattha and Āśudhānya. In the beginning of the month of Śrāvaṇa he should gradually avoid greens, curds, milk and pulses. No one other than a king, ascetics and cowherds should put on leather footwear. If it happens that one could not perform holy rites during the four rainy months, he should perform the holy rites in the month of Kārttika for overcoming that sin.

38-44. He should repeat this prayer in the morning, midday, evening and at the conclusion of holy rites:

“Obeisance to Kṛṣna, to Hari. Repeated obeisance to Keśava . Salutation to Narasiṃha, to Viṣṇu, to the conqueror of sins.”

He will burn all his terrible sins acquired in the course of many births like fire burning a heap of cotton .

If a person observes restriction in his diet, takes food only once a day, or takes in only the remnants of the offering unto Viṣṇu, or takes in food only during the night throughout the period between Āṣāḍhī and Kārttikī, heaven is the least gain unto him.

The devotee should avoid oil-bath, midday nap and slander-mongering.

The man should undertake the Vrata (vow) on the eleventh day in the bright half of the month of Āṣāḍha, on the day of the transit of the Sun to the Zodiac Cancer or on the new-moon day in the month of Āṣāḍha.

After worshipping Lord Madhusūdana , the destroyer of all sins, and after taking the Saṅkalpa in front of him in regard to the Vrata, worship, Japa etc. the man of holy rites should pray to the Lord, the supreme Bliss, with palms joined in reverence:

45. “O Lord, the vow of the four months has been taken up (by me) by your favour. O Keśava, let it be accomplished without obstacles through your grace.

46. If I were to die when this vow is yet incomplete, O Adhokṣaja , even then let it be complete by your favour.”

47. After praying thus to the Lord of Devas the man who is observing the vow should strictly adhere to the rites mentioned before and pass the four months with his mind dedicated to Viṣṇu.

48-53. At the end of every month he should perform Pāraṇa (formal conclusion of the austerities) for the pleasure of Kṛṣṇa. The devotee should feed Brāhmaṇas with sweet sumptuous food after worshipping the Lord of the universe.

If one is incapable (of doing it every month), he should conclude the excellent holy rite of Kārttikī day. On that day he should worship the Lord of the universe, abiding in the holy fire. Thereafter, he should propitiate prominent Brāhmaṇas with sweet milk-puddings and honour them with devotion as unto Viṣṇu. In accordance with his capacity he should give gold and garments.

A man not capable of the full (-timed) austerities should perform the austerities in the month of Kārttika as mentioned before.

There are various Vratas [3] (austerities) of Viṣṇu such as Kṛcchra , Cāndrāyaṇa etc. One who passes (the month) subsisting on milk only or vegetables (greens) only shall enjoy extensive worldly pleasures and then attain salvation.

54. If the vratī (vower) is incapable of even this austerity, he should observe the excellent vow of Bhīṣma - Pañcaka to propitiate the Lord of Devas. He shall sustain himself with forest products (take fruits, roots etc. naturally produced not cultivated, but no cooked food).

55. This Vrata is said to be conducive to the delight of the Lord. It supresses all sins. It yields the attainment of the world of Viṣṇu as its fruit. It is conducive to longevity, reputation and wealth. It accomplishes all desired things.

56-58. O sages, this secret has been disclosed to you. Listen to another. Know that these and many other Vratas are fruitless in the case of those devoid of devotion to the Lord.

One attains all the benefits by devotion to Viṣṇu alone—the benefit of great sacrifices, the excellent benefit of (pilgrimage to) Tīrthas , charitable gifts and all penances of the Sāttvika type.

59-60. Those noble souls who witness the excellent festival of retirement to bed (of the Lord) do not rest in the womb of any mother.

Those who sponsor the great festival, should make a promise of taking up this Vrata in front of the Lord at the conclusion of the festival. After performing the rite of Pāraṇa sufficiently well they are honoured in the world of Brahmā .

[1]: [1] : This festival of Lord's going to sleep is one of the twelve Yātrās of Jagannātha. The eleventh day in the bright half of Āṣāḍha is called Śayanī Ekādaśī. The Lord is supposed to go to sleep on this day to be awakened on the eleventh day in the bright half of Kārttika which is called 'Prabodhinī' (the awakener). And the period of four months between these Ekādaśī days is called 'Cāturmāsya'.

[2]: [2] : Known as Paḍvaḷ in Marathi.

[3]: [3] : Observances such as Kṛcchra , Cāndrāyaṇa and others. Kṛcchra is of different types (for details vide HD IV 132-133). In Cāndrāyaṇa morsels of food are to be increased and decreased as per waxing and waning of the moon. (Hence the name Cāndrāyaṇa .) In this observance one morsel of food is to be eaten on first day of the bright half, two morsels on the second day and so on till fifteen morsels are to be consumed on the full-moon day. On the first day of the dark half fourteen morsels are to be eaten reducing the quantity by one morsel everyday and ending in complete fast on the new-moon day. (For details see HD IV 135-136.)

English translation

Jaimini said :

1-7. Henceforth I shall describe (the rites to be performed during) the excellent Dakṣiṇāyana (transit of the Sun to the South). The period of time extending to twenty Kalās just before the transit of the Sun is the most auspicious time for the performance of holy rites by men devoted to duties.

As in the case of the (ceremonial) going to bed of the Lord, O Brāhmaṇas , the devotee should bathe the Lord with Pañcāmṛta . He should smear the entire body of the Lord with agallochum, camphor and sandal-paste. He should worship the great Lord with sweet scents, wreaths, ornaments, charming garments, lamps and different kinds of foodstuffs and offerings. He should wave a lighted camphor near the face of Hari . Then the Lord should be duly saluted after the offering of blades of Dūrvā and raw rice grains following the Nīrājana rite of waving the lights. Women should sing auspicious songs and shout Hulā -Hulā . [1] They should dance too.

Janārdana will give hundred times the merit of the worship to a person who witnesses Puruṣottama having been worshipped and being worshipped. Those who see the Lord of Śrī being worshipped during the Southern Transit (of the Sun) get rid of all their sins and go to the world of Viṣṇu .

8. Whether the festival of procession of Hari is celebrated on a small scale or on a grand scale, it always bestows salvation. The Lord seen on the different days is certainly the bestower of salvation.

9. It is to inspire faith in the ignorant, O Brāhmaṇas, that these festivals of procession have been declared by the merciful Viṣṇu. They dispel the sins of sinners.

10-11. Those who regard that merit is (always) created by undergoing strains are base persons.

In order to prepare the food-offering for the Lord of Lakṣmī the kitchen should be consecrated well. After kindling the Vaiṣṇava sacred fire, the excellent Caru should be prepared. It should be made the means of cooking the Vaiśvadeva [2] oblation unto the Lord.

12-17. The preceptor devoted to the holy rites prescribed in Śrutis and Smṛtis , and employed by the king, should with great (mental and physical) purity, perform the Homas in the sacred fire to Brahmā , the Lord of house-site, the Lord of the subjects and Viṣṇu, the maker of the universe.

The preceptor employed by the king should be a scrupulous performer of the religious rites prescribed in Śrutis and Smṛtis.

Thereafter, Bali (oblations) should be offered and offerings should be made as follows:

To the Dvārapālas [3] (Caṇḍa and) Pracaṇḍa in the North-East; to the Kṣetrapāla , Virūpa and the Lord of birds in the South: to Durgā and Sarasvatī in the South-West. As per injunctions the offering of oblations to Mahālakṣmī and Mahendra is made in the Eastern Quarter. The offering of oblation to the attendants of Viṣṇu and to the Lord of Paśus (i.e. Śiva) shall be made in the North. (The Bali should be offered) to Nārada in the West; to the Fire-god in the South-East, to Viśvasākṣin (witness unto the universe, the Wind-god?) in the North-West; to the Wind-gods in the forms of the five vital airs and to the maker of the universe in the middle. In every rite of offering the oblations water should be offered in the beginning and in the end.

18. After offering the oblations the excellent cooking should be conducted in that fire to prepare Caru to be offered in the worship of the Lord in all the three Sandhyās (dawn, noon and dusk).

19. The different foodstuffs form part of the consecration of the Caru . The king should not engage brilliant persons of the (first) three castes. [4]

20. He should engage clean Śūdras of noble birth or persons of the labour class. [5] This is the common practice. It is certainly Śrī herself who cooks.
